Gates denies skewing reports

Ruth Sinai
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Robert Gates, seeking to quell a rebellion against his nomination as CIA director, denied Thursday that he had slanted intelligence reports for political gain but acknowledged "I have to be more sensitive" to underlings.

Gates reappeared before the Senate Intelligence Committee in the wake of testimony from former and current CIA analysts that, as a high-ranking deputy, he had tailored information to pander to his bosses' anti-Soviet views and that he harshly suppressed dissent.

"I've watched and listened and read with some dismay, as well as pain and anger" the proceedings of recent days, said Gates, who joined the CIA in 1966 and rose to become its acting director for a brief time in 1987.

The crowded hearing room was still as Gates, 48, presented the case on which his nomination might hinge. Just two weeks earlier, in his first appearance, he seemed to enjoy near-solid bipartisan support, but several senators appeared to be wavering after hearing the latest criticism.

"You're not the right man at this particular time," Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., told Gates at the end of the day, saying he would not vote for him.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., considered an influential voice, said "the committee vote will be pretty close, one way or the other." Nunn said he had started out supporting Gates but now "I guess I'm in neutral."

In a methodical way, Gates — a trained analyst of Soviet affairs — listed 20 allegations and sought to disprove them. He noted that most of the criticism emanated from the CIA office which dealt in Soviet activities in the Third World.

Mel Goodman, who directed that office until 1985, was the most outspoken of three former CIA officials who criticized Gates in testimony Wednesday. In addition, the committee released sworn statements from three current analysts, echoing the same theme, as Gates appeared Thursday. One said the "vast majority" of analysts and managers at the agency believed Gates "subverted the intelligence process."

Among the critics' allegations was that Gates, seeking to impose his own views and those of his late boss, William Casey, systematically slanted analyses to reflect a far greater Soviet role in the Third World — including Iran, Afghanistan and Nicaragua — than was the case.

Gates cited examples to the contrary and said he had always encouraged analysts — even junior ones — to present other points of view.

He traced some of the rancor against him to his demanding personality and tough style. He told the panel that three days after taking over the CIA's analysis operation in 1982, he assembled the analysts and told them that much of their product was "flabby" and "verbose," reflecting "complacent thinking" and "arrogance."

County supervisors deny liquor license

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors voted to deny a liquor license renewal to Penn Way Park in North Liberty, Iowa, until building permit violations for construction begun last spring are corrected.

According to Supervisor Stephen Lacina, the Johnson County Building Department told Penn Way when it applied for a building permit last fall that its project did not conform with county parking and set-back requirements.

When Penn Way began construction this spring, the Building Department told it to stop, Lacina said. The county auditor's office reported that Penn Way's liquor license expired Sept. 28, 1991.

12th Democrat supports Thomas

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate majority for Clarence Thomas' confirmation to the Supreme Court appeared to solidify Thursday as formal debate began on whether to put the conservative appeals judge on the nation's highest court.

Sen. Wyche Fowler of Georgia became the 12th Democrat to say he would vote for Thomas, who appeared to have 53 votes for confirmation on the first of four days of Senate debate.

Opponents suffered another setback when one of three pro-choice Republicans they had hoped to win over said he would vote for Thomas. Delivering a lukewarm endorsement, Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, called Thomas a "competent jurist."

Key witness to testify against Noriega

MIAMI (AP) — Prosecutors have a witness potentially so damaging to Manuel Noriega that drug agents call him their "smart bomb" in the deposed Panamanian leader's trial, sources close to the case said Thursday.

Convicted trafficker Gabriel Taboada has told investigators he was present in Medellin, Colombia, in 1983 when Noriega sealed his drug protection pact with cartel chief Pablo Escobar by accepting a half of French prostitutes and a suitcase bulging with up to $500,000.

Taboada is important because he can put Noriega and cartel leaders in a face-to-face meeting.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Gov. Bill Clinton joined the field of Democratic presidential candidates Thursday promising to reinvent government to protect a middle class he said President Bush ignores.

"We must turn this country around and get it working again. We've got to fight for middle-class Americans for a change," Clinton said in speech interrupted by applause more than 50 times.

Clinton is the fifth major Democratic candidate to join the race for the 1992 nomination. All the contenders cast the federal government as shortsighted and gridlocked, blind to the middle class.

"The change I seek, and the change we must all seek, isn't liberal or conservative. It's different and both," Clinton said. "Out here, the people don't much care about the labels: left or right or liberal or conservative — all the other words that have made our politics a substitute for action."

Clinton, who made himself a standard-bearer for the moderate wing of the party in his role as chairman of the centrist Democratic Leadership Council, used the phrase "middle class" 12 times in his 32-minute speech.

He declared himself a candidate outside the Old State House in downtown Little Rock at a rally that drew about 3,000 cheering supporters. The building was the site of Arkansas' 1861 vote to secede from the union.

SOCIAL WORK

Students planning to resist potential program phase-out

Jeanette Ockenfels talked clearly and deliberately for 15 minutes about how she can now make her own phone calls and do her own banking.

"My social worker helped me," she explained.

Ockenfels spoke to 25 UI social work students who gathered Thursday night to express their concerns over a possible phasing out of the undergraduate degree program in social work.

"Somehow the Strategic Planning Committee doesn't think we're worthwhile," Rachel Stover, president of the Student Undergraduate Social Work Association, said. "So the message going out is that the needs of the people we serve, the elderly, the handicapped, are not worthy of help, not worthy of educated help."

The social work program is one of many under consideration and review by the Strategic Planning Steering Group.

The students discussed their strategy to defend the social work program, which may include a letter-writing campaign to the Department of Social Work, the UI and state administrations, and information displays around campus and at the Union.

UI junior Laura Jacobs listed the benefits social workers bring to the Iowa City and UI communities such as the 27,000 hours a year of volunteer work performed by social work students.

"The feeling around Iowa City will change without us," she said. She said organizations like the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, ICARE, the Ronald McDonald House and the Crisis Center all use UI social work students.

Jerry Beckman, a social work student, said he was angry when Gov. Terry Branstad called for increased volunteerism last September to help ease statewide budget cuts.

"Volunteer? Try 27,000 hours," Beckman said.

Jacobs also pointed out social work students bring in more than $98,000 in tuition to the UI.

She emphasized the 8-11 hours required by the social work program that is registered as field work and does not require instructor supervision or university funding.

IC firefighters focus on kids during Fire Prevention Week

William Pepper
Daily Iowan

Every year during the second week in October, the Iowa City Fire Department spreads the word about fire prevention.

Sunday marks the beginning of Fire Prevention Week 1991 in Iowa City. This year's theme is "Fire won't wait — Plan your escape!"

According to acting Lt. Lance Platz of the Iowa City Fire Department Public Education Division, fire prevention week is held each year to commemorate the great Chicago fire of Oct. 9, 1871. Over 250 people died, 100,000 were left homeless and more than 17,400 buildings were destroyed in the blaze.

The City of Iowa City Proclamation on Fire Prevention Week reports that a home fire occurred every 100 minutes in the United States in 1990. About 4,000 fire deaths — roughly 80 percent of the total fire deaths in the United States in 1990 — occurred in the home. Also, children under the age of 6 and adults aged 65 or over have the highest risk of dying in home fires.

The proclamation encourages fire safety and states that "Planning and rehearsing home fire escape

IC 'CARNIVAL'

Michael Williams/Daily Iowan

Parkgoers approach the apex of the Ferris wheel in the City Park amusement park Sunday afternoon.

City Park rides entertain local children

Lyle Drollinger, owner of the amusement rides and conductor of the miniature train, has been in business here for 23 years.

Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

"Nice day for a train ride," Lyle Drollinger yells above the rumbling engine of his miniature train. Better than nice — the sun's shining, children are laughing and Drollinger is giving his rendition of " Chattanooga Choo Choo " from the conductor's seat.

At 68, Drollinger has owned and operated the amusement rides at City Park in Iowa City since 1968 and has been around the carnival biz for 59 years. For 50 cents passengers get five rounds, and if they're lucky Drollinger will recap his favorite puns from "Saturday Night Live."

Drollinger likes to reminisce about his years spent around carnivals, and some say his expertise merits a degree in "amusementology."

His father, Charlie, started the business with one miniature train in 1932 after the family moved to Kalona, Iowa, when Drollinger was 9. Charlie didn't stop until he was 92.

"The rides have been through a lot — we're on our third train and our second carousel," Drollinger said, pointing from his conductor's seat. In his blue polka-dot hat and overalls, he acts both as train conductor and tour guide.

The train has racked up 2,400 miles since April, which Drollinger said is about average. "We could have been to San Francisco by now and started back," he laughed.

The park has gone through various changes since he began conducting, Drollinger said.

"Over here used to be the petting zoo, and the aviary close by. Yep, the park used to have a stage, too," he said.

Drollinger took his interest in carnival rides on the road, traveling for 10 years, setting up and tearing down rides throughout 10 states.

A few of the men he employed on the road still work for him.

"About seven of us are on social security," he said. "They worked for me for a long time — well, I should say with me," he laughed. "I'm not a very tough boss."

Next to the ticket booth are a carousel, car ride, airplane ride and Ferris wheel. They're scaled down to tyke size for toddler and preschool passengers, but parents can still squeeze into the Ferris wheel, carousel and train beside their youngsters.

The rides' brightly painted designs are created by Verla Becker, Drollinger's business associate for the last decade. She picks up carousel horses when she and Drollinger travel out East, and paints and sells them out of their home.

Becker has plans for the two of them to open a store in Iowa City to market her carousel horses and other items by artisans in the area.

Retirement is something Drollinger and Becker talk about, but they haven't had any offers to buy the rides so far.

"I don't know what I'd do summers if we retired from this," he said.

The children who nervously handed Drollinger their tickets before the ride jump out of the train and, prodded by their parents, yell "thank you" in his direction. He smiles, waves and heads off for a short coffee break.

Becker expressed concerns about whether the city would renew the lease to another owner.

"The city hasn't been too crazy about this; they think we're carnival people. We're not — the carnival is barkers and girlie tents. This is for children."

That's what Drollinger says keeps him going. "We don't make a lot of money, but it's worth it to see the faces of the little kids."

enough that nothing surprises me anymore," Harkin said. "People have to decide for themselves how they campaign and everything. They're welcome to come to Iowa."

Harkin has a weekend appearance in Des Moines at a health-care conference where he's scheduled to be joined by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, who formally entered the Democratic presidential field Thursday.

In a telephone conference with Iowa reporters, Harkin said he wasn't sure who would compete with him in his home state but insisted, "I feel confident that I am going to be the nominee of the Democratic Party."

Since his announcement last month, Harkin has generally been lumped with Kerrey and Clinton as the first tier of Democratic candidates.

He lost little time agreeing with that assessment.

"I think it's a measure of the power of my message that I have gone from last place to being in the first tier," Harkin said. "I feel that my message is resonating. Yeah, I feel like I'm in the first tier."

Harkin unfazed by rivals' campaigning in Iowa

Mike Glover

DES MOINES — Sen. Tom Harkin on Thursday said he isn't surprised Democratic presidential rival Bob Kerrey plans to campaign for Iowa's precinct caucuses and said others may follow.

"You don't need a visa to come to Iowa," Harkin said. "We've got an organization. I'm not taking Iowa for granted. I'm going to campaign there. I'll just have to grind it out."

Kerrey joined the Democratic presidential field this week and during an Iowa City appearance said he planned to campaign heavily in Iowa.

Other candidates and Kerrey's own aides have discounted the impact of Iowa's February caucuses, saying Harkin is certain to win. They are pointing to New Hampshire as the real beginning of the campaign.

Harkin has hired a former Jesse Jackson staffer to assemble a field organization in Iowa and said that was done with the assumption he'd have opposition.

IC bar owners appreciate occasional police rounds

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

Campus bars often attract underage students trying to get served and people of any age occasionally having a little too much to drink.

In order to keep these problems to a minimum, Iowa City police officers make occasional rounds through the bars. According to police Capt. Patrick Harney, the Police Department tries to make it through every bar in Iowa City at one time or another.

"It's up to the bars to check their own, and we periodically check the bars. We try to hit all of them sooner or later," Harney said.

Police Sgt. Matt Johnson emphasized Harney's point that the police make sure they reach every bar.

"We don't focus on any particular bar or district. We make sure we check the outlying bars as well as downtown. If we didn't, it wouldn't be fair," Johnson said.

Bar owners and managers seem to agree that the police are fair in their searches.

Mark Eggleston, owner of The Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St., said that although some may feel the police pick on a certain bar, that's not the case.

"I think they do a good job mixing. I don't know how they decide, but I think they do a good job," Eggleston said.

Eggleston also added that the police aren't predictable in their walk-throughs. "We might see them four times a night on a Friday and Saturday, and then not see them for awhile," he said.

Jim Bell, owner of the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., also appreciates the job the police do.

"I welcome them. . . I think it's a sign of the police being out on the street and closer to the community instead of in cars. It's something I'd like to see more of," Bell said.

Tony Arp, manager of The Air-liner, 22 S. Clinton St., agreed that the police are only helping the bars.

"It's very good; it's doing us a service. We have doormen and managers, but there are still some individuals in here who get sobered up when police walk in, and that's better," he said.

Arp added that the police help the bar to make sure everyone drinking is of age.

"We're a 19-20 bar and we check everyone, but it's hard to tell sometimes with fake IDs," Arp said.

Mike Porter, owner of One-Eyed Jake's, 18-20 S. Clinton St., said he doesn't mind the police coming in to check IDs but doesn't like it when they come into bars to take a breathalyzer test.

"It's their job. If they're coming in to look for minors, that doesn't bother me. If it's for breathalyzers, that bugs me. I know of instances where they've gone into bars and arrested people for public intoxic," Porter said.

Bell said the Deadwood has had very little problems with the police, and he attributes that to being careful.

"We don't have problems here. We haven't had a fight in two years, be cut off and we cut them off sooner than other bars," he said.

Students urged to nominate favorite TA for award

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

If you've got a favorite TA who has inspired your academic career and started your mental wheels turning, you can give your guru a hug and just graduate . . . or you can nominate him or her for a $1,000 award.

Nominations for the 1991 Outstanding Teaching Assistant Awards are being accepted until Oct. 25.

The Iowa Council on Teaching started the awards in 1987 with four TAs. This year 55 TAs from all academic disciplines will each be awarded $1,000 and a certificate.

The Council on Teaching considers a variety of criteria when determining a winner including how the TA's teaching methods and involvement with individual students outside the classroom have influenced students.

Hassime Traore, one of last year's winners, encouraged students to nominate a TA if they felt he or she really deserved the recognition.

"Getting the award helped me," Traore said. "It gave me encouragement and told me I was doing well. It also helped me do better, to know I'm appreciated."

TAs can be nominated by students, faculty colleagues, departmental executive officers and deans. Four or five statements of support from students are required.

But Al Beardsley, the UISA Graduate and Professional Student Senate executive officer, said it is especially important for students to nominate their TAs.

"Many nominations come from the departments, and that's not the place it should be coming from," he said. "Nominate someone you think deserves it."

Professor Norbert Malik, who chairs the Council on Teaching, said being chosen as an outstanding teaching assistant helps TAs.

"The $1,000 has obvious benefits," he said, "but everyone appreciates being recognized."

Malik said there is a tendency to take for granted good instructors.

"This is a way to get everyone involved in backing quality education and show their concern," he said.

Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs Sara Wolfson said even if a TA is not given the monetary and certificate award, it is still worth nominating a favorite.

"Even if they don't win, to know someone's spent the time is gratifying," she said.

Applications are available in the Council on Teaching office in room 114 of Jessup Hall.

Group hopes to promote cultures and languages of Eastern Europe

Loren Keller
Daily Iowan

Eastern European students are expanding the parameters of cultural diversity at the UI by forming a group that hopes to find a place within the Iowa City community as well as the university.

The Association of Eastern European Students and Friends of Eastern Europe was the idea of Anelia Pimitrova and Kirilka Stavreva, both newly arrived English graduate students from Bulgaria. The 30-member group will focus on drawing more attention to Eastern European languages and cultures.

"The United States is becoming a lot more interested in Eastern Europe so why waste the potential of the Eastern European students we have here?" asked Pimitrova.

The association plans to sponsor a panel discussion about women in Eastern Europe countries by the end of October and hopes to institute UI summer courses that will concentrate on Eastern European cultures.

Gaining the support of some Eastern European students has been difficult, Stavreva said. Years of "enforced organization" in their home countries have left many people suspicious of any sort of group activity and therefore reluctant to join the association.

"They feel threatened. They seem to think there's somebody behind it. I don't know anybody more paranoid than Eastern Europeans," Stavreva said, though she believes a certain amount of suspicion is justified.

Pimitrova described the "paranoia" of Eastern Europeans as something difficult for native Americans to understand.

"Jobs and education in some countries depended on a person making compromises," Pimitrova said. "People weren't allowed to say or even think of certain things."

Although some changes have occurred, the Iron Curtain is a memory that is still very much alive, Stavreva said.

"There are other ways to stop people from communicating. The Iron Curtain may be substituted by another kind of curtain," she said.

Author: Animals can lead to discovery of truth

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

Sit down and close your eyes. Now imagine an animal inside of you. What animal do you see? An eagle, a bear, a horse? What is this animal like? Is this animal anything like you? Have you encountered this animal recently?

The animal that you see may lead to the discovery of your "true nature," the "greatest spiritual truth." According to David Carson, co-author of "Medicine Cards: The Discovery of Power Through the Ways of Animals," by understanding our relationship with animals we can gain wisdom about ourselves and the world around us.

"Western people look at the world in a linear way," Carson said. "We always think the world is going somewhere; we are forever trying to achieve some end."

American Indians, on the other hand, those who understand our "symbiosis" with animals and nature, see time as circular.

"Things are all right just the way they are; this is just the way things are intended," Carson said.

Carson, a former member of the UI Writers' Workshop, will make several appearances in Iowa City in the next week:

■ Today he will present a slide show, "Animal Mysteries," at 7 p.m. at the Unitarian Universalist Society Church, 10 S. Gilbert St.

■ Monday, Oct. 7, he will sign copies of his book at Vortex Crystal & Gem, 218 E. Washington St., from 4 to 7 p.m.

■ A weekend workshop, "Animal Mysteries: How to Find Self Empowerment Through Your Own Personal Power Animals," is planned for Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 12 and 13, from noon to 5 p.m. at Old Brick, 26 E. Market St. Rhonda Flemming, metaphysician and poet, will also be at the workshop.

Carson explained that animal readings have been a tradition of American Indians throughout history. The shaman, or medicine man, of Indian tribes is the keeper of the human spirit, the healer of unbalanced relationships with animals and nature.

Carson's Indian heritage (his mother is Choctaw) introduced him to animal readings, and in December 1987 he and co-author Jamie Sams introduced Animal Medicine Cards and a 223-page book explaining the uses and interpretation of the cards.

Each of the 44 cards pictures a different animal surrounded by a medicine wheel, or mandala. During a reading, four cards are picked randomly from the deck and placed in each cardinal point of the compass. The interpretation of the animals chosen takes into account the characteristics and habits of each creature according to Indian lore and legends. These qualities and powers are similar to the powers that humans possess.

"We needed a quick and simple way to introduce people to animal readings," Carson said. "These cards appeal to anyone with any sensitivity and insight."

More than 300,000 copies have been sold, "and it's still going strong," Carson said.

"The cards try to unite us with the Great One," Carson said. "They show us that the world is not separate, but all one."

Elvis' music, movies topic of new course

Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

Elvis is alive and well and living in Iowa City, or at least within the UI course schedule.

Beginning this spring, the UI will offer a course, open to all students, focusing on the singer's influences on music and the origins of those influences.

The class, American Popular Arts: Elvis as Anthology, is the brainchild of African-American studies department Chairman Peter Nazareth. Nazareth says he has a longstanding interest in the man many call the King of Rock 'n' Roll.

Nazareth, who grew up in Uganda, says he first heard Elvis' records in 1957 when they first became available in that country. It wasn't until coming to the United States in 1973, however, that his interest expanded beyond listening.

"It was only after I came to this country that I had access to songs of his other people had copied," he said. "I listened to these copies originally for myself, but then I began to play them for others."

It was one such person — a UI assistant professor of African-American studies, John Walton — who suggested Nazareth teach a course on the subject. Walton, a popular figure at the UI, died in 1988, and Nazareth is dedicating the course to his memory.

Nazareth said the course, which will be offered through the Departments of American Studies and African-American Studies, will aim at a careful examination of Elvis' music and its influences.

"There aren't enough people really listening to his music. Too many just make generalizations about it without really hearing it," he said. "Elvis was consciously influenced by many different singers and that led to his having many different personalities."

Nazareth will have his class study the singer's recordings and movies, as well as relevant books. The professor said although he knows people may scoff at the idea, he believes Elvis' movies were important.

"A lot of movies he made were good movies or at least interesting. They weren't all bad," Nazareth said. "It is perhaps overlooked to the degree to which these movies brought Elvis to the rest of the world beyond America."

Nazareth said the course will also look at various conceptions about the singer such as the idea of "Elvis as Jesus" and questions about where the singer got his music.

But what about the most important question? Does he think Elvis is still alive?

"Somebody who had taught a course on rock 'n' roll, who didn't think Elvis is alive, came to see me the other day," Nazareth said. "But he had just seen a TV show on the subject, and he was now convinced he is alive."

"I told him, 'Elvis loved performing. If he's still alive, why would he stay out of performing so long?' He said, 'That's just it — he's disguised as an Elvis impersonator.'"

CLINTON

Clinton said Republicans have tried to divide blacks and whites.

"In the shadow of this great building, all of us know all about race-baiting," he said. "They've used that old tool on us for decades now. And I want to tell you one thing, I understand this tactic and I will not let them get away with it in 1992."

Clinton said the challenges facing Arkansas, one of the nation's poorest states, and the rest of the country "not be met without new leadership in Washington to right the nation's course."

"Here in Arkansas we worked very hard against very steep odds to create more jobs and educate our people, and every one of us in our own way tried to be one of the 1,000 points of light," Clinton said, alluding to Bush's program to encourage volunteerism in America.

"But I can tell you my friends... where there is no national vision, no national leadership, no direction, 1,000 points of light leaves a lot of darkness."

His biggest round of applause came when he voiced support for abortion rights, saying Bush was "more than willing to make it a crime for women to exercise their right to choose."

Clinton, still boyish-looking at 45 despite graying hair and a slight paunch, has been a rising political star since the 1970s. He was the nation's youngest governor at age 32 when elected to his first term in 1978. Now he's the nation's longest-serving governor.

Voters threw Clinton out of office in 1980, but he began a string of successful campaigns in 1982 after apologizing for the arrogance of his first term.

In Washington, Marlin Fitzwater, spokesman for the man Clinton wants to replace, welcomed the latest addition to the Democratic field. "The more the merrier," Bush's spokesman said.

The governor praised Bush in the area of foreign affairs, but said "we cannot build a safe and secure world unless we can be strong at home."

"I refuse to be part of a generation that celebrates the death of communism abroad with the loss of the American dream at home," he said.

Clinton provided a list of promises of what he would do if elected.

"In the Clinton administration," he vowed, "students and parents and teachers will get a real education president."

He promised to offer a plan for affordable, quality health care in his first year as president and pledged to rid welfare rolls of freeloaders, penalize kids who skip school and stiffen child support enforcement.

Clinton resigned from the Democratic Leadership Council in August to prepare for his campaign.

SOCIAL WORK

ing. "And that's straight revenue," she said.

According to Assistant Professor Wayne Johnson, cutting the social work program would be "sexist and racist." He brought a stack of figures to defend this conclusion.

His calculations showed 84.2 percent of programs being considered for phasing out, including social work, dental hygiene, home economics and library science, are traditionally dominated by females. He added that many social programs primarily benefit women.

"That's sexism," he said.

Johnson also said UI social work does better than the College of Liberal Arts as a whole in minority enrollment.

"To say nothing of social work clientele," he said.

Johnson said the UI would not be fulfilling its stated goal of increasing diversity on campus by cutting the social work program.

UI sophomore Melanie Berte said she is not yet in the social work program but would like to be.

"But it looks like I might have to go out of state," she said.

Berte said she has already called Ohio State University about their social work program.

"They said I wasn't the first person to call from Iowa," she said. "It makes Iowa look really bad."

Berte said she was angry that the UI administration would consider phasing out social work.

"Look at Jeanette," she said. "Without us, she'd be in an institution. I'm so mad now I could scream."

the devastating effects of fire."

Platz said firefighters will be visiting each of the elementary schools in Iowa City to talk to students about fire safety and how to prevent fires in the home.

"We encourage and enjoy giving fire prevention talks," Platz said.

Fire Marshal Andy Rocca added that the talks are aimed at youngsters in kindergarten through second grade. He said that, among other things, a puppet show and a coloring book on fire prevention featuring Herky the Hawk and each of the district schools will be offered to the students.

"It ends up being more of a kid's show," Platz added.

Christian Pauley, the artist who created the pictures for the coloring book, will be recognized at the Hoover Elementary presentation at 9 a.m. Monday.

Platz said that "the kids are very attentive" and added that parents often comment to the firefighters about how impressed they are that kids have learned so much about fire prevention.

"It really does a lot of times get mom and dad involved in fire prevention," Platz commented.

Platz said the firefighters enjoy meeting with the public and like the exposure and feedback they receive.

"We invite and encourage any kind of activity we can get involved in. We get involved in it and excited about it," he said.

Rocca added, "We entered into a joint venture with the district, and we are very pleased with the results."

The National Fire Protection Association has been the official sponsor of Fire Prevention Week since it was proclaimed by President Warren Harding in 1922.

SPACE STATION

NASA scientists to orbit rare white elephant

Congress seems determined to waste our tax money on a $40 billion orbiting white elephant in outer space. The "white elephant" is the proposed space station, and it is time for Americans to remind our representatives in Washington that there are better ways to spend this money.

Unfortunately, the momentum seems to be moving in the wrong direction. The U.S. House of Representatives voted Wednesday to spend $2 billion on the project, giving President Bush everything that he had asked for on this "priority."

The space station is expected at this point to cost about $40 billion. If the record of the space shuttle is any indication, we can expect the costs to run several times higher than expected, while the results will be nowhere nearly as rewarding as promised.

If there is one thing we have learned over the last 30 years, it is that some of our most important scientific research can be conducted most safely and inexpensively by unmanned spacecraft.

At a time when the Bush administration is pleading empty pockets as an excuse for failing to address pressing domestic concerns, it seems outrageously inappropriate to be pushing for this cash cow for aerospace contractors.

The issue is not whether we should have space exploration. Space exploration extends our knowledge of the universe, provides important information on our environment and climate, and offers a variety of practical rewards in fields like meteorology and agriculture.

The question is how to conduct space exploration. If there is one thing we have learned over the last 30 years, it is that some of our most important scientific research can be conducted most safely and inexpensively by unmanned spacecraft.

One of the great problems of this proposed space station is that it will crowd out funds for more valuable and productive space research.

As Rep. Bob Traxler, D-Mich., has pointed out, "If you're going to fund the space station, then some programs of NASA have to be eliminated or reduced or stretched out."

It's time to think seriously about how much this is going to cost and who will have to pay for it, and then kill this proposed orbiting boondoggle.

UIAA wants to hear from speakers on all sides

To the Editor:

I feel compelled to respond to the Oct. 2 DI editorial by Mr. Nazim Aziz Gokdemir ("Horner and the UI: brothers in arms?").

People of the UI community, both the UI Alumni Association and Hills Bank and Trust Company, were pleased to extend an invitation to Gen. Charles Horner to deliver this fall's Distinguished Alumni Lecture. The majority of the American people do "believe that Horner is a great American hero . . . that Operation Desert Storm was fueled primarily by the quest for democracy." Gen. Charles Horner has, in the eyes of many, distinguished himself.

Should not the majority of the people who hold this belief have access to a key figure in the operation? We know that there are those who do not believe in what was done or accomplished in the gulf war, but even those, I would suggest, owe themselves the opportunity to hear an opposing view.

The UI Alumni Association is pleased to now work with the University Lecture Series Committee to bring speakers of all types to this community. In a university environment, these are the kinds of speakers we should hear — those with whom we agree, as well as those with whom we might not agree.

Gov. Terry Branstad as a distinguished alumnus? He is the governor of the state. My sense is that many, many Iowans agree with what the governor has done with state government of late, even if those of us here in Iowa City do not. Should we listen to why he has done what he has done? I think that might be a good idea.

Randall Meyer, former vice president with Exxon? Why not? His perspective on oil and business and the world before an audience at his alma mater might give us all a perspective on these things that we might not get any other way. Again, not a bad idea.

As the French writer Voltaire said more than two centuries ago, "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

The UI Alumni Association still clings to this important time-tested principle.

Richard Emerson
executive director

Not that anyone needs to feel bad about getting her/his picture taken. "Big Butt alert! Big Butt Alert! Big Bitchin' Bodysurfin' Buffalo Butt alert!"

Photography was invented by the same people who are in charge of producing answering machines that make you sound like there is a freshly cut Chaquita banana stuck up your nose when you hear your own message. Photography is a technology designed to get people to feel bad about themselves by making them appear fat, flat and pasty. The diet soft drink industry is predicated on this fact. Just see what your average supermodel looks like in person. She weighs about 24 pounds — half of which is devoted to surgically enhanced, over-inflated breasts — and has cheek bones with the sort of prominence generally associated with major, naturally occurring landmarks of the American Southwest.

And there is a second major obstacle to getting a photograph of yourself that is roughly humanoid. I refer to that modern day derivation of the rack: the photo session.

I want you to think back to your yearbook picture so that you may have some idea of how I feel. You come and sit down underneath two silver umbrellas that were obviously stolen from a lunar landing module. Some cheezy guy stands in front of you. He has the sort of sense of humor that has kept "Family Circus" in business all these years. Early in his childhood he realized that no one was laughing at his jokes. Not even politely. Not even his mother. He brainstorms for a profession involving a captive audience. Dentist, humor columnist, police officer and history professor run through his mind until it hits him like a thunderbolt: yearbook portrait artist!

He is the sort of man that loves his job. Like G. Gordon Liddy. First he makes you dangle your left leg over your right knee, callously endangering any chance you have of making a Levi's Docker commercial. Then he makes you lean forward until you feel just about ready to fall off the Official Yearbook Guy's Radically Unstable Sitting Stool. Finally, he makes you rotate your upper torso until you gain a deep personal understanding of life as a salted pretzel. "So, you got a girlfriend?"

I do not say "none of your business, sailor boy." I know it's within this man's power to produce pictures of me that look like I am wanted for armed mail fraud. So I smile just for him.

"Oh, you smilin' cause you have one or cause you don't? Hee hee hee, ho ho ho."

No, because I am visualizing putting your head through the wall. "Good question." I smile again.

He takes the large, metallic object he is going to capture my image for time immemorial and sticks its lens in my face. I am sitting in a position that could only be comfortable if I was made out of the finest Italian marble. I am not.

"Act naturally."

I think the best example of someone trying to act naturally is William Shatner.

So as I sat there last weekend trying to look pleasant and natural, I realized that it was a lost cause. Especially since the first thing that happened as the camera zoomed in on me is that I began to feel my facial bone structure beginning to pulse and throb and project directly out from my head toward the camera. I tried to smile as I wondered what extraterrestrial parasite was going to chew its way out of my head.

When one tries to smile naturally, one looks like one is constipated. Just look at George Bush. And of course, it is hard to smile when your ears feel like they are made of lead. I prayed to God that someone would put the various muscles in my face in the proper place. No one did.

Thus the picture you will see of me, peering out at you maniacally, may seem to resemble one of those people for which the Prozac has not worked as well as everyone had hoped. And I guess what I am saying is "Do not be alarmed."

Come down to the newsroom and meet me in person. I'm sure you'll be struck with the intellectual refinement of my soft features forever battling the raw, brooding Brando-esque sexuality for supremacy of my most noble visage. But please, no pictures.

Law professors on probation for insensitivity

The District of Columbia School of Law has resumed its schedule of classes for the academic year. The only publicly funded law school in the district, its mission is to encourage the admission of minorities, the poor, women and older students. And its further charge is to represent — through its clinical programs — those minorities and the poor who need legal help.

A letter to prospective applicants emphasizes that "we at DCSL believe that public service is the best and highest use of educated minds."

Two members of the faculty, Robert Catz and Thomas Mack, have devoted much of their careers to public service law. Catz has spent five years with the Migrant Legal Action program and the Legal Aid Society of Omaha, Neb., as well as having done significant advocacy work in federal courts of appeal and before the Supreme Court. Last year, he was responsible for the deinstitutionalization of patients at the Forest Haven facility for the mentally ill in Laurel, Md.

Tom Mack has been director of legal services at the Office of Economic Opportunity as well as having worked with the Chicago Legal Aid Bureau, among other public interest organizations. Last year, he won a $750,000 judgment in a case involving an attack on 10 prisoners in Lorton Prison (where all Washington, D.C., criminals are housed) by guards there. This is not an easy kind of action to win.

Yet the dean of the District of Columbia School of Law, William Robinson, told me that on returning to their classes this fall, Catz and Mack are on "a kind of probation with some segments of the student organizations. Last year, he won a $750,000 judgment in a case involving an attack on 10 prisoners in Lorton Prison (where all Washington, D.C., criminals are housed) by guards there. This is not an easy kind of action to win.

What did Catz and Mack do? They represented the "wrong" client.

Finally, Catz and Mack agreed to defend the student.

Most of the black students at the District of Columbia Law School felt, as one open letter put it, that the two professors had "shown an insensitivity to the law school community as well as the clients we serve."

In another open letter, a student accused the professors of "making a politically incorrect statement" because McGuire's attack on affirmative action was "contrary to the mission of the (District of Columbia School of Law)."

At a meeting of students, faculty and the accused professors — reported by Sandra Torry in The Washington Post — Mack told a largely hostile audience that "there is a great danger (to us . . . when

HAITI

Politicians believe U.S. pressure can end coup

Kevin Noblet
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haitian politicians said Thursday they welcome international pressure on the army to restore President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power. But they warned against military intervention.

Aristide told reporters in Washington he believed pressure from the United States and its allies will save his country from a small gang trying to kill democracy. White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the coup that ousted Haiti's first freely elected president "will not succeed."

There were no signs of military moves to restore Aristide, a leftist priest, to office, and nations supporting his return appeared content to rely on economic and diplomatic sanctions to pressure the Haitian army.

The capital was quiet Thursday, and fewer soldiers were on the street, although an apparently nervous military issued an order banning street demonstrations. More than 100 people are thought to have died in street clashes following Monday's ouster of the president.

Three days after the coup, there appeared to be no government in place and it was unclear how the military intended to establish one.

Brig. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the army's provisional commander-in-chief, said Wednesday that military leaders do not want power but that Aristide had abused his. Cedras appeared to be pushing for Parliament to keep Aristide out of office and hold new elections.

Political leaders said nothing had been decided on how to proceed. Several who have spoken out against the coup praised economic and diplomatic pressure on Haiti, but they spoke against military force as an option.

They were concerned by a comment made by President Bush Wednesday that left open the possibility of intervention by "a multinational force of some sort" under the aegis of the Organization of American States.

At a meeting in Washington, the OAS agreed early Thursday to impose sanctions on Haiti, one of the world's poorest nations, if democratic rule is not immediately restored. It said it would send a delegation to Haiti to demand Aristide's restoration.

"Before coming, the OAS delegation must make clear whether a multinational armed force is envisioned. If it is, they will have trouble finding people to talk to," said Marc Bazin, a runner-up in last year's presidential elections.

Bazin, a conservative and former World Bank official, was the first Haitian politician to call publicly for Aristide's return.

Sen. Serge Gilles, a socialist who also called for Aristide's return, said talks with the OAS would be out of the question if there was any chance of armed intervention.

"We are adult enough to go to the negotiating table ourselves to find a solution to our problem," he said.

More people ventured out in Port-au-Prince on Thursday, but the usually bustling capital of 1 million was far from normal. Some market stalls were selling wares, but most shops remained closed and the gaily painted "tap-tap" buses and taxis stayed off the streets.

Aristide urged his supporters to avoid violence. "We can be always in the street if it's necessary, but always according to law without any kind of violence," he said before leaving Washington.

"With the support of the international community, there is no doubt we will be able to save democracy in Haiti," he said.

He was to speak later to the U.N. Security Council in New York.

Defense Department spokesman Pete Williams said the United States had no interest in using military force to put Aristide back in office. He also said he did not think an evacuation of Americans or other foreigners would be necessary.

The U.S. Embassy said it was advising the 7,500 or more Americans here to observe a 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew.

Union Carbide's immunity revoked in new judgment on Bhopal case

The Connecticut-based company faces criminal charges for the deaths of 3,800 people.

Barleen Fisher
Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — The Supreme Court today upheld a $70 million settlement but ordered new criminal proceedings against Union Carbide Corp. in the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster, which killed more than 3,800 people.

The five-judge panel lifted the criminal immunity granted the Danbury, Conn.-based company and its Indian subsidiary for the world's deadliest industrial disaster.

It also frees up the money, already paid by Union Carbide Corp., for distribution to victims and their families.

Under terms of the 1989 settlement, all criminal proceedings were dropped, including a charge of culpable homicide against former Union Carbide Chairman Warren Anderson.

In its unanimous decision, the Supreme Court said "The quashing of the criminal proceedings was not justified. ... It is a matter of importance that offenses alleged in the context of a disaster of such gravity and magnitude should not remain uninvestigated."

A copy of the 164-page judgment, which has not yet been released, was seen by The Associated Press.

Critics have argued that the settlement was too low and that Union Carbide should be brought to trial. They allege the disaster was the result of company negligence. Union Carbide maintains it was sabotage by a disgruntled employee.

The Supreme Court issued its findings after reviewing petitions from various activist groups and individuals challenging the settlement.

"It's a very good thing that the criminal liability has been upheld. Money power will get a big jolt from this. Other multinational companies will not dare to take India for granted," said Kamini Jaiswal, an attorney representing a doctor who had petitioned the court to reject the 1989 settlement.

"Now that the civil settlement has been upheld, we hope that the funds will be distributed promptly to the victims," said Robert Berzok, the company's chief spokesman. "As we have said from the outset, Union Carbide accepts moral responsibility for the terrible tragedy."

But Berzok expressed dismay at the order for a criminal trial.

"We think that permitting criminal cases to be reopened is unfortunate," he said by telephone from Connecticut. "However, presumably the government of India now will deal with the issue of employee sabotage, and we believe that a fair hearing on this issue will establish the true cause of the disaster."

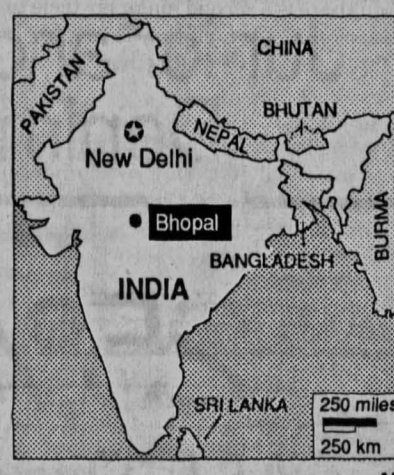

More than 2,000 people died within hours when the deadly cloud of methyl isocyanate gas leaked out of the Union Carbide pesticide plant in the central Indian city of Bhopal shortly after midnight on Dec. 3, 1984.

Some died in their sleep as the gas wafted over nearby shantytowns and across much of the city of 1 million people, 350 miles south of New Delhi.

Others tried to flee, blinded by tears and gasping for breath, only to fall to the ground dying.

The death toll rose steadily as survivors kept succumbing to respiratory problems and other ailments in the following days, months and years.

Today the government lists more than 20,000 people as seriously affected — that is, unable to perform normal work — because of their exposure to the gas.

The case wound through a series of courts as the Indian government sued for up to $3 billion from Union Carbide and from its local subsidiary, Union Carbide of India, Ltd. Finally, all cases were consolidated before the Supreme Court, the highest in India.

On Feb. 14, 1989, the court vowed to end the legal wrangling and ordered Union Carbide to pay $470 million in "full and final settlement" for the gas leak. But like all "final settlements" in India, the agreement was subject to judicial review.

Union Carbide, granted simultaneous immunity from all future prosecution, quickly deposited the settlement with the court. But distribution of the money to Bhopal survivors was delayed pending the judicial review.

The 1989 settlement was made while the government of the late prime minister, Rajiv Gandhi, was in power.

South African wins '91 Nobel for literature

Laurinda Keys
Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Nadine Gordimer, whose searing portrayals of human relationships in the racial maelstrom of South Africa were denounced as unpatriotic by her own government, won the 1991 Nobel Prize in literature Thursday. She was the first woman in 25 years to win the award.

The Swedish Academy, which awarded the prize, said Gordimer's novels and stories, combining literary artistry and a strong anti-apartheid message, have been of "very great benefit to humanity." The prize is worth about $1 million.

Gordimer, 67, who is white, told reporters in New York that she writes about race and morality because "it's being lived by the people around me. ... This kind of situation naturally fascinates me."

The African National Congress, South Africa's chief anti-apartheid movement of which Gordimer is a member, hailed the award.

South Africa's Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1984, said he had telephoned Gordimer to congratulate her. "She has had this tremendous commitment and caring about people, caring about justice, and here is the world recognizing it and giving her the highest accolade that you can get," he said.

Some of Gordimer's works, which include 10 novels and more than 200 short stories, were banned in the past by the white-minority government. But she refused to leave her homeland, once telling an interviewer that "to go into exile is to lose your place in the world."

Nadine Gordimer, a South African novelist who has been a strong critic of apartheid and an outspoken advocate of black majority rule in her homeland, won the 1991 Nobel Prize in literature Thursday.

Africa today. Her most recent novel, published in 1990, is "My Son's Story," about a married black man who falls in love with a fellow activist, a white woman. Of that novel, the academy said, "The relationship of the lovers is described with great tenderness. At the same time, the unyielding political reality constantly intrudes."

Under President F.W. de Klerk, the South African government has undertaken dramatic reforms in the past two years, ranging from the release of Nelson Mandela and other imprisoned black leaders to the opening of public amenities to all races.

The government has dismantled apartheid laws and is preparing for talks on sharing political power with the voteless black population.

Despite the sweeping changes, Gordimer said the struggle against racial injustice was far from over. "We've got to go on pressing," she told The Associated Press in a telephone interview after the prize was announced.

New Baltimore stadium named Oriole Park

BALTIMORE — The new baseball park being built for the Orioles near downtown will be called Oriole Park at Camden Yards, Gov. William Donald Schaefer announced Thursday.

The announcement, which ended weeks of speculation and an impasse between Schaefer and Orioles owner Eli Jacobs, came on WBAL radio's weekly Stateline With Gov. Schaefer program.

The name represents a compromise between the governor and Jacobs. Schaefer had pushed to name the stadium Camden Yards after the historic rail yard where the stadium is being built. Jacobs insisted the facility be called Oriole Park.

The agreement was reached during weekend talks between the two, Schaefer said.

Dravecky still feels 'phantom pain'

NEW YORK — Dave Dravecky, the former major league pitcher who had his left arm and shoulder amputated because of recurring cancer last summer, said that the day after the surgery he could not bear to look at himself in the mirror.

In an interview with Barbara Walters shown on ABC News 20-20 Friday night, Dravecky candidly described the experience. "The day after the surgery, I got up and walked into the bathroom with my gown on and I didn't want to look in the mirror. But I knew I had to. And when I did, it was a shock what I saw because it looked like the entire left side of my body was gone."

Dravecky said he experiences phantom pain. "I can still feel my hand," he told Walters. "And it's cramped. As a matter of fact, it's cramped right now and it just plays with the fingernails. It feels like someone's trying to pry them off."

Mississippi State player dies

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Rodney Stowers, a Mississippi State defensive lineman expected to be sidelined for only a matter of weeks with a broken leg, died suddenly Thursday of what doctors said was lung hemorrhaging associated with the injury.

Stowers, a 20-year-old junior, died at Golden Triangle Medical Center in nearby Columbus. MSU sports information director Joe Dier said Stowers had been admitted to Golden Triangle on Sunday so doctors could place a pin in the leg to speed healing of a fracture of his right tibia.

Coach Jackie Sherrill said earlier that coaches hoped Stowers could return to the lineup in four to six weeks.

Stowers broke his leg in the Bulldogs' 29-7 loss to Florida last Saturday. He was injured on the Gators' second possession when his leg hit the helmet of running back Errict Rhett.

TOULOUSE, France — John McEnroe is hoping for a quick return to France as part of the U.S. team for the Davis Cup final.

The United States plays France starting Nov. 29 in Lyon, and McEnroe thinks he deserves a spot on the team.

"I would love to play Davis Cup. I already won it four times," said McEnroe. "If the captain wants me to play doubles in the Davis Cup, I don't have to prove anything here," he said.

Hawkeyes say NIU could be dangerous

Jay Nanda
Daily Iowan

Looks can be deceiving.

That's the frame of mind the No. 4 Iowa Hawkeyes plan to take with them when they step onto Grant Field Saturday for their Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference tuneup with Northern Illinois. Game time is 11 a.m. and admission is free.

On paper, the Hawkeyes appear to have numerous advantages over the Huskies.

For one thing, Iowa joins defending champion Old Dominion and Massachusetts as the nation's only undefeated teams (8-0), while NIU is 1-5-1.

Furthermore, the Hawkeyes have never lost at home, while the Huskies have yet to win on the road this season.

Also, the Hawkeyes are 13-1-1 lifetime against Northern, with the lone Huskie victory coming way back in 1978.

And then there's the factor that sticks out like a sore thumb — the Huskies are comprised of one senior and 13 freshmen.

But again, that's on paper. And the Hawkeyes know that if they want to improve their MCFHC mark to 3-0, they'll have to perform and not rely on history.

"We have advantages but we're not going to take any team lightly," said Iowa coach Beth Beglin. "And the best indication I can give of that is that Northern Illinois just pulled off a major upset in tying Northwestern 2-2 (Sept. 27). And they had a 2-0 lead.

"So, Northwestern was able to scramble to tie it. Northern Illinois is better than their record indicates."

The Huskies started off the year with four straight losses. However, the first came at the hands of the top-ranked Monarchs by a count of 10-0 and the second to No. 2 Penn State, 7-0.

"Their schedule is brutal," Beglin said. "When you have 13 freshmen on your team and you open up with a schedule like that, you're not going to see real good results. But that doesn't mean that they're a bad team. They're just inconsistent."

On the other hand, Iowa couldn't have been more consistent than in its 7-0 handling of Michigan State last weekend in Columbus, Ohio.

In that contest, five different Hawkeyes shared the scoring load, while the team did not allow a single penalty corner or shot on goal to the Spartans.

So now, the Huskies await yet another tough encounter. But Iowa also knows what NIU is capable of.

"I think our focus isn't the youth of their team but the fact that they did tie Northwestern, our biggest rival," senior Kerry Horgan said. "And if a team can tie Northwestern, they can really hang with anyone. So we're not going in there thinking, 'Alright, these are a bunch of young kids.' We're thinking, 'Yeah, we have the experience and we know we don't lose at this field.' So, we're just going to try to take advantage of that."

'Real season' about to start

Michigan first Big Ten test

John Shipley
Daily Iowan

There is no doubt about it, this Saturday's Iowa-Michigan game is a big one. Not only does it pit two top ten teams against one another, but it marks the beginning of conference play for both.

"This," Iowa coach Hayden Fry assures us, "is what college football is all about."

Michigan was a near unanimous pick as the favorite to win the Big Ten this season. Iowa won the Big Ten last year by beating Michigan, Illinois and Michigan State in head-to-head competition — all on the road. In four of the last six years, the winner of the Iowa-Michigan game has gone on to the Rose Bowl and so far there has been no reason to call this season any different.

Michigan started the season ranked No. 3. Iowa started the season ranked No. 18. Both teams have been inching toward one another in the polls ever since, making this matchup between the No. 7 Wolverines and the No. 9 Hawkeyes the biggest game of each team's season.

"Biggest one I've ever encountered," Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers said. "It's going to be the biggest one of my career. I'm looking forward to it."

Michigan seemingly blew its national title hopes with a 51-31 loss to No. 1 Florida State last weekend. While that was going on in Ann Arbor, Iowa was tuning up for the Wolverines by stoically dismantling Northern Illinois, 58-7. But Wolverine coach Gary Moeller said that his team's national title hopes were never as important as Big Ten title hopes.

"I still honestly believe that the most important thing to us is the conference championship and going to the Rose Bowl," Moeller said. "And that's more important."

Iowa defensive end Leroy Smith can relate. Smith went crazy last weekend against the Huskies,

Some quick facts for Saturday's football game.

■ Kickoff is 2:36 p.m. Saturday at Kinnick Stadium. The game is sold out (70,220 fans).

■ This is the 43rd game between Iowa and Michigan, with the Wolverines leading the series 30-8-4. Michigan also leads the series in Iowa City by an 11-3-1 margin.

■ Michigan has defeated Notre Dame (24-14) and Boston College (35-13). They lost to No. 1 Florida State last week 51-31.

■ Iowa has defeated Hawaii, Iowa State and Northern Illinois by a combined total 140-27.

recording four tackles for a loss and recovering a fumble in the end zone for his first collegiate touchdown. Smith called the first three games of the season "preseason" and said that Iowa's first three wins — by a combined score of 140-27 — were just practice.

"When you play in the Big Ten, the first game of the Big Ten season is the most important game," Smith said. "I don't care who you play, when you play or how you're playing, it's the most important game because that's how you're going to start off the real season."

"This is the real season."

Rodgers looks at Saturday's game at sold-out Kinnick Stadium the same way.

"Winning the first game of the season and winning your first Big Ten game are important," he said. "It might as well be against a great football team."

Last year in Ann Arbor, Iowa staged a dramatic, 85-yard, fourth-quarter drive to score the

Chicago sweeps doubleheader from Twins

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Jack Morris, tuning up for his start in Game 1 of the AL playoffs, pitched five shutout innings, but the Chicago White Sox rallied to beat the Minnesota Twins 3-2 in 10 innings Thursday in a doubleheader opener.

Carlton Fisk hit two homers, including a grand slam, and drove in six runs as Chicago completed the sweep by winning the second game 13-12 in 12 innings.

Morris, whose next start will be Tuesday night against Toronto at the Metrodome, scattered six hits, walked one and struck out five. He finished the regular season at 18-12.

Warren Newson, who began a two-run rally in the ninth inning against Rick Aguilera, singled home the winner with two outs in the 10th. Tim Lincecum led off by reaching on third baseman Scott Lelius' throwing error, took third on a groundout and scored on Newson's single.

Aguilera (4-5) has blown nine of 50 save chances. He took over to start the ninth with a 2-0 lead, but Newson, pinch hitting for Jackson, led off with a walk. Lance Johnson followed with a triple and continued home on second baseman Al Newman's wild relay, forcing extra innings.

Johnson went 4-for-4. Scott Radinsky (5-5) was the winning pitcher.

The White Sox, who had 24 hits and five homers in the second game, won it in the 12th on Matt Merullo's RBI single off Terry Leach (1-2). Brian Drahman got the last out in the top of the 12th and improved his record to 3-2.

Tigers 10, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Bill Gullickson became the American League's first 20-game winner as Detroit beat Boston on Cecil Fielder's grand slam and Rob Deer's three-run homer.

Gullickson (20-9) allowed just two hits for six innings before he lost a bid for his first 1991 shutout in Boston's three-run seventh.

Gullickson, a 12-year veteran signed as a free agent last December, gave up three runs and six hits in seven innings as he helped pull the Tigers within two games in the race for second place in the AL East. Each team has three games remaining.

The Tigers scored four unearned runs off Boston starter Kevin Morton (6-5) in the first inning, capped by Deer's 25th homer.

After Boston pulled to 4-3 in the seventh, Detroit jumped on relievers Dennis Lamp, Tony Fossas and Dan Petry for six runs in the eighth, including Fielder's grand slam. His 133 RBIs lead the majors and his 44 homers ties him with Jose Canseco.

Yankees 9, Orioles 6

NEW YORK — Roberto Kelly homered, doubled and drove in four runs, leading New York over Baltimore, 9-6.

"Honestly, when we pay attention to one guy, we've traditionally done a pretty good job. We're not going to take any one individual and put him on Howard."

With the exception of quarterback Elvis Grbac, whom Fry calls the "best passer they've had," Fry says the Wolverines seem to be a typically dangerous Michigan team.

"Personnel-wise its kind of scary because they always look like they came out of the same mold," Fry said. "The excellent running backs, the one great receiver . . . the great big linemen on offense, the great quickness on defense, the great linebackers."

Fry calls Michigan linebacker Erick Anderson "as good as anyone in America," and lauds the typically behemoth offensive line, anchored by tackle Greg Skrepe-might as well be to the No. 1 team in the country," he said. "You can imagine how fired up the Wolverines will be this week."

One thing the Wolverines will have going for them this year is the sudden emergence of split end Desmond Howard as the most dangerous game-breaking threat in the nation. Howard has scored eight of Michigan's 11 offensive touchdowns, including four against Boston College, and was about the only thing the Seminoles couldn't stop last weekend.

Fry joked that Iowa would use "the whole team" to cover Howard. Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said Howard will get at least one touchdown a game and that as an opponent you just hope he doesn't score two.

"I would imagine he's going to get two," Fry said. "I just hope he doesn't get three. I'll do Bobby one go-ahead touchdown with 1:09 remaining and then held off the Wolverines when linebacker John Derby intercepted a pass with seconds remaining for a 24-23 win.

It was the third straight loss for the Wolverines, who had dropped games to Michigan State and Notre Dame the weeks before Iowa came to town. But Rodgers doesn't think that had anything to do with the Hawkeyes' success in Ann Arbor.

"We didn't sneak up on anyone last year," he said. "They're going to be sky high for us. They're not going to be coming in expecting an easy win. They're going to have to work for it. And we're going to do our best to get a win ourselves."

This week Michigan is coming into Iowa City off another tough loss, but Fry doesn't think that bodes particularly well for his Hawkeyes.

UNI comes down hard on wrestling coach

Chuck Schoffner
 Associated Press

CEDAR FALLS — Northern Iowa wrestling coach Don Briggs will keep his job but pay a stiff price for irregularities uncovered in his program by a school investigation.

While insisting the coach had the full backing of the administration, interim athletic director Eldon Miller said Thursday that Briggs' salary will be frozen for three years and he'll be prohibited from recruiting off campus for two years.

Miller also said Briggs must pay for the investigation, which could cost up to $12,000, and will be placed on probation for three years. If additional wrongdoing occurs, Briggs will be fired, Miller said.

In addition, the wrestling program will not be allowed to offer new scholarships next year.

Briggs, who has been the Panthers' coach for nine years, said he agreed to the measures.

"I can't tell you how badly I feel that this situation has happened," Briggs said. "It's impossible to describe the feelings that one goes through in an investigation like this. I'm accepting full responsibility."

Many of the potential NCAA violations disclosed in the university's report involved the recruitment of Osage High School star Mark Schwab, who signed with Northern Iowa in 1985.

The report also said Briggs made two personal loans to wrestlers, meals were improperly bought for recruits and their parents and unauthorized people were involved in recruiting.

Miller said the report was sent to the NCAA, which could accept the university's measures as sufficient or impose its own sanctions.

"We will accept whatever they come back to us with," Miller said. "But in the meantime, we are still moving forward. We have taken action ourselves. We have taken decisive action as soon as we've had the facts. What the Infractions Committee comes back with, we have no idea."

The university began the investigation after former athletic director Bob Bowlsby received an anonymous letter July 2 containing allegations of wrongdoing in the wrestling program from 1983 through 1990.

Shortly thereafter, the school hired Waterloo attorney John Hines to investigate the charges. Hines interviewed 28 people, including 17 former and current UNI wrestlers. Among his findings were that Briggs loaned between $250 and $800 to pay school costs for a wrestler whose eligibility had expired and to pay the medical expenses for a friend of another wrestler.

Hines also found numerous irregularities in the recruiting of Schwab, a four-time state high school champion who wrestled four years at Northern Iowa and is now an assistant coach at Purdue.

The report said Schwab was flown on a private plane at no charge to the NCAA wrestling championships in Oklahoma City. Two other athletes, including Schwab's brother, also were flown there at no charge.

Briggs has a 122-49 record as Northern Iowa's coach, including a 16-5 mark last season. The Panthers have been ranked in the nation's top 20 each year Briggs has been the coach.

Hawkeyes to go looking for wins in unfriendly territory

David Taylor
Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team faces another uphill climb in a season full of them, as it tries to win on the road this weekend in unfriendly territory.

The 5-9 (1-1 in the Big Ten) Hawkeyes must face a rough-and-tumble Northwestern team on Friday and then head into an even more difficult situation when they play at defending Big Ten champion Wisconsin on Saturday.

"Northwestern is huge up front and will pound the ball at us all day," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "Then we have to go face Wisconsin where they will be playing with a lot of spirit and emotion."

"We expect to win our home meets, but against such seasoned opponents on the road it will be tough."

Iowa learned its first important lesson last weekend when it was thrashed by Michigan, but regrouped to defeat Michigan State the next day.

"The team is learning that we have to emotionally dictate the tempo, or we'll get pushed around," Schoenstedt said. "If we direct ourselves and work hard, we have no problem getting going."

Emotion may not be quite enough for this weekend. Iowa will have its hands full trying to contain physical Northwestern and with some injuries to the team, could be dragging a bit against Wisconsin.

"We're going about half-speed because of injuries, but we'll try to counter Northwestern's size with quickness. I know that they play great defense and pass well, but they are not very fast," Schoenstedt said.

Since Iowa has very few upperclassmen and Wisconsin returns five starters, once again the Hawkeyes will be at a disadvantage in terms of experience.

"Wisconsin will be expecting to win at home with all their starters back," Schoenstedt said. "What we have to do is try to be confident on their court and surprise them."

"I was happy the team was able to shake the loss to Michigan off and come back the next day to beat Michigan State," Schoenstedt added.

NFL PREVIEW

Ditka might be mad enough

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

This has to be the stat of the year. In three home games, Washington has allowed no points. In two road games, the Redskins have surrendered 58.

But the bottom line is that they're 5-0 as they go into Chicago this week to face the Bears, who until last week were tagged with the label of being the NFL's worst 4-0 team. Now, after a loss to Buffalo, they can revel at the distinction of being the worst 4-1 team ... well, there's still Detroit.

The Redskins come in as 2-point favorites, which shouldn't surprise anyone who has watched Monday night games the last two weeks.

The game looks close because Redskins quarterback Mark Rypien is not always at his best against good defenses, which the Bears have.

One other change. Noting that the Redskins destroyed Antone Davis on Monday night, the Bears are lifting Stan Thomas, who didn't have a great day against the Bills (or Jets, or Giants). In other words, rookie offensive linemen, even No. 1 draft picks, often get a rude initiation into the NFL.

There are two other factors worth mentioning:

—The law of averages and the short work week for Washington.

—Mike Ditka is angry and when Mike gets angry ...

BEARS, 21-20

Buffalo (minus 3) at Kansas City (Monday night)

This is the game the Chiefs have been pointing to since training camp, which may be one reason they've been stumbling in the early season.

Yes, the Chiefs match up well — their prevent offense seems to give the Bills trouble and on paper, they have enough defense to cause some problems.

But the best bet for Kansas City is the law of averages. After this game, the Buffalo schedule is soft

Associated Press

Is Don Majkowski healthy, and if he plays Sunday will he be effective?

enough for Florida State to cruise through and since no one goes unbeaten in the NFL ...

CHIEFS, 23-21
Denver (plus 7½) at Houston
Speaking of the worst 4-1 team in the league, any votes for the Broncos?

No. Just make them 4-2 after Sunday. Houston has had a week off to think about losing to the Patriots. The Denver defense is playing well, but not that well

OILERS, 24-10
Minnesota (plus 3) at Detroit

The Lions are another candidate for the NFL's worst 4-1 team, given that their four wins are over teams with a combined record of 3-17.

On the other hand, it's not all Barry Sanders for the Lions — there are guys like Jerry Ball, Chris Spielman, Mike Cofer and Bennie Blades on defense who aren't bad either.

The same qualifier every week. If Rodney Peete stays healthy ...

LIONS, 17-9
Phoenix (plus 9) at Giants

Now we get into the other category — best 2-3 teams. Giants or 49ers? San Francisco's idle this week, so it's the Giants.

Besides, Lawrence Taylor called a players-only meeting this week and when LT speaks ... it's time for a wake-up call.

GIANTS, 27-10
Jets (minus 1) at Cleveland
Jeff Lageman started a tabloid war by saying the Jets are now the best team in New York (New Jersey?)

The Giants beat the Browns 13-10 two weeks ago.
Here's one for Jeff.

JETS, 14-10
Dallas (minus 2½) vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee

Two questions:

—Is Don Majkowski's shoulder OK and if he tries to play will he be effective?

—Will the young Cowboys let down after the win over the Giants that Jimmy Johnson calls his biggest as a pro?

COWBOYS, 20-10
San Diego (plus 7½) at Raiders

The Raiders have allowed 19 points in three home games.

John Friesz is the Chargers' quarterback.

RAIDERS, 19-3
Pittsburgh (minus 6½) at Indianapolis

The week-of theory (Steelers) or the new coach theory (Colts)?

NBA ROUNDUP

NBA readies itself for another season

Associated Press

As 26 of the 27 NBA teams prepare to open training camp Friday, the Chicago Bulls find themselves in an unfamiliar position: defending league champions.

"Now that we've achieved the highest point for a team, we know the challenges will be tough night after night," coach Phil Jackson said. "We are no longer the underdogs, and beginning this season, we'll have to play like it."

In order to repeat, the Bulls will have to do it with virtually the same cast as last season. Their only newcomer is rookie forward Mark Randall.

Last season, the Bulls enjoyed their best season ever, winning a franchise-record 61 games, their second division title in team history and their first NBA championship.

They did it under the magnificent leadership of Michael Jordan.

Jordan won his fifth straight scoring title with a 31.5 average, won the MVP award during the regular season and in the championship series, was named to All-NBA first team for the fifth year in a row and made the All-Defensive first team for the fourth consecutive year.

Several other teams have made significant changes in hopes of overtaking Chicago.

The Los Angeles Lakers, beaten in five games in the NBA finals by Chicago, acquired super-quick guard Sedale Threatt from the Seattle SuperSonics. The Lakers were the only team to open camp before Friday. They started Monday because they will be playing against three of Europe's top teams in the McDonald's Open Oct. 18 and 19 at Paris. The regular season begins Nov. 1.

The Detroit Pistons, two-time league champions before being succeeded by Chicago, obtained forward Orlando Woolridge from Denver and guards Darrell Walker from Washington and Jeff Martin from the Los Angeles Clippers, and signed center Brad Sellers as a free agent. They also sent forward James Edwards to the Clippers and released guard Vinnie Johnson.

"Our team will have a much different look entering the season," said coach Chuck Daly, who also will coach the 1992 U.S. Olympic team. "Over the last couple of seasons we stressed defense to the point where we struggled to score 100 points in a game."

"Although our methodical, defensive style was very effective for us the past five seasons, it's very important that we start getting easy baskets again."

The San Antonio Spurs, last season's Midwest Division champions — the only team in the league to repeat as division winners but eliminated in four games in the first round of the playoffs by Golden State — shored up their front line by acquiring high-scoring Antoine Carr from Sacramento for center Dwayne Schintzius.

Other teams making major moves included New York, Washington, Atlanta, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Denver, the Clippers, Phoenix and Sacramento.

Can the masterful Jordan lead the Bulls to back-to-back titles?

The Knicks obtained forward Xavier McDaniel from Phoenix for guard Trent Tucker, forward Jerrod Mustof and second-round draft picks in 1992 and 1994, and got center Tim McCormick from Atlanta for guard Maurice Cheeks.

The Hawks also got center Blair Rasmussen from Denver and guard Travis Mays from Sacramento, sent guard Doc Rivers to the Clippers, lost guard John Battle to Cleveland via free agency, lost center Moses Malone to Milwaukee on free agency, and drafted swingman Stacey Augmon from UNLV.

Washington acquired guard Michael Adams, a three-point specialist, from Denver.

While the Nuggets were losing Rasmussen and Adams, they were getting guard Winston Garland from the Clippers and forward-center Scott Hastings from Detroit, while drafting center Dikembe Mutombo from Georgetown and guard Mark Macon from Temple.

Iowa heads south with high hopes

Promising performances bode well for Blevins' Hawkeyes

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team will play in the Eastern Kentucky Invitational Tournament this weekend in Richmond, Ky.

The squad is coming off of a pair of fifth-place tournament finishes. The Hawkeyes began the season at home two weeks ago in the Northern Intercollegiate. Earlier this week they had a fine showing at the Kansas Invitational in Lawrence, Kan.

Last year the linksters placed fourth in the Eastern Kentucky tournament with Hawkeye Brad Klapprott taking medalist honors. Hawkeye players feel good about this tournament as they know this course well and are relying on team experience to take them far this weekend.

Jon Frommelt, who tied for seventh in Kansas, is confident that the Hawkeyes are ready to start bringing home some first-place trophies.

"I think we are on the verge of doing really well," Frommelt said. "With the players we have we should be able to tear-up this course."

"We are very close to getting over the hump and start winning tournaments."

Senior Ed Lewis echoed Frommelt. "The team is looking for a top finish since so many of our players are familiar with this course."

Lewis also said that the team wants to have a good showing since there will be many other teams from the same district as the Hawkeyes in this tournament.

Coach Lynn Blevins is encouraged with the team's play, but is looking for a team stability and will give other golfers a chance to play.

"I am very pleased with the play of Sean McCarty, as a freshman," Blevins said. But he added that, "At Eastern Kentucky there will be some lineup changes. I will change the fourth and fifth spots and let some other kids play, so that we can be more consistent and not have so many peaks and valleys."

Klapprott, Frommelt and McCarty have nailed down the top three spots on the team for this tournament. Blevins said that there will be a playoff later this week to fill the other two spots.

The Hawkeyes will travel to Peoria, Ill., after this tournament to play in the Bradley Fall Classic on Oct. 12-13.

Electric, eclectic Monks boogie artfully at Gabe's

Kimberly Chun
Daily Iowan

My favorite Monks of Doom memory recalls a little escapade this summer. Driving like a bat-outta-hell on a strange desert highway in Utah, chased by a tornado hovering over the horizon, we were hoping to tear through a break of clouds at the end of the road. Julie was in the back seat frantically reading "The Autobiography of Malcolm X," and Bob was folded in two, in the death seat again, and biting through knuckle bone. I ripped Beggars Banquet out of the tape deck and opted, not for your usual Wagnerian or "Night on Black Mountain" choice, but for the Monks of Doom's Soundtrack on the Beach of Deception. Shucks amok, the Monks' 1988 release perfectly expressed, in succinct sonic terms, the mixture of terror, dread, anticipation, the adrenal excitement you feel when you're either on the verge of dying or doing something you'll never forget.

More hook-riddled than King Crimson, less blues-fixated than Captain Beefheart and more accessible than Last Exit, Monks of Doom fuse their guitar-frumpy, jazz, Greco-Arabic world-boogie with deadpan vocals and literate stream-of-consciousness lyrics. Their last, now-tough-to-find-in-Toledo, Rough Trade releases, Soundtrack and The Cosmodemonic Telegraph Company, fail to capture the multi-skinned, many-furred and megalomaniac animal the Monks become when the sun goes down, the moon comes out and the little beasts come around to scream and shout.

The morose clerics will be spinning their web of sound Sunday, Oct. 6 at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., with their fellow, former happy camper Jonathon Segel's combo Hieronymus Firebrin.

I spoke to the vaguely New York-accented and emphatic Monk, bassist/singer Victor Krummenacher, earlier this week by phone. Krummenacher described Monk music as, yes, heavier than that of his last band, Camper Van Beethoven. "Camper was a reaction to hard-core stuff, and I felt that, after a while, I wanted to get away to do something I really enjoyed — which just being loud and obnoxious. Then I kinda grew up a little, and I realized I didn't need to be a loud and obnoxious person all the time. So we're really a kinda juggling act — we aren't just one thing in particular — rather a lot of things at the same time."

I run the term "loudly thoughtful" by Krummenacher, and he agrees with the description. "I think it's a cop-out to be loud all the time and a cop-out to be soft all the time. I don't think anyone feels the same way all the time. We're concerned with taking every piece of music we're working with and creating an atmosphere with it."

Krummenacher describes their new record, Meridian, (Bated Breath Records) as a "journey" of sorts. "There's a lot of characters in it going places and being involved in supernatural tales. It's like a good book — chock-full of all sorts of interesting people and strange things going on."

The release of their record has been delayed since last week because of the Guns 'N' Roses phenomenon and Geffen's monopolization of multiple CD manufacturers. Having seen both sides of the record industry with Camper, I asked him how he felt about the state of indie music today. "I'm really frustrated by media moguls like Time / Life and Warner, and I don't think they bode well for independent thought in many ways. I don't think they deliberately snuff out everything that the CEOs are opposed to; they seem to have this attitude of tolerance, but it's selective tolerance. They make it impossible for smaller people with more radical ideas to find a place and fit in.

"We're a band, just by the nature of who we are and where we go, that doesn't feel comfortable defining ourselves by a record label," said Krummenacher. "We reserve the right to oscillate because I think that's what makes music spontaneous and interesting. I'm just trying to get out what's inside of my head; I don't care what it's dressed like."

DANCE

Hancher tonight: ballet greats of Soviet danceJennifer Horn
Daily Iowan

The TV and papers are full of the changes and growing pains the Soviet Union is struggling with now. If you feel like you need a break from the problems, why not attend the ballet and enjoy a graceful and passionate embodiment of those changes?

Tonight and Saturday night, Iowa City will witness yet another extraordinary development from the Soviet Union: the collaboration of dancers from the Bolshoi and the Kirov Ballet companies. In two 8 p.m. performances at Hancher Auditorium, The Stars of the Bolshoi Ballet and Company will present classical highlights featuring the Bolshoi's incomparable Ekaterina Maximova and Vladimir Vasiliev, with principal dancers from the Bolshoi and the Kirov.

The Bolshoi and the Kirov are the two premier companies of the Soviet Union; the Bolshoi, which boasts over 300 dancers and whose name is the Russian word for "big," is generally considered the leading company of the two. From his Houston, Texas, hotel, Vasiliev, who organized the North American tour of this hybrid company of 10 dancers, commented on the union through an interpreter. "For the first time, Bolshoi and Kirov dancers are on such a tour together. Usually, they consider themselves rivals."

The companies usually compete with each other through their different dance styles. "Moscow (Bolshoi) style is more dramatic," said Vasiliev. "Kirov dancers try to keep to a St. Petersburg tradition, very classical, and to keep their feelings more inside."

Ultimately, it was not difficult to blend the two companies' styles. In recent years, the two companies have been exchanging teachers and dancers, and have therefore created more of a stylistic common denominator. Vasiliev also kept specific criteria in mind when he chose the dancers for the tour: "It was important to choose people who had real soul and could really express themselves in dance."

Vasiliev said, "The artistic directors from the Bolshoi and the Kirov Ballet tried to keep their principal dancers on their tours." But the drawing factor for the dancers was, said Vasiliev, the opportunity "to meet American audiences in such different cities where they have never performed before."

But, Vasiliev said, "Freedom, of course, has both sides." In the past, Soviet dancers have defected amid much publicity in the name of artistic freedom. Greater freedom exists in the Soviet Union today, and dancers now have the freedom to travel and experience different styles of choreography. However, this may mean that the Russian companies will lose their stars.

In addition, the economic upheaval accompanying all of the changes in the Soviet Union translates into fewer government rubles for the ballet companies. The companies are paying the price for the new freedom that benefits their individual dancers.

Vasiliev and Maximova are no strangers to America. They were a tremendous hit as the teen-age "babies of the Bolshoi" when the company made its U.S. debut in 1959. In a competition of physical and musical ability at the age of 10, the two beat out thousands of Russian children to be accepted to the Bolshoi. At 18, they joined the Bolshoi company, fell in love and were married. The New York Times' Jennifer Dunning wrote of the couple: "They still dance with the kind of technique and emotional commitment that made them favorites at the company's American debut."

Asked if there are unique advantages or disadvantages to being married to your partner, Vasiliev replied, "On the stage, you just feel love; you get all the advantage. But before the performance, it's just a lot of trouble."

His interpreter laughed and added, "If you would see them in the rehearsal, you would think they're just enemies."

Several of the pieces in which the famous pair will be featured were choreographed by Vasiliev. The two longer pieces, "Suite Nostalgique" and "Tango: Fragments of Life," were choreographed 10 years ago. Tonight's "Suite" was created in honor of the great Russian ballerina Galina Ulanova and is characterized by Vasiliev as nostalgia for romanticism, purity and classical dance. "Tango" will be performed Saturday night. Its style is a fusion of Argentinian tango and classical ballet, and its subject deals with the loves and suffering of an artist.

Elena Evteeva and Eldar Aliev of the Kirov Ballet will perform with the Bolshoi at Hancher tonight.

"In Russia right now, many choreographers try to be more modern than classical, but my choreography is based on the traditional Russian school," comments Vasiliev.

Both tonight's and Saturday's performances will also feature a series of classic divertissements.

The hybrid Bolshoi-Kirov company arrives in Iowa City today, two weeks into what Vasiliev describes as a very difficult, very long three-month tour.

Tonight, Francoise Martinet of the UI dance department will conduct a pre-performance discussion in the Hancher Greenroom at 7 (free with your performance ticket). The Hancher Box Office still has tickets available, and students receive a discount.

Having a way wild weekend

Mandy Crane
and Hank Olson
Daily Iowan

For Hawkeye fans, there's only one show playing in town this weekend, and that's the Iowa/Michigan game. The outcome could very well decide who brings home the roses this year. For students, it's a chance to get drunk and pass unsuspecting and indiscriminating girls up the bleachers. For those Iowa Citizens who didn't go to the UI and who usually spend their time bitterly resenting students, it's an excuse to dress up like bumblebees. (That's why Mandy's going to Urbana for the Illinois Homecoming festivities, where they dress up like blue carrots.)

Nevertheless, for those who survive the innumerable tailgaters and victory parties (Go Hawks!)

(please), there are still plenty of happenings around town.

At the Bijou, "Impromptu," today and Saturday, proves worthwhile for the wacky Hepburn-esque posing of Judy Davis as writer George Sand. Today also features the Marx Brothers in the comedy classic "Monkey Business." Jean-Luc Godard cerebrally salutes MGM with "A Woman is a Woman" today and Saturday. The gorgeously decadent and revealing film of corruption on the cusp of the Third Reich, "Stavisky..." shows today and Saturday. Saturday and Sunday bring us a view of racism on the homefront with a documentary on white supremacists, "Blood in the Face," and the Japanese classic, "Sansho the Bailiff."

For the musically inclined, the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St., hosts Dennis McMurrin tonight and Rob Schultz, possibly solo, Saturday. Ladies Choice, an all-women folk and bluegrass ensemble performs at The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., tonight and Saturday. The Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., will be home to the sounds of the Bob Wessner Quartet for jazz tonight and Saturday. Wild Bill's Coffee Shop, room 321 of North Hall, will rock tonight with Mike Haverkamp's fun novelty and folk songs.

One more event that could prove enlightening as well as educational, the Second Annual Iowa Animal Rights Conference convenes tonight at the Union. Tonight's lectures are open to the public and include Betsy Todd lecturing on "Feminism and Animal Rights" and Dr. Neal Barnard on "Animals in Laboratories."

Prisonshake shimmies tonight

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

Prisonshake is one of the greatest unknown bands in America, and it doesn't look like that situation is going to change anytime soon.

Hailing from Cleveland, Ohio, home to the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame, Prisonshake is best known for anything but its music. The band releases its own records via guitarist Robert Griffin's own Scat Records, a less than mainstream endeavor. Also falling under the Scat umbrella is Scat Seven Quarterly, a fanzine in a bag.

Of the band's releases, the music is still the last thing to get ink or recognition. "I'm Really Fucked Now," its most known release, is a multi-format box set grab-bag with a CD sampler of a since-scrapped double LP, an LP compilation of singles, a single with My Dad Is Dead and a cassette of out-takes. But once one gets past all the material reasons to like Prisonshake, there is still and forever, the music.

Prisonshake is a blues band, a garage band, a rock band, a punk band, etc., ad nauseam. It sounds like anyone from Soul Asylum to INXS to Black Flag, depending on the song. Every format in the box set could very well be by a separate band, the only cohesive elements being Griffin's stellar fret work and Doug Enkler's voice. Enkler is the reason for the blues comparisons, laying a snaky swagger over even the most punkish raver.

Prisonshake will be playing tonight at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St.

12 reasons why you'll love Macintosh

1. It's easy to use.

Bring home an Apple® Macintosh® computer today, and use it to complete assignments by tonight—even if you've never used a computer before.

2. You don't have to speak computerese.

Instead of cryptic MS-DOS commands such as COPY C:\WORDPRO\draft.doc A:\WORK, Macintosh uses familiar words, such as Copy and Print, and pictures, such as file folders for storing your documents and a trash can for files you want to throw away.

3. You don't have to be a computer science major to set one up.

Just plug everything together, flip the "on" switch, and you're ready to roll.

4. It's a breeze to copy information and paste it into another document.

To copy this chart, simply use the mouse to choose the Copy command.

To place the chart in another document, just choose the Paste command.

5. All Macintosh programs work in the same way.

Learn to use one Macintosh program, and you've learned the basics of using them all. For example, the commands you use, such as Open, Close, Copy, Paste, Save, Cut, Print, and Undo, are found in the same place—every time.

6. It can grow with you.

This week you're majoring in philosophy, next week it's nuclear physics. After all, no one knows exactly what the future will bring. That's why millions of students have found that investing in a Macintosh is a smart move. Because Macintosh can immediately help you do whatever you do—better. And if, come tomorrow, you find that you want to do something different, no problem. It's easy to upgrade your Macintosh to help you rise to the challenge.

7. It's great for college and beyond.

Doing your work faster, better, and more creatively is also a plus in the working world—and that's precisely why Macintosh computers are used in 74 percent of Fortune 1000 companies.*

74%

8. It's got connections.

To connect a printer, a modem, an external hard disk, or just about any other peripheral to a Macintosh, simply plug it in. That's all there is to it.

9. It lets you work with others.

Every Macintosh is equipped with an Apple SuperDrive™, a unique floppy disk drive that can use not only Macintosh disks, but also MS-DOS and OS/2 disks created on IBM and IBM-compatible computers. With SoftPC from Insignia Solutions, you can even run MS-DOS applications on your Macintosh.

10. It's so easy to network.

Just connect the LocalTalk® cable from one Macintosh to another Macintosh. It takes just a few minutes, and you don't have to buy any additional hardware or software.

11. You can connect to your school's mainframe or minicomputer.

With Macintosh, you can send in assignments, gain access to software you need for a class, and receive lecture notes, class schedules, and other information—right from your own room.

12. It's more affordable than ever.

Macintosh prices have never been lower—especially with the student pricing available from your authorized Apple campus reseller. You may even qualify for financing, which makes Macintosh even more affordable.

These reasons all add up to the power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.*

with some things that I've learned in my years here, and he helps me sometimes. We look out for each other."

According to Blue, Santos, who hosted the recruit during his visit to Iowa City, was a reason for his choice to become a Hawkeye.

"When I visited Iowa, he was honest about the school, the program and everything else," Blue said. "That's a contributing reason that I chose this school."

One thing Blue doesn't like about Iowa, however, is the lack of people who play lacrosse. The Iowa defensive end was a four-year letterman in lacrosse at Hempstead and thinks he could have gotten a scholarship in the sport to a Division II school or junior college.

"I like to play lacrosse but I don't get to play it a lot," Blue said. "I have my stick here and there are a couple guys here from New York who know it, but they don't play it. That was my second love, I think. But football wins hands down."

According to Alan Hodish, Blue's lacrosse and freshman football coach, it wasn't surprising that Blue chose the gridiron over lacrosse. And, he said, it wasn't surprising that Blue made such an impact in his first year at Iowa.

"I felt Larry was capable of doing some great things," Hodish said. "He has a quiet confidence; you never know what he's thinking. But he's very intense on the field. I thought he'd do well at a Division I school like Iowa."

mer schedules to get to this point.

Whitaker might be best known to Hawkeye fans up to this point for his catch on the fake field goal play against Illinois last season. Iowa won that game 54-28, and Whitaker's catch seemed to be the straw that broke the camel's back.

"It had been a disappointing season because I hurt my knee right at the start. I came back, and got my first college catch on that play, it was a great confidence builder," he said.

"Al Cross and I had made a bet before that game that we would never call the fake field goal play in our careers at Iowa, and it turned out we used it that day."

Hawkeyes, Whitaker got a Rose Bowl tattoo last November. He sports a Herky holding Rose in its mouth, with "91" under the design.

Whitaker said he would like the chance to add a "92" and "93" to it before he leaves the Hawkeyes.

Does he think it will happen?

"We'd like to win them all, sure, we're a good team, but we're certainly not going to go out there and blow everybody out."

As for polls, Whitaker says he might as well make up his own as much as the current ones mean to him.

"We still have to go out there and play every game, and try as hard as we can," he said. "A ranking doesn't mean you get to quit playing."

Baker, Shevardnadze plan summit from Siberia

By John Pendergast
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze will be the principals in a summit in the Siberian city of Irkutsk, the State Department said Tuesday. The summit is expected to be held by year's end, the State Department said Tuesday.

Subcommittee cuts into Bush's request for defense budget

By Donna Cassata
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A House Armed Services panel on Tuesday chopped nearly $2 billion from President Bush's 1991 budget request for the Strategic Defense Initiative and eliminated research money for two nuclear missiles.

Meeting in private, the subcommittee on research and development approved spending $2.9 billion on the SDI, somewhat less than the $4.7 billion requested by the defense budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Bush, who in January proposed spending $20.7 billion on defense in fiscal 1991, had called for $4.7 billion for SDI, a $800 million increase over the amount Congress appropriated in fiscal 1990.

Congressional support for the anti-missile shield, however, has weakened significantly as the Soviet threat fades and economic problems rise at home.

Earlier this month, the Senate Armed Services Committee approved a fiscal 1991 defense bill that cut almost $1 billion from Bush's SDI request.

The full House Armed Services Committee was meeting late Tuesday to finish its version of the defense bill and was expected to approve the steep cuts by the research subcommittee, including the deep cut in SDI.

Following the decision Monday of the procurement panel to eliminate all money for the B-2 stealth bomber, the research subcommittee approved enough funds to complete the B-2 stealth aircraft, now being built.

The panel's actions were expected after the Armed Services chairman, Rep. Les Aspin, D-R.I., announced his support last week for legislation to kill the program to build the B-2, at nearly $900 million, it is the current plan ever.

To meet the House-approved budget target of $20.3 billion for overall military spending, the committee has been forced to slash $24 billion from Bush's request of early this year.

Since Thursday, the six subcommittee have been making substantial reductions to meet the target, and on Tuesday the research panel focused on a handful of strategic programs.

Bush had called for spending $24 billion on the multiple-warhead MX missile and on moving the missile from silos to rail cars. The fiscal 1991 budget also included $202 million for the single-warhead Midgetman.

The research subcommittee eliminated all research funds for the two missiles and instead created a $600 million advanced strategic missile program for developing the next generation of missiles.

The panel also called on Bush to report to the committee in 90 days on which new missile administration wants — MX or Midgetman — and the debate that has followed for years.

The research subcommittee's action came less than 24 hours after the Armed Services subcommittee on procurement and military nuclear systems eliminated $1.2 billion for financing the MX rail-garrison program.

While making substantial cuts in strategic programs, the panel rejected an effort by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney to kill the Marine Corps' V-22 Osprey, the tilt-rotor aircraft that takes off like a helicopter but can fly like a plane.

The subcommittee approved $225 million for the Osprey.

From the Mouths of Hawkeyes Iowa faces big obstacle: Michigan OL

"We have to figure out how to get around Michigan's 300-pound linemen," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "That's tough. Not only are they big, they have quick feet. That's why they're at Michigan and not at some other school."

No extra pressure

Fry, when asked if he would advise his punters to keep the ball away from Wolverine punt returner Desmond Howard: "We have a hard time punting the ball anyway; we're not going to worry about where it goes. I don't want to psyche my punters out; they were already psycho when they got here."

Recruiting game

The Iowa skipper on telling a recruit he'll probably just sit on the bench at another school to try to discourage the player from considering that school: "If he's a competitor, he's going to respond to a challenge. If he's a shoe clerk, you don't want him anyway. Oops, shouldn't have said shoe clerk. I'm going to get a bunch of letters this week."

Top-ranked defeat

Fry about Michigan getting defeated by No. 1 Florida State last Saturday: "I don't know any of the particulars, but if you're going to be defeated, why not be defeated by the No. 1 team in the nation. It's pretty hard to evaluate. Certainly I am surprised that it got away from Michigan because Michigan has extremely fine football players."

Punting tactics

Fry on the Iowa punting game going into the Michigan contest, especially against kick returner Desmond Howard: "I really think our punters will be better this week, but when you're kicking to a guy like Howard, what difference does it make? You might be better off if you flub it and it doesn't get down there."

"I noticed even Florida State last weekend, they bloomed every kickoff to keep it away from him. They gave up field position to the 30, 35 yard line every time. Then the little rascal slipped up there one time and caught one of those bloopers and returned it 46 yards."

Reminders

Fry on Michigan losing to the Seminoles last weekend: "You can imagine how fired up the Wolverines will be this week. (Coach) Gary Moeller and, I imagine, Bo Schembechler aren't going to let them forget that. They'll be ready."

Key player

Fry when asked who would 'get the honor' of defending Howard, Michigan's all-around speedster threat: "The whole team."

Same salary

Fry about how good his team is: "I don't know how good the guys are in front of us, and I don't know how many guys behind us can whip us. You never know that, so I just take whatever they give us. It doesn't affect my salary I found out last year, so it doesn't make any difference."

Only one hero

Iowa wingback Danan Hughes, comparing himself to Howard: "One of us is going to help our team win and hopefully it will be me."

Hawkeye Invitational Tournament at Finley Lake.

The Hawkeyes have played in tournaments at North Carolina, Michigan State and Illinois this year. Coach Diane Thomason's team is very young and should show improvement when they play on their home course.

Women's tennis

The Iowa women's tennis team played a very good tournament at the Indiana Invitational last weekend.

Iowa's Minna Hatakka made it to the finals before losing. In doubles play Hawkeyes Miyuki Moore and Kara Cashon finished fourth.

Men's tennis

The Iowa men's tennis team picked up where they left off last spring with strong performances up and down the lineup last weekend at the Iowa State Fall Invitational.

Captain Klas Bergstrom made the strongest showing of the tournament for the Hawkeyes as he advanced to the finals in the top section before falling to Iowa State's Arle Willems in the championship.

him during his recreational time. A lifelong Bears fan ("even when they were bad"), Turner says that even on NFL Sundays it's hard to get out of the playing mode.

"A lot of times watching the pros, having played center, I find myself just reading defenses," he said. "I'll be sitting around with my dad or my roommate and I'll just start calling out defenses. And they'll say, 'What're you doing?' And I just say, 'It's a habit.'"

It spills over into his social life, too. Turner says he and the other offensive linemen hang out together off the field as well, which makes for better camaraderie, communication and production from the line on game day. That, Turner explains, is essential to the entire team's success.

"One of our big sayings with the two-deep is 'Five guys functioning as one,'" Turner said. "I realize the whole team's a unit, but it still always starts off with the offensive line."

"If the offensive line is doing bad then nobody leaves the backfield and nobody moves the ball. We like to think we're the catalyst of the team: If we're playing well, the team's playing well."

Senior David Turner

"He can play any of the three line positions," Fry said. "He can play guard, where he's starting, he can play center and he can play tackle. He's a real smart football player."

Turner's commitment to the offensive line is so complete that it haunts

Hawkeye Profile: David Turner

Senior OL aiming for shot at pros

John Shipley
Daily Iowan

To say Dave Turner was a highly-routed high school prospect is an understatement. The 6-foot-4, 250-pound offensive lineman from Clinton, Iowa, left high school with a pedigree that had Notre Dame, UCLA, Nebraska and Stanford drooling all over him.

After his senior year at Clinton High, Turner was named a captain on Bally's High School all-America football team, a Super Prep and USA Today all-American and Gatorade and USA Today "Iowa Player of the Year."

But where to go to college wasn't the only big decision Turner had to make. He also had to decide what position to play when he got there. He was an all-league pick on offense and defense his senior year and was wanted on both sides of the ball at the collegiate level — as an offensive or defensive lineman.

Iowa didn't care what position Turner played, as long as he played it at Iowa. "We just gave him a choice and he picked offense," Coach Hayden Fry said.

"I liked playing defense better," Turner said. "I just didn't feel I was quick enough."

Turner had wanted to play football for the Hawkeyes all his life and if that wasn't enough to bring him to Iowa City, there was always the fact that there aren't many schools better than Iowa at sending offensive linemen to the NFL.

"That was a major factor in my decision," Turner said. "A lot of schools wanted me for defensive line but I didn't feel I was quick enough. Plus Iowa runs a pro-style offense."

Then-offensive line coach Kirk Ferentz had weaned such current pros as Joel and Jay Hilgenberg (Saints, Bears), John Alt (Chiefs), Ron Hallstrom (Packers), Bret Miller (Falcons), Mike Haight (Jets) and Dave Croston (Packers) into the NFL. It was Ferentz that Fry sent to woo Turner.

"They kind of said I could either play offense or defense, but they recruited me with the offensive line coach," Turner remembers. "I feel pretty good about playing on the O-line. I've had two good coaches — Coach Ferentz and Coach (John) O'Hara — and they both put guys in the pros, which is what I'd like to do someday."

David Turner could have gone anywhere and played offensive or defensive line but he chose Iowa because of the tradition for offensive linemen going pro. (Al Goldis/Daily Iowan)

Dave Turner, OL

Hometown: Clinton, Iowa Age: 22
6-4, 275, senior Major: Business

Personal: Co-winner of Coaches Appreciation Award for offense in 1990. Saw action in 10 games last season and played in all 13 in 1988. Helped Hawkeyes lead Big Ten in scoring offense and total offense in 1990. Scout team player of the week vs. Wisconsin during 1987 redshirt season. Offensive captain on Bally all-America team and Super Prep all-American at Clinton High School.

Though Turner says his main goal as a senior is "to play a lot," he is still driven to get a shot at the NFL. But he's been slowed by injuries as a Hawkeye: Last year he was a regular until he broke a finger on his left hand against Michigan. "I didn't really play much after that," he said.

But Turner feels that a pro career has been within his grasp for a long time, and he said he knew from an early age that it was the offensive line concerning football — where to play in college, what to play when he got there — have been with the hope of landing him a shot with the pros.

"That's, I think, everybody's dream," he said. "If it's not, I feel you shouldn't be playing."

Last year his season ended against Michigan, this year you could say it's just beginning. No. 9 Iowa, and particularly its offensive line, has manhandled its three opponents thus far — by a combined score of 140-27. But Turner knows that things will change quickly against Michigan, ranked seventh after losing to No. 1 Florida State last weekend in Ann Arbor.

"They're tough. I've watched some film of the defense and it's a typical Michigan team," he said "I think they're well-coached, they don't make many mistakes — I really haven't seen anything we can exploit. I think they're just a good team that might have had an off day."

Reflecting on the three games thus far, Turner is somewhat pleased, but no matter how many points the offense scores, he and his linemates always manage to find something that could have been done better.

"We've beaten people and put a lot of points on the board, but the offensive line still thinks, 'Okay, we've scored 58 points. Maybe the defense scored 14 of those, so 44 points... that's a pretty good game,'" Turner explains. "Then we start looking at film: You see missteps, you see bad hand placement, stuff like that. You go into the films feeling good; you walk out feeling, 'Wow, that was pretty bad.'"

Throughout his career, Turner has been versatile enough to play both sides of the ball. But he's also versatile as an offensive lineman. Last year he with the passing game and formations that they didn't used to do. It's a more difficult preparation for Iowa from a defensive standpoint going in."

Offensive line

Michigan's offensive line dwarfs Iowa's, with an average size of 6-foot-5, 294 pounds. Preseason All American choice, Outland Trophy candidate and 322-pound Greg Skrepenak heads the beefy line as the largest offensive lineman ever for the Wolverines.

"We've got to find a way to get around those 300-pound linemen," Fry said. "These guys not only weigh 300 pounds, but they have quick feet. That's why they are Michigan and not some other school."

Defensive line

Iowa's line is headed by this week's Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week, Leroy Smith. Smith recorded six tackles against Northern Illinois, had two QB sacks and scored his first career touchdown. The left tackle spot has been very productive for Iowa with Ron Geater and Jeff Nelson combining for four QB sacks and six tackles for a loss.

Michigan has recorded only two sacks this season, and both were recorded by tackle Chris Hutchinson. He has three tackles for a loss, but will have to face a core of experienced linemen who have given up only two sacks this season.

Linebackers

Erick Anderson is Michigan's most prized defensive player. He has led the team in tackles for three consecutive years and leads the team once again in 1991.

"Erick Anderson is as good as any in America," Fry said.

Iowa's defensive signal caller, linebacker John Derby, has one of only four Iowa interceptions but ran it back 34 yards to set up an Iowa TD. One of the backups at that position, Matt

The Iowa secondary will have difficulty trying to stop Michigan's star Howard, but Grbac has to get the ball to him. Grbac leads the Big Ten in interceptions. Hawkeye Profile: Larry Blue

Blue now overwhelming opponents

Eric Weiland
Daily Iowan

On a September day in 1989, freshman Larry Blue walked into Kinnick Stadium for his first game as a Hawkeye. And the young defensive end was overwhelmed by the crowd.

"The stadium is incredible, the fan support and the whole aura of game day is incredible," Blue said. "The first time I was on the field, all I heard for the first few plays was the crowd. I think I was paying more attention to the crowd. That was something I had never been around."

But it didn't take Blue long to adjust to the Hawkeye crowd and begin doing some overwhelming of his own.

The Hempstead, N.Y., native recorded 36 tackles, including 20 solo and one stop for minus-7 yards, in his first year at Iowa — a member of an elite club of true freshmen who have a chance to contribute to a major college football team.

"As a freshman, you usually think that you're going to come in and red-shirt," Blue said. "But it worked out pretty well. I don't regret anything. I was told that as long as I worked hard, I would have a chance to come in and play. Things happened, Moses (Santos) got hurt, and I was in there."

"I guess playing as a freshman has been my biggest accomplishment, being able to come out right away and contribute. It was something that not a lot of freshmen do."

Blue started eight games that season, but the highlight of the year was against Iowa State, in which he earned the team defensive Hustle Award.

In that contest, he recorded eight tackles and recovered two fumbles, including one for a touchdown that tied the game at 21 in the third quarter. The Hawkeyes won the game 31-21.

"Jim Johnson, he made the play. He sacked the quarterback and the quarterback fumbled. The ball rolled into the end zone and I landed on it," Blue said. "It was something special. It was my first time in the end zone — ever."

The next year, however, Blue temporarily became part of the crowd he had admired so much as offseason knee

Personal: Three tackles in '91 spring game. Had knee surgery before '90 season. Started eight times as first-year freshman in 1989. Season-high eight tackles, recovered two fumbles (one for a touchdown) and earned defensive Hustle Award vs. Iowa State in '89. USA Today honorable mention all-American, Nassau County Lineman of the Year, all-Long Island and first-team all-state and team captain at Hempstead High School. surgery forced him to miss almost his entire sophomore season.

"I got hurt during my freshman year, but I played through it," Blue said. "It took its toll at the end of the season, so I had to have surgery."

Blue faced only Michigan State that year, ending the season with just two tackles. He had wanted to try to play instead of redshirting for the whole season. But when he started getting on the field, he realized that his knee wasn't ready.

"I decided to play for awhile then (my knee) didn't feel right," Blue said. "Overcoming that injury has been my biggest obstacle. Sitting out last year was tough because I wasn't part of the success of the team."

"It's just different when you're in the stands watching. Technically you're a part of the team but you weren't out there helping out, practicing or playing in the games or anything."

Now Blue is back on the field, in a starting position at the beginning of the season against Hawaii, Iowa State and Northern Illinois and slated to start at left end against Michigan this weekend.

While he's not starting, Blue is Iowa's second-team left end behind Santos, a Hawkeye senior and former teammate of Blue's at Hempstead (N.Y.) High School.

"I listen to him because he's older and he lets me know what things I'm doing wrong or right," Blue said. "He helps me out, and hopefully I help him grou... in a completely different type of sport... one that required no physical contact except for lane changes and an occasional baton hand-off.

"I was in track for four years, running the sprints, the 100 and 200 and the relays," Plate said. "That was one of the best things in track, when Todd, Rick and I got together and ran on the same relay team."

Because of his experiences with training and conditioning in track, Plate adds another dimension to his performance on the football field that he says is essential in today's level of college football.

"I think that without speed, there's only so much technique you can play," Plate said, "and if you don't match up well man-for-man, you're going to get eaten up."

Saturday, Michigan rolls into Kinnick Stadium with what many consider the epitome of speed and agility — Heisman Trophy candidate Desmond Howard. Plate is familiar with Howard's abilities, having played basketball against him two years ago while visiting Todd, and says that he knows from experience what it's going to take to defend against someone of Howard's caliber.

"He's really quick and a little bit smaller than me, but I look at that as a challenge," Plate said. "I know that we've covered the Miami guys and the Washington guys, and he's in the same league with them if not better."

"He's the type of guy that can either make you or break you — I just hope that I can do well and just show everybody that I can hang with him."

win it, then you know it has to be out of reach for a Michigan wide receiver to get it. I mean, A.C. was the most awesome man to play here."

"The thing about Desmond is that he doesn't just sit down and say, 'I want to win the Heisman,'" said Michigan quarterback Elvis Grbac, who was also Howard's teammate at St. Joseph High School in Cleveland.

"He just wants to win ballgames. He doesn't care about the individual aspect. And at the end of the season, if things work out all right for him, that's great."

Howard's desire to help the team win shows in the effort he displays during games, and that's when his individual accomplishments shine. The thing about

Howard, though, is that he's not just good, he's spectacular.

Howard has run for one touchdown, returned a kickoff 93 yards for one and has caught six TD passes, including a heart-stopping, finger-tip grab on 4th-and-1 that buried Notre Dame.

"I don't know what it is about me, but making the big play when we're behind is what really gets me going," Howard said. "I like doing the spectacular."

In Michigan's opener, Howard scored four touchdowns, making him the seventh player in Michigan history to score four or more in a game and the first since Rob Lytle in 1975. And the 93-yard kickoff return — also against Boston College — made him only the second Wolverine to take more than one back for a TD. Howard returned a kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown in the Michigan State game last year.

"He just amazes me every day, even if it's at practice," Grbac said. "He comes up with big plays, plays that you haven't seen. Once you get in a sticky situation, you want to go to the Magic Man. He just has that knack for the big plays."

"When we really needed the yardage back in high school, we just went to Desmond. He has good strength, he's really low to the ground and he has the ability of getting by defenders really quickly. When you need Desmond to come through, he will come through for you."

TE tradition leads Whitaker to Iowa

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

Matt Whitaker carries on a new tradition every time he takes the field as a Hawkeye tight end. While a high school running back at Ankeny High School, he watched future NFL star Marv Cook playing for the Hawkeyes.

and now he is following in his footsteps.

"Marv made the tight end here a glamour position, he made it stand out, and Mike Flagg and Michael Titley carried that on," Whitaker said. "Being from Iowa, I knew what a tight end was."

Age: 21
Major: Communications studies

Personal: Five catches for 54 yards and one TD in 1991 spring game. 3.54 GPA. Named to Big Ten Conference all-academic squad last year. Saw action in 11 games in '90. Scored TD on fake field goal vs. Illinois last season. First team all-state at Ankeny High School. Rushed for 715 yards as senior. Brother Todd played baseball at Iowa.

Year	Recept.	Yards	Avg.	TDs

1991	2	55	27.5	1
Totals	4	78	19.5	2

A junior, Whitaker has been seeing quite a bit of action this season after having played a lot towards the end of his sophomore year. He splits time with Alan Cross at tight end.

"Splitting time with Al is no big deal to me — sure, I'd like to be the one out there all the time, but playing with somebody every day in practice makes you work hard and it makes you improve, where maybe if you didn't have someone pushing you like that or if we weren't even I could maybe get complacent."

Whitaker was a red shirt when Cook was a senior at Iowa. He has kept ties with Cook, who now plays for the New England Patriots. They work out together in the off season, and remain really good friends.

"We talk on the phone at least once or twice a week," Whitaker said.

Whitaker was running back at Ankeny High School. The transition to tight end was not tough, according to Whitaker.

"It's just catching balls, something no one set down and taught me, but that's just a matter of practice," he said.

At Ankeny he was played with Iowa State quarterback Chris Pedersen. He had a chance to see Pedersen after this season's game against ISU in Ames.

"That was the first time I had seen him since the beginning of the school year," he said. "We still keep in touch, go out and play golf and such."

As for the Hawkeyes dominating victory against Pedersen's Cyclones?

"It was good to play against him, and it was good to win too," he said.

Whitaker will graduate in December with a degree in Broadcasting and Film Production from the Communication Studies Department. He will begin law school, if things go according to plans, this summer. He hopes to study Entertainment Law once he gets there.

"I always wanted to be involved in the entertainment industry, and to make films, and I thought, 'how is someone from Iowa going to get into the film industry out in California?', so I thought entertainment law would be my best bet," he said. "If I got a graduate degree in film, I'd probably end up just making art films the rest of my life. Plus there's a lot of money in Hollywood."

Whitaker carries a 3.54 grade point average and a spot on last year's Big Ten Conference all-Academic squad into this season. He said he used his redshirt season at the UI to his advantage in that regard.

"I started out fast out of the chutes, and got my GPA up really high, so that as I played more and had less time, I'd still have my GPA up," he said.

Whitaker said the tradeoff for his high GPA is a lot of late nights. He is taking 14 hours this semester, just enough to graduate a semester early. He has taken 21 hours a semester in the past, in the off season spring semester, as well as a couple full sum-

THANKS.

The difference between a good football program and a great one often is the fan in the stands. At the University of Iowa, the college football fans are knowledgeable, enthusiastic and supportive.

On behalf of the 1991 Iowa football team and, in fact, all of the student-athletes and coaches at the University of Iowa, I'd like to thank you for making our university home for the greatest college sports fans in America today.

Thanks again for your enthusiastic support. I'll see you Saturday afternoon.

The No. 4 Iowa women's field hockey team improved its record to 8-0 with a victory over Ohio State and Michigan State last weekend.

Coach Beth Beglin wanted to make sure that the Hawkeyes didn't let down against the Spartans Saturday after their defeat of the Buckeyes Friday.

"We watched videotapes of the Ohio State game and I wasn't really happy," Beglin said. "Defensively we were making errors and we weren't pursuing the ball well."

"We knew Michigan State was going to be a weaker opponent than Ohio State, but the Hawkeyes needed to motivate themselves and not play to the level of their opponent. So, I told them that for every shot they allowed they were going to run 100-yard sprints (in practice)."

It looks like the Hawkeyes don't like dashes.

They went on to thrash the Spartans by a score of 7-0. The Hawkeyes play Northern Illinois at newly-dedicated, Grant Field at 11 a.m. on Saturday. Admission is free.

Women's cross country

The No. 6 Iowa women's cross country team ran over the competition at the Illinois Cross Country Invitational last Saturday.

Iowa easily won the eight-team meet. Five Hawkeye runners placed in the top nine at the meet, which included five other Big Ten schools.

For the second week in a row, Iowa's Tracy Dahl won the race. Teammate Jennifer Brower was runner up.

Coach Jerry Hassard said that he is very impressed with the communication his top two runners, Dahl and Brower, have had in the last two weeks. He said they have developed the uncanny ability to sense when the other wants to make a move.

Iowa beat Michigan State 3-2 last Saturday night after losing to Michigan 3-0 on Friday. The Hawkeyes improved their record to 5-9 and 1-1 in the Big Ten.

Iowa continues conference play on Friday and Saturday with away matches against Northwestern and defending Big Ten champion Wisconsin.

Schoenstedt, who is in her first year as the Hawkeye skipper, said she expects stiff road tests from the two teams.

"I know Northwestern is improved and Wisconsin returns several seasoned players, so we are going to have an important weekend," Schoenstedt said.

The Iowa men's golf team has played in two tournaments this year and took fifth place in both.

They took fifth in the Northern Intercollegiate held at Finkbine in late September. This past week they placed fifth in the Kansas Invitational.

Hawkeye Profile: Scott Plate

Plate: This weekend it's personal

Mic Del Watkins
Daily Iowan

Iowa's matchup with Michigan Saturday at Kinnick Stadium means a lot of different things to a lot of different people.

To Iowa coach Hayden Fry, his coaching staff and the Hawkeye football team, a victory over the No. 7-ranked Wolverines would mark consecutive wins for Iowa over their Big Ten nemesis, as well as some well-deserved respect and accolades for which the Hawkeyes always seem to be overlooked.

To Iowa fans, a win would signify another year of sunshine and rainbows on Iowa sports and a possible tailgater in Pasadena, Calif.

But to Iowa defensive back Scott Plate, a Michigan native who now calls Iowa City home, this game means a lot more than all of the pregame hype and statistics. For him, it really touches home base.

"This game definitely has special significance for me," said the 5-foot-10, 195-pound native of Brooklyn, Mich. "I still have a cousin (Troy) who's an offensive tackle for Michigan, and for me, knowing that my brother (Todd) is no longer on the team, this game probably has more incentive than last year. I really want to win."

These weren't always the sentiments, however, of the first-team Hawkeye cornerback. Growing up in a very "pro-Michigan" environment as a child and seeing his family revel in the Wolverines' continuous success, throughout much of his junior high and high school career, Plate had his heart set on playing Michigan football.

"I wanted to go to Michigan when I was little and I use to watch them on TV all the time," said the captain and offensive MVP at Columbia Central High School. "But when I started getting recruited and Iowa started talking to me, I was definitely more interested in Iowa.

"A lot of influence in coming to Iowa instead of Michigan was from my brother. Even though he really loved going to Michigan, he told me about the ins and outs and what they looked for. I just thought that I would fit in better as a Hawkeye."

Despite recruiting offers from Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and several other Big Ten and Southwest Conference schools, the second-team all-state selection chose Iowa. And it was his father, a die-hard Michigan fan, who gave Plate the final push in the Hawkeye direction.

"It wasn't hard for my dad at all when I chose Iowa over Michigan because when he met Coach Fry and saw what a personable, family-oriented program Iowa had, he really backed my decision," Plate said. "When Michigan, the coaches really never got to know my family, and Iowa was totally different. They really cared about me both as a person and a football player."

Introduced to football at an early age and exposed to the game much of his life — his father having played in high school and older brothers Todd and Rick (tailback at Central Michigan) being involved in football — it seemed only natural that Plate pick up the game.

But when he got his first taste of action, the game he played as a child took on an entirely different perspective than most little-leaguers are used to.

"It was weird," said Plate, who saw action in all 12 games and contributed 32 tackles (28 solo) last season as a freshman. "I lived down in Mexico for two years and I played a couple of years down there. I think they take football more seriously when you're younger down there."

"It was elementary school when I started playing and we played well-organized tackle football. When I moved up here, I had a jump on everybody and it really helped me a lot."

Plate excelled on both sides of the line of scrimmage in high school. He was a three-year starter on both offense and defense at Columbia Central and earned all-area honors at both tailback and defensive back.

Plate also started at quarterback his junior year, leading the team to an 8-1 mark.

Plate's love of sports didn't just stop on the gridiron, however, as he found comfortable

Game Preview: Iowa vs. Michigan Big Ten showdown arrives at Kinnick

James Arnold
Iowan

"The Magic Man" returns to Kinnick Stadium riding a Heisman tidal wave so strong that not even a loss to Florida State could break the spell.

Michigan's Desmond Howard flew into the end zone against Notre Dame on a crucial fourth down play and landed atop the Heisman race. A wide receiver, Howard has also been returning punts and kickoffs, and has even rushed for a score.

The Hawkeyes have their own all-purpose wide receiver with a catchy nickname. D-Nice, Danan Hughes, is rarely spoken about in the Heisman race, but he has outdone Howard in a few categories. Howard is known as a big play receiver, but Hughes had a 52-yard TD reception against Hawaii, longer than any catches Howard has had all season.

"One of us is going to help our team win, hopefully, it will be me," Hughes said.

Quarterbacks

Iowa's Matt Rodgers is returning to Big Ten competition as the highest rated passer in the Big Ten and sixth in the nation. Rodgers doesn't have the great statistics, but he has done well enough to receive mention from The Sporting News for the Heisman.

Michigan signal caller Elvis Grbac received almost unanimous selection as the preseason all-Big Ten quarterback, although Rodgers finished the 1990 season with the top honor. Grbac has performed well this season completing 20 of 22 passes against Notre Dame.

"He's as good a passer as Michigan has ever had," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "If you want to compare (Jim) Harbaugh, or anyone else statistic-wise, Elvis has got the stats."

Running backs

Iowa is a nationally recognized passing school, while Michigan is known for rushing. It is rare for the Hawkeyes to meet up with the Wolverines leading them in rushing, but that's exactly what has happened in 1991.

Hawkeye backs have combined for 674 yards this season, 25 yards more than Michigan, while Michigan's Rickey Powers has rushed for double the total of Iowa's leader Mike Saunders.

The Hawkeyes have also rushed for eight TDs to Michigan's two. It's a different look this season for Michigan.

"I think Michigan is more wide open, more diversified on offense," Fry said. "Particularly

Wolverine Profile: Desmond Howard

WR an all-around player for Michigan

Er S Weiland
Daily Iowan

Any college football fan knows that Michigan's Desmond Howard can catch the football. But a 5-foot-9, 176-pound receiver who blocks?

"He's a pretty good all-around player," said Cam Cameron, Michigan quarterbacks and receivers coach. "A lot of times a receiver is one-dimensional. I think the good thing about Desmond is that he can catch, he can run with the ball after he catches it, and when he's not getting the ball, he'll block. To be honest with you, there aren't many guys around that will do all three."

Howard admits that blocking hasn't always been fun for him. But as Michigan's "Magic Man" he is often double- and triple-teamed, so blocking is an aspect that can keep him in the game.

"I enjoy blocking so much, it adds another fun aspect to the game," Howard said. "It can definitely get boring if you go a whole quarter and you don't get a pass because they are double-covering you. But you get a couple of knock-downs or good blocks, and it gives you something to talk about to keep you into the game."

"I didn't like blocking when I came here, but now I definitely get after it. It helps me help my team. A lot of people are great with the ball; it's what you do without the ball that makes you a team player. That's what we emphasize and strive for at the University of Michigan — team play."

Howard, a junior, has been the name in college football lately, touted as the second coming of Notre Dame's Raghib "Rocket" Ismail — the Fighting Irish's all-purpose game breaker who finished second in the Heisman voting last year.

Howard has piled up 229 yards on 17 catches and has 486 all-purpose yards in just three games so far this season.

Touchdown fest

Michigan receiver Desmond Howard celebrates after his fourth touchdown against Boston College Sept. 7 in Newton, Mass. Howard has scored eight of the Wolverines' 11 non-defensive touchdowns this season. (Associated Press)

"Desmond Howard may be the best receiver in the country," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "He's a lot like Rocket in the things he does. He reminds me so much of Rocket."

"I think he's more dangerous than Rocket," said Iowa coach Hayden Fry, whose team will host Michigan Saturday. "Desmond Howard could be the most talented football player to play at Kinnick Stadium in all my years."

Fry also compares Howard to Jerry Levias, whom Fry recruited to play at Southern Methodist. Levias was the first black player to get a football scholarship to a Southwestern Conference school.

"He reminds me so much of Jerry Levias that I had at SMU; he's a complete package," Fry said. "Coach (Gary) Moeller and his people have done a great job utilizing his abilities. He's a punt return man, kick off man, he leads the team in pass receiving, they run him on reverses, they've got all these exotics built around him. That's what I did with Levias.

"You don't get a youngster like that but once in every six, seven years maybe. When Michigan had Anthony Carter, he was great. But they didn't utilize him near like Howard's being utilized."

Despite having scored eight of Michigan's 11 non-defensive touchdowns this year, Howard remains a team player. He is a leading candidate to win the Heisman Trophy this year but talk of the award is almost nonexistent with him.

"That's against the Michigan policy of 'team,'" Howard said. "Everything is done as a unit."

But you know, if they're going to give it out, they don't give it to a team."

Tom Harmon, in 1940, is the only Wolverine to win a Heisman Trophy. Being a receiver is also against Howard as only four receivers — Yale's Larry Kelley (1936), Notre Dame's Leon Hart (1949), Nebraska's Johnny Rodgers (1972) and Notre Dame's Tim Brown (1987) — have ever been awarded the Heisman.

"Realistically, I don't see any way I'd ever get it," Howard said. "If Anthony Carter didn't See Howard, page 23C

Michigan Style

The Wolverines' quarterback-receiver combination of Elvis Grbac and Desmond Howard is deadly, especially coming from behind an offensive line that averages almost 300 pounds. Howard, referred to as the "Magic Man," has scored eight of Michigan's 11 non-defensive touchdowns this season.

this season.

On defense Michigan features inside linebacker Erick Anderson, a candidate for the Butkus Award that honors the nation's best linebacker. Anderson leads his squad with 34 tackles this season, including seven against Florida State last weekend.

Big Ten

The Associated Press

The Iowa and Michigan football coaches said Tuesday that another razor-close game between their Big Ten teams could come down to the last play.

"It's been the big, big game in our conference," said Michigan's Gary Moeller, whose Wolverines (2-1) lost a 24-23 squeaker at home to Iowa a year ago. "We're always had hard-fought games at Iowa City and Ann Arbor."

During the Big Ten's weekly teleconference, Hawkeye coach Hayden Fry said if recent years are any indication, Saturday's game at Iowa (3-0) should be a good one.

"Looking back in the record book, these games have been classics — extremely good football, close games decided some years on the last play," he said.

In another conference opener Saturday, 3-0 Wisconsin and Ohio State, also 3-0, will battle at Columbus, Ohio.

"Being 3-0 is uplifting for the young players. It gives them confidence," said Barry Alvarez, whose Badgers finished 1-10 last season. "Mentally, we're in great shape going into the Big Ten season."

Also on Saturday, Michigan State is at Indiana, Minnesota at Illinois and Purdue at Northwestern.

Michigan State is 0-3, but they started 1-2-1 a year ago, then finished tied with Iowa, Michigan and Illinois for the league title with 6-2 records.

"That's the good thing about beginning conference play — everybody is 0-0. Now it's time to fight for the conference championship," said Spartan coach George Perles.

Illinois and Minnesota haven't met since 1988.

"We don't know much about them," Minnesota's John Gutekunst said of the Illini. "And from what I've seen of them, I'm happy we haven't played them."
