2 Air Force jets crash

WINNFIELD, La. (AP) — Two Air Force A-10 fighter planes on a training flight collided and plummeted into a tree farm Monday. Bombs aboard the plane exploded and a fire started on the ground, an official said.

It wasn't immediately known what happened to the pilots of the one-seat planes. There were no known casualties on the ground, in a rural area northeast of Winnfield in north-central Louisiana.

The planes were simulating a surface attack when they collided and crashed into a pine tree farm, said Willa Talton, a civilian spokeswoman at England Air Force Base. "We know that there was a fire thereafter, but we don't know if they went down in flames," she said.

Iraqi soldiers detain U.N. officials

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraqi soldiers detained U.N. officials for more than 12 hours in a Baghdad building Monday, then forcibly confiscated documents that apparently show Iraq has been developing nuclear weapons.

The inspectors found the papers in a surprise search several hours before the U.N. Security Council met to discuss Iraqi obstructions to U.N. searches for hidden weapons and production facilities.

The confrontation appeared likely to lead the Security Council to accept President Bush's offer to provide troops to guard the inspectors and warplanes to escort U.N. helicopter searches.

The inspectors hauled seven carloads of papers from an Iraqi government building, but authorities stopped the team, held its members for 12 hours and "forcibly" seized the data, officials said.

$10 million cocaine bust in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Anti-narcotics agents intercepted a car carrying 143 pounds of cocaine worth an estimated $10 million and arrested a Venezuelan man and a Guatemalan woman, police said Monday.

Capt. Cesar Augusto Somoza said the drugs were confiscated Sunday at the El Guasale border crossing with Nicaragua when the car tried to enter Honduras.

"We discovered 115 packages of cocaine concealed in a false bottom built in the back of the car," Somoza said.

Troops protecting Iraqi Kurds will withdraw

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Ground troops in the U.S.-led force based in Turkey to protect Iraqi Kurds will be withdrawn, but allied warplanes will stay at least three more months, the Foreign Ministry said Monday.

The agreement on basing the air and ground force in southeastern Turkey was to expire Sept. 30, but the government announced Saturday that it was being extended 90 days. That announcement said the force's components would be changed but did not give any details.

U.S. military officials had hinted earlier that the remaining ground units would be removed.

Soldiers riot, loot in Zaire

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo (AP) — About 3,000 paratroopers mutinied in Zaire Monday, pillaging stores in downtown Kinshasa and forcing the closing of the country's main international airport, diplomats reached by telephone said.

The government's Kinshasa Radio said late Monday that troops loyal to President Mobutu Sese had chased the mutineers from the city.

Branstad objects to tuition increases

Gov. Terry Branstad

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A recommended 9 percent tuition increase at the state's three public universities should be rolled back to a level closer to the inflation rate, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

"It appears to me on the surface to be a little bit on the high side," Branstad said. "I think it's important to maintain access to our universities as well as maintain quality."

While insisting he didn't want to meddle in decisions made by the state Board of Regents, Branstad sided with students and others who have protested the proposed tuition increase.

Since he appoints regents, Branstad's opinion carries extra weight. Last week, regents staffers proposed a 9 percent tuition increase, coupled with fee increases to bring the total to 9.4 percent.

"I'm very sensitive to the financial needs of students," Branstad said.

Branstad is a graduate of the UI and frequently notes that he didn't finish paying his student loans until after he was elected governor.

"I don't want to see a talented, young person who has the academic ability prevented from getting an opportunity to get a higher education," Branstad said.

At his regular meeting with reporters, the governor declined to spell out precisely what the increase should be.

"I think it's important that when we look at tuition we also recognize the impact this has on students and their ability to pay," Branstad said. "These are state institutions, and the state does, indeed, need to fulfill its responsibility."

For the past few years, state officials have made a point of holding tuition increases under the general rate of inflation. This year, however, they said the state's budget crunch and sharp limits on tax dollars meant students would have to pick up a bigger share.

Branstad said there are budget troubles but said university officials are restructuring and cutting back.

"I think in the last few years they've tried to stay at or below the rate of inflation," Branstad said. "Something closer to the rate of inflation, maybe, would be more appropriate." Pressed to provide a figure he could support, Branstad declined.

"I don't want to try to set a figure, and I don't think that's appropriate," he said. "The decision ought to be made by the Board of Regents."

Included in the tuition proposal was an even larger increase for students seeking advanced law and business degrees. Branstad said he was less concerned about those costs, in part because those advanced degrees are generally worth more to students.

"I think there's a good point that can be made for those higher degrees costing more," he said.

Branstad said any tuition increase ought to be coupled with increases in student aid programs.

UNITED NATIONS

Bush refuses idea of deadline for Iraq

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — President Bush told the United Nations on Monday "we cannot compromise" on demands that Iraq destroy its nuclear weapons capability. He also urged the world body to disavow its stand that Zionism is a form of racism.

While talking tough about Iraq, Bush set no deadline for Saddam Hussein to submit unconditionally to inspection and destruction of his most dangerous weapons or face the possibility of renewed military force. White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters that the United States was discussing a 48-hour deadline with other Security Council members.

Bush said the United Nations should keep economic sanctions clamped on Iraq as long as Saddam remains in control.

He took a strong stance on the 1975 Zionism resolution, a major source of mistrust between Israel and the United Nations.

"To equate Zionism with racism is to reject Israel itself," Bush said in his speech to the General Assembly of representatives from 166 nations. "This body cannot claim to seek peace and at the same time challenge Israel's right to exist."

"By repealing this resolution unconditionally," he said, "the United Nations will enhance its credibility and serve the cause of peace."

The United States has long deplored the resolution, but Bush had postponed a campaign to repeal it out of a desire to maintain Arab support for the effort against Saddam in the Persian Gulf.

The State Department's assistant secretary for international organizations, John Bolton, told reporters, "We think we have a majority in favor of repeal."

As for Iraq, some advisers had urged Bush to set a 48-hour deadline after which American warplanes would be used to accompany U.N. inspectors on helicopter flights in Iraq.

Fitzwater said the United States was consulting with Security Council members on how to proceed and that a decision might come in a day or two. "Our plan contains a 48-hour deadline and a proposal on how to move after that" if Saddam continues to balk, he said.

However, another administration official said the 48-hour plan "may not be relevant" anymore as the United Nations faces new problems with Iraq's denial of documents to U.N. inspectors. Nevertheless, the official asserted that the United States and its allies have the authority to use force if necessary against Iraq.

"We have the grounds for action," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

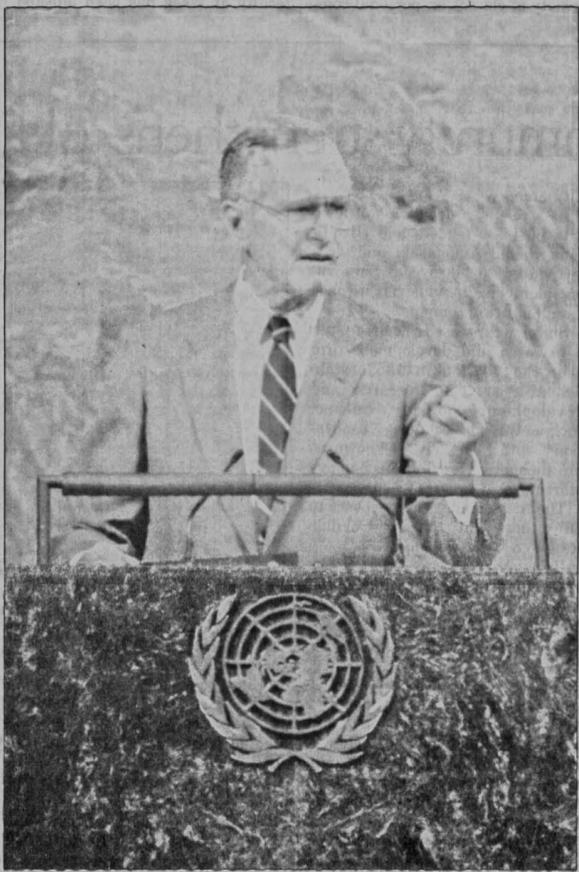

Fitzwater said Saddam's interference with inspections "leads us to be more pessimistic" that he will comply with U.N. demands. "It doesn't appear that Saddam recognizes the seriousness of the situation. The basic problem is he doesn't want to comply."

Bush reworked his speech at Camp David over the weekend and tinkered with the section on Iraq before leaving the White House Monday — as Iraqi soldiers were detaining U.N. inspectors who were trying to take nuclear-weapons documents from a building in Baghdad.

"We're not going to do anything before we understand the facts," Bush said after his speech. In Baghdad, the Iraqis released the inspectors but kept the documents.

Bush's plea for keeping up pressure on Saddam and for repealing the resolution on Zionism were the high points of a speech in which he outlined his vision of the world in the post-Cold War era.

Bush also used his visit for a marathon of diplomatic meetings at his suite at the Waldorf Astoria

At the same time, Secretary of State James Baker was conferring with foreign ministers of Britain, the Soviet Union, France and China, presumably solidifying Big Five support for pressure on Iraq.

Baker appeared to warn Saddam of the threat of military force. "We saw earlier the tragic consequences of failure to comply" with U.N. resolutions, he told reporters.

Today, Bush will meet with Boris Pankin, the new Soviet foreign minister, now seeking nearly $15 billion in food grants and credits from the West to avert starvation this winter.

In his speech, Bush said the United States had no desire to impose a "pax Americana" on the world. At the same time, he said, "We will not retreat and pull back into isolation. . . . We will offer friendship and leadership."

TUITION

Regents to hear proposals for budget

Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

The Iowa state Board of Regents will hear a proposal Wednesday for increased tuition as well as budget requests for the next three years from the regents institutions.

The proposal includes an undergraduate in-state tuition increase of 9.4 percent and a 41.4 percent increase for MBA tuition.

The regents will not make a final vote on the tuition proposals until their Nov. 20 meeting at Iowa State University.

The justification for a tuition increase greater than that of the higher education price index, which is 5.3 percent for fiscal 1991, is described in the regents' docket.

"The state's financial condition makes continuation of adequate funding for the regents universities very uncertain. In order to assure that the quality of instructional and student services is maintained and improved, tuition increases at or near the proposed 9 percent appear to be necessary."

Students at the UI have complained that they want to know where the additional tuition money will be spent. According to the docket, a recommendation will be made that "proceeds of the tuition increase be earmarked for improvement of instructional and student services."

Income from tuition generally funds student aid, support of student services, student activities and building development functions. The rest becomes part of the general fund, used to support instruction and related activities, according to the docket.

The proposal states that $13,359 will be set aside from tuition revenues and given to student financial aid to offset the effects of the tuition and fee increase for students now receiving aid.

The regents stressed in their proposal that the UI is still a good bargain when held up against tuition at comparable institutions, and stated the UI had the lowest resident undergraduate tuition rate of all the Big Ten universities for the eighth consecutive year.

This is the third year of the regents' four-year effort to phase-in funds to make UI Student Health Service self-supporting. This year students will experience an increase of mandatory fees from $20 to $30.

The regents will hear proposed adjustments for the 1992 operating budget and requests for fiscal '93 and '94.

The UI will be asking for an increase in the 1992 budget of $1,990,000, proposing increased funds for admissions, the registrar's office, and recruitment and marketing. Also requested will be funds to increase library hours and more money for the Colleges of Liberal Arts, Business Administration and Engineering, and the renovation of Schaeffer Hall.

Also recommended will be to use increased revenues gained from the unexpected enrollment

GET-WELL CARDS

SAC fights funding 'illness'

Jessica Davidson

"Dear President Rawlings, So sorry to hear about the university. It's really a shame how a healthy institution can become a virtual skeleton overnight. I hope a cure for this budget cut disease is found soon. Until then, my thoughts are with the university. Get well soon, UI."

The Student Awakening Committee is calling for several hundred get-well cards to be sent to UI President Hunter Rawlings' office in the next few weeks to acknowledge the UI's "sickness."

"Get a piece of notebook paper and a crayon," Al Beardsley, executive officer of the UI Graduate and Professional Student Senate, said.

Jennifer Kelly

"Whatever you want to write, just give your best wishes to get well and send them."

The idea for sending get-well cards rose out of medical metaphors used during the Sept. 19 rally protesting cuts at the UI.

"The university is ill. We need to pay attention to our university just as we would any sick friend," said Acting SAC Chairwoman and

Targeted programs gear up to resist potential elimination

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

Program directors whose areas are targeted by the Strategic Planning Steering Committee report are in the midst of preparing for review and evaluation.

Over 50 UI programs and departments were targeted for review or phase-out by the report issued last week by UI administrators.

Benjamin Hunnicutt, director of the Division of Physical Education, said a committee is currently being put together to re-evaluate the entire program.

"We don't know yet what the effects will be . . . but the division itself will probably be downsized. From what's been said, it's clear that some programs will certainly either be eliminated or downsized," Hunnicutt explained.

KRUI will be reviewed with an emphasis on reducing costs and increasing quality and efficiency, according to the report.

"We think we'll be able to continue on as we are now. We don't see any major changes," Marketing Director Mike Gerstbrein said.

In contrast, the director of the School of Library and Information Science, Carl Orgren, said the next year is enough time to make a full case for the retention of the school. He described the situation as "a bit distressing and worrisome."

Orgren explained that the school is a master's degree program and it graduated 44 people in 1990. Over 91 percent were placed in areas such as corporate libraries, drug information centers and colleges. He said those graduates are making between $25,000 and $45,000 their first year out of school.

COMPUTERS

Weeg most widely used service on campus

Molly Spann
Daily Iowan

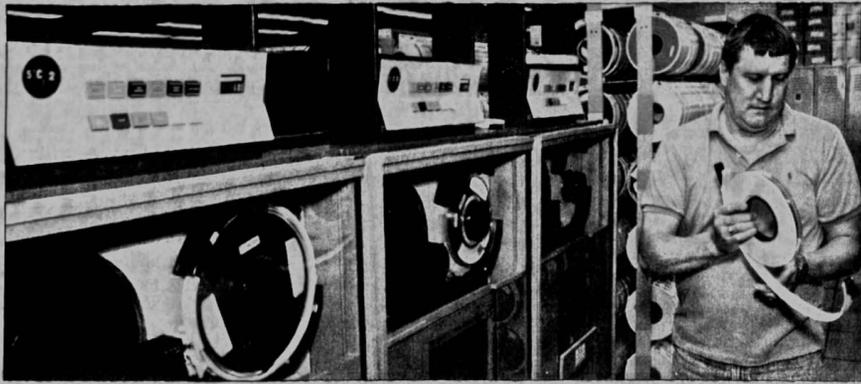

Whether it's to type a paper at 2 in the morning or whether it's to learn about how computers and computer programs are used, the Weeg Computing Center, open 24 hours, offers these opportunities and more to students, faculty and staff at the UI.

The center was named after Gerald Weeg, who was its director from 1964 until 1974. "He was a really influential leader in bringing instructional computers on campus," said Linda Boyatzies, Weeg's associate director.

The Weeg center, located in the lower level of the UI Lindquist Center, includes a free computer lab open 24 hours to all students, faculty and staff. Also, the center has a variety of computer clusters located around campus in buildings such as Burge and Mayflower, as well as buildings in which classes are held.

Not surprisingly, Weeg is one of the most widely used facilities on the UI campus. Chris Pruess, manager of Weeg's User Support Center, said it is not unusual for 30 students to be working in the lab in the middle of the night. Several students said the center's accessibility at all times is the main reason they use Weeg.

Mark Cosner, a junior economics major, said he found out about Weeg through a TA he had for a computer class.

"I found out the center is open 24 hours a day, which makes it convenient," Cosner said. "I'd rather use a computer than a typewriter."

David Johnson, a senior computer science major, agreed with Cosner.

"Since the center is available at all hours, when I procrastinate I have the ability to finish last-minute projects," he said.

Besides the computer lab itself, Pruess said lectures and hands-on computer training are another main aspect of the center. Courses offered range from an overview of facilities and services at Weeg to a variety of classes on personal computing. Throughout the 1990-91 year, 8,475 students, faculty and staff were enrolled in the 498 general computer courses offered.

Although the computer classes do not count for course credits, the classes are free to university students, staff and faculty. They are taught by both students and faculty.

"When the interest is there, students may run classes," said Pruess. "Whenever students want to help we say 'wonderful' and let them teach, but most classes are taught by full-time staff."

According to Pruess, the number of faculty at Weeg has been affected greatly by the recent budget cuts since the majority of Weeg's budget is supported by state funds.

She said the center has been unable to fill several full-time positions, left empty when previous employees took other jobs. Also, Weeg has experienced an over 5 percent budget cut.

"We're struggling, but we're trying not to let it show," she said. "Right now we're just trying to cover positions. After all, we don't want to close our doors — since we are open 24 hours a day — and say, 'Too bad, folks, we got a budget cut.' We're trying to minimize problems caused for students."

NEW BUSINESS

Japanese community strengthens old ties with IC

Loren Keller
Daily Iowan

A delegation of 25 community representatives from Amagasaki, Japan, visited the Iowa City/Coralville area over the past three days to strengthen 4-year-old international bonds of friendship and business between the two communities.

"This return visit to Iowa City by our friends from Amagasaki demonstrates their true commitment to our area. Already we have a company opening its permanent office here as well as a number of personal friendships that have remained strong through the years," said UI President Hunter Rawlings in a statement announcing the recent visit.

The friendship began in August 1987 when Soichiro Yamaoka, president of a Japanese metal manufacturing company, visited friends in Iowa City and met Ray Muston, then president of the Iowa City Area Development Group.

When Yamaoka returned to his country, he told business colleagues and friends about the congenial community spirit and business opportunities in the Iowa City area.

As a result, a delegation of Iowa City business leaders and UI officials visited Amagasaki and were introduced to Masayoshi Shimizu, president of an industrial furnace manufacturing company.

Shimizu expressed a desire to start a research and development firm near the UI and in 1989 established a start-up research and development company, Seavac, Inc., at the UI Technology Innovation Center. The TIC is known as an incubator for high-technology start-up firms.

The developing firm moved to office space at the UI Oakdale Research Park Monday.

Bruce Wheaton, director of the research park and the innovation center, said that Seavac's move from the incubator to the park was a positive sign of success for the firm.

"We established the center to help new companies get started by providing the necessary support services," Wheaton said. "One of the related objectives of the research park is to provide a permanent site for companies graduating from TIC. In the case of Seavac, this process of systematic, incremental growth appears to be working."

Shimizu cited UI academics, hard-working people, Iowa's combination of heavy and light industry, and Iowa basketball as reasons why this location was chosen for the $50 million project.

"The circumstances here were favorable," he said. "Iowa is not just cornfields and beanfields."

Shimizu said Seavac may offer internships to engineering students in the future.

Seavac has started an alliance with Computer Aided Design Software, Inc., also located at the Oakdale Campus, to modify computer software.

UI may help decrease accidents with driving simulator

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

Annually, 46,000 people are killed and 3.5 million are injured on U.S. highways. Two hundred million hospital stays per year are attributed to car accidents, and 14.5 million people missed work because of an accident. The annual cost of all of this to society in 1986 was $74 billion.

The U.S. Senate agrees that something has to be done to lower these numbers, and the UI may be the place where the process can begin.

A national competition directed by the National Science Foundation to create a driving simulator was announced in the Federal Register last year, according to research Professor Derek Willard.

The Department of Transportation has been considering building a simulator for several years and conducted the competition to see which would be the best site to house the simulator.

The department announced in August that the UI was named as the lead institution for construction of the simulator project.

"The need for the simulator is contained in the figures," Willard said. "So many people have been killed and injured at such a great cost. The National Highway Transportation Safety Administration needs more research on the role of the drivers involved in these accidents. Of the three elements involved — the driver, the vehicle and the elements of the road — the driver is the one least understood."

Willard said this lack of understanding causes great difficulty in conducting research on driver safety under controlled and repeated conditions.

"One reason is because of a great difference in driving conditions," he said. "The proposed facility would address a need for research on the driver by providing a state of the art, motion-based driving simulator in which you can conduct those controls and repeat elements in an environment that is as close to open conditions as you can get."

Willard said that the NHTSA said this kind of research cannot be achieved any other way, other than through simulator tests. No other type of research, such as compiling statistics or using computers, can achieve the level of predictability and understanding that you can get from putting a human being in those situations, he said.

Right now it costs the U.S. government $2,800 an hour to rent a driving simulator, which runs a full workday and is booked solid three months in advance. Access to simulators is a problem for the United States as well as other countries around the world.

If the DOT goes ahead with the simulator, it would allow our government, automobile manufacturers and scientists access to this capability at an enhanced rate, Willard said.

The UI has been recognized as the nation's leader in simulation and design optimization of mechanical systems because it was recommended to house the simulator project.

"This is a great honor and a great tribute to Professor Ed Hawg and his colleagues," Willard said. "They should be commended for their hard work."

If the UI is selected as the host site, it would greatly enhance the research capacity to study design optimization of design systems, Willard said.

"It would do this not only by providing funds for the construction of the simulator, but it will also provide a focal point through which we can attract researchers and scientists from the government and other universities," he said.

A national partnership has already been created with other universities including Iowa State, MIT, the University of California at Berkeley, the University of California at Davis and the University of Central Florida. The schools would exchange and contribute research about the simulator.

"California has a great interest in the simulator. They already have research under way and have a particular interest in trying to solve the problems they have on the West Coast," Willard said.

The U.S. Senate has encouraged a decision be made on which school will house the simulator, but there has been no indication as to when the final decision on the location of the simulator will be made.

ANATOMY DEPARTMENT

UI studies ways to trim expenses

Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

The UI Department of Anatomy, still smarting from negative publicity resulting from Professor Jean Jew's sexual harassment case, is under review once again.

A report written by a steering committee of UI administrators has recommended the anatomy department be subject to "a rigorous review . . . to assess the quality of its teaching and research."

UI Vice President for University Affairs Ann Rhodes said the department is being targeted for general review and not because of any specific problem.

"This is independent of any concerns raised in the Jean Jew case," Rhodes said. "The sense was it was a department that should be subject to further analysis as part of the strategic planning the university is doing."

The UI's strategic planning report, issued last week, identified 50 UI programs to be evaluated or phased-out.

Jew won a long-running sexual harassment case against the UI last year when a federal judge ruled Jew had been denied promotion in 1983 because of harassment from a department colleague.

As a result of the case, the UI promoted Jew to full professor, paid her raises dating from 1984 and agreed to pay her attorney approximately $800,000 in legal fees. The reputation of the department suffered as a result of the negative publicity it received from the case.

The anatomy department is not concerned about the impending review, according to department head Joe Coulter.

"It's our turn to be reviewed, and that's most of the reason for it," Coulter said. "Our department is quite strong so we are looking forward to it. We could use some good publicity."

Each department in the College of Medicine is reviewed every five years, according to Coulter. The anatomy department was up for review last year, but the review was delayed because the timing of academic and research review was not right, he said.

Coulter said he is hoping the review will help the department by demonstrating the need for more faculty, among other things.

"Last year we were hit with some layoffs, and that's bad," he said. "They've made it harder to do what we're supposed to be doing."

UI CONVOCATION

UI rewards dedication of faculty, staff

Over 200 people will be honored and 60 will receive awards at tonight's gathering.

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

For the first time, staff and faculty will be honored together for their excellence and commitment to the UI tonight at the University Convocation.

Over 200 faculty and staff will be recognized. Sixty award winners will cross the stage, and others being honored will have their names printed in the program.

Two faculty members will be awarded the Excellence in Teaching Award. Five UI staff members will be presented with Staff Excellence Awards by UI President Hunter Rawlings.

The staff members were nominated by their colleagues and chosen from a list by a committee of faculty and staff members. The University Staff Council is sponsoring the awards.

During the convocation Rawlings will give a speech titled, "The Power and Vulnerability of the University." He will speak about the demands and challenges facing the university and what the faculty and staff are doing to address them, according to a UI press release.

The event is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at Clapp Recital Hall in the Music Building.

A reception will be held south of the recital hall after the convocation. The convocation is open to university faculty, staff and the public.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Citizens press for affirmative action

Larry Offner
Daily Iowan

In the past, some Johnson County department heads have allegedly hired their friends instead of advertising positions, and some Johnson County citizens want to make sure that the county now embraces affirmative action.

A joint meeting of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors and Conservation Board heard from several citizens on the subject of affirmative action.

Clara Olson told the boards "you are far from affirmative action." She said the county should adopt a policy similar to those of the UI and Iowa City. Their hiring processes can be adjusted as they progress from advertising to selection to ensure inclusion of all applicant classes.

Rita Wings of the Johnson County Democratic Party Affirmative Action Committee said that the Conservation Board's hiring practices "are not what they could be."

Wings said her organization was prepared to document cases in which part-time and full-time positions with the board were filled without advertising.

Ocala Wings told the boards the recent advertisement for an office manager-secretary for the Conservation Board had resulted in 79 replies.

"Of those, 17 were from Iowa City / Coralville where people of color are most likely to be," said

Wings. "Yet, the seven selected for interview were from surrounding small towns in Johnson County."

Wings said that she was interested in seeing a selection process fair to persons of color.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White told the boards that Ron Dunlap, Conservation Board director, "was very sensitive to the issue and invested lots of time in sending me copies of his proposed ads."

White said the county had scheduled seminars by UI personnel for county department heads.

Supervisor Charles Duffy said that the issues raised at the meeting should be addressed and would probably be placed on the Board of Supervisors' agenda in the future.

Alleged UIHC misdiagnosis leads Arizona couple to file for over $3,000 in damages

Marcey Bullerman
Daily Iowan

An alleged misdiagnosis at the UI Hospitals and Clinics has led to a lawsuit for damages exceeding $3,000.

The lawsuit against the state of Iowa was filed Sept. 20 by a Tucson, Ariz., couple who claim their daughter's feeding disorder was misdiagnosed at the UIHC, leading to emotional distress, humiliation, loss of earnings, medical expenses and several other damages.

According to the lawsuit, Ellen and Larry Geringer took their 10-month-old daughter to UIHC in July 1988 seeking treatment for a feeding disorder. The attending physician concluded that the child did not have a feeding disorder; the child's mother was diagnosed as having an extremely rare condition known as "Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy" — a condition in which a parent is said to "falsify" illness in the child "through simulation and/or production of illness."

According to the lawsuit, the Iowa Department of Human Services — as a result of the diagnosis — removed the child from the custody of her parents from Sept. 28, 1988, to Feb. 9, 1989, at which time she was returned to her parents. Also according to the lawsuit, the DHS filed a report asserting the Geringers' daughter was a victim of child abuse without conducting any investigation of the child's true medical condition.

According to the lawsuit, after the child was transferred from Iowa to Arizona, an investigation found inconclusive evidence to validate the Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy diagnosis. Also according to the lawsuit, the investigation concluded that the child did in fact suffer from an eating disorder.

The Geringers are charging UIHC, the DHS, the state of Iowa and Dr. Richard Stevenson, the diagnosing physician, with medical malpractice.

3 ROUNDTRIPS ON CONTINENTAL AIRLINES—AT A PRICE THAT REALLY MAKES FLYING AFFORDABLE

Only Student Cardmembers can enjoy this great deal on Continental Airlines: three roundtrip flights for just $129 or $189 each—depending on where you're going.* What's more, these certificates are good anywhere Continental Airlines flies in the 48 contiguous states.

Use your certificates to visit friends at other schools, see your family back home or enjoy yourself during a vacation. And the best part: Each certificate could save you as much as $250 over regular Continental Airlines fares on a coast-to-coast trip.

OUR NEWEST ADVANTAGE: UP TO 30 MINUTES* OF FREE MCI LONG-DISTANCE CALLING EVERY MONTH FOR A YEAR

Talk about value. Now the Card can also help you save on your long-distance calls. In total, you could save more than $44 when you enroll and use the American Express Card as a calling card. And you don't even have to change your current long-distance company.

PLUS SAVINGS ON CLOTHES, FOOD, MUSIC... AND MORE

Student Privileges Value Certificates give you the savings you need on the things you want—a sure way to make the most of a college budget. This year alone, Student Cardmembers have saved at Pizzeria Uno, Eddie Bauer, MTV and ArtCarved class rings, among others.

You'll find your certificates in each issue of our exclusive student magazine, American Express® Card CONNECTIONS—where you'll also find valuable ideas and information about college life today.

A GOOD INVESTMENT, A GREAT VALUE

For just $55 a year, the Card gives you all these savings, as well as all the traditional benefits of Cardmembership—like the personal attention you can get 24 hours a day from our Customer Service representatives.

And because you settle your account in full each month, you won't pay any finance charges—which can save you even more.

All of which goes to show that the American Express Card is an exceptional value. Because while there are many ways for you to spend your money, there are few that help you save it. Apply today.

*To be eligible, you must be approved by December 31, 1991.
A credit of up to $3.70 for calls will appear on each billing statement for 12 months after enrollment. $3.70 is equal to the charges for a domestic 30 minute night/weekend MCI Card Company long distance call and appropriate surcharges. You must enroll for this service by December 31, 1991.

increase for instructional programs and "critical building repairs."

Requests from the UI which were not approved by the Board Office amount to $4,457 and include areas such as undergraduate support and minority recruitment.

Buildings outlined to receive capital gains funds in 1993 are the Pharmacy Building addition, Biology Building renovation and the Biomedical Research Facility.

Also outlined in the docket is a five-year capital plan for building maintenance and construction at the regents institutions.

Facilities to be affected at the UI include the Engineering Building addition, International Center remodeling, Phillips Hall renovation, Schaeffer Hall, Chemistry-Botany Building and a North Capitol Street pathway.

Iowa, and there's only 14 west of the Mississippi," Orgren said.

Catherine Alter, director of the School of Social Work, said the undergraduate program was downsized dramatically in 1982, and "any further cuts will really hurt the undergraduate program."

According to a press release from the school, the UI has had an undergraduate degree in social work for 60 years, and it is one of the key programs in the university.

"If the state's current scarcity of resources mandates that the undergraduate program ... be phased out, then it is critical that the resulting savings be redirected to enhance the graduate program at the master's degree level and to develop a Ph.D. program," according to the release.

UISA Vice President Jennifer Kelly.

Beardsley said cards should be sent out as soon as possible. He said today and Wednesday would be particularly effective since the Iowa state Board of Regents is meeting in Iowa City.

Kelly said SAC plans to meet with UI student organizations to encourage their participants to send cards.

"It's more symbolic than anything else," she said. "But it will help show our concern."

Kelly said she thinks Rawlings will pay attention to the get-well cards.

"We're hoping he'll be supportive of trying to convince the state government to stop cutting our budget and regents to not hurt us more with tuition increases," she said.

Kelly said the regents will have to listen to students.

"The students are the school," she said. "If students take steps to make their concerns heard, the regents will listen."

Beardsley said he hopes for a good response from students.

"I think people are upset about the budget cuts, and they got more upset with the strategic plan cuts," he said. "Now they're even angrier with the final blow of tuition increases."

Beardsley said a single get-well card isn't going to change the situation at the UI, but a publicized mass response could make a difference.

"When Rawlings talks to the regents and the stories get around to the legislators and they hear about 2,000 get-well cards, they'll figure out that it translates to a lot of people angry about budget cuts and angry enough to vote and do something about it," he said.

SAC is continuing protest activities that began Friday, Sept. 13, with a class boycott and rally. Further activities, including vigils at the Old Capitol and chanting at football games, are being planned.

and "suspended hatreds have sprung to life" with the demise of communism. "No one here can promise that today's borders will remain fixed for all time. But we must strive to ensure the peaceful, negotiated settlement of border disputes."

In Iraq, Bush complained, Saddam was refusing to permit unconditional helicopter searches or to allow U.N. inspectors in Iraq to keep possession of documents about a nuclear weapons program. Bush said Saddam was demonstrating his contempt of U.N. resolutions that set the terms for end of the Persian Gulf War.

"And this also shows that we cannot compromise for a moment in seeing that Iraq destroys all of its weapons of mass destruction and the means to deliver them. And we will not compromise."

Bush was unreserved in his condemnation of Saddam, calling him "a brutal dictator whose arrogance dishonors the Iraqi people."

Urging resolve in the continuing showdown with Saddam, Bush said, "We must not abandon our principled stand against Saddam's aggression."

By seeking repeal of the resolution on Zionism -- which is the movement for creation of a Jewish state -- Bush acted to smooth relations with Israel, which have been strained by his demand for a four-month delay in consideration of $10 billion in housing loan guarantees for Israel.

Israel hailed Bush's action. "It's very encouraging to hear the presi-

"To equate Zionism with the intolerable sin of racism is to twist history and forget the terrible plight of Jews in World War II and indeed throughout history."

George Bush

dent did it," said a top aid to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

Bush said the 1975 resolution "mocks" the United Nation's pledge to practice tolerance and live together in peace. "Zionism is not a policy; it is the idea that led to the creation of a home for the Jewish people, to the state of Israel.

"And to equate Zionism with the intolerable sin of racism is to twist history and forget the terrible plight of Jews in World War II and indeed throughout history."

Grassley backs Thomas; confirmation seems likely

Steven P. Rosenfeld
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Sen. Charles Grassley says Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas won converts by his tempered approach to questions at his confirmation hearing and by demonstrating he is "a humane-minded person."

Grassley, an Iowa Republican who sits on the Judiciary Committee, said Monday he will vote to confirm Thomas.

He predicted a majority of the committee would vote for confirmation and that approval would be by an even wider margin in the full Senate.

Before the hearings, Grassley said he thought Thomas would be confirmed by a vote of about 60-40 in the Senate. Grassley said Monday he now believes approval will be approved by a 75-25 margin "and I think it's directly related to how he presented himself."

The decision to vote for confirmation should be no surprise, Grassley told reporters in a telephone news conference. He has voted twice before to confirm Thomas to appointments with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and once before to the Court of Appeals.

SOVIET UNION

Armenia declares independence during troubled times in republics

Deborah Seward
Associated Press

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. — The Soviet republics were in turmoil Monday from the Caucasus to Central Asia. Armenia declared independence, armed Georgian activists refused to leave a TV station and a Communist leader regained power in Tadjikistan.

Armenia and Azerbaijan, meanwhile, reportedly were making headway in Russian-mediated talks over Nagorno-Karabakh, a disputed enclave where a bloody ethnic conflict has claimed hundreds of lives since 1988.

The republics were taking affairs into their own hands and virtually ignoring the central government, proof that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has failed to regain much authority since hard-liners deposed him briefly last month.

Armenia on Monday became the 12th republic to declare independence from the Kremlin, leaving only Russia, Kazakhstan and Turkmenia in the nominal union. The three Baltic states of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia already have broken out of the Soviet Union.

The others who have broken from Moscow do not seek the same level of independence as the Baltics. They have agreed to remain in a loose confederation of independent states, and all 15 republics have expressed interest in maintaining economic ties in a kind of common market.

A political storm persisted in the southern republic of Georgia, where President Zviad Gamsakhurdia demanded that the opposition put down its guns and vacate the republic's broadcasting studio.

Thousands of adoring supporters answered Gamsakhurdia's call to rally in front of the massive Government House. Waving the blue, white and maroon Georgian flag, the crowd shouted "Zviady, Zviady" when Gamsakhurdia emerged from the building in the evening. He declared nothing would happen to his opponents if they left the TV station.

But the opposition remained firmly ensconced in the broadcast studios, about a mile away. Some 100 protesters occupied the building early Sunday and later were joined by protesters and rebel Georgian national guardsmen.

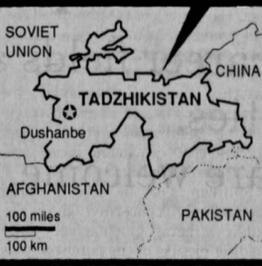

Opposition leaders and Western officials, including the United States, accuse Gamsakhurdia of acting like a dictator since winning a landslide victory in Georgia's first direct election last summer.

One anti-government demonstrator, identified in reports as a 37-year-old medical student, died on Sunday, a day after setting himself on fire. Tass has said 41 others had been hospitalized as of Sunday, nearly all hunger strikers who were beaten by police the day before.

In the Central Asian republic of Tadjikistan, the Communist leader Rakhman Nabiyev made a political comeback, replacing acting President Kadriiddin Aslonov, who was forced by Parliament to resign.

Parliament also declared a state of emergency to curb vandalism directed against statues of Soviet founder Vladimir Lenin after Aslonov issued a decree Sunday disbanding the Communist Party, Tass reported.

Pro-democracy lawmakers declared the moves "a putsch" and appealed to Soviet troops in the republic not to obey the new government. About 2,000 demonstrators gathered in front of Parliament, demanding that it dissolve itself and schedule multiparty elections, Tass said.

His return seemed to be in line with two other mostly Muslim Central Asian republics, Turkmenia and Uzbekistan, where Communist Party bosses were maintaining a firm grip on power despite the changes elsewhere.

A dispute in the Caucasus seemed headed toward resolution. Negotiators for Armenia and Azerbaijan reportedly agreed to call a cease-fire and disarm combatants.

Soviet unrest cripples communism in many Latin American countries

Eduardo Gallardo
Associated Press

SANTIAGO, Chile — The upheaval in the Soviet Union has shaken Latin America's already weak Communist parties, and now many leaders say they must reform to survive.

But there also are hard-liners who dismiss talk of change, and some parties could be thrown into turmoil.

"We are facing a storm that sometimes is like a nightmare," said Jaime Perez, leader of the party in Uruguay.

The fall of the Communist regimes in Eastern Europe rattled communism in Latin America, but the failed hard-line coup in the Soviet Union seems to be having a far more profound impact.

Chile's once monolithic Communist Party has split, and the top party official in Venezuela has quit.

Everywhere there are promises of renewal, democratic reform and even calls to change the names of some parties. Still, most proposals are vague, and it is unclear what they would mean for party members and policies.

Through the years, Latin America's Communists have pushed for radical land reform and increased state control over the economy, including nationalization of large companies, especially those owned by U.S. and other foreign interests. The Communists in countries such as Chile, Venezuela and Uruguay at one time had political clout.

But virtually all of the parties in the region have gradually lost strength; most receive only 3 percent to 5 percent of the vote in elections.

Most parties have become small organizations, often with little or no congressional representation, their influence limited largely to labor issues. In Argentina, the party is estimated to have only 3,000 to 4,000 members — down from 150,000 a few years back.

The disintegration of communism in Eastern Europe has further weakened Latin America's Communists. Now there is even public bickering, unheard of in the past.

Rene Mauge, secretary general of Ecuador's party, said Soviet Communists erred by "establishing a monopoly of power, a totally anti-democratic element."

Some radicals believe the abortive coup against Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev was the final blow to a dying system. But others say it set the stage for a revival of leftist politics.

Most political observers in the region predict a new political left will be created.

Mauge said his party "must fully renew itself, in line with the new national and international situation."

FAA study shows Northwest pilots highest in DWIs

Associated Press

DETROIT, Mich. — Nearly 400 of the 47,000 commercial pilots flying U.S. passenger planes have been convicted of a drunken driving-related offense, a Federal Aviation Administration study found.

FAA matches of driving records with pilot applications to renew medical certificates revealed the alcohol-related convictions, The Detroit News reported Sunday.

The newspaper said it obtained the records through a Freedom of Information request.

Safety and consumer groups said the findings show a need for stricter monitoring of pilots. A pilots' association said the statistics were misleading because some convictions occurred before the applicants became pilots.

Pilots are required to include on medical disclosure forms any drinking-related convictions, and the FAA found convictions dating to 20 years ago, the newspaper said.

The FAA said its two-year review has covered nearly all passenger pilots because they must apply for medical certificates each year. But a review of driving records of all 679,000 pilots in the United States is just 30 percent complete and will not be finished for another two years.

The FAA found Northwest pilots had the most drunken driving-related convictions, with 72 among its 5,600 pilots.

PRISON RIOT

Inmates slay 5 informants, injure 8 others

Bob Anez
Associated Press

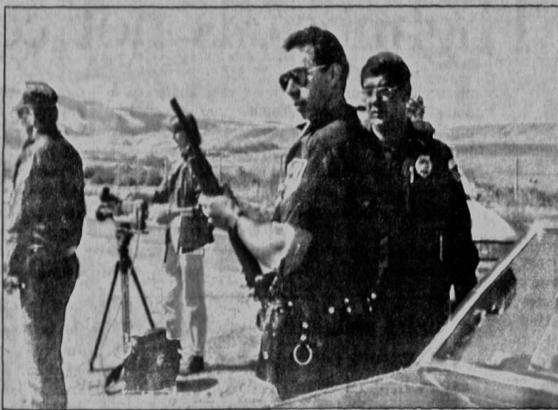

HELENA, Mont. — Four of the five inmates slain during a prison riot before police stormed the cellblock were informants who were hanged by their fellow prisoners, an official said Monday.

State and county investigators examined the Montana State Prison's ransacked maximum-security building, which sustained severe fire and water damage during Sunday's four-hour riot.

Warden Jack McCormick described the prison as "quiet and under control" Monday. The 1,170 inmates were confined to their cells or cellblocks.

State and prison officials said they do not know how or why the uprising occurred in the prison at Deer Lodge, 60 miles west of Helena, or who was involved.

They would not speculate on whether the riot was intended to punish inmates, mostly informants, being held in protective custody in the building.

Associated Press

Chief of Police Bill Wood holds a riot gun outside the Montana State Prison in Deer Lodge following the riot that killed five inmates.

"We don't know if this was a planned conspiracy to get at these informants," said Curt Chisholm, state corrections director.

The riot broke out Sunday morning in the maximum-security unit when inmates took five guards hostage. A team of 23 armed men rushed the building four hours later, firing tear gas and rescuing the hostages unharmed. The cellblock was retaken about a half-hour later.

Officials said a state employee posing as a news reporter distracted inmates shortly before the team stormed the rear of the cellblock. The prisoners had asked to talk with the news media, Chisholm said.

Authorities didn't know yet how the 68 inmates in the building got out of their cells at the same time. "Whatever happened, it compromised the integrity of the entire unit," Chisholm said.

HEALTH CARE

Government official doubts cuts in bureaucracy can cut expenses

Deborah Mesce
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Health Secretary Louis Sullivan expressed serious doubt Monday over claims that medical costs could be slashed with less red tape, but announced he will convene insurance executives soon to pursue the prospects.

Sullivan said he believes some savings can be achieved by streamlining administrative costs, but he dismissed several recent studies that concluded large cuts could be realized.

Sullivan said he has "become increasingly concerned that the public is being given a very misleading picture of the potential cost savings achievable through decreasing administrative costs."

The scope of the administrative burden has been a rallying call among those who want radical health-care reforms, including a government-run system of universal health insurance.

Some studies have said administrative costs account for at least 20 percent of the more than $600 billion spent annually in this country on health care.

"We think these studies are flawed and that the public is being misled," Sullivan said, speaking at a health-care conference. "Nevertheless, we do believe an examination of administrative burdens is long overdue."

The government-industry summit will be held "in the next month or so," Sullivan said.

The Health Insurance Association of America says that administrative expenses account for about 13 percent of private health-care costs. Federal officials estimate that administrative costs amount to about 2 percent of the Medicare budget and about 5 percent of the federal share for Medicaid.

The consumer group Public Citizen sharply criticized Sullivan's comments. It is one of the groups that has contended that a centrally run, national health-care system could substantially reduce costs while extending care to everyone.

Public Citizen spokesman Robert Dryfuss said Sullivan was the one who was misleading the public "by suggesting that some ineffective jargon with insurance company executives can significantly reduce health-care costs."

At the government-industry summit, administration officials will discuss with insurance company executives what the government could do "to constrain any unnecessary administrative expenditures as well as reduce or eliminate needless paperwork," Sullivan said.

Sullivan has been conducting an overall study of problems in the health-care system but so far has proposed no fundamental reforms in the divisions between public and private insurance.

'His Royal Highness is not concerned'

For George Bush, outside forces have often fortuitously intervened to provide him with momentum he cannot summon alone.

In 1988 Bush's most miserable period of decay was the few months after he had secured the Republican nomination but before the heaven-sent Michael Dukakis gained the Democratic one. In 1990, after his politically disastrous budget deal, the gulf war suddenly provided a critical direction. In the summer of 1991 the second Russian Revolution helpfully arrived just as he began to face criticism that his presidency had stalled domestically. Without such interventions, Bush's natural inertia has quickly led to entropy. In the absence of an external factor — the deus ex machina — he simply runs down.

Now, as the 1992 campaign draws near and another stalling threatens, his quest for "the vision thing" has been renewed. "Bush's philosophy is not what you would call a philosophy," says one of his aides who has been assigned to find it. "He has a philosophy. We just don't know what it is." Bush, however, does have a novel, even radical, vision of the office he holds. "Because I believe in the honor of it all," was his account of his ultimate motive for the 1988 campaign. In office that desire has evolved into the imperial half-presidency. Bush's idea of the presidency is akin to the French one, of a president who meets and knows heads of state while his designated premier attends to "mere housekeeping matters," as de Gaulle had put it. But the American system is not the French Fifth Republic. Bush is a president without a premier. The lowly housekeeping, the maid service, is consigned to the congressional Democrats, whose policies, when finally passed, are regularly vetoed.

In August one could see Bush's idea of the half-presidency in the ubiquity of Brent Scowcroft, his national security adviser, and in the virtual invisibility of Roger Porter, his domestic policy adviser, who forlornly pops up at irregular intervals to announce that, yes, there is a domestic policy. But Bush's notion of the presidency was perhaps most unself-consciously but openly on display in a minor incident that occurred at the start of his vacation.

Bush, as usual, was trying to curry favor with his right wing in order to co-opt it, a procedure analogous to a minority set-aside program. The Justice Department had joined a suit to overturn the injunction of a federal judge against anti-tactical sense of foreign policy, his uncertainty at any given moment can appear as the deep reflection of the professional: "Wouldn't be prudent."

The political problem with Bush's idea of the executive, however, may be that it is too aristocratic to campaign for plainly. With the coming campaign in mind, therefore, Bush has begun to proffer claims of good faith in handling domestic affairs. In the first planning session of his political advisers for the 1992 campaign at ancestral Walker's Point, Bush's anxiety over his domestic weakness was mullered over. "Please, American people," he had already pleaded at a press conference, "do not listen to the charges by frantic Democrats who are trying to say we don't have a domestic policy."

At the center of the campaign, inevitably, will be the victory long ago — in Iraq. It will be used as more than the pinnacle of Bush's foreign policy; it will highlight the ersatz effect of the horseshoe-tossing patrician — the populist ringer.

"Bush's philosophy is not what you would call a philosophy," says one of his aides who has been assigned to find it. "He has a philosophy. We just don't know what it is."

abortion demonstrations in Wichita, Kan. When reporters asked Bush about it, as he was teeing up on the golf course, he replied testily: "This isn't a matter for the president to be concerned about, especially on his first day of vacation." The use of the royal third person was not an isolated incident. When demonstrators turned up Kennebunkport to protest his policy on AIDS, he assumed the royal stance, he objected that the demonstrators had disrupted life in Kennebunkport "because the president happened to be at his ancestral home."

Bush's concept of the presidency plays perfectly to his strengths, or weaknesses; the role demands no strategic insight, but only that he be perceived as playing in the game of nations. Instead of defining his ends and then grappling with the insolvency of means in order to meet them, he flourishes his personal diplomacy. "It's way too early — way too early — to get into that," he explained authoritatively about his approach to the crumbling Soviet Union. The more reactive he is, the more his stature may actually be enhanced. Without more than a

STATE BUDGET CRISIS

When the public speaks, politicians should listen

Last week the Governor's Committee on Government Spending Reform set a goal of finding ways to reduce annual state spending by at least $300 million dollars.

One of the ideas that most frequently appeared in the letters from Iowans submitted to the committee was consolidating state and local government services. Another letter in the committee's mailbox suggested reducing the number of counties in Iowa from 99 to 33. That idea may not meet with approval from some of Iowa's 99 county attorneys, auditors, recorders, sheriffs and treasurers, but reducing the number of counties or combining the services provided by Iowa's counties is an idea that deserves to be considered. (California — the nation's most populous state — has only 58 counties.)

Another letter in the committee's mailbox suggested reducing the number of counties in Iowa from 99 to 33. That idea may not meet with approval from some of Iowa's 99 county attorneys, auditors, recorders, sheriffs and treasurers, but reducing the number of counties or combining the services provided by Iowa's counties is an idea that deserves to be considered.

The measure would be a serious step, but a $250 million state budget deficit is a serious problem. If education, social services and state employees are fair game for the budget butchers, then so too should be governmental bureaucracies.

In another letter written to the committee, the suggestion was offered that a cut be made in Gov. Terry Branstad's annual salary of $76,700. In the shadows of a $250 million state budget deficit, it would be a refreshing change to see Iowa's political leaders actually demonstrate some of that "political leadership" they tout each election year by taking a pay cut.

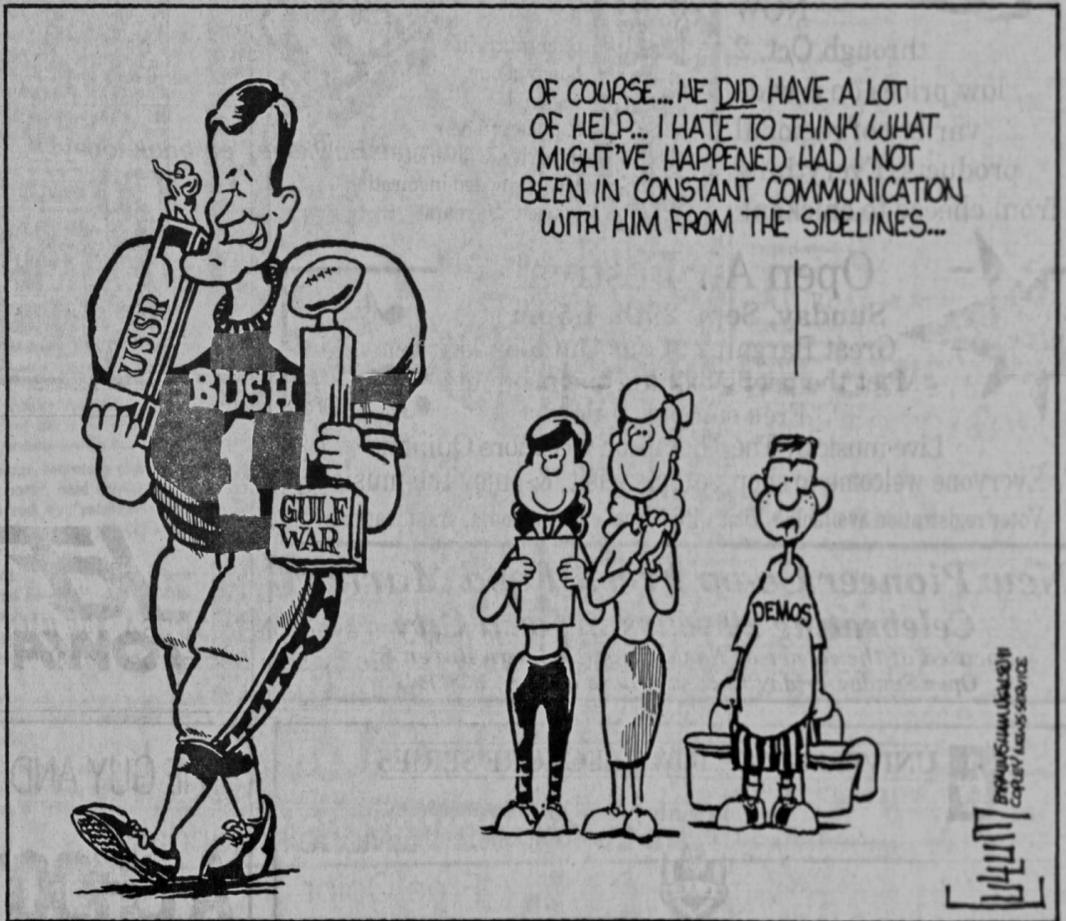

It would be a gesture that is not without precedent in troubled economic times. During the Great Depression of the 1930s, President Herbert Hoover refused his salary and members of Congress voted themselves a 10 percent pay cut to reduce government spending.

The state's politicians are always ready to prescribe a bitter economic pill to the public as part of a cure for the state's economic ailments. Now let's see them swallow one.

When "all" proposals for generating additional income and reducing expenditures are under consideration, it is a sign that the state is in economic dire straits. Some of the ideas submitted to the Governor's Committee on Government Spending Reform may be drastic. However, they deserve consideration because those who wrote these letters are Iowans, and it is their lives that the deficit will continue to affect.

As educational opportunities diminish, student groups and government offer hope

To the Editor:
As an electrical engineering student, I have to pay $100 per semester to use the computer laboratories and corresponding facilities in the Engineering Building. Due to "budgetary constraints" at the university, several cutbacks have been put into effect, in particular a reduction in staffing of the three available laboratories (currently one lab monitor supervises all three areas), as well as a reduction in overall laboratory hours.

I would like to take this opportunity to applaud the students that participated in Student Awakening Day. I can only hope that the efforts of the students and the student government as well as the other on-campus organizations can make a difference.

African-Americans need more than generic lip service

To the Editor:
We are writing in response to Part IV of the weeklong series "focusing on problems and experiences of African-Americans at the UI."

As African-American students, we were deeply disturbed by the generic responses of President Hunter Rawlings to Dr. Rosalyn Green's suggestions for expanding and educating the UI and surrounding community. We believe that it is necessary to expand these services in order to provide academic support for those who are "academically excellent" as well as those individuals who may need additional services to survive in a community that is predominantly white and middle-class. Therefore, we believe that the proposed name change by Dr. Green to Student Opportunity and Academic Resource Center, or SOAR, would indeed make for "less stereotyping," just as President Rawlings suggested. Furthermore, we question his correlation between building location and services necessary for student development. We see no relationship between the two. We believe that students needing assistance and / or support will seek out services irrespective of the fact that "they don't like the building or it is too far away."

In the Special Support Services' Summary, specifically in reference to the section, "Long Term Aspirations," if it is truly our goal to provide "an atmosphere conducive to the personal, social, and intellectual development of students from all racial, ethnic, and cultural backgrounds," then we believe we must set a timetable to work toward these objectives, particularly in light of the recent budget cuts that affect student services throughout the university.

In conclusion, we encourage President Rawlings and the UI administrators to consider all future recommendations that will enhance the UI's commitment to academic excellence.

Blowing off

To the Editor:
As a former journalist, I'm often appalled at The Daily Iowan's biased brand of news reporting. The lead in Jessica Davidson's Page 1, above-the-fold article on Friday's student boycott ["Faculty members split on opinions of boycott," Sept. 13] drips with cynicism and cowardly piety:

"Students planning to blow off classes for a day of intensive political and economic fervor should check to see what their professors think."

It didn't surprise me to find your editor-in-chief refining this contemptuous and condescending attitude in his editorial on the boycott, as is his right. But his responsibility is to keep opinion on the opinion page where it belongs.

Sand Road is for everyone

To the Editor:
While Larry Offner's article was generally accurate, the headline "Bicycles unlikely to share Sand Road with automobiles in months to come" (Sept. 12) is totally inaccurate and extremely misleading.

The presumption is that bicycles and motor vehicles don't currently share the road. This is false. According to the Code of Iowa, bicycles are considered vehicles and are legitimate road users.

Proportional to the 4,000 motor vehicles per day and uncounted bicyclists who use Sand Road each day, there are very few conflicts which result in injury. Most conflicts involve bicyclist and motorist perception of "who owns the road." In fact, both vehicle types have a right to the roadway and need to share the road courteously and predictably with each other. Bicyclists and motorists could both stand improvement in this area.

Sand Road is an enjoyable road to motor or bicycle. All road users can benefit from improvements, most notably an "over-width," or wider traffic lane. This should reduce vehicle conflicts when there are cars and bikes in both directional lanes at the same time. Again, a better sense of "sharing the road" would help greatly. Paved or concrete shoulders WITHOUT rumble strips would be of some help in some situations, but the wide land solution is favored by many traffic planners familiar with American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials' guidelines.

A bicycle sidepath separated from the traffic lane is not a safe option on this roadway. (Multiuse nature trails which accommodate bicycles and which are far removed from motor traffic are another issue entirely.) Design problems abound with separate paths directly parallel to roadways, adequate maintenance is a constant problem, and serious traffic flow and safety problems arise at any sort of intersection. The adjacent sidepath approach is not recommended by the Board of Advisors, the Johnson County Council of Governments, the League of American Wheelmen (the national organization of bicyclists) or traffic planners who specialize in accommodating bicycle transportation into the road planning process.

While we can't speak for the supervisors, we think it is fair to say that both they and Bicyclists of Iowa City agree that bicyclists and motorists both have a right to use Sand Road — now and in the future — and that most are, in fact, already sharing the road!

PLO COM

Arafat for tal condit

William C. Mar Associated Pres

ALGIERS, ALgeria (AP) — Yasser Arafat rejected Israel's peace talks Monday, saying the PLO is "not ready" to negotiate with the "United States of the Middle East" neighbors.

He spoke at a pivotal congressional hearing on the National Council of Jewish Affairs in Israel's tough coalition participation talks.

Signs of trouble in the Middle East appeared immediately after the congressional delegation to the Middle East. Arafat's key negotiators at the peace conference were specific program.

Talk in the Middle East that will emerge from the peace conference is expected to be a success for Arafat's details of Palestinian rights.

The PLO also excluded the PLO's pathfinders from the movement leadership as insufficient Palestinian pro-U.S. Secretary Baker.

"Let everybody know the Israeli blockade of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank is a violation of international law," he said.

He appealed to Bush and Clinton to "do all within your power to resolve the Middle East problem, in particular the Palestinian problem, in conformity with international law."

PLO CONGRESS

Arafat ready for talks, not conditions

William C. Mann
Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — Yasser Arafat rejected Israeli conditions for peace talks Monday but said the PLO is nonetheless ready to help the United States bring together the Middle East's antagonistic neighbors.

He spoke at the opening of a pivotal congress of the Palestine National Council, the Palestinians' parliament-in-exile. Its members are divided on how to respond to Israel's tough conditions for Palestinian participation in the peace talks.

Signs of trouble for the Palestine Liberation Organization chairman appeared immediately. Several congress delegates demanded tighter American guarantees that Palestinian rights would be protected, and the leader of a main faction threatened a walkout if not satisfied.

Arafat's keynote speech dealt in generalities about the planned peace conference. He laid down no specific program.

Talk in the corridors indicated that what emerges from the congress will be similarly unambiguous. Officials expected approval of the peace conference, with wide latitude for Arafat in working out details of Palestinian participation.

The PLO already has rejected Israeli conditions designed to exclude the PLO and its sympathizers from the talks. Most movement leaders have described as insufficient promises to the Palestinians provided last week by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker.

"Let everybody know, we reject the Israeli blackmail and the Israeli conditions," said Arafat, who gave a victory salute as he took the podium.

He appealed to Presidents George Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev to "do all within your power to resolve the Middle East problem and, particularly, the Palestinian problem, in conformity with international law."

He said time is running out to convene the peace conference, which he described as "a rich opportunity that looms on the horizon."

A key lieutenant, Mahmoud Aloul of Arafat's Fatah faction, said the speech showed that the PLO is ready to negotiate peace so long as Palestinian rights are respected.

"If we get better American assurances than what we received so far, the Palestinians will participate," he said.

But it was clear that some PLO officials were not convinced Arafat can be trusted to ensure that the Americans provide the necessary guarantees.

Nayef Hawatmeh, leader of the Syrian-based Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, said Arafat's "reluctance to deal in specifics is suspicious."

Without guarantees from Arafat himself, he said he might withdraw his seven-delegate faction from the congress.

Yasser Abed Rabbo, Hawatmeh's former deputy and now leader of his own faction, agreed that more is needed from the United States.

"There are no new elements in the American position," Abed Rabbo said. "We consider the American position closer to negative than to positive."

Even Khaled el-Hassan, one of Arafat's colleagues in founding Fatah in the 1960s and considered a generally pro-Western PLO moderate, railed against the U.S. promises.

LEBANON

British hostage Jack Mann to be released in 2 days

Farouk Nassar
Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Pro-Iranian kidnappers said early Tuesday that within 48 hours they will release British hostage Jack Mann, the oldest of the Western hostages, who was abducted more than two years ago.

The move by the Revolutionary Justice Organization appeared to indicate that a logjam in the complex negotiations by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar for a comprehensive exchange of Western captives for Arab prisoners held by Israel, and possibly European countries as well, had been broken.

A handwritten communiqué from the Shiite Muslim group said the decision to free Mann was the result of "immense efforts" by Perez de Cuellar. He has been seeking to negotiate an overall prisoner swap between Israel and its Muslim foes for more than a month.

Tuesday's communiqué, written in Arabic, was delivered a few minutes after midnight to Beirut's An-Nahar daily and a Western news agency in the Lebanese capital.

It was accompanied by an authenticating photograph of American hostage Joseph Cicippio, who is also held by the Revolutionary Justice Organization.

Cicippio, 61, of Norristown, Pa., was kidnapped in Beirut Sept. 12, 1986. The poor-quality photo, the same one the hostage-takers had released before, showed him from the waist up, sporting a bushy beard and without the spectacles he usually wears. The statement indicated that obstacles in the delicate negotiations to free the Western hostages, which apparently blocked the expected release last week of Mann, 77, had been overcome.

There had been expectations Mann would be freed after Israel on Sept. 11 released 51 Arab prisoners and the bodies of nine Lebanese Shiite guerrillas killed by the Israelis in south Lebanon.

But Revolutionary Justice claimed Thursday that Israel had reneged on a pledge to release 80 prisoners and said Israeli intransigence was holding up release of the hostages.

On Tuesday, however, the 33-line communiqué said, "The United Nations has intervened in the person of the secretary-general and other intermediaries with immense efforts to salvage the situation."

"They sought to narrow the gap and reach solutions satisfactory to all parties," it added.

It did not say who the other intermediaries were. But the statement paid tribute to Syria and Iran for cooperating "to reach these

NORIEGA TRIAL

Former aide ties leader to Castro

Richard Cole
Associated Press

MIAMI — Manuel Noriega's former right-hand man testified Monday that he delivered envelopes and suitcases stuffed with drug cash to his boss and accompanied him to a meeting with Fidel Castro in Cuba.

Testifying in Noriega's drug-trafficking trial for a third day, Luis del Cid described himself as a confidential "errand boy" for the ousted Panamanian dictator.

Del Cid also said the former Panamanian ambassador to Paris, Gaspar Wittgreen, brought four "easy women" to visit Noriega in 1983. Lead defense attorney Frank Rubino angrily demanded a mistrial. After a bench conference, testimony continued, but prosecutors didn't follow up on the women's visit.

The former aide's testimony finished on a dramatic note when prosecutor Myles Malman asked him to identify Noriega. As del Cid pointed him out, his former commander stood up and del Cid reflexively rose to his feet in the witness box.

Del Cid said his first contacts with Colombia's Medellin cocaine cartel came in late 1981 when, under Noriega's orders, he successfully mediated the kidnapping of Marta Ochoa, sister of three cartel leaders. She was released by leftist M-19 Colombian guerrillas after the cartel paid a $1.2 million ransom.

Soon afterward, del Cid said, private planes from Colombia began flying into Panama City's downtown Paitilla airport.

He said Noriega frequently sent him to Paitilla to meet with three pilots who worked closely with Noriega. On one occasion in their hangar, pilot Enrique Pretelt introduced him to Jorge Luis Ochoa, one of the top cartel leaders.

Del Cid said that in November 1982, Noriega sent him "to pick up an envelope with money — drug money" from another pilot, Floyd Carlton. Three months later, del Cid returned for another, heavier envelope.

"Watch out, it might be a bomb," he recalled joking with Carlton.

According to the indictment, the second envelope contained $200,000, and the first $100,000.

Del Cid told the jury he also provided security for the delivery of eight to 10 suitcases Noriega's secretary Marcella Tason brought into Panama.

"It was supposedly money — it couldn't be anything else," del Cid said. But he acknowledged he never looked inside the suitcases, which del Cid said he took to a room in their military headquarters where Noriega maintained two safes.

Del Cid also said he picked up or guarded suitcases flown in from Miami by Noriega friend and pilot Cesar Rodriguez, and by a woman who worked for the cartel's agent in Panama.

Federal prosecutors say Noriega let the cartel fly drug cash into his country to be laundered in no-questions-asked Panamanian bank accounts. Noriega also is accused of taking bribes to let the cartel use Panama as a way station for U.S.-bound cocaine.

The indictment said Castro in 1984 negotiated a dispute between Noriega and the cartel after Panamanian troops raided a cocaine laboratory near the Colombian border.

Del Cid accompanied Noriega on a flight to Cuba and met Castro after the raid.

CHILE

Two generals linked to '76 murder

Associated Press

SANTIAGO, Chile — The two top commanders of the secret police under the regime of Gen. Augusto Pinochet were arrested Monday and charged with plotting the 1976 assassination in Washington of former Cabinet Minister Orlando Letelier.

Supreme Court Justice Adolfo Banados, who is handling the investigation, confirmed the detention and indictment of retired army Gens. Manuel Contreras and Pedro Espinoza.

The court's 14½-page ruling ordered Contreras and Espinoza "be brought to trial and subject to pre-emptive prison as authors of the crime of homicide." According to the indictment, the two provided false passports for two men involved in the car-bomb murder of Letelier and his American aide, Ronni Moffitt.

Contreras and Espinoza were indicted in Washington in 1978 for plotting the murders, and the Pinochet regime's inaction in the case was a major irritant between the two countries.

The Supreme Court turned down a 1978 U.S. extradition request for the two men.

Contreras was director of the feared secret police, known as DINA, under Pinochet. Espinoza was chief of operations of the security agency.

Contreras, although retired from the army, retains the right to be held at a military installation instead of a regular prison. Espinoza, who remains an active officer, is being held at an undisclosed army base in Santiago, the court officer said.

Interior Minister Enrique Krauss said Contreras was arrested by police at his farm in southern Chile and Espinoza in Santiago.

The army did not immediately comment.

Moffitt and Letelier, who was a Cabinet minister and ambassador to Washington under the leftist government of President Salvador Allende, were killed by a remote-controlled bomb attached to the car as they drove in downtown Washington on Sept. 21, 1976.

Letelier was one of an estimated 1 million Chileans who went into exile after Allende was overthrown in a bloody military coup on Sept. 11, 1973.

Two DINA agents, including an American citizen, Michael Townley, and two anti-Castro Cuban exiles have been sentenced in the United States.

Michigan game to be televised regionally on ABC

IOWA CITY — The Oct. 5 football game pitting No. 3 Michigan against No. 9 Iowa at Kinnick Stadium will be televised regionally on ABC, Iowa Sports Information Director George Wine said Monday.

Wine said the telecast will start at 2:30 p.m. CDT with the kickoff set for 2:36 p.m.

Iowa lacrosse splits over weekend

The University of Iowa lacrosse team split its first two games of the season, beating Illinois State and losing to Wisconsin in Madison.

In its only home game of the fall, Iowa beat the Illinois State 10-3 Saturday. "I thought we played well overall," Iowa coach Rob Urstein said. "The key was that we dominated ground balls and our offense really operated effectively."

Sunday Iowa travelled to Madison to take on defending Big Ten champ Wisconsin, which handed Iowa an 8-2 defeat. Iowa played without four starters, who were unable to make the trip.

"Despite the fact that four of our starters were unable to make the trip, we played aggressively for all four quarters," middle fielder Mike Walden said.

The team's next competition is Oct. 6 vs. Northern Illinois. The team plays on the open field on Melrose Ave., across the street from Kinnick Stadium and next to the new hospital addition.

Twins executive goes to Rockies

DENVER — Bob Gebhard, a Minnesota Twins executive, was named general manager of the Colorado Rockies Monday while John McHale Jr., a Denver attorney, was named to the business side of the new National League franchise.

Gebhard has been the assistant to Twins general manager Andy MacPhail since 1986. He has been in charge of the Twins' advance scouting as they prepare for the AL playoffs and the World Series.

Gebhard recently turned down a similar job with the Detroit Tigers, reportedly because he couldn't get complete authority to run the team.

Red Sox win coin flip

NEW YORK — The Boston Red Sox won the coin toss Monday to determine the home site of a one-game playoff should the American League East end in a tie with the Toronto Blue Jays.

The playoff would be held Monday, Oct. 7 at Fenway Park, the league said.

Toronto won the right to make the call of the flip, which was held at AL president Bobby Brown's office.

If there is a playoff, it would be televised by ESPN.

The league playoffs begin Tuesday, Oct. 8 in the city of the West Division champion.

NBA

Kings deal Carr to Spurs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The Sacramento Kings have traded veteran forward Antoine Carr to the San Antonio Spurs for center Dwayne Schintzius and a 1994 second-round draft pick.

The 7-foot-8 Carr, 30, is a seven-year veteran of the NBA from Wichita State who led the Kings in scoring last year with a career-best 20.1 points per game.

The 7-foot-2 Schintzius, 22, averaged 3.8 points in 9.4 minutes per game in his rookie season last year as a backup to starting center David Robinson. He was a 1988 Olympic team finalist from the University of Florida.

Jerry Reynolds, Kings director of player personnel, said giving up Carr was difficult, but that the Kings has "an abundance of forwards." He described Schintzius as "a highly skilled young big center."

Linksters take 12th at Spartan Invitational

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

Iowa's women's golf team placed 12th out of 18 teams in the Spartan Invitational Tournament held over the weekend in East Lansing, Mich.

Saturday seems to be the best day for the squad to play. The Hawkeyes had their best round on Saturday in this tourney, as they did two weeks ago while playing in North Carolina. The team scores for Iowa were 323-315-326 for a total of 964.

Northern Illinois won the tournament by firing a 902 for the 54-hole event. Wisconsin finished second. Other Big Ten teams were Ohio State (third), Penn State (sixth), Michigan State (eighth) and Michigan, which placed ninth.

Stacy Boville paced the Hawkeyes by shooting three fine rounds for a total score of 232, which tied for her the 12th best score in the tournament. Mary Jo Rollins shot a 239, Judy Bornholdt came in with a 244 and Jennifer McCullough had a 252.

Lynette Seaton shot a 255 and Erin Strieck finished with a score of 263.

Coach Diane Thomason was very happy about the play of Boville saying, "Stacy Boville had very good consistent scoring."

Thomason was also pleased with the performances of the two freshmen McCullough and Seaton.

"Jennifer McCullough and Lynette Seaton looked good," Thomason said. "If they continue to improve it will help. They handled themselves very well considering that they had never played 36 holes in a day."

Thomason reiterated that the team's biggest problem was its short game and that that would be the main focus in practice this week.

She also stressed that with a young team, the only way for them to show significant improvement is to get them more tournament experience.

"We're not where we want to be yet, but improvements come slowly," she said.

The Hawkeyes travel to Illinois this weekend to play in the Lady Northern before returning home to host the Hawkeye Invitational on Oct. 12-13.

Women's Athletic Director Dr. Christine Grant speaks to a crowd of 411 at the dedication, in her honor, of Grant Field Saturday.

Field hockey field renamed to honor Grant

Jay Nanda
Daily Iowan

Throughout her tenure at Iowa, Doctor Christine Grant has been known as a dedicated person in the field of women's athletics. And prior to last Sunday's Iowa-New Hampshire game at the Hawkeye Field Hockey Field, dedication was indeed the theme of the day.

This time, however, Grant was receiving instead of giving.

A crowd of 411 watched as Iowa President Hunter Rawlings and Coach Beth Beglin honored Grant with the changing of the HFHF into Grant Field, in a tribute to Iowa's first and only women's athletic director.

"Dr. Grant has done an enormous amount for women's athletics not only at Iowa and the Big Ten, but all across the country," Rawlings told the crowd.

"She has made our women's programs a model for other programs across the country. Our field hockey program consistently goes to the Final Four and probably represents our university as well as any other program, men's or women's, at the university."

"I am most appreciative of this honor," Grant said. "This weekend is one I will remember for a long time. It was a team effort that started in the 1970s with President Sandy Boyd and continues today with Hunter Rawlings. It was a team effort that started in the 1970s with Bump Elliott and continues today with Bob Bowlsby.

"And we have set record-breaking attendance figures with the support of our great fans. I thank you all very much."

Grant then shook hands with Rawlings, Beglin and the Hawkeye field hockey members, who made the initial game at Grant Field a success. The fifth-ranked Hawkeyes shut out the No. 11 Wildcats 3-0.

MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL

Bears finally win one bizarre game

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bears twice escaped almost certain defeat and improbably beat the New York Jets 19-13 Monday night on Jim Harbaugh's 1-yard touchdown dive with 18 seconds to go in overtime.

The game seemingly ended a play earlier and both teams had left the field. But replay official Bill Fette ruled that Cap Boso had been stopped 6 inches from the goal line on a pass from Harbaugh that covered 22 yards.

Chicago, trailing 13-3 entering the final period, tied the game on the final play of regulation when Neal Anderson caught Harbaugh's 6-yard pass on fourth down as the clock expired.

That touchdown was set up when Steve McMichael stripped the ball from Blair Thomas as the Jets tried to run out the clock.

Then the Bears watched as Pat Leahy, one of the NFL's most consistent kickers for the past 15 years, missed a 28-yard field goal with 3:50 left in overtime after the Jets elected to kick on first down from the Bears' 11. The usually reliable Leahy, the league's oldest player at 40, missed wide left.

Harbaugh, who set career highs with a 28-for-42 performance for a 285 yards, then drove the Bears 80 yards to win it and give Mike Ditka his 100th win as an NFL coach.

The victory left Chicago as one of four unbeaten NFL teams, along with New Orleans, Washington and Buffalo, where the Bears will play next Sunday. The bitter loss left the Jets at 1-3.

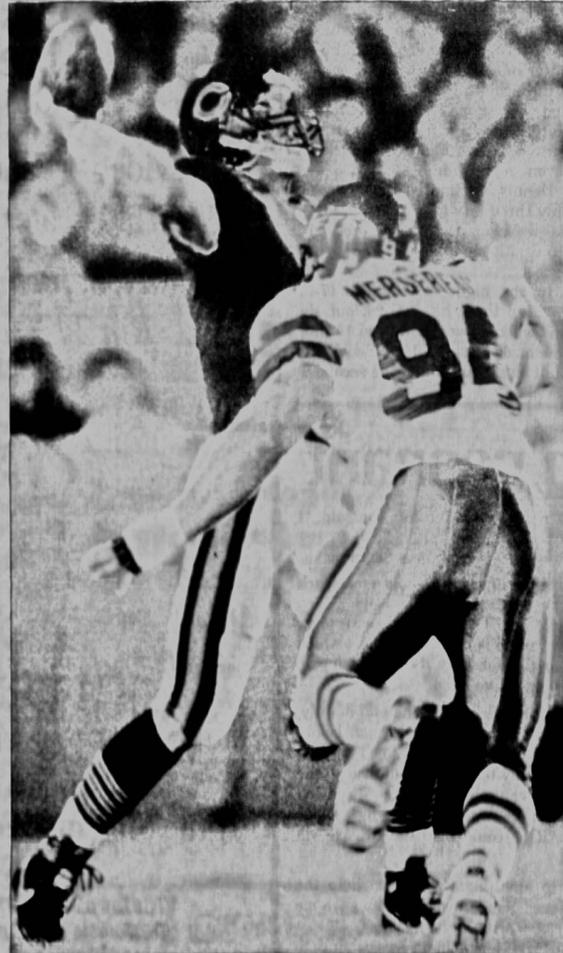

The victory increased Chicago's record in September under Ditka to 23-2. They have won their four games this season by a total of 14 points.

The Jets seemed to have put the game away when Brian Washington stopped Harbaugh a foot away from the tying touchdown with 3:30 left.

But Thomas, who rushed for 118 yards, had the ball stolen from him at the Jets' 36 by McMichael. Harbaugh tied it by hitting Anderson in the left corner of the end zone as time expired. The Bears had appeared stopped when Jeff Lageman sacked Harbaugh at the 12 and Washington stuffed him in bounds at the 6 as the seconds ticked off.

The Jets had taken their lead on field goals of 19 and 34 yards by Leahy and a 1-yard TD run by Brad Baxter to cap a 60-yard drive with 3:30 left in the third period.

Kevin Butler's field goal at 2:09 of the final quarter, set up by a 28-yard pass interference call on James Hasty, cut it to 13-6.

BoSox run put on hold by Orioles

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — The Boston Red Sox haven't had much success against the Baltimore Orioles this season, and no team has had a lot of luck against reliever Jim Poole.

Nothing changed on Monday night, as the Orioles slowed Boston's drive toward first place with a 4-3 victory. It was Baltimore's seventh victory in 11 games against the Red Sox this year.

Poole (2-0) retired 14 of the 15 batters he faced after entering the game with the bases loaded in the fourth inning, allowing only a two-out single to Jody Reed in the eighth. Gregg Olson got the last three outs for his 30th save.

"I was pumped up to play against a team in the pennant race," Poole said. "The adrenaline was flowing, and I almost hyperventilated."

The Red Sox, however, were the ones gasping for air. After raking starter Jose Mesa for eight hits in just over three innings, they couldn't do a thing against Poole.

"He kept the ball down, got the slider over and had a pretty good sinker," Boston manager Joe Morgan said.

The loss, Boston's second straight after four consecutive victories, dropped the Red Sox two games behind Toronto in the AL East, pending the Blue Jays' night game at California.

The Orioles took a 4-3 lead in the bottom of the fourth against Mike Gardiner (9-8) when Leo Gomez doubled and Mike Devereaux singled him home.

"I just didn't get the job done in the second inning," Gardiner said. "Other than that, I thought I threw the ball pretty well. It's just one of those things when the walks come back to kill you."

UNI looking at wrestling program

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — The University of Northern Iowa is investigating its wrestling program to determine if any NCAA rules were broken, interim athletic director Eldon Miller said Monday.

Miller said the university initiated the investigation and the NCAA is not involved at this time. He said the university will send its findings to the NCAA, which will decide if any sanctions should be levied or if it should investigate the matter itself.

"We went to the NCAA," Miller said. "That's the way we feel it should be done. We're self-reporting."

Miller would not say what prompted the investigation or what allegations were being investigated.

Wrestling coach Don Briggs said he could not comment on the investigation.

"We've been instructed not to say anything," said Briggs, who is starting his 10th season as the Panthers' coach.

first 19-game winner since Jack Morris won 21 in 1986. He gave up six hits, walked none, and struck out four in seven innings. Mike Henneman worked two perfect innings for his 20th save.
 Eric King (5-11) gave up two runs — one earned — on eight hits in 6 1/2 innings for Cleveland. King walked four and struck out two.
Yankees 9, Brewers 8
MILWAUKEE—Matt Nokes hit a grand slam to key a five-run seventh inning and Roberto Kelly drove in four runs as the New York Yankees rallied from a six-run deficit to beat the Milwaukee Brewers 9-8 Monday night.
 Mark Lee (2-5) relieved for starter Jamie Navarro with a 7-4 lead and took the loss.
 Rick Monteleone (2-1) won in relief of starter Jeff Johnson. Lee Guetterman worked one inning and Steve Farr, the Yankees' sixth pitcher, got the last out for his 20th save.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
Cubs 10, Phillies 3
CHICAGO — Luis Salazar hit a three-run homer during a five-run first and Greg Maddux pitched seven-hit ball over eight innings as the Chicago Cubs routed the Philadelphia Phillies 10-3 on Monday night.
 Ryne Sandberg had two singles and a double with three RBIs and Mark Grace, saddled in a 16-for-76 slump, had three of the Cubs' 14 hits as Chicago moved two games ahead of Philadelphia in their battle for fourth place in the NL East.
 Maddux (13-10) posted his sixth complete game and second in the last five days, having defeated the New York Mets 4-1 last Wednesday.

The Cubs, after suffering a doubleheader loss to Montreal on Sunday, took out their frustrations on Terry Mulholland (15-12), who lasted just two innings.
Astros 8, Giants 0
HOUSTON — Pete Harnisch held San Francisco to two hits over six innings and Jeff Bagwell had three of Houston's 16 hits as the Astros defeated the Giants 8-0.
 Harnisch (11-9) retired 17 of the first 19 batters he faced and allowed two infield singles, while striking out six and walking none.
 Curt Schilling earned his eighth save with three innings of scoreless relief. Trevor Wilson (11-11) was the loser, lasting only 1 1/2 innings.
Cardinals 10, Expos 1, 1st game
ST. LOUIS — Chris Nabholz worked seven shutout innings to raise his record in September to 5-0 and Tim Wallach broke out of a slump with two RBIs as the Montreal Expos beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1 to split a doubleheader Monday night.

 In the first game, Todd Zeile hit a three-run double to lead St. Louis out of a prolonged scoring slump and Bryn Smith pitched a three-hitter in a 10-1 Cardinal victory.
 Bryn Smith (12-8) struck out six and walked one for his first victory since Aug. 21. In his only other outing against Montreal he threw seven shutout innings.
 Dennis Martinez (14-11) allowed only three hits in 3 1/3 innings. But he walked five and allowed six runs, although only two were earned.
 In the nightcap, Nabholz (7-7) gave up three hits, struck out six and walked two. He retired 15 in a row at one point after Felix Jose's bunt single to lead off the second.

Sanders wants to help Braves win pennant

Ed Shearer
 Associated Press
SUWANEE, Ga. — If the Atlanta Braves ask, Deion Sanders said he — not the Falcons — will decide if the outfielder/cornerback joins the final days of the NL West pennant race.
 "It's only speculative," Braves general manager John Schuerholz said Monday night. "We may pursue Deion Sanders. We may not. We haven't done anything yet."
 Sanders, who left the Braves for the Falcons on July 31, said there was a 90 percent chance he would return to the Braves for the end of the season, but that he hasn't been asked yet.
 "If they come to me and ask me to do so, it's pretty much done," Sanders said. He added he would do "anything it takes" to help the Braves in their quest for the NL West title.
 Barry Axelrod, Sanders' baseball agent, confirmed that he had not yet been asked about having Sanders return to the Braves this season.
 Sanders hit .193 with four home runs and 13 RBIs this year under a contract that called for him to play through July 31. He's under a full-season contract with the Falcons, where he is a vital part of the secondary and a return specialist. Sanders had a key play in Sunday's 21-17 victory over the Los Angeles Raiders when he forced a fumble that was returned for a touchdown.

 The Falcons have a home game on Sunday with the New Orleans Saints, but will be off the following week.
 During that week the Braves will close their season with three games at Cincinnati and three at home against Houston as they try to catch Los Angeles. The Dodgers had a 1 1/2-game lead Monday, with two weeks to play.
 Falcons coach Jerry Glanville was asked at his weekly news conference about the possibility of loaning out Sanders.
 "I would not allow that unless they would let me be the third base coach," Glanville quipped.
 Asked if he wasn't taking the possibility seriously, Glanville said, "No, but why should I? No one's asked me anything."

Asked if a request came to him, he said, "I wouldn't play the 'if' games."
 Sanders says the decision is his to make.
 "I don't think the Falcons can hold a man back from what he wants to do," he said. "They really can't do that. They have no power over that. All they can do is lay a fine on me, which we're used to that anyway. So, I'm going to have to do what I have to do."
 After leaving the Braves at the end of July, Sanders took a couple of extra days off before reporting to the Falcons. He was fined $25,000 for missing not only those days, but also all the days of training camp before that.
 Sanders said he would be willing to pay another fine if he could help the Braves win the division.
 "I would do anything it takes to help the Atlanta Braves," Sanders said. "They gave me a tremendous opportunity last year."
 "This is the first time Atlanta has a chance to win something in a long time. Therefore, I would do what I have to do to help a team from Atlanta do that."

NL WEST RACE

Braves believe 1½ games within reach

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — For the next two weeks, the Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves will battle each other from a distance.

"From here on, if we keep winning, who cares what the Braves do?" said Dodger third baseman Mike Sharperson.

The Dodgers took a 1½-game lead in the NL West by beating the Braves in two of three games over the weekend. They'll stay in California for the rest of the season, playing their final 11 games against San Diego and San Francisco. Five of those games are on the road, the last three in the unpredictable weather conditions of Candlestick Park.

Atlanta, which plays its final 12 games against Cincinnati and Houston, knows how tough the chilly winds of Candlestick can be. The Braves lost twice in San Francisco a week ago, dropping out of first place. Three days later, they were back on top, only to fall again during the weekend.

"It really doesn't take an awful lot of time to make up ground," Braves first baseman Sid Bream said. "We were up by two games and we lost it in a matter of two days. Right now, 1½ games is nothing. It comes down to the last two weeks of the season."

The Dodgers, who fell back to second by a half-game when Atlanta's Steve Avery shut them out 3-0 Friday night, went back ahead with victories Saturday and Sunday.

"Only with a sweep could somebody have won anything," said Dodger pitcher Orel Hershiser. "There was nothing won by anyone. There is still a lot of time for the Braves to catch up."

In their quest to face Pittsburgh for the NL pennant, the Dodgers will stay close to Dodger Stadium, where their 50-25 record is the best at home in the majors.

"It's a little breathing room but it's not a lot," catcher Gary Carter said of the lead. "We've got a lot of ballgames ahead of us. San Diego has been playing tough against us all year. We have our work cut out for us, and I know the Braves feel the same way. They're going to play a tough Reds ballclub and play the Astros in the Astrodome."

The Braves' remaining schedule involves a bit more travel away from the grass field and friendly fences of Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. Still, Tom Glavine doesn't mind.

"It's certainly going to be a little more welcome situation than having to play these guys anymore, obviously," said Glavine, Sunday's losing pitcher. "But Cincinnati's still the defending champions and they're still a good team. Houston has been a team that I think everybody has struggled with when they've gone to Houston."

"There is still a lot of time for the Braves to catch up."

Orel Hershiser

"It's not going to be a cakewalk for us, and it's certainly not going to be a cakewalk for these guys (Dodgers), because they're going to end the season in San Francisco, where they've had a hard time."

The Braves may be worrying about their offense. At Dodger Stadium, David Justice went 1-for-8 with five walks while Bream was 0-for-8 with three walks.

And Lonnie Smith, who replaced Otis Nixon as the Braves' leadoff man, was 1-for-12 in the series. Nixon was suspended for 60 days on Sept. 16 after testing positive for cocaine.

"It doesn't look like it's going to be won overnight," Darryl Strawberry said. "The Braves have played extremely well. They've been there all year. So why all of a sudden are they not going to be there?"

IOWA CITY'S MORNING NEWSPAPER

Doug Drabek and catcher Don Slaught celebrate the Pirates' 2-1 win vs. Philadelphia Sunday that clinched their second straight NL East title.

NL EAST

Pirates vow division title alone won't do

Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Now that they've become the first National League team in 13 years to repeat as division champion, where do the Pittsburgh Pirates go from here?

Ask Barry Bonds, Bobby Bonilla, Andy Van Slyke, Doug Drabek and the answer is the same — there's only one place to go, only one place they'll accept. The World Series.

Just playing in the playoffs no longer is enough.

"I watched Cincinnati play Oakland last year in the World Series and I said, 'That could have been us.'" Bonilla said. "I know I don't want to be watching on TV this year."

"We've showed everybody we could repeat, but there's still a lot to be done." Bonds said. "This team is on a mission. We've got some unfinished business. A lot of teams don't get second chances. Who knows when we'll have the opportunity again?"

"It's a Triple Crown — division, playoffs, World Series — and we've won one leg," manager Jim Leyland said.

They lost the season series to both of their potential playoff opponents, Los Angeles (7-5) and Atlanta (8-4), but general manager Larry Doughty said, "We feel like we've got the horses to win it all."

The trouble is, many of their horses will be wearing different colors by next season. Bonilla almost certainly will be gone next year, enticed from the team and town he loves by perhaps the richest free-agent deal in baseball history. Mike LaValliere could leave, too, and Bonds, Drabek and John Smiley can leave in 1992.

That's why if any team has been structured for one big stretch run to win the playoffs and World Series, it's the 1991 Pirates. Disappointed after losing to the Cincinnati Reds in the playoffs last year, the Pirates made a big push toward winning it all. Right here. Right now.

Rather than trade Bonilla when they couldn't re-sign him, the Pirates elected to keep him and not break up the heart of what is one of the best offenses in baseball.

When their third basemen — first Jeff King, then John Wehner — went down with bad backs, Doughty again mortgaged the future by trading two top pitching prospects for soon-to-be free agent Steve Buechele. He did the same thing last year by dealing three young players for Zane Smith.

The Buechele trade was a decided gamble because the Pirates gave up two of the best arms in their system, Kurt Miller and Hector Fajardo, for basically two months worth of Buechele's services.

It's almost as if Doughty called 1-800-RENTA3B and said, "Send me the best you got, no matter how much it costs."

Still, Doughty said the trade — similar to the 1979 Pirates' championship-solidifying deal for Bill Madlock — was a must. Doughty feared the Pirates wouldn't go all the way without a hitter in the No. 6 hole to protect Bonds, who was increasingly being walked with runners on base.

"I felt we had enough to win the East without making a deal, but I didn't think we could win the playoffs without doing something," he said. "We had to have a creditable hitter behind Barry. Barry has to get his at-bats."

In two weeks, only four teams will be looking to the World Series, but none of the four will be taking that one big swing — fiscally or emotionally — as the Pirates.

The Pirates will be either a team of destiny, one that took the big gamble and won, or a team of disappointment, one that didn't fully realize the potential it possesses.

"Winning the division is sweet, but we want to win more," Doughty said.

The Meat Puppets take you to Forbidden Places at Gabe's Oasis tonight. Left to right: drummer Derrick Bostrum, singer/guitarist Curt Kirkwood and bassist Cris Kirkwood.

Puppets melt minds at Gabe's

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

The Meat Puppets are into melting minds. Their genre-busting music blends so many elements of so many things that it becomes more than a hybrid, more a new way of life. Life with a "liquimind."

The Puppets recently released their major label bow and ninth actual release, Forbidden Places, this time for London Records after a long career at SST. They are out on tour in support of the LP, a tour that brings them to Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., tonight.

Puppet bassist Cris Kirkwood said their major label status hasn't made things that different. "We do have a backdrop for the stage for our shows now."

Their fan base has yet to balloon due to the increased exposure because they had such a loyal following to begin with.

"We've been selling out all around so far, and that's pretty bitchin', you know. It's better than getting shot at," Kirkwood said.

For a band that once thought it was too odd to get signed by anybody, the times have changed. But Kirkwood sees it as a change in the industry, not the band.

"The labels just kind of absorbed the odd market so we were absorbed to a degree. Labels have a number of bands relative to the popularity of that type of music.

AOR takes up a big chunk of space, and so there are a ton of AOR bands. But we're that smaller, odd type — we're basically signed to a closet within our label," Kirkwood said.

Kirkwood is joined in the band by his brother, Curt, who sings and plays guitar, and Derrick Bostrum on drums.

trying to categorize this as 'black' and this as 'white' and this as 'red,' but we don't care about those things because everyone is the same. We are evolutionary."

Curt Kirkwood is the main songwriting force in the band, bringing in an idea and letting the guys jam on it for a while. "I'll sometimes try to throw in an extra lick to get

"We've been selling out all around so far, and that's pretty bitchin', you know. It's better than getting shot at."

Cris Kirkwood, Meat Puppets' bassist

The Puppets' music is indescribable using terms like "alternative" or "country" or "punk" because they fuse all these bases and more into their music. They started as punk, made some punk-folk records, a folk-rock record, a guitar boogie record, a metal fusion record and finally, the first record to successfully blend all these elements, Forbidden Places, a record that Curt says is "real user-friendly."

"Our music is open-mindedness. It's how people should think. It doesn't need description," Kirkwood said. "People take too much stock in what people will think, a songwriting credit, but that doesn't work too much," Cris said.

The Puppets carry quite a reputation with them every time they hit the stage. Twenty-minute jams are followed by breakneck takes on golden oldies while an energy hangs in the air the whole time.

Kirkwood said the Puppets don't use a set list, but rather rely on a pool of songs that they all still remember. Yes, requests are taken.

"Pretty soon the room takes over, the audience starts shouting and there's an obvious direction we're gonna take things," Kirkwood said. "Once the music starts, that's what this band is all about."

Tonight: Learning to Scrawl

Columbus, Ohio's Scrawl plays with the Meat Puppets tonight at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St.

Brian Berger
Daily Iowan

Plutarch Jones, author of the critically acclaimed, how-to manual, "Indie Rock The Hard Way — How To Succeed In Failure Without Even Trying," says it right there in the chapter titled "You Are The Road Crew": "Touring with neither a recently released record to promote nor a tour-supportive record company is tantamount to extending an invitation to Disaster. So, don't do it!"

Funny thing then that any group of sentient and obviously intelligent beings would so blatantly disregard Jones' time-tested advice. Isn't it? Yes! But the three women from Columbus, Ohio, who comprise the once anything-but-lackluster rock combo known as Scrawl excelled as they did because they disregarded traditional rock dogmas. Perhaps they can not rot again? Hmm...

Given that the entity most responsible for persuading Scrawl to suck, Rough Trade, is no longer in business, I'd like to believe that the chances are good. After taking all 20-plus years of their lives to write and record two fantastic albums (Plus, Also, Too and He's Drunk), Scrawl's members took little over a single year to write and record their third and only totally disappointing release, 1990's Smallmouth. Aside from being Scrawl's first rotten record, it was also its first to enlist the "aid" of an alleged-to-be-big-deal producer, Gary Smith. Smith, the "genius" behind the board for one great record (Chills' Submarine Bells) and too many vom-inducing records to mention (Blake Babies, Pixies, ad nauseam), sure made Scrawl sound louder though, as if volume is better than dynamics, as if throwing money at a talented young band's temporary-lack-of-high-quality-songs is going to solve anything except some marketing manager's "street date" deadline.

With time once again on its side, Scrawl would seem to be poised for the "comeback" that never should have been necessary. Ron House, Columbus "scene" legend and current lead singer for destructo-pop masters, Thomas Jefferson Slave Apartments, says "Scrawl has a lot of great songs that haven't been on any record yet." Unfortunately, what is slated to be its next release, a Steve Albini-produced set of '70s covers, is not going to be that record. It may prove to be the mushheads that, yes, Scrawl really can "Rock!" But who cares? The Walkabouts excepted, there were more great tunes in Scrawl's first two records than on the whole Sub Pop catalog combined. These "chicks" really are different, and if "tonight's the night" where they "believe" it, too, then all will be "right."

BEFORE TRUSTING YOUR FUTURE TO ANY COMPANY, ASK FOR SOME LETTERS OF REFERENCE.

You put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hopes for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask some questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Three companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER-PERFECT.

TIAA received A+ from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Standard & Poor's and Aaa from Moody's Investors Service. These ratings reflect TIAA's reliable claims-paying ability, exceptional financial strength, superior investment performance, and low expenses. With its guaranteed rate of return and opportunity for dividends, TIAA is one of less than ten companies, out of 2,200 nationwide, that received these highest marks.

CREF. FOUR MORE LETTERS EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW.

For further growth potential and diversification, there's the CREF variable annuity with four different investment accounts to give you the flexibility you want as you save for the future.

Together, TIAA and CREF form the nation's largest private retirement system, with over $95 billion in assets and more than 70 years of experience serving the education community. For over one million people nationwide, the only letters to remember are TIAA-CREF.
