Phillips approved for Fed board

Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

The Senate Banking Committee approved the nomination of Susan Phillips, UI vice president for finance and university services, for a seat on the Federal Reserve Board, and confirmation from the Senate is expected sometime this month — possibly today.

Phillips, 46, was nominated Sept. 27 by President Bush, who she worked with while serving on the Commodity Futures Trading Commission from 1981 until she returned to the UI in 1987.

Phillips went through Senate confirmation hearings this week for a 14-year term on the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to replace retiring member Martha Seger.

Ann Rhodes, vice president for university affairs, said once confirmation is announced Phillips would be leaving the UI "pretty much immediately" for Washington, D.C., and that UI President Hunter Rawlings "has a plan in mind" for an interim replacement.

Many say the UI may be losing its chief financial officer in a critical year.

"It's a quite crucial time; resources are in greater scarcity at the state level, and the university is going through difficult budgetary times. Losing someone like Susan is very serious," David Forkenbrock, chairman of the Faculty Senate Budgetary Planning and Review Committee, said.

Forkenbrock has worked closely with Phillips during his two years as chairman and said one of her greatest attributes is her "institutional memory. She realized what had worked with past decisions. . . . She has a good sense of what will fly and what won't."

Forkenbrock said Phillips, who acts as liaison with the committee and administration, has been popular with faculty because of her openness about budgetary matters that affect the university as a whole.

"She gets faculty involved at an early enough time so that our input really matters, not after requests have already been made," Forkenbrock said. "She's always asking, 'Who else should be informed about this?' She's extremely open to work with — and that's the biggest compliment you can give an administrator."

Forkenbrock said he has every confidence in Phillips' qualifications for the Fed. "She's the best."

He said there is a positive aspect for the UI if Phillips is confirmed. "Hunter Rawlings pointed out that to have a member of your administration appointed to a federal position is a tremendous honor and reflects extremely well on the UI."

Phillips has not been speaking to the press about the nomination, but Rhodes said Phillips is "just thrilled at the opportunity, although she is very attached to both the university and community."

"There just isn't any good time to lose someone as good as Susan," Rhodes said.

"She certainly leaves big shoes to fill," Forkenbrock said.

2 area residents indicted in drug investigation

An investigation by the Johnson County Drug Task Force has resulted in indictments by a federal grand jury of two Muscatine residents for drug trafficking.

Wanda and Leroy Jackson have been charged with three counts of distribution of cocaine and one count of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and marijuana.

The indictments are the result of an ongoing joint investigation by the Drug Task Force, which consists of the Johnson County Sheriff's Office, the Coralville and Iowa City police departments, the FBI and the IRS.

Former Iowa City teacher dies in accident

Former Iowa City School District teacher Phyllis Yager, wife of UI science education Professor Robert Yager, died Wednesday in a weather-related accident.

Yager was killed on Highway 34 outside of Fairfield, Iowa, when she lost control of her car on the ice-covered road and struck the guardrail of a bridge, crossed into oncoming traffic and was hit by a truck and another car.

The two other drivers involved in the accident were treated and released from a nearby hospital.

UI professor pleads guilty to theft, prohibited acts

Dr. James Folk, a UI professor of ophthalmology, pleaded guilty Wednesday to second-degree theft and prohibited acts.

The UI Department of Public Safety charged Folk in July, alleging that he wrote prescriptions for patients who were not at UI Hospitals and Clinics in order to obtain cocaine. Folk has completed a substance abuse rehabilitation program and continues to see patients.

The Iowa Board of Medical Examiners will schedule a hearing to consider disciplinary actions against Folk.

Community Read-in Day to be held Nov. 13

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors Thursday proclaimed Nov. 13 the fourth annual Community Read-In Day.

A 15-minute period, from 10:00 to 10:15 a.m., has been designated for parents and children in the community to recognize the importance of reading.

The event is being sponsored by the Hills Bank and Trust Company, the Iowa City and Coralville public libraries, the Iowa City School District and the Iowa City Press-Citizen.

Carver-Hawkeye Arena was filled with sorrow and sympathy Thursday night as nearly 4,000 family members, friends and members of the university community gathered in remembrance of the victims of last Friday's shootings on the UI campus.

UI President Hunter Rawlings opened the observance by expressing his appreciation for all those in attendance. "With broken hearts we come together this evening to mourn the dead and to comfort the living and to wipe each other's tears."

UI Student Assembly President Jennifer Kelly said Miya Sison and her community of family and friends "should be an inspiration to us all."

Kelly encouraged the UI community to "help each other get through this tragedy. If we can have even a fraction of the strength and will that Miya has, we will be well on our way to recovery."

T. Anne Cleary was remembered by UI Professor Margaret Clifford as an academician, a member of the community, a neighbor and a friend.

"As a friend, Anne was an accomplished developer of human resources," she said. "She took delight in disproving any claim that underestimated human potential."

Cleary's philosophy of life was the driving force behind her efforts and achievements, Clifford said.

"For Anne the purpose of life was to give life, to instruct, to console, to inspire, to encourage, to develop and to forgive — and to do so without respect for status, race, age, gender or setting," she said.

This philosophy was reflected by Cleary's brothers in a letter written to the family of Gang Lu, Clifford said, which spoke of her belief in love and forgiveness.

"We all know that the only family that feels more grief than ours at this time is your family, and we want you to know that we are with you in this sorrow," they wrote.

The Rev. Jason Chen, pastor of the Chinese Church of Iowa City, said Linhua Shan loved life and wanted to live it to its fullest.

Shan was a "fun-loving person" whose love of sports was second only to his love of physics, he said.

"He loved to watch football on television and perhaps was the only Chinese student who really understood American football and could explain it clearly to other Chinese without confusing them," Chen said, causing a brief moment of laughter.

Willard Boyd

Boyd urges society to adopt 'civil attitudes'

William Pepper
Daily Iowan

December 15 marks the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights. To honor that event, a former UI president and five UI law faculty professors were on hand at the Boyd Law Building Thursday to speak on the historic document.

Willard Boyd, UI president from 1969 to 1981, for whom the law building is named, was the keynote speaker on the topic, "The Bill of Rights is Not Enough."

In his presentation Boyd said society should work to make the values represented in the Bill of Rights part of everyday life.

"A just society requires more than civil liberties, it requires civil attitudes," Boyd said.

Boyd added that people need to work to better understand other people and cultures and to learn to tolerate them in order to enforce individual rights.

"Virtually every social norm, written or unwritten, admonishes us to respect our neighbor," he said. "Unfamiliarity breeds ignorance, and ignorance breeds prejudice."

Boyd said Americans should first learn to respect the rights of others in the United States and be willing to help them.

"Each of us assures our own rights by recognizing our duty to assure the rights of others," he said. "Each of us has the right to be judged on our own merits."

Boyd went on to explain that American acceptance and encouragement of human rights should extend to other countries as well. He said the gulf war was a good example of this need, explaining that the war could be partly attributed to the fact that the Western world understands little about the Islamic religion.

"Americans should stand for human rights everywhere," he said.

Boyd earned a law degree from the University of Minnesota in 1951 and worked for three years at the Minnesota law firm of Dorsey and Whitney. He joined the UI law faculty in 1954. In 1964 he became a vice president of academic law, a position he held until he became university president in 1969. Currently Boyd serves as president of the Field Museum in Chicago, Ill.

Professor writes of China experience

Ken Starck of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication discusses his book, 'The Dragon's Pupils: A China Odyssey.'

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

When a UI professor told the director of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, Kenneth Starck, that he should write a book about his experiences in China, Starck laughed at the idea. But the more he thought about it, the more the idea appealed to him. After spending a full year in China as a Fulbright Professor from 1986-1987, Starck wrote "The Dragon's Pupils: A China Odyssey," recounting his teaching at the Institute of Journalism of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing. Starck writes about his classroom experiences with 21 graduate students from all over China. He explores issues central to journalism, ranging from freedom of expression to government control and from news as independent observation to news as propaganda. Starck had been to China before he earned the Fulbright scholarship, a program that sends American scholars abroad. Pei-wei Cheng, a Fudan journalism professor and a 1951 graduate of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication, wrote a letter to the "director" of the school of journalism, saying that he wanted to re-establish ties with his alma mater. With this letter began a series of correspondence between Starck and Cheng, which led to his application for the Fulbright program. While teaching in China, Starck rediscovered his journalism roots. "I decided to write articles to let people know what I was experiencing," Starck said. "I've traveled to the Soviet Union, and I've lived in Finland and Europe, but nothing could have prepared me for China."

According to Starck, the title of the book recounts a legend about an emperor who ordered a painter to draw something on a Buddhist temple.

The painter drew four white dragons and left the pupils out of their eyes. When asked why he did this, the painter replied, "If I add the pupils, the dragons will instantly fly away." The people insisted he put the pupils in the eyes, and he did. Amidst thunder and lightning, the temple walls came tumbling down and two of the dragons flew away. The other two are still there, without pupils.

"I was struck by this legend," Starck said. "By living in China, my own pupils were put in my head from a cultural standpoint."

Starck said that classes were spent talking about the role journalism plays in different societies.

"We have an independent voice in our society. The commentaries we make don't have to have authoritative approval," he said. "In China, the students I was teaching were aware of restrictions on the information they could write about."

Starck said that Chinese writers cannot be critical of the government.

"One student wrote about the teachings of Marxism and communism. He went to other campuses, interviewed students and used firsthand experience. He found that students were not interested in learning about that. They wanted to learn about things that would help them to get good jobs. But he knew that a story like that would have no chance of being published. If the student turned it in, it could have dire consequences on him."

In addition to becoming an author through his experience in China, Starck also got a taste of acting. At the urging of his wife, the two had walk-on roles in the closing scene of the Oscar-winning movie, "The Last Emperor."

Starck said they were looking for Westerners to play the role of tourists. "At the very end of the movie, a Chinese tour guide leads a group of Westerners to the throne. Because I'm tall you can see me, but if you blink at the wrong time you'll miss it," he said. "It was a great experience because the director, Bernardo Bertolucci, was there the whole time."

It was not difficult for Starck to adjust to the Chinese culture. "The Chinese very much want to learn English. Nobody really wanted to speak Chinese to me. All of our classes and discussions were spoken in English," he said.

However, he said that doing simple things could be complicated and time consuming. "It would take half a day to do my banking by the time I got there and filled out all of the necessary forms," he said.

Starck felt a special impact over the UI campus shootings last week because of his involvement with the Chinese.

"There's a collective value that the Chinese culture has that we don't have in the U.S.," he said. "In China when someone does something of a criminal nature, the entire family suffers, whereas in the U.S. it's the individual that has rights and responsibilities, and they pay the consequences for their actions."

Starck wrote in his book that "one year in China was not enough time to experience the country or to develop much competency in the language. But it was long enough to begin to appreciate a culture vastly different from our own."

CREDIT CARDS

UI students indebted to plastic money

Wendy Alesch
Daily Iowan

Many UI students who are in debt may have to "credit" their problem to the ease of using plastic money. "Credit is deceiving because it seems like it's free, but later you realize it's not," UI senior Jennifer Hansen said. "I often find myself footing the bill for an expensive dinner or buying a round of drinks at The Airliner because at the time it seems like it's free."

Kathryn Fix, a UI junior, has reached her credit limit on two different cards and is paying $35 a month just for interest on her principal debt.

"Getting a credit card was the biggest mistake I ever made," Fix said. "I'd always buy drinks for my friends and just use all my credit until it was gone."

"I maxed out my VISA at $500, and then they raised my limit to $1,000 and I did it again. Now I am getting raped by a 19 percent interest rate, and there is no way I can pay off the principal if I have to keep paying the interest. The whole thing sickens me," Fix said.

These students are not alone. Patrick Harvey, a collector for Citibank Corporation, says that many students who find themselves in trouble abuse their credit card when they first receive it.

"We give students a pretty low limit, somewhere between $600 and $800. They may go out and charge one big item like a stereo and hit the limit with one charge," Harvey said. "It seems like a new toy until they get the bill and have no money to pay it off."

Harvey said there is a greater number of students who maintain their credit cards than students who don't, but that those who do get in trouble have a hard time paying it off. Many students use their student loans to keep up their payments.

But he said some students use their first credit card as a means of establishing good credit.

"They want to try to put together a history so they can get a car loan or a mortgage later on," Harvey said.

Chad Lierman, a junior pre-med major, doesn't look at his card in this light at all. Lierman has 14 credit cards and almost all of them are maxed out. He is $3,700 in debt and doesn't plan to pay it back until he graduates.

"My reasoning is I am spending money now because I will have an excess of money later. Three thousand dollars seems like a lot now, but when I get a job I know I will be making a lot of money, and $3,000 won't seem like that much to pay back," he said.

Lierman recently got a job, and most of the money he makes goes to paying off the interest.

"I've applied for more cards, but I am starting to get turned down now," Lierman said.

Jen Smith, a UI junior, has 12 credit cards, most of which are over their limit. She is $1,500 in debt and did most of that damage in the past three months since school started. She isn't planning on paying off her balance until she graduates, either.

"I need the money now for the lifestyle I want to live," Smith

Andy Scott/Daily Iowan

Credit cards are easily available to students, but the temptation to spend has left many students deep in debt.

said, "If you have friends who have a lot of money, it's easy to charge things just to keep up."

The increased use of credit has had a significant effect on Iowa City businesses. David McCurry, owner of The Airliner, said the establishment had started accepting credit cards for food and bar tabs during the last two years. "We do about $650 to $900 in credit cards a week," he said.

A recent study conducted by Roper CollegeTrack, a market research consulting service, showed that the number of students who are applying for credit cards is on the rise. It has increased by 37 percent in the last two years.

"It was easy to get the card," said UI junior Erin Scott. "I just gave them my vitals and name over the phone. They called me."

Harvey says there are some sure-fire ways to avoid getting in over your head.

"Treat the credit card funds as a loan. Don't change your spending habits just because you have a credit card, and keep an informal register of your credit card expenses to keep track of your debts," he said.

LECTURE COMMITTEE

Crier speaks at UI about role of media in politics

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

The UI Lecture Committee will celebrate 35 years of lecture series next week with a presentation by Catherine Crier, host of CNN's "Crier and Company" and co-anchor of "The World Today" and "International Hour."

Crier, who has earned various prestigious titles in her young career, will speak on "The Media's Role in Politics" on Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Ballroom at the Union.

Crier began her career at the age of 16 when she entered the University of Texas. After completing her law degree at age 23, she worked for the Dallas County district attorney's office where she was named the third woman and youngest felony chief prosecutor.

After three years there, she entered into private practice.

In 1984 Crier became the youngest elected district judge in the state of Texas. Four years later, she resigned this position and began work at CNN.

In March 1991, Crier created "Crier and Company," a program in which special guests and experts discuss political issues in a debate format.

Crier was recognized in 1987 as one of the "Ten Outstanding Working Women in America." In addition, she has been profiled in several magazines and interviewed on the "Today Show."

In celebrating its 35th anniversary, the UI Lecture Committee is hoping to continue its past success by offering bigger names, burning issues and more women speakers. According to Ted Habte-Gabr, head of the UI Lecture Committee, the role of the media in politics is one of these burning issues. Crier was chosen to speak because of her background as a lawyer and a judge and her current experience in broadcasting.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

UISA

Safety, environment, education costs to be discussed at Big 10 conference

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

Campus safety, environmental development and the cost of higher education are issues which will be on the agenda for The Association of Big Ten Students meeting, which will be attended by UI Student Assembly President Jennifer Kelly and UISA Vice President Matt Wise.

The conference begins today and runs through Sunday at Ohio State University in Columbus. According to Wise, it is an opportunity for the different schools to exchange ideas.

"It's a great way to forward student government. If someone has a program, they can share information and problems," he said. "When you're in student government you see the same people with the same ideas; this gives you fresh ideas."

Wise said one issue that he'd like to discuss is coordinating a reaction to the high cost of education at Big Ten schools.

"One idea I'd like to bring is a Big Ten reaction to budget cuts. Unless I'm mistaken, every school has had some cuts and tuition increases," he said. "What I'm really concerned about is the lack of dedication on the part of the state governments to higher education."

Kelly said she would like to get reactions to a plan to have a panel of nationally known speakers on environmental issues discuss environmental development with Big Ten students through a conference call.

The conference, which the Iowa Division of the United Nations Association and the UISA have been planning, would be in anticipation of a UN environmental meeting in Brazil June 11-12, 1992.

Kelly said the forum would give students a chance to voice their opinions.

"Students would have the opportunity to ask questions and express opinions. It's a great chance for students in the Big Ten to make an impact," she said.

Kelly said she hopes that students from the other universities will support the plan.

"We've been planning this for a while, and we'll try to get the other schools interested. This is the first time they've heard the plan, and I'm hoping they're as enthusiastic about it as the UISA is," she said.

In addition to those two issues, Kelly said she would also like to discuss campus safety.

"The main thing that I'd like to get done is introducing the idea of the conference and get feedback, and talk about campus safety," she said.

Funds established to honor victims, help survivor

Daily Iowan

Several memorial and assistance funds have been set up for the victims of last week's tragedy on the UI campus.

According to Alan Swanson of the UI Foundation, all the money donated to the foundation in honor of the victims will be used for UI purposes as decided by the families. The foundation will also forward any donations it receives for the assistance funds to the proper accounts with local banks.

A scholarship fund in memory of Dwight Nicholson and Christoph Goertz in the UI Department of Physics and Astronomy has been organized. Also, an educational fund in memory of Goertz for his children has been established through the UI Community Credit Union.

The T. Anne Cleary Psychology Research Scholarship for International Students was begun in the College of Education.

A memorial fund for Robert Smith has been set up through the founation and the Jesse Smith/Robert Smith memorial fund has been organized through First National Bank.

A trust for Yiling Yang, widow of Linhua Shan, has been established at Iowa State Bank & Trust Company. A memorial fund for Shan has been organized through the foundation.

Miya Sioson Benefit Funds have been set up through Iowa State Bank and MidAmerica Savings Bank.

VETERANS' DAY

Local groups commemorate Pearl Harbor anniversary

Stephen Duncan of the Defense Department is a special guest.

Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

Veterans' Day 1991 will be observed by local organizations Monday night with a banquet marking the 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

Special guests at the banquet will include survivors of the battle, including local residents, as well as Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs Stephen Duncan, said Perry Roberts, a member of the Military Affairs Committee which organized the banquet.

"The event's purpose is to recognize all veterans, of course, but this being the 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor, we felt it would be appropriate to have some of those as special guests," he said.

It was 50 years ago on Dec. 7, 1941, that Japanese war planes launched a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor in Hawaii in the early morning hours. The event, which devastated the harbor, drew the United States into World War II.

Featured speaker at the dinner will be Duncan, who was nominated for his current office by President Reagan in August 1987 and reappointed by President Bush in June 1989. He also serves separately as the Department of Defense Coordinator for Drug Enforcement Policy and Support. In that capacity, he acts as the principal assistant and adviser to the secretary for all policies and programs of the Department of Defense in support of the campaign against illegal drugs.

Duncan, who is also a lawyer, received the Bronze Star and Navy Commendation Medal, among other awards, for his service in Vietnam.

Roberts said he is impressed with the banquet speaker committee's record in getting highly qualified speakers for the event.

"I don't know how these guys do it," he said. "These speakers are heavy hitters in this town."

Roberts said the importance of Veterans' Day must not be forgotten.

"We're talking about people

who've given of their efforts, their time and their lives in the defense of this country," he said.

The banquet will be held at The Highlander Inn and Supper Club, Highway 1 and Interstate 80, exit 246, at 7 p.m.

Veterans' Day will also be observed nationally with annual ceremonies taking place at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Va.

Midwestern TV, radio stations to be sold

Steven P. Rosenfeld
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Palmer Communications Inc., the company that gave Ronald Reagan his first job in broadcasting, said Thursday it will sell television and radio stations in Iowa and Oklahoma to an investment group that includes two of its managers.

Hughes Broadcasting Partners of New Canaan, Conn., said it signed a letter of intent to buy NBC affiliate television stations WHO in Des Moines and KFOR in Oklahoma City and Des Moines radio stations WHO-AM and KLYF-FM. The partnership was formed earlier this year to purchase ABC affiliate WOKR-TV in Rochester, N.Y.

Among the unsuccessful suitors of WHO-TV was NBC News President Michael Gartner, who still has a home in Des Moines, where he was once editor of The Des Moines Register. Gartner earlier said he had a small interest in a group trying to buy the Iowa TV station.

The sale, which is subject to approval from the Federal Communications Commission, is expected to be completed by spring 1992, both sides said in a joint statement.

The price was not disclosed, but Hughes' chairman, Paul Hughes, said in a telephone interview from Rochester that it would primarily be a cash deal.

In addition to Hughes, the partnership includes affiliates of two

New York investment banking firms — Veronis, Suhler & Associates Inc. and Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. Inc. Two Palmer broadcasting executives, Kenneth MacQueen and Dan Adams, also have an interest in the purchase of the Palmer properties and will become top executives of the Hughes subsidiary running those operations.

The move came as Palmer, the company that gave Ronald Reagan jobs at radio stations WOC in Davenport and WHO, continued a shift in focus from broadcasting to cellular telephones. In 1989, Palmer sold its television station in Davenport for $48.5 million.

Both Hughes and MacQueen said they do not intend any changes.

NATO

 But it was Bush's challenge to NATO that dominated the opening sessions of the two-day summit. Bush pledged the United States would never abandon NATO but bluntly told his West European allies they must say whether they want America in their lives or want America in their lives toward closer European union.

of pro-American sentiment as the alliance undertook its largest transformation since it was formed in 1949 to counter Soviet expansionism.

A document on future military strategy issued by the summit leaders stressed the importance of the link between the United States and Canada and Europe. It said the presence of U.S. conventional and nuclear arms in Europe remained vital.

Secretary of State James Baker, asked later about Bush's comments, said suggestions that there was a move to eliminate the U.S.

role in NATO were "a total red herring." But he said that as the goals of the alliance were redefined, "we want to make certain that there are no ambiguities and that there is no confusion."

Britain, doggedly pro-American, and Italy declared that a NATO political declaration to be issued today spells out what Italian Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis called an "undoubtedly answer."

"Europe does want to maintain the trans-Atlantic partnership, including the military aspect, including the central role of the alliance," said De Michelis.

But France, always edgy about U.S. domination in Europe and the prime advocate of the West Europeans assuming their own defense role, reacted coolly to Bush's statement.

"We wish the American presence to remain in Europe," French President Francois Mitterrand's spokesman Jean Musitelli told reporters.

"... It is not we Europeans who pressed the Americans to withdraw from Europe," Musitelli said, adding that when Bush announced this fall the withdrawal of U.S. tactical ground-launched missiles from Europe, "he did not ask the alliance for permission. ... He did not worry whether his decision might affect the nuclear potential of the alliance."

Bush had asked during a closed session whether a French-German proposal this month for a European army was intended to exclude the United States. Britain has expressed fears it could undermine the U.S. military commitment to Europe.

Despite the tension, the alliance adopted a new strategy which underlined continuing cohesiveness.

"We no longer face the threat of a massive attack," the draft declaration said, adding that, "in an environment of uncertainty and unpredictable challenges our Alliance, which provides the essential trans-Atlantic link ... retains its enduring value."

Officials said the leaders agreed to invite the Soviet Union and eight other former communist countries to join them in a new North Atlantic "cooperation council."

The others are Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Bulgaria and the three Baltic republics of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.

 Matsumoto, Peter Shane and William Buss — also gave presentations both praising the Bill of Rights and calling for better interpretations or outright changes to the document.

Blank spoke on the Americans with Disabilities Act outlawing discrimination against mentally and physically disabled people. He suggested that more money should be spent on job training and development rather than support and welfare.

Chamallas spoke on the relationship of feminism to anti-discrimination law and said that victims of sexual discrimination are often not treated fairly by the judicial system since the burden of proof is on the victim to prove that the defendant committed a wrong.

Matsumoto spoke on the practice of discrimination in American society despite the fact that the Bill of Rights suggests that discrimination is wrong. "The belief in universal rights is contradicted by racial discrimination," he said.

Shane spoke on the vagueness of the wording of the Bill of Rights and how it was intended to favor wealthy citizens more than slaves, women and American Indians, and still does to a degree. "We celebrate the Bill of Rights because we can't say with certainty what it means," he said. "The best thing about the Bill of Rights is that it doesn't have to stay that way."

Buss spoke on the topic, "Not All Freedom of Speech is the Speech of Freedom." He suggested that while people are encouraged to speak freely in the United States, when it comes to speaking on certain subjects, like the concept of freedom, they are expected to conform to the ideology of our society and government.

"The prohibition on government of intervening in speech does not mean government is prohibited from speaking," he said.

However, Buss added that the Bill of Rights and the judiciary have "great potential" to improve the way the rights of Americans are applied.

Survivors search for kin's bodies

Oliver Teves
Associated Press

ORMOC, Philippines — A wall of water swept up Shirley Erlado, destroyed her home and killed most of her family — among more than 3,300 people who perished in the floods and landslides that struck two Philippine islands.

She joined other dazed survivors Thursday, wandering the streets of this devastated port. Officials were still burying the dead from Tuesday's disaster and said they were concerned about the threat of disease and low food stocks.

"We are so busy burying the dead and taking care of the living that we don't have time to assess the damage," said Maria Victoria Locsin, the mayor of the once-prosperous farming and shipping center of about 160,000 people.

Officials said Thursday that 3,009 died in Ormoc, on the central island of Leyte, and about 350 died elsewhere on Leyte and on the neighboring island of Negros. More than 2,000 are missing in Ormoc and presumed dead.

Hundreds of bodies have been bulldozed into mass graves after no one claimed them. Officials believe families were wiped out, and there will be no one alive to claim many of the bodies.

Yet many bloated bodies still lie unattended under the tropical sun, and the air is thick with the stench of death.

For the survivors, food and fresh water are running low. Mud is spread over stocks of rice, fish and vegetables in the city market. A thick layer of mud covers the rice, sugar and coconut fields outside of town.

Authorities on Thursday appealed for food, medicine and clothing to help the survivors cope with the fourth major natural disaster to strike the country in two years.

The disaster came as Tropical Storm Thelma swept over the region southeast of Manila, dumping nearly six inches of rain in 24 hours.

After the daylong rains, a wall of water surged unexpectedly as streams swollen by mountain landslides flowed into high tides and strong ocean waves whipped up by Thelma.

"I was on my way home when I was met by water neck deep," said Erlado, a 34-year-old market vendor. "When I got there, we no longer had a house."

Her husband, Wilfredo, had been preparing lunch for the children, and her 8-year-old son Gilbert was able to scramble to safety on a roof. But her husband and three of their children died, and three others are missing.

Rep. Carmelo Locsin, the mayor's husband, blamed the degree of devastation on the fact that illegal logging had depleted vegetation — nature's protection against landslides — in the nearby mountains.

As evidence of illegal timber operations, freshly cut logs could be seen amid the debris in Ormoc. Such logging is a nationwide problem.

"I have been warning against illegal logging," he said. "The people are now suffering for it."

The damage was severe: Homes and offices were shattered, cars and trucks were strewn about, slammed into walls or swept into the sea. Watery mud littered with garbage and other debris was ankle deep throughout the commercial district. Along the shore, the limbs of human bodies protruded from the litter of furniture, appliances and power poles.

The devastation was so great that authorities have had problems compiling accurate casualty lists. The floods wiped out three coastal shanty communities, each with a population of about 3,000.

SOVIET UNION

Russians fete dissolution of communism

Thomas Ginsberg
Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, U.S.S.R. — The birthplace of the Bolshevik Revolution cheered the demise of Communist power with skydivers, fireworks and concerts Thursday. But the festivities contrasted starkly with the angry lines at Soviet food stores.

In Moscow and elsewhere, people foraged for food in continued panic-buying before steep price increases take effect in the new year. Ethnic fighting in the Caucasus caused shortages that led to bread riots in Armenia.

The anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, a day that once was the most sacred holiday in the Soviet calendar, was marked in the capital by two small rallies, kept 200 yards apart by police in gray greatcoats.

Communist supporters carrying Lenin placards marched through Red Square, denouncing Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

"It's not a holiday for me!" declared one older woman at the pro-Communist rally in front of the Lenin Mausoleum. "Hunger! Hunger!"

A subdued rally of anti-Communist demonstrators, led by Russian Orthodox priests, mourned the victims of the Soviet regime.

The traditional Red Square parade of soldiers, tanks and missiles that glorified Soviet power was canceled by Gorbachev after the failed coup discredited the party and forced the suspension of its activities.

Less than a mile away from the Kremlin, hundreds of people lined up glumly for bread at the capital's largest bread store. Queues for milk and bread formed elsewhere in the city early on the holiday morning.

Despite the nationwide economic crisis, the mood was upbeat in St. Petersburg, where more than 10,000 people massed in front of the Winter Palace to cheer the official rechristening of the city after more than half a century of being called Leningrad in honor of the founder of the Soviet state.

"You, the residents of this great city, must have pride in your city and do everything you can to make this a place of beauty and culture," popular Mayor Anatoly Sobchak told the crowd in front of the 200-year-old pastel palace.

The tricolor Russian flag fluttered from buildings. Stunt planes roared overhead and parachutists plunged down through the gray sky trailing red, white and blue streamers and nearly hitting spectators in Palace Square.

Spontaneous small groups denouncing the Communists sprung up around the huge square.

"I cannot forget the terror of communism! I cannot forget the millions who died in labor camps!" St. Petersburg City Council member Marina Soliyev screamed to anybody who would listen. "This is a day of national tragedy."

Among the dignitaries in St. Petersburg was the successor to the Russian throne, Grand Duke Vladimir Kirillovich Romanov, who arrived from Paris on his first visit to his ancestral homeland.

U.S. House approves civil rights legislation

The new bill makes it easier for plaintiffs to obtain damages in job discrimination cases.

William M. Welch
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ending two years of charged debate over racial quotas, the House on Thursday overwhelmingly passed a major civil rights bill that makes it easier for victims of job discrimination to sue and collect damages.

The passage, on a 381-38 vote, sends the measure to President Bush, who has said he will sign it. Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., hailed the House action as "a historic moment."

"The struggle to enact civil rights legislation in 1991 has engaged us for a very long time," he said.

The House vote was to accept the same bill passed by the Senate last week. It was the product of long negotiations between Bush aides and Senate sponsors.

Five Democrats joined 33 Republicans in voting against the civil rights bill. Supporting the bill were 252 Democrats, 128 Republicans and the one independent.

The bill expands the rights of job discrimination victims, including the objects of sexual harassment, to sue and collect damages. It overturns a series of Supreme Court rulings that had increased the burdens of proof on plaintiffs in job discrimination cases.

With approval a foregone conclusion, the final action came after partisans on both sides debated who had blinked in the negotiations with the White House.

Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, a conservative Republican from California, charged that despite Bush's claims to the contrary, the bill "enshrines race-based quotas."

"This bill is not a retreat — it's a complete surrender," Rohrabacher said.

Rep. Craig Washington, a black Democrat from Texas, said Bush's quotas charge had always been a "red herring." He said the success of Louisiana Republican gubernatorial nominee David Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan leader, prompted Bush to abandon the racially divisive argument.

"David Duke took the sheet off the quotas argument," Washington said.

The final debate was dominated by outrage over a provision added by the Senate that exempts from its provisions the plaintiffs in one case, some 2,000 Asian-American and other minority employees of an Alaska salmon cannery known as Wards Cove Packing Co.

Their case resulted in a 1989 Supreme Court ruling that significantly narrowed the rights of plaintiffs in some job discrimination cases. Undoing that court ruling was one of the primary motivations of supporters of the bill, but Senate sponsors agreed to Bush administration demands to include the provision exempting that case alone from the change in law.

In an emotional speech, Rep. Neil Abercrombie, D-Hawaii, denounced the compromise as an "extortion" that subjects two minority groups — Asian-Americans and Alaskan natives — to unfair treatment. He said Congress would never agree to such treatment for more politically powerful minorities.

"Do you think this would be happening if it was 2,000 Irish-Americans or 2,000 Jewish-Americans?" Abercrombie demanded.

However, the House voted to go along with Democratic leaders who proposed a rule permitting only a straight vote on whether to accept the Senate bill, without any amendments. They said Bush had threatened to veto the bill if the exemption were removed.

"This bill is so fragile, we're just afraid any amendment will sink it," said House Rules Chairman Joe Moakley, D-Mass.

The criticism prompted Foley to come to the House floor to cool tempers. He promised to back a separate bill removing the exemption from the Wards Cove case and urged House members to accept the Senate's bill and the House leadership's resolution ruling any amendments out of order.

"It is not a perfect bill," Foley said. "... I will exercise every effort on my part to see that it is corrected."

The Senate approved the measure a week ago on a 93-5 vote.

Senators accepted changes that would apply the bill's job protections, and those of other anti-discrimination laws, to their employees and to those of the White House. In addition, the Senate agreed to require its own members to pay any judgments in such cases out of their own pockets.

The House adopted no similar provisions for its own employees.

Rep. Rostenkowski proposes workers' tax cut

Jim Luther
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee Thursday proposed a temporary tax cut of up to $200 a year per worker to be financed by higher taxes on the wealthy.

The tax cut, aimed at stimulating the economy through increased consumer spending, would be available only in 1992 and 1993. The tax increases would be permanent, helping to reduce the budget deficit in future years.

Aides to Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chief sponsor of the plan, said he might hold public hearings on the measure this year although no action is planned before early in 1992.

Rostenkowski unveiled his plan only a day after Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who chairs the Senate Finance Committee, formally introduced his own tax-cut bill. Bentsen said he wants to begin work soon on the bill, although acknowledging there is little chance for completing action this year.

In each of the two years, Rostenkowski's bill would give workers a credit against their income taxes for up to $200 of Social Security-Medicare taxes paid. A working couple could get up to $400 a year.

The full credit would be available to a worker making about $13,100 or more a year.

Workers whose incomes are so low that they owe no income tax would qualify for part of the credit.

The tax cut would be paid for by creating a fourth, 35 percent tax rate, which would apply to individuals with incomes above the $85,000 level and to couples making more than about $145,000 a year.

The current top rate applying to people at those levels is 31 percent. Most Americans pay a top rate of 15 percent while many middle-income people pay a maximum 28 percent rate. Those rates would not be changed by the bill.

Rostenkowski also would impose a 10 percent surtax on couples and individuals with taxable incomes above $1 million.

Although there is considerable sentiment in Congress for a tax cut to stimulate the economy, President Bush has yet to tip his hand. The president has simply restated support for a cut in the capital gains tax, which hits profits from the sale of investments and other property.

Although Democratic leaders have fought such a cut as a windfall for the rich, many Democrats in Congress now are offering their own — though far more limited — capital gains cuts.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., and 30 other senators were introducing a bill Thursday that would cut capital gains taxes on long-term investments in high-risk small businesses. Most sponsors of that bill are Democrats.

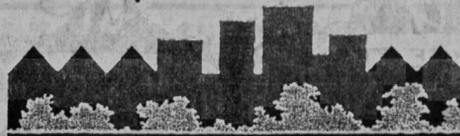

Bentsen's bill has attracted wide support in the Senate.

Democrats to blame for Duke's political success

How can the people of Louisiana possibly vote for David Duke? He was a Nazi and a member of the Ku Klux Klan. His entire life has been based on racism and prejudice. He claims to have changed, but his words can scarcely be believed. The people of Louisiana can be neither stupid enough to believe Duke nor prejudiced enough to want a Nazi governor. Why do so many people support Duke?

The liberal-dominated media would have you believe that George Bush, Ronald Reagan and the Republican Party are responsible for Duke's success. "Just look at Willie Horton," they say. "Conservatives have always used race to win elections. Bush and Reagan have been preaching racism and prejudice for years. David Duke is exactly what the Republican Party is all about." As usual, the liberal media is dead wrong. David Duke is a success, not because of Republicans, but because of Democrats. Liberals must bear the blame for David Duke.

Liberals call Duke a racist, and the people of Louisiana do not care. They do not care because they remember that liberals also called Reagan and Bush racists. In fact, they think, liberals seem to call a lot of people racist. The people of Louisiana have heard the liberals cry bigot too often to take it seriously. Duke is a racist, but people have become so used to Democrats charging their opponents with prejudice that it no longer rings true.

Duke is also not out on the campaign trail quoting from "Mein Kampf." He is talking about welfare reform and equal rights for all, not privileged rights for minorities. His opponents say these are code words for racist policies. But where did this code come from? When did blacks come to be equated with welfare abuse? When did the belief in judging people on the content of character become the mark of a bigot?

The fact is that these are not code words but legitimate issues. Affirmative action is discrimination against white people. A welfare system which punishes you for saving too much money but rewards you for having too many kids desperately needs reform. People are not supporting Duke because of some secret code, but because he is addressing their complaints about liberal policies gone wild.

Some of the whites of Louisiana support Duke because he is a racist. Most support him because they think no one cares about them. Liberal hearts bleed profusely over blacks, Hispanics, feminists and homosexuals but the white middle and lower classes feel ignored. Especially in this time of recession, white people are worried about losing their jobs to blacks and spending their tax money to support welfare queens. Liberals are not seen as addressing these concerns.

David Duke will probably be the next governor of Louisiana. Hopefully, he has changed his ways and beliefs. But if the restaurants on Bourbon Street start putting "No Colored Allowed" signs in their windows, Democrats have no one to blame but themselves.

Response from ISU

To the Editor:

At this critical time of unspeakable grief at the recent shooting in Iowa City by Gang Lu, we, the community of students and scholars from China, wish to extend our deepest sympathy to the families of the victims.

Like all Americans, we were stunned by the immensity of this tragedy. And like all Americans, we are also angered by this brutal killing rampage. Such brutality is unforgivable by Chinese and any other societal standards.

Our grief at the loss of the irreplaceable faculty at the UI is unfathomable. The deaths of Professors Dwight Nicholson, Christoph Goertz and Robert Smith will be long remembered at ISU. We Chinese have the highest regard for the teaching profession, as exemplified by the old proverb, "He who teaches me for one day is my father for life."

We are constantly struck by the irony of the shooting of Anne Cleary, a longtime friend of Chinese students. A more caring, gentle and forgiving person could probably not be found in this area.

Linhua Shan will also be remembered at ISU. It was during his 1988-89 presidency of the UI's Chinese student organization that various ISU Chinese students came to appreciate his fine leadership and personal qualities.

The lone survivor, Miya Sison, her mother, Sonya, and brothers, Renato, Ronnie and Rudy, are continually in our thoughts. A number of our members are personally acquainted with this remarkable and talented family. Sonya has always been proud of the Chinese blood in their family lineage.

We appreciate the concern and understanding shown by the ISU faculty, students and administration at this emotional time.

RESOLUTION

To the Editor:

We see the tragedy of Friday as the act of a single individual which does not reflect on any national group or on any program on this campus. The Graduate Student Senate believes that the University of Iowa community is made a better place by the contributions of the people of all nationalities. We want to express our support and concern for the entire University of Iowa community and especially for the family and friends of those touched by the loss.

Forgive, but don't forget

To the Editor:

In the wake of Friday's terrible tragedy, many seem to be confused as to how they should react to such a devastating event. I fear that the Chinese community might be threatened by ignorant people who want to vent their frustrations in a negative manner.

Right now it is the time for the community to heal its wounds and to mourn its dead. We must be aware that no one in the Chinese community is responsible for Lu's actions; they are just as shocked and outraged as anyone else. It is time to forgive Gang Lu for his actions, but we must never forget the positive impact the deceased had on our lives.

Sports first, classes second

To the Editor:

Once again, the UI sends us an indirect message that sports are more important than academics by canceling classes on Monday in the wake of the killing spree but allowing the football game to continue. Somehow, having the players wear plain black helmets just doesn't touch me as profoundly as it probably did the sports fans there Saturday. Does it go without saying that there's just too much money and fanaticism involved to cancel a football game no matter what the tragedy is?

If the UI would have been consistent by conducting the game and classes as usual, that would have been acceptable. By merely wearing plain black helmets on the field instead of canceling the whole game in light of the canceled classes, they send a message of spitting on the memory of the victims instead of honoring them.

It's as ridiculous as if the university would decide to have classes on Monday and ask everyone to carry black notebooks.

Graduate abuse at the UI

To the Editor:

The recent tragedy on the UI campus has brought to the forefront an important issue: graduate student abuse by their advisers and the university system.

Most of my friends who are teaching assistants and research assistants are overworked and underpaid. The teaching assistants are forced to carry 10 to 12 hours while teaching up to four classes. The research assistants, who are usually assigned 10 hours of work, work an average of 20 hours or more while carrying at least 9 hours and in an increasing majority of cases end up doing their professors' research.

These students with these workloads are expected to maintain at least a "B" average. Along with the workload, they are often threatened with academic punishment from their advisers, who in most cases hold great power over them.

Violence breeds violence

To the Editor:

Steve Cruse, in his brief article in the special Saturday edition ["Psychiatrist: It's symptomatic of society," Nov. 2], quoted a psychiatrist, Dr. Paul Loeffelholz, as saying that the Friday tragedy may be partially due to society's increasing acceptance of suicide. I would suggest it is due instead to society's increasing acceptance of violence in general as a way to solve problems or resolve conflicts, be they over Middle East oil or academic honors.

Such acceptance is increasingly fostered by materials presented to us by the mass media. Therefore, every time we watch a You'd throw the big clumps over your head, and they would land in the back yard, bits of mud raining down from the explosion.

And then we would use as rifles the Wiffle bat and the golf clubs my grandfather had left my mom. I would even sneak out the broken power drill and use it as a side arm. I had to be careful because I had cut off the cord to make it more realistic, and the little bits of wire would cut you wide open. We'd play Guadalcanal and Okinawa and Iwo Jima. And the Japanese would always attack in one large, thronging mob. I would always kill two of us, but whoever's turn it was to die last would finish the last one off before biting the dust himself. Dead warriors of the Imperial Sun would be strewn everywhere, from the rusting swing set to the patch of dirt that served as third base. Sometimes we'd play the Battle of the Bulge and kill Germans, too.

It was mostly my idea, the war thing. I read World War II books all the time. I was this scrawny, little kid with a bizarre sense of humor, a combination that drew bullies like moths to a freeping porchlight. So I enjoyed very much being strong and valor-filled in the back yard under the mulberry tree.

It bothers me a bit sometimes, thinking back to how much I enjoyed doing that. In some ways, the foxhole was just a childhood game, and that's all. But in others, it was more. Part of it was rage that exists even in a child of Iowa.

Nothing about human nature scares me so much as that wild rage, that part of us so desperately willing to throw ourselves away and to bring others along. It can captivate you. It seems to have so much more impact and power than our more noble impulses that they seem frail in comparison.

But we must remember the other part. The part that is equally desperate to create, to have something to build up.

There is so much to repair. But I honestly believe there is an ability and a desire to do the work. And that it is the equal of the damage that has been done.

Mitch Martin's column appears Fridays on the Viewpoints Page.

Lessons from youth offer guide for future

The twins and I built ourselves a foxhole in the garden. We started in third grade's spring and finished the summer after fourth.

I lived in a big green, peeling house in what passes for a big town in Iowa. The previous owners had cultivated a little garden on a hill behind the garage, which was big and green and always peeling, too. The garden was under a mulberry tree. It dropped squishy berries all over the place. During the summer your bare feet would stain such a dark blue that you'd think they'd stay that way forever.

My mother let the garden go. She worked. A garden is something a working mother doesn't have time for.

I remember one afternoon, I looked out the dining room window at the garden. It looked forlorn with its covering of long, thick pieces of grass, the kind that almost looked tasty.

I rushed over to my mom armed with the Begging Child Routine. I grabbed on to her skirt and put my head on her arm, jumping up and down whining please, please, please.

"What?"
"Can I dig a little hole in the garden?"
"Why?"

I just wanna.
"Well, just don't get too dirty." Anyway, it went something like that. In her unsuspecting Momness, little did she know that two years later a 4-foot deep, 8-foot wide hole would have to be boarded up because it was too unsafe to leave and too immense to fill. But I am letting my pride get in the way of the story.

I immediately pulled two humongo, steel salad spoons and a screwdriver out of the kitchen drawer and left them in the garden. Then I went and pruned the twins from their mother. This was always a tough trick.

In between fighting over who got the screwdriver, we managed to excavate a hole about 6 inches deep and 3 feet wide. It was so much easier to widen than deepen. The sides of the hole would just shave off, but the bottom was reluctant. We were finely coated in a brown-black film by dinner. I caught hell, but the twins caught more.

We worked on it, on and off, for about a year, minus the winter. I kept stealing different tools from the garage in a continual search for the perfect digging utensil: saws, golf clubs, the relative merits of Phillips vs. standard screwdrivers were argued at length, a T-square, a tire iron and things I no longer remember. My dad would occasionally find the claw part of his hammer clogged with dirt and get all angry with me. He did not understand.

I was this scrawny, little kid with a bizarre sense of humor, a combination that drew bullies like moths to a freeping porchlight.

I would like to take credit for it, but I believe it was one of the twins who came up with the idea of piling the dirt up around the edge of the hole instead of just tossing it away. It made the work go twice as fast, the hole going up as we burrowed down.

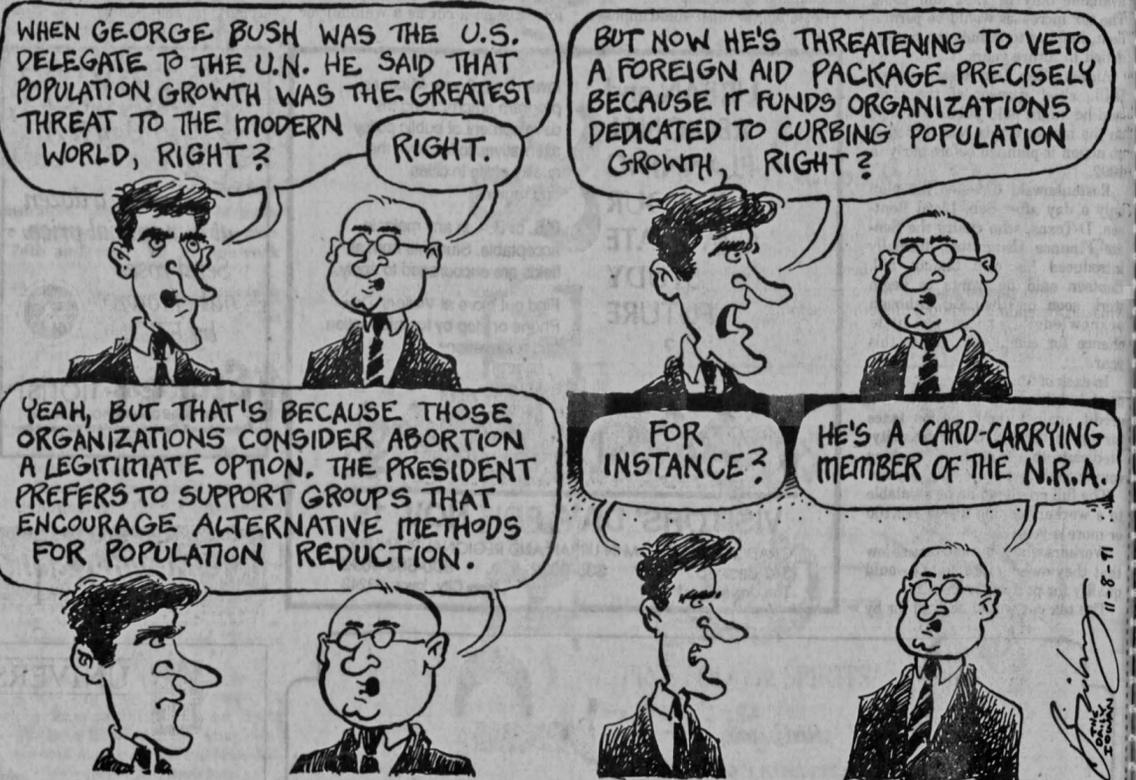

The worst thing that happened along the way was a visitation from my Evil Sister. Her and I had that Lucy/Linus kind of a relationship. She and her best friend showed up with a garden spade one day. "To help out."

Anyway, using a clearly unsanctioned tool, they did three months work in about 15 minutes. It was a dirty deal. Digging that hole was my joy. I don't think I've ever felt so cheated in my whole life.

Rainy days became exciting because about a day and a half afterward the dirt parapets would be perfect. Just moist enough to feel like a real foxhole without being above the Mom-threshold of messiness. At least not my mom.

Better yet, you could pull clumps of embankment off and throw them like they were hand grenades at the banzai hordes of the Japanese.

Cuba to open up to foreign investment

1 MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Fidel Castro of Cuba has told foreign businessmen he's decided to dilute his hard-line brand of communism and open his struggling country to foreign investment, Mexican news agency reports.

Speaking at the inauguration of a trade fair, Castro evoked communism's founders in justifying the move.

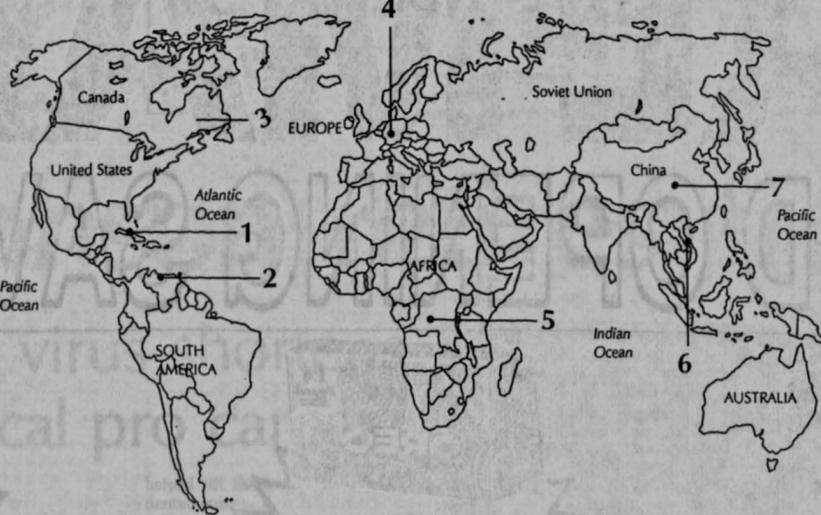

"In no book did Marx, Engels or Lenin say that it is ever possible for countries to develop without capital, without technology, without markets," he was quoted as saying by the news agency Notimex in a dispatch from Havana.

"Cooperation between the socialist system and the capitalist system is perfectly possible," he was quoted as saying in Sunday's speech to about 200 executives from 26 nations.

"We will be the best allies of those who will work with and have faith in Cubans."

Castro said the effects of the U.S. trade embargo on Cuba's struggling economy have grown even more acute because of the loss of most aid and trade from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

He said Cuba is interested in foreign investment in tourism, the chemical industry, transportation, textiles and oil production.

Strike paralyzes parts of Venezuela

2 CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — About 270,000 workers went on strike Thursday to protest fuel and transport price increases, halting bus and rail traffic.

Arrests were reported in the capital and southeastern state.

Four major unions called for the dawn-to-dusk strike in Caracas, a neighboring port and the southeastern state of Bolivar to protest increases in government-regulated gasoline and public transport prices.

Police arrested at least 39 union and student leaders who were accused of plotting violence, according to a human rights group.

In Bolivar, where the country's major steel and aluminum plants are located, an estimated 200,000 workers walked off the job.

Police fired tear gas to disperse an unruly crowd of about 500 people in the state capital, Ciudad Bolivar. A few injuries were reported. In San Felix, east of Ciudad Bolivar, protesters burned eight vehicles, according to a union spokesman.

About 70,000 workers in the capital participated in the strike.

Authorities had been gearing up for the strike because of fears it could ignite rioting of the type that has claimed a handful of lives and left dozens injured over the past three weeks. Rioting in February 1989 left 300 dead.

more stringent than those in the United States.

The measure, which now goes to the Senate, imposes a 28-day waiting period for firearms acquisition certificates, raises the gun ownership age from 16 to 18, requires as yet unspecified storage regulations, bans automatic firearms converted to fire semiautomatically, stiffens penalties for crimes with guns and reduces magazine sizes.

Passage is assured in the Senate, which is controlled by the governing Conservatives, but the measure may be amended. Justice Minister Kim Campbell, a strong supporter of the bill, said the Senate will have to be very careful in proposing amendments.

She has been trying to get a gun control bill passed in Parliament since the tragic attack in Montreal on Dec. 6, 1989.

The measure was passed 189-14, with all political parties voting in favor. Among the opponents were eight members of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's ruling Progressive Conservatives.

Members of all parties were split on the issue during committee discussions. Some wanted a tougher law to help police, and others did not want the law to impose on hunters and other legitimate gun users.

6 HONG KONG (AP) — The British colonial government will force 59 Vietnamese boat people back to their Communist homeland on Saturday, the first forcible return of such refugees since a late-night maneuver almost two years ago.

Government spokesmen told reporters today that just 20 men, 16 women and 23 children under the age of 16 would be forced aboard a Hercules C-130 transport plane and flown to Hanoi on Saturday morning.

Correctional Services officers said they informed the group of the plans but declined to report their reaction. They said Hong Kong's refugee camps, the scene of violence during the last week, were quiet Thursday.

Some refugees, despite being held in the squalid, overcrowded camps, have threatened suicide if forced to return to Vietnam, and thousands have held protests in recent days.

Hong Kong, burdened by 59,000 of the refugees, wants to send back those who fled for economic reasons.

Thursday's announcement came nine days after Vietnam signed an agreement with Britain that could force many of the refugees home and begin the end of a tragedy that sent 1.5 million Vietnamese fleeing communism in rickety boats to neighboring countries.

7 BEIJING (AP) — China released more information Monday about how it has helped Iran develop a nuclear program, including providing Tehran with a small reactor.

The Chinese government acknowledged last week it had cooperated with Iran in a non-military nuclear program but gave no details.

Monday's announcement appeared to be aimed at convincing U.S. critics that China's involvement was restricted to commercial development and peaceful.

U.S.-Chinese relations are at their lowest level since ties were restored in 1979, and Secretary of State James Baker announced Sunday that he will travel to China this month for talks because of "real problems" between the countries.

Beijing and Washington are at odds over many issues, including Beijing's bloody suppression of the pro-democracy movement in 1989.

Mobutu Sese Seko's poorly paid troops, the money and supplies went with them.

Soldiers have stolen much of the supplies the foreign aid organizations left behind, according to Dr. Pelagie Maholo, blood bank director of Mama Yemo Hospital, and Dr. Bernard Hody, chief of Doctors Without Borders-Zaire.

"When donors arrive we just ask them what blood group they are and take the blood. We have no facilities for testing it and no choice but to give it," lamented Dr. Oma Lok at Kalembe-Lembe Hospital, the city's main children's hospital.

11 BEIJING (AP) — China released more information Monday about how it has helped Iran develop a nuclear program, including providing Tehran with a small reactor.

The Chinese government acknowledged last week it had cooperated with Iran in a non-military nuclear program but gave no details.

Monday's announcement appeared to be aimed at convincing U.S. critics that China's involvement was restricted to commercial development and peaceful.

Palermo may not come back

DALLAS — Steve Palermo, the American league umpire unable to walk on his own since he was shot trying to stop a robbery this summer, told jurors he may never return to the game he loves.

"It's a very uncertain life right now and it's a life I wish on no one. It's devastating," Palermo said in dramatic and emotional testimony Wednesday in the trial of one of four suspects in the July 7 incident.

His voice cracking, Palermo recounted the night his life was changed by a robber's bullet that hit his spine after he and a former college football player caught one of the robbers, then were confronted by the others.

"One of them reached and pulled something out and I hollered and then — pow, pow, pow, pow," said Palermo, who struck the witness stand with his hand to mimic the sound of the bullets.

Palermo, 41, now needs leg braces and canes to walk. Doctors don't know if he'll ever regain full use of his legs.

Team's loss not McEnroe's

BIRMINGHAM, England — John McEnroe says his omission from the United States team that will play the Davis Cup final against France will be the team's loss rather than his own.

McEnroe had said he wanted to be chosen to play doubles because of his ability to act as a reserve singles player if necessary.

But when he learned Tuesday night that he had not been named to the team, he was taken aback by the decision.

"It took the wind out of my sails a bit, but I'm a professional player," McEnroe said Wednesday. "It's the team's loss. That's the way I look at it."

FOOTBALL

Big surprise: Rocket may take off to NFL

TORONTO — Rocket Ismail's days with the CFL's Toronto Argonauts are numbered and he could be playing for the Los Angeles Raiders before the end of the NFL season, football analyst Fred Edelstein says.

"Every piece of information I have indicates that the length of Rocket's career with the Toronto Argonauts will be exactly one season," the Toronto Globe and Mail quoted Edelstein as saying in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Ismail, one of the outstanding college players last season with Notre Dame, signed a four-year, $18 million deal with the Argonauts on the eve of the NFL draft this year.

He was the consensus No. 1 pick heading into the draft, but after signing with Toronto, he didn't go until a later round when the Raiders selected him.

The Argonauts finished first in the CFL's East Division this season with a 13-5 record.

Don't give the plays to the other team

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Former Tennessee assistant football coach Jack Sells was assaulted in a local nightclub about a week after it was revealed he faxed Vols offensive plays to a Florida coach.

Sells was in Michael's lounge on one when a man approached and asked if he was Jack Sells. When Sells said yes, the man punched him in the left eye, according to a police report.

"I can't comment on the incident because I have things pending right now," Sells told the Chattanooga News-Free Press when asked about the nightclub scuffle. No arrest has been made.

The incident occurred 12 days after Florida beat Tennessee 35-18 at Gainesville. Shortly after that game, it was reported that Sells had faxed several pages of Tennessee game plans to Florida, and Gators coach Steve Spurrier eventually admitted receiving the plans.

Sells, a 29-year-old Cookeville native, was fired June 7.

Johnson retires from NBA

AIDS virus shortens Magical pro career

John Nadel
 Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson said he had tested positive for the AIDS virus and retired from pro basketball Thursday, shocking the sports world and leaving it without one of its true superstars.

In 12 sparkling seasons, Johnson showed the world a new way to play basketball and helped turn the pro game into the biggest sports success story of the 1980s.

Both he and his doctors stressed that he did not have AIDS, a disease of the immune system for which there is no known cure. Both also said that, while Johnson's playing days were over, he was far from through.

"I plan on going on living for a long time and I guess now I can enjoy some of the other sides of living," Johnson said at a news conference.

In becoming one of that select group of athletes known everywhere by just one name — "Magic" — Johnson led the Los Angeles Lakers to five NBA titles and helped lift the league to unprecedented success.

The 32-year-old became one of sport's most recognizable figures for his smile and enthusiasm. The smile was still there Thursday, just faintly dimmed, and he said he would become a spokesman for AIDS groups, hoping to promote safe sex among youngsters.

"This is one of those things you think can't happen to you, but it can," Johnson said. "Sometimes you're a little naive about it and think it can never happen to you. You think it can happen to only other people. But it has happened and my life will go on."

There was no immediate word how Johnson might have caught the virus, but at his news conference he stressed the issue of safe sex.

Lakers team physician Dr. Michael Mellman stressed Johnson's leaving basketball was not a reflection on his immediate physical condition.

"What we witness today is a courageous act by a very special man," Mellman said. "Earvin Johnson has been infected with the AIDS virus. He is not ill in any way."

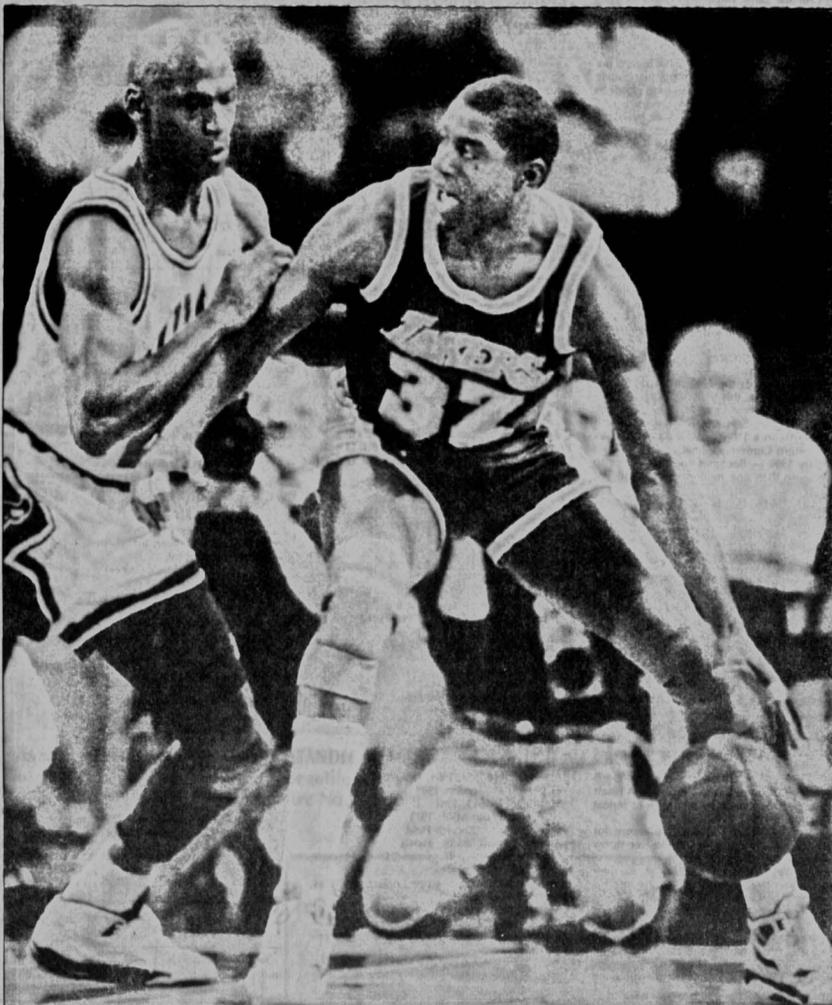

Mellman said the stress exerted on the body by professional basketball would not be good for Johnson's condition.

"The medical judgment is for Earvin to discontinue that. That is not normal activity," he said.

If Johnson remained composed as he announced the shocking news, others could not hide their emotions.

Hundreds of people ventured to the Forum in Inglewood, the Lakers' home court and the site of Johnson's news conference which was televised nationally. People were crying in the streets of Los Angeles and there were many tears in many other cities.

Pat Riley coached Johnson for four of the five NBA championships he won with the Lakers. He wants the tears to end.

Earvin Magic Johnson, who led the Lakers to five NBA championships and the league to unprecedented heights is shown here in his last NBA action before testing positive to the HIV virus.

"His spirit is strong. He is alive, but not very well right now. We do not want to eulogize him," said Riley, now the coach of the New York Knicks. "We want to give him all the support and love we can."

I'm sure all the people around him and those who love him feel worse than he does."

Johnson said he had learned Wednesday that he had tested positive for the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV. Mellman said the tests were taken as part of a routine life-insurance examination.

Hawks can win league title

Jay Nanda
 Daily Iowan

As far as the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference is concerned, it's now or never if someone is going to knock off the Iowa Hawkeyes.

But as far as the conference-leading Hawkeyes go, there are plenty of incentives of their own for wanting to make the last weekend of the regular-season a memorable one.

Despite upping their MCFHC mark to a perfect 8-0, 14-1-1 overall, with a 5-0 pounding of Northern Illinois last Sunday, the Hawkeyes were overtaken by 11-5-1 North Carolina for sole possession of fourth place in the latest NCAA coaches poll. The Hawkeyes and Tar Heels had been tied for No. 4.

So how does a team with the nation's third best record respond to being ranked No. 5?

The answer may be revealed this weekend, as Iowa closes out its 1991 campaign in Columbus, Ohio, with rematches against Ohio State today and No. 6 Northwestern Saturday.

Besides wanting to climb back up in the polls, the Hawkeyes can wrap up their third MCFHC crown in as many years with a pair of victories.

But even though Iowa has a 4-1 win over the Buckeyes and a 3-2 heartstopper versus the Wildcats under its belt, Coach Beth Begin knows it's never easy to defeat a team the second time around.

IOWA FOOTBALL

Spotlight shines on TB's Saunders, Dunbar

James Arnold
 Daily Iowan

The last time Iowa faced the Indiana Hoosiers, Iowa quarterback Chuck Hartlieb led the way with 558 yards passing and three touchdowns.

This season, with an injury to Matt Rodgers making him questionable for the game Saturday, Iowa may have to rely on the legs of Mike Saunders, Marvin "Scooter" Lampkin and Lew Montgomery.

Indiana has a back of its own in Vaughn Dunbar. Mentioned as a high first round draft choice by almost every magazine in the nation, Dunbar has spent the 1991 season running over Big Ten opponents. He leads the Big Ten and the nation in rushing with 1,284 yards, and has rushed for nine touchdowns.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry said Dunbar reminds him and NFL scouts of Detroit's Barry Sanders.

"They think he's a Barry Sanders type of athlete," Fry said. "Tremendous balance, extremely strong runner, great change of direction and 4.38 or 4.4 speed."

Along with his running ability, Dunbar has not been injured this season and has rushed almost 70 more times than anybody in the Big Ten. He has also caught 19 passes.

Meanwhile Iowa's Saunders has a chance to become only the second player in school history to rush and receive for 1,000 yards in a career. The other player was Ronnie Harmon.

"Mike Saunders has been playing with a mission in mind this year," Fry said. "He's been playing hurt and he's just been doing a super job."

If Fry had a choice of having Dunbar or anyone else in his backfield to make up for Saunders' clutch catches, breaking tackles and improved running, he said, "I wouldn't trade him."

If the fate that befell Rodgers should happen to Saunders, Iowa would have to call on a strong backup in Lampkin.

He has been injured all season, but aggravated the injury against Wisconsin. Fry said he will be back close to full strength for Indiana.

"He's back 90 percent," Fry said. See HAWKEYES, Page 2B

Mike Saunders runs through an Iowa State tackler's grasp. He will have to help the Hawkeye's offensive attack if Matt Rodgers is injured.

Ex-CBAer Starks helps Knicks win

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Reserve John Starks scored a career-high 30 points, including eight in a two-minute span in the second quarter when New York took control of the game, as the Knicks beat previously unbeaten Orlando 128-100 Thursday night.

New York, who opened the season with a loss at Orlando six days ago, handed the Magic its first defeat in four games. Golden State is now the lone NBA team with a perfect record.

Patrick Ewing had 24 points for New York while Xavier McDaniel scored 14, all in the first half.

Dennis Scott led Orlando with 29 points while Terry Catledge added 15.

Starks passed his previous career-high of 25 with a dunk with 7:51 remaining in the game, putting New York ahead 99-72. However, it was his second-quarter performance that allowed the Knicks to take control of the game.

Starks hit two 3-pointers and a layup in a span of 1:53, keying a 12-4 New York burst midway through the quarter as the Knicks took a 53-35 lead. New York held a 65-47 lead at halftime.

Heat 111, Nets 89

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Willie Burton scored 24 points on 9-for-12 shooting and Miami limited New Jersey to 34 percent shooting.

The Heat never trailed in sending the Nets to their second loss in as many nights. A big reason was the play of its front line as Burton teamed with forward Grant Long, who scored 22 points, and center Rony Seikaly with 16 points and 13 rebounds.

HAWKEYES: Spotlight on tailbacks

"He's still got a little hitch in his get-along. You couldn't convince him of it though."
Rushing isn't the Hawkeyes' game this season, though. They are second in the Big Ten in passing offense and fourth in rushing. Fry knows that the loss of Rodgers could put his team in jeopardy.

"I'm sittin on the edge of my chair," Fry said. "Because (Rodgers) is without question by far the most important guy on our football team, we're very, very concerned."

Trying to stop Dunbar will be the Big Ten's leading defense, led by Big Ten Player of the Week Leroy Smith. Smith leads the Big Ten in sacks and had five against Ohio State last week.

Fry said the defensive surge is due in part to better pass coverage on the part of the secondary, but a lot of the credit can go to Smith and the defensive line.

"I think its more the improvement of Leroy taking advantage of the opportunities more than anything else," he said. "From a defensive standpoint, he was the biggest impact player on the field at Columbus and has been on two or three other occasions."

"He has such tremendous speed and quickness for a defensive end that he can give us the big play time after time."

Denver took its largest lead at 59-43 with a 20-10 burst in the first 9:34 of the second half. Liberty scored seven points and Greg Anderson five during that run.

Minnesota closed to 63-50 by the start of the fourth quarter and cut the deficit to 65-60 with 10:08 remaining, but Denver rebuilt the margin to 79-68 with 5:29 left, and the Wolves never seriously threatened again.

For revenge is not the only disadvantage awaiting the Hawkeyes, according to Beglin.
"Because we play Ohio State on Friday, Northwestern gets to be rested and watch us play," Beglin said. "Plus, we're playing them at a neutral site this time."

The Hawkeyes, who lead the all-time series with Northwestern at 17-11-4, could earn their first unblemished conference record since 1987 with a pair of wins this weekend.

But if a second matchup with the Buckeyes isn't tough enough, the No. 5 Hawkeyes should be in a dogfight Saturday, as they hook up with No. 6 Northwestern, 12-4-1, in the last game of the regular season.

The Wildcats will be looking to claw the Hawkeyes, after a goal in

The Lakers reached the NBA Finals nine times in Johnson's 12 seasons, most recently last June, when they were beaten by the Chicago Bulls in five games.

Johnson earned all-NBA status for the ninth time and was second behind Chicago's Michael Jordan in the MVP voting last season.

The Lakers won their last championship in 1988, when they became the first NBA team to win consecutive titles since the Boston Celtics in 1969.

The three-time MVP was expected to begin playing again within a week.

"I plan to go on, living on. I plan to be with the Lakers and the league," he said.

The league owes Johnson a lot. He, along with Larry Bird, helped turn it from a struggling operation in the late 1970s into a worldwide entertainment, marketing and sports success.

"No one has contributed more to the success of the NBA than Earvin 'Magic' Johnson, and I know his fans around the world, myself included, will miss the thrill of watching him compete," NBA com-

Team goes on the road again

Michael Watkins
Daily Iowan

Willis Johnson's popular tune "On The Road Again" epitomizes the Iowa men's fall tennis season thus far as six singles players and two doubles teams travel to Madison, Wis., this weekend to compete in the ITCA Ixcel Regional tournament.

The trip is the team's fourth with no home appearances since the season opened in late September, and according to head coach Steve Houghton, this final tournament of the season should shed some light on where the team stands prior to the return to competition in mid-January.

"This tournament should be quite similar to the one at Ball State a couple of weeks ago," head coach Steve Houghton said. "It will be a good opportunity for us to get a feel for where the guys will fit into the lineup in the spring, and should also let us know how we stack up within our conference."

Nine of the ten conference schools are slated to participate in the 96-draw singles and 32-draw doubles tournament (Ohio State will not be there), as will schools from the Mid-America conference (Ball State, Western Michigan) and the Independent ranks (Notre Dame). The top 16 singles and doubles teams qualify for nationals.

Sophomore Klas Bergstrom, last year's top player for Iowa, leads a strong lineup of Calle Mannheim,

Steve Houghton

Neil Denahan, Todd Shale, Bryan Crowley and Naguib Shahid into the tournament. Bergstrom is seeded in the 9-16 range in singles, and will pair up with Crowley in doubles. Shale and Shahid comprise Iowa's other doubles entry.

At the Ball State tournament, Denahan, last year's No. 5 player, finished fifth in the No. 1 singles flight with victories over players from Purdue and Wisconsin. Crowley, a 'true' freshman, came in fourth in the third singles flight, and Mannheim made it to the semifinals in the No. 4 bracket before having to default due to injury. Shahid rebounded from a first-round loss to win his next three matches to finish ninth.

"Since this tournament isn't divided into separate singles and doubles flight, a player's success depends upon the luck of the draw," Houghton said. "Someone could end up having to play the No. 1 seed in the first round or not meet any seeds in their draw. It's left up to pure chance. Hopefully, are luck will be good."

Nets close to agreement with Anderson

Tom Canavan
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kenny Anderson reached an agreement in principle Thursday on a contract with the New Jersey Nets that probably will put him in uniform by this weekend.

Nets vice president Willis Reed said the sides still need to iron out some final items in the contract.

But that can't be done until the team either releases or trades one of the players on its current 12-man roster.

"We are very close," Reed said. "Maybe we can get it done tomorrow. My target date is Saturday."

Reed would not disclose the financial terms of the agreement, but it has been reported that the second overall pick in the NBA draft will receive $14.5 million for the next five years. That works out to $2.9 million per year for the former Georgia Tech guard, who left school after his sophomore season.

Richard Howell, the Atlanta attorney for Anderson, was not immediately available for comment.

The most pressing problem for Reed and the Nets will be making a roster move to make room for Anderson.

There have been reports that second-year guard Tate George will be traded, but Reed refused comment.

The team had about $1.8 million to spend on Anderson under the current roster setup.

"We have to make some roster decisions," Reed said. "There is something that could involve another team."

George said he would prefer a trade to sitting on the bench.

Magic is not the first athlete to test positive

Hal Bock
Associated Press

Since being identified in 1981, the AIDS virus has touched sports infrequently, but the disease has taken the lives of at least four athletes — football player Jerry Smith, Olympic decathlete Thomas Waddell, former lightweight boxing champion Esteban DeJesus and stock car racer Tim Richmond.

Smith, who was an end with the Washington Redskins from 1965-77, died Oct. 15, 1986 at the age of 43. Waddell, who competed for the United States in the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City, was 49 when he died July 11, 1987. DeJesus died May 12, 1989 at age 37 after acquiring AIDS while serving a prison sentence. Richmond was 34 when he died on Aug. 16, 1989.

Although each of them were well-known within their sports, none of them achieved the prominence of Magic Johnson, who retired from basketball Thursday after testing positive for the AIDS virus.

Dr. M. Roy Schwarz, chairman of the American Medical Association's task force on AIDS, said he hoped Johnson's high level of visibility could be a positive in what he described as "a tragedy."

"This clearly says that even if you are at the supreme peak of productivity, you're still vulnerable if your behavior puts you at risk," Schwarz said from his offices in Chicago.

"If any good comes of it, it will be a square wave increase in awareness. People will be stunned. They will realize AIDS impacts us all. There is no way around that. We now all know somebody who has it."

"We all knew Rock Hudson. But he was an actor, a Hollywood guy. This is different. This is somebody who has touched anyone interested in sports."

Texas roundup finally worth something

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Al Del Greco

Dallas at Houston. Texas' game of the year over Aggies at Horned Frogs or Mustangs at Bears. A little wishful thinking could make this the Super Bowl preview of the week, deep in the heart of the Lone Star State.

Well, deep in the synthetic confines of the Astrodome, anyway.

How about Jack Pardee's Oilers? They went into RFK Stadium and all but beat those unbeaten Redskins in last week's Super Bowl preview.

But Ian Howfield missed a 33-yard field goal that let the game get into overtime, and was banished into the floating pool of Zendejases and other unemployed kickers. Now it's Al Del Greco's turn.

How about Jimmy Johnson's Cowboys? The 1-15 team of two seasons ago is 6-3 and possibly heading for the playoffs — pending the outcome of a three-game road trip that starts this week.

That's the problem. Are the Cowboys real contenders or just a bunch of cubs making their first threatening growls. So the guys in Vegas have made the Oilers a 9-point favorite, figuring that Warren Moon may just inflict a little pain on that somewhat shaky secondary.

Is that a lot?

Depends on which part of the state you come from.

OILERS, 27-17

Atlanta (plus 12½) at Washington

You know what? Joe Gibbs wouldn't mind losing

The Raiders won the first meeting, 16-13 at the Coliseum.
RAIDERS, 16-13

San Francisco (plus 5½) at New Orleans

There are so many conventions in New Orleans that the 49ers have to stay out at the airport.

That will also allow Steve Bono (Steve Bono?) and his friends to get out of town quickly.
SAINTS, 17-6

Buffalo (minus 7½) vs. Green Bay (at Milwaukee)

How do the Bills go to the Super Bowl, then get a schedule like this? Even if the Packers finally break a 14-game streak and rush for over 100 yards...
BILLS, 34-17

Kansas City (minus 4) at Rams

John Robinson says the Rams probably weren't as good as they looked when they went to the NFC title game in 1989.

They aren't as good as they look now, either.
CHIEFS, 16-10

Indianapolis (plus 13) at Jets

Instead of a line, they ought to give odds on whether the Colts will score another touchdown this year.

The Jets defense is banged up. But not that badly.
JETS, 17-3

Giants (minus 7½) at Phoenix

Did the Vegas guys watch Monday night's game?

The Giants will:
a. Win by 30, or
b. Lose
CARDinals, 17-13

Philadelphia (minus 1) at Cleveland

The Vegas guys did watch Monday night's game — the Eagles went from 1½-point underdogs to favorites the day after.

Besides, playing the Browns with Bill Belichick is like playing the Giants. And everyone knows what happens when the Eagles do that.
EAGLES, 30-7

Seattle (minus 1½) at San Diego

If the Seahawks don't watch themselves, they may be better than their usual 9-7 this year.
SEAHAWKS, 20-17

New England (plus 6½) at Miami

The Patriots are guys who celebrate when they lose by five in Buffalo.

Does that mean that cold weather brings out the best in them?
DOLPHINS, 17-7

Detroit (minus 3½) at Tampa Bay

The Lions are 0-3 and have been outscored 100-13 outdoors this season.

They haven't played in Tampa yet.
LIONS, 24-13

Pittsburgh (plus 1½) at Cincinnati

If the Bengals win again, does that mean the Sam Wyche machine gets to go after zebras and media again?

Why not?

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Big Ten season opens with Wisconsin, Mich St.

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swim team begins conference competition against Wisconsin and Michigan State in Madison, Wis. on Saturday and that is just fine with coach Pete Kennedy.

"We are really excited about starting Big Ten competition. It is always fun to get the conference started and we like to open against Wisconsin when we can," Kennedy said.

There will be many more meets in which three teams will be involved this year due to new NCAA regulations that limit a team's practice time in a week and the number of meets that a team can compete in a season. (One meet counts as three hours of practice and a team can not practice more than 20 hours a week.)

Kennedy expects a very tough meet as Wisconsin had a good freshmen recruiting class and is bolstered by the addition of two transfer swimmers from Arizona State. He feels that the team depth of the Hawkeyes is comparable to Wisconsin's and the Hawkeyes should have an edge in diving. Michigan State does not have a lot of team depth on their team.

The squad has not been in competition since they defeated Nebraska a couple of weeks ago. Their meet with Minnesota last weekend was cancelled due to weather conditions in Minneapolis. Kennedy is not sure how the layoff will affect the team's performance.

"It appears that the kids are really excited for this meet," Kennedy said. "We are swimming well and training hard and we will just have to go up there and see where we are at."

The younger athletes on the team have shown promising potential for the Hawkeyes so far this year and Kennedy sees that as being very important.

"Right now the freshmen and sophomores are starting to play a key role on the team," Kennedy said. "As the season goes on they will have to play a key role and rise to the occasion."

Hawkeye team members are very anxious to do battle with the Badgers and the Spartans.

Senior distance swimmer Beth Janis said, "We should do really well this weekend as we have been working really hard and it should pay off against Wisconsin and Michigan State."

Diver Katy Ketoff said, "Wisconsin has a good team but we have a lot of depth and should do really well."

"We did a great job against Nebraska and if we can carry over the momentum I think that we should win this meet," she added.

Katy Ketoff

"Nebraska is as good as many of the teams in the Big Ten."

MEN'S SWIMMING

State bragging rights on the line in Ames tonight

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swim team will seek to secure state bragging rights in a dual meet against the Iowa State Cyclones in Ames on Friday night.

The 12 meet winning streak that the Hawkeyes hold in this rivalry is something that even Hayden Fry has not yet achieved. Last year the squad dominated by a score of 185 to 92.

This interstate rivalry has always been big and intense, but has lost some of its luster as of late due to the dominance of the Hawkeyes according to head coach Glenn Patton.

Although, Patton stresses that the Cyclones can not be taken lightly in Ames.

"ISU is always very psyched and ready to compete in Ames," Patton said. He added that, "We always need to be prepared both mentally and physically when we go there."

The squad is 2 and 0 so far this year. They began the season by soundly defeating Big Ten rival Wisconsin and won all 13 events at the meet in the process. Two days later they won the Northwestern Relays by winning six out of 11 races.

Patton feels that the squad's younger athletes have much to do with the team's early success.

"I am very surprised with the quickness in which the freshmen and sophomores have adjusted to the level of Big Ten competition. Rafal Szukala, Erik Marchitell and Vico Hidalgo have made a very quick adjustment to this level of major college competition."

Team co-captain Doug Helm expounded on the importance of the freshmen on the squad.

"It is sparking a new competition between the upper and lower classmen," according to Helm.

Helm said that the excellent start of the season is due to hard work and dedicated training. Also, with the victories in the first two meets some uncertainties about what the team is capable of have subsided.

"It shows that we have potential. We were unsure of a few areas and now we have the confidence to come through," Helm said.

But Helm also feels that the squad can not afford to let up and rest on their laurels as the toughest meets of the season are yet to come.

Helm said, "We are starting off well. But it depends if the guys will live up to how they have done thus far. We need to keep pushing ourselves."

Iowa not alone in going without emblems

Daily Iowan
With all that has happened on campus in the last few weeks, most of our attention has been focused on our own area. That can be said for many others who felt shock and horror after the shootings last week.

The Iowa football team went without emblems on their helmets to show, in their own way, their concern and sadness for area residents.

They were not alone however. On the far side of Wisconsin in a town called Oshkosh, Iowa native James Kerwin was thinking about home. Being the defensive captain of the Wisconsin Oshkosh team, Kerwin went onto the field without the usual emblems on his helmet, to join in the nationwide sorrow.

Unlike the Iowa team, Council Bluffs native Kerwin will continue without the emblems this week.

After picking the games, he admitted that he hasn't had time to watch much football this season because he happens to be playing when most of them are on. As a result, he didn't have much to say about his picks.

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL

Team tries to break out of Big Ten slump

David Taylor
Daily Iowan
In a season full of transition from old to young, the Iowa volleyball team will try to squeeze out a win on the road this weekend, as they take on Illinois and Purdue.

After losing all six of last year's starters and finding themselves with only one senior on the squad this season, the Hawkeyes have found themselves mired in a month-long tailspin. They have lost eleven of their last twelve matches and their record during that time has fallen to 1-11 in the Big Ten and 6-20 overall.

Things do not appear much brighter down the line either, with four matches coming on the road, including two against conference heavyweights Illinois and Penn State. Iowa has already lost to both teams at home, but was able to keep many of the games close before folding.

The inexperienced Hawkeyes will be up against an Illinois team that returns only two starters, but has a top-notch recruiting class to go along with them.

"Illinois always gets some of the best recruits in the nation," said Iowa coach Linda Schoensted. "They consistently get high school all-americans in their recruiting classes."

One of the current starters for the Illini is last year's Big Ten Freshman of the Year, Kristen Henriksen. Henriksen led the league in Linda Schoensted hitting percentage at .379 and also earned second-team all-Big Ten honors last year.

DANCE GALA

Michael Williams/Daily Iowan

The dance delectables at the Dance Gala include the Twinkie / Led Zep homage "White Trash."

Dance Gala: Savor the menu of flavors

Jennifer Horn Daily Iowan

Mix 43 UI dancers with a generous portion of talent and creative energy; stir in many buckets of sweat; sift and add stars, stripes, crushed bamboo poles and baseball bats; spread mixture on a crust of classical and contemporary dance; and sprinkle liberally with yellow-orange Nerf softballs. Set on the Hancher Auditorium stage at 8 tonight and Saturday night, season to taste and enjoy your 1991 UI Dance Gala.

The UI Dance Company is presenting this year's gala, its major annual performance event, as a tribute to former UI president, Willard Boyd. Boyd has been active in supporting the arts both in Iowa and nationally, and he left the UI in 1981 to become the director of the Chicago Field Museum. He will be recognized at tonight's show.

The piece de resistance from the '91 gala bill of fare is George Balanchine's red, white and blue "Stars and Stripes," set to marches by John Philip Sousa. Never before has the Balanchine Foundation granted a college dance company permission to perform one of the neo-classical master's works.

Adding a traditional Asian flavor to the gala menu is UI faculty member Linda Crist's reconstruction of "Bamboo Grove." Steeped in the tradition of Taiwan and choreographed by Ming-shen Ku, the piece was first performed in 1988 and uses the bamboo pole as a celebratory symbol of the Taiwanese heritage. Crist is the university's expert in Labanotation, a written system of symbols to record choreography. She reconstructed the work entirely from the recently completed notation score, and Ku arrived in Iowa City two weekends ago to check the accuracy of the score.

The gala's menu possesses two hard-to-get ingredients, two alumni - Er-dong Hu, currently with the Dayton Ballet, and Kim Marsh, now with the Milwaukee Ballet. The pair has returned to perform the grand pas de deux from "Don Quixote," which they performed in the 1988 gala.

But all of this is only part of the menu - there are five other dishes that will be served up this weekend, all but one concocted by UI faculty members. Department Chairwoman Alicia Brown presents her "In Memory Of..." and also performs with fellow faculty member Françoise Martinet in Beth Corning's "Before the Fall." David Berkey explores gravity in all senses of the word in "Personal Gravity," and visiting faculty member Alan Sener walks the sometimes violent fine line between love and hate with his "White Trash." Guest choreographer Charles Moulton contributes a whimsical dance-game titled "Nine-Person Precision Ball Passing."

Academy of Ancient Music plays Mozart, Haydn at UI Sunday

William Palik Daily Iowan

The Hancher audience will be served a Mozart sandwich at 8 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 10, by the Academy of Ancient Music under the direction of its founder, Christopher Hogwood. Conforming to late 18th-century performance practice, three works by Mozart - the Piano Concerto No. 17 in D, K. 453, the Rondo in A for Piano and Orchestra, K. 386, and the Six Minuets, K. 599 - will be surrounded by the movements of Haydn's Symphony No. 101 in D, familiar to music-lovers as "The Clock." Sunday's soloist will be the acclaimed Robert Levin.

Founded in 1973, the Academy of Ancient Music is composed of specialists in classical and baroque performance style who eschew the felicities brought about by 19th- and 20th-century instrumental evolution in favor of the lighter, crisper tone qualities of "period" instruments.

Sunday's concert will afford Iowa Citizens an opportunity to take sides in the musical debate raging in classical music circles. Many have been won over by the less rounded, more uniquely colorful timbres of the historical movement, while others feel that it is impossible authentically to turn back the clock and that the entire enterprise is a marketing gambit by concert and recording moguls who are selling the same old wine in different skins.

Writers' Workshop graduate and "Emperor of the Air" author Ethan Canin will read at Shambaugh Auditorium tonight.

Ethan Canin gives UI reading

Tucker Malarkey

Special to the Daily Iowan

Several houses in Iowa City are on their way to becoming landmarks. I stumbled onto one while apartment-hunting last summer. Ten years ago, the landlady whispered, "Ethan Canin lived here." And tonight at 8, he'll be in Iowa City once again for a reading at Shambaugh Auditorium.

Today, at 27, Canin is a best-selling author and in the midst of Harvard Medical School. To get an idea of Canin's literary scope, take a look at his first book before you listen to him read from his second.

A collection of nine stories published in 1988, "Emperor of the Air" took critics and the public by storm, defying the widespread notion that collections seldom become best-sellers, and has since been translated into seven languages. In "Emperor of the Air," Canin's graceful, quiet prose details the melancholy optimism of his characters, gently illuminating their lives with, ultimately, a sense of hope.

The recently published "Blue River" explores a darker side. The novel explores the lives of two brothers who are inextricably bound together, then estranged.

The story pulls back through history to their childhood on Blue River, where the first seeds of love and betrayal were sown. The novel is full of twists, insights and, as always, beautiful prose. In it, Canin strikes a more dissonant chord than that of "Emperor of the Air," and one that is perhaps more familiar to him.

"The difference between writing the two books is that I trusted the idea that was behind 'Blue River' more: You can't be a thinking person and not see that the world is cruel," Canin explains. "I like writing about the evil lurking in seemingly good people."

Canin says that he himself is never exempt from that evil. "It was Goethe who said that he had never heard of a crime he could not imagine committing himself," Canin says, going on to describe how he traverses the same emotional territory and psychological poles in his writing.

"I think to be a writer you need the tidal action between elation and despondency. That's the current from which I write, to force a metaphor."

Canin describes how he can think himself into paralysis and spend hours lying on a couch unable to move. It's just him, the silence and his thoughts — which tend toward the macabre on days like these. Then, a day later, he can bang out a brilliant story with all the energy of a schoolboy.

"I think cyclothymic is the medical term — manic depression on a faster scale," he says. "But if you're steady as a rock, why write? I don't think it's in the literary character."

But something about Canin is rock steady. He seems to transcend his success and learn from his failures.

"When I get knocked down, I get up. It's that immigrant's legacy — something I learned from my family," Canin grins. "Even though I don't work that hard."

Heloise, Abelard love story revisited

The love story of Heloise and Abelard, "Re-Membering Heloise," comes to the UI this weekend.

Robert Fuhrmann
Daily Iowan

Iowa's University Theatres will present "Re-Membering Heloise," a new play by Iowa Playwrights Workshop student Carson Becker, for a three-week run in Theatre A of the UI Theatre Building. Performances will be Nov. 7-9, 13-16 and 20-23 at 8 p.m. and at 3 p.m. on Nov. 13 and 24.

"Re-Membering Heloise" takes a fresh look at one of the most fabled love affairs in Western history, the romance of Peter Abelard and the nun Heloise. As philosopher, theologian and poet, Abelard was one of the most significant thinkers in 12th-century Europe. He is, however, recognized less for his intellectual achievements than for his romantic liaison with Heloise.

For nearly a thousand years, lovers have been energized by the libidinous and sublime affair of Abelard and the precocious pupil whom he saw as his equal in both intellect and zeal. Their obsessive affection became so legendary that their bones were unearthed and scattered around Europe. Some were even ground up and used to concoct aphrodisiac elixirs.

In "Re-Membering Heloise," playwright Becker introduces her audience to the ghost of Heloise, who is meandering through history in an effort to reassemble her bones. She reminisces about what really happened and discovers who she really is. Heloise is depicted as a winning personality — clever, curious, playful, aspiring and rebellious — a woman who could have easily matched the sagacity of a great philosopher in an age when few other women were able to read or write.

Becker based the play on the actual letters that Abelard and Heloise exchanged during their affair and secret marriage. The playwright was dazzled from the instant she first confronted the letters in one of Joseph Campbell's books on myth. "They are breathtaking," she says. "I remember reading the passage, and then reading it again, and I couldn't believe what I was reading because it was so intense. Those letters became sort of like a chant in my head."

Becker respects the depth and complexity of the historical material, in contrast to what she has observed in other stage and film versions of the lovers' story. "To reduce it to melodrama seemed to me a great disservice to the kind of philosophical questions that their lives and letters raise," she says.

Becker conceives of the play as a "dialogue with history," a contemporary perspective on both the historical events and the legend that grew up around them. "We see certain scenes replayed, and they have in fact been altered," explains Becker. "We know we are seeing the same thing, but because of the journey the characters have gone through, the actual fact of the moment has also changed."

The new production of "Re-Membering Heloise," directed by theater arts faculty member Trish Hawkins, features sets by Leonard Curtis, costumes by Cynthia Abel, lights by Andrew Billiau and sound by David Busch.

"Re-Membering Heloise" is the UI Department of Theatre Arts' 1991-92 entry in the competition of the American College Theater Festival, or ACTF. Regional ACTF judges will view the production during its run in Theatre A and will consider it as a candidate for the regional festival that represents eight Midwestern states.

A pre-performance discussion led by Trish Hawkins will be held on Saturday night, Nov. 9, at 7:15 in Theatre B.

1. It's easy to use.

Bring home an Apple® Macintosh® computer today, and use it to complete assignments by tonight—even if you've never used a computer before.

2. You don't have to speak computerese.

Instead of cryptic MS-DOS commands such as COPY C:\WORDPROC\DRAFT.DOC A:\WORK, Macintosh uses familiar words, such as Copy and Print, and pictures, such as file folders for storing your documents and a trash can for files you want to throw away.

3. You don't have to be a computer science major to set one up.

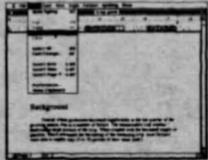

Just plug everything together, flip the "on" switch, and you're ready to roll.

4. It's a breeze to copy information and paste it into another document.

To copy this chart, simply use the mouse to choose the Copy command.

To place the chart in another document, just choose the Paste command.

5. All Macintosh programs work in the same way.

Learn to use one Macintosh program, and you've learned the basics of using them all. For example, the commands you use, such as Open, Close, Copy, Paste, Save, Cut, Print, and Undo, are found in the same place—every time.

6. It can grow with you.

This week you're majoring in philosophy, next week it's nuclear physics. After all, no one knows exactly what the future will bring. That's why millions of students have found that investing in a Macintosh is a smart move. Because Macintosh can immediately help you do whatever you do—better. And if, come tomorrow, you find that you want to do something different, no problem. It's easy to upgrade your Macintosh to help you rise to the challenge.

7. It's great for college and beyond.

Doing your work faster, better, and more creatively is also a plus in the working world—and that's precisely why Macintosh computers are used in 74 percent of Fortune 1000 companies.*

8. It's got connections.

To connect a printer, a modem, an external hard disk, or just about any other peripheral to a Macintosh, simply plug it in. That's all there is to it.

9. It lets you work with others.

Every Macintosh is equipped with an Apple SuperDrive™, a unique floppy disk drive that can use not only Macintosh disks, but also MS-DOS and OS/2 disks created on IBM and IBM-compatible computers. With SoftPC from Insignia Solutions, you can even run MS-DOS applications on your Macintosh.

10. It's so easy to network.

Just connect the LocalTalk® cable from one Macintosh to another Macintosh. It takes just a few minutes, and you don't have to buy any additional hardware or software.

11. You can connect to your school's mainframe or minicomputer.

With Macintosh, you can send in assignments, gain access to software you need for a class, and receive lecture notes, class schedules, and other information—right from your own room.

12. It's more affordable than ever.

Macintosh prices have never been lower—especially with the student pricing available from your authorized Apple campus reseller. You may even qualify for financing, which makes Macintosh even more affordable.

These reasons all add up to the power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.*

From the Mouths of Hawkeyes

Fry: WR Filloon is 'most phenomenal'

"The most phenomenal football player on our team is a guy named Jon Filloon," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "He's a little bitty guy. He wears a brace that weighs half as much as he does. He doesn't even shave. He's the most naive little fellow you've ever seen and he goes out there and knocks down more people every game or makes more clutch catches or does a toe dance on the sideline or end zone. He's the most phenomenal football player I've been associated with around here. The heart and courage, no question, Jon Filloon."

"A walk-on from a little 'ol bitty town up in Northwest Iowa (Manson). The kid is just 200 percent heart. You notice when we get in the clutch, good 'ol Matt (Rodgers) finds Jon. And it's always in the middle of all the traffic. And you know the pros won't look at Jon. If they put him in the computer, the light bulbs would go out."

In the past

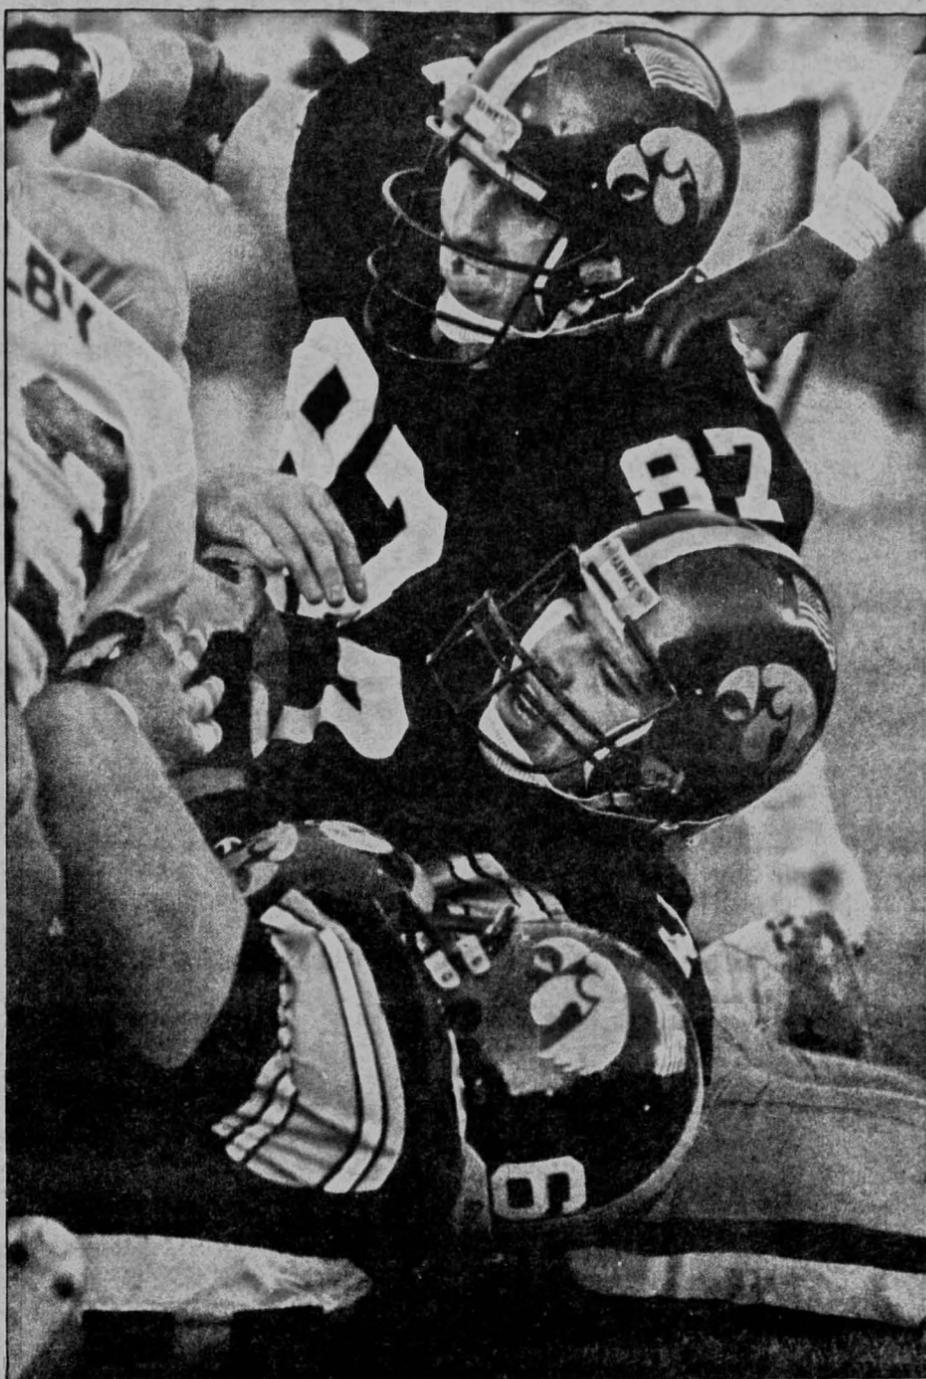

Fry about former Purdue coach Fred Akers, against whom the Hawkeyes were 4-0: "I didn't agree with the philosophy and the style of football that Coach Akers was coaching over there. Of course I would have loved to have kept him."

Following orders

Fry after the Purdue game: "We just have wonderful young men, and when you point them in the right direction and say sic'em, they burn rubber."

Great defense

Defensive tackle Ron Geater after the Purdue game on which contest the defense has performed best in: "I would say Illinois. This (Purdue) was a good game but I think Illinois was probably our best because they were a quality opponent, were ranked ahead of us, and to be able to take a team where the quarterback is leading the Big Ten in offense and hold him to 70 yards, I think that's a great accomplishment for a defense."

New occupation

Hayden Fry, before the Purdue game, on the rehabilitation of running back Marvin "Scooter" Lampkin: "We put him on the tricycle yesterday, and if he doesn't have pain, we'll get him a paper route."

Top recruits

Fry: "George Perles said that Ohio State has 11 Parade all-Americans. That's amazing. If we get one or two, we're going to do the Hokey Pokey."

Hope he's hungry

Fry before the Ohio State game on 236-pound nose guard Brett Bielema going up against the Buckeyes offensive line, which averaged 280 to 290 pounds: "We're going to feed him real well this week."

Lots of red tape

Fry about how long it would take to get new uniforms for his team: "Around here? Probably three years."

Wounded kick?

The Iowa skipper about a blocked extra point attempt by Hawkeye kicker Jeff Skillett against Ohio State last weekend: "There was so much penetration, I couldn't tell how he kicked it. It could have been trying to get high, like a wounded bird. I didn't have my flutter meter out there to measure."

Hawkeye Profile: Rod Davis

'Quiet storm' making impact for Hawks

Erica Weiland

Daily Iowan

Keeping in mind that it's always calm before the storm, it's not surprising that Iowa nose guard Rod Davis is soft-spoken and laid-back when he's off the field.

But when he squares up against an opposing center, Hawkeye fans can sense the storm approaching.

"When I first got recruited, my defensive line coach, Dan McCarney, gave me the name 'Quiet Storm' because I never said anything," Davis said. "I never asked him questions or said anything; I just did what I had to do.

"It's always quiet before the storm. When I'm on the field, I start raining and storming, doing what I have to do. Some people are kind of scared of me because of that, too. They'll see me walking around and I'm always quiet, not saying anything. But when they watch me on the field, they see a different person."

And since he was given his title, Davis has done nothing to change it. The senior has 111 total tackles (60 solo) in his college career. He had also recorded 15 tackles for loss (-44 yards).

Last season, Davis led the Hawkeyes in 1990 with 12 tackles for loss (-41 yards) and made 54 total tackles (31 solo), earning him honorable mention all-Big Ten honors by the coaches and the media.

Davis arrived in Iowa City from Queens, N.Y., in 1988. A Prep Report all-American, two-time all-state, all-city player by the New York Daily News and two-time MVP at Bayside High School, he chose the Hawkeyes over Indiana and Colorado.

"I narrowed it down to Iowa, Indiana and Colorado, and when I finally took those visits, I fell in love with Iowa," Davis said. "This is a nice place to be, everybody's friendly. In New York, it's very aggressive. Here it's very laid-back. I can be myself here. Back in New York I have to perpetrate as being a tough guy so no one will bother me."

Davis was one of three true freshman to see playing time in 1988. He finished his first season with 12 tackles.

"When I got here as a freshman, I was excited to play, ready to go," Davis said. "And I was kind of used to the defense because we ran the same type of defense at my high school. I kind of made an impact as soon as I came in, so I figured, why not play?"

Davis also excels off the field. The art major expects to finish his degree in December 1992 or May 1993 and would like to go into advertising.

Rod Davis might be calm on the sidelines, but when he takes the field, opponents should just head for cover. (Al Goldis/Daily Iowan)

"I'd like to make commercials, like the California Raisins or things like that, or become a cartoonist," said Davis, who likes to spend his free time drawing or playing video games or chess. "Something dealing with TV or even advertising for magazines."

The only problem that has cropped up during Davis' college career has been injuries. He has had arthroscopic knee surgery three times, as well as having a tonsillectomy and having his injured at the time, I thought it was a bruise. As the season kept going, I kept playing and practicing on it, and my knee started swelling up.

"I went to get it checked out and they said I had some damage to my cartilage and there were some foreign objects floating around in my knee. So they had to take them out because I wasn't really performing up to potential. It was limiting me in a lot of ways."

Despite missing four contests, Davis

"I'm sorry that I've missed all these games. I just want to dedicate the rest of the season to the Iowa fans and my teammates."

is 10th on the team in tackles with 29, including 20 solo.

"Before this season, before he got hurt, there was no doubt in my mind that Rod Davis was the best nose guard in the Big Ten," Coach Hayden Fry said. "Hopefully he'll be close to full strength the rest of the year."

The 6-foot-2, 260-pound nose guard returned to action during the Hawkeyes' win over Ohio State last weekend. He didn't see too much playing time against the Buckeyes but enough to prove to himself, as well as him coaches, that he's ready to play again.

"I had to get used to the different blocking schemes and things like that, but it was exciting at the same time," Davis said. "I was able to get in on a couple tackles and that made me feel a lot better. It was fun getting back in there and knocking some of the rust off.

"I was kind of disappointed (at lack of playing time), but I can understand why I didn't play. They wanted to make sure I was really ready. Hopefully, I'll play more this weekend."

Because of his injuries, the senior from Queens, N.Y., often wondered if playing football was worth the trouble. Now he's just thankful that he's made it to his fourth year.

"My biggest accomplishment is making it to my senior year," Davis said. "I really didn't know what the future would hold for me because I was always kind of being injured and down about being injured.

"Every now and then I thought about just giving it all up. But I couldn't do it; there's too much fire left."

He has also learned to accept what happened as God's will and no longer questions why he has had such bad

Hawkeye Profile: Rob Baxley

Senior OL heralded by Iowa coaches

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

"I can't run a 40 to save my life — I can finish, but you're going to have to wait around a little while to see it."

Rob Baxley might not be the quickest Hawkeye on the field, but according to many, this offensive tackle is among the best.

Coach Hayden Fry has hit the soapbox numerous times this season to say that.

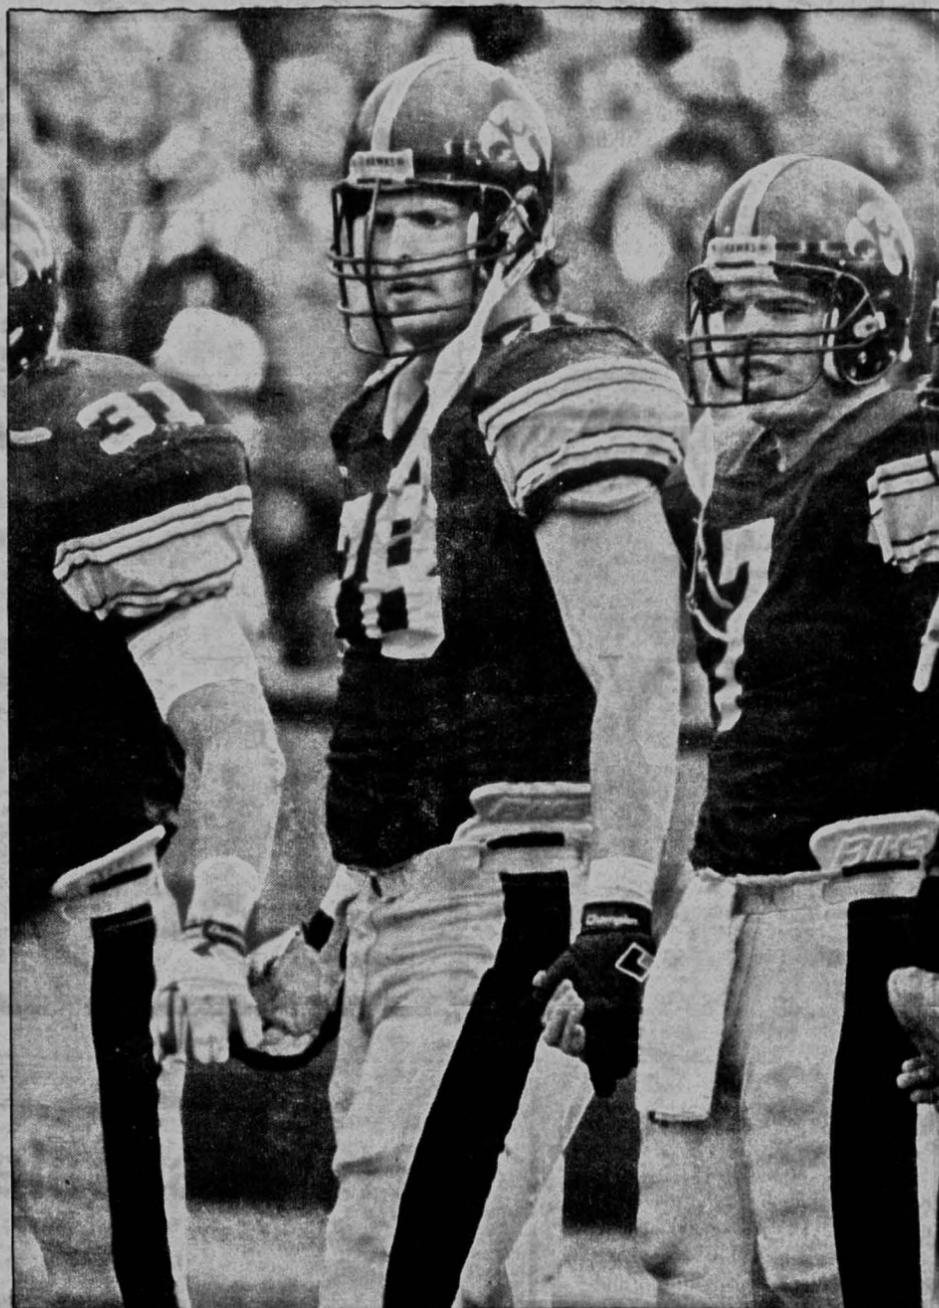

Baxley is probably the best offensive lineman in the Big Ten, and others are also quick to dish out the superlatives when describing the 6-foot-5, 285-pound senior.

"What we do here is ask our linemen to be really good on the run, and then be really good in pass protection, and that's hard to do," said Hawkeye offensive line coach John O'Hara. "You can spend your time in practice to get one of them down, but to do them both, and do them well, is quite an achievement. Rob Baxley, right now, is at that level, he's that type of player."

O'Hara said Baxley's intensity level is impressive.

"He's always ready to play. I think he has a great career ahead of him. He gave up one and a half sacks and two and a half pressures through the first 5 games of the season, which is darn good for as many times as we threw it," O'Hara said.

Good players gravitate to good teams, so Baxley and the Hawkeyes made a good combination. Baxley said he chose Iowa because of the type of program Fry has set up.

"Coach Fry builds a class program," Baxley said. "He looks out for the little things, the academics, the academic people, the equipment people, he just does things right."

The Oswego, Ill., native was not recruited by the Illini out of high school, but did not really want to go there anyway.

"I thought about a lot of schools, but the only ones that were thinking about me were Iowa, Northwestern and Rice."

Preparation is the catalyst for Baxley's success at Iowa. For him, the end of the season is when the real work begins. Keeping at it all year long is Baxley's formula for success.

"It's mostly hard work in the offseason, working with the weights and doing all the things you have to do when the season is over," he said. "Football games aren't won from August to November, in my opinion, they're won from December to July."

This is advice that is not likely to be taken lightly. Baxley is one of the Hawkeyes' co-captains, a position that he says puts him in the role of team leader — on and off the field.

"As a captain you have to be able to calm people down on the field, keep on an even keel, remain positive and keep focused on what you need to do," he said. "It's a real honor because the captains are elected by their teammates, it's a great feeling."

Center Mike Devlin, who plays on the offensive line with Baxley said Rob is a real leader on the field.

"I might call the plays for the line, but Baxley's the captain, he's the leader," Devlin said.

This intense player is one in a long line of outstanding offensive lineman at Iowa. Brothers Jay and Joel Hilgenberg (Chicago Bears and New Orleans Saints, respectively), Chris Gambol (ex-New England Patriots) and John Alt (Kansas City Chiefs) have all gone on to success in the NFL from the Hawkeyes.

Baxley says he feels no pressure coming from such a tradition, instead he finds it helpful.

"Playing with and talking to those guys, they help you out on what you need to work on," Baxley said. "I think its more a benefit than anything."

All of Baxley's hard work and determination could give him a shot to join his predecessors in the NFL, an option he would readily embrace.

"Yeah, I'd like to play in the NFL, that's what I'd really like to do," he said. "I'm going to give it a shot, hopefully it will work out."

Baxley said he would play for anyone in the NFL.

Hawkeye Profile: Alan Cross

Road to first team not smooth for TE

Michael Watkins
Daily Iowan

Over the years, the Iowa football program has had tremendous success in utilizing the tight end position. Former all-Big Ten and All-America selections Marv Cook and Jonathan Hayes, now starters in the NFL, are testimony to this fact.

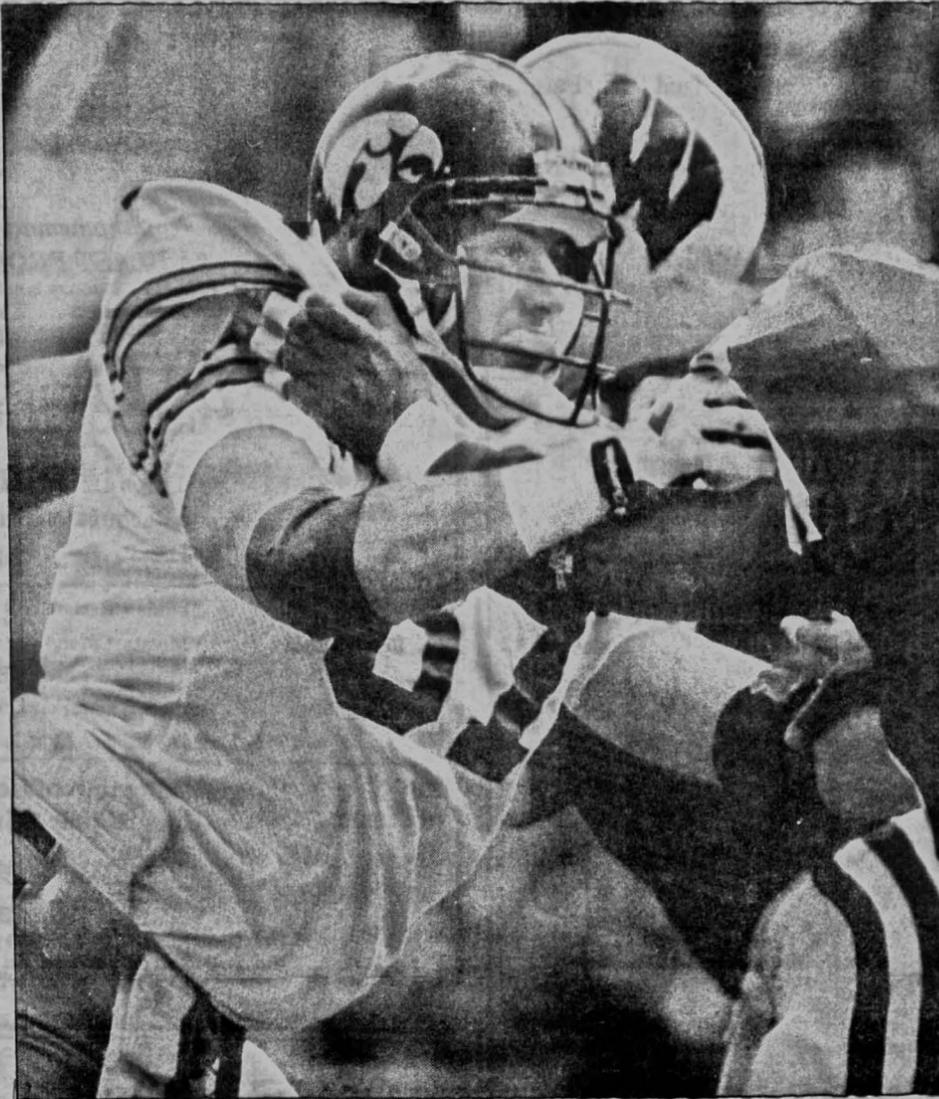

And junior Alan Cross could be the newest addition to this Hawkeye legacy.

"He's definitely one of the top tight ends in the Big Ten," Coach Hayden Fry said. "He's a big-play maker. He's not quite up there with Marv and Jonathan yet, but he's still got three more games and hopefully a bowl game left, and by then he could be because he really believes in himself."

Cross currently ranks second on the team to wingback Danan Hughes with 356 yards on 21 receptions, one of which went 61 yards for as touchdown last week against Ohio State.

But the road to the much-heralded Hawkeye tight end position wasn't one originally paved with scholarship offers and promises of glory for the Illinois-born, California-bred receiver. In fact, as a skinny kid — 6-foot-4, 195-pounds when he first came to Iowa — trying to make the team and turn the heads of Fry and his staff in 1988, Cross had to start from the bottom and work his way up — literally.

With Cook, John Palmer and Tom Ward firmly established in veteran roles, and new scholarship freshmen Bob Rees (now on offensive line), Ron Ryan (currently a defensive end) and

John Dauskurdas (no longer on squad because of injury) ready for their chance, Cross was listed seventh on the Iowa depth chart.

But being the strong competitor that led him to all-conference honors at both wide receiver and defensive back at Mt. Carmel High School in San Diego, Cross persevered and stayed with the Iowa program.

"In the past, Iowa had always been so successful with their walk-ons," Cross said, referring specifically to former defensive back Devon Mitchell and current receiver Jon Filloon. "They both showed that they could play and got scholarships, and I was determined to do the same. I knew that if I proved that I could play, then I could be right along with them."

"A lot of the West Coast schools wanted me to play defense. But I figured that if I could put on the size and keep my speed, I'd be that much more effective at tight end than someone with just average speed. I run about a 4.6 40-(yard dash), and that's pretty good for a tight end."

Fry agrees: "His speed gives us another dimension at tight end. Most tight ends are not near that fast. Because of that, there's a greater burden put on the defense because they just can't take an average linebacker and cover him man-for-man like most man-for-man defenses do."

After living in East Moline, Ill., for 12 years and in Minneapolis for three, Cross and his father made one final move to San Diego while his mother and most of his family stayed in Illinois.

He grew up watching Hawkeye games on television but said that it wasn't until he watched Iowa defeat San Diego State and then Wyoming in consecutive Holiday Bowl appearances (1986-87) that he even considered coming to play football in the Big Ten.

That was when his father, Jerry, stepped in.

"When I was in high school, my dad sent out a lot of packets — all of my articles and stuff — and sent them to the Midwest," the San Diego Tribune all-city pick said. "That's how I got involved with Iowa."

"Actually at that time I was thinking more about staying out on the West Coast. I'd read a lot of articles on Marv Cook, and he had a pretty good game against San Diego State. So that kind of got me interested."

Cross, who has added 30 pounds since first arriving at Iowa, says he gained additional weight by "just eating a lot at spending a lot of time in the weight room." He says that the extra bulk made the transition from high school wide receiver to Big Ten tight end less strenuous.

"Obviously it (tight end) is a much more physically demanding position," said Cross, who totalled seven catches for 98 yards last year in 10 games. "But that's part of playing tight end. You have to be able to catch the ball and take the hits, and then pop right back up."

At the beginning of the season, Cross shared time with second-team tight end Matt Whitaker both in run-blocking and passing situations. Although Whitaker still sees his share of time on the field, Cross has firmly established himself on the first team.

But the business major, who led Mt. Carmel to a 9-1-1 record and the state football championship semifinals as a senior, is no stranger to competition and says that Whitaker's presence keeps him motivated. "I think that we're both striving to be the best that we can be," Cross said. "I think that we push each other a lot in practice, because we know that we can't let up otherwise another guy will move up into our position."

Hawkeye Profile: Jim Hartlieb and Paul Burmeister

Backup QBs: All work and no play?

Erica Weiland

Daily Iowan

Imagine this: You're a Division I quarterback. You spend countless hours practicing, watching films, studying plays. Then, game day rolls around, the starting quarterback gets all the glory, and you are relegated once again to the sidelines to wear a headset and signal in plays until maybe the starter gets hurt or the team gets way ahead of the opposition.

That's the life of a backup quarterback, and Jim Hartlieb and Paul Burmeister are getting used to it.

"It gets frustrating but at the same time, it's a good challenge to try to keep yourself on your toes," Hartlieb said. "I try to approach each game week that with any play, I could be the starter. Hopefully, that will pay off."

"You might think it would be tough to stay motivated,"

Burmeister said. "But for me it's not because I'm hopeful that someday I'm going to be the one to play for sure. I'm just trying to get myself ready for that, along with the slight possibility of me playing, so I don't find it hard to get motivated at all."

Iowa quarterbacks coach Don Patterson says that it's not a difficult task to motivate either Hartlieb or Burmeister.

"You're talking about a couple of very fine, very special young men," Patterson said. "They're highly-motivated, and they take great pride in doing their job."

"Their job descriptions are a little different from Matt Rodgers' right now. But at the same time, Jim knows he's only one play away from having to do all those things that Matt does and Paul knows he's only two plays away."

And if they didn't know it already, Hartlieb and Burmeister found out fast against Ohio State last weekend when Rodgers went down with a sprained knee.

Hartlieb was in his usual position - on the sidelines, wearing a headset and talking to Patterson about the next play the offense would run - when Rodgers was hit.

"I've seen Matt go down with a lot worse hits than that, but this time he didn't get up," Hartlieb said. "My initial reaction was just to ask for a ball so I could warm up. It was a situation that I've gone through in my mind for three or four years now, and I think that helped me be better prepared when it happened."

Hartlieb took over for the last quarter of the game, moved the team downfield and ran time off the clock, while completing four of six passes to help insure the Hawkeye victory. He is expected to start or at least see considerable action in this Saturday's home contest against Indiana.

A junior this year, Hartlieb has seen action in six games this season as Rodgers' No. 1 backup. He has completed eight of 15 passes for 120 yards and one touchdown.

No. 2 quarterback Jim Hartlieb celebrates scoring a touchdown last year against Cincinnati. (Photo by Al Goldis/Daily Iowan)

Hartlieb has also rushed 14 times for 39 net yards.

Burmeister, a sophomore, played in two contests this year and is 4-for-6 for 33 yards and a TD.

Both quarterbacks realize that when most Saturdays arrives, chances are slim that they'll see playing time. But with the remote chance that all hopes could be riding on them, both of the backup quarterbacks will be ready for the game.

"Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, the third-string quarterback isn't going to be out there playing," Burmeister said. "But I know that there might be that one chance that I'll be out there."

"It's hard to convince yourself mentally that you're going to be out there, although you know you probably won't. You have to be prepared mentally each time because if I'm not ready, I'll be letting everybody else down."

During the week, the life of an Iowa backup quarterback isn't much different than that of a starter. All the signal callers do the same drills, with Rodgers getting more repetitions.

On game days, Hartlieb talks to coaches in the press box through a headset and signals the formations and plays into Rodgers. He and Burmeister both keep an eye on the opponent and advise Rodgers when they see things he might have missed.

"It's hard for him to see everything out there," Hartlieb said. "I try to be his eyes from the sideline and help him out with things we should be doing and try to keep him ready for the next series."

"I have a headset on when Jimmy is in the game or when

Indiana Style

Indiana is led by running back Vaughn Dunbar, whom Hayden Fry said is expected to be a first-round choice in the NFL draft next spring. Dunbar leads the nation with 1,284 yards on the ground and nine rushing touchdowns. The senior from Ft. Wayne, Ind., has also caught 19 passes for 142 yards.

The Hoosiers have won their last two games to up their record to 5-2-1 overall and 4-1 in the league, tied for second with Iowa. The Hawkeyes lead the series between the two schools, 30-20-4, but the two teams haven't met since 1988 when Indiana won 45-31 in Bloomington.

Big Ten

The Associated Press

Big Ten football coaches are impressed with Northwestern's surprising Wildcats and their two-game winning streak. But making it three in a row seems impossible this week when the Wildcats go to Ann Arbor to take on fourth-ranked Michigan.

Northwestern's Francis Peay said Tuesday in the weekly teleconference of coaches that his team has a chance against the Wolverines.

"If you scratch long enough and hard enough eventually you are going to draw blood," said Peay. "If Michigan is not playing well, if they come out and make mistakes, if we play as well as possible, then we have a chance."

The Wildcats (3-5, 2-3) have successive wins over Illinois 17-11 and Michigan State 16-13 last week.

"Northwestern is the team that scares you," said Michigan's Gary Moeller. "Not only because of their two victories but because of their other games. We hadn't played them the last two years and didn't know them until we started studying the films."

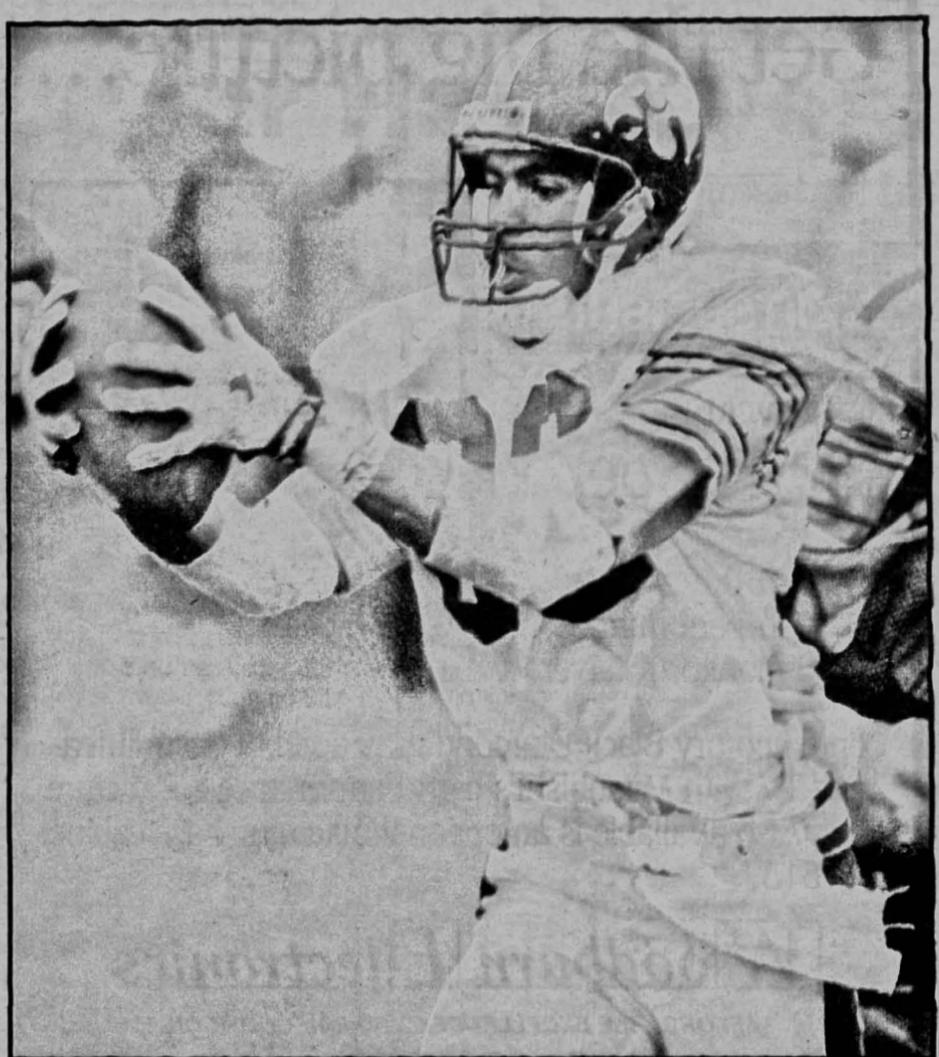

Moeller was impressed with quarterback Len Williams and flanker Mark Benson, who was named Player of the Week on offense. Benson caught 10 passes for 150 yards and scored both touchdowns against Michigan State.

Ohio State thrashed the Wildcats 34-3 in the game played in Cleveland.

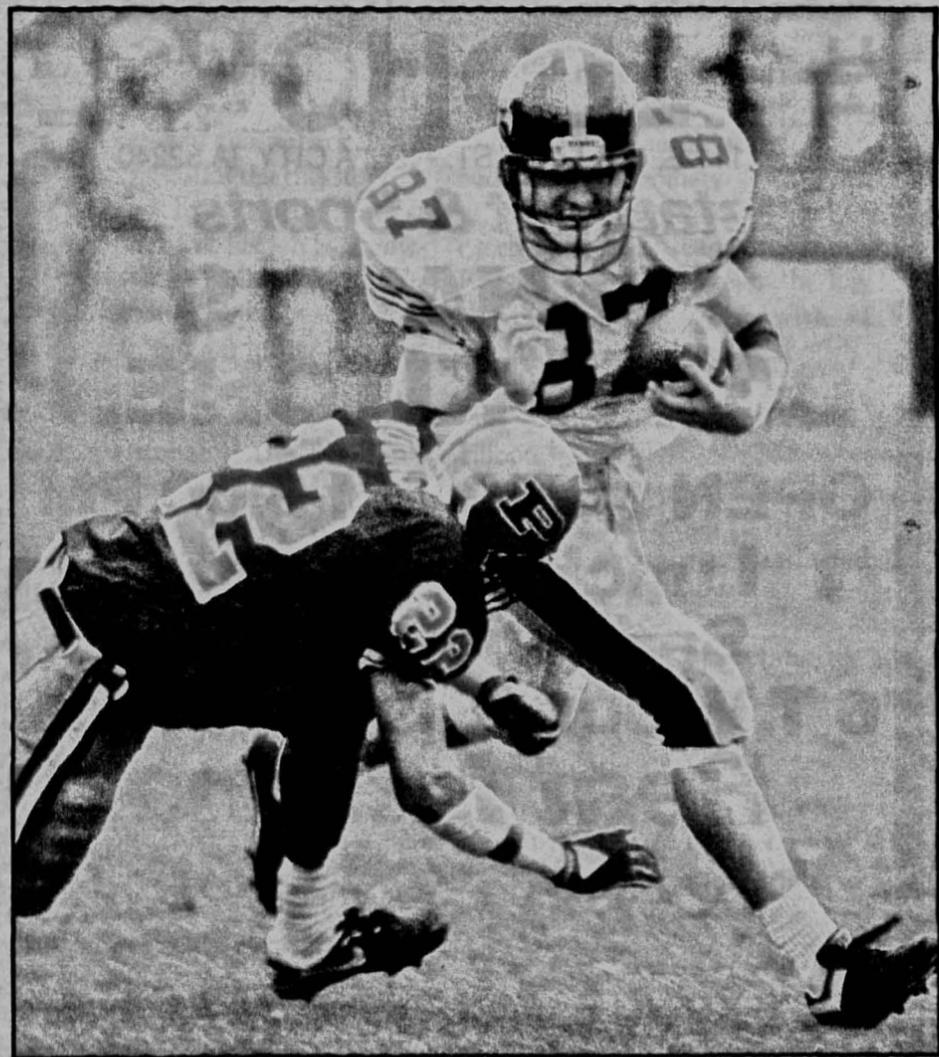

"I'm not surprised," said Ohio State's John Cooper. "In our game they turned the ball over a couple of times. But they played Purdue down to the wire and they beat Wake Forest."

Purdue's Jim Colletto, recalling the 17-14 victory on a last-minute field goal, said, "Maybe we lucked out ourselves. I was impressed with what Len Williams did against Illinois in the rainstorm."

Michigan, however, doesn't figure to be a team Northwestern can handle. The Wolverines have won the last 17 games in the series. Northwestern's last win over the Wolverines was 34-22 in Dyche Stadium in 1965.

Game Preview: Iowa vs. Indiana

Another big matchup for Hawkeyes

James Arnold
Daily Iowan

One week after playing "one of the most inspirational wins" in Hayden Fry's Iowa history, the Hawkeyes have to face newly-ranked Indiana in their second big Big Ten matchup in a row.

Indiana has come back after a slow start, losing to Notre Dame and tying Missouri, to post a 4-1 Big Ten record tying them with Iowa for second.

Iowa has won three straight Big Ten games by dominating the second half. Illinois failed to score in the second half of Iowa's 24-21 win, and Purdue and Ohio State were also shut out in the later half.

This game will pit the nation's ninth-ranked defense of Iowa's against the country's 13th-ranked offense of Indiana's. Neither team is a slouch on the other side of the ball with Indiana right behind Iowa in defense in the league and Iowa third behind Indiana's potent offense.

There has been a three-year layoff in this series with the last game a 45-34 Indiana victory in 1988, despite Chuck Hartlieb's 558 passing yards.

The nucleus of last year's Peach Bowl team is back for the Hoosiers. They returned most of their starters after a 27-23 loss to Auburn including quarterback Trent Green and tailback Vaughn Dunbar.

"You get 18 guys off the ballclub like that and the potential of Dunbar and Green, they're capable of beating anyone," Fry said.

Quarterbacks

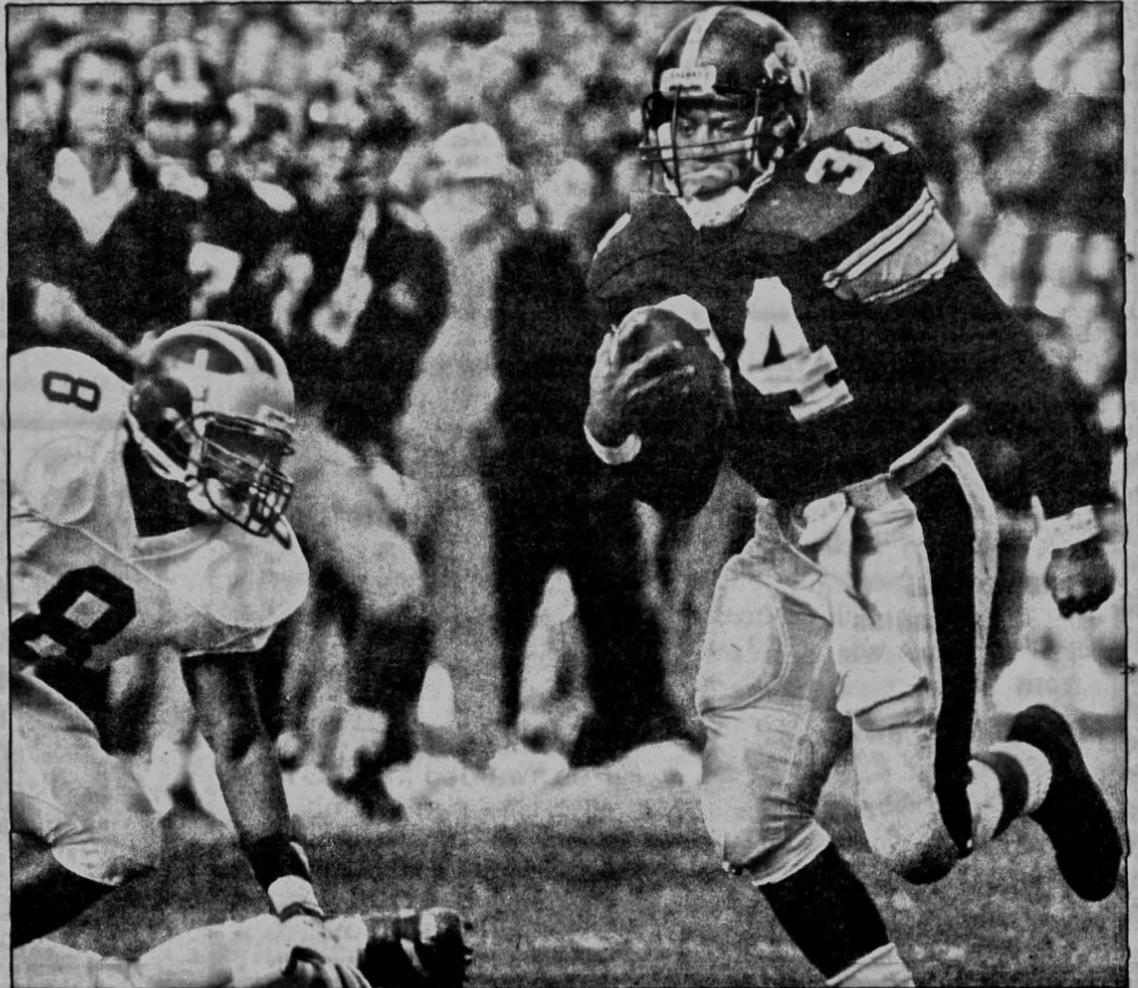

The story at this position is who will play for the Hawkeyes.

Matt Rodgers sustained a sprained knee against Ohio State last week and has been all but ruled out for this game. Jim Hartlieb will take over for him, but rumors earlier in the week said that Hartlieb might also be hurt.

The third-string quarterback is Paul Burmeister, who Fry said has improved tremendously and has a strong arm.

"With our style of offense, he doesn't have to be real mobile," Fry said of Rodgers. "It's important to be knowledgeable and be able to run the offense. It is possible that he could play, certainly doubtful."

Indiana doesn't have the problems at quarterback. In fact, Green has quietly moved into the upper echelon of the Big Ten in passing. Fry calls him the, "most improved quarterback in the Big Ten," and statistics tell this story.

Last season, he started the first seven games and lost his job by throwing seven interceptions and only four TDs. This season, Green has almost doubled his passing yard total from last year and has six TD passes.

Running backs

Vaughn Dunbar is the Big Ten's rushing leader with 1,284 yards and has scored nine touchdowns this year.

"Right now, going by what the professional scouts that come through hear tell us that he will go very high in the first round of the NFL draft," Fry said. "He's a real fine all-around football player and certainly one of the best running backs in the nation."

Iowa's top rusher is Mike Saunders with 566 yards this season and 1,020 yards for his career. He has 898 yards receiving in his career as a Hawkeye and only Ronnie Harmon has both rushed and caught for 1,000 yards in a career.

Receivers

Iowa leads all Big Ten teams except Illinois in passing offense with 1,937 yards. The BIG question will be if the Iowa quarterback can do the job.

In Hartlieb's passing attempts against Ohio State, his only completions were to Saunders and Iowa fullback Lew Montgomery.

It isn't strange for Montgomery to catch passes this season because with Rodgers guiding the team, he has led the team in receptions with 31. If Rodgers isn't in the game though, the backup will have to prove they can go long to either Danan Hughes or Jon Fillion.

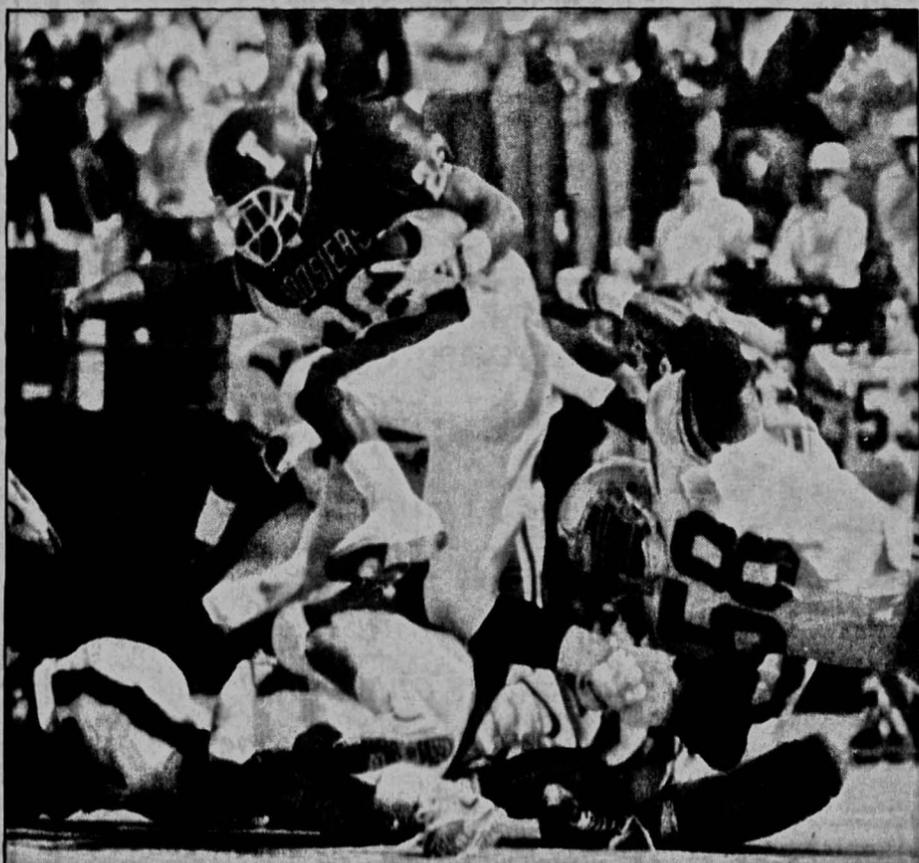

Indiana features the rushing offense, but has a good group of wideouts for Green to throw to, headlined by flanker Eddie Thomas.

Defensive line

Indiana has tormented QBs this season behind Greg Farrall, who leads the team in sacks with five and has eight tackles for loss.

The story of Iowa's season has been the emergence of the defensive line. Leroy Smith leads the Big Ten in sacks with 14 and fumbles caused with three. Ron Geater leads the team in tackles with 70 and has 10 tackles for loss. Mike Wells has six sacks.

"I think Leroy has proven that he's on the same level as Andre Tippett, and Andre Tippett was an All-American," Fry said. "I truly believe he's an All-American this year."

Hawks honor those slain by gunman

The Hawkeye football team removed the decals from their helmets for the game against Ohio State last Saturday in remembrance of the five UI faculty members killed by a former graduate student.

The squad was in Columbus, Ohio, last Friday when the shooting took place. There were thoughts of cancelling the game with the Buckeyes but as the team was already there, it was decided to go ahead and play.

But Coach Hayden Fry said he deliberated with Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby for several hours about how the Hawkeyes would remember the victims.

"Finally, Doug Garrett, an equipment manager, had the idea that maybe if we removed all the decals, that it would have more of an impact than just putting a piece of black tape on the jersey," Fry said.

"I thought it was a good idea," Iowa quarterback Jim Hartlieb said. "It just tried to show to people back here and all over that we were thinking about the situation back here. And if we could maybe bring some awareness and maybe some happiness for even just a couple hours, that's what we were after. I think we might have done that for some people."

The Hawkeyes are home this Saturday against Indiana and will be wearing their decals on the helmets again.

"It's our feeling that the community wants to return to normal as quick as possible. It's not really possible ... it's going to be talked about for years and years. But we decided that it would help if we went ahead and put all of our decals back on the headgear for this ballgame."

An university-wide memorial service was held last night in Carver-Hawkeye arena for Vice President for Academic Affairs T. Anne Cleary, Physics Department Chairman Dwight Nicholson, Professors Christoph Goertz and Robert Alan Smith and research investigator Linhua Shan.

"This has been a week of deep and

"It's our feeling that the community wants to return to normal as quick as possible. ... We decided that it would help if we went ahead and put all of our decals back on the headgear for the ballgame."

terrible sadness at the University of Iowa," said UI President Hunter Rawlings. "The injuries we have suffered are devastating."

Classes were cancelled Monday to allow students and faculty to meet with counselors in the Union. Over 300 students gathered just a few days after the shooting to place wreaths at Jessup and Van Allen Halls, where the shootings occurred.

Gang Lu, a former physics doctoral student, was upset about not being nominated for an award, authorities said. His shooting rampage Friday on the UI campus took the lives of the professors who nominated Shan instead of Lu for the award and the UI administrator who was handling Lu's complaint about it.

A general assistance fund for Miya Sioson, the only survivor of the shooting, has been set up through the Iowa State Bank & Trust Company. As of Thursday, Sioson remains in serious condition in University Hospitals. A bullet is lodged in her spine. Doctors have predicted that the paralysis she suffers from her neck down will probably be permanent.

Contributions to the memorial funds in honor of the victims and assistance funds for family members may be made through the UI Foundation. Private funeral services were held this past week.

he wants a break from wearing Burmeister said. "I try to keep in the game as much as I can. And Matt tells me before each game something to keep an eye on, like the free safety or linebacker, how they're playing.

"There's always something for me to do during the game besides just standing there."

Not playing on a regular basis, however, makes it a little difficult to measure improvement. But being Rodgers' closest competitor, Hartlieb said he can monitor his performance by the Hawkeye starter.

"If Matt's doing well, I think maybe I'm pushing him in practice so he thinks he has to improve," he said. "Sometimes if we blow somebody out, I can get in there and that's another way to measure it. But there aren't too many ways.

"You're kind of in the dark as to how good you are until you really get out there and the bullets are flying."

Burmeister said he knows he's improving by his increased confidence. That, according to the Iowa City native, has just come from the experience he has gained in the past year.

"Last year, I was worried about going into a game because I didn't know how I'd do," Burmeister said. "But this year I have a lot more confidence in myself because I have more experience. And the main things for a quarterback are confidence and experience.

"I feel a lot better in practice, so I'm a lot more confident that if I had to go in a game and help the team win, hopefully I'd be able to do it."

Perhaps the most unique thing about the backup quarterbacks at Iowa is their relationship with each other and with Rodgers. Despite the intense competition the three are involved in, they don't let it affect them off the field.

"They're the best of friends," Patterson said. "They pull for each other; they don't want to move up just because the other guy's performing poorly. If they move up, they want it to be because they've actually improved their game to the point that a change needs to be made."

"The three of us are awfully close compared to what I've seen in the past between the quarterbacks," said Hartlieb, whose older brother Chuck was an Iowa QB. "Usually competition like that tends to break people apart, but it seems like it's gotten us closer together.

"We just all have the same sense of humor, so that's what keeps us together, I think, more than anything."

Field hockey edges toward NCAAs

Jay Nanda
Daily Iowan

While the second weekend of November marks the wrapping up of the fall season for some Iowa teams, other Hawkeye squads have only begun to get in gear in the quest for Big Ten and national championships. The following is a composite of what to look for this weekend in Hawkeye athletics.

FIELD HOCKEY

The Hawkeyes took a dive in the latest NCAA coaches poll to No. 5 despite a 5-0 blanking of Northern Illinois last Sunday. The win improved Iowa's record to 14-1-1 overall, 8-0 in the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference.

Iowa, which had been tied for fourth in the nation with North Carolina, closes out its regular-season Friday versus Ohio State and Saturday against No. 6 Northwestern, whom the Hawkeyes lead by one and a half games in the conference. Both games take place in Columbus, Ohio.

The Hawkeyes can clinch their third consecutive MCFHC title with a pair of wins this weekend — but Coach Beth Beglin knows it won't be a cakewalk.

"The last time we played Ohio State, (a 4-1 Iowa win), it was 2-1 at halftime. It was a closer game than the score would indicate," she said. "And we're at a real disadvantage with Northwestern. They get to rest and watch us play Ohio State (on Friday)."

Defending NCAA champion Old Dominion remains the top team in the country, with a mark of 20-0. Penn State is second (17-1-1), followed by Maryland (13-4-1), the Tar Heels (11-5-1) and Iowa.

The first round of the NCAA tournament starts next Thursday. Sites and matchups will be announced early next week.

WOMEN'S GOLF

In their final tuneup of the fall, the Hawkeyes took 12th place at the UCLA Desert Classic earlier this week in Palm Springs. San Jose State won the tournament.

Iowa was led by Judy Bornholdt, who carded a 247 for the 54-hole Classic.

"It was a good tournament for us," Hawkeye coach Diane Thomason said.

Iowa opens up its spring season in March at Brigham Young.

VOLLEYBALL

The Hawkeyes take to the road versus Illinois and Purdue this weekend, following their 3-1 (6-15, 6-15, 15-13, 9-15) setback to Northwestern last Sunday.

The loss dropped Iowa to 6-20 overall, 1-11 in the conference. Their lone Big Ten victory came against Michigan State in September.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

After an opening-season victory over Nebraska, the Hawkeyes head to Madison, Wis., for the start of the Big Ten campaign against Wisconsin and Michigan State. Iowa was supposed to begin the conference season last week in Minnesota, but the meet was cancelled due to snow.

"It appears that the kids are really excited for this meet," Coach Peter Kennedy said. "We are swimming well and training hard."

"We did a great job against Nebraska and if we can carry over the momentum, I think that we should win this meet," said diver Katy Ketoff.

MEN'S SWIMMING

State bragging rights are on the line for the Hawkeyes, as Iowa travels to Ames Friday night to take on Iowa State.

Iowa opened its season at home last weekend by winning all 13 events versus Wisconsin, before taking six out of 11 races at the Northwestern Relays.

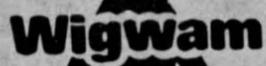

"We are starting off well," co-captain Doug Helm said. "But it depends if the guys will live up to how they've done thus far."

luck. "The Lord's doing; He knows what he wants me to be in life, so I tend not to question any of his actions anymore," Davis said. "It got me down in the beginning; I was always wondering, 'Why is this happening to me?' Then I learned to never question His actions, just learn from them."

Davis has accomplished a great deal in the past four years. But that doesn't stop him from wishing he could start over.

"When I first got here, the seniors were telling us that it would go very fast," Davis said. "So they told us not to leave here with any regrets, to get it done now.

"I wish I could do it all over again. There would be certain things I'd probably do differently. I'd probably work out even harder and do the things I really have to do to be the best and to try to stay healthy. Now that I look back on it, I wish I had another chance."

Davis also feels that with the games he has missed, he has let down his teammates and the Iowa fans. He wants nothing more in his final three games as a Hawkeye than to make up for lost time.

And that could mean trouble for the Indiana, Northwestern and Minnesota offenses.

"I want to apologize to all the Iowa fans and my teammates for not being there for them in times of need, as far as on the football field," Davis said. "I'm sorry. I wish things hadn't happened the way they did. I kind of ran into some bad luck, but I tried to make the best of it. And whenever I'm out there, I'll try to do the best I can.

"I'm sorry that I've missed all these games. I just want to dedicate the rest of the season to the Iowa fans and my teammates."

"I'm a Bears fan," Baxley said, "but I wouldn't want to rule out anyone."

Whether or not football is in Baxley's future, once again, he is prepared. He is scheduled to receive a degree in marketing in December.

If all goes according to plans, the marketing world and the football world would meet for Baxley.

"I would like to go into sports marketing after it's all over," he said. "There are a lot of different things you can do with all of the pro and college teams that are out there."

As for what little time there is left after football and classes are done, Baxley said he really doesn't do a lot.

"I don't do much more than football," he said. "I like to have fun with my friends, but football is the main focus."
