Shooting-related support groups formed

Following last week's shootings, the Iowa City Crisis Center is forming support groups and coordinating groups with other organizations.

The Crisis Center meetings are open to the public and will be held Thursdays at 7 p.m. at the Zion Lutheran Church, 310 N. Johnson St.

The UI Counseling Service will hold a support group session for students on Nov. 18 from 1:30 to 3 p.m. in room S330 of Westlawn.

UI Faculty and Staff Services is organizing groups for faculty members and their families. Those interested should call the office at 335-2085.

The Crisis Center has information on these groups and others in the area, and can be reached at 351-0140.

49th Florida church burned since 1990

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Saddened church members quietly sang hymns Monday while they watched arson investigators dig through the charred wreckage left by the 49th suspicious church fire in Florida since April 1990.

The loss was estimated at $500,000.

The blaze brought to 49 the number of suspicious fires in houses of worship in Florida since April 1990, said Sadie Darnell, a spokeswoman for a task force assembled to investigate the fires.

Airliner crashes in a public square in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A Brazilian domestic airliner plunged in flames into a public square in the city of Recife Monday, killing at least 17 people including two on the ground, O Globo TV reported.

The Nordeste airline plane had just taken off from the northeastern Brazil city bound for the tourist island of Fernando de Noronha, off Brazil's Atlantic Coast.

The twin-engine, Brazilian-made Bandeirantes plane was on fire when it began its fall into the southern sector of Recife, which has more than 1.2 million residents.

American diplomats return to Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — U.S. diplomats returned Monday to Cambodia's capital after a 16-year absence as part of an international effort to maintain a cease-fire in a devastating civil war and bring free elections.

Cambodians are particularly hopeful of the arrival of American diplomats and U.N. peacekeeping troops will prevent the return to power of the murderous Khmer Rouge communist guerrillas.

OAS diplomats hold talks with new Haiti leadership

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Political and military leaders opposed to Jean-Bertrand Aristide Monday gave foreign envoys a long list of supposed abuses by the deposed president, parliamentary sources said.

The head of the Organization of American States delegation said he was trying to convince Aristide's opponents to allow the return of Haiti's first democratically elected leader.

The 11-member OAS team held a two-hour talk with interim Prime Minister Jean-Jacques Honorat, who described the session as "cordial" but declined further comment.

UI's Sigma Chi chapter suspended

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

The UI chapter of Sigma Chi fraternity has had its charter suspended by the national office, and all chapter members now hold alumni status.

The decision was made despite chapter President Mark Shapiro's presentation on why the chapter should stay open at the national Sigma Chi quarterly board meeting Nov. 8 in Philadelphia, Penn.

The chapter has been on "show cause" status since April, which means it had a certain amount of time to show why it should not be suspended. It was placed on a 45-day suspension Oct. 28. During the suspension, members were not allowed to participate in any activities and could only eat meals at the house and hold meetings.

The latest measure came despite the chapter's recent self-housecleaning in which the number of active members was cut in half.

According to Shapiro, 45 of the chapter's 75 members voluntarily went on alumni status. Shapiro said members were given the option of gaining alumni status or remaining to fight to keep the chapter alive at the UI.

"Before we went in, anyone who wanted to go alumni was given that option. Those who wanted to stick it out could stay and fight," he said. "By doing that we were saying to nationals, 'you feel there's a lot of problems; now it's a smaller house and maybe the problems won't exist.'"

Shapiro said the chapter was also making a statement about its priorities.

"We cut our house by 50 percent to show total commitment to Sigma Chi — not alcohol and not parties. We wanted to keep it," he said.

However, Shapiro said the committee felt the 45 members who opted for alumni status would "be detrimental mentally and physically to the house" because they would still be on campus.

He said that he didn't agree with the decision.

"Those 45 made their own decision. Many of them had put a lot into the house and shouldn't be condemned for going alumni. The house shouldn't be penalized because they did," he said.

SHOOTINGS

David Greedy/Daily Iowan

At a news conference held Monday by some family members of the victims of the Nov. 1 shootings, Ulrike Goertz, widow of Christoph

Goertz, left, and daughter, Karein, spoke briefly about the need for stricter gun control laws in Iowa and around the country.

Families, legislators discuss gun control

Loren Keller

Widows and family members of the Nov. 1 shooting victims and Iowa state legislators spoke on the subject of gun control in Van Allen Hall Monday, advocating stricter handgun laws in the wake of the Nov. 1 shooting rampage.

"The right to purchase handguns has to be paid for, and the people that are here today paid in blood," said Roni Sioson, brother of shooting victim Miya Sioson. Sioson is the only survivor of the shootings and is paralyzed for life from the neck down.

"It infuriates me that the Constitution guarantees the right of potential killers to bear arms at the expense of innocent lives," said Karein Goertz, the daughter of murder victim Christoph Goertz. "Within 15 minutes the gunman killed six people and maimed one young woman. This constitutional right has devastated us, the survivors."

RUSSIA

Chechen-Ingushans applaud refusal of state of emergency

Associated Press

GROZNY, U.S.S.R. — Separatists in the southern Chechen-Ingush region fired automatic weapons to celebrate the Russian legislature's refusal Monday to approve Boris Yeltsin's state of emergency in their Muslim enclave.

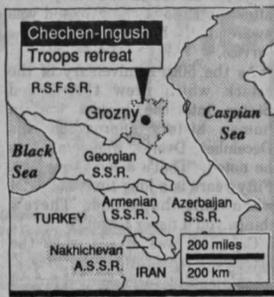

Gen. Dzhokar Dudayev, formerly a bomber pilot in the Soviet air force and now president of the Chechen-Ingush region, had threatened terrorist attacks on Moscow's nuclear power stations and subways if the decree was not repealed.

The 177-4 vote Monday against Yeltsin by the usually pliant Russian lawmakers was the first major show of no confidence in Yeltsin since his election in June as president of the Russian Federation — a mosaic of scores of restless ethnic groups scattered among the Russian majority.

The legislature's rebuff was likely to damage Yeltsin's authority, which was greatly enhanced by his successful opposition to hard-liners who tried to oust Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in August. The vote was not binding but may force Yeltsin to withdraw his decree.

Yeltsin did not attend the debate and had no immediate comment on the resolution, which also called for negotiations toward a political solution. Dudayev said he was asked to take part in talks and was prepared to do so.

ACQUAINTANCE RAPE

UI rape victims relate experiences, fears

N. Aziz Gökdemir
Daily Iowan

Four UI students were interviewed for this series on the aftermath of acquaintance rape, which constitutes 70 to 80 percent of rape acts reported to crisis centers in the United States.

The first part, appearing today, will briefly summarize how the rapes took place. The following three parts will expand on some of the details and follow the rape survivors chronologically from the time of the incident to the present, exploring how their lives changed in a society they think is unfair and unresponsive to the issue.

Of the four UI students, Lara Wright is using her real name. Cassandra, Harriet and Pandora are assumed names. Some details in their stories have been omitted or altered to protect the identities of the victims and the alleged rapists. (There have been no convictions.)

Lara Wright and Cassandra were raped early in their first year in Iowa City.

Cassandra was asked out for a date by a local resident with whom she'd had small talk in the past month. Even though she wasn't really "impressed by his conversation at dinner, I thought he seemed kind of shallow," she accepted his invitation to go to his apartment because she thought she wasn't giving him enough of a chance, she said.

"We hadn't really talked that much about things I'm really into, like literature, films or music. 'Maybe he'll surprise you,' I thought."

She did have reservations about visiting his apartment at all on a first date, but "don't be paranoid, he's a decent enough person . . ." she thought. She was not expecting sex.

Once they were in the apartment, the man rapidly started sexual advances to which Cassandra protested. "Suddenly my clothes were starting to come off. I said, 'Hey, wait a minute, I did not intend for this to happen. I barely know you, I've barely talked to you, I've been on one date with you. No, this is just not the time.' And I kept saying no throughout the whole thing."

She did not scream for help because she was afraid of what her attacker might do, Cassandra said. Later, she let him take her home because she was totally disoriented as to where she was in relation to where she lived.

Dropping her off, the rapist asked her if he could see her again. Cassandra was too stunned by the whole thing to give a snappy answer.

Lara Wright went to a party with her friends. It was an informal get-together of people she'd only met that night through her friends — and she never met them again afterwards.

It was getting late, and Lara's friends decided to spend the night there. She did not want to stay late because she "was just getting to know my roommate and didn't want to make a bad impression on her, coming home late or drunk." When a group of several men who said they lived near her residence hall offered to give her a ride, she jumped at the offer, she said. She did not know where exactly her residence hall was located and how close their place was because she was new in town, she said.

She had made sure that they were sober enough to drive and had also learned that they had girlfriends, she said. "I didn't know that instead of worrying about their sobriety I should have asked, 'Oh, are they rapists?'"

In the parking lot of their place, Lara asked for directions. The time was 2 a.m.

"We'll walk you back; you shouldn't walk back alone. It's late, and it's dangerous," they said.

The men said they had to pick up something they needed from their place before walking her home, and without waiting for an answer, started walking up the stairs into their building. She followed, having to rely on them to locate her residence hall.

PROFILE

'Older' students pursue degrees at UI

Non-traditional students have their own obstacles to surmount, but most find school very rewarding.

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

In many ways UI sophomore Pam Gehl is a typical student. She studies hard, hangs out at the Union, and has problems with her adviser and finding a parking space. But in other ways she is anything but typical.

For one, Gehl is 44 years old. For another, she admittedly loves going to school, even though she travels 80 miles every day from her home in Cascade to Iowa City.

Gehl represents just one of the many non-traditional adult students enrolled at the UI this year. According to Scott Wilcox, a student adviser in the Division of Continuing Education, the number of older students at the UI has steadily increased over the years.

In fact, data compiled by the UI Registrar's Office indicates that 31 percent of all students enrolled at the UI this semester are 25 years or older.

Wilcox said there are three common reasons why non-traditional students return to school.

Some students are preparing for graduate level study but must first complete an undergraduate degree.

Other students are people in the work force who want to advance in their jobs or change careers.

"They may have been working five, 10 or 20 years, and they may be doing very well," Wilcox said, "but their corporate policy won't allow them to advance without a college degree."

Finally, many students return to school for personal reasons.

After children leave home, Wilcox said, many parents go through a "want-to-learn period. They like being around bright, engaging people," and a university is the perfect setting.

After her two daughters left for college, Gehl said she felt a void in her life and wondered what she was going to do for the next 20 years until her husband retired.

"I have always wanted a college education," Gehl said, "and I have always loved learning. The younger students think I'm crazy because I want to go to school."

This is Gehl's second year as a student at the UI. She hopes to graduate in May of 1993 with a degree in psychology.

Although Gehl thinks that she sticks out among her younger classmates, she said everyone is very friendly.

"The students are wonderful. They have really surprised me," she said. "I guess I didn't know what to expect. I did expect a lot of noise in the classroom, kids being loud, but everyone is really quiet. I guess I'm not the only one who doesn't know anyone."

Being the oldest student among a roomful of young people is not the only problem a non-traditional student faces, Gehl said.

Like Gehl, many adult students must commute to the UI, which forces them to be more creative when scheduling classes. Often these students must resort to night classes, an additional problem because most departments do not offer classes at night that are needed for graduation.

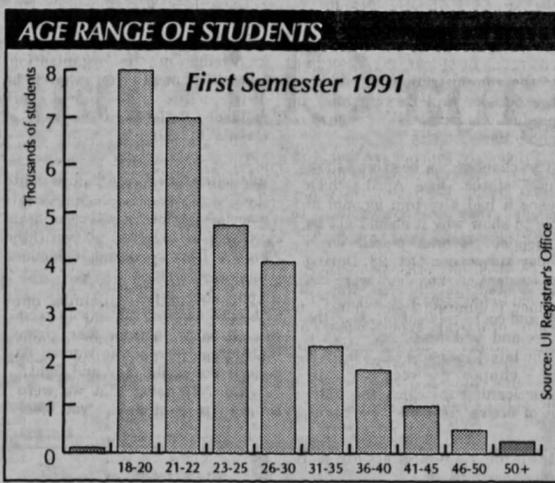

Wilcox said an attempt has been made to increase the number of night classes available to non-traditional students.

"We are looking into creating more classes within certain departments so a major can be completed," he said. Currently, only one degree, bachelor of liberal studies, can be completed through night school.

Another obstacle for non-traditional students is the cost.

When seeking financial aid, Wilcox said, "Adult students are discriminated against because they have an income. And even if they quit their job to return to school, they won't get aid because of their past income."

What do these students do? "They go into debt; they don't buy clothes," Wilcox said. Gehl was one of the lucky few who received a scholarship for her studies. According to Wilcox, these few scholarships are hard to find.

Wilcox and three other student advisers in the Division of Continuing Education work to help non-traditional students with their "batch of unique problems," Wilcox said.

In addition to referrals and special programs for adult students, the division sponsors a Friday afternoon lunch group for adult students to discuss "grapevine information" including good classes and teachers, Wilcox said.

Although Gehl doesn't attend the Friday lunch group, she receives plenty of support from her family. "My daughters think it's great," she said. "Before I was very home-oriented, and now finally I'm doing something for myself."

Pearl Harbor veterans honored at banquet

Local survivors share their experiences on that fateful day.

Jude Sunderbruch
Daily Iowan

Three veterans of the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor by Japanese forces nearly 50 years ago were honored Monday at a Veterans Day banquet sponsored by the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce.

Two of them, Ray Reiland of Iowa City and Martin Dvorak of Hills, Iowa, were within 12 miles of the attack, the requirement to be officially designated as survivors of Pearl Harbor. The third, Ray Campbell of Iowa City, narrowly missed that status because he was on a ship just outside of the limit.

On the Sunday morning of Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese forces first attacked, Reiland, serving aboard the USS Raleigh at the time, was getting ready to go ashore on liberty.

"We saw a plane very low coming at us. We didn't think much of it because the Army Air Corps often came in low on us. We saw something drop in the water, saw a splash. It hit ... and we sounded general quarters," Reiland said. "The planes would come down, swoop over us and drop their bombs."

Although his ship did not sink, it was immobilized after the initial attack. As the one-sided battle progressed, Reiland and his shipmates watched what was left of the U.S. fleet try to leave the harbor.

"One of the things about it was cheering the ships as they got under way. We were stuck, and it gave you a warm feeling to see the ships leave the harbor. We cheered them on, 'Go get 'em.' We felt very close together," said Reiland.

Dvorak was a machinist's mate first class serving on the battleship USS West Virginia, which was tied up in Pearl Harbor on that Sunday morning.

After the ship came under attack, Dvorak and others, who had been below deck drinking coffee, had to flee the vessel.

"The second torpedo hit, and the lights went out. ... We had to scramble to get out from where we were at. We were four decks below," he recalled. "The regular route of escape was blocked by, apparently, an oil line that had broke so we crawled out on our hands and knees."

Dvorak climbed out on a belt leading to one of the ship's turrets. "The ship was starting to list pretty badly. We jumped overboard and swam about a thousand yards to shore," he said. The West Virginia sank soon after.

Dvorak and the others of his ill-fated ship then began to make stretchers out of blankets to help carry the wounded, including survivors who had been blown ashore after the attack.

Less than 72 hours later, Dvorak went to sea on a destroyer. He went on to serve aboard the USS San Juan and participated in some of the most important battles of the South Pacific campaign including Guadalcanal, Coral Sea and Midway. He served in the Navy until after the close of the war and was awarded 13 battle stars for his service.

As the 50th anniversary of the attack which drew the United States into the largest war in human history approaches this December, Dvorak was somber as he noted, "That's a long time ago. Fifty years is a long time. I was 24 when this happened. There's things you'll never forget."

Campbell was at sea when the attack occurred. After the attack, his ship went to general quarters and was kept at sea by the higher command for fear that if it returned to Pearl Harbor it might be sunk and would block the harbor. "We tried to locate them. We went out and chased them down, but we couldn't find them. Yes sir, I remember that day," Campbell said.

Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs Stephen Duncan was the guest speaker at the banquet, which was held at the Highlander Inn & Supper Club in Iowa City. Duncan's speech focused on two main themes: Pearl Harbor and the lessons learned from it, and the restructuring of the shrinking U.S. military.

"We're deciding what kind of military capabilities we need in a changing world. The question is, how much should be put in the guard and reserves?" Duncan said. "We're taking all the lessons of the gulf war and applying it to the new military strategy. We're doing all we can to protect the quality of our forces."

Duncan serves as the principal staff assistant and adviser to the secretary of defense on all matters involving the reserve components of the U.S. armed forces. He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1963, served in Vietnam and practiced law before being appointed to his present position.

Heating aid program in financial jeopardy

The early cold snap means the Emergency Assistance Program will run short.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — A program that helps needy families pay their heating bills probably will run out of money again this winter, a state official said.

Iowans already are applying for help from the Emergency Assistance Program because of the colder than normal weather, said Marvin Weidner, who runs the state's economic assistance programs.

Last winter, the program ran out of money in February. Weidner said demand may be even greater this winter, and the money again could dry up in February.

"We could be looking at an increased need because of cold weather because people will have a harder time meeting their utility bills," Weidner said.

The program is starting the winter with the same amount of money it had last year: $500,000 from the state and $500,000 from the federal government. It provides up to $500 for families faced with eviction notices or heating bills they cannot pay.

The money became available Nov. 1, the day after a snow and ice storm hit the state.

Last year, the program helped 17,519 Iowans. Besides fighting eviction and paying utility bills, the money also may be used to repair or replace heating equipment, make a deposit on a house or hook up utilities.

Dinosaurs almost extinct in Nebraska

Just as ancient dinosaurs slipped into extinction millions of years ago, a giant model of the rhinoceros baluchitherium at the University of Nebraska is on its way out.

The 28-foot high model of a creature that once roamed the Great Plains is to be removed from the state museum located on the campus because it is made largely of asbestos. The fire retardant material was widely used in construction as an insulator until it was discovered that its tiny particles can cause lung cancer in those who are exposed to it over long periods of time.

The director of the museum, Hugh Genoway, has led the effort to get the model of the creature removed. Many students on the campus have noted that it will not be missed too much.

Michigan OKs security's drawing guns on suspect

Campus police officers who drew their weapons on a suspect at the University of Michigan were recently absolved of any wrongdoing by a committee investigating the matter.

The university's Safety and Security Advisory Committee was investigating the arrest of Kenya Teate in one of the university's campus halls. Controversy arose over why officers had drawn their weapons on Teate and whether they had known that an arrest warrant had been issued on the suspect.

Student groups opposed to the findings brought up inconsistencies in the report about whether the suspect had been chased down a dead-end hall and whether that gave the officers reason to draw their weapons. They argued that there are no dead-end halls in the building where the confrontation took place.

Santa Barbara bars actors from acting on campus

Sophomore acting students in the University of California at Santa Barbara's Bachelor of Fine Arts program are being prohibited from acting in on-campus productions because of a recent policy change.

The decision was made to allow the students the opportunity to more fully establish their professional skills in a non-competitive environment of learning, according to the administration. In addition, the decision will free up roles in productions for non-theater majors and others.

Previously, sophomores had been required to audition for department shows. Because of the policy change they are now limited to performing at the end of the spring.

The decision has been criticized by BFA students who feel that the policy is limiting their chances to gain practical experience. The same students also acknowledged the benefits of the decision in allowing students to concentrate on developing and perfecting their skills.

Indiana not paying for religious calendars

A controversy has arisen on the Indiana University campus in Bloomington as the IU Student Association refuses to pay for an advertisement in a student desktop calendar because of its religious tone.

The student government ordered the advertisement in the desktop calendars to promote student knowledge of the organization. Originally the calendars were to be distributed to each room of every residence hall before the start of classes this fall.

The company that produced the calendars was forced to distribute them to students during meals when the residence hall association refused to be involved with the project because of the calendars' religious content.

The calendars include one-sentence descriptions of what the three major Christian holidays mean rather than simply noting them as "Christmas," for example. Other religious messages are included as well.

Both the student government and the residence hall association are prohibited from using student money to support political or religious activities. Because IUSA claims it was never informed of the religious content and the calendars were not distributed in the manner that was planned, the organization is refusing to pay the bill.

PANELISTS

AFAR-sponsored discussion attacks issues of race, sex

Diana Wallace
Daily Iowan

From Claire Huxtable, "the black-face Barbie doll," to Anita Hill, a victim of "symbolic rape," UI Associate Law Professor Adrien Wing said Monday that society has "fought racism by tolerating sexism" against black women.

At a panel discussion held by local reproductive rights group Action for Abortion Rights, Wing and other speakers addressed issues including multiculturalism, free speech and civil rights that they say have been used to form an "assault by right-wing ideology."

Wing joined Dana Cloud, former AFAR chairwoman, and Tom Lewis, associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese, in arguing that the anti-abortion movement is the cornerstone of the "offensive of the New Right." They called for left-wing activist groups to dismiss minor differences of opinion and fight together or "divide and be conquered."

Calling newly appointed Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas a "lap dog of the ruling class," Wing said Thomas and President Bush played upon myths of race, class, politics and gender to secure Thomas' confirmation to the Supreme Court last month.

In a lively and animated presentation to about 75 people, Wing, who called herself a "rare creature" as a black, female law professor, said Bush used the nomination of Thomas to show he supports civil rights, even though Thomas wasn't the most qualified of conservative black judges.

Big Ten meeting prompts ideas on campus safety, tuition costs

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

UI Student Assembly President Jennifer Kelly and UISA Vice President Matt Wise returned from this weekend's Association of Big Ten Students meeting with new campus safety ideas and a feeling of support for Kelly's environmental teleconference proposal.

Kelly said the conference, held at Ohio State University in Columbus, provided new information on other schools' campus safety programs that may be adopted at the UI.

"We communicated about how other schools handle things, and we got a lot of information and will have more to use," she said.

Kelly said her proposal for a forum of nationally known environmental speakers to discuss issues with students at the Big Ten universities was well received.

"They loved the idea, but we're still not sure what will happen with it because the UISA hasn't approved the financial end," she said.

One program discussed at the conference, which Kelly and Wise both agreed they didn't want at the UI, was a group called the Association of White American Students.

The group, which is starting at Ohio State University, came and spoke to the conference about possibly expanding to different campuses. Its purpose is to teach white students to identify and remove prejudiced attitudes from within themselves and their community. It has received support from a number of minority spokespeople at OSU.

According to Wise, the flaw with the group is that it is only for white people.

"We're very against it; it perpetuates racism. I don't agree with separating people because of the color of their skin. I don't think separation will help racial tensions," he said.

GUN CONTROL

Locals debate bans, ordinances

John P. Waterhouse
Daily Iowan

Frustration, anger and conflicting opinions on gun control surfaced Monday night as members of the local community met to discuss tougher state legislation and local ordinances on gun sales in the wake of the recent UI shootings.

Nearly 80 members of the UI and the local community, including the widows of the shooting victims and the mother and uncle of Miya Sioson, debated gun control laws.

Throughout the meeting people were encouraged to share their feelings on ways to ban or regulate gun control. One man said "we need to get rid of this cowboy image, the tough John Wayne image that is presented on American television."

To illustrate this point, Mitchell Moss, a second-year student in the UI Writers' Workshop who organized the open forum, showed the audience a videotape of a gun control segment from last week's CBS presentation of "48 Hours."

The program stated that there have been 20 mass murders in the United States within the year. Moss said he presented the excerpt

"We don't want to say persons with guns are evil, vicious people."

Mitchell Ash,
UI professor

not only to show the alarming number of deaths this year to firearms but to illustrate America's "contradicting" attitude in a commercial during the break.

The commercial featured an advertisement for Steven Seagal's movie "Above the Law."

"I didn't show this advertisement to offend anyone," Moss said, "but rather to show the contradicting attitudes in which our society lives."

Mitchell Ash, UI associate professor of history, passed out copies of an article he wrote for the Nov. 10 Des Moines Register in which he discussed how "to achieve some measure of social sanity" in the wake of the recent campus shootings.

"No law can end human aggression, but surely more can be done to ensure . . . that it will not be so absurdly easy to purchase the weapons that make it possible to live out murderous impulses to such deadly effect," he wrote.

At the meeting Ash said the local gun control group which is still evolving is not interested in coming after people's rifles. "We don't want to say persons with guns are evil, vicious people. Rather, we all need to work together to change legislation," Ash said.

UI Associate Professor of Microbiology Donald Walker responded to a comment which defended freedom of choice and the right to bear arms. "We don't have freedom of choice when it comes to persons with firearms. Isn't a person's right to stay alive more important than the right to bear arms?" he asked.

Moss concluded the meeting by suggesting practical measures to assist the group in their gun control efforts. Educating the community and "working with hunters' groups and not against them" were among the suggestions.

Iowa City Councilor Karen Kubby suggested melting down the handguns and turning them into a memorial as a "positive" symbolic action.

BRANSTAD

Teacher salary delays upset Dems

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES—Gov. Terry Branstad's delay in a promise to increase teacher salaries to the national average represents "lies, deceit and deception" that mark the governor's campaigns, the state's top Democrat said Monday.

"Terry Branstad will do and say anything to get elected, regardless of the truth," said Iowa Democratic Chairman John Roehrick. "Branstad's pattern of making campaign promises and promptly renege on them after the election is an insult to all Iowans."

Branstad aides rejected the charges, blaming Democrats for a delay in efforts to increase teacher salaries.

The state's teacher union stayed on the sidelines, with a spokesman saying it's "probably inappropriate" to push for higher pay during a state budget crisis.

Branstad started the flap during a weekend television appearance when he said the state's budget crunch will force a delay in one of his key campaign promises.

During the last election, Branstad won the state's teacher union endorsement with a promise to

"Branstad will do and say anything to get elected . . ."

John Roehrick,
Democratic chairman

increase pay to the national average within four years. Appearing on Iowa Public Television, Branstad said, "At this point in time, our goal continues to be to achieve the national average. Whether it takes another year or so, I still think that's an admirable goal."

In a statement Monday, Roehrick said Branstad has broken major campaign promises after each of the past three elections.

"Branstad's lies, deceit and deception are examples why voters are frustrated with him and government," Roehrick said.

Branstad aide Richard Vohs said the governor asked for $2.7 million during the last legislative session for the first step in that pay increase, but it was rejected.

"The Democrat-controlled Legislature did not approve his budget recommendations last year and that has put us a year behind," Vohs said. "If the Democrats spent less time pointing fingers and criticizing and more time working with us, we could make progress."

"If Branstad is not going to outright break his promise, he ought to tell the people of Iowa how long he will delay the salary increase and where his commitment to education lies in his list of priorities," Roehrick said.

Caught in the middle of the fight is the state's teacher union, the Iowa State Education Association. That traditionally Democratic union broke ranks and endorsed Branstad last year on the strength of the pay increase pledge.

Though the two sides have had major disagreements since the election, ISEA officials are reluctant to publicly force the issue.

"I think we understand the financial situation the state is in and the economic conditions that we're trying to deal with. We have to be realistic," spokesman Bill Sherman said.

"I wouldn't call it a holding action, but we just feel it's probably inappropriate to campaign for higher teacher salaries in light of all the other economic problems that are occurring in Iowa," Sherman said.

Heterosexual sex infected most AIDS virus carriers

Clare Nuliss
Associated Press

GENEVA — About 75 percent of people with the AIDS virus worldwide were infected through heterosexual sex, but it still accounts for a small fraction of cases in North America and Europe, the World Health Organization said Monday.

The Geneva-based agency said up to 5,000 people are infected each day and predicted the number of HIV cases may rise four-fold by the end of the decade.

However, tests of possible AIDS vaccines are planned for Thailand, Uganda, Rwanda and Brazil, said Dr. Michael Merson, head of the U.N. health agency's AIDS program. The tests — which will involve several thousand volunteers and could begin in about a year — mark a departure from previous approaches favoring early testing on animals.

About a dozen potential vaccines were being tested, and several more may be available when testing starts.

Merson, however, advised against having too much hope for the vaccines.

"The major point is that we're not going to have a vaccine today, and we're not going to have a vaccine tomorrow," Merson said. "We have to do everything we can to inform the public now of the risks and the need for safer sex."

Merson said an estimated 8-10 million adults carry the human immunodeficiency virus that leads to AIDS.

WHO reports heterosexual intercourse was responsible for HIV infections in most Third World nations, particularly in Africa.

"We have predicted that by the year 2000 there will be 40 million adults and children infected with HIV," he said.

It usually takes about 10 years before a person with HIV shows the full signs of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which attacks the immune system and leads to death.

WHO said heterosexual intercourse was "overwhelmingly" responsible for the spread of HIV in sub-Saharan Africa, where an estimated 6 million people carry the HIV virus and 900,000 babies have been infected by their mothers.

In Asia and Latin America, the virus is also spread mainly through heterosexual practices, said the agency.

WHO said there has been a 40-fold increase in reported AIDS cases in Central America during the past four years and that 10,000 HIV-infected children have been born in Latin America.

Dr. Michael Merson of the WHO Global Program on AIDS stresses the need for safe sex.

FDA to discuss breast implants' safety

Deborah Mesce
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An advisory panel opens a three-day meeting today to help the Food and Drug Administration determine whether silicone-gel breast implants are safe enough to remain on the market.

More than 2 million women have had the implants in the nearly 30 years they have been on the market, but critics say they should be banned because of risks of infection, hardening of surrounding breast tissue, false mammography results and silicone leakage. Questions have also been raised about long-term dangers of immune reactions and cancer.

Plastic surgeons and many of their patients, meanwhile, argue that the psychological benefit of the implants far outweighs the risks, which they say are small.

More than 100 witnesses were scheduled to testify before the General and Plastic Surgery Devices Panel on the first day of the hearing in nearby Gaithersburg, Md.

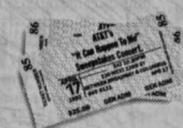

Members of the panel will evaluate the data submitted by implant manufacturers on Wednesday and Thursday and make a recommendation to the FDA. The panel's recommendations are not binding but are usually followed by the agency. The FDA has said it will decide what to do about the silicone implants by Jan. 6.

"There are substantial health benefits for all patients, whether for reconstruction after mastectomy or cosmetic breast enlargement," said Dr. Dennis Lynch, a Temple, Texas, plastic surgeon and an official of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons.

NUCLEAR ENERGY

Seeing the future

Cheap, clean and virtually inexhaustible energy. It sounds too good to be true, and currently it is. But recent developments indicate that this may not always be the case.

Nuclear fusion has the potential to alleviate many of the problems associated with the current shortage of usable energy. Harnessing this potential may be years away, but researchers and governmental agencies should press ahead in their efforts to control this powerful force.

While American researchers have been working in this field for over 50 years, it was a European consortium that made the first major breakthrough. On Saturday, at the Joint European Torus fusion reactor, scientists produced a significant amount of energy from a controlled nuclear fusion reaction. This is the first time in history that such an experiment was successful.

The benefits associated with the development of reactors that produce cheap and clean energy would be enormous.

In an interview reported by The New York Times, Dr. Ronald Davidson, director of the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory in New Jersey, called the event "historic." However, he noted that American efforts are currently hampered by tight budgetary constraints.

Unlike nuclear fission, fusion reactions do not produce dangerous radioactive materials. Concerns about the disposal of these materials and the possibility of a potentially horrific accident was the primary reason the development of fission reactors stalled.

Of course, the benefits associated with the development of reactors that produce cheap and clean energy would be enormous. In particular, environmental damage caused by the combustion of fossil fuels would be avoided. And many of the costs, both economic and political, associated with America's reliance on foreign energy supplies would be negated.

Politicians do not always do what is best for the country, and in a time of economic peril it is difficult to convince people that long-term investments are prudent. But those concerns should not be allowed to hinder future research. Money is needed, support is needed and encouragement is needed. But most of all, vision is needed — vision that will carry this country into the 21st century.

Louisiana gubernatorial race only days away

To the Editor:
Mike Bunge's editorial ["Democrats to blame for Duke's political success," Oct. 8] goes out of its way to excuse and rationalize voter support for David Duke. He blames Democrats for Duke's success. Tom Harkin, speaking in Iowa City the day after the Louisiana primary, offered a more accurate analysis:

"When you have a shrinking economy, and George Bush says the answer is to give bigger pieces of that shrinking pie to the few at the top, and the American people get squeezed and see no hope of better jobs, no confidence in the future, then self-interest and greed and selfishness take over. That has been the politics of the Bush White House. Pit race against race, sex against sex, the old against the young, and then figure out how to get enough votes to win out of that."

Assigning blame, however, is not the real issue. People's economic fears are genuine. But as The New York Times' A. M. Rosenthal wrote (Nov. 5), "That was the excuse for Germans who reached out to Hitler. But in Louisiana, as in Germany, there is choice. Americans did not choose Fascism during the hideous Depression of the 1930s. That excuse degrades all those people — including Louisianians — who fight Fascism, using the power of conscience and choice that is supposed to separate us from animals."

David Duke's past is well known. He has repeatedly claimed that the Holocaust never happened. Until recently, he celebrated Hitler's birthday. It's too little to note, as Bunge does, that Duke "is not out on the campaign trail quoting from 'Mein Kampf.'" It's not enough to say, "Hopefully, he has changed his beliefs." Those beliefs are so dangerous that Louisianians can't risk their vote on hopes that Duke has changed. What if he hasn't?

Another Louisiana politician, Huey Long, once said, "If fascism ever comes to America, it will be in the guise of 100 percent Americanism." That's what David Duke claims to offer. Let us trust that Louisiana's voters are wise enough to see through him on Saturday.

AZIZ GÖKDEMİR

Watching troubled waters from a bridge

Call me Idiot. When last summer I decided to do a column on acquaintance rape, I thought in all my naivete that I could flesh it out in half an hour while sitting in my recliner and sipping my daiquiri. Being devout readers I'm sure you know I never did write that column; instead, we're starting a four-part series on the subject on our front page today. Here's briefly what took place between then and now:

1) I met Lara Wright through my best friend in Iowa City. (Lara is using her real name for the series for reasons she'll make clear in Part IV on Friday).

2) She told me she'd been raped.
3) She told me she'd been raped twice.
4) She told me that this was not uncommon and backed it with stats.

5) I wrote a magical-realist piece for one of my columns, assuming the voice of a yuppie who in his free time raped women and killed babies.

6) An old lady with a Miss Marple accent misread my metaphor, called the newsroom to accuse me of advocating rape, at the same time inquiring whether I was black (which I'm not) or a foreigner (which I am). This angered me and made me decide to go ahead and write that column, write about family, growing up, dating, inhibitions and rape — an analysis on the infrastructure that underlies rape, if you will.

Well, I found better-informed people than I when I started bouncing some ideas off Lara, and for the rest of this week I'll be a messenger boy, delivering the testimonies of the rape survivors.

The very select few who got to read the articles prior to publication invariably asked me where in hell I found all those women with such grotesque stories to tell. The truth is, friends, it was really easy. I had friends come up to me and say they'd been raped, too, once word got out that I was involved in this project. Try it yourself sometime.

It seemed to me that there are more of them out there than we'd like to estimate, and in a sense maybe they're another Third World, I don't know.

The women I interviewed drew pictures with charcoal as they were talking to me, to express themselves as fully as possible. I asked for, and was kindly given, permission to use them as illustrations for the series. All the while, the tape recorder was running — and when I listen to it, I can hear the vigorous scratching of charcoal against paper in the background.

The tape-recorded interviews eventually yielded a total of slightly under 35,000 words, which I duly transcribed. ("The Old Man and the Sea" is around 27,000 words to give you a comparison.) Quantity alone, of course, won't give you a Hemingway, or anything remotely coherent for that matter — so the interviews were woven into the text you will read.

The articles were then read and approved by the rape survivors and edited by John Kenyon, who also laid the stories out on the paper and is responsible for their placement.

It should be fairly obvious that with a project of this magnitude, teamwork was essential both prior to and after the emergence of the articles. The people involved are too numerous to name here, and many of them I should not name. Still, I'd like to thank everyone shadowed by the deceptive byline which carries my name only.

Looking back, because it took so damn long, I find that I have asked myself many times why I was doing this instead of wiggling my toes in the bathtub or something.

I'd like to dismiss the notion that I'm on a guilt trip by virtue of gender. I was given this story, and it just seemed unethical not to do my best to deliver it properly.

Very early on, I decided to do this thing without any frills, nothing about rape crisis programs, whistles and other precautionary measures, or prosecution strategies — nightmares and hopes are basically all you'll find. Stories of the "Twilight Zone," outside "The Twilight Zone" — right here, right inside Iowa City.

I may have come away from this with stiff fingers, but some of the women said they pretty much went through hell, reliving the past and waiting in anticipation for this day of publication. And I certainly will never claim proprietorship of the text; it's theirs more than anybody else's — I'm just the carrier pigeon.

Or make that a raven. I feel like I've recently been sprayed with soot.

Mideast peace could bring prosperity to Africa

The historic Middle East peace conference has ended its first round of talks. Since the birth of Israel in 1947, this is the first time all the warring parties have met face to face and around the same negotiating table. Previous talks have either excluded or deliberately omitted one or two of the belligerent groups or organizations. The Madrid conference is a welcome event.

The current attempts at bringing sustaining peace to the region will certainly have repercussions on the African continent. Africa shares some common borders with the Middle East. Both of them are separated by the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean. And in this age of supersonic technology and satellite communication, there is an accelerated cross-pollination of ideas, goods and peoples between Africa and the Middle East. One should quickly add here that this exchange has not always been friendly.

When Israel was created, the world had just emerged from disastrous World War II. The independent Arab countries refused to recognize her existence because, amongst other things, the people of Palestine were rendered homeless and without a nation-state. A few years later, the world was polarized by the Cold War.

Thus, both the organically linked Arab-Israeli conflict and the Moscow-Washington Cold War affected and influenced events in Africa. And to some extent, religious controversies and conflicts financed either by Israel or by Arab states played dominant roles in African affairs.

For example, South Africa's apartheid regime presented itself as the defender of Western Christian values against communism and an Islamic invasion of Africa. Israel found in South Africa a natural ally in the sense that Israel's Zionism, whose immediate victims were the protected themselves from Moammar Khadafy's Islamic influence and inroads into Africa. Notorious and corrupt African tyrants like Liberia's Samuel Doe and Zaire's Mobutu Sese Seko were great friends of Israel. Israel's dreadful Mossad (a secret service outfit) trained and equipped some of Africa's most dangerous presidential guards whose violations of basic human rights are legendary.

On the other hand, the ruling circles of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, irresponsible and unproductive wars and strifes.

Second, there is in Africa today a high degree of religious intolerance and fanaticism. Narrow-minded politicians in Africa and their Middle East allies deliberately instigate religious crises in order to sell arms purchased in Moscow, Washington and other industrialized countries. Where there is no strife, there is no sale of arms.

Some analysts of Africa have been trying to examine the effects of a successful Middle East peace process. At this stage such an analysis will be purely speculative. However, peace in that region would connote a drastic reduction of the arms race in Africa. Investment patterns will change from the purchase of non-productive arms to Arab and Israeli investments in industrial and agricultural sectors in Africa. Material and cultural support for the ongoing multiparty democracy in Africa should find friends and sympathizers among Israeli and Arab leaders who will in turn have to move away from military confrontation to socio-economic cooperation. Peace and understanding between Arabs and Israelis will help in the continuing effort to recreate a new atmosphere of tolerance between Christians and Muslims in Africa.

Once again, it is too soon to know precisely what destiny and the future hold in stock for Africa in the complex process of peace initiatives in and by Middle East countries. Time will tell.

Communities rally to prevent Duke's election

Black and Jewish groups in Louisiana are working hard to 'get out the vote.'

Mary Foster
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS, La. — With former Klan leader David Duke making a strong run for governor, get-out-the-vote efforts in Louisiana's black communities are the strongest since the early days of the civil rights movement.

"History is going to be made," said the Rev. Zebadee Bridges, president of the political arm of the Interdenominational Association of Black Ministers of New Orleans.

"We are going to get the vote out as never before."

The get-out-the-vote strategy for Saturday's gubernatorial runoff against former Gov. Edwin Edwards also is intense, but more subtle, in Jewish communities since Duke's strong showing in the Oct. 19 primary.

"We are being extraordinarily careful not to violate the tax exempt status that prevents us from campaigning for a candidate through our synagogues," said Rabbi Edward Cohn of Temple Sinai, Louisiana's largest Jewish congregation.

"As individuals, however, there is tremendous work going on in everything from voter registration to getting people to vote absentee ballots to raising money."

A joint statement by Louisiana's highest ranking black religious leaders — from the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. in Baton Rouge, the African Methodist Episcopal Church in New Orleans, the Church of God in Christ in Lafayette and the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church in Shreveport — endorsed Edwards for governor and launched a statewide effort to defeat Duke.

"Duke's overt race baiting brings out the worst instincts in people and plays on fear and ignorance," said a joint statement from the leaders. "We will unite with responsible citizens on Nov. 16 to put him back under the sheet and swastika where he belongs."

Duke, a maverick Republican who describes himself now as a born-again Christian, is a former Ku Klux Klan grand wizard. He once openly expressed Nazi views but says those days are behind him.

With Duke expected to get the majority of the white vote, political consultant Renard Rochon said Edwards will need to double his white vote in the primary to 33 percent and get every black vote available.

Strong black support for Edwards is a given in the election, said Democratic state Rep. Sherman Copelin. A 35 percent white vote for Edwards is well within reason, he said.

"It's amazing. Go in the barrooms, the beauty shops, the clubs, anywhere you have people getting together and you will find people working for votes," Copelin said.

Black voters didn't believe white voters would back Duke to the extent they did in the primary, said Rep. Bill Jefferson, D-La.

"Edwards didn't get as big a black vote as he could have in the primary because black voters just didn't take Duke that seriously," he said.

Black voters also didn't believe white voters would back Duke to the extent they did, Bridges said.

"We just didn't know there were that many white people who still were that prejudiced against us," Bridges said. "Evidently we were wrong, but we won't make that mistake again. In the churches, the social halls, the streets, you're going to really see people working this time."

Louisiana has 2.2 million registered voters, of which a little more than 625,000 are black and 1.6 million are white, said the state Department of Elections and Registration. Of the 625,000 black voters, about 32,000 registered after the October primary.

The state has at least 17,000 but under 20,000 Jews, Cohn said.

Black votes alone wouldn't defeat Duke, analysts said. Some state officials expressed concern over the effects of a strong racial split in the election.

The turnout of black voters for Edwards must be matched by the turnout of white voters who support him, said Democratic state Sen. Cleo Fields.

Nussle tries to end House perks

Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Jim Nussle has saved THE BAG, the one he wore over his head during a House floor speech to protest chronic rubber-check writing by some of his colleagues.

Now, this youngest member of the House is getting paper bags in the mail, along with messages like: 'Go get 'em.'

The 31-year-old Iowa Republican has taken the cue, starting a crusade to eliminate remaining House perquisites, impose term limits on Congress and make all civil rights laws apply to the nation's lawmakers.

"We've got a broken system," the freshman congressman said in a recent interview, acknowledging his proposal is "going to the heart of perks and systems and networks created over the years that are coveted."

Nussle said he hasn't been blackballed in the House but admitted that veteran lawmakers "haven't paid attention yet" to his reform plan.

"Freshmen and sophomores want to know how it will work," he said.

Among the privileges Nussle would eliminate are:

- Free parking for members of Congress at Washington National Airport. "There's so much public transportation," Nussle said, adding that he either hops a cab, takes the subway or has a staff member drive him to the airport.

- Subsidized $5 haircuts at the House barber shop (the House will soon raise the price to $10). "I used it my first week in here," Nussle said. "It was the worst haircut I ever had. I got what I paid for."

- Free prescription and non-prescription drugs from the Capitol physician. "My next door neighbor can't do this," Nussle said.

- The low, $100-a-year fee for use of the House members-only health facility, which includes a swimming pool, basketball court, weight room, sauna and steam room. "Privatize it," Nussle suggested.

Nussle wants to reduce a House member's salary by 5 percent any time government spending exceeds revenues in the previous fiscal year. And he's proposing a constitutional amendment imposing term limits — a 12-year maximum for all members of Congress.

He wants Congress to end its exemption under 16 separate laws involving areas such as wages, equal pay, civil rights, freedom of information, workplace health and safety, age discrimination and privacy.

The House bank is no longer a problem because the House ordered it closed and began an ethics investigation of the rubber checks it accepted.

The former prosecutor of Delaware County, Iowa, and THE BAG made all the network newscasts and his picture was carried in newspapers nationwide.

Chi national office since the initial suspension. She said the decision was mutual between the UI and the nationals, and the chapter was suspended because it wasn't providing what the university required.

"From our perspective as a university, they were no longer providing what we would call a sound educational environment," she said.

Peterson also said that it was not one single incident which brought about the suspension.

"In this case, there was not. That says something for the UI greek community and the Sigma Chi nationals. We don't need something big and bad to happen," she said.

The members will be allowed to live at the fraternity house for the rest of the semester but will not be recognized as a chapter, according to Peterson.

Shapiro says he feels the worst for the sophomores and pledges.

"I feel for the guys who just activated or the guys who have been pledges for eight or nine weeks. The pledges can go to another house, but their first choice was Sigma Chi," he said. "None of those who activated can go anywhere else. If there's no Sigma Chi, there's basically no more greek life."

Shapiro said he hopes the pledges do what's best for them, and he thinks they should pledge another fraternity if they want to.

"I want them to do what will make them happy. There's a lot of good houses out there, and these guys are great. They'll help whatever house they go to," he said.

He also said the suspension is hard for the older members.

"You can't help but be down. I put in four strong years, and it hurts to look back and realize it's all gone," he said.

Peterson said no thought has yet been given to a possible re-opening of the chapter.

Rutskoi, the author of the decree, reversed their earlier defense of the crackdown. They backed the lawmakers' move for negotiations, signaling that Yeltsin had decided against confrontation.

Yeltsin's apparent indecision in using force, the limited number of troops he was able to send to the region to enforce his decree and the failure of his representatives to carry out an order to arrest Dudayev showed his government to be weak in areas not dominated by ethnic Russians.

In the Chechen-Ingush capital of Grozny, cheering militants fired their automatic weapons in the air and honked car horns to celebrate the Russian retreat.

Dudayev said the Russian vote represented a "victory for democracy and truth." There was no sign of compromise from the Chechen-Ingush leaders on their Nov. 2 independence declaration from the Russian Federation.

Immediately before the Russian legislature voted, Dudayev said he would order terrorist strikes against atomic power stations around Moscow if Yeltsin did not back down.

"Why should our mothers cry, our old people cry, why should our children cry and live so much in fear?" he said. "Why shouldn't Russia, which is where this evil is coming from, feel fear?"

After the vote in Moscow, Dudayev suspended the threat.

Dudayev is a national hero in the mainly Muslim autonomous region of 1.3 million people, 930 miles southeast of Moscow, for trying to break free of Russian control, which began under the czars.

If Yeltsin had ordered troops to open fire, violence could have spread to other parts of the Russian Federation with substantial non-Russian populations. The backlash could also have worsened Russia's relations with Muslim republics to the south.

But if Yeltsin backs down entirely, it could encourage secessionist movements in other parts of the vast Russian republic, including largely Muslim Tatarstan.

Duke pelted by angry mob outside television station

Guy Coates
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS, La. — A dirt-throwing crowd screaming "Nazi" chased gubernatorial candidate David Duke into a television studio Monday.

The 30 to 40 people were at the WDSU television studio entrance waiting for the Republican state representative to appear on a talk show.

As Duke's car caravan moved to a side garage entrance, the crowd ran toward the entrance, throwing dirt as Duke got out.

A body guard said he was struck in the head trying to shepherd Duke into the studio. "I don't know if it was a rock or what. It hurts," Dan Bennett said, touching a bump on his forehead.

State and city police cleared the street as Duke's car left the studio. The crowd gave the Nazi salute, shouting sarcastically, "Sieg Heil."

"I wish they would take me for my word that I repudiate my past," Duke sighed as he entered the studio. The former Ku Klux Klan leader spoke at American Nazi rallies during the 1980s.

His Democratic opponent, former Gov. Edwin Edwards, was in Baton Rouge Monday, predicting he would receive 58 percent of the vote in Saturday's runoff election. Polls have indicated the race is too close to call.

During one of two broadcast talk shows Monday, Duke disavowed any connection to reports of acts of violence in the city of Dubuque, Iowa, where some white residents have been trying to start a chapter of his National Association for the Advancement of White People.

Duke founded the NAAWP after leaving the Klan in 1980. Duke campaign staffer Babs Wilson is president of the NAAWP.

"I have not been president of the organization for two years," Duke said during an appearance at WSMB radio.

these tragic acts. No more handguns," said Goertz's widow, Ulrike.

The widow of Robert Smith said in a written statement that the killer could have been stopped if he had had a knife but could not have been prevented from killing her husband and the other victims since he had a handgun.

"My husband, my child's father, should be alive today. With things the way they are in this country, this could happen to anybody, anytime. Handguns make it too easy to kill," she said.

Jane Nicholson, the widow of shooting victim Dwight Nicholson, said the weapon used on the victims was "too readily acquired by an individual in distress."

"I implore you to disarm our culture before we are all widows and orphans. Do not simply mourn this time but act," she said.

State Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, stressed her belief that further gun control legislation is necessary and said she plans to help form a task force to study the issue and get stricter legislation passed at the state level.

"The ease with which one angry young man bought a handgun should be appalling to everyone," she said.

The task force, said Doderer, which will consist of citizens, legislators, prosecuting attorneys and state representatives, will be formed sometime this week.

RAPE

on at first, Lara said.

The whole time they were joking, which was the hardest part because I didn't want to get serious and make a scene and look stupid. I didn't want to raise it to the level of seriousness because I didn't know what they would do.

That feeling of uncertainty faded fast, she said, when they went in the room and the men started mixing a pitcher of drinks, locked the door and refused to let her go. They pressured her several times to drink, but she refused. They then took away her whistle and told her "other guys on the floor will just want to join in" even if she screamed, refusing to let her out of sight.

The prank ended when after several attempts she managed to get out the door and run as far as the staircase. One of the men tackled her in the staircase, and pinning her against the wall, raped her while his friends watched and laughed.

It just happened so fast that if I'd screamed nobody would've gotten there to stop it in time. All screaming would do would be to bring more people to see what was happening to me. I didn't want anybody else to know. I didn't want anybody else to see. Also, I didn't want the others to hear and come to join in. And his friends watched and laughed.

Lara said she could not even move against the guy's pressure, he being more than twice her weight and over a foot taller.

He then brought Lara back inside, and it seemed like they were arguing over a schedule, she said, when she managed to run out. In front of the door, the alleged rapist caught up with her and asked to walk her home "because it's dangerous out there," Lara said.

She started yelling, causing him to back away a little, enabling her to run away. Once she had put some distance between her and the building, she was directed to the residence hall by a bread delivery man — by this time it was 5 a.m. She curled up in a state of shock behind a hallway door until people started waking up. All of the next day she was in a stunned state, she said.

Later the same year, Lara was invited over to an acquaintance's house. "He was watching movies with his mom, he said," but she never saw the mother there. After unwelcome sexual advances and her vehement protesting, she was raped, she said. Once again, the rapist insisted on taking her home because it was dangerous out there and inquired if the incident would ruin their friendship.

He put his hand out and said, "Can we at least shake on it?"

Lara went home by herself. I was thinking I was crazy because this was the second time it had happened, and I'd never heard of it happening twice. I must have lived in a closet.

According to the most extensive study conducted on the subject — see the end of this article — the average rape victim is raped 2.02 times.

Harriet was raped twice when she was in her early teens in her hometown, first by her boyfriend, then by a friend of her boyfriend.

The first time, she and her boyfriend were in bed, getting ready for anal sex — which she had consented to because she did not want to lose her virginity before marriage. (She felt ashamed about having sex, she said, but was afraid she would lose him if she could not sexually satisfy him in some way.) When it started to hurt very badly, she yelled to him to stop several times, but he went on. When he took her home, she was physically and emotionally a wreck, she said.

The second time she was raped, Harriet said, she was so shocked and numb that she couldn't do anything but think, "Why, why are men continuing to do this to me?"

She had been sexually abused by a brother in his 20s when she was between the ages of 4 and 10.

Later, she said, both rapists told her "a man reaches a point where he can't stop."

Pandora was sexually assaulted by a brief acquaintance in her early teens and was later raped in her hometown by one of her best friends, also when she was in her early teens.

The friend invited her over to watch movies. She went because they were good friends and she had done that many times before, she said. When he started to make unwelcome sexual advances she said she wanted to go home, but the advances turned into a wrestling match which had her debating herself — was this a game he was playing and was she misinterpreting the whole thing? It ultimately ended in a violent rape.

He apologized and said he really loved her immediately afterwards, Pandora said.

I ran out of his house; I was spitting and gagging. I was totally confused, not knowing if what happened was supposed to be like that or not. I walked straight out to the corn fields and kept walking, and I didn't think I was going to stop.

These four women are examples of the 25 percent of college women that have experienced rape or sexual assault. This oft-cited statistic comes from a study conducted by Dr. Mary Koss and her team on 32 campuses between 1984-1987 for Ms. magazine, surveying 3,187 women and 2,972 men. A detailed account of the specifics can be found in "I Never Called It Rape," a 1988 report by Robin Warshaw of Ms. magazine, herself a victim of acquaintance rape.

Field Hockey heads into NCAA tourney action

The fifth-ranked Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference champion Iowa Hawkeyes will host Stanford in the first round of the NCAA tournament Thursday, Nov. 14 at Grant Field, the NCAA announced Monday. Game time is 2 p.m.

The game will be a rematch of last year's first round 7-2 Hawkeye victory, also in Iowa City. The Cardinal are 10-3 overall and champions of the NorPac Conference. Iowa is 16-1-1, and won its third straight MCFHC title last weekend, with a mark of 10-0.

The winner of the Iowa-Stanford matchup will travel to Maryland to face the No. 4 Terrapins Sunday, Nov. 17, for the right to go to the Final Four Nov. 23-24 at Villanova.

Saunders honored

IOWA CITY — Iowa's Mike Saunders, who tied a school record by scoring four touchdowns in a 38-21 victory over Indiana, has been named the Big Ten's offensive player of the week.

Saunders rushed for 115 yards in 28 carries and scored on runs of 14, 19 and 7 yards to help Iowa take sole possession of second place in the conference. He also caught a 1-yard touchdown pass from Jim Hartlieb.

Target cancels Magic ad

MINNEAPOLIS — A TV commercial featuring Magic Johnson probably won't be aired next month by the Target Stores discount chain because its lighthearted tone might appear insensitive, the company said Monday.

"The commercials... are very Magic — very lighthearted, frolicky and whimsical," said George Hite, the company's vice president of public and consumer affairs. "We looked at those spots and in light of the virus it might be insensitive to run these spots because the virus he has is not funny."

Shortly after the former Los Angeles Lakers star announced Thursday that he has the HIV virus that causes AIDS, the companies with which he has endorsement contracts said they would not cut ties with him because of his infection.

SAN DIEGO — Shortstop Tony Fernandez, who had the right to demand a trade, has told the San Diego Padres that he will return next season.

Book makes Jordan out as a tyrant

CHICAGO — A soon-to-be-published book describes Chicago Bulls superstar Michael Jordan as a sometime-tyrant whose actions caused conflict on the NBA world championship team, a published report said.

"The Jordan Rules," by Chicago Tribune sportswriter Sam Smith, will be published shortly by Simon and Schuster. The Chicago Sun-Times said in today's editions that it had obtained an advance copy. The book reportedly details the infighting the Bulls overcame to win the NBA title last season and is advertised as "an inside story of a turbulent season."

In one excerpt, the book reports that Jordan once warned teammates that they would be punished if they ever passed the ball to center Bill Cartwright in the final four minutes of a game, the Sun-Times reported. "If you do," Jordan is said to have told them, "you'll never get the ball from me."

The book also reports that Jordan slugged backup center Will Perdue during practice.

Bowl matchups take shape, sources report

Rick Warner

Associated Press

Notre Dame is headed to the Sugar Bowl, Penn State will play Tennessee in the Fiesta Bowl and Florida State will probably go to the Cotton Bowl if it loses to Miami, several bowl and school sources said Monday.

Although official announcements won't be made until Sunday, most major matchups apparently fell into place after Notre Dame's 35-34 loss to Tennessee on Saturday.

Sources said Notre Dame will play Florida in the Sugar Bowl even if the 12th-ranked Irish lose to No. 8 Penn State on Saturday. No. 5 Florida can clinch the outright Southeastern Conference title — and the automatic Sugar Bowl berth that goes with it — by beating Kentucky this week.

One source said the Sugar Bowl was even willing to take Notre Dame (8-2) with three losses because of its television drawing power and the fact that the Irish haven't been to New Orleans in 11 years. The Sugar got poor TV ratings on ABC last year when its Tennessee-Virginia telecast competed with the Colorado-Notre Dame title game on NBC.

Sources also said Penn State will meet No. 10 Tennessee in the Fiesta regardless of what they do this weekend. The Volunteers play Mississippi on Saturday.

After Notre Dame lost to Tennessee, it became clear that the winner of Saturday's game between No. 1 Florida State and No. 2 Miami would play the Big Eight champion — either No. 11 Nebraska or No. 16 Colorado — in the Orange Bowl.

What wasn't clear then was where the Florida State-Miami loser would go.

On Monday, however, sources said Florida State was leaning toward the Cotton Bowl if it loses to Miami. The other Cotton bid goes to the Southwest Conference champ, which will be Texas A&M if two of their last three games.

If Florida State beats Miami, sources said, the Hurricanes will end up in the Cotton or Blockbuster Bowl. Whichever of those bowls doesn't get Miami will probably invite No. 7 Alabama.

There has been speculation that the Cotton Bowl would shy away from Miami because of the Hurricane's heavily criticized behavior in last year's game against Texas. But sources said Monday that the Cotton might invite Miami again if the Hurricanes lose to Florida State.

Sources also said that No. 6 California appears to be headed to the Citrus Bowl for a meeting with the Atlantic Coast Conference champion, most likely No. 15 Clemson. The Cotton, Orange, Sugar, Fiesta and Citrus bowls are played on New Year's Day, while the Blockbuster is Dec. 28.

Basketball practice off to good start

Women seem optimistic about season

Steve J. Collins

Daily Iowan

The consensus among players at the Iowa women's basketball press day Monday was that practices are more enjoyable this year.

"It's fun this year," sophomore center Cathy Marx said. "Last year we always had to listen to the coaches tell us what we did wrong. This year we just play and occasionally they'll stop us if we do something wrong. The atmosphere is totally different."

The yelling was due in part to the seven freshmen on last year's team which finished 21-9 while qualifying for the NCAA tournament and finishing second in the conference.

Senior point guard LaTonya Tate said the team has matured and as a result things are running smoother.

"There's a lot less yelling in practice," she said. "It can be frustrating when things are choppy. There is a lot less of that this year."

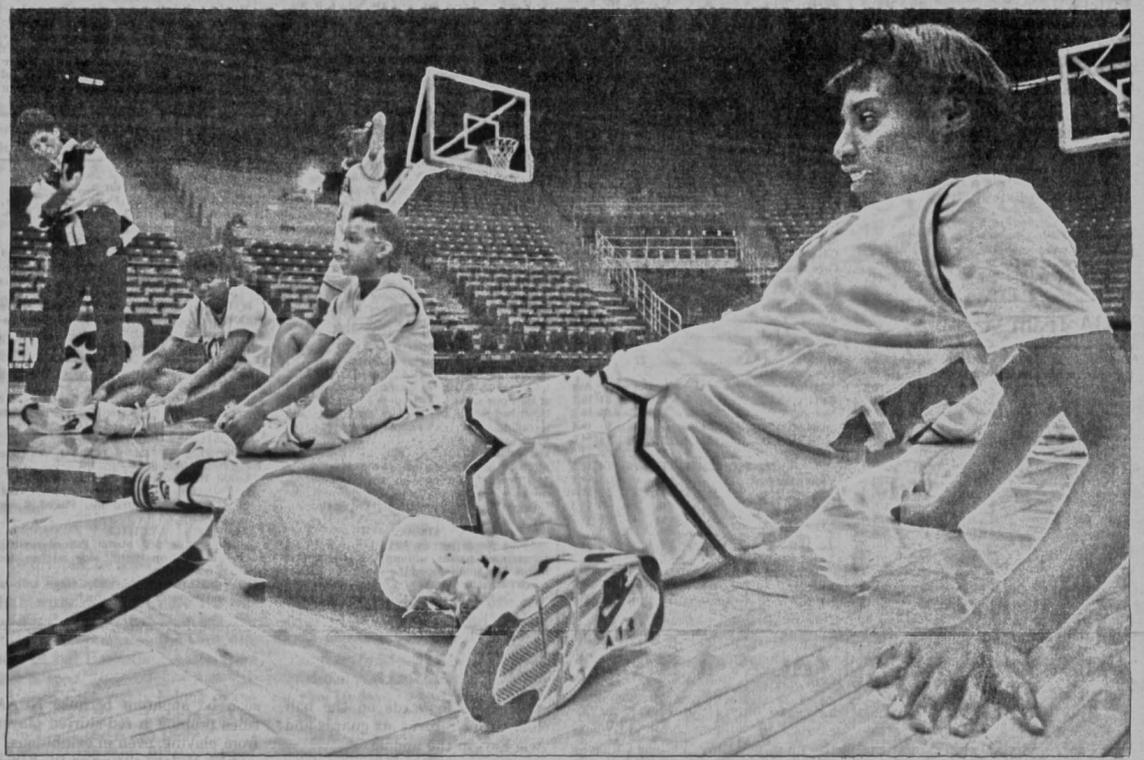

Coach C. Vivian Stringer agreed that more experienced players have made life easier.

"Everything is more of a review this year," Stringer said. "We've moved along quite a bit."

As morale has risen so have expectations, at least among the players. "We have no clue as to how good or bad we are," Stringer said.

As for the players, they think they can compete with the best.

"I feel like Iowa is ready to take on anyone they have in mind. We just have to shoot for the stars," Tate enjoyable than last year when there were seven freshmen on the squad. The Hawkeyes' season begins Nov. 27 against Iowa State.

said. "The biggest star in my eyes is the national championship."

Junior Molly Tideback said Iowa has the potential to be great and could prove it Dec. 28 against Vanderbilt at the Big Ten-SEC Challenge in Knoxville, Tenn.

"Beating them, and they're a good team, will show everybody what Iowa basketball is all about," she said.

To have a shot at the conference and national titles Iowa must not only beat the top teams but also avoid being upset by lesser teams.

Players said last year there was a tendency to look past certain teams that wound up beating the Hawkeyes.

"Last year we relied on tradition and what past teams had done," Marx said. "That's what got us in trouble."

Stringer has made it clear to her players that such behavior won't be tolerated.

"This year we're going to go out and play every team real hard no matter if they're not ranked or ranked No. 1," said Toni Foster.

Magic: More than just a sports hero

Magic

For 12 illustrious seasons as a Los Angeles Laker, the word 'Magic' has been used to describe the graceful talents of one of sports' greatest athletes.

But in the wake of last Thursday's announcement that jarred people of all ages nationwide, the name Magic transcended the superstar millions had come to love. Magic, now more than ever, epitomized a once-in-a-lifetime individual all too rare in the world of sport.

Shock waves rippled throughout Americana, as Earvin Johnson revealed he would retire from basketball due to his obtainment of the AIDS virus. But as is his trademark, Johnson flashed nothing but smiles as he told the public that although his playing days had come to an end, his life was far from over.

"Nothing has changed other than I've become the spokesman for this virus and that I've retired," Johnson said Friday night on The Arsenio Hall Show. "I'm still Earvin, happy-go-lucky, living life to the fullest. I'm going to carry on, brother."

In a sports world often marred with athletes griping about their $3 million salary or abusing their careers with drugs, Johnson has always been a breath of fresh air. This was evidenced even more in his handling of what undoubtedly is one of the toughest situations anyone can go through.

One doesn't have to be a Laker fan, or even a sports aficionado, to fully appreciate the courage Johnson has displayed during the past week. It becomes even more amazing upon witnessing the outpouring of emotion released by others.

For instance, NBA arenas around the country united in saluting this legend with either standing ovations, moments of silence or, as Johnson's Laker teammates chose, to ask the crowd to join in a prayer recognizing Earvin Johnson — the basketball great, friend, role model and above all, the human being.

"We just ask for more strength for him as he faces this challenge," Laker A.C. Green acknowledged in a prayer at mid-court prior to L.A.'s game at Phoenix Friday night, a game the Lakers wanted to cancel.

"This is probably the toughest thing I've had since my father passed away," lamented Johnson's long-time friend and rival on the court, Magic Johnson.

Davis: Redshirting is up to players

James Arnold

Daily Iowan

This season may be the first one in a long time that Iowa basketball fans aren't treated to some new faces.

After turning in a 21-11 season last year, the Hawkeyes return everybody and only Cedar Rapids native Russ Millard to the 15-man roster.

Millard's attempt to break into a solid core of players while also slowed by injuries during the preseason, he may have to make a tough choice and possibly red shirt.

Iowa coach Tom Davis said he will be any help he can with a player making this decision, and isn't sure, right now, what is best for the freshman.

"I'm mixed on it. If, all of a sudden he, day in and day out becomes our leading rebounder, he could probably help us," Davis said at his first press conference of the year. "I know he's going to be a real fine player so a lot of this will be in Russ's hands — whatever Russ decides he wants to do."

Millard averaged 21.6 points and 11.8 rebounds per game in high school at Washington, but the forward position for the Hawkeyes is filled with veterans Wade Lookingbill, Chris Street, Brig Tubbs, Jay Webb, James Winters and Rodell Davis. Davis said it would be very difficult for Millard to beat out those veterans, but added that he is capable.

"Not knowing the offenses and not knowing the defenses and he's all out of whack timing wise with missing as much practice as he missed, but rebounding is crucial," Davis said.

He has talked with Millard about red-shirting, but said it will ultimately be Millard's decision.

"I visited with him after practice yesterday," Davis said "I gave him some of the pros and cons and if it comes down to it and you want me to tell you, I'll give you a strong yes or no. "But if he wants to make the decision, I'll let him."

Davis said he doesn't know what to tell the 6-foot-8 freshman, but added that the situation changes after every practice and scrimmage.

MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL

Bears figure out problems against Vikes

Mike Nadel

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Chicago Bears overcame their offensive problems and, for the second successive week, overcame a challenge to their NFC Central supremacy.

Neal Anderson's 6-yard run and Jim Harbaugh's 7-yard pass to Anthony Morgan capped the Bears' opening two drives — the first time all season they've scored on two consecutive marches — and Chicago took control of the division Monday night with a 34-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

Anderson, who rushed for 91 yards, added a 24-yard touchdown run and Lemuel Stinson returned an interception 34 yards for a TD as the Bears scored more than 21 points for the first time this season. Chicago had five drives of at least 10 plays and didn't have to punt until 10 minutes remained.

Chicago (8-2), which beat Detroit last week, has won four straight to take a two-game lead over the Lions. The Bears are seeking their seventh NFC Central title in the last eight seasons.

The Vikings (5-6), the only team besides the Bears to win the Central crown since 1984, fell 3½ games back. Minnesota is 18-21 since winning the '89 title. The Vikings had won 23 of their previous 29 games — including three straight against Chicago — at the Metrodome.

As usual, Chicago's defense was tough, allowing 20 points or fewer for the ninth time in 10 games. Turnovers set up 10 of Minnesota's points. Chicago has won 86 of its last 88 games when holding opponents under 18 points, including all seven this season.

Kevin Butler added field goals of 50 and 41 yards for the Bears, who won a Monday night road game for only the third time in 17 tries.

After Minnesota went 80 yards on the game's first series, with Darrin Nelson's 6-yard touchdown run giving the Vikings their only lead, the Bears used Anderson's running and Harbaugh's short passing to take control.

Fuad Reveiz's 20-yard field goal and Butler's two kicks made it 20-10. Green fumbled another punt, with Minnesota's Pat Eilers recovering, to set up Rich Gannon's 29-yard scoring pass to Anthony Carter that cut the Vikings' deficit to 20-17 with 4:10 left in the third period.

Quiz Answer

This year marks the 10th straight year the Iowa field hockey team has made a NCAA postseason appearance. The Hawkeyes boast a 16-10 record in NCAA postseason play and have advanced to five straight NCAA final four championships. Iowa placed second in the country in 1988, third in 1990, fourth in 1987 and 1989 and won the school's only NCAA championship for women in 1986.

NFL Today

STARS
 Mark Rypien, Washington — Completed 16 of 37 passes for 442 yards and six touchdowns in a 36-17 victory over Atlanta. The average yards per completion of 27.43 shattered the NFL record of 27.83 set by Sammy Baugh, another Redskins quarterback, in 1948. Rypien was just 4 yards short of Baugh's team record for yardage in a game.

Warren Moon, Houston — Completed 41 of 56 passes for 102 yards and eight touchdowns in the game-winning drive to a field goal in overtime as the Oilers beat Dallas 26-23.

Jim McMahon, Philadelphia — Completed 26 of 43 passes for 341 yards and three touchdowns and brought the Eagles back from a 23-0 deficit to a 32-30 victory over Cleveland.

SIDELINED
 Harold Green, the Bengals' top running back, severely sprained his right knee in the first half and didn't return. Philadelphia's Ben Smith, who snapped Bernie Kosar's streak without an interception, twisted his knee while trying to cover Webster Slaughter on a 17-yard completion late in the second quarter and had to be carted off the field. Washington's Russ Grimm limped off the field with an injured ankle and Ernest Byner sprained a knee. Seattle receiver Tommy Kane sustained a concussion when he was hit by San Diego's Junior Seau after a 49-yard completion in the second quarter. The Jets lost receiver Rob Moore with a bruised thigh and knee, and defensive lineman Paul Fraze with a fractured right thumb.

SACKED
 Denver rookie linebacker Mike Croel, the AFC sack leader, had one sack Sunday to increase his total to nine. It was his sixth straight game with at least one sack. Pittsburgh linebacker Greg Lloyd had two of the Steelers' three sacks and forced Key Woods' fumble that set up the game-winning touchdown. Washington sacked Atlanta quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver six times. Dave Krieg, who led Seattle from a 14-0 deficit into a tie with two fourth-quarter drives, was sacked on consecutive downs by the Chargers' Donnie Elder and Anthony Shelton.

STREAKS
 Bernie Kosar set an NFL record with 308 consecutive passes without an interception before Ben Smith ended the streak. Raiders coach Art Shell is 5-0 against Denver after Sunday's 17-16 victory. The Redskins, who have allowed an NFL-low four quarterback sacks this season, registered their fifth consecutive game without allowing a sack.

STUMBLING
 Dallas running back Emmitt Smith's fumble in overtime that led to Houston's 26-23 victory was his first in 245 rushing and receiving possessions. Smith's last fumble came on Dec. 16, 1990 against the Phoenix Cardinals. Quarterback Erik Kramer turned the ball over four times in Detroit's loss to Tampa Bay. Robert Delapino fumbled twice in the Rams' 27-20 loss to Kansas City. The second was scooped up by Derrick Thomas and returned for the game-winning touchdown with 2:25 left.

DAVIS: Millard faces a tough decision

 "He had eight rebounds in Saturday's scrimmage and that's the best he's done on the boards," Davis said.

The team's depth is not only a problem for the new player, Davis said. With all the talent returning, the Iowa coach will have to shuffle a lot of bodies during the season.

"It's not something I would plan for — to play 10 or eleven guys," Davis said. "One of the negatives is the more you play the less cohesive your unit gets."

"That's the danger that you never get good enough in your half court game, because you have too many combinations you are working with."

Not only does Davis have seven experienced forwards on the ball club, but he returns six guards and Acie Earl in the middle.

"I think we'll have more depth than most teams, the quality is going to be the question," Davis said. "How many quality players do we have."

If there is a red shirt in the future for any of the Hawkeyes, it will soon be apparent because NCAA rules prohibit a red-shirted player from playing, even in exhibitions.

With Millard sitting on the bench or not, Davis will still have a load of players to play. If they show the quality he expects, it could be a good year for Iowa basketball.

"If we can stay healthy and then keep improving our cohesiveness ... this could be a real good team."

 ($4.2 million per team), followed by the Sugar ($3.6 million), Cotton ($3.1 million), Fiesta ($2 million), Blockbuster ($1.8 million) and Citrus ($1.35 million). However, the Blockbuster may increase its payout to $3 million per team to get a more attractive pairing.

Bowl and school officials wouldn't allow their names to be used because agreements aren't supposed to be made before 3 p.m. EST Sunday. Bowls that violate the rule are subject to a $250,000 fine by the Football Bowl Association.

The new penalty is designed to discourage early bowl commitments, but it apparently isn't working because the sanctions don't apply to schools.

"The institutions are calling the bowls for commitments and the bowl guys are jumping the gun just like they did last year," said Jim Brock, executive vice president of the Cotton Bowl.

MAGIC: Situation touches everyone court, Larry Bird.

Even President George Bush expressed the general consensus, when he took time out from business in Rome to say, "He's a hero to me, too."

Johnson has always been strong on the basketball court, as his five NBA championships and status as the league's all-time assist king attest. Unfortunately, it took the development of a traumatic circumstance for the rest of the world to behold the true power of Johnson's character — a strength in heart and soul.

Nevertheless, even in such trying times, Johnson neglected to do something that many athletes have been prone to do — forget his obligation as a role model. By becoming a spokesman for AIDS, Johnson is not only reaching out to the youth of America, but society in general, demonstrating once again why he is often referred to as a "class act."

"I came on to let people know what time it is," Johnson said on Hall's show. "Please get your thinking caps on and put that cap on down there, and everything will be alright."

Luckily, others have followed suit. "As a friend and a player in the league, I feel obligated to speak out about AIDS) just as much as he does," Michael Jordan said. Furthermore, Rex Chapman of the Charlotte Hornets, and his wife, have decided to donate $50,000 to AIDS research in Johnson's name.

All in all, Johnson will be remembered as perhaps the greatest point guard to ever grasp a basketball. But his personality has grabbed all of us, as well.

"Michael (Jordan) told me, 'Man, you just messed up the Olympics,'" Johnson laughed, adding that "without a doubt" he would still accompany the team to Barcelona.

"But I told Michael, 'Look. This don't mean nothing. I'm still going to beat you in one-on-one," drawing rounds of laughter from Hall's studio audience. "I told Isaiah (Thomas), 'We're still hanging,' and I told Larry I'll still beat him in checkers in five or 10 years."

"If I die tomorrow, I've lived the greatest life," Johnson added.

Earvin Johnson has always been a winner. And with an attitude and sense of humor such as this, it's "without a doubt" that he will continue to be nothing but.

"We've all got to have thick skin," he said. "People can't get me down. I know who I am and I know what I'm about."

We know, too.

Hawks fall to Illinois, Purdue over weekend

David Taylor
 Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team suffered another pair of conference setbacks this past weekend against Illinois and Purdue.

The Hawkeyes started out well on Friday, staying with the 20th-ranked Fighting Illini for a time, but ended up losing 3-0 (15-7, 15-4, 15-2).

"We played well at the beginning of the match, but they picked up a level after the first game and we stayed where we were," said Iowa sophomore Erin Weaver. "We weren't passing well and we made some blocking errors that hurt us."

The hitting of Illinois' Lorna Henderson was a big part of the problem for Iowa. Henderson continually frustrated the Iowa squad with her hard hitting and disrupted the flow of the Hawkeye offense.

"She was dominating against us," said Weaver. "We couldn't stop her."

Sophomore Courtney Gillis led Iowa with a .333 hitting percentage along with five kills.

Iowa travelled to Purdue on Saturday where they hoped to avenge an earlier home loss to the Boilermakers. However, Purdue was not a willing accomplice and smacked Iowa 3-0 (15-5, 17-15, 15-3).

"We played OK, but after the second game we just kind of lost it," said Weaver. "Our passing was off again and we had some trouble putting the ball down on offense.

"We played well together in the second game and caught up, and then we started strong in the third game, but we didn't hold it."

Weaver had 11 kills against Purdue, while junior Michelle Haywood added nine kills and three aces.

The losses dropped Iowa to 6-22 overall and 1-13 in the Big Ten. Iowa has not won a conference game since defeating Michigan State in September.

"I think if we can work on improving our offense, we might do better because our defense is already there and it is improving every day," said Weaver.

Iowa faces Minnesota at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow night in Minneapolis.

Morris, Nixon become free agents

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — World Series MVP Jack Morris and suspended Atlanta outfielder Otis Nixon were among the five players who filed for free agency Monday to raise the total to a record 97.

Meanwhile, the Pittsburgh Pirates made a late $18.5 million, four-year offer to outfielder Bobby Bonilla, who filed for free agency on the first possible day. The offer was rejected Friday by Bonilla's agent, Dennis Gilbert, and other teams can start making offers Tuesday.

"Starting Tuesday, I will contact all the teams that have contacted us," Gilbert said. "I will start making appointments with them and see what they have to say."

Pirates general manager Larry Doughty declined to comment Monday on the offer or confirm that it had been made. Bonilla has said he was "99.9 percent" certain he would leave Pittsburgh.

The total of free agents broke the previous record of 96, set last year. Others filing Monday were Minnesota second baseman Al Newman, Twins catcher Junior Ortiz and California outfielder Max Venable.

Seven more players were eligible to file by the midnight deadline, including Twins third baseman Mike Pagliarulo, Los Angeles catcher Gary Carter and Houston pitcher Mike Scott.

Morris had a 1992 option for $3.65 million but one day after pitching 10 shutout innings against Atlanta in Game 7 of the World Series, he decided not to exercise it. Twins general manager Andy MacPhail has said he hoped to re-sign Morris, who is looking to raise his salary to the $5 million-a-year range.

"I'm not optimistic at the moment," Morris' agent, Richard Moss, said Monday. "I had several conversations with Andy and the one thing we agreed on was that if anyone deserves to be at or near the top of salary structure, it's Jack Morris. What I take this all to mean is they just haven't decided whether to pay the money, that's all."

MacPhail was in Florida and could not be contacted Monday. The top-paid pitcher is Roger Clemens of Boston, who averages $5.38 million beginning next season. Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets is second at $5.15 million.

"I expect to talk to a number of clubs," Moss said, "and Jack is prepared to move if that's what happens."

Meanwhile, clubs began to get ready for the market's opening bell. The top pitcher available, left-hander Frank Viola, rejected a $13 million, three-year offer from the Mets during the season. He then slumped to 13-15 with a 3.97 ERA.

"Last week I faxed the doctor's report to all the major league teams other than the Mets because I was hearing all sorts of rumors about his elbow," said Viola's agent, Craig Fenech. "That's about all I'm going to say. I'm going to try to hold to a policy that I'm not going to discuss which teams are interested and which teams have made offers, or else I'll set the North American record for interviews in one year."

Other top stars available include outfielder Danny Tartabull, first baseman Wally Joyner and reliever Mitch Williams.

Jack Morris celebrates after his Twins won the World Series. The Series MVP became a free agent Monday.

KNICKS

Anderson Hunt headed into (pr)oblivion

Hal Bock
Associated Press

The next basketball stop for Anderson Hunt probably will be Europe, a haven for expatriate American players.

La Crosse, Wis., a stopover for players one step away from the NBA, might be an option. Maybe Louisville, which might be two steps away.

The one place Hunt won't be is the one place he probably ought to be in the backcourt at UNLV. There's plenty of room for him there, but it's the one place he can't play.

He'd be a senior now, the floor general, the guy who had been to two straight NCAA championship games. He'd be the one around whom Jerry Tarkanian could begin reconstruction of the Runnin' Rebs.

Instead, he is in limbo, undrafted, cut from two NBA training camps, a man without a team and running out of choices and chances. He got caught in basketball's revolving door, betwixt and between.

Hunt's preference was the NBA. With a year of college eligibility remaining, he declared for the draft and waited around while the pros grabbed teammates Larry Johnson, Stacey Augmon, Greg Anthony and George Ackles and left him behind.

"Too small," said Dick McGuire, chief scout of the New York Knicks, who drafted Anthony.

At 6-foot-2, Hunt is point guard size. But at UNLV, he played the off guard because Tarkanian had Anthony for the point. Without point guard experience, Hunt was not going to be drafted. Certainly not for the off guard at 6-foot-2.

So why declare? Why not stay at UNLV, play a year at the point and learn the position? That's what Tarkanian wanted to know, adding that the person responsible for Hunt leaving early "ought to be shot."

Agent Leigh Steinberg, who represented Anthony, said when he's asked advice by undergraduates thinking about turning pro early, "I tell them the burden of proof is to stay in school."

"They have to make the best projection possible, where they're likely to go in the draft, what it means financially and compare that with next year," Steinberg said. "Information is the key and there will always be some part of it that can't be projected like injuries."

Hunt's agent, Bob Woolf, pleaded innocent.

"He came to me after he decided to leave school," Woolf said. "He said he had discussed it with his brother and mother and thought it was best for him."

Tarkanian did not agree.

"He needed to play point guard here," the coach said. "If he was here, he'd be an All-American. He'd be one of the top three guards in college and we'd be a Top Ten team."

Some people speculated Hunt had sensible reasons for leaving. With NCAA investigators once again likely to be around the UNLV campus this winter, asking questions — aren't they always? — and the Runnin' Rebs already disqualified from the tournament as part of last year's Tarkanian settlement, Hunt saw little reason to stick around.

And there was always the matter of money.

Undrafted, he tried the free agent route, first with Washington and then with Boston, where he was among the final cuts. That left him with three options — the CBA, the new Global Basketball Association and Europe.

Hunt's CBA rights belong to the La Crosse, Wis., Catbirds. Flip Saunders is the coach there.

"We drafted him in the second round and I thought he was a steal for us," Saunders said. "He shoots well. He's a bigtime shooter. But he's more of a No. 1 guard than a No. 2. At his size, 6-1, 6-2, he's got to play the point."

And at the moment, the Catbirds have David Rivers doing that with Byron Irvin and Kenny Battle behind him. Two's company, three's a crowd and four you can forget.

"He got caught up in the numbers," Saunders said. "There are a lot of good players out there. Kids don't realize it."

So if La Crosse isn't buying, perhaps the new Global Basketball Association, which throws the ball up for the first time next Monday, would be interested. The Louisville Shooters own Hunt's CBA rights.

"We've had some dialogue," said Jim Tilton, general manager of the team. "But we've got Milt Wagner and Joey Wright. We've got Jerome Harmon and Alfredrick Hughes and we're working on Steve Alford."

And Anderson Hunt?

"His importance to us is not what it was 10 days ago," Tilton said.

So where does that leave Hunt?

"He'll probably go to Europe," Woolf said. "For money reasons."

PATRIOTS

Kiam liked it so much, he bought it, but may lose it

Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — Victor Kiam's future as owner of the New England Patriots remained unclear Monday as he faced a Tuesday deadline for paying his minority partner $38 million or possibly losing the team.

Neither Kiam, nor Fran Murray, who owns 49 percent of the NFL club, commented Monday. Their lawyers, believed to be trying to work out an agreement, did not return phone calls.

Spokesmen for Robert Popeo, Murray's attorney, and Earle Cooley, Kiam's attorney, said the lawyers were tied up in a meeting all afternoon.

There was a possibility Murray would agree to extend the deadline until the Patriots season ends, while the NFL, which took control of the franchise last month, remained in charge.

"I'm sure something is going to be worked out," Murray had said Sunday night. "I don't know what's going to happen and I've been told not to comment on the situation. I just wouldn't bet on or against anything or anybody at this point."

If no agreement could be reached, there were indications Murray planned to go to court Tuesday.

The ownership agreement under which they bought the Patriots in October 1988 stipulated that after three years, Murray could demand that Kiam buy out Murray's share of the team. The amount is $38 million.

If Kiam didn't meet the deadline, the contract reportedly provided for Murray to take control of the team. He is involved in an effort to get an expansion franchise in St. Louis and has said he would sell the Patriots if he gained control.

Murray claimed the buyout deadline was Oct. 10. Kiam said that was the date by which he had to announce his intentions and then had 30 more days to come up with the money.

On Oct. 14, Kiam signed an agreement that put the NFL in control of the team for 30 days. That agreement also required Kiam to pay bank interest on the $38 million Murray had borrowed.

Murray said at the time that the search for a new owner would begin immediately, giving him a head start in case Kiam could not come up with the money.

POM PON and CHEERLEADING WORKSHOPS

The University of Iowa Cheerleading and Pom Pon squads will be holding workshops for interested students, whether you're thinking about trying out this spring, or if you just want to know more about the programs. These workshops should be a lot of fun as well as educational. We will be demonstrating and teaching partner stunts, tumbling, and jumping in the cheerleading workshop, and dance techniques at the Pom workshop. If you're a Hawkeye fan, stop by and give it a try.

NFL

End it now and start the playoffs

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Maybe it wasn't a very good idea to add two more teams to the playoffs.

With mediocrity as entrenched as it is this year, why don't we just end the 1991 NFL season now and let Washington, Houston, New Orleans and Buffalo play for the title?

The standings tell the story. Going into Monday night's Chicago-Minnesota game, there were five teams in each conference over .500 and one of them, Detroit (6-4) has lost quarterback Rodney Peete for the season and is 0-4 outdoors, where it has been outscored 130-34.

The Redskins, Oilers, Saints and Bills have all but sewed up their divisions, leaving, as the main suspense for the rest of 1991:

—Can Washington (10-0) become just the second team ever to finish unbeaten?

—Who will win the AFC West, where the Broncos (7-3), Chiefs (7-3) and Raiders (6-4) seem headed for a blanket finish?

—Which of the mediocrities at 5-5 or 4-6 will finish strong and qualify for the watered-down playoffs?

The 5-5s include the Jets, who managed to lose to the previously winless Colts Sunday, giving up as many touchdowns (four) as Indianapolis had managed to score in its first nine games; the ho-hum defending champion Giants; and Atlanta, which gave up a record six touchdown passes to Mark Rypien Sunday and has allowed 46 more points than it has scored.

Taking it by conference:
AFC
Pencil in the Bills (9-1), Oilers (8-2) and probably three West teams — the Chiefs, Broncos and Raiders — for the playoffs. Next next week's Denver at Kansas City game may determine the division title — the Broncos have a woefully easy schedule after that.

The sixth? Take your pick among the Dolphins, Jets and Seahawks (all 5-5). The schedule was supposed to favor the Jets. But then they weren't supposed to lose to the Colts, either.

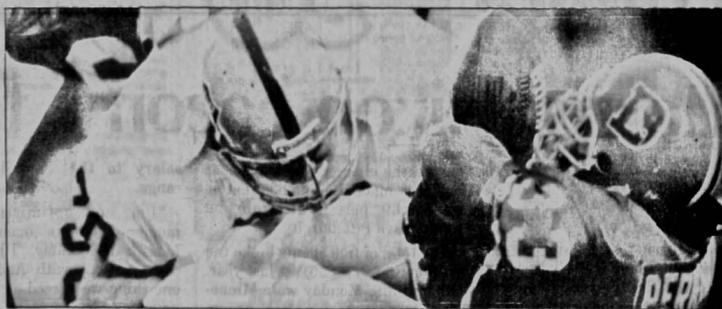

One thing to keep in mind. Buffalo's schedule is so easy that despite its leaky defense, it's likely to get the home-field advantage throughout the playoffs. Miami may have a shot at the Bills next Monday night in Miami, and also the Raiders at the Coliseum Dec. 8.

But they're likely to be playing in Rich Stadium in January. That means a grind-it-out team like Kansas City (which beat Buffalo 33-6 in Arrowhead) probably has a better shot at keeping them from the Super Bowl than run-and-shoot Houston, for example.

NFC
Can anyone beat Washington? New Orleans (9-1) has plenty of defense, but not much offense, and Chicago (7-2 going into Monday night) isn't quite on that level.

The next two in line, Dallas and Detroit (each 6-4), are still building, and the Cowboys must face the Giants and Redskins on the road the next two weeks. The other contenders are Philadelphia, New York and Atlanta (5-5); Minnesota (5-5 going into Monday night's game), and even San Francisco (4-6).

Denver Broncos running back Robert Perryman fumbles the football as he is hit by Los Angeles Raiders Scott Davis in Sunday action. L.A. beat Denver to tighten up the AFC West race.

JOHNSON

Should there be only one Magic?

Jeff Holyfield
Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Jud Heathcote, who coached Magic Johnson at Michigan State, asked journalists on Monday not to use the nickname of "Magic" for Michigan's star wide receiver, Desmond Howard.

"Maybe this is personal and maybe it's a negative to the media, and maybe I'm selfish in this matter, but I say there's only one Magic Johnson. As far as I'm concerned, in the state of Michigan, there should be only one Magic, period," he said.

Heathcote, who coached Johnson and the Spartan basketball team to the national title in 1979, said he resented hearing and seeing the nickname used for Howard.

"If you want a nickname for Desmond, give him Mr. Touchdown, or Mes because he mesmerizes the opposition or 'Our Hero' or anything you want, but please, if you guys would cooperate, don't refer to him as Magic. I got that off my chest."

The request from Heathcote came four days after Johnson announced he was retiring from the Los Angeles Lakers because he'd been infected with the virus that leads to AIDS.

Heathcote apologized to some of the journalists at the weekly coaches briefing for not talking to them after Johnson's announcement Thursday. "Emotionally, I wasn't up to talking to anybody," he said.

"I would like to say if anyone can turn a negative into a positive it will be Earvin Johnson, because that is what he's done his entire career," Heathcote said.

"He's the hardest-working player I ever coached. Earvin has never been satisfied with his game and always worked as hard or harder than anyone in the off-season. He will work hard at this."

Heathcote said the announcement by Johnson shook his team, because the Lansing native regularly visited the Spartan players.

"He needs our support. They've all played with him. They've all talked with him. They all remember that," he said.

George Perles, Michigan State's athletic director and football coach, said the use of the nickname for Michigan's Howard wasn't his call.

Perles added that he'd like to see professional and college athletes in Michigan lead a nationwide effort to raise money to fight AIDS. "I'll do anything. I'm available any time, any place, anywhere, any day," for fund-raising events, he said.

Associated Press

Which one is the real Magic? Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said only Earvin Johnson (not Desmond Howard) should use the nickname.

Bruce Madej, the sports information director at Michigan, said Howard got the nickname in the fifth grade and some journalists had picked up that. He said the school referred to him as Desmond Howard in its releases, but Howard liked the nickname and his friends used it.

"Nicknames are nicknames and nicknames go all around," he said. "I think for Desmond, he thinks Earvin Johnson is a fantastic athlete and he's always been one of his idols. I think it's a tribute to Magic Johnson as much as anything that people do use his nickname.

"I'm sure some people even named their kids Jud because they appreciate what Jud has done out there."

"I know it's got to be an emotional time for everybody concerning Earvin's situation, but I think it's more of a tribute to Johnson that somebody of Desmond's talents has been known as Magic."

Howard, who was 8 years old when the Johnson-led Spartans won the NCAA title, said simply that "there was a sense of pride when I was nicknamed Magic in the fifth grade and today I'm proud that the nickname has stayed with me."

NBA

Threatt not trying to be Magic for L.A.

John Nadel
Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Now playing point guard for the Los Angeles Lakers: Sedale Threatt.

A smaller version of Magic Johnson? "No, no way," Threatt said. "I'm just going to go out and try to distribute the ball, play the way Magic would on the fast break."

Little did Threatt know on Oct. 2 when he went from Seattle to L.A. for three future second-round draft choices that he'd be the team's starting point guard, what with Magic around.

But that's the case since Johnson announced last Thursday he was retiring after testing positive for the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

Like most of his teammates, Threatt didn't do very well Friday night at Phoenix in his first game since Johnson's retirement.

Besides being only 6-foot-2 to Magic's 6-9, Threatt had a very un-Magic like performance — 3 points, 2 assists and 2 rebounds in a 113-85 loss.

But Sunday night against Minnesota,

Threatt was much better — 27 points, 14 assists and two rebounds in a 96-86 win.

"The game at Phoenix, we were all real down, so I came out tonight and really wanted to turn it up," Threatt said afterward. "They were setting some good picks on the side and I got my shot. I had four turnovers, though. I'm going to have to work on that."

At age 30, Threatt said he's not under pressure despite the circumstances. "If I would have been a rookie in this situation, there would be a lot of pressure," he said. "I'm an old veteran in this league. I know what goes on around here. I'm just going out and trying to win."

Threatt was a sixth-round draft choice of the Philadelphia 76ers in 1983 after playing at West Virginia Tech. He played more than three seasons with the 76ers before being traded to Chicago, where he played briefly before moving to Seattle.

Before this season, he averaged 8.6 points and a little less than three assists in 544 regular-season games. In five games with the Lakers, he's averaging 17.6 points, 7.6 assists and 5.0 rebounds.

Threatt came to the Lakers tabbed as a backup to Johnson who would also play some at shooting guard.

He had no qualms about his role. "That's the only reason I came here, playing with Magic, no question about it," Threatt said. "He said with me and another guy, we could win it all. It was real positive talking to him."

"It's devastating, really, I just wanted to be a part of all this."

Now, he'll be a big part, much bigger than he imagined.

If Threatt can never be Magic Johnson, he has something in common with the rest of the league's players. Neither will they.

"Earvin was such a big part of everything we did — he had the ball, we posted him up, a lot of what we did defensively was based on his size and his ability," coach Mike Dunleavy said. "We're going to have to do a lot of things differently." Like starting Sedale Threatt. "He's already done a good job," Dunleavy said. "He's going to do a better job for us."

Crowd-pleasing fare at '91 gala

"Nine-Person Precision Ball Passing" was a big hit with the Hancher audience.

Judging from the applause and bravos bursting from the audience at the final company curtain call Friday night, the 1991 UI Dance Gala was a rousing success. After a moment of silence for the Nov. 1 shooting victims and a tribute to former UI President Willard Boyd, the two-hour-and-15-minute program took the Hancher Auditorium audience through the junkyard and all the way to Taiwan in well-crafted reconstructions and inventive new choreography.

The crowd-pleaser of the night was the dance-game "Nine-Person Precision Ball Passing" by guest choreographer Charles Moulton. Set to what one audience member termed "possibly the most annoying music in the world," nine dancers, in three tiers of three, handed off yellow Nerf softballs in rapid-fire patterns. The piece had an industrial but fun look to it, with the passers dressed in black and blue-gray and wearing bands with spare balls at their waists. There were a few fumbles Friday night, but the recoveries were quick and imperceptible. The audience got caught up in the challenge of the endeavor, applauding particularly difficult kaleidoscopic configurations.

Another of the best-received pieces of the evening was "White Trash," visiting faculty member Alan Sener's look at the seamier side of life and relationships. The two love-hate relationships, with their athletic violence, gravitated around an obnoxious orange easy chair amid broken junk. In this piece full of fury, humor and pathos, the audience could at once laugh at, look down on and identify with the warring couples, who used a baseball bat, a six-pack, the channel changer and other weapons against each other. The dancers displayed strong acting and near-acrobatics, flinging themselves and each other around the stage as Led Zeppelin and Jimmy Page got down-and-dirty.

UI alumni and visiting artists Kim Marsh and Er-dong Hu performed the classical grand pas de deux from "Don Quixote" with surprisingly shaky partnering but Spanish vivacity. They were followed by dance department Chairwoman Alicia Brown's "In Memory Of ...," a sweeping, questioning work. The dancers in faculty member Linda Crist's reconstruction of the Taiwanese "Bamboo Grove" made skillful use of their bamboo pole props, creating exciting visual and rhythmic effects with them.

UI faculty member Beth Corning's pensive and reflective "Before the Fall" immediately followed the intermission; fellow faculty members Brown and Françoise Martinet made graceful returns to the stage after 6- and 26-year absences, respectively. David Berkey, another faculty member, explored gravity in all its senses in "Personal Gravity," marked by sweeping, lifting, falling movement and enormous feather pillows.

The evening concluded with the Second Campaign of the all-American "Stars and Stripes" by 20th-century choreographic genius George Balanchine. This is the first time a college dance company has been granted permission to perform a Balanchine piece, and it was executed with a lot of energy and a fair amount of precision — an exciting end to the program.

In his pre-performance remarks, Boyd referred to the dancer as "a metaphor for the totality of life." Dedicated to the university's shooting victims, the '91 gala was an affirmation of life, life in all its squalor and splendor.

THEATER

Raunchy Bosch blend at new 'Midsummer'

Robert Fuhrmann
Daily Iowan

The Acting Company will return to the UI's Hancher Auditorium to present a radical new vision of Shakespeare's magical comedy "A Midsummer Night's Dream" tonight and Wednesday night at 8.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" is among the most popular of Shakespeare's comedies. In it Shakespeare demonstrates the extent to which "the course of love never did run smooth." The play deals bewitchingly with the subjects of love and marriage.

Puck, emissary to Oberon, the fairy king who is having difficulty with his fairy queen Titania, uses a magical love potion to entangle four lovers in a web of spells and midsummer enchantment. Concurrently, in the wood, a group of rustic tradesmen are rehearsing a play which is to be performed at the wedding ceremony of Theseus, the Duke of Athens. In the ensuing havoc, the weaver Nick Bottom is turned into an ass by the meddling Puck and an unsuspecting Titania is drugged and subsequently falls in love with the deformed weaver. After much confusion, all ends happily, as each character is reu-nited with his or her own true love and a joyous wedding feast results.

In The Acting Company's new production, Director Joe Dowling has set the play in an imaginative environment inspired by the 15th-century Flemish painter Hieronymus Bosch. Dowling says, "The mixture of passion and cruelty evident in Bosch's paintings seemed to be the ideal starting place for a forest of the imagination. It is a night world where mortals and fairies meet with mischievous consequences."

Live music, in a variety of styles ranging from country-western to Motown, play an integral part in an adaptation that is about discovery and exploration — of suppressed desires, of dark emotions and of love.

Dowling adds, "The aim of this production is to present the humor, imagination and eroticism of the play in a way which is both contemporary and timeless. Shakespeare cannot be divorced from his poetic language and his imaginative imagery, but he is also a writer who speaks directly to our modern imagination. This play, with its mixture of sex, violence and the supernatural, is as modern as any Hollywood screenplay."

Oberon and Titania cavort in the Acting Company's production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Historically, the play is considered Shakespeare's closest approach to the "masque," a popular form of entertainment in Elizabethan England. But although the blithe spirit of the play parallels that of a masque, Shakespeare transcended convention and fashioned a poetic drama rather than a mere spectacle. Magic, enchantment and confusion enhanced the fairies' devilry, and the whimsical, irresponsible aspects of love are explored throughout the play.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" was written for and performed by Shakespeare's company and was revived after the Restoration of Charles II.

Those were wonderful days, and I was a fun-loving, goofy kid, getting into all sorts of wacky adventures. Not only that, but I was a pretty bright child — the pride of my parents and my teachers.

So why does my childhood now, at age 25, feel so empty, so meaningless?

Because, unlike certain insufferable child actors, no one paid me 5 million dollars just to be a kid! Where the hell was I when this deal came around! Should I blame my parents — why weren't they out there keeping their eyes peeled for the big bucks? I think this fully constitutes child abuse under the new Sinéad Laws: Everything a parent does that makes their child unhappy or denies them happiness is child abuse (i.e., making them do the dishes, carry out the trash), and therefore the cause of all the world's problems is child abuse (i.e., war, poverty, the ozone layer deterioration). So, by that reasoning, I feel I deserve $5 million — paid out by Sinéad O'Connor. Right?

The column now stands at a very important crossroads — do we go on to bash Sinéad for her utterly inane and self-righteous remarks? Or would that be like bashing the rain for falling? Or do we hightail it in the other direction and lay a few whacks on Macaulay Culkin and his prepubescent millionaire ilk? Oh, the agony of indecision!

Let's start with Our Lady of Perpetual Stubble. Sinéad, at the precocious age of 23, has entered that elite pantheon of celebrities, right up there with Cher and Zsa Zsa, who merit the attention of national magazines without actually doing anything. I'm speaking, of course, of last month's Spin cover story on the continuing trials and tribulations of being talented, rich and bald in today's world.

The entire issue was another of those tedious "Guest Editor" things, though at least Jack Healy of Amnesty International had the good taste not to put his own photo on the cover. However, the contents more than carried off the annoyance quotient with constant, strained attempts to link political torture with rock 'n' roll — though one can imagine South American dictators duct-taping earphones to prisoners and putting the latest David Lee Roth solo CD on perpetual repeat.

But back to Sluggo. In her interview with Bob "Axel Rose is gonna kick my bitchy, little ass" Guccione Jr., Sinéad whines ad nauseum about how it's hard to be a saint in any city that plays the national anthem before concerts, and various and sundry other superstar ailments. Which is fine and dandy — after all, what fun are rock celeb interviews if the subject doesn't bitch and moan in direct proportion to how many records he/she sold last year?

But the really galling, and eventually frightening, thing about Uncle Fester's mouth is that unlike most self-absorbed celebs, she comes across as firmly believing she has the solutions not just to her problems, but the world's. She's no longer speculating about all our collective sins; she's out to redeem them. She knows.

The same tone came across in the recent Village Voice interview with Chuck D. Suddenly we weren't listening to a musician-performer talk about his craft but to a political spokesman and ideologue expound on his theories about race, homosexuality and the economy. The problem with such claptrap is that it's just that. Neither Chuck nor Sinéad are deep thinkers; they're artists and very good ones.

But when they go sailing off into the Land of Make-It-So, powered only by belief in their own hype, they immediately reveal themselves to be utter idiots — tied and trapped by narrow propagandic visions, spewing forth inane arguments, grounded in half-baked scholarship.

And we're supposed to believe it because they make great records — they're right because they're famous. I guess I'm just bitter because, quite frankly, I wanted to believe that Chuck D. and Sinéad O'Connor might actually have something resembling brains on their respective shoulders, and it annoys me to have my illusions shattered. But then again, I'm the guy who hero-worshipped David Bowie through high school and beyond, only to see him reduced to guest starring on bad HBO series and fronting a lousy left-over punk band.

Damn, we never got to Macaulay Culkin! I know I've been promising a column on the little spud since last November, but it keeps getting preempted by things like wars and stuff. OK, truth is I just can't grasp the enormity of the concept that is Mac. But I'm working on it! Next week — fer shur!
