Massachusetts nuclear plant to be closed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Owners of the aging Yankee Rowe nuclear plant in Massachusetts began shutting it down Tuesday after the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff said tests showed "a much greater risk" of failure than previously believed.

Longtime critics of the commission hailed the development and suggested the agency's action indicated a heightened concern about safety.

The NRC staff's report, made public Tuesday morning, said tests on a new model had suggested a greater chance that the 30-foot-tall steel containment vessel surrounding the plant's reactor core could rupture in an emergency — with a resulting breakout of radiation.

Senate passes unemployment bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Tuesday approved a $6.4 billion measure extending jobless benefits for Americans who have exhausted regular payments, setting the stage for a likely veto fight between Congress and President Bush.

The senators accepted the Democratic measure by a 65-35 vote. The House was expected to send the legislation to the White House later in the day.

The Senate vote was 2 votes short of the 67 supporters it would need to reverse a Bush veto if all 100 senators voted. Both congressional chambers must vote by two-thirds majorities to enact a bill over a president's opposition.

Togo coup attempt fails

LOME, Togo (AP) — Rebel troops twice seized the state broadcasting center Tuesday in a botched coup attempt against a civilian government trying to end 24 years of military dictatorship.

State television reported that the troops, after seizing the station in the morning, departing in a hail of bullets a few hours later and then returning in the afternoon, had left a second time — presumably for good — as nightfall approached.

Five people were reported killed in a clash between the rebels and loyalist troops who ended the morning siege of the station, according to the 25-minute newscast.

U.S. troops withdraw from North Korean border

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — U.S. soldiers withdrew today from a strategic border with Communist North Korea, handing their camps and patrol mission over to South Korean troops for the first time in 38 years.

South Korean officials said a brief ceremony marked the departure of American troops from the sensitive area just south of the truce village of Panmunjom, inside the Demilitarized Zone that separates the rival Koreas.

The withdrawal was symbolic of a U.S. military shift from leadership to a supporting role in guarding the 155-mile Korean border.

Second U.N. group flies to Iraq

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A team of U.N. ballistic weapons experts flew to Baghdad Tuesday to test Iraq's willingness to allow U.N. inspectors free use of helicopters to search the country for Scud missile launchers and rockets.

Inspectors tracking Iraq's nuclear, chemical, conventional and biological weapons programs have until now been able to operate only near Baghdad because of the lack of helicopters.

Wise resigns; Kelly assumes UISA presidency

Jennifer Kelly

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

UI Student Assembly President Matt Wise, citing a desire to better utilize his abilities, resigned as president at the beginning of the UISA's general meeting Tuesday night but was reinstated as vice president soon afterward.

Former UISA Vice President Jennifer Kelly automatically became president when Wise resigned.

The meeting was briefly postponed by a physical altercation between Wise and a member of the assembly who would later oppose his appointment as vice president.

"I'm resigning my presidency not because I don't think I'm doing a good job and not because anyone's told me I'm not doing a good job but because I feel I would be more effective in the role of vice president," Wise said in his last remarks as UISA president.

Wise said the duties of president required work outside the UI with the other regents universities, the press and the administration. He said he was more interested in working on the internal structure of the UISA.

"Things haven't been going as I'd like. Committees are not yet functioning; senators have not been attending meetings. Things can't continue this way," he said.

Wise said as vice president he would begin "housecleaning." There will be "sweeping changes in internal structure" during his vice presidency, he said, including impeaching senators who have not been fulfilling their duties and making changes in the election process to student government so more students can take part without expensive campaigns.

Wise said the switch will better utilize his and Kelly's different abilities. In a memo to senators he said programs he wanted to work on had been superseded by his duties as president, and the work Kelly was doing was hampered by the lack of the title president.

"I believe our partnership has been a strong one which has benefited students," the memo said. "Our change of position will only benefit students more."

At the end of the meeting, Kelly proposed legislation covered in the UISA constitution nominating Wise for vice president, pending a majority vote by the other senators. Wise was confirmed as vice president in a 16-2 vote by ballot. There were 3 abstaining votes.

MURDER

Springdale killer still on the loose

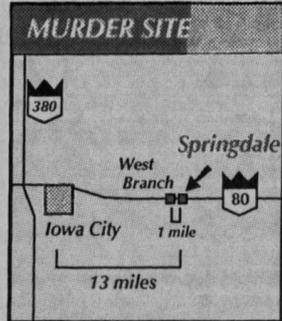

Eric Detwiler
and Loren Keller
Daily Iowan

SPRINGDALE, Iowa — A killer remains at large after taking the life of a rural Springdale man Monday night. The suspect, who apparently escaped on foot, eluded a helicopter, bloodhounds and more than 30 law enforcement officials from at least 10 agencies.

Thomas Mather, 32, was found dead around 9:30 p.m. in his farmhouse about a mile north of Springdale, a small town 13 miles east of Iowa City with a population of about 100.

Cedar County Sheriff Keith Whitlatch said the intruder entered the home as Mather and his wife were watching television. Dawn Mather, who was not injured, managed to escape and called authorities from a neighbor's house. It has not been determined whether she escaped before or after her husband was killed.

Though authorities would not comment on how the victim was murdered, Mather's next-door neighbor Dick Furchtenicht disclosed the fact that police had said a gun and a knife were used by the murderer.

"There was a shot to the temple with a small-caliber handgun and a knife slit all the way across the throat. They're trying to determine now which he used first," Furchtenicht said.

Whitlatch would not give details on the progression of the investigation but said, "We haven't ruled out anybody at this point. The neighbors reported seeing a man outside of their house but not leaving the house of the victim."

Whitlatch wasn't optimistic about the odds of capturing the suspect. "If it's a serial killer or somebody

Authorities are looking for a white man approximately 30 years of age with a medium build and collar-length light-colored hair. The man was last seen wearing blue jeans, a blue denim jacket and white tennis shoes.

The coroner's report on the exact cause of death has been completed, but the Cedar County Sheriff's Department has yet to release any of the information, according to coroner Dr. Tom Bennet of St. See MURDER, Page 5A

Rawlings says film was inappropriate

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings said in a statement Tuesday that he believes the use of a sexually explicit film in the German department last week demonstrated extremely poor judgment.

"I find it difficult to believe that it was appropriate to use this film in this course, and I have conveyed this concern to the College of Liberal Arts," Rawlings said. Reached for comment Tuesday evening, Richard Runge, acting chairman of the German department, said he basically agreed with Rawlings' statement but said he felt as long as something was appropriate to bring into a class, it was OK with the department.

"As long as any outside material is integrated into the course and with sound reason, it's OK," Runge said. "As long as it was not just used at random."

As to whether this film was appropriate for the classes attending, Runge said it seemed it was appropriate for at least one of the sections.

"In one of the sections a discussion on homosexuality was scheduled a day after the film so it would seem that it was appropriate for that section," Runge said.

In the statement, released late Tuesday afternoon, Rawlings reported that parents, alumni and government leaders, as well as members of the general public, have expressed concerns on the issue.

The film was part of the German Film and Video Series, which offers showings of film versions of important works from German literature, famous German films from the '20s, '30s and '40s, and selected New German Cinema films. All the showings are free and open to all members of the university community.

The flier announces the film as "Taxi zum Klo," or "Taxi to the Bathroom," by Frank Ripplloh, made in 1981.

Bennett, UI students clash in 'shoot-out'

Eric Detwiler
Daily Iowan

The "Shootout at Hancher" between William Bennett and a panel of five UI students lived up to its billing as the students launched verbal assaults at Bennett and he countered with barbs of his own.

The panel's first participant, UI student Greg Kelley, started things off with a bang when he asked Bennett if he thought blacks were an inferior race. From there the bullets started flying and never stopped. The often hostile panel, which consisted of Kelley, Donna Flayhan, Mark Van Der Weide, Bruce Nestor and Lee Artz, in turn accused Bennett of being a racist and of numerous right-wing conspiracies.

The event ranged from debate and name-calling to preaching and accusations of racism. During the debate each participant was allotted 10 minutes to engage in a direct debate with Bennett.

Participant Donna Flayhan launched into a seven-minute speech on the right-wing conspiracy to squelch political correctness, culminating with the question, "Do you have no sense of See BENNETT, Page 7A

Council holds 1st hearing concerning cable service

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

The current Iowa City cable franchise agreement expires in 1994, but the process for renewal has already begun.

Last night's Iowa City City Council meeting marked the first of several public hearings where citizens can make comments and suggestions to the council about their cable service.

"This is the beginning," Mayor John McDonald said. "This will be a long process, and we need and appreciate your input throughout the process."

In addition to public input, the council agreed several weeks ago to spend as much as $75,000 to hire one of the nation's top consulting firms to conduct a community needs assessment and a market survey. Rice, Williams Associates, a Washington, D.C., consulting firm, will do the surveys to determine such things as customer satisfaction with Heritage Cablevision.

In the past three years, the city received 228 formal complaints against Heritage. Of those complaints, 108 came within the last year and pertained to an increase of rates, late fee charges, programming, the marketing of the Encore channel and the loss of Quad Cities channels.

CENSORSHIP

Banned books celebrated this week

Chris Pothoven
Daily Iowan

What do William Shakespeare, Mark Twain, Alice Walker and the Merriam-Webster editorial staff have in common?

All have written books which have been either removed, restricted or challenged in libraries across the nation. Because of that censorship, these books and others are being celebrated during Banned Book Week, Sept. 28 through Oct. 5.

This is the 10th year of holding Banned Book Week, said Anne Levinson, assistant director of the Office of Intellectual Freedom at the American Library Association, one of the sponsors of the week.

"The week was begun to call attention to the dangers of censorship and encourage people to read," she said.

The ALA has found examples of book banning and censorship dating all the way back to 387 B.C., Levinson said, but Banned Book Week was initiated in the early 1980s following an increase in reports of censorship and book banning in libraries.

Most frequently the complaints are about offensive language, which covers either sexual explicitness or profanity, and about satanic or occult practices, which have seen a huge surge, Levinson said.

"People are concerned that just reading about these practices will lure students into it," Levinson said.

Some of the most frequently banned books are Mark Twain's "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," J.D. Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye," John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" and the "Impressions Series," a school reading series.

"I think you'll find that at the top of the list are some of the great American classics," she said.

Levinson said the ALA and other organizations use publicity, such as the celebration week and publishing lists of banned or challenged books, as one of the major forms of combating censorship.

"We try to combat this by keeping people informed about the banning," she said. "Some people look at the list and are stunned to find a book near and dear to them on it."

She urged people to "Celebrate the Bill of Rights," the theme for Banned Book Week 1991, which marks the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

Other sponsors of the week include the American Booksellers Association and the Association of American Libraries.

Although many public libraries throughout the United States have had to remove or restrict books because of challenges from individuals or groups in the community, Iowa City Public Library Director Lolly Eggers said the library has not banned any materials from public use.

"We've never even had anything carried to a public stage or a formal complaint," she said.

Members of the community have occasionally expressed concerns or complaints about some materials in the library, but these have mostly been about the availability of certain items to children, Eggers said.

The policy of the library regarding a possible challenge to a book or other item in its collection is clear and definite, she said.

"We will not remove one item from the collection because of the complaint of one individual or group,"

SOME POPULAR BOOKS THAT WERE BANNED IN 1989-90.

DAHL, Roald. Revolving Rhymes. Challenged at the Northeast High School in Goose Lake, Iowa (1990), because of its alleged violence, the use of the word "slut", the subject of witches, and the fact that "the boy who is turned into a mouse by the witches will have to stay a mouse for the rest of his life."

DAVIS, Jim. Garfield: His Nine Lives. Moved to the adult section of the Public Libraries of Saginaw, Mich. (1989), after patrons requested that children be denied access.

HANDFORD, Martin. Where's Waldo? Challenged at the Public Libraries of Saginaw, Mich. (1989), because "on some of the pages there are dirty things."

KING, Stephen. Christine. Removed from the Washington Middle School library in Meriden, Conn. (1989), after a parent complained about offensive passages.

The Stand. Restricted to ninth-grade students with parental consent at the Whitford Intermediate School in Beaverton, Ore. (1989), because of "sexual language, casual sex, and violence."

MERRIAM-WEBSTER Editorial Staff. Webster's Dictionary. 1986 edition. Challenged in the Upper Pittsgrove Township, N.J., schools (1989) because the definition of sexual intercourse was objectionable.

SALINGER, J.D. Catcher in the Rye. Banned from the classrooms in Boron, Calif., High School (1989) because the book contains profanity.

SEUSS, Dr. The Lorax. Challenged in the Laytonville, Calif., Unified School District (1989) because the book "criminalized the foresting industry."

STEINBECK, John. Of Mice and Men. Removed from the Northside High School in Tuscaloosa, Ala. (1989), because the book "has profane use of God's name." Challenged as a summer youth program reading assignment in Chattanooga, Tenn. (1989), because "Steinbeck is known to have had an anti-business attitude." In addition, "he was very questionable as to his patriotism."

TWAIN, Mark. The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn. Challenged at the Sevier County High School in Sevierville, Tenn. (1989), because of racial slurs and dialect.

WALKER, Alice. The Color Purple. Challenged at the Public Libraries of Saginaw, Mich. (1989), because it was "too sexually graphic for a 12-year-old." Challenged as a summer youth program reading assignment because of its language and "explicitness."

"Some people look at the list and are stunned to find a book near and dear to them on it."

Anne Levinson, Office of Intellectual Freedom

Eggers said.

Librarians try to be receptive to the ideas and wishes of the community in choosing new materials, she said, and they have confidence in their selections.

"If an item got here, then we aren't going to take it out," Eggers said.

Otherwise, she said the act of removing one offensive book or item would create a "snowball" effect, with one group after another demanding the removal of library materials they found offensive.

The makeup and attitude of the Iowa City community are the main factors the public library hasn't had to deal with challenges to books, Eggers said.

"I think we're in a pretty accepting community, and I think most people living here accept the fact that libraries are supposed to have some things they don't agree with," she said. "People are pretty willing to say, 'It's here, but I don't have to read it.'"

Individuals or groups are more likely to challenge local school libraries on the issue of offensive books, said Eggers, because of the younger age of library users.

The Iowa City School District has received some complaints from parents about books in the school libraries, but only four or five formal complaints have been filed in the past six to seven years, said Jean van Deusen, library media coordinator for the district.

To deal with such complaints, the district uses a reconsideration process, she said.

"If a parent is concerned about a book, they can file a request for us to reconsider that book," van Deusen said.

Once a request has been filed, the district forms a committee composed of members of both the public and the district to consider the book and the complaint.

After this committee has studied the matter, it makes a recommendation to the district superintendent, who then decides whether to endorse the book.

Only one case has resulted in any action being taken, said van Deusen, and in that case the district restricted the book instead

"If a parent is concerned about a book, they can file a request for us to reconsider that book."

Jean van Deusen, district library media coordinator of banning it. The book, titled "The Doll," was judged unsuitable for the elementary level library and placed in a junior high library.

The district does have a school-board-approved policy for selecting new materials for both libraries and classrooms in the Iowa City schools.

The guidelines are fairly broad, said van Deusen, including that materials represent the goals of the district, be appropriate for the age and educational level of the student, and present a favorable depiction of women and minorities.

"There's room for a lot of latitude on the part of teachers and librarians in choosing books," she said.

Van Deusen agreed with Eggers that the composition of Iowa City is partly responsible for the relatively low incidences of censorship.

author Stephen King

"It's a highly educated community, and it takes intellectual freedom very seriously," she said.

Although censorship attempts often occur in elementary and secondary schools, book banning and similar activities are very rare at colleges and universities like the UI, said Wayne Rawley, director for instructional and research services at UI Libraries.

In the 24 years he's been at the UI, there haven't been any attempts to ban books or other materials at the libraries, he said.

"We don't attract the kind of attention public libraries do," Rawley said. "Our clientele is more narrowly defined, consisting of adult students instead of children."

In addition, people don't apply the same standards to post-secondary education, he said.

"I think the higher institutes of learning are expected to have that wider range of material," Rawley said.

RELIEF FUND

Locals aid Guatemalan earthquake victims

Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

Local citizens are sponsoring a fund-raising drive in an effort to help victims of the recent Guatemalan earthquake.

The earthquake, which occurred two weeks ago, leveled numerous Guatemalan towns and devastated others. The drive is aimed at raising money to supply food, blankets, building materials and other necessities to the victims.

Iowa City residents Mario and Maria Santizo, who have relatives in Pochuta, Guatemala, are spearheading the effort.

Pochuta, a poor town with a population of about 1,700 people, was at the epicenter of the earthquake, Mario Santizo said. At least 25 people are known dead, with much of the rubble still to be examined.

"The whole town was destroyed. They have no electricity, water or food," he said. "The town is in a sandy, mountainous region, and the road that leads into town was completely blocked. I don't even know whether there is telephone communication with them yet."

Mario Santizo said any money raised will be given directly to First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St., which is handling the earthquake account. Volunteers are asking people to donate whatever they can.

"People down there are very poor so if you donate $10 here, it is like $500 down there," he said.

The Santizos asked local resident Bud Lewis, who has directed similar relief efforts in the past, to help with this drive. Lewis is asking people to take any donations directly to First National in the name of the Guatemalan Earthquake Relief Fund.

"There is an immediate need for money," he said. "It will be sent directly to a Rotarian volunteer in Guatemala, who will take it to the victims. Every penny will get to where it is needed."

Horowitz, St. John, Larson weigh issues

Eric Detwiler
Daily Iowan

Incumbent Susan Horowitz commences her first attempt at reelection against challenger Jim St. John for the District A seat on the Iowa City City Council.

St. John, 35, is employed with the Johnson County SEATS program and said he was entering the Nov. 5 race because he felt he would benefit the community.

Horowitz, a councilor since 1987, won her first council seat uncontested and has never run against another candidate. One of the not-as-visible things Horowitz said she had been working on was the development of neighborhoods in the community.

"I have slowly and steadily been working forward in the development of neighborhood organization," Horowitz said. "Specifically the historical society, the park and recreation service and, most importantly, the integrity of neighborhoods and keeping them up."

St. John says that maybe Horowitz has developed one neighborhood too many.

"My opponent, Susan Horowitz, supported the development of Walnut Ridge on the west edge of town last year which ended up benefiting a few at the expense of all," St. John said. "All of our water and sewer rates were raised in the city to pay for that extension for a very affluent few people."

As with all the candidates running for council seats, Horowitz is concerned about the increasing amount of mandates from state and federal government organizations and the lack of funds to implement programs.

"The biggest hurdle for Iowa City is a local municipality dealing with state and federal mandates and the finances with which to pay for these," Horowitz said. "It reaches every part of our life."

Horowitz said that one of the major expenses coming up in the near future would be the Americans with Disabilities Act, which passed through Congress last year. She said that the implementation of the plan, with training of personnel, additions to buildings and vehicle purchases, could run into the several-million dollar range.

St. John says that one of the real expenses for the city is the unaccountability of the separate city departments.

"In Iowa City we have a real problem, that we need to have a council holding the city manager more accountable," St. John said. "We can't pay for every pet project that is imagined. We need to realize that there are senior citizens on fixed incomes that find it difficult to keep their homes."

In the Nov. 5 election incumbents William Ambrisco and Karen Kubby are battling Paul Egli and John Crabtree for the at-large seats. Incumbent candidate Randy Larson is running unopposed for the District C seat.

Larson said that campaigning was a time to receive feedback from constituents on different issues in Iowa City and added that he still plans to be involved in several aspects of the election.

"It's kind of a mixed blessing. On the one hand, I don't have to go through as much of a campaign, but on the other hand, it's a pretty good bet that I'll win re-election," Larson said.

Kerrey to focus on caucuses

Steve Cruse
Daily Iowan

In his first campaign stop since entering the race Monday, presidential candidate Bob Kerrey told an Iowa City audience that he will "campaign heavily" in the Iowa caucuses despite competition from Democratic favorite Sen. Tom Harkin.

"I have a great deal of respect for Tom Harkin. He's a friend, and I will not make this a referendum on Tom," said Kerrey, a U.S. senator, during a speech in the Union Triangle Ballroom. "I will just come before you simply and cleanly and say, 'This is what I'll do if I'm elected.'"

In a news conference following the speech he added, "I'm sure you'll see us square off in a variety of places." But he acknowledged that it would be difficult to beat Harkin in a state holding open caucuses, since voters must publicly declare their support for a candidate.

Speaking to about 400 people, the Nebraska Democrat reiterated the themes introduced in his official announcement Monday such as his universal health-care proposal, the need for federal educational and child-care programs, and a general need for optimism among Americans.

Kerrey promoted his health-care proposal as vital to the needs of disadvantaged Americans. Kerrey, a Vietnam War veteran who lost a leg in combat, said the federal government "saved my life" by extending medical benefits to him upon his return to the United States.

"Unless we use the federal government for these kinds of programs, many people don't fully develop," he said.

Kerrey also attacked the administration's response to crime, drugs and other problems plaguing inner cities. These things could be controlled, he said, by investing more money in federal educational programs such as Head Start.

"Republican policies on crime have failed, and things are getting worse," he said to loud applause. "We need to fully fund these programs, to get to these kids from the beginning."

During the news conference Kerrey repeated his assertion that he does not plan to make Bush "the enemy" in his campaign, focusing instead on "pessimism and skepticism" about American potential.

"If we make this a personal issue where we just say 'Vote against George Bush,' then I think we'll miss the most important issue of all," Kerrey said.

He was non-committal when asked how he would respond if Bush made attacks against him similar to those against Michael Dukakis in the 1988 campaign.

"Well, we'll have to see," he said. "I don't remember very many moments in my life when I said I would not do something because the risks were too great. This campaign is full of risks."

Kerrey's arrival was delayed by about 45 minutes as he had unexpectedly traveled to Washington, D.C., this morning.

UI faculty to meet with Branstad

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

Members of the Faculty Council, the Committee for Institutional Advancement and the Government Relations Committee will have the opportunity to present Gov. Terry Branstad with their concerns and questions today.

The Faculty Council met Tuesday to plan for the event. The meeting will take place in the Indiana Room of the Union beginning at 4:15 p.m. and is scheduled to last an hour. The governor is expected to speak for about 10 minutes and then a question-and-answer session will follow.

The council said past meetings with the governor have been fruitful, citing the $8 million bonding authority for building repair the UI received after such a meeting.

Although some council members felt the meeting may be the wrong forum to critique the governor's policies, Faculty Council President Jack Fix plans to ask Branstad some hard-hitting questions.

Proposed tuition increases will also be discussed at the meeting. During Tuesday's session some faculty members endorsed the student view that by raising tuition instead of expecting state support the regents might send the wrong message to the Legislature.

CORRECTION

An Oct. 1 Daily Iowan article about the Iowa Board of Medical Examiners suspending a local psychiatrist's license incorrectly stated that the board said Dr. James Yeltatzie suffers from a mental condition that affects his relationship with his patients. The board claims that this is true about Dr. Yeltatzie, but it has not proved that he suffers from this condition.
An Oct. 1 DI article on local health clubs reported that Body Dimensions has several aerobics classes taught by students. In fact, the club only has two student instructors, both of whom are certified.
The DI regrets the errors.

Tractor troopers, hitchhikers trap speeders

Associated Press
COLLINSVILLE, Ill.— State troopers are taking to deep cover as farmers on tractors and hitchhikers with suitcases to nab speeders.
Sgt. Dave Jung said he caught 43 speeders Monday in two hours sitting on a tractor with a radar gun and a two-way radio.
He staked out a stretch of Interstate 55-70 near Collinsville, using a tractor and mower provided by the Illinois Department of Transportation.
Jung said speeders should beware this winter because Illinois State Police plan to go undercover in snow plows and in what appear to be abandoned vehicles.
"We've already done this posing as a hitchhiker along the highway with the radar in the suitcase," he said.

 Luke's Hospital in Sioux City, Iowa.
 Springdale residents are watchful for any strange activity in the area.
 "I've been watching the route, and I haven't seen anything," said the Mathers' mail carrier. "There's just a lot of vacant buildings around, and only 60 percent of the fields have been cleared."

The Mathers had been married for a year and were living on the farm that had previously been owned by Tom Mathers' parents. The brutal murder of Mather is the first in Cedar County since a 1984 slaying. "You wouldn't think it would happen here," Furchtenschmidt said.

"Nobody locks their doors or anything. There's a lot of fear now, and you'll see a lot of doors locked and some deadbolts."
 The manhunt had dwindled down to four patrol cars by Tuesday afternoon, according to Whitlatch. After the massive combination of law enforcement agencies had failed to locate the suspect Monday night, area residents were less sure he would be captured.

"I'm less confident they'll catch him now than I was last night," Furchtenschmidt said. "There are still a lot of unanswered questions."

The UI Old Capitol flag will be flown at half-staff Wednesday for Mather, who was employed as a UI custodial worker at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The general manager for UI Custodial Services, Dave Jackson, said he got along well with his co-workers.

"He was a very easygoing, happy-go-lucky person. He was dependable and received several perfect attendance awards," Jackson said. "It's certainly a very difficult time for us here, especially for his co-workers in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. They're really devastated and shocked."

The scaled back search continued Tuesday night for the fugitive suspect as the Cedar County law enforcement authorities have set up a command post at a local church and are awaiting further developments in the case.

CITY COUNCIL

 Iowa City resident Mel Smith said that he was opposed to the elimination of some channels.

"It appears that any of the stations dropped leave an opening for another spot that you have to pay more for," he said. "Our monthly bill has more than doubled. To have a more than 100 percent increase in 10 years seems pretty tough."

Smith also expressed dissatisfaction with the repetition of programs on some channels. "If you watch cable for very long, you end up watching the same movie about 19 times. My memory's not that good, but I don't need things repeated that much," he said.

Dave Funk agreed with Smith that not all channels should have to be paid for if they aren't watched. "I don't see why I should be paying for 25 channels that I don't use. I'm just getting fed up with it. I'm on the verge of going back to my antenna," he said.

Bob Welsh, the chairman of the first Iowa City cable television committee in 1972-73, said the council has the opportunity to undo a mistake they made back in 1973.

"The council needs to re-examine the 12 basic reasons that they made for voting for (then) Hawkeye Cablevision. All 12 have not become a reality," Welsh said.

He said the decision made in 1973 was wrong and that could be proved in terms of dollars and economics.

"It would be in the best interest of the community for this system to be owned by the city of Iowa City," Welsh said.

Not everyone agreed that Heritage needs to be franchised. Bill Terry said that Heritage as well as Heritage President and General Manager Bill Blough and city cable television specialist Drew Shaffer have been very helpful.

"Two hundred twenty-eight complaints are not much more than six complaints a month," Terry said. He said that compared to other cable companies, those are very low numbers.

Citizens in favor of Public Access Television were also in favor of the renewal.

John Hess, executive director of PATV, said that PATV hoped for continued support in franchise negotiations. "Public Access is proud to say that we worked with over 100 groups last year. That really helps to get their messages out," he said.

Other supporters of PATV said that services such as PATV make Iowa City an excellent place to live.

One supporter said that Iowa City deserves all the local programming that it can get.

Diversity GER requires empirical debates

That tolerance is a virtue is beyond dispute. That anything worthy of being called an education includes understanding what other people think is also beyond dispute.

If these are the central issues motivating the current debate over the addition of a multicultural requirement to the UI undergraduate program, then there is nothing to debate about really. Nobody quibbles with these truisms.

But the debate isn't whether we pay lip service to these principles. Rather, proponents of the proposed multicultural requirement argue, at a minimum, that the UI's realization of these goals lags behind its intent. That is, when we get down to the specifics, the UI is graduating students who are, at least at the margin, poorly educated and intolerant.

If this is true — and it may well be — then the UI has a serious problem to address. Unfortunately, the bulk of the discussion at Thursday's liberal arts faculty forum was pitched in the most general and abstract terms. The discussion rarely left the level of the platitude.

There were, to be sure, a couple of sterling counterexamples to this tendency: UI political scientist Vicki Hesli, a proposal supporter, and UI philosophy Professor Laird Addis, a proposal opponent.

While both were constrained by the ridiculously low time limit of four minutes — hardly enough time to set out a thesis let alone justify it — both professors heralded a call to move the discussion out of the ethereal realm of platitudes and to argue the proposal in the concrete. (I might add that the shortness of time permitted these professors only to lay out some thought-provoking claims. Neither should be held responsible for the spins I place on their claims.)

Hesli pointed to the current ethnic battles in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe as motivating a proper interest in promoting understanding and respect between different cultures. Her discussion touched on the concerns of an empirical social scientist.

We can't just throw different people in a room and expect them to get along. If that were all that is necessary, then Yugoslavia would be a model of peaceful ethnic coexistence. How the UI puts people together in actual practice is as important in promoting the goals of tolerance and understanding as is the intent behind multiculturalism.

As notable as what Hesli argued, however, is how she argued. Her form of argument touched on the deeper issue of making the empirical case for the multicultural requirement.

Specifically, how many UI students are intolerant, and in what way? These attitudes can be measured. Will the types of classes proposed to fulfill the requirement actually change attitudes among intolerant students? This is a question amenable to empirical inquiry.

In a university quite teeming with social scientists, surely it cannot be too great a burden to answer these very basic questions about this specific proposal. The UI needs a standard by which to measure both the actual need of the proposal and, if implemented, whether the proposal succeeds in achieving its goals.

Addis approached the platitudes from a different starting point. He began, as philosophers are wont to do, with the issue of unpacking the terminology in the proposal. (I should also note that he made the additional argument that the proposal is political "in the wrong sense of the word.")

Addis asked just what the proposal means when it says that students ought to "understand" other cultures. In a deep way, Addis' question touched upon a potential conflict between the twin goals of the proposal. That is, it touched upon a conflict between teaching students about what other people think and teaching students to be more tolerant.

Several professors favoring the proposal argued that knowledge of other cultures so fundamentally shakes a student's world-view that it becomes more difficult for a student to be committed to one set of "values."

While this may occur, it is also plausible that just the opposite occurs. As with a scientific hypothesis, a student who tests his or her "value system" against competing alternatives may become more confident, not less, in the truth of his or her principles.

That one person says yes and another person says no doesn't necessarily imply that a reasonable person can't answer a question.

Addis distinguished between what he termed "critical understanding" and "sympathetic understanding." Seeking to understand critically means that a student engages and argues with the claims of other people — that is, tests his or her beliefs against other beliefs. Seeking to understand sympathetically encourages students to empathize with other people. While these goals are not always in conflict, it is nonetheless obvious that the goals can come into conflict. Addis' distinction suggests that the answer to the question of which goal predominates in such a conflict is important to answer at the outset.

The issue of the multicultural requirement is one in which, as philosophy Professor Evan Fales put it, "people of good will can disagree." In such a case, the prudence of the policy will depend on the quality of the information and the quality of the discussion surrounding the proposal. Certainly at a university, this process ought to be exemplary. If last week's forum was representative of the discussion so far, then most of those engaged in the debate over this requirement need to move out of the world of the platitude and argue the specifics of the proposal at the UI.

Horner and the UI: brothers in arms?

Gen. Charles Horner won't be able to make it to Iowa City for the Fifth Annual Distinguished Alumni Lecture. That should displease some.

The UI Alumni Association has to cancel the reservation at the Union Main Lounge.

Public relations serfs of the Hills Bank and Trust Company — co-sponsor of the annual lecture since its inception — have to send out explanatory letters to their precious customers.

And the energetic New Wave bunch has to pack away those neat placards — for a while, that is, because the lecture has merely been postponed, not scrapped.

That's the practical side. Philosophically, the change doesn't mean much. Somebody thought this sort of recognition from an institute of higher learning was appropriate for Horner, an accomplished and prominent soldier; the postponement doesn't change that.

First of all, for accuracy's sake, we need to distinguish between two distinctions the UIAA bestows upon people. According to Vince Nelson, the associate executive director of the association, the Distinguished Alumni Awards and the Annual Distinguished Alumni Lecture are two different programs.

The awards have been presented since 1963 to more than 200 recipients so far. The list includes many names you would recognize from UI buildings and people like cartoonist Paul Conrad, playwright Paul Engle, novelist James Michener, regent Marvin Pomerantz and UI Hillcrest Residence Hall's legendary one-time housemother Martha Van Nostrand.

The lecture, on the other hand, is in its fifth year, and not all of the past lecturers have been recipients of the award. Horner is one of the lecturers who has not been awarded. Moreover, he has not been nominated for the 1992 awards. The deadline for that was Sept. 3, 1991.

Does that preclude him from being awarded in the future? Absolutely not. Will he be awarded? Let's hope not. Even the lecture invitation should not have been extended to a man in Horner's position.

Of course, the majority of the American population believes that Horner is a great hero. Those people choose to believe that Operation Desert Storm was fueled primarily by the quest for democracy.

My perspective is that the primary motive for Desert Storm, as it was with a lot of other battles dating back to this nation's earliest wars, was securing the material interests of the United States.

Twenty years ago, Martha Van Nostrand was busy shielding her kids in Hillcrest from the tear-gas attack of the police. Now she is afflicted with Alzheimer's disease so she'll never realize how the UI's recognition mechanism is dangerously inclined to bow to a trend of non-discriminating mainstream appreciation.

In view of this, I'd like to nominate Terry Branstad for next year's Distinguished Alumni Lecture.

Or better still, let's have Randall Meyer — a vice president with Exxon. He can tell us all about Alaska.

Branstad wants state government to wither away

Iowans are being squeezed by Gov. Terry Branstad's vision of a leaner state government. Cut the fat, the governor says, state bureaucracies are bloated. But Branstad is not simply attempting to cut fat. Rather he is trying to recast the role of government, shrewdly using the state budget crisis to accomplish this goal. Branstad has a plan and another three years to implement it. For people who value health care, prison reform, education and other social services, those three years could prove to be particularly discouraging.

Gov. Branstad's new vision of how state government should act is epitomized by his approach to higher education. Under the cover of a state budget crisis — one which he conveniently ignored during the last gubernatorial campaign — Branstad began his assault on the state's three public universities. He ordered the Board of Regents to slash its budget by 3.25 percent — a cut which cost the UI over $5 million.

The short-term effects of these cuts were obvious: scores of individuals lost their jobs; worker morale plummeted since nobody knew when the next set of cutbacks would occur and who would face the brunt of Branstad's ax; students found themselves faced with larger classes, reductions in services and less qualified instructors.

But the probable long-term effects appear much more serious. If Branstad is truly bent on downsizing state government, then this distressing trend will continue and the quality of education at the regents schools will suffer. Ultimately, this will translate into fewer incoming students, less revenue from tuition and more cuts in the universities' operating budgets.

The Board of Regents recognized the implications of this cycle and called for a 9 percent tuition increase. "We must find funds, or there will be irreparable damage to the universities," Marvin Pomerantz told concerned students at the most recent Board of Regents meeting.

Of course, students were outraged. "Why should we pay more when we're getting so much less?" was the most common response. And these complaints are legitimate. Many students can barely afford to pay their rent and food bills, let alone tuition. A 9 percent increase would be devastating.

So Branstad had the opening he wanted. By opposing the tuition increase — or at least any increase above the rate of inflation — he presented himself as the "education governor." Students, fooled by his feigned concern, felt they had a friend looking out for them. For once it seemed that the governor really was concerned about education.

But in fact, Branstad's decision to oppose the tuition increase has nothing to do with the needs of students. If he was really concerned about the state universities, Branstad would have made education a budgetary priority. But that's not part of his plan.

Branstad is just using this opportunity to scale back the role of state government — even if that results in the "irreparable harm" Pomerantz predicted. That's what Branstad means when he talks about getting the state's finances in order.

After last year's landslide victory over Don Avenson, Branstad apparently feels comfortable enough to impose his limited view of state government on the people of Iowa. During the past year he has repeatedly claimed that state spending is out of control. Apparently, Iowa has too many employees and too many state services.

This summer Branstad set up a task force designed to determine the effect of privatizing parts of Iowa's prison system and to look into ways for the state to limit the annual funding increases associated with entitlements programs.

Branstad was quoted by the Associated Press as saying, "Nothing can be held sacrosanct from being reviewed and considered. Some of these things call for fundamental change."

And that's what he is after: a fundamental change in the current relationship between state government and Iowans. Branstad has been swept up by the reactionary call for fewer taxes and less government. It's an easy sale because most citizens take for granted the essential and sometimes costly services provided by government.

But if you want to educate children, provide food and health care to the poor and elderly, build roads, bridges and airports, stimulate the economy with incentives to small businesses, protect the environment or bail out the state's farmers after a natural disaster, then taxes have to be collected.

Sure there's a lot of inefficient state spending, but gutting essential programs and carelessly selling off state resources will not alleviate this problem.

Hopefully Iowans are astute enough to realize that Branstad is using the budget crisis to slash many services provided by state government. Will Iowans accept this fate? Maybe, but the citizens of this state have traditionally accepted the burden of paying for a government that looks after its people.

If Iowans want a small, aloof state government, then Gov. Terry Branstad is just the person to give it to them. Students recently showed their disdain for this form of government by boycotting classes. It's yet to be seen whether the rest of the state will follow suit.

CONDOMS

Better safe than sorry

New York has apparently found a way to limit teen-age pregnancy and AIDS. According to The New York Times, in a few months all New York high-school students will be able to receive condoms upon request.

The new prevention policy has sparked an important controversy of legal, ethical and religious implications. This is because the new plan does not consider asking for the consent of the teens' parents. So far there are two sides ready to get in the struggle. John Cardinal O'Connor, the Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, is encouraging law firms to represent parents in any lawsuit aimed at stopping the plan. On the other side, the New York Board of Education and probably the New York Civil Liberties Union will defend the policy.

Recent studies have proven, however, that teen-age sex and drug use is rampant not only in inner cities, but is also increasingly common in suburban and rural areas.

The obvious question is whether giving condoms to high-school students is the right strategy. This has been a much debated issue this past year. But currently, it seems to be the most appropriate prevention plan to implement.

What many parents are complaining about is that they can keep their children from attending school-sponsored AIDS classes, but under the new plan they would not be able to control their children's sexual conduct. Recent studies have proven, however, that teen-age sex and drug use is rampant not only in inner cities, but is also increasingly common in suburban and rural areas — which until now had been considered more protected areas. Considering this fact, it is unconceivable to keep children in the darkness of ignorance and unprotected against AIDS and pregnancy.

Anti-abortionists may contend that handing condoms to teenagers will do nothing but encourage them to engage in sexual activity, thus increasing pregnancy rates and, consequently, abortion rates. While this assertion has a certain degree of validity, it would be absolutely naive to believe that teen-agers are not having sex just because they do not have easy access to birth control methods.

GATES

Allegations of data distortion open 3rd week of confirmation hearings

Ruth Sinai
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senior intelligence analysts told senators in scathing testimony Tuesday that Robert Gates, President Bush's nominee to head the CIA, systematically distorted data and stifled dissent while at the agency.

The allegations, at the start of a third week of confirmation hearings for Gates, were aired after the Senate Intelligence Committee heard them privately last week and deemed them sufficiently serious to merit a public debate.

The thrust of the accusations was that Gates, as head of CIA intelligence analysis and then as deputy and acting CIA director, skewed intelligence information to conform with the anti-Soviet policy slant of his Reagan administration bosses and his own strongly held anti-Soviet views.

Gates, a Soviet specialist who now serves as Bush's deputy national security aide, has strongly denied such allegations — though admitting he was caught off guard by the dramatic fall of Soviet communism — and will have a chance to rebut them again in testimony later this week.

The senior Republican on the committee, Frank Murkowski of Alaska, noted Gates' denials and cautioned that "those who assert to the contrary have a very heavy burden of proof."

Democrats, however, who until now have raised little concerted opposition despite conflicting accounts of Gates' possible role in the Iran-Contra affair, seemed disturbed by accusations of a "politicization" of intelligence.

"I think some Democratic members have been badly shaken," Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told reporters.

"Gates' role was to corrupt the process and ethics of intelligence" in two areas held dear by his late boss, CIA Director William Casey, testified Mel Goodman, a former Soviet division chief and currently a senior instructor at the National War College.

Gates "pandered to Casey's agenda," said Goodman. He said that the alleged slanting was aimed at buttressing Casey's view that the Soviet Union was the source of all U.S. problems and that any evidence of Soviet moderation or conciliation was rejected.

According to testimony and documents furnished to the committee, Casey in 1985 ordered an intelligence assessment that would indicate the Soviets were responsible for the 1981 assassination attempt against Pope John Paul II — after a 1983 agency analysis failed to find any evidence.

Gates formed a three-analyst team to write the paper, which was declassified and released Tuesday, and sent it to the White House with a cover letter describing it as "the most balanced work" the CIA had produced on the subject.

An internal CIA critique of the memo, dated July 12, 1985, found "serious shortcomings" with the analysis, partly because it failed to examine alternative options.

"The widespread perception that upper management had strong views on the issue had a pervasive effect on the analytic production process," the reviewers wrote.

Another case cited by Gates' critics concerns a 1985 analysis broadly perceived as an underpinning for the White House decision to sell arms to Iran to curry favor with moderates and lead to the release of American hostages.

rather simple soul, wants to settle into cozy, clockwork monogamy; his boyfriend Frank wants unfettered sexual freedom." In addition, the flier says the film has been "hailed by critics as a landmark in gay filmmaking, a big step toward liberating the screen."

Also on the flier is a phrase, labeled a disclaimer by many associated with the German department, which states, "Don't come near this film if the world of homosexuality upsets you in any way."

According to Weltraud Maierhofer, an assistant professor in the German department, this phrase is a quote taken from a Los Angeles Times review of the film in 1981 that was taken out of context.

Maierhofer said she had talked with Ford Parkes-Perret, an associate professor in the German department, who said he would use the film.

"I relied on him and announced that it would be used," Maierhofer said.

But after reading the Times review to get information for the flier, she decided not to require viewing of the film.

"I decided that it was something I would not want to see myself so I changed my decision," she said. "I told students why we were not watching it but said that we would still talk about homosexuality in Germany."

Maierhofer said she told students they should either view the film, go to the library and read a review of it, or read any other article dealing with the topic.

"Unfortunately, I said all of that in German. If it was misunderstood, I don't know," she said.

One student, who wished to remain anonymous, said, "It was basically required, but you could go over a critique of it that was in the library. But I didn't really know where to get it — it wasn't a real viable alternative."

Some students claim that they were required to see the film, though Runge maintains that it was not required.

"There is no doubt in my mind that we were required to go," said

Joel Nielsen, a sophomore German major.

A statement issued Friday and signed by Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for university relations, said an article in Friday's Des Moines Register contained "factual errors." According to the statement, the film was not required viewing, contrary to the report in the Register article.

In Tuesday's statement, Rawlings said "the department regrets its failure to convey to students the voluntary nature of film attendance in this course."

But Runge said he did not see it as a failure. "This was not really a failure or neglect to make this known, but a failure in the giving and receiving of the instructions — a misunderstanding somewhere," he said. "We seem to be at an impasse on that issue at this point."

"This issue is too important to vote on without discussion," Beardsley said.

When the floor was opened for discussion, several senators spoke favorably of Wise and urged his appointment as vice president.

Graduate and Professional Student Sen. Allen Kistler was the only speaker opposing Wise's appointment. He said he saw two problems in the UISA — certain structural problems, such as incomplete committees, and personnel problems, which he said included Wise.

HAITI COUP

Deposed president warns of impending bloodshed

Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti—Gunfire reverberated throughout the Haitian capital Tuesday, a day after President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was ousted in a coup. The deposed leader sent impassioned appeals from exile to his countrymen, warning of an impending bloodbath.

The military imposed a 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew, announcing it over one of four operating radio stations in the capital. The capital's normally bustling downtown area was nearly deserted.

Small groups of people huddled in the streets talking. Occasionally some would scamper out to rebuild barricades of burning tires in protest of Monday's coup led by Brig. Gen. Raoul Cedras, who had been Aristide's interim army commander.

Aristide, the first democratically elected president in Haiti's nearly two centuries as a nation, was with his family in Caracas, Venezuela, Tuesday, en route to France.

The toll from the uprising, staged by rebel soldiers opposing Aristide's leftist policies, rose sharply Tuesday.

The Caribbean Human Rights Network, based in Barbados, said preliminary counts indicated more than 100 people died. Frantz LaMothe, a photographer who visited the General Hospital morgue in central Port-au-Prince, said authorities reported 140 bodies at that facility alone.

"The military is in full control," LaMothe said. "They are driving all over town, 15 to 20 in pickup trucks."

Richard Morse, manager of the ornate Olafsson Hotel on a hill overlooking the Port-au-Prince harbor, said, "Most of the shooting today is in the air. Yesterday they were shooting at people."

American tourists holed up in the hotel, the setting for Graham Greene's famous Haitian novel "The Comedians," said they feared for their lives.

ley, Calif., said she arrived Saturday for what she hoped would be a unique two-week vacation. She got a little more than she and her companion, Brad Adams, bargained for.

"Just now there was a shot very close to where we are," she said, her voice trembling in a telephone interview. "The military doesn't care what object they are shooting at. They're just shooting to scare people."

She said she and her companion were waiting to get on the first plane out of Haiti.

The international airport has been closed since Monday afternoon when rebel soldiers seized Aristide at the National Palace.

YUGOSLAVIA

Army attacks Croatia, breaks 9-day-old truce

Slobodan Lekic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—Fierce and widespread fighting broke the 9-day-old truce in secessionist Croatia Tuesday as the Serb-dominated Yugoslav army went on the offensive in response to Croat attacks on its bases.

Statements from Croatia and the Yugoslav army said Tuesday's battles were among the worst since fighting began three months ago. Since then, at least 600 people have been killed and six cease-fires have failed.

"All indicators ultimately point toward a military solution to the problem," said Mario Nobilo, spokesman for Croatian President Franjo Tudjman.

The army seemed intent on seizing the few remaining Croat positions in eastern Croatia before it gets bogged down by wet fall weather and low morale that has caused desertions by thousands of reservists. Many of the republic's ethnic Serb minority live in the eastern region.

There was widespread speculation that the federal presidency, which was meeting Tuesday in Belgrade, would order a general mobilization to fill the depleted army ranks.

Army troops and Serb rebels fought Croats in hand-to-hand combat outside Sisak, 30 miles south of the Croatian capital of Zagreb, Belgrade radio reported.

Naval bombardment, air attacks and artillery shelling were reported around the Adriatic ports of Dubrovnik and Zadar.

The outskirts of the medieval walled town of Dubrovnik, a major tourist resort, were hit by mortars. Navy gunboats had imposed a naval blockade on Dubrovnik.

Fighting raged at the southern tip of Croatia, some 20 miles outside Dubrovnik, with army reservists from Serbia's ally, Montenegro, poised to strike, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said.

Tank and infantry attacks were reported around the towns of Vukovar and Vinkovci in eastern Croatia. Zagreb radio said the outcome of the fighting there would be crucial.

Heavy fighting reportedly raged around Vukovar on Croatia's Danube River border with Serbia. Vukovar's capture would allow ethnic Serb insurgents, aided by the army, to control a large enclave in Slavonia, a region of eastern Croatia that has been the scene of heavy fighting since late June.

Heckler sues Indians' Belle

CLEVELAND — A heckler hit in the chest by a ball thrown by Cleveland Indians' outfielder Albert Belle last spring filed suit Tuesday against Belle and the team.

Jeff Pillar of Cleveland, who displayed a red welt on his chest after the incident, filed the suit in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court and asked for unspecified money damages.

Pillar was hit from a distance of about 15 feet during a game against California on May 11 after Pillar jokingly invited Belle to a keg party. Belle spent 10 weeks in an alcoholism rehabilitation program at the Cleveland Clinic last year.

American League president Bobby Brown suspended Belle for seven days, but after an appeal hearing in July, the suspension was reduced to six days. Belle served the suspension in mid-July after the All-Star break.

Harrelson wants to be with his family

NEW YORK — Bud Harrelson wants to manage again, but right now he just wants to be with his family after being fired by the New York Mets Sunday.

The Mets have offered him a job in the organization, probably as a scout or minor-league instructor.

"I don't think it was non-caring that was my downfall," Harrelson said in an interview at his home with Newsday. "For whatever reason, it didn't work. I just want to be left alone to live with my family. My life as manager was an open book. I need time to be with my family and reflect."

At 75-81, the Mets are heading for their worst finish since 1983.

Ex-Cyclone up for Golden Spikes Award

AMES — Former Iowa State baseball player Tom Vantiger is one of nine finalists for the Golden Spikes Award, presented annually to the nation's top amateur.

Vantiger, an outfielder, is the first finalist from Iowa State. He earned first-team All-America honors last spring and is Iowa State's career leader in batting average (.385), hits (271), RBI (180), runs (215), doubles (49) and walks (110).

The Mount Union native batted .463 in 1991 with 22 doubles and 73 RBI.

The other finalists are shortstop Brent Gates of Minnesota, catcher Charles Johnson of Miami, first baseman David McCarty of Stanford, outfielders Mike Kelly of Arizona State and Mark Sweeney of Maine and pitchers Bobby Jones of Fresno State, Kenzie Steenstra of Wichita State and Phillip Stidham of Arkansas.

Vantiger, a sixth-round draft pick of the Cleveland Indians, batted .239 this past summer at Class A Watertown.

NBA

Longly far from signing with 'Wolves'

ALBUQUERQUE — Former New Mexico center Luc Longley said he'd love to be with his new team, the Minnesota Timberwolves, but he won't report unless contract problems are worked out by the time the NBA team opens camp Friday.

Longley said Monday that contract talks have bogged down because he and the team have a difference of opinion on what a No. 7 pick is worth in 1991.

He said he and his agency, Advantage International of Washington, D.C., want a contract some 20 percent higher than the $1.5 million a year given to 1990's No. 7 pick, Lionel Simmons of the Sacramento Kings.

The Timberwolves reportedly have offered Longley a contract worth more than $1.5 million a season, The Albuquerque Tribune said in a story in Tuesday's editions.

"I'm not asking for more than what I should get, just the normal progression," Longley said.

Phoenix sends McDaniel to New York

Mel Reisner

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Xavier McDaniel, who didn't give the Phoenix Suns the intimidating presence they desired, was traded to the New York Knicks on Tuesday.

The Knicks sent second-year forward Jerrod Mustaf, 9-year veteran guard Trent Tucker and two second-round draft picks to the Suns.

McDaniel, obtained from Seattle last Dec. 7, was expected to strengthen the Suns at both ends of the court, but he did not provide the necessary muscle to help the team succeed in the playoffs. Phoenix, which won one more game (55) in 1990-91 than it did the previous season, was ousted in the first round.

The Suns reportedly were one of the preferred destinations of Patrick Ewing, the Knick's disgruntled center, but the 7-foot All-Star did not figure in the transaction. The second-round picks included in the deal are for 1992 and 1994.

"I was shocked when I heard," McDaniel said. "I thought something might happen, but I didn't know when. New York was one of the places I wanted to be traded to if I was traded."

McDaniel averaged 15.8 points and 7.2 rebounds for the Suns in 66 games. For the entire season, he averaged 17.0 points and 6.9 rebounds and has career totals of 20.0 points and 7.0 rebounds.

"We're excited about obtaining a front-line player, a legitimate 20-point scorer and a go-to guy," Knicks player personnel director Ernie Grunfeld said. "He's a tough, physical player, a great warrior."

"I've been working on my X's and O's and we just took care of one of the X's," Knicks coach Pat Riley said. "It was a trade we had to make. We needed to complement the outside shooting of Kiki Vandeweghe and bring in a post-up small forward. It's a great trade for the Knicks because it brings in one of the best small forwards in the league, a real front-line player."

"We are pleased to obtain a quality young power forward," Fitzsimmons said of the 6-foot-10 Mustaf, 21. "Had he stayed in school, he would have definitely been a lottery pick in the 1992 college draft."

Fitzsimmons said the departure of McDaniel will give the Suns' younger players room to grow.

"With the development of some of our young players like Andrew Lang, Tim Perry and Cedric Ceballos, we needed to free up playing time for their continued growth," Fitzsimmons said.

McDaniel's shaved head and combative nature were his trademarks in his five full years with the SuperSonics. But the chemistry never developed when he was paired as the other forward with 6-10 Tom Chambers, a former Seattle teammate of McDaniel who set Phoenix season scoring records. See McDANIEL, Page 2B

Before his game-winning field goal against Michigan at Kinnick Stadium in 1985, Rob Houghtlin calmed himself by singing the Iowa fight song.

Houghtlin remembers 'the kick'

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — Rob Houghtlin knew it would come down to him.

He knew that if his No. 1-ranked Iowa Hawkeyes were to beat No. 2 Michigan on that damp October afternoon, he'd have to kick a field goal.

Iowa trailed 10-9, the tension was building and Houghtlin was getting more nervous with each passing minute. Finally, he and teammate Tim Sennott found a way to ease the strain.

"With about four minutes to go, we started singing the Iowa fight song, just so I didn't think about it," Houghtlin recalled.

Not long after that, Houghtlin trotted onto the field and calmly kicked a 29-yard field goal as time expired to give Iowa a 12-10 victory in one of the most memorable games in Kinnick Stadium history.

Holder Mark Vlasic almost suffocated in the celebration. Players, fans and coaches lingered on the field long after the game to savor the moment. Coach Hayden Fry called it his greatest victory.

With Michigan visiting Iowa on Saturday for a game that could set the tone for the Big Ten Conference race, memories of that titanic struggle in 1985 are still fresh in the minds of the participants.

"It's something that I'll never forget," wide receiver Bill Happel said. "A couple of hours later, walking out of the locker room — and it was dark out — there was just a mob of people, still just literally dancing in the streets."

"It seemed to me such an uplifting thing for the entire state. It seemed to transcend our team and even the university. It just kind of enveloped the state."

Happel and the rest of the offense put together a masterful drive to set Houghtlin up for his game-winning kick. The Hawkeyes constantly kept Michigan off balance as they marched down the field on Chuck Long's passing and the running of Ronnie Harmon and David Hudson.

CHICAGO — Kirby Puckett hit a tie-breaking home run in the eighth inning Tuesday night and the AL West champion Minnesota Twins beat the Chicago White Sox 3-2.

With the score tied 2-2, Puckett homered off Melido Perez (8-7), his 15th home run of the season.

Mark Guthrie (7-5) allowed two hits in two innings, and Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 41st save.

Pedro Munoz's RBI single in the second put the Twins ahead, but Carlton Fisk tied the score in the second with an RBI double, the 2,300th hit of his career. It broke a 0-for-30 slump for Fisk.

Ron Karkovice gave Chicago the lead in the fourth with an RBI single. But the Twins tied the score in the seventh when Shane Mack singled off Winston Alvarez, stole second and scored on Gene Larkin's single off Perez.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 2
TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays clinched a tie for the AL East title Tuesday night, beating the California Angels 5-2 as Juan Guzman won his club-record 10th consecutive decision.

Kelly Gruber hit two RBI singles for Toronto, which cut its magic number to one and increased its lead to 4½ games over second-place Boston, which lost to Detroit 8-5.

Guzman (10-2) gave up five hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked one. Duane Ward got two outs for his 21st save.

Mike Fetters (2-5) gave up six hits and one earned run in five innings, his longest big-league outing.

Tigers 8, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Roger Clemens lost for the first time in eight weeks and the Red Sox stumbled to the brink of elimination with their seventh loss in nine games.

Dave Bergman, Travis Fryman and Pete Incaviglia each homered off Clemens (18-9), who lasted only five innings and left trailing 6-0. The Tigers became just the third team ever to hit three homers in a game off Clemens.

Frank Tanana (12-12) won his 219th game, allowing six hits in 5½ innings.

Brewers 11, Indians 0

CLEVELAND — Milwaukee's Willie Randolph, who started the night trailing Texas' Julio Franco by six points in the AL batting race, went 2-for-9 and dropped his average two points to .332.

Bill Wegman (15-7) pitched a seven-hitter in the first game. The loss was Cleveland's 102nd, tying a team record set in 1914 and matched in 1971 and 1985. Rod Nichols (2-11) lost for the Indians, who have been shut out 18 times.

Reggie Jefferson scored the go-ahead run in the sixth inning of the second game on a wild pitch by Darren Holmes (1-4). Dave Otto (2-8) was the winner.

Mariners 8, Rangers 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Franco, leading the AL batting race at .340, did not play. Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr., third in the race, went 0-for-4 and fell three points to .328.

Jay Buhner hit a two-run homer off Oil Can Boyd (2-7) and Greg Briley hit a three-run triple off Mike Jeffcoat. Dave Burba (2-2) allowed three hits in six innings. See AMERICAN, Page 2B

Braves unleash best comeback against Reds

Associated Press
CINCINNATI — David Justice capped the Atlanta Braves' most improbable comeback of their pennant-race surge with a two-run homer off Cincinnati's Rob Dibble in the ninth inning for a 7-6 victory Tuesday night.
 Atlanta entered the day trailing Los Angeles by one game in the NL West. The Dodgers played host to San Diego.
 Of the Braves' four last-inning comeback wins, this one faced the longest odds of all.
 The Braves fell behind 6-0 in the first inning, highlighted by Joe Oliver's first career grand slam. They faced huge odds against a comeback at that point — Reds starter Jose Rijo was unbeaten at Riverfront Stadium this season.
 But Atlanta used a couple of ragged plays by Mariano Duncan, making his first career start in center field, to get within a run at 6-5 in the seventh. Then Justice did the rest.
 Dibble (3-5) came on in the ninth and gave up a lead-off single to Mark Lemke. Deion Sanders pinch-ran and stole second — his second stolen base during his dual role as NFL cornerback and baseball player.

 One out later, Justice came to bat and pulled his 21st homer deep over the right-field wall, only the fourth that Dibble has allowed this season, to keep the heat on LA. For Dibble, it was his fifth blown save in six chances.
 Mike Stanton (5-5), the fourth Braves pitcher, got the win by retiring the four batters he faced. Alejandro Pena pitched the ninth for his 13th save.
Pirates 2, Mets 1
PITTSBURGH — John Smiley became a 19-game winner in a relief role as Pittsburgh beat New York.
 Smiley (19-8) came into a 1-1 game to relieve Zane Smith in the fourth inning by design. Manager Jim Leyland has been working his pitchers for specific lengths to get ready for the NL playoffs.
 Howard Johnson stole a base to reach the 30-30 club for the third time in his career.

Cardinals 3, Expos 1
ST. LOUIS — Lee Smith set a National League record with his 46th save as St. Louis beat Montreal.
 Smith, who got the last three outs, broke the mark of 45 set by the Cardinals' Bruce Sutter in 1984. Smith became the fifth major leaguer to record at least 46 saves in a season. His previous high was 36 in 1987 with the Chicago Cubs.

Phillies 6, Cubs 5
PHILADELPHIA — John Kruk's run-scoring single with two outs in the 13th inning lifted Philadelphia past Chicago.
 Steve Lake hit a one-out double off Paul Assenmacher (7-8). After John Morris was hit by pitch and Wes Chamberlain fied out, Kruk singled down the left-field line to make Assenmacher a loser for the second straight night.
 Bruce Ruffin (4-7) pitched two innings of hitless relief for the victory.

Colts lose patience, finally fire Meyer

Associated Press

Colts defensive coordinator Rick Venturi was named head coach Tuesday after Ron Meyer was fired by owner Jim Irsay.

Kip Coons
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Ron Meyer ran out of chances to make the Indianapolis Colts winners and lost his job Tuesday, one week after he was given a vote of confidence.

Meyer, along with offensive coordinator Leon Burnett, was fired and replaced on an interim basis by defensive coordinator Rick Venturi.

In more than four full seasons coaching the Colts — at 0-5 one of four winless teams in the NFL — Meyer's record was 36-35. In recent weeks, Meyer blamed injuries for his team's poor play.

In recent years, though, the Colts did everything they could to help him produce a winner. They acquired All-Pro running back Eric Dickerson in a three-team deal in 1987. They won the AFC East at 9-6 but lost in their only playoff game under Meyer.

The Colts traded with Atlanta for the No. 1 pick in the 1990 draft and took Jeff George, hailed as the next Dan Marino. In 1990, the Colts were 7-9.

"The key is to progress the franchise, not make rash changes through frustration or anger," said Colts general manager Jim Irsay, who played under Meyer at Southern Methodist.

Irsay, who said the decision to go with a new coach was made more difficult because of his friendship with Meyer, also said he was tired of Meyer's excuses.

"I don't want excuses," Irsay said. "We'll let other people make excuses."

Meyer's firing came two days after the Colts' embarrassing 31-3 loss to the Seattle Seahawks. Indianapolis has scored a league-low 40 points this season.

Meyer, who held an impromptu news conference in the parking lot outside the Colts' offices, again said injuries were the reason his team was winless.

"We didn't because of a lack of talent," he said. "It was not on the field. It was laid up in the hospital."

He also added, "The injuries are part of the game. I can understand (the Irsays') frustration. The injuries do come with the territory."

Seven Colts are on injured reserve, including three tight ends and two offensive tackles. Albert Bentley, the team's most versatile back, is out for the season.

Meyer was philosophical about his firing.

"I can't say it's unfair," Meyer said. "That's for people outside to make that judgment. My record speaks for itself. I'm a knowledgeable, hard-working, good, solid football coach. That's all I'll say."

Venturi, who came to the Colts in 1982 as a linebackers coach, will guide the team for the rest of the season. The 45-year-old Venturi coached Northwestern from 1978-81.

The new coach said injured players will not be a topic of discussion.

"I can't worry about those type of things," he said. "You get dealt a hand of cards and you have to make the best of that hand. I just don't think at this point we can dwell on it."

Meyer, 54-52 overall in the NFL, including an 18-15 mark with New England from 1982-84, had earned a reputation for turning around faltering programs in short order, although few of those teams — including the Colts — achieved any lasting success.

Meyer spent five years coaching at SMU from 1976-81, leading the Mustangs to a Southwest Conference title in 1981. But five years after he left for the NFL, the school received the NCAA's death penalty based on recruiting violations that took place while Meyer and his successor, Bobby Collins, coached the team.

Hawaii haunted by color pink

Associated Press

HONOLULU — University of Hawaii football coach Bob Wagner says his team was outplayed in a 28-16 loss at Colorado State on Saturday, but he isn't discounting the effect of psychological warfare.

"The Rainbows had a pink dressing room in Fort Collins, as they did when they lost 53-10 at Iowa several weeks earlier.

Scientific studies have found that the color pink reduces strength and makes people less aggressive and more passive, Wagner said.

"We put newspaper up over the pink and tried to get out of the locker room faster," Wagner said of Saturday's game at Colorado State.

"This is a lot different and more serious than growing the grass higher if you believe those who have done research in this area," he said.

Wagner says the practice of painting visiting dressing rooms pink upsets him, and he has no plans to do the same at Aloha Stadium, which the university rents from the state for its home games.

"We don't have the money, or even the right to do that," he said.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry is the most famous practitioner of the pink locker room theory. Fry, a psychology major at Baylor, said chances are that Michigan coach Gary Moeller will be covering up the pink in Iowa City this weekend.

"If he was on Coach (Bo) Schembechler's staff he did it," Fry said, referring to Moeller's 18 years of service under the former Wolverine coach. "Bo used to send the coaches out for the butcher paper when they came here."

Nordiques file tampering charges over No. 1 pick

Associated Press

QUEBEC — Quebec Nordiques president Marcel Aubut has lodged a complaint with the NHL over tampering with top draft pick Eric Lindros, a club spokesman said Tuesday.

"Mr. Aubut met with some governors and the specific reason was tampering," spokesman Jean Marlineau said. "We are going to let the league judge the situation and we will make no further comment on it."

An NHL spokesman said it was league policy not to comment on cases of tampering.

Martineau said Aubut met with a group of governors and league president John Ziegler in New York, where a governors' committee met informally to discuss their negotiations with the players association on a new collective bargaining agreement.

The complaint was lodged as the deadline of midnight Wednesday approached for Lindros to sign with the Nordiques or be forced to spend the season with his junior club, the Oshawa Generals.

The Nordiques have said as many as six teams had tampered with Lindros by contacting his family or his agent, Rick Curran.

The Nordiques have rejected Lindros' demand to be traded to a team in a larger market with greater endorsement possibilities. Lindros has refused to sign with Quebec and has vowed to play two more years of junior hockey until he is eligible to re-enter the NHL draft.

Neither side has shown signs of backing down.

General manager Pierre Page said this week the Lindros family had even given him names of players that Quebec could get in exchange for the 18-year-old center.

There was no apparent movement in the standoff between the Nordiques and Lindros on Tuesday. Page was in Quebec but could not be reached for comment. It was not known if any last-minute deals were being made before the deadline.

Ed Chynoweth, director of the Canadian Hockey League — which governs Canada's major junior hockey leagues — indicated on Monday that his organization would excuse Lindros from its signing deadline agreement with the NHL and allow him to sign after Oct. 2.

The Nordiques, who still hope Lindros will change his mind and sign before the deadline, have argued that the agreement is part of league rules and does not allow for exceptions.

Auburn coach welcomes school's investigation

Paul Newberry
Associated Press

AUBURN, Ala. — Pat Dye, confronted with allegations that at least one former Auburn player received money and other illegal benefits, said Tuesday he looks forward to an investigation of the matter.

But he remained silent when it comes to the specifics of the case.

Meanwhile, the attorney for former player Eric Ramsey said he refused to permit a meeting between his client and the NCAA until he finishes reviewing numerous tapes and documents that Ramsey gave him.

Attorney Donald Watkins of Birmingham said Tommy Thagard, a Montgomery attorney hired by Auburn to investigate Ramsey's allegations, called him Monday and wanted to set up a meeting on Tuesday with the NCAA. He said Auburn wanted to be represented in the meeting, but Watkins said Ramsey won't be interviewed by anyone until the review of the tapes and documents is complete.

Back in Auburn, Dye was scheduled to have his weekly news conference Tuesday. Before the news conference, sports information director David Housel said the coach would issue a brief statement on Ramsey's allegations but would not answer questions on the subject.

Housel cited a policy that prevents university employees from commenting on an ongoing investigation.

However, The Montgomery Advertiser reported Tuesday that Dye held an off-the-record news conference Sunday with about 10 to 15 writers who regularly cover Auburn football. The session involved Ramsey's allegations, and the rules for the news conference were that nothing Dye said could be attributed to him but could be attributed to "a source at Auburn University or in the Auburn athletic department."

Housel later confirmed that Dye met with Auburn beat reporters Sunday.

At Tuesday's regular weekly news conference, Dye said, "There's already a lot to add to what I've already said. I don't want to get into a public dispute with one of my (former) players."

He noted that university President James Martin hired legal counsel from outside the school to conduct an internal investigation. The results will be turned over to the NCAA.

"I'd like to get it done as quickly as possible," Dye said of the school's investigation. "I'm not sure how long it will take. But it's under way and I welcome it."

Later, Dye became visibly upset when questioned further about Ramsey's allegations.

"I'm not going to admit or deny anything," he said. "I'm not going to fight this out in the newspaper."

Ramsey, who played defensive back at Auburn from 1987-90, claims he received money and other benefits in violation of NCAA rules, including an unsecured loan for nearly $11,400 from a bank that lists Dye as one of its directors.

Ramsey, 23, has said that he has secretly recorded conversations with Dye, assistant coaches and alumni to support his accusations.

NL WEST RACE

Hershiser proud of comeback

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In a season marked by tremendous challenges, Orel Hershiser is proudest of one statistic.

The Los Angeles Dodgers are 16-5 in games in which he's started.

"It could have been a real nightmare if on my starts we had a bad record, especially the way this has come down to a one-game race," said Hershiser, who is 7-2 in 21 starts. "For us to lose this thing by a game and then look at my record... that would have been an ugly headline."

These days, the headlines are all positive. The right-hander has returned from last season's reconstructive shoulder surgery strong, although not quite as dominant as before. Still, he has emerged as a vital participant in the Dodgers' heated race with Atlanta for the NL West.

He has not lost since June 25, going 6-0 with nine no-decisions. While compiling an overall 3.46 ERA, Hershiser has allowed just three runs in 22 innings over his last four starts.

On Monday night, he blanked the San Diego Padres on two hits over seven innings, giving the Dodgers a 7-2 victory and preserving their one-game lead over the Braves.

Hershiser tied his season high with six strikeouts before Jack Howell's two-run homer off reliever Jim Gott spoiled Los Angeles' shutout.

Despite one of his best performances since returning to the starting rotation on May 29 after 13 months of rehabilitation, Hershiser hasn't regained complete faith in his abilities.

"I still view myself as the fifth starter, the guy they hope they get a good outing from," Hershiser said. "I had my days as an ace and I still think I have those days ahead of me. But I don't think these guys think when Orel takes the mound it's a guaranteed win or anything."

Hershiser needs to give himself more credit, say his teammates.

Said Darryl Strawberry: "He's been on a super roll for us. It's always nice to see someone like him come back like he has."

And manager Tom Lasorda said the mere presence of Hershiser in the

Associated Press

Orel Hershiser says he's not quite the Dodgers ace this year, but he's still proud of the 16-5 record LA has with him starting.

dugout is a boost. "Not only does he help the ball club pitching, he helps the ball club in many other ways," Lasorda said. "As a leader, he encourages the pitching staff. He pulls for them when he's not in the game. He's always out there trying to help the club in some way."

In Los Angeles' final game with the Braves on Sept. 21, he pitched six strong innings, giving up one run. He wasn't involved in the 2-1 decision but his outing was key in helping the Dodgers take two of three in the Dodger Stadium series.

"I think right now I'm pitching quite well and it feels real, real good to be able to contribute to the ball club," he said. "There are times when I feel like the Orel Hershiser of old and there are a lot of times when I don't look like it because I'm changing speeds a bit more often. But when I need it, the fastball's there."

As evidence of Lasorda's confidence, Hershiser will likely start Sunday in the Dodgers' season finale at San Francisco.

"I haven't been told anything but hopefully I'll get to pitch in San Francisco," he said. "Hopefully by Sunday, which would possibly be my start, we'll have finished this thing off. It would be exciting to clinch it as soon as possible, but I'll be ready to pitch."

Reds wondering about NL's White

Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Bill White's decision to make relief pitcher Norm Charlton available for an important NL West series has the Cincinnati Reds wondering.

The NL president decided Monday that Charlton can't serve part of his 7-day suspension during a three-game series against the Atlanta Braves, who trail Los Angeles by a game. Charlton didn't pitch Monday as the Braves beat Cincinnati 4-0.

Charlton said Tuesday that White's actions put him in the position of affecting next year's pennant race as well. Charlton will have two days left on the suspension, and White could make him serve it next season.

"Next year, hopefully we'll be in a pennant race," Charlton said. "If I'm unavailable and we lose a ballgame and we lose the pennant by a half-game, then what do you say? I'm not willing to take that chance. My responsibility is not to Los Angeles. It's not to Atlanta. It's to the Cincinnati Reds."

It's not the first time White's decisions have been questioned by the Reds, who've had more disciplinary dealings with him than any other NL club this year.

Charlton's suspension was the third given a Reds' player this season. His punishment was for purposely throwing at Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia and threatening to hurt him again.

White also gave fellow Nasty Boy reliever Rob Dibble a total of seven days for throwing behind a batter and for throwing a ball into the stands and hitting a grade-school teacher.

But White gave Dibble only a small fine for hitting Chicago Cubs baserunner Doug Dasenczo, and took no action against manager Lou Piniella for calling umpire Gary Darling biased. Darling later sued Piniella.

When a reporter suggested that White's latest decision seems to fit a pattern of inconsistency, Charlton said, "I'd have to agree with that."

As far as the Reds are concerned, the main issue now is the final two days of Charlton's penalty. The punishment was put on hold when Charlton appealed Sept. 16, but he chose to drop the appeal over the weekend so he wouldn't have the suspension lingering into next season. That may happen, anyway.

"Mr. White will have to make a determination on the other two days," NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney said. "Anything's possible. He could reduce it to five days or (have Charlton) serve it next season."

Charlton won't accept blame for waiting until now to drop his appeal. "It wouldn't be my fault if it gets carried over," he said. "I followed the rules and regulations set forth in the Basic Agreement to the letter. Basically, I dropped my appeal when all other avenues had been explored."

For now, the question is whether White's decision will affect this year's race.

Charlton's availability gives the Reds their full complement of Nasty Boys: Charlton, Randy Myers and Dibble. Their success last year was the main reason they won the World Series.

All three have struggled at times this year, and Charlton has had two of his worst performances this month. He gave up a decisive three-run double to the Dodgers' Darryl Strawberry in a 10-4 loss Sept. 9 — the same game in which he hit Scioscia.

Arts

Guitarist and coffee house cat Tom Nothangle conducts a benefit guitar workshop at Storm Cellar Music & Books, 521 E. Washington St., Thursday.

Benefit guitar workshop at Storm Cellar Music

Brett Ratner
Daily Iowan

Guitarists of all styles and abilities will be treated to a clinic by Tom Nothangle, one of Iowa City's most versatile musicians, in "A Night With Nothangle: 6, 10 and 12 String Guitar" at Storm Cellar Music & Books, 521 E. Washington St., on Oct. 5 at 8 p.m. The workshop is a benefit for the Free Medical Clinic.

"I'm into broadening my horizons," said Nothangle about his approach to music. "I like a guitarist who is balanced in his stylings. This is an attitude that I try to convey to my students."

In keeping with this philosophy, Nothangle's clinic will feature techniques ranging from classical, folk, flamenco, country and blues to various international styles. "World music is my big trip," said Nothangle.

"The clinic is aimed at musicians from the very advanced guitarist to people just thinking about learning the instrument," said Nothangle. "Considering the range of methods covered, I believe that even a master player could walk away having learned something new."

Nothangle's deep interest in the guitar began at age 4 after hearing classical guitar on television. This interest continued through age 10 when he first began playing.

Nothangle studied classical guitar with Nelson Amos, an Iowa City resident who now teaches at the University of Michigan. Nothangle then migrated to San Francisco and studied with Michael Loremer. Loremer is well-known in classical guitar circles. Nothangle also studied at the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music and took lessons from jazz guitarist Chris Goddard for a short time.

As Nothangle progressed as a player, his influences broadened as well. "I was dissatisfied with the classical guitarist's approach to music," said Nothangle. "I've always adhered to the philosophy of 'if it feels good, do it.' Classical guitarists tend to be only serious about classical guitar, and I believe that limits their potential as players."

Nothangle hopes that this kind of open-minded attitude prevails at his clinic. Nothangle encourages players to bring their instruments and share their knowledge. "There is no contest involved," said Nothangle. "Music is not a competitive thing. Musicians should be more supportive of each other so that we all end up better off."

The clinic is part of Storm Cellar Music & Books' Instrumental Workshop series. Advanced reservations can be obtained by calling 354-4118. Nothangle also hosts "Tom's Guitar Show" on Cable Channel 25/26 PATV and has several recordings available.

Zukerman all-Brahms program tonight at UI

Jennifer Horn
Daily Iowan

Zukerman plus Neikrug plus Brahms equals several hours of high-caliber entertainment tonight at 8 in Hancher Auditorium. World-class violinist Pinchas Zukerman, with accompanist Marc Neikrug, will present an all-Brahms program. In addition to the Hancher performance, Zukerman will conduct a master class, open to the public, at 4 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall.

Zukerman was born in 1948 in Tel Aviv, Israel, where his father taught him to play the recorder, clarinet and violin. After beginning formal violin studies at home, he came to the United States at age 14 to study at Juilliard.

His extraordinary musicianship makes him much sought-after as both a concert performer and an orchestral conductor. He has led numerous orchestras and has recently spent seven years at the podium of the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra before going to Texas to serve as principal guest conductor of the Dallas Symphony's International Summer Music Festival. He continues to lend his conducting talent to other major orchestras when he is not performing as a guest soloist.

Like Zukerman, Neikrug has more than one claim to fame. Not only is he an excellent pianist, he is also a composer in high demand. Neikrug's works have been commissioned and performed by prominent artists and ensembles around the world. He has been accompanying Zukerman for 15 years, and the two
