Hawkeye fans give $10,000 to Sioson fund

IOWA CITY (AP) — Hawkeye football fans contributed more than $10,000 as volunteers passed the hat for Miya Sioson.

Sioson, 23, is the sole survivor of a shooting rampage by a distraught former student on Nov. 1, but she is paralyzed.

A committee organized to help meet her medical costs took contributions at the Iowa-Indiana game Saturday. Leaflets passed out to fans also asked for help from service groups.

At least two other benefits are being planned in Ames, where Sioson grew up.

Blood fat ignored by many predicts heart disease

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A blood fat measurement widely ignored by doctors could be an important predictor of heart disease and diabetes in patients with high cholesterol, researchers said Sunday.

The fats, called triglycerides, have been widely thought to have little effect on heart disease risk unless they occurred at far higher than normal levels in the blood, said Dr. Antonio Gotto of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Studies presented Sunday in conjunction with the American Heart Association's annual meeting suggest that even mildly elevated triglyceride levels may be an important indicator of heart disease risk, Gotto said.

Artificially inseminated panda gives birth to twins

BEIJING (AP) — Dong Dong the panda, who was artificially inseminated in April, has given birth for the first time. And it's twins, an official report said Sunday.

Dong Dong gave birth to the pair at the Wolong Nature Reserve in southwestern China two months ago, the Xinhua news agency reported.

Announcement of panda births are usually delayed because most cubs born in captivity, especially those conceived through artificial insemination, die in their first weeks. Scientists are not sure why.

Wolong officials said this summer that four pandas that had been artificially inseminated were showing signs of pregnancy, but there have been no reports of other births at the reserve.

American found shot in plane luggage hold

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A U.S. airport employee was in a coma Sunday after workers found him shot in the luggage compartment of a plane arriving from Los Angeles, authorities said.

Roman Soriano Vasquez, 28, was found with a single bullet wound in the head, security officials at Milan's Malpensa Airport said.

A .38 caliber pistol was found next to him, and the security officials said he probably attempted suicide.

Sikhs fire on worshippers in India

CHANDIGARH, India (AP) — Sikh militants fired on worshippers in a northern town, killing 14 people and wounding 16 others, police said Sunday.

The attack occurred late Saturday in Sirsa near the border with the strife-torn state of Punjab, said police Superintendent Giridhar Gopal, the district's top official.

Sirsa, a rich cotton growing region in Haryana state, is 130 miles southwest of Chandigarh, capital of both Punjab and Haryana.

Phillips new Fed board member

Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

Susan Phillips, UI vice president for finance and university services, was confirmed for a 14-year appointment on the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System Friday.

Phillips went through Senate confirmation hearings last week, after her nomination by President Bush in September.

Phillips, 46, must report to Washington, D.C., within 30 days, and Vice President for University Affairs Ann Rhodes said Phillips will probably be leaving almost "immediately." No travel plans had been made as of Friday afternoon.

An interim vice president has not been appointed yet. After the interim appointment is made, a search will be conducted for a permanent administrator.

Phillips' main responsibilities as vice president included organizing budget requests and creating ways to make increasingly smaller state-appropriated budgets stretch to meet university needs.

In her new position, Phillips' work will affect the national economy.

"The board sets monetary policy; they decide whether they want to increase or decrease money and affect interest rates," UI economics Professor Calvin Sieber said.

Sieber said Phillips is taking the seat in a critical time for the economy. "Last week the Federal Reserve lowered discount rates and moved toward a more easy monetary rate to get the economy moving," he said.

Colleagues and faculty have spoken of her possible departure with mixed feelings — enthusiasm for her prestigious appointment and concern at losing her financial expertise.

UI President Hunter Rawlings said in a September release, "Susan Phillips will be an outstanding member of the Federal Reserve Board. She is a talented administrator and a valued colleague."

Rhodes said in an interview with The Daily Iowan this fall, "She told me when Bush was elected that the only thing that would make her leave would be a seat on the Fed. Well, here we are."

Prior to her five years as vice president, Phillips was a finance professor at the UI and served on the Commodity and Futures Trading Commission, or CFTC, for seven years under the Reagan administration. She was chairwoman of the CFTC from 1983 to 1987.

Peace negotiators seek end to 'stone throwing'

Haitham Hamad
Associated Press

JERICHO, Occupied West Bank — Palestinian peace negotiators came home to a jubilant welcome Sunday, and their leader pledged to switch from stones to olive branches in the fight to end Israeli occupation.

In what appeared to be a direct appeal to Israelis to trust the Palestinians' peaceful intentions, Faisal Hussein made his comments in Hebrew on Israeli army radio and in a rare appearance on Israeli television.

Returning to the occupied lands from the Mideast peace conference in Madrid, Spain, where they faced Israeli negotiators as equals for the first time, he and other Palestinian officials announced they would form political committees to serve as the vanguard for a Palestinian government in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"Until now, the intifada was with stones. Now, there is an intifada with olive branches. Now, if you want it, if the Israelis want it, the intifada can come with a new face," said Hussein, head of the delegation's advisory committee.

The Palestinians held out the apparent offer of a halt to the stone-throwing attacks against troops and Jewish settlers in the occupied lands — a key element of the nearly four-year uprising.

The military reported three Arabs were injured by Israeli gunfire while throwing stones at troops in two incidents Sunday, and a fire bomb thrown at a military car landed harmlessly.

The incidents were minor compared with the high point of the uprising.

Since the uprising began in December 1987, nearly 870 Palestinians have been killed by Israeli troops or civilians and 464 by other Arabs, most on suspicion of collaborating with Israel. Seventy-four Israelis have died.

"Nothing can stop the Palestinians' march to freedom," said Hussein, whose protracted talks with Secretary of State James Baker played a vital role in bringing the Palestinians into the Madrid conference.

Unions wait on endorsement

Karen Ball
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin has wowed union audiences with his blue-collar roots and rousing attacks on President Bush. But labor activists insist the scramble for their support in next year's Democratic presidential race is still wide open.

Any of the top-tier Democrats — Harkin, Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey or Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton — has a shot at picking up labor dollars and volunteers, activists say, because all start as unknowns and none is the clear favorite.

"They are untested quantities," said Rachelle Horowitz, political director of the American Federation of Teachers. "We've only seen the beginning of the stump speech. They're not national politicians yet."

Adding to the uncertainty is the lingering question of whether New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, a long-time friend of organized labor, will join the race.

The six major declared candidates will have a chance to take their messages directly to the 14 million-member AFL-CIO at the labor federation's biennial convention this week in Detroit, Mich.

On Tuesday, the AFL-CIO will hold a two-hour candidates' forum featuring all six contenders. Videotaped highlights will be sent to union members nationwide to help them decide who to support.

If Cuomo were to enter the race, he would instantly inherit strong union backing.

Still, labor insiders say many are fed up with the governor's public waverings over whether to run and that other candidates still have a shot at activists who can wield considerable influence in the nominating process.

Plus, Cuomo's relationship with labor is not worry-free; his budget cuts in New York angered unionized public employees.

Absent a Cuomo candidacy, Harkin is given the edge for labor's support. He's built a pro-labor record during his tenure in the U.S. Senate and has invigorated union crowds with his "never-defend, always-attack" strategy for taking on Bush.

"He's not going to take no crap from Bush in the debate," said Duke McVey, president of the Missouri State Labor Council. "The guy is not just going to roll over."

Harkin "talks like a true Democrat. We need a Democrat and a Republican to run, not two who talk alike," said George Kourpias, president of the Machinists.

Just the same, many labor officials privately wonder if the liberal Harkin would have any real possibility of defeating Bush in the general election. Those concerns are prompting some labor activists to take a closer look at Clinton and Kerrey.

Clinton has hurdles to overcome. He is viewed with skepticism because of his affiliation with the

A majority of Iowans are opposed to substantial tuition increases and favor more state tax support for regents universities to address the recent budget problems, according to a recent Iowa poll by The Des Moines Register.

UI administrators said they feel the Iowa state Board of Regents will take this poll into account but are unsure about whether it will sway votes on the tuition increase when the regents meet Nov. 20-21.

Vice President of Academic Affairs Peter Nathan said he thinks the regents pay attention to public opinion.

"I think that reflects their concern about universities. In some essence

Secretary of State James Baker acknowledges the crowd upon his arrival in Tokyo Sunday. Baker is in Japan to meet with new Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa.

Baker pushes for Japan to strengthen global role

Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press

TOKYO, Japan — Secretary of State James Baker arrived in Japan Sunday, less than a week after a new government took office, to confer with leaders pledging to fashion a more aggressive global role for their economically powerful country, including ending its ban on sending troops overseas.

Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa is pressing the Japanese Parliament to lift the ban on sending Japanese forces outside its border, in place since the end of World War II, but is mindful of possible international reaction.

He emphasized in a speech three days after taking office that he remains committed "to an exclusively defensive posture and not becoming a military power such as might threaten other countries."

A senior State Department official said during Baker's flight from The Netherlands to Tokyo that Japan's new willingness to consider making its forces available for U.N. peacekeeping activities was attributable to the Persian Gulf War.

"The gulf crisis produced soul searching in Japan about the issue," said the official, speaking on condition his name not be used.

"The result of the crisis has been a significant shift in Japanese public opinion," said the official. "For the first time, over 45 percent of the population approves involvement in U.N. peacekeeping and less than 37 percent are opposed."

In an article in the current issue of Foreign Affairs magazine, Baker praised Japanese willingness to enlarge its defense responsibilities.

ROTC

Students prepare to work for Uncle Sam

'The Reserve Officers' Training Corps provides scholarships and leadership skills training.'

Molly Spann
Daily Iowan

Ben Grismore, a junior at the UI, rolls out of bed three times a week to be at physical training for the Reserve Officers' Training Corps by 5:30 a.m.

Although he admits that sometimes it is difficult getting out of bed, he does not dread going. According to Grismore, who is involved in Army ROTC, "in the long run, it's worth it."

The UI ROTC runs congruent with college studies and has both Army and Air Force programs on campus. The programs are designed to teach and train students for the Army or Air Force. Some students enter the programs to simply learn more about the United States military, while others enter with aspirations of becoming an active officer or a part of the reserves following college graduation.

Grismore became a part of Army ROTC after he was contacted by an ROTC representative his freshman year.

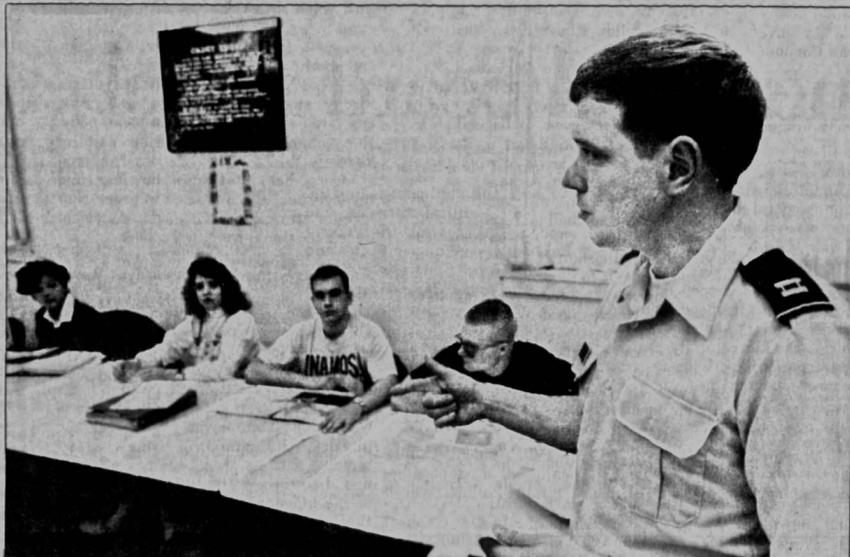

"The ROTC saw I was on the dean's list and told me about the program. They also explained to me the three-year scholarship they offer," he said.

Beginning Army ROTC as a sophomore, Grismore said he went through two years of ROTC in one year. Now a junior and in the third year of the program, Grismore said he spends 15 to 20 hours a week attending classes, labs and physical training.

He will also attend a field training camp this summer that is similar to boot camp, which all cadets are required to do following their junior year. The scholarship he has through ROTC pays for his tuition and books and gives him $100 spending money each month.

"I consider it equivalent to a job. I think of it as instead of working at a job 15 to 20 hours a week, I go to ROTC."

Grismore is planning a profession as a pharmacist after graduating, and he said he will probably go into the Army Reserves or the National

Capt. Remus, enrollment counselor for the UI Reserve Officers' Training Corps, emphasizes a point during the Military Science 2 class he teaches for students in the program.

Guard for eight years first. This would require him to work for the Army one weekend each month.

If a student who has graduated from the ROTC program prefers to go into active duty for four years, he has this option, Grismore said.

Barb Allmart, a UI senior and the Cadet Core Commander for the Air Force ROTC this year, is also on a three-year scholarship with ROTC. She said she had talked to a recruiting officer about enlisting before going to college but decided she wanted an education first. She entered ROTC the second semester of her freshman year because of her future career goal of holding a political office.

"I wanted to get experience where I would have to do the same stuff a man does," Allmart said. "I think it will give me an edge to have this background. I've talked to a lot of women in the field I'm going into, and they've all said it's a long road up."

Allmart said she is treated as an equal in Air Force ROTC.

"I want to do as well as the men do - I'm really competitive that way," she said. "They haven't treated me any differently because I'm a woman; they're very sensitive about that."

According to Capt. David Bruce, assistant professor of aerospace studies, 16 of the 42 cadets in Air Force ROTC are females.

UI freshman Chad Scholes also became a part of the Air Force ROTC for future career reasons. He aims to work in the Air Force overseas, performing duties for a U.S. embassy.

Scholes, like Allmart, had originally planned to enlist but decided he'd be better off graduating from college as an officer. He said he looks forward to making more money immediately after college than an enlisted man would after high school.

Because Scholes is not under scholarship and is only in the first year of the Air Force ROTC program, he is not under any binding contracts with the Air Force at this time.

He is currently receiving a basic overview of what the military is all about. Scholes is taking one Air Force class a week, and he attends a lab every Thursday at 7 a.m. In this lab he is taught marching skills and proper etiquette concerning the flag and parades. He also trains for a physical fitness test.

Scholes must also dress in uniform every Thursday. He said the lab and the class have not been extremely difficult.

"The biggest strain so far has been keeping my hair short and my shoes polished," Scholes said.

Overall, Grismore, Allmart and Scholes said being a part of ROTC has had many positive benefits, especially those of leadership skills, teamwork and a sense of belonging.

"Through ROTC, I've learned confrontation skills," Allmart said. "Leaders aren't always the best-liked. It has shown me that it isn't easy being on top."

Scholes said ROTC has helped make college less of a traumatic experience.

"Coming from a small town, this university seemed so overwhelming," he said. "I didn't know anybody, and it has given me something to be a part of and look forward to."

WINTER BLAHS

Activity, healthy lifestyle help stop sickness

Combating seasonal flu, depression and 'slow down' is mostly a matter of common sense.

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

'Tis the season to be bedridden with the flu and seasonal melancholia, but medical and psychological care are now available to combat the worst of winter's woes.

UI Student Health Service offers a vaccine against three different strains of the influenza virus.

Some health service professionals are saying this year's flu strain may be particularly virulent, but UI Director of Student Health Dr. Mary Khowassah said only time will tell.

"Predicting next season's strain is only an intelligent guess," she said.

Flu symptoms include high fever, general body aches, sore throat and cough, and usually lasts three to five days. The flu season doesn't usually begin until December and can last through March.

"And we're pretty busy those months," Khowassah said.

The vaccine is recommended for people with chronic illnesses, those over 65 years old or those who work in the health services, such as health science students.

Khowassah said people who do not get the vaccine will be susceptible to the flu.

"The best you can do is take good, general care of yourself," she said. "Get enough rest and eat properly."

Khowassah said it is not necessary for most students to get the vaccine shot.

"If you're young and healthy, you're probably strong enough to fight it off," she said. "And if you do get it, there will be no permanent problems."

Another illness frequently in the news is seasonal depression, a disorder which, according to UI Student Health psychiatrist Dr. Tom Brigham, is inaccurately portrayed as causing many Christmas suicides.

Studies documenting suicides around the Christmas season are not well done, Brigham said.

"They haven't done similarly intensive studies of other seasons, and they don't take into account alcohol abuse, which increases around Christmas and is a cause of suicide," he said.

Director of the UI Outpatient Clinic and psychiatrist Dr. Bruce Pfohl said seasonal affective disorders are considered to be on the milder side of the depression spectrum.

Seasonal affective disorders are characterized by low energy levels, increased sleeping and appetite, a decreased interest in usual activities and concentration difficulties. Pfohl said people suffering from seasonal affective disorders are usually not suicidal.

The disorders are defined as depressions that occur during the same season three years in a row and where the depression does not go away until the season ends.

Usually the disorders appear at the end of September as the days get shorter and the temperature drops.

Seasonal depression can be treated by psychotherapy, medication and a relatively new form of treatment, light therapy.

Only recently acknowledged by the American Psychiatric Manual, light therapy includes several hours a day spent under a bright light.

However, this isn't cause to hit up the parents for money for a personal tanning booth.

"A tanning booth uses harmful UV light and wouldn't be safe for the amount of time required, especially since the light needs to hit the eyes," Pfohl said.

Pfohl said studies so far seem to indicate the importance of "pathways" between the optic track in the eye and the parts of the brain that control moods.

"We aren't sure how critical the pathways are," he said, "but almost every patient with a history of seasonal depression responds to light therapy."

Although a tanning booth might not be justified, spring break in Florida might be.

"Since daylight hours are longer in the South, obviously people living there are less likely to experience the disorder than people living in the northern areas," Pfohl said.

Seasonal depression as well as normal behaviors such as a general "slow down" during the winter may be evidence of hibernation in humans, Brigham said.

"A lot of people slow down in winter," he said. "They eat more, sleep more."

Brigham said studies of bears and the ways their hibernation cycle affects them may be applicable to humans.

Although humans may not hibernate, Director of Clinical Services for UI Counseling Sam Cochran said slowing down in winter is related to biology and is not a disorder.

"There's a big difference between someone whose work is affected and someone who just would rather stay in, drink tea and watch TV," he said.

Cochran said the difference appears when the person cannot complete set goals.

"People who aren't clinically depressed can set goals and follow through. It's not that hard, and if it is there may be a problem," he said.

Brigham said one way to fight the winter blahs is to just be active.

"You should try to get more exercise or join an organization to force you to get out," he said.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Daily Iowan

Following are excerpts from remarks given by speakers at the memorial service Thursday for the victims of the UI shootings.

Opening remarks by UI President Hunter Rawlings:

... In the Dark Ages of the West, on the other side of the world, the Chinese poet Li Po wrote these lines:

"Heaven is high, earth wide; bitter between them flies my sorrow.

Can I dream through the gateway, over the mountain?

Endless longing
Breaks my heart."

With broken hearts we come together this evening to mourn the dead and to comfort the living and to wipe each other's tears. Joined as one community, we mourn for Anne and Christoph and Dwight and Robert and Linhua, and we share the sorrow of Miya, grievously wounded, and of all the stricken families. These terrible losses have diminished us all.

I will not try to speak of the wonderful gifts of those who have fallen, of so many distinguished careers and promising achievements cut short. Instead, for the university, I will simply reflect on their precious humanity.

Last Friday these vital members of our community were strong and active, full of life, engaged with work and families and friends. Now six have died, one by his own hand, and a seventh lies injured and immobile, in need of our care and concern.

The pain of our friends' families is piercing, and I know we all recognize that the very worst of it is theirs alone. But whatever can be shared we must share — we want to share. We must remember that for these families, there is comfort in knowing how closely the lives of those they mourn have been intertwined in our community.

Anne Cleary's brothers told me that they joined hands at her death and that the family bond among them has never been closer.

I hope, in the larger family that makes up this university, we too will go on reaching out to each other and that we will strengthen the ties of caring and giving that bind us together. Let us extend ourselves, be good to each other, open our lives to each other and offer each other whatever comfort is possible...

Jennifer Kelly, UISA president,

speaking about Miya Sioson:

... I went to the hospital yesterday to visit Miya and her family. Although I was not able to see her, I was able to spend some time talking with a group of family and friends who were there. They have begun to call themselves "Miya's Community," and it certainly is a close community. I was overwhelmed by the amount of love, strength and support in this group. She has friends and family there around the clock every day.

UISA President Jennifer Kelly

Her uncle told me something she said after the incident. Apparently everyone had been feeling very depressed about the tragedy, when she said, "I'm just so happy to be alive." It's incredible that she has such strength even while enduring such hardship...

To quote a friend of hers, "Miya is a quiet, humble person who prefers to stay in the background of things. Miya's power is based on her love for people and her determination to see justice prevail for everyone in the world, regardless of political affiliation, gender, age, religion and sexual preference..."

If we can have even a fraction of the strength and will that Miya has, we will be well on our way to recovery.

The Rev. Jason Chen, pastor of the Chinese Church of Iowa City, speaking about Linhua Shan:

... Linhua was the president of the Friendship Association of Chinese Students and Scholars in 1988-89. He was a friend to all the Chinese students, not only because he was elected the president of the Friendship Associates, but because he cared deeply for them. He would take them grocery shopping and had them over for dinner at the apartment he shared with his wife, Yiling. Their home was a "home away from home" for many Chinese students and scholars. But Linhua's love for his fellow students extended even to their parents in China whom he had never met. They too now feel the loss.

He was outgoing and friendly. Next to physics, Linhua's love was sports. Friday evenings were reserved for basketball at the Field House and soccer on Sunday afternoons. He also loved to watch football on television and perhaps was the only Chinese student who really understood American football and could explain it clearly to other Chinese without confusing them. In short, he loved life and wanted to live it to its fullest.

... One way to remember him this evening is to use his death, tragic as it might be, to question our own life. Just like a red traffic light, for us to stop for a moment, pause and then ask the question, "Where am I going?" A German student said it aptly, "We usually ask before we go to the movies, 'What's playing?' Yet we seldom ask, 'What's playing in my life? Who is the director?' I believe the mystery of life ultimately boils down to one single question, "Whom do I trust?" The claws of fate that crush me, or the hand that gives me shelter and that will not let me go?"

Margaret Clifford, UI professor of educational psychology, speaking about T. Anne Cleary:

... As an Iowan and especially as a resident of Iowa City, she was our ambassador and our unofficial Chamber of Commerce representative. Her fondness for Iowa and Iowa's impact on her life was so obvious that her brothers never even entertained the thought of burying her anywhere but at "home." I speculate that one of her greatest regrets — if heaven allows for regrets — is that she was unable to personally thank each of us for having made her Iowa experience the happiest decade of her life.

... As a neighbor, Anne was a child's best friend. The problems, beliefs, achievements and goals of the neighborhood children were taken as seriously as those of any colleague or university parent. Her cats' birthday parties, the Fourth of July neighborhood parades that she helped coordinate, the philosophical discussions she held with Girl Scouts and youngsters taking ballet, swimming and music lessons, the winter sledding activities that took place in her back yard and the employment opportunities she created with wage scales that would have made most college students envious are events that will forever be treasured by her neighborhood children.

... Had Anne survived the tragedy of last Friday, she would think no less of this city, this campus or this student body. Her commitment to ensuring cultural diversity, her fondness for international students, her intolerance for bias and revenge, her faith and trust in people, her love for strangers and friends, would not have been diminished in the least...

Closing remarks by President Rawlings:

... In the recovery and rebuilding that is ahead, we must continue to rely on each other for help. We must continue our struggle to find meaning and to create meaning even where we do not find it.

Out of her own grief, Emily Dickinson wrote that "Time never did assuage." In physics, the riddle of time's arrow remains with us, despite the symmetries now discerned in the fundamental forces of the universe. It is a law of dynamics that systems eventually lose energy, and order gives way to disorder. Only in the human dimension can we resist this immutable process.

It is too soon, tonight, for us to think of joy again. But in the fullness of time, joy will indeed come back to us — in a strain of music, in the sprouting of a seed, in the touch of a friend. Though time may not assuage, it will allow the healing to begin.

This is the universal affirmation that comes down to us through the ages, from others who have grieved and suffered before us. This is the affirmation of Aeschylus, whose chorus sings in "Agamemnon":

"Even in our sleep, pain that cannot forget falls drop by drop upon the heart, and in our own despite, against our will,

comes wisdom to us by an awful grace."

Let us be consoled in that timeless wisdom, as we leave to prepare for a new day tomorrow.

The University of Iowa will, in time, recover. We will not be the same, but I hope we will become even stronger in the most important ways: in our bonds to each other, in the ties that unite our culturally and geographically diverse community.

What heartens me most is the character of the people of this university, who have responded courageously and selflessly to this crisis. Ever since I came to Iowa, I have observed among university people an unusual strength of character, revealed in a rare generosity of spirit and a pronounced ethical and moral concern. I consider these qualities the hallmark of the University of Iowa.

UI President Hunter Rawlings

The university character has emerged with unmistakable clarity in the past week. I have seen it in my visits to the hospital; I have seen it in my conversations in Van Allen Hall; I have seen it in my meetings in Jessup Hall.

We are a family, a closely knit family. That is why I am so confident that the University of Iowa will recover. And we will not only recover, we will become stronger, as we draw together in support of the university we love...

Editor's note: UI Professor Emeritus James Van Allen spoke about Dwight Nicholson, Christoph Goertz and Robert Smith; a printed copy of his remarks was not made available.

AIDS

Groups lobby Board of Health to keep HIV testing anonymous

Diana Wallace
Daily Iowan

With a bag over his head to symbolically protect his identity, an Iowa City man who has the AIDS virus impelled the Iowa Board of Health Friday to keep HIV testing in Iowa anonymous.

At its meeting on the UI Oakdale campus, the board heard pleas from the public to prevent the "discrimination and suffering" those with HIV face when their identities are disclosed.

The possibility of a change in the HIV test reporting laws arose because of a briefing paper written by the board in September which addressed whether testing should be anonymous, confidential or both.

Board President Gary Peasley stressed that "neither the briefing paper, the Department of Health nor the Board of Health is advocating the abolition of anonymous testing" and said the board is simply seeking "advice on how to bring those at risk to be tested."

However, Peasley said the health department needs a "new, comprehensive policy" for combating AIDS in Iowa.

C.F. Barrett, vice president of the board, said, "How beneficial is it with anonymous testing to prevent the spread of AIDS? That's what's bothering me. Our responsibility is to protect everybody in Iowa, not just those who are infected."

Meanwhile, local health officials and advocates for the rights of people with AIDS have been gearing up for a battle over anonymous HIV testing, arguing that any change in the recording laws will deter people from seeking HIV tests.

Individuals and representatives from groups including the Johnson County Board of Health, the Iowa City Free Medical Clinic, the Johnson County AIDS Coalition and the Iowa Dignity and Equality Advocates, a gay rights lobby, addressed the board to ask that HIV testing remain anonymous.

Ed Arensdorf of the Free Medical Clinic said that, based on a survey of those who got an HIV test at the clinic since September, about half said they would not have been tested if they had had to give their name.

The state Board of Health makes policy recommendations to the state Department of Health and would be influential in changing reporting laws in the state Legislature.

Currently, free and anonymous HIV testing is available throughout the state at alternative test sites such as the Free Medical Clinic in Iowa City. Iowa is one of 15 states that offers anonymous testing to everyone, while half the states have some name requirements. Alternatives to anonymous testing include name reporting; the imposition of mandatory, non-anonymous testing for people engaged in "high-risk behavior"; and compulsory partner notification, called "contact tracing."

Ellen Van Laere, an HIV educator at the Johnson County Health Department and representative of the county AIDS coalition, said that because of the lack of funding at the state level for AIDS, name disclosure would only serve to "provide the names of those we can't assist."

Iowa is one of eight states that has not provided money for AIDS education and treatment. Last year Gov. Terry Branstad vetoed $120,000 approved by the General Assembly for community-based services and insurance continuation for people with AIDS.

The man wearing the paper sack said he has come to mistrust the board because of what he called its inactivity in addressing the AIDS epidemic in Iowa.

"Do you think we are foolish enough to believe that the Board of Health cares about stopping the spread of HIV when it has never encouraged, developed or funded any HIV-related program?" he said.

As of Sept. 30, 305 cases of AIDS in Iowa have been reported to the state Department of Health. The Hygienic Lab at the Oakdale Campus, one of the labs in the state that analyzes HIV tests from the alternative test sites, has recorded 1,139 positive HIV tests. Because the testing is anonymous, some of these results may represent duplicate tests from the same person. One concern of the board is that there's no way to get an accurate count of the number of infected people in the state.

While the ratio of those infected with the virus to those who have full-blown AIDS is 4-to-1 based on these statistics, Peasley said some studies show the ratio may be closer to 10-to-1.

IOWA PRISONS

Parole board defends indeterminate sentencing

Associated Press

DES MOINES — "Truth in sentencing" proposals might deny the flexibility needed to keep a troublesome prisoner behind bars, according to the chairman of the Iowa Parole Board.

Prisoners in Iowa rarely serve the full length of their sentences; usually it's more like a third. Attorney General Bonnie Campbell is battling for what she calls "truth in sentencing," or shorter sentences that must be served.

But Parole Board Chairman Walt

Saur of Oelwein said the current system of indeterminate sentences gives prison officials flexibility.

"We have long sentences in the state of Iowa," said Saur.

"So when you talk about truth in sentencing, indeterminate sentencing is not necessarily a bad thing." Most prisoners are released far before their sentence is up, but when needed, Saur said, "we could hang onto them for an extended period of time, especially if we have extensive charges."

"Our system is not perfect, but it would give the right person more time" in prison, he said.

Barbara Binnie, vice chairwoman of the Parole Board, explained that sentences are only maximums.

"Basically any sentence you read is only half of what you read it to be," she said.

All Iowa inmates — with the exception of those facing life in prison — are eligible for Iowa's good-conduct time law, which subtracts one day from a sentence for each day of good time the prisoner puts in.

"In other words, the minute they walk through these doors, that time is cut in half," she said. "If they abide by the rules, do not get disciplinary sanctions imposed, a 10-year burglary is only a five-year burglary."

That sentence is reduced even further as days are eliminated if the inmate maintains a prison job, performs meritorious service or otherwise cooperates.

In recent years, another factor has entered into term length — prison overcrowding. Iowa's prisons are crammed full, forcing the Parole Board to release inmates who may not be ready.

LAND CLAIM

Indians vow to go to U.N. over dispute

Associated Press

ONAWA, Iowa — Omaha Indian leaders say they'll take their case to the United Nations now that the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled against their claim in a 16-year court battle over western Iowa land.

The court declined to hear the tribe's appeal of rulings by lower federal courts that had thrown out the Omahas' claims to the land, which is worth about $10 million.

"This ends the case," said Wiley Mayne, a Sioux City lawyer who represented about 80 landowners in the disputed tract. The Indians call the owners white squatters.

Mayne said the Supreme Court ruling precludes the possibility of additional court appeals, ending a legal tangle that had kept landowners from selling or mortgaging the land.

The chairman of the Omaha Tribe, Doran Morris, said the tribe intends to pursue its claims to the land through the United Nations and other international tribunals, and wants an investigation of federal judges and officials who were involved in the case.

"It's not over yet," said Morris, who maintains that some judges and officials who sided with the white landowners had past professional relationships with one another that worked against the Omahas' case.

"The law is theirs — it's their system," Morris said.

The Omaha reservation is just across the river from Onawa in Nebraska. Initially, the tribal claim took in 11,300 acres in an 11-mile-long strip on the Iowa side of the river. In court, they claimed 8,400 acres.

Part of the dispute, involving 2,900 acres along Blackbird Bend, was settled for good in 1987. In that area, where a survey in 1867 had set the eastern edge of the Omaha Tribe's reservation, the Omahas were awarded 1,900 acres. Most of the remaining 1,000 acres went to the state of Iowa.

During the long court battles over the 2,900-acre Blackbird Bend area, the litigation over the remaining 8,400 acres was put on hold. That land is mostly along Monona Bend and Omaha Mission Bend.

The basis for the dispute was the propensity of the river to change courses from where the main channel had been in 1867, when the survey setting the eastern boundary of the Omaha's reservation was done.

Street fighting, shelling mark most recent battle

Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The Serb-led Yugoslav army and Croatian rebels battled street to street for control of Vukovar, a powerful symbol in the civil war in which more than 700 people have died. One day after the Serb-dominated Yugoslav leadership issued a surprise call for U.N. peacekeepers in secessionist Croatia, the army also rained more shells on another stronghold in the republic — the former tourist center of Dubrovnik. Croatian radio said four people were killed in the shelling Sunday in the Adriatic port, but one radio station in Dubrovnik put the toll at 11. Reporters in the city said some fearful residents stood on their balconies and fired automatic weapons or even pistols at the gunboats pounding the port. Gunfire hit at least two renowned hotels. Following the Serb call for peacekeepers on Saturday, a leading Yugoslav army general, Nikola Uzelac, told reporters Sunday that his Serb-dominated force could leave the front in two or three days if U.N. peacekeepers arrived. But U.N. officials said last week the world body would not send peacekeepers while the European Community, which has mediated at least 11 failed peace efforts, was involved in trying to stop the warfare. Croatia has said it would accept peacekeepers along its prewar borders, not between present-day Serb and Croat lines as Serbia suggests. Serbs control about one-third of Croatia after four and a half months of fighting.

The fighting began after Croatia declared independence on June 25. Serbia has said Croatia cannot secede from Yugoslavia within its prewar borders, claiming the republic's 600,000-strong Serb minority would face persecution.

More ethnic tensions have been raised in the country in Bosnia, where ethnic Serbs completed two days of voting Sunday on a secession referendum. The republic is wedged between Croatia and Serbia and fighting could break among its Muslim, Serb and Croat residents if the Serbs try to leave Bosnia with territory.

There were no reports of any violence in the balloting, and no results were expected before Tuesday.

In Vukovar, Belgrade media said Yugoslav troops had captured a strategic hill overlooking the center of the river town. A defense official in Vukovar said in a telephone interview from the Croatian capital Zagreb that the two sides were fighting street by street in the rubble of town, which appeared to be on the verge of falling after a three-month battle.

Belgrade TV showed film of battles reminiscent of footage of the final Allied operations in Germany in World War II. Federal soldiers climbed through shattered windows and the rubble of wrecked houses.

A defense official in Vukovar who spoke on condition of anonymity said at least 25 people were seriously wounded in a large tank and infantry attack.

A Yugoslavian federal soldier fires a 155mm howitzer Sunday against one of the last Croatian strongholds in the suburbs of Vukovar, a town now mostly controlled by Serbian-led Yugoslav forces.

Reports from both Serbia and Croatia on Saturday said the town's defenses were near collapse.

Vukovar, on the Croatian side of the Danube River boundary between Croatia and Serbia, has stood in the way of the army's efforts to seize absolute control over a large piece of eastern Croatia.

American caught in Germany with snake, crocodile, weapons

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany — Police said Sunday that a civilian U.S. Army employee has been arrested after military weapons, a crocodile, a boa constrictor and large exotic lizards had been found in his apartment.

Police said the 36-year-old U.S. citizen was arrested Saturday on charges of keeping endangered species of animals and possession of military weapons.

Army officials have identified the employee, a curator for the historical museum of the Army's 3rd Armored Division in Frankfurt, as Dan Petersen and confirmed he worked for the division since 1984.

Police said Petersen has denied any wrongdoing and has told them that he had legally registered the weapons with the Army.

Police raided Petersen's apartment on Nov. 5 and discovered a 6-foot Nile crocodile in his bathtub, a 9-foot boa constrictor in a wall closet and two large exotic lizards in a glass terrarium.

Police said they had been tipped off by a Humane Society group.

U.N. peacekeeping force arrives to uphold truce

Dan Biers
Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — Australian soldiers in blue berets arrived Sunday in Cambodia, the first of a vast U.N. force that will try to keep peace in the country wrecked by 13 years of civil war.

In yet another sign of hope for the devastated Southeast Asian land, U.S. diplomats were flying to Phnom Penh today to restore relations severed 16 years ago. Japanese diplomats also arrived to open a new embassy, four days ahead of the arrival of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who will lead an interim government.

Under a United Nations-brokered peace accord signed last month, the government and three guerrilla groups are to lead the country toward democratic elections scheduled in 1993.

The war between them raged since Vietnam invaded in 1978, ousting the ruthless Khmer Rouge Communists that three years earlier drove out a pro-American government.

The 37 Australian soldiers, wearing blue U.N. berets and armed with daggers and pistols, arrived aboard two C-130 transport planes also filled with tons of communications equipment.

The Australians will set up communications links between the four factions, and between each faction and the United Nations, before being joined by troops from 22 other countries to observe the truce.

An eventual $1 billion peacekeeping force will be the largest since the United Nations dispatched 20,000 soldiers and police to the Belgian Congo, now Zaire, in 1960.

"I wish you all success," Ataul Karim, a Bangladeshi who is the civilian head of the peacekeeping mission, told the Australians at a welcoming ceremony at Phnom Penh's international airport.

"I'm very enthusiastic," said Barclay Sedge, one of the Australian soldiers. "It's an opportunity to do something worthwhile and put our training into practice."

Other U.N. troops will be deployed in small groups to monitor the cease-fire signed in Paris, France, last month among the four warring factions.

New Zealand troops, including two who were on Sunday's transport from Darwin, Australia, will educate Cambodians on how to avoid the tens of thousands of land mines that are buried throughout the country.

Because of the mines and long years of warfare, Cambodia has the highest percentage of war-disabled in the world, along with an abysmal health-care system and the lowest per capita income in Asia.

With Soviet and Eastern European aid all but dried up, Cambodian leaders are eager for friendly ties with the United States and other nations that can provide help.

SOVIET UNION

Secessionist region forces Russian troops to retreat

Associated Press

GROZNY, U.S.S.R. — Nationalists in the secessionist enclave of Chechen-Ingush on Sunday forced the retreat of nearly 1,000 troops sent to enforce emergency rule imposed by Russia.

The peaceful departure of the soldiers — a day after they arrived — appeared to be a slap in the face to Russian President Boris Yeltsin, who is pushing down hard on his first separatist challenge.

Gen. Dzhokar Dudayev, a former Soviet army general who was sworn in Saturday as president of the territory, predicted that more troops will be sent to the region.

Dudayev has led the drive by dominant nationalist Chechens to break from Russian control. His mainly Muslim autonomous region of 1.3 million people declared itself independent a week ago, saying it feared domination by the Russian government.

Yeltsin refuses to allow any breakup of his federation, saying that would jeopardize market-oriented economic reforms. On Friday, he declared the emergency rule in Chechen-Ingush.

In Moscow, Russian legislators met Sunday to debate the emergency rule. Ruslan Khasbulatov, an ethnic Chechen who is chairman of the national Supreme Soviet legislature, called Dudayev and his advisers a "group of bandits."

But the Yeltsin-appointed interior minister in Grozny, Chechen native Vakha Ibragimov, protested the decree and resigned, government-run Radio Rossiya reported. The debate was continuing late into the evening.

Meanwhile in Grozny, the capital of Chechen-Ingush, thousands of people rallied on Freedom Square for a second day to protest Yeltsin's decree.

At the city's military airport, jubilant nationalist fighters waving flags escorted 700 Soviet Interior Ministry troops in civilian buses to Eeslan.

Another 150 troops who were inside the Interior Ministry also were sent to Eeslan.

In the wake of the failed August coup, Yeltsin's government declared control over all Soviet Interior Ministry forces on Russian territory, ranging from regular soldiers to the feared anti-riot "black beret" forces.

We know what you're trying to pull

"Baseball breaks your heart. It was designed to break your heart..." Oh, shut UP, will you? Losing a cat to feline leukemia breaks your heart. Ending a relationship because you finally both realize the moment has come when you have to get out of bed — and the quarrel over who will make the coffee gets ugly — breaks your heart. Finding gray strands while styling your hair breaks your heart. But baseball? BASEBALL? If baseball breaks your heart, I hope you woke up the morning after the seventh game of the World Series to an empty bottle of Prozac.

OK, so it was a thrilling series. It gave America the opportunity to debate the racial implications of drunken white and black people waving foam rubber hatchets back and forth until the war paint dribbled off their chins along with the drool. It allowed more of the country's wealth to funnel into those fortunate few, gold-plated hands. And it allowed a lot of very old men to get visibly misty-eyed on national television, honking about what baseball did for them. Meanwhile, the rest of us sat at home inhaling pizza and beer like bad imitations of Beldar Conehead's family, suffering the indignities of the sport.

Yes, that's right. Suffering the indignities of the sport. Things happen during baseball games that no self-respecting adult should have to watch. Especially one thing. We all see it, but nobody talks about it. Lapsing into classic dysfunction, we pretend it is not happening and talk about RBIs, designated hitters and who's doing commercials for Jockey briefs these days. Afterwards, reporters write through gauze about "the boys of summer," tender shoots of grass erupting in springtime and the crack of bats in the clean April air.

But we never talk or write about IT. You know — that one thing. That thing ballplayers do all the time that drives every American woman up the wall. The habit that dares not speak its name. The overwhelming tendency of baseball players to... well... grab themselves. I know that men are human and sensitive to criticism and all that. I also realize that women cannot understand the peculiar feeling of anatomical exposure that male flesh is heir to. But I don't think it's fair that they get away with this. I don't think it's fair that baseball is the most incredibly romanticized sport in all of sportdom when we are not given a chance to honestly and openly evaluate some of its most prevalent actions. One could talk about spitting — obvious, repeated and copious spitting, repulsive spitting. One could. But spitting has been going on practically forever, since Miss Kitty first threw open her doors. There is even a Biblical injunction against spitting in the wind.

This is different. It involves the male appendage, that symbol of power, those lowly private parts of slightly less than half of humanity so recently thrust into stardom at the Clarence Thomas confirmation hearings. Let me state it clearly once and for all. Let it never be said again that no one has dared utter these words in public: Baseball players pull at themselves ALL THE TIME. You know it, I know it and Harry Caray knows it. A Bartlett Giamatti went to his grave knowing it.

It was the ninth inning of the 1991 World Series. The last Minnesota Twin who batted, the hero of the series, was at the plate. The game was tied. Everyone in the country was watching. Everyone's mother was watching. So was Japan. So were the mothers of Japan. The baseball hero fidgeted with the bat. He tugged at the thighs of his baseball trousers. Then, impossible as this will seem to those of you unfamiliar with the sport, he grabbed ahold of himself and yanked. I rolled my eyes, thinking OK, buster. Your mother's watching. So's mine. Knock it off. He did it again. And again, once more, this time reallyreallyquick before the pitcher threw the ball. As it turned out, he couldn't get enough of it. Pretty soon I was counting every tap, touch and pull. Subtle jostling, hard-core yanking a little nat from underneath or the basic tug — it went on and on. It was relentless. I started talking to my television set.

"Don't touch it. Come on, just a second more and the pitcher will wind up" (the pitcher was doing it too — reallyreallybad). "NO! Put your hands down NOW! Keep away from it. Leave it alone. It's doing just FINE. How do you think your girlfriend feels right now? She's probably watching this with her friends, they're all thinking terrible things about you." Finally, one American woman's descent into madness: "Cut it out! Cut it out! STOP PULLING AT IT! LEAVE IT ALONE!"

Roseanne Barr, faced with the terrible prospect of caterwauling the national anthem, sought advice about funny, physical post-anthem antics from players in the dugout. Their response? Chew, spit and grab your crotch, Rosie. So she did. AND SHE GOT IN TROUBLE. She got in trouble from THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, who declared the spectacle "shameful." I want to know what he has to say about the hero of the 1991 World Series.

This is no cheap exercise in male-bashing. Honest. It is a heartfelt plea for you to tell us how we can HELP you! It must be the sport. Football players don't do it (but-patting is different). Hockey players don't do it. Basketball? No way — Michael Jordan would die first.

If we can put men on the moon, if we can watch in wonder as the walls of political separation collapse around the globe, surely we can solve this problem. If it's the uniforms, we'll redesign them. If it's a jockstrap issue, we'll just bring the jockstrap people together with the Warners bra people (Warners makes the most comfortable cups in the world). We, the adult men and women of America, can work this out together. I know we can.

But first, we have to admit that we have a problem.

AIDS

It doesn't discriminate

Magic Johnson's announcement last week that he has contracted HIV instilled a sense of personal loss and grief in people across the country. Whereas many AIDS victims have been marginalized members of society — homosexuals, intravenous drug users and inner-city residents, for example — now it has struck a celebrity who is known and loved by millions as a hero and a role model. This is the first time that it has hit home for many that AIDS can happen to anyone.

Johnson is fortunate to be well enough off financially to pay for treatment and to ensure that his family will be taken care of. For many AIDS victims to date, finding adequate health care and even shelter has been an impossible task. Presidents Reagan and Bush have seemed more interested in condemning certain sexual practices than in providing realistic leadership to combat the illness, and it has taken the tireless efforts of activist groups like ACT-UP to keep the issue before the public eye.

There are several reasons for this lackadaisical approach to confronting a horrifying epidemic. The Phyllis Schlaflys and Jerry Fallwells of the world were quick to seize on the tragic fact that AIDS first emerged among the gay population of the United States — unlike in other countries — to condemn homosexuality per se. That mentality translated into violence on a personal level, including an increase in attacks on gays by misguided bigots who blamed AIDS victims for their own condition. Residents of some towns opposed the construction of AIDS hospices in their neighborhoods, and at least one such facility burned down under suspicious circumstances. Parents organized to prevent children with AIDS from attending school, despite the fact that the illness cannot be transmitted through casual contact.

It is to be hoped that Johnson's situation will help to change all that. The news from drug stores and AIDS hotlines is encouraging: Condom sales and calls for information are way up since Johnson's announcement. However, public leadership on the issue is still woefully lagging. Vice President Quayle is still talking about abstinence as a means of AIDS prevention. While some people may choose that route, most will not, and it is imperative that those who do continue to be sexually active have the means and information they need to protect themselves.

Since AIDS is spreading rapidly among teen-agers, schools should be providing explicit education about AIDS and its transmission. They would also do well to follow the lead of New York schools in making condoms available to students. While right-wing religious groups will undoubtedly denounce this as encouraging sexual promiscuity, most teen-agers are already thinking about and engaging in sex. The availability of condoms and safe sex information is not suddenly going to initiate sexual activity where there was none before.

Johnson's decision to immediately go public with his condition and to become a spokesman in the fight against AIDS is extremely commendable. However, although practicing safe sex is essential, changing individual behavior is not enough: Moralistic, just-say-no approaches were never a realistic way of confronting the AIDS epidemic.

What is needed now is public leadership to initiate vigorous education programs, drastically increase research for funding and ensure that those already afflicted have the best care possible regardless of their economic status.

Unity is best defense against right-wing attacks

Things have been quiet lately on the local activist front. The tragic shootings on campus have shifted the tone of public conversation from strident protest to somber reflection. But we must remember that the threats to abortion rights have not disappeared.

Against a backdrop of national anti-abortion legislative offensives, local anti-abortion groups are cutting abortion access by putting conspiratorial pressure on medical institutions and private doctors to cease abortion work. And Operation Rescue is on a national harassment tour. These attacks are part of a larger agenda — the attempt to divide and conquer those fighting the erosion of democratic rights.

AFAR maintains that the defense of safe, legal and accessible abortion is a key struggle in this context. Women's liberation depends on absolute autonomy in deciding questions of reproduction. If the right can close down this freedom, then it can curtail the ability of half the work force to determine its future. Contraception, sex education and abortion are all necessary to women's liberty from domestic servitude and forced childbearing. The arguments made against abortion often reveal that the issue for anti-abortionists is not human life, but a fear of challenges to traditional womanhood and the nuclear family.

An example of this link is the appearance of Phyllis Schlafly, notorious anti-feminist, at a recent Iowa anti-abortion event. She maintains that the only place for women Allan Bloom, conservative author of "The Closing of the American Mind," have stepped up the anti-PC campaign on campus. Bennett belittled his opposition by dismissing its evidence of an organized ultra-right-wing movement to shut down protest against racist, sexist and homophobic incidents on campuses.

Bloom actually warned of the is at home, where they will not compete for jobs with men and where they can provide free and unceasing household labor. In the current recession, services such as child care, abortion funding and health care — not to mention jobs — are cut, making renewed reliance on women's domestic labor the solution of choice for right-wing ideologues.

The devaluation of women and their right to choose is part of a larger strategy: to divide our ranks along lines of sex, race and sexual preference, and to keep all of us down. Evidence of this broad attack surrounds us in Iowa City. Visits by former drug czar and Secretary of Education William Bennett and by conquer" at work (splitting the allegiance of blacks and women).

We need to speak out against university budget cuts and layoffs. The divide-and-conquer strategy is at work again in rhetoric that pits students against workers, when really the cuts and the layoffs are part of the same problem, and are best fought in a unified way.

We need to speak out against vicious displays of homophobia and racism perpetrated by the Campus Review (remember the gerbil quilt?) and others. The most recent cover of the Review portrays Gang Lu shooting a jack-o-lantern, emphasizing Lu's racial character. This imagery plays on racist fears and indirectly advocates targeting a racial group for violence. The offensive homecoming depictions of the Illini mascot as a victim of graphic violence touched a similar nerve.

We need to speak out against all manifestations of bigotry. The larger view reveals that we are facing a full-scale offensive against all of our hard-won rights. The rallying of the community behind AFAR clinic defenses this fall proves what we can do if we act and speak together. The right-wing assault on our rights is well organized and funded. We must resist the fragmentation that anti-PCers promote.

Dana Cloud and Anne-Marie Gill are members of AFAR.

LETTERS

An open letter to the university community

To the Editor:
As each of us struggles to make sense of what happened these past days and as each of us fails to do so, we need to reflect on what you, the members of the UI community, have given to all of us — a gift of hope that is stronger than any temporary darkness.

You have given to us a new realization of what makes this such a great university. You have demonstrated the very best of the human spirit. You have shown a depth of compassion, a compassion that has produced actions designed to help heal all of your colleagues touched by this tragedy. You have embraced our international community, particularly the Chinese students, and reminded us that we are nothing if we reject any fellow human being.

You have forgiven.
Many of us have lived in this community for many years. We have worked side by side; we have been neighbors. We have grown to appreciate many aspects of this university, but today there is a renewed sense of pride in the UI because you have done what you do best, you have taught us that the greatness of this university is its internationalism, its spirit of inquiry and discourse, its humanity and its decency. How you have responded to the events of Friday, Nov. 1, is a tribute to those that have been taken from us.

As you, President Rawlings, and your faculty and staff colleagues move this university beyond this tragedy there are many in the Iowa City / Coralville community that extend our thoughts, prayers and our support.

 poll also measured support for the elimination of academic programs, salary freezes and increased tax support.
 Regent Mary Williams said she feels the poll accurately reflects what Iowans want and said she doesn't want to raise tuition either.
 "We've got to have some kind of revenue enhancement, and education is the best way to spend it. If we don't get more state appropriations, we're going to have to look at the budget every year and see where we can cut. . . . We've made all the big cuts for efficiency, and now we're just fine tuning."

"Any more major cuts will start hurting the students of Iowa," Williams said.
 Most Iowans, 65 percent, support increased state tax appropriations for the universities while 31 percent oppose and 4 percent are undecided. Increasing state appropriations to solve the universities' budget problems is more popular than practical, according to the Register.
 The Iowa state government has a $300 million deficit and has sent layoff notices to 344 UI employees this year in an effort to curb spending. The poll also suggests an anti-tax sentiment prevails in Iowa.

 "The public wants to have its cake and eat it, too, and that's the problem," Williams said. "I think citizens need to put their money where their mouth is."
 Williams explained that she has two UI students of her own and said she understands that many students are struggling to make ends meet. But Williams said she hasn't made a decision on the tuition issue.
 Regent John Fitzgibbon did not state his position on tuition increases but said, "I know what I'm going to do, and what the poll says is not going to change that."

 centrist Democratic Leadership Council. With Clinton as its chairman, the council supported Bush on a free-trade pact with Mexico that was strongly opposed by the AFL-CIO.
 "In addition, Arkansas is a right-to-work state that does not require workers in union shops to pay dues. State labor officials are annoyed that the Clinton administration has promoted Arkansas as a right-to-work state as a way to lure new business.
 At the same time, however, Clinton has substantial backing from blacks, who make up a growing segment of the trade movement and could help him overcome the negatives.
 While Kerrey doesn't have sore spots with labor as does Clinton, nor does he have much of a pro-labor record.
 Labor activists recognize the senator's "potential star quality," one insider said. But at the same time, they worry that Kerrey's supporters — many of whom backed Gary Hart in 1984 and 1988 — would give labor short shrift, as they did when they worked for Hart.

 Former California Gov. Jerry Brown's anti-politics message appeals to some labor activists. But he and the other two declared candidates — former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas and Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder — are considered such long shots that they have not drawn much support.
 Don't expect the AFL-CIO to make an early endorsement. In 1984, the federation backed Walter Mondale early on, well before the Iowa caucuses, and he was tagged as the "special interest" candidate.
 In 1988, the federation did an about-face and waited until after Michael Dukakis had been nominated at the Democratic convention to endorse him.

 Delegate Saeb Erekat added, "One day when I come back to this bridge, I hope I will find a Palestinian official greeting me."

LOUISIANA CAMPAIGN

Duke, Edwards slam, bicker on national TV

Dan Even
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS, La. — David Duke denied Sunday he was ever a Nazi Party member and again apologized for his past intolerance as the campaign for Louisiana governor moved into its last week.

Duke, a renegade Republican, and former three-term Gov. Edwin Edwards, a Democrat, sparred on NBC's "Meet The Press." They spent most of their 20-minute segment disagreeing and interrupting each other and trying to shake off their pasts.

The side-by-side meeting in the TV studio was the last scheduled joint appearance by the two before their runoff election Saturday.

Afterward they both headed for rallies and fund-raisers.

Also Sunday, Newsweek said it was reporting in its Nov. 18 issue that one-time Duke backers have questioned whether he pocketed $19,000 he raised for a pro-white group protesting a 1987 civil rights march in Forsyth County, Ga. A Duke spokesman said the money was returned to donors unless they opted to make a "personal gift" to Duke, the magazine reported.

Duke, a state representative who has been disowned by President Bush and other GOP leaders, was grand wizard of the Ku Klux Klan in the late 1970s and was a Nazi sympathizer.

When quizzed about his qualifications to lead Louisiana and knowledge of the state, Duke couldn't identify the top three employers or the number of residents who live below the poverty line.

Host Garrick Utley asked Duke about his past, holding up a front-page picture in Sunday's edition of The New York Times showing him wearing a Nazi arm band in 1969 and carrying a sign "Gas the Chicago 7."

Duke, 41, said he was 19 at the time, was frustrated and trying to protest what he believed was the wrong direction his country was taking, but he admitted that he "didn't choose the right method."

"I was never a member of the Nazi Party or anything like that," Duke said when asked why he preferred the Nazi philosophy as a youth.

"I reject Nazism. I reject communism. I believe in less government, and that's what I stand for."

Duke denied ever saying Adolf Hitler was "a genius."

Duke also renounced a 1988 statement while he was running for president in which he was quoted as saying, "Zionists have long ago bought George Bush and Michael Dukakis."

Asked about his past, Edwards, a high-stakes craps shooter in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe, said, "Well, I'm not a gambler. I could gamble every day. I don't bet on football games, baseball games, basketball games. . . . On occasion when I go to Las Vegas or Atlantic City, where it is legal, within my means, I gamble."

Edwards was asked if for the sake of the state he would try to recast his image away from that of a gambler, womanizer and wheeler-dealer.

He twice evaded the question, then replied, "I'm 64 years old now, and I want this opportunity to do something for myself and for my state, and I'm not going to blow it."

Duke accused Edwards of once running up $1 million in gambling debts, but Edwards said in the background, "That's not true. That's not true."

"Why don't you be honest with us," Duke replied.

The verbal battle continued after the show. As the two waited at the WDSU studio for the show's credits to finish rolling, Edwards told Duke, "You would not have got as far as you have without your past, and your past is going to prevent you from getting any further."

Later, at a rally in Pineville, Duke said personal attacks against him would intensify as the election neared.

"It's going to backfire. We're tired of it, aren't we?" Duke said. The remainder of his remarks were drowned out by cheers of "Yes" from the crowd of 700.

"God bless you, David," a woman shouted when Duke reached out to touch her hand.

Turning to reporters, Duke said, "Have you ever seen anything like that. Those people who say I've lost momentum just haven't been out in the real world."

WEATHER

Strong, seasonal storms roar through eastern U.S.

Steve Elliott
Associated Press

An ocean-roiling storm buffeted the Atlantic Coast from Virginia to New Jersey on Sunday with powerful wind gusts and towering waves that flooded some beachfront homes. It soaked parched mountains in Appalachia, helping foresters gain the upper hand on wildfires there.

It was the second storm to hit the coast in two weeks but was shaping up to be milder than its predecessor, which forced thousands to flee coastal areas and damaged property from Florida to Maine.

Officials worried that beaches and sand dunes eroded by the Halloween storm wouldn't hold up to pounding surf, but there was no immediate report of serious damage. A home damaged by previous storms was toppled in North Carolina, and beachfront homes were flooded in Virginia Beach, Va.

"We are not looking forward to damage being as extensive as it was 10 days ago," said officer Jay Hancock, a spokesman for the Ocean City, Md., police department. Minor flooding was reported in Ocean City.

Inland the system produced a mixture of rain, freezing rain, sleet and snow from North Carolina and northeast Tennessee to southern Pennsylvania and southeastern Ohio.

As much as an inch of ice coated trees and power lines in West Virginia, causing widespread power outages. Many roads were impassable, authorities said.

But firefighters in fire-ravaged West Virginia weren't complaining. Nearly 700 wildfires have burned across about 300,000 acres since late last month.

Up to a third of an inch fell on West Virginia. The soaking allowed Gov. Gaston Caperton to lift a two-week-old order closing forests.

"It's over, at least for a day or two," said Bill Gillespie, director of the West Virginia Division of Forestry.

Fires have burned another 50,000 acres in eight other eastern states.

The storm produced waves as high as 20 feet along the Virginia coast, causing flooding in the Sandbridge area of Virginia Beach, said Dewey Walston, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Norfolk.

"We have water in the first floor of some homes," Walston said.

Greg Ambrose of Richmond watched the surf gnaw at a half-

Q What happens at the end of Rocky V?

Answer: found on page 2B.

Redskins explode, Colts get first win

Associated Press

Mark Rypien, his passing game kept under wraps for most of the season, kept the Washington Redskins rolling with a record-shattering performance Sunday, and the Indianapolis Colts finally showed some horsepower.

Rypien had a career-high six touchdown passes, threw for a career-high 442 yards and broke the 43-year-old NFL record for average gain per completion, leading the undefeated Redskins to a 56-17 victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

"It's more of a thrill to be 10-0," Rypien said. "It's a team football game — I don't need to go in and break records."

Colts 28, Jets 27

Ending the NFL's last winless streak this season at nine games, the visiting Colts scored 21 points in the third quarter to beat the New York Jets 28-27. Jeff George threw for three touchdowns — two to Jessie Hester — and Clarence Verdin returned a kickoff 88 yards for a score.

"This just shows what a bunch of players pulling together can do," George said.

Indianapolis had not scored a touchdown in five games — spanning 329 minutes, 26 seconds — since Sept. 22. But the Colts, playing without suspended running back Eric Dickerson, dominated the highly rated New York Jets in the second half.

Bills 34, Packers 24

Jim Kelly, forced out of the game for several plays in the third quarter with a sore back, passed for two first-half touchdowns and then ran for another in the fourth quarter as Buffalo (9-1) beat Green Bay (2-8) at Milwaukee.

Oilers 26, Cowboys 23, OT

Al Del Greco, who took over as the Houston kicker when Ian Howfield was waived after missing a crucial 33-yard field goal in a loss to Washington, kicked four field goals, including the game-winner with 29 seconds left in overtime.

Saints 10, 49ers 3

Steve Walsh, ineffective for most of the game, hit Eric Martin for 8 yards and the game's only touchdown, leading New Orleans over San Francisco at the Superdome.

Walsh, replacing the injured Bobby Hebert, completed 10 of 25 passes for 116 yards and the touchdown, while Steve Bono, substituting for the injured Steve Young, was 15 of 32 for 109 yards.

Eagles 32, Browns 30

Jim McMahon passed for 341 yards and three touchdowns as Philadelphia overcame an early 23-point deficit at Cleveland.

The Eagles (5-5) didn't lead until McMahon hit Calvin Williams with a 5-yard touchdown pass with five minutes left. The touchdown came three plays after Cleveland's Webster Slaughter fumbled a punt away at his own 2.

Buccaners 30, Lions 21

Vinny Testaverde played error-free football and Reggie Cobb pumped life into the NFL's 27th-ranked offense by rushing for a career-high 139 yards and three touchdowns as Tampa Bay won at home against Detroit.

Steelers 33, Bengals 27, OT

Eric Green caught a 26-yard touchdown pass from Neil O'Donnell in overtime to give Pittsburgh the victory at Cincinnati.

O'Donnell got his first victory in four NFL starts by rallying the Steelers (4-6) with touchdown passes to Ernie Mills and Louis Lipps in the fifth, eight minutes of regulation.

Raiders 17, Broncos 16

Marcus Allen, returning from a knee injury, passed for a touchdown on an option play, Jay Schroeder threw to Tim Brown for another score, and Los Angeles blocked two kicks in the fourth quarter at Denver.

Scott Davis blocked David Treadwell's extra-point attempt after John Elway's apparent game-tying TD pass to Vance Johnson. James FitzPatrick made the second block of what could have been a game-winning field-goal attempt by Treadwell on the final play of the game.

Defensive end Leroy Smith might be Iowa's sack master, but one wouldn't know it to talk to him.

"Coach (Bill) Brashier, Coach (Milan) Vooletich and Coach (Hayden) Fry design schemes for me to rush, but it's really a group effort," Smith said. "It's nothing that I do by myself; it's just everybody working together as a team."

He might be playing for the team, but Smith is piling up the individual statistics at the same time.

In the Hawkeyes' win over Indiana Saturday, Smith recorded two sacks for -13 yards, giving him a new Iowa record for career sacks with 19. The former school mark was 17 by Jeff Drost in 1983-86 and by Jim Johnson, 1987-90.

Fifteen of those stops by Smith have come this season, breaking Johnson's season sack record of 12 in 1989. And the Sicklerville, N.J., native also holds the school record for sacks in a game with five.

But Smith doesn't think about the numbers. When reminded of his success, he just smiles and shrugs it off.

"I never think about those things," said the senior, who is one of the four Iowa captains this year. "Every game, before I play, I always pray and ask the Lord to let me hustle. And if I hustle, good things will happen."

His performances have earned him Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week honors twice this season —

They say a dog is man's best friend.

But if you're Iowa quarterback Jim Hartlieb, ideal field position and some overpowering friends on the defensive side of the ball sure makes your first career start all the more enjoyable — and relaxing.

"Knowing that you don't have to come out of your own end zone, or even your own end of the field takes a lot of pressure off the offense," Hartlieb said. "And the defense, what can you say? Another great effort on their part."

Led by a steady performance from their backup quarterback, as well as record outputs by tailback Mike Saunders and the Iowa defense, the No. 10 Hawkeyes blasted ahead for 21 first quarter points and defeated No. 25 Indiana, 38-21.

It was the second straight home game in which the Big Ten's top defense prevailed over its number one offense. The Hawkeyes shut out Illinois in the second half on Oct. 19 for a 24-21 win.

This game, however, featured the nation's leading rusher in Indiana's Vaughn Dunbar. But once again, the Hawkeyes were up to the task, holding Dunbar below his average of 160.5 yards per contest. Most of Dunbar's 137 yards were accumulated in the second half, after the Hoosiers unsuccessfully tried to come back from a 31-6 halftime deficit.

The Iowa defense didn't waste time making their presence felt, as last week's conference Player of the Week, defensive end Leroy Smith, hit Hoosier quarterback Trent Green on the game's first possession. The ball popped up in the air and fell into the arms of linebacker Teddy Jo Faley, giving Hartlieb and the offense the ball at the Indiana 14.

Iowa could not take advantage, however, but an Indiana punt once again awarded the Hawkeyes with great field position. Taking over at the Hoosier 25, Hartlieb and Saunders helped Iowa forge ahead to the one-yard line.

On 4th-and-goal, Hartlieb perfectly executed a play-action fake to fullback Paul Kujawa and threw a touchdown pass to a wide-open Saunders for a 7-0 lead.

Déjà vu befell the Hoosiers on their next possession, as Green looked to pass to wide receiver Scott McGowan on the first play. Instead, Green found Hawkeye

The Iowa-Indiana game was not an ordinary football game by any standards.

Iowa punished the Hoosiers throughout the first half and coasted to a 38-21 victory. The real story, however, was that this was the first home game since the shootings at Van Allen and Jessup. In memory of that tragedy, football fans were asked to spend a moment of silence.

I guess that was just too much to ask for those in the student section.

With volunteers crawling all over the stadium asking for donations to Miya Sison's family, it was hard to think of it as just another Hawkeye game.

Students generally get quite rowdy for the games. They do the body passing and go out into the 30-degree temperatures without shirts, but that is understandable and expected. In fact, if they can do it and get on ABC-TV, more power to them.

But when the silence was to be observed and it took over a minute to shut them up, while the rest of the stadium was pin-droppingly quiet, it was an embarrassment to this school and should be to everyone who couldn't stow it for a moment. The guy in front of me, who was just too fat to fit into one numbered seat, shut up for the time. The two boys down on the field playing a mock football game were silent. So was the annoying drunk guy next to me who found my existence at the game to be a problem.

Did the students forget that five people died and six fell victim to a gunman last week? Remember their names — Anne Cleary, Linhua Shan, Christoph Goertz, Dwight Nicholson, Robert Smith and Miya Sison.

Students should have been the first to be quiet. The shootings happened on their campus and to their administrators, professors and friends.

No noise was coming from the far sideline where the Indiana fans were sitting. They most likely didn't know these people and certainly weren't as affected by it as this campus was.

Maybe the students were too drunk to notice or care. There are plenty of drunk fans at the game other than in that section, and those people were quiet.

There is no excuse for the actions of more than just a handful of students in the student section.

This is the point where we need to get on with our lives and honor those slain. It is impossible to understand why these students didn't feel the need to join the rest of us officially honoring the victims for one of the last times.

Stand up the entire game, pass the bodies, tear down the posts and cheer for Iowa — but show you have more class.

FIELD HOCKEY

Hawkeyes win third straight conference title, await NCAAs

The first and second time may have been rewarding — but the third time was indeed the charm.

The No. 5 Iowa field hockey team claimed its third consecutive Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference championship Friday with a 1-0 blanking of Ohio State, and followed that up with a come-from-behind 2-1 thriller over No. 6 Northwestern Saturday in Columbus, Ohio.

The Hawkeyes ended the regular season at 16-1-1 but unlike their two previous conference titles, this Iowa team was the first in the three-year history of the MCFHC to go unscathed in the conference, as they finished at 10-0-0.

With the championship, Iowa earned an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament which starts this week. But should the Hawkeyes move up in Tuesday's coaches poll, they would also receive a first round bye and host a second round game for the right to go to the Final Four Nov. 23-24 at Villanova.

"We controlled our own destiny, so that was nice," Coach Beth Beglin said. "We didn't have to have an (NCAA) committee decide if we got into the tournament."

Versus the Buckeyes, a first-half penalty corner conversion by Heather Bryant was all Iowa needed to claim the conference. It was Bryant's team-leading 17th goal of the season. She was assisted by Kerry Horgan and Jamie Rofrano, as Iowa outshot the Buckeyes 18-5.

However, Beglin didn't particularly feel like talking about how the game was played, but rather, what it was played on.

"We just finished playing a game on what is the worst field I have seen in at least four years," Beglin said of the Ohio State indoor facility. "I was appalled at the field. Every five yards the ball was jumping and taking a crazy bounce."

"Regulations say that if weather provides, the game should be played outdoors. And it was 30 degrees outside, with no wind."

Although the conference had been decided with Iowa's victory, there was still much at stake when the Hawkeyes and Wildcats hooked up. The Hawkeyes were playing for tournament seeding and their first unbeaten and untied conference

SCOREBOARD

On The Line Winners

On the line is winding down for this season. With only two weeks remaining to win tee-shirts, contestants will have to become increasingly better at picking to even come close.

It's always a big battle at the end of the season. There is no other way to get an OIL shirt than to win an official shirt through this game. Sure, there is a large black market supply, but infra-red scanning shows which ones are the true OIL shirts.

The official winner this week is Greg Patsner. Is that an 's' or a 'z' in your name buddy? He nailed the North Texas tiebreaker picking them to beat Nicholls St. by three points. No team that Hayden Fry coached could lose to Nicholls St. (other than SMU). Pats(z)ner will have $25 spend on Paul Revere's Pizza. Good eatin'!

Winners of tee-shirts were Varaporn Buraphacheep (once again), Archie Gomez, Jeung H. Lee, Kevin Hammes, Bob Kutcher, Bill Schwarz, Lloyd Hahn, Mike Helmick (we think), Al Stroth, and the person with the best penmanship of all, Tom Johnson.

F-HOCKEY: NCAAs next

 season since 1987, while Northwestern hoped to make a strong case for an entry into the NCAAs.

Northwestern (12-6-1, 6-3-1) got the upper hand after a scoreless first half, as Kathy Hally scored on a sideline hit 1:44 into the second period. Iowa goalie Eileen Moyer mistook the shot for a free hit and allowed it to roll into the cage.

Moyer did not know that the ball had been touched by a Wildcat after Hally's hit.

However, Iowa kept its poise, tying the score on Bryant's direct corner with 7:15 left in the game. Rofrano and Horgan assisted on the play and exactly three minutes later, Bryant did it again, on assists from Rofrano and Jibs Thorson. The Hawkeyes doubled Northwestern in corners, 10-5.

"The team just kicked it into overdrive with about 10 minutes left," Beglin said. "But it is a shame that a game of that importance had to be played on that field. Both teams played well despite the conditions, but I feel it made a huge difference in our ability to both attack and defend."

For the season, Iowa tied a pair of MCFHC records. First, Moyer tied the mark for fewest goals allowed in a year, with five in 10 games for a 0.50 goals-against average. She shares the record with Northwestern's Kim Metcalf.

Furthermore, the Hawkeyes tied the conference mark set by the 1989 Wildcats and 1990 Hawkeyes in the same category.

 saving play in the last 2½ minutes for visiting Kansas City.

Thomas scooped up a fumble on the Los Angeles 23 and raced into the end zone with 2:25 remaining to give the Chiefs the lead. Then, with the Rams threatening to tie, he swatted the ball away from Rams quarterback Jim Everett and recovered at the Chiefs' 31.

Chargers 17, Seahawks 14
 John Carney kicked a 54-yard field goal, the longest of his career, with 18 seconds left, giving San Diego the victory at home against Seattle.

Giants 21, Cardinals 14
 Jeff Hostetler ran 47 and 4 yards for New York touchdowns.

The visiting Giants (5-5) kept alive their hopes of a Super Bowl defense as they halted a two-game losing streak at the expense of the Cardinals (4-7), who have lost three straight.

Dolphins 30, Patriots 20
 MIAMI — Dan Marino broke out of a year-long slump with three touchdown passes, including a game-winning 32-yarder to Mark

Clayton with 1:47 left as the Miami Dolphins beat the New England Patriots 30-20 Sunday night.

Miami squandered a 20-6 third-quarter lead but still improved to 5-5 with its sixth consecutive victory over New England.

The Patriots fell to 3-7. They've lost three in a row by a total of 18 points.

SMITH: Can't do it alone

 after the Ohio State and Northern Illinois games. He was also named Iowa Player of the Game by ABC-TV after recording 14 tackles, including six stops for negative yards and five sacks, and causing a fumble against the Buckeyes.

Smith came out strong against Indiana. On the Hoosiers' third play of the game, he tipped a Trent Green pass into the arms of Iowa linebacker Teddy Jo Faley for the first of four Hawkeye interceptions.

"The coaches always tell us that when you've got a chance to hit the quarterback, go for the ball and the sack will come after that," said Smith, who had eight total stops Saturday. "I was going for the ball and Teddy Jo made a great catch. I saw it go up in the air, but I didn't think anybody on our team was near it. Then Teddy pulled it down, and I was happy."

In the third quarter, Smith also displayed his quickness when he made a shoestring tackle of Green after anticipating a different offensive scheme.

"Coach Brashier called a certain type of defense and I squeezed real hard because I thought it was going to be a pop-out," Smith said. "They had a very good fake, so they suckered me in. Then I saw the quarterback just backedpedaling, so I just ran after him."

Smith's diversity had led opposing blockers to key on him. But, he warns, doing that is a mistake.

"If somebody's keying on me, we've got four other guys that can get to the ball," Smith said. "So you can't really key on me. If you do, the other four guys are going to get to the quarterback. Everybody is equal in that line."

"We work hard as a unit. A lot of people wonder how we've gotten so many sacks this year. It's because we work so hard together. When we play together, there aren't too many teams that are going to stop us."

IOWA: Beat Hoosiers

 defensive back Gary Clark and after a 15-yard late-hit penalty, Iowa had the ball on the Hoosier 27.

"I read (Green) and then I read the receiver and he told me where to go, and I happened to come up with it," Clark said.

The Hawkeyes stretched the lead to 14-0 when Saunders galloped in from 14 yards out. Saunders tied a school record, shared by Nile Kinnick and three others, with four touchdowns in one game.

He rushed for 115 yards on 28 carries, earning Player of the Game honors on ABC. But Saunders wasn't about to take full credit for his performance.

"They wanted to show that they could block for a good runner too," Saunders said of Iowa's offensive line and his confrontation with Dunbar. "When they're motivated, I'm automatically motivated."

The Hawkeye defense got the hat trick on Green, as his third pass attempt of the game resulted in Iowa's third interception. This time, Eddie Polly was on the receiving end and after Iowa took over on the Hoosier 31, Saunders scored on a 19-yard run with 2:37 left in the opening quarter. Green tied a Hoosier mark with four interceptions on the day.

"That first quarter just killed us," Hoosier coach Bill Mallory said.

"That's what we refer to as The Hawkeye Explosion," Coach Hayden Fry said. "We try to concentrate on making something happen whether we have the ball or whether we're on defense, and our guys were just perfect with that."

But the flurry of points wasn't the only detonation happening on the field. Records were being set almost at will.

In addition to Saunders, Polly tied an Iowa mark with two interceptions, while Smith set a new standard with 19 career sacks, breaking Jim Johnson's total of 17 set last year. Smith also holds Iowa records for sacks in a game and season.

"It was a team thing," Smith said of the record. "It wasn't like I did it by myself. Everybody helped me out."

After a Jeff Skillett field goal made it 24-0, the problems continued to escalate for Indiana. On 4th-and-1 at the Iowa 46, Green fumbled the snap, turning the ball over to the Hawkeyes on downs.

Finally, with 4:46 left in the half, Green marched the Hoosiers on a 72-yard drive, capping it with a 24-yard scoring strike to Thomas Lewis. Scott Bonnell's missed extra-point made it 24-6.

But Hartlieb proved he could lead a long drive of his own, as Iowa went 78 yards in nine plays.

With 26 seconds to go on 3rd-and-7, the quarterback found Danan Hughes, who spun out of the grasp of cornerback Mose Richardson and dove ahead of strong safety Jim Summerall into the end zone for a 26-yard touchdown, making it 31-6.

Certainly, Indiana's three turnovers and Iowa's 219-116 edge in total yards lent a hand to the Hawkeyes' first-half dominance. But perhaps the most telling statistic was in the teams' average starting field position.

In eight possessions, Indiana averaged a start on their own 25-yard line, while Iowa's average was the Hoosier 49.

"I would think (that makes it easier)," Fry said, "but you still have to execute. We got 38 points against the number two defense in the Big Ten. It was a good ballgame."

The Hoosiers made a late run by scoring two fourth period touchdowns, including an 11-yard scamper by Dunbar. But it was too little, too late.

"The great thing about this team is they keep finding a way to win," Fry said of his 8-1, 5-1 Hawkeyes. "They're not sensational or perfect by any means, but they keep coming up with big plays."

Kosar sets new standard for NFL passing

Associated Press
 CLEVELAND — Bernie Kosar broke Bart Starr's NFL record for error-free passing Sunday, throwing his 295th consecutive pass without an interception during the Cleveland Browns' game against the Philadelphia Eagles.

Kosar extended the streak to 308 before it ended in the second quarter. Under heavy pressure, he threw a weak pass over the middle that was picked off by Ben Smith at midfield.

Kosar broke the record by avoiding interceptions with his first two attempts in the game. One was completed for a loss, and the record-breaker fell incomplete.

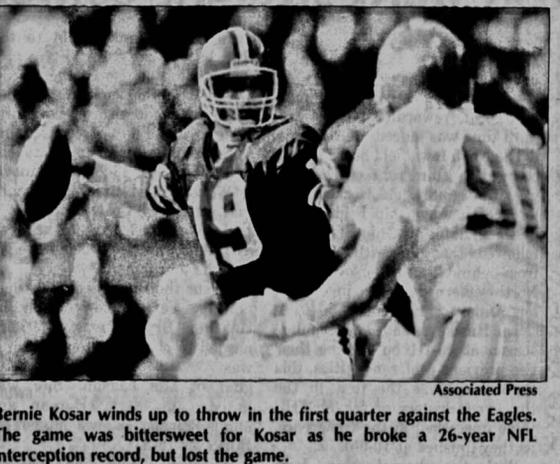

The streak began last Dec. 16, after Kosar was intercepted by Atlanta's Deion Sanders. He sat out the final two games of the 1990 season because of a broken thumb, and he was the only NFL starting quarterback who had not been intercepted this year entering Sunday's games.

Starr threw 294 straight passes without an interception for Green Bay in 1964-65. He said last week that he had seen Kosar play on television several times this year from his home in Alabama.

"I've always been impressed with his discipline and his control," Starr said. "That is largely responsible for reducing errors. I feel that one of the reasons he has been so successful is that his vision seems to be even keener as the pressure increases. I am very pleased for him and I am rooting for him."

Kosar's career ratio of 2.35 interceptions per 100 passes is the lowest in NFL history.

Bernie Kosar winds up to throw in the first quarter against the Eagles. The game was bittersweet for Kosar as he broke a 26-year NFL interception record, but lost the game.

Filmmaker finds 'Green Streets'

Kimberly Chun
Daily Iowan

UI graduate and veteran filmmaker Maria De Luca's documentary "Green Streets" promises to introduce a subject that Iowans are, perhaps fortunately, unfamiliar with — urban community gardening. "Green Streets" plays tonight at the Bijou.

Over 10 years in the making, "Green Streets" is the culmination of De Luca's extensive commercial/independent film experience and her interest in documentaries as an expression of and force for social change.

"All the work I've done in the past, including a film I made here in Iowa City about cooperative child care, has led me to 'Green Streets,'" says the personable De Luca. "I think film conveys my interests best because it appeals on such a visceral level."

Often alone, De Luca took her camera into a variety of urban gardens throughout New York City. Ranging from the South Bronx to Park Avenue, she filmed the spaces and recorded the reactions of the people that have benefited from the past few decades' spontaneous urban gardening movement.

"Initially, I came to 'Green Streets' subject through a shoot I was doing on N.Y.C. street celebrations," says De Luca. "Community gardening is itself a celebratory act, though it is also therapeutic and political."

In face-to-camera interviews, De Luca sought out the gardeners' real voices and found the hope community gardening has engendered in the face of sometimes overwhelming problems. As neighbors transform wasteland into productive gardens, "Green Streets" demonstrates how urban gardening positively affects such issues as housing, pollution, racism and drugs. Most importantly, De Luca found urban dwellers re-establishing connections with each other as they reconnected with the earth through gardening.

"My on-camera interviews were an interesting contrast to your normal expectations about meeting someone in the city," says De Luca. "Normally, you never expect to have an intimate experience with someone on the street. But the gardeners were very responsive to my interviews because, I think, we were in a situation that supports that kind of interaction — working in a pure way, meeting your neighbors."

The filmmaker brought "Green Streets" to Iowa City this weekend and plans to discuss it in several UI film classes.

De Luca claims the film "took a long time because of the grants I had to apply for. To many people, the subject isn't a 'grabber.' For instance, the Sundance festival scout said, 'If the film isn't sexy or about a burning issue, it can't compete.' But I believe firmly in the film."

De Luca's patience and hard work has paid off fruitfully. "Green Streets" was featured on PBS' "P.O.V.: the American Documentary," won a red ribbon at the American Film & Video Festival and was screened in Riga, Latvia, and Moscow as a part of the U.S./Soviet Flaherty Seminar.

MUSIC REVIEW

Los Lobos tear up Macbride with a raucous, rocking show

Jennifer Horn
Daily Iowan

"We would like to welcome you to our 'frozen show' — it was only 80 degrees warmer when we left L.A.," Los Lobos' drummer Louie Perez greeted the Macbride Auditorium crowd a few tunes into a nearly 2-hour set Thursday night. These East L.A. dudes didn't seem too phased by the 8-degree Iowa weather, though. They dished out fun and poured on a hot and spicy Tex-Mex, R & B, mostly acoustic show for the sold-out Free Medical Clinic benefit.

After a laid-back, well-received opening by Iowa City's own Dave Moore, eager concertgoers were yelling and yipping for the five-man band. Lead singer and guitarist Cesar Rosas, with his trademark goatee and dark shades, played stand-up comedian between songs and bopped in slow motion down the auditorium aisles with his guitar and a smug smile. Eventually, Midwestern inhibitions thawed, and the audience was dancing in the aisles.

The play list was dominated by acoustic, Mexican folk songs, but the band threw in a few of their more pop rock tunes for good measure. The nearly two dozen tunes ranged from bang-out waltzes in español to plaintive, losing-in-love ballads; from early albums to a taste of the musical feast to come in the band's to-be-released-next-year album.

The stage was littered with a veritable plethora of strung instruments, electric and not, along with Steve Berlin's three varieties of sax, drums and percussion toys, keyboards and an accordion. Multi-instrument virtuoso David Hidalgo changed axes 15 times, and during one of these changes, Perez announced, "We're gonna have a yard sale after the show."

The band had a good time, bantering back and forth and playing with the music to find something new in it. They smoothly blended three- and four-part vocal harmonies and tossed around call-and-answer parts. Rosas and Hidalgo took care of most of the leads, both tenors with depth and emotion. All five band members took instrumental solo rides, showing off great technical abilities.

Surprisingly, the band seemed very aware of the reason they were there and was supportive of New Pioneer Co-op Fresh Food Market's and the WRAC's efforts to help out the Free Medical Clinic. The objects of the night's song dedications included "the folks at the Free Medical Clinic," deceased songwriters and "all the great Mexican restaurants around town."

The first of four encore tunes — "What's Going On" — was particularly poignant for the Pentacrest concert location, less than a week after the tragic shootings: "There's too many of you dying. . . What's goin' on?" Finally, after what seemed like a schizoid, group improv reeling between Mexican folk and blues styles, the band somehow launched into "La Bamba," with Hidalgo laughing too hard at first to get out the lead vocals.

Miami against FSU could decide champ

Rick Wagner

Associated Press

For the third straight year, the Orange Bowl could feature the No. 1 team in the nation. Only this time, it won't be Colorado.

Notre Dame's 35-34 loss to Tennessee on Saturday knocked the Fiesta Bowl out of a possible national title game and appeared to clinch an Orange Bowl matchup between the Florida State-Miami winner and the Big Eight champion.

Top-ranked Florida State and No. 2 Miami both want to go to the Orange Bowl, so the winner of their showdown next Saturday in Tallahassee seems certain to play the Big Eight champ — either Nebraska or Colorado — in Miami on New Year's Day.

Colorado needs an Oklahoma victory over Nebraska to earn its third consecutive trip to the Orange Bowl. The Buffaloes were ranked No. 1 the last two times they went to Miami, losing to Notre Dame 21-6 in 1990 and beating the Irish 10-9 in 1991.

If Miami beats Florida State, the Hurricanes should be No. 1 heading into the Orange Bowl. They will be heavily favored in their final two regular-season games, at Boston College on Nov. 23 and home against San Diego State on Nov. 30.

Florida State has a much tougher road. If the Seminoles get past Miami, they still must beat No. 5 Florida at Gainesville on Nov. 30 to remain No. 1.

If Florida State loses to Miami, the Seminoles would end up in the Fiesta, Cotton or Blockbuster. Florida State won't go to the Sugar because it would mean a rematch with Florida.

Notre Dame may still go to a major bowl despite dropping seven spots to No. 12 in Sunday's AP poll. The winner of next week's Notre Dame-Penn State game could go to the Cotton or Sugar.

Johnson says testing needed

W. Dale Nelson

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A top professional basketball player Sunday called for "some form of uniform testing" of players for AIDS in the wake of Magic Johnson's disclosure that he has the virus that causes the fatal disease.

A leading college basketball coach, however, said that singling out athletes for mandatory testing would be a violation of their privacy.

Kevin Johnson of the Phoenix Suns and Coach John Thompson of Georgetown University appeared on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

Magic Johnson announced Thursday that he was retiring after a brilliant career with the Los Angeles Lakers because he has the virus that triggers AIDS.

Kevin Johnson, asked about mandatory AIDS testing for athletes, said: "I think now that there will be some form of uniform testing."

He conceded that the privacy question arises, but said he believed the NBA "will come up with something that we players and the Players Association can accept, just to set an example for young people."

"This disease can be transmitted, so we'd like to know," Kevin Johnson said. "I believe that we should get tested."

Thompson, however, said he had "a problem with infringing on a person's individual rights."

He said an athlete doesn't "have any more of a responsibility to be tested than you do or I do or somebody in the street does, so I think it's an infringement on a person's individual rights if you just isolate athletics."

Anthony S. Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease, said on the same program that he expects that within a decade "we will have a combination of drugs that will be able to prolong the disease-free state for a considerable period of time" even when people have the virus.

"It may not be unrealistic to think that you can suppress the virus to the point where an individual can live many, many, many years without having any deleterious effects from the virus."

Democratic National Chairman Ronald H. Brown, meanwhile, said he hoped Magic Johnson's disclosure "sends an important message to this administration that some resources of a major and significant nature have got to go to eradicating AIDS."

Brown, appearing on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday," said Johnson "is a true American hero ... because he stood up and was honest and straightforward and told what he really felt and has taken on a leadership role when most people would cover and move to the background."

Republican National Chairman Clayton Yeutter, interviewed with Brown, said Johnson "made a mistake. He knows he made a mistake."

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Wisconsin, Michigan St. no match for Hawkeyes

Curtis Riggs

Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swim team came out a double winner in Madison, Wis. Saturday by defeating Wisconsin 158 to 135 and trouncing Michigan State 206 to 83 in a tri-meet.

The battle against the Badgers was not over until the last event, but the Hawkeyes did win eight out of the 15 events. In competition against the Spartans the Hawkeyes came out on top in all but one event.

Coach Pete Kennedy felt that the weekend victories could be attributed to excellent teamwork.

"I think that we really came together as a team. With Wisconsin, we really battled down to the wire, but in terms of Michigan State we had a much easier time," Kennedy said. "The 200 Individual Medley was what won the meet for us."

The Hawkeyes won two relay events in the meet. The 200 Medley team of Laura Borgelt, Melissa Eberhart, Nicole Widmyer and Tracy Golden was a winner, as was the 400 Freestyle relay team of Borgelt, Stacie Gillo, Shelley Miyamoto and Golden.

Borgelt was also a double winner in individual events. She won the 100 Backstroke in 1:59.40 and the 200 Backstroke in 2:08.36. Alison Pennington also won two events — the 200 Breaststroke in 2:25.47 and the 200 Individual Medley in 2:09.92. Eberhart won the 100 Breaststroke in 1:07.86. Tracy Golden won the 50 Freestyle in 24.55.

Kennedy was especially pleased with the swimming of Borgelt.

"Laura Borgelt played a role in four winning events," he said.

Middle distance swimmer Chrissie Eck also felt the wins were made possible by fine teamwork.

"I thought that we did very well as a team," she said. "Everyone pulled together and did their best. We were all up for the meet and motivated to go really fast."

The Hawkeyes have their first home meet of the season on Friday against Northern Illinois at the Field House.

"We will be really happy to be in our own pool," Kennedy said.

MEN'S SWIMMING

Change up doesn't hurt Iowa against Cyclones

Curtis Riggs

Daily Iowan

The only thing that looked the same about the Iowa men's swim team Friday night in their meet against Iowa State was their appearance on the victory platform.

The Hawkeyes took the opportunity to change their lineup in the meet and still walloped the Cyclones by the score of 143-100 for the 13th straight victory over ISU.

"We were able to juggle our lineup and it provided for an exciting meet with very close races," said coach Glenn Patten.

"I was really pleased with the way that a number of swimmers came through. Especially Stewart Carroll who was a double winner. Brad Gaeth and Mike Johnson did very well in winning single events while swimming in front of what was a home meet crowd for them."

"Erik Marchitell had a very good meet competing in some races that he is not used to swimming. Also, we had very good diving especially the three-meter," Patten added. "Our 200 Medley Relay had an outstanding time for this early in the season."

The Hawkeye winners were; Carroll in the 200 Freestyle with a 1:43.95 time and the 500 Freestyle in 4:40.29. Marchitell in the 1000 Freestyle in 9:43.32. Rafal Szukala in the 100 Butterfly in 49:56. Matt Smith in the 100 Freestyle in 46:26. Mike Johnson in the 100 Backstroke in 50:89. Brad Gaeth in the 100 Breaststroke in 59:12. B. J. Blair won the three-meter diving with a 298.65 score. The 200 Medley team of Johnson, Keith Gunderson, Szukala and Artur Wojdat won in 1:33.47.

Carroll stressed that the victory in this meet was due largely to an excellent team effort.

"I think that it was a good team performance, we rallied in the second half of the meet after falling behind in the one-meter dive," Carroll said. "My performance was enhanced by competition from within the team. Erik Marchitell and Jim Mulligan had much to do with my performing well, so I mark my wins down to them."

The Hawkeyes travel to Lincoln, Neb. for a meet against Nebraska and Wyoming next Saturday. Patten sees this meet as a very competitive meet for the Hawkeyes.

"Nebraska has been Big Eight champions for about ten years in a row and always gives us a very tough meet," he said.

Superchunk hunkers down and hands out heavy rock riffs with a perky pop flair at Gabe's Oasis tonight.

No bunk, Superchunk offers slack good times at Gabe's Oasis tonight

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

A mighty band by the name of Superchunk will storm into Gabe's Oasis tonight, leaving a trail of perfect pop songs and blown-away teens in its path.

Superchunk plays grungy power pop at its absolute finest, each song a full-on competition of infectious noise. Usually a lone bass or guitar line starts a song, giving it an immediately hummable groove. Various other elements are then thrown on top, quickly becoming non-discernible from the whole.

The most impressive part of the Superchunk experience is the songwriting. There are bands that can play breakneck rock till they drop, but have the tunefulness of a car crash. Superchunk sounds like a band that would drop from exhaustion while playing live, only to play the last song of their set lying on their sweaty backs. But unlike the run-of-the-mill noise band, Superchunk seems unable to write a bad song.

The formula seems simple enough: Start with a punchy bass line, add two guitars — one fuzzy and the other of the catchy lead variety — and frenzied drumming. Stir and pour into a broken mold. Let sit 3 minutes, top with whiny teen-age angst and serve. A delectable creation is guaranteed every time.

This is evidenced by a perusal of Superchunk's extensive discography. The band has released a number of singles on its own Merge Records, each a study in chaotic power pop. How they choose an A-side and a B-side is unknowable because there is never a clunker. Superchunk has translated its success as a singles band into success in the long-playing format, with two stellar LPs on Matador Records.

The latest, No Pocky For Kitty, is an aural delight. It's easy to imagine this as a compilation of great singles, pairing every two songs together on a fantasy slab of vinyl. In reality, only two have appeared elsewhere. Most singles bands release this kind of product at the end of a long career and call it Greatest Hits. Superchunk does it about once a year, then it records more songs. The Freed Seed EP came out what seems like days before the release of Kitty, and that just scant months before the "Cast Iron" single came out on Matador. That one is a must-have for "The Breadman," the gem on the flip.

Once a break is found in this seemingly endless cycle of writing, recording and releasing, Superchunk hits the road. When it rolls into the Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., this pop factory will set up shop and spew out hits that will drive even the most jaded cynic into the pit.

Superchunk is a powerful band, a fact that can occasionally be sullied by its cuteness. Like a pit bull in a doggie sweater, Superchunk looks harmless, but once it grabs hold, it's doubtful it will let go.
