Sigma Chi given 72-hour eviction notice

Members of the Sigma Chi fraternity have been given 72 hours notice to move out of their house at 703 N. Dubuque St. because of extensive damage caused to the building.

The UI's Sigma Chi charter was suspended indefinitely Nov. 8 by the national governing body due to probation violations.

Members of the fraternity who were living in the house at that time were told they could stay until the end of the fall semester, but the recent damage to the house violated the conditions under which the members were allowed to stay.

Some members of the fraternity have contacted attorneys about the notice to vacate the house.

William Barr confirmed as attorney general

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Wednesday confirmed William Barr as attorney general with lawmakers of both parties praising him for candor and saying he would bring greater professionalism to the Justice Department.

The 41-year-old staunch conservative's nomination sailed through the Senate on a voice vote after 30 minutes of debate.

Barr, the No. 2 official at the Justice Department since May 1990 and a former Reagan White House aide, succeeds Dick Thornburgh.

Helicopter crash kills 20 in Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — A helicopter with a high-level delegation trying to mediate the conflict between Azerbaijan and Armenia crashed and blew up in the Caucasus Mountains on Wednesday, killing all 20 people aboard, Soviet media reported.

The official news agency Tass said there were three crew members and 17 officials on the Mi-8 helicopter that was flying over the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh enclave in Azerbaijan when it crashed.

The national evening TV news program "Vremya" said that the cause of the crash was dense fog. It quoted the pilot as saying "We can't see anything. Everything is foggy."

Syria warns United States against attack on Libya

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria said Wednesday that any U.S. military action against Libya over its alleged involvement in the bombing of a Pan Am jetliner could jeopardize Arab-Israeli peace talks.

The Syrian Arab News Agency said Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa "cautioned Washington over the seriousness of such acts at a time when efforts are being made to achieve peace and stability in the region."

7%, 9% tuition raises passed

Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

UI in-state tuition will rise 7 percent and out-of-state tuition will increase by 9 percent effective summer 1992, despite student government pleas for the Iowa state Board of Regents to limit the increase to 4 percent at its meeting Wednesday in Ames.

The regents passed an amendment from Iowa State University President Martin Jischke to keep non-resident tuition at the same 7 percent level with resident tuition to encourage more out-of-state students and student body diversity at ISU.

UI President Hunter Rawlings did not mimic Jischke's request. "Even after the increase we will still be at the bottom of schools in our comparison group in tuition," he said, adding the UI was already strong in diversity.

The increase, including student health and computer fees, will cost residents $156 and non-residents $602 next year.

The regents also raised MBA, law and medical school tuition by $750 in addition to the basic 7 and 9 percents.

UI Student Association President Jennifer Kelly and Vice President Matt Wise spoke out against the increase.

"Students at the U of I asked me to bring one message — 'Would you please ask the Board of Regents what the hell they're thinking by increasing our tuition while we're losing services,'" Wise said. "The increase in tuition is just another Band-Aid you can put on the overwhelming loss of funds from the state Legislature."

Wise said UISA has already budgeted funds to bus students to Des Moines this spring to communicate face-to-face with legislators the need for higher appropriations next year.

Regents President Marvin Pomerantz called the outcome a "compromise" between students and the board.

"I reject the argument that we let the Legislature off the hook," he said.

Board member Marvin Berenstein said he approved of the increase. "I don't think we can take the chance that the Legislature will fill the void," he said.

In the back of the board room stood about 10 ISU students holding signs that read "For God's sake, save religion studies" and "ISU equals IOU" and other slogans protesting cuts at the institution.

FREEDOM

Former hostage Thomas Sutherland kisses his wife, Jean, during a press conference at Lindsay Air Force Station Wednesday. Sutherland was freed Monday after six years captivity.

Former captive Sutherland learns pity, tolerance; freedom 'worth waiting for'

Terrence Petty
Associated Press

WIESBADEN, Germany — Thomas Sutherland said Wednesday that his six and a half years as a Lebanese hostage taught him tolerance, patience and even to pity the captors who put him in chains.

The 60-year-old educator was kept in chains much of the time after his Beirut kidnapping on June 9, 1985, was beaten on one occasion until he screamed and at times languished in a dark, underground cell.

But two days after being freed, he said that overall, "I feel great," like "60 going on 21."

"I feel like I'm ready to get out of here and go charging, but when I got off of my chain finally I found that I'm a little bit wobbly on my pins."

"I could almost say it's been worth waiting for, but it was a heck of a long wait — 2,347 days. But it's over, thank God, and we go on from here to the rest of our lives."

He spoke to reporters at the U.S. military hospital at Wiesbaden, where he received a clean bill of health from medical officials and was reunited with his wife Jean and daughter Kit. He arrived in Wiesbaden Tuesday.

Sutherland said he believed the remaining Western hostages — including Americans Terry Anderson, Joseph Cicippio and Alann Steen — would be released in the near future.

Both Sutherland and Briton Terry Waite said after their release Monday that their captors told them the Americans would soon be freed.

Sutherland, kidnapped while working as dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut, said his ordeal had changed him.

"I've learned a great deal of tolerance. I've learned an enormous amount of patience. I've never spent three hours sitting on my duff against a wall just waiting for someone to decide what the next move is."

He said he came to pity the hostage-holders "because I think they don't appreciate how heinous the thing is that they are doing."

Sutherland talked about the worst part of his imprisonment:

"After about a year and a half they put us in a very bad situation, individual cells underground, very little light. ... I was very depressed.

"And they'd come in and bring the food in ... and then leave me to eat in the dark. Try it some time. It's not much fun."

He said he was once beaten by his captors when he tried to remove his blindfold.

"I was a bad boy once so they gave me a biffing. ... I asked for it, I guess. I disobeyed their rules."

His captors beat the soles of his feet "till I just couldn't take it any longer, till I started to scream and they said, 'Quiet, quiet, shut up!'" he recounted. "So they resorted to

HOSTAGES

Prospects for 3 Americans seem 'bright'

Mohammed Salam
Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — In another sign that the hostage saga is drawing to a close, the umbrella group for the hostage-holders said Wednesday that the three remaining American captives will be released soon. Iran indicated that one, Joseph Cicippio, could be let go next week.

In Washington, the White House said prospects for freedom for the remaining U.S. hostages "look brighter than they have for a long time."

American Thomas Sutherland, one of the two hostages freed Monday after an exhaustive diplomatic effort by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, recounted his ordeal to reporters at the military hospital in Wiesbaden, Germany, where he is recuperating.

"I could almost say it's been worth waiting for, but it was a heck of a long wait — 2,347 days," said Sutherland, 60. He described being kept in chains and in dark cells and of once being beaten until he screamed in pain.

The other hostage freed Monday, Church of England envoy Terry Waite, spent a quiet day Wednesday with his family at a British air base.

Waite's family said he wanted to respond to suggestions that Waite's own efforts to free hostages were compromised by his contacts with former White House aide Oliver North, who was at the center of the Iran-Contra arms-for-hostages affair.

But the family indicated Waite would spend more time recuperating before making public statements about the matter.

In Beirut, Abbas Musawi, secretary-general of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, said future hostage releases would not be linked to the release of Arab detainees held by Israel or an accounting of missing Israeli servicemen.

Since Perez de Cuellar's mediation drive began in August, hostage releases have been part of a complex overall deal involving the Arab detainees and Israeli servicemen. But that has changed, the secretary-general told reporters Tuesday.

Musawi echoed that as he spoke of prospects for the speedy release of the remaining captives.

"As the kidnap factions have clearly stated, the issue of the Western hostages is heading to a final solution in the coming few weeks," he told a news conference. "We should differentiate between the issue of the Israeli prisoners and Arab detainees and that of the Western hostages."

Hezbollah denies being involved in the kidnapping of hostages. But the Shiite Muslims holding the Westerners are known to operate under its wing.

Iran, meanwhile, which has long supported the kidnapping groups, indicated Wednesday that another Western hostage will be released next week.

German film OK'd; dispute about screening continues

Wendy Alesch
Daily Iowan

The film "Taxi zum Klo," shown by the UI German department early in September, was ruled not obscene Wednesday by Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White. But he also said that one scene in the film was in violation of Iowa law, and that those who show it may be prosecuted.

In a related development, a confrontation looms between the UI and student groups regarding a scheduled showing of the film tonight. A screening sponsored by student groups had been scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Illinois Room of the Union, but the UI administration on Tuesday denied permission to show the film.

In a statement released Wednesday afternoon, UI President Hunter Rawlings said, "Given the complexity of White's opinion, the university needs time to study it before responding. Meanwhile, the university upholds its decision to deny permission to show the film."

Jeremy Buck, spokesman for the Iowa International Socialist Organization and the Committee for Multiculturalism and Affirmative Action, the groups sponsoring the screening, said "Taxi zum Klo" would be shown as scheduled.

"We have decided to go ahead and show the film. Now it is simply an issue between our group and the university," Buck said. "The film has been OK'd by the county attorney. If they want to shut us down, they'll have to come and shut us down."

White's decision was announced in a press conference held Wednesday morning. White said the film itself was not obscene, but that a scene in which a child appears and touches a man's groin area is a criminal violation under the state of Iowa's sexual exploitation of a minor code.

J. Patrick White

The people in this scene and those who produced it would be guilty of a class C felony if the film had been made in Iowa, White said. The film was made in Germany so this does not apply, but another section of this law also states that it is a class D felony to promote, purchase or possess this material.

The faculty members responsible for showing the film in the German department could be prosecuted, but White says that they will not be because they did not "knowingly" commit any violation by

SOVIET UNION

Bush offers additional aid to republics

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush approved an additional $1.4 billion in food aid Wednesday for the Soviet Union and for the first time gave the assistance directly to the Soviet republics rather than the central government.

In another economic boost, the House voted 350 to 78 to normalize trade with the Soviet Union by approving the granting of most-favored-nation status, which would reduce tariffs to the lowest possible level. The action also must be approved by the Senate.

Across Capitol Hill, the Senate Finance Committee approved the measure by a voice vote. The measure was expected to win approval in the full chamber within a few days.

The administration's aid package, almost all in the form of loan guarantees for the purchase of American crops, is intended to help the disintegrating country cope with food shortages this winter.

Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan said there already is "evidence of hoarding" in the Soviet Union.

In Congress, there were warnings of famine and political disintegration threatening control of Soviet nuclear arsenals.

Intelligence sources likened the current atmosphere in the Soviet Union to that of the dismal 1930s and said there was a potential for anarchy if food shortages spread during the winter.

Mindful of the political backlash against foreign aid, the administration portrayed the assistance as a boon for hard-pressed American farmers.

"This is not a foreign program that we're talking about here," Madigan said, announcing the aid at a White House briefing.

"This is a domestic program that has as its intent moving U.S. grain out of the U.S. market to the benefit of American farmers who will make these sales and then will spend that money in the American economy buying pickup trucks and buying other things that are manufactured in urban areas," the secretary said.

With the latest installment, the United States has committed itself to nearly $4 billion in loan guarantees over the last year for Soviet purchases of American farm products.

The Soviet Union had hoped for more, seeking $2.5 billion in credit

SMOKE-OUT

Ban may be incentive to quit smoking

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

The passage of the universitywide smoking ban will not only make it harder for smokers to light one up, it may also give new incentive for smokers to quit.

Coincidentally, the American Cancer Society has chosen today as the Great American Smoke-Out, a day when smokers are asked to quit their habit for 24 hours. If they make it through the day without smoking, they are encouraged to make the change permanent.

To help facilitate the Great American Smoke-Out, Student Health Service will be passing out free survival packs, which, according to Student Health educator Carol Horwitz, is "a humble attempt to get students to quit."

In addition, Mercy Hospital's Preventive Health Center is recognizing the day by providing lung performance tests and a presentation by Dr. Cam Cambell on "Let's Talk Cold Turkey: Reclaiming Your Healthy Heart." Admission to the presentation, which includes a turkey dinner buffet and smoke-out survival kits, is a pack of cigarettes for smokers or an adopt a smoker coupon for non-smokers.

According to Jana Eglund, the area executive director for the American Cancer Society, 37.8 percent of the 18.9 million smokers in the United States participated in the smoke-out last year. Of this, 7.4 million — 14.9 percent — stayed off cigarettes for 24 hours and 4.9 million were still not smoking three days later.

The smoke-out, Eglund said, offers a chance for smokers to "prove to themselves they can quit for one day."

Unlike the 1950s, when over half of the U.S. population smoked, today's smokers are finding it less accepted at home and in the workplace.

"It's harder to do because there are less places you can do it," Eglund said. In addition, society has become more health conscious and worried about the effects of second-hand smoke.

Horwitz said that about 12 percent of UI students are smokers. Although this number as a whole is decreasing, the number of women who smoke has increased compared to the number of men.

One reason, she said, may be that the tobacco industry's main target is young people, especially women.

"Young people are in the process of creating their own identity," Horwitz said, "and they often fall victim to the tobacco industry's advertising ploy," which glamorizes cigarettes.

To aggravate the problem, women also have a harder time quitting than men, Horwitz said. She attributes this to the "double bind" women find themselves in when they want to quit. Many women use cigarettes for weight control, and fear that if they quit, they will gain weight, she said.

But the reasons to quit far outweigh the risks of smoking, Horwitz said. In addition to the familiar health problems associated with smoking including cancer, emphysema, heart attack and stroke, smoking has also been found to increase infant mortality rates and respiratory illness among children whose parents smoke.

Unfortunately, because these risks do not become problems for many years, it is often difficult to get young people to quit.

"It takes a phenomenal amount of effort to quit," Horwitz said. "It's intertwined with everything you do — studying, eating, talking on the phone, waking up in the morning. Quitting is like getting a divorce."

Horwitz offered some "quit-tips" to help people get beyond the first day of quitting: throw away all cigarettes, matches and lighters; clean ashtrays and clothes; change daily habits to avoid normal smoking times; stay away from alcohol and caffeine; eat apples, carrots, celery and gum to satisfy oral cravings; keep busy with rocks, shells, rubberbands, knitting or playing the piano; brush teeth often; drink a lot of fluids; and exercise.

"I recommend anything that works," Horwitz said. "For most people it takes many, many tries, but every quit is a success. It's like learning to ride a bike — when you fall off, you just get back on and try again."

TRENDS

Tobacco continues to attract teen-agers

Peer pressure is just one reason young people take up smoking.

Sonja West

Surgeon General's Warning: Smoking Causes Lung Cancer, Heart Disease, Emphysema and May Complicate Pregnancy.

When Surgeon General Luther Terry first issued the historic warning on every cigarette pack in 1964, American smokers learned for the first time about the dangers of their addiction.

Terry's successor, C. Everett Koop, launched an extensive anti-smoking campaign promising a smokeless society by the year 2000. This propaganda caused many deviant smokers to throw away their Marlboros in the name of good health more than 20 years after the warnings first appeared on cigarette packages.

Americans in general have been quitting smoking at a record pace with the exception of one age group — teen-agers. Despite being the first generation to grow up with the knowledge that smoking causes cancer, the habit is still luring more than 2 million new addicts a year nationwide.

"Smoking is dropping very, very slowly among teen-agers," said Carol Siple, director of programs for the American Lung Association of Iowa. "They're still using smokeless tobacco so the overall tobacco use is staying the same."

Surveys have shown that smoking is a habit which forms at an early age. About 52 percent of smokers begin by age 18 and 90 percent by age 21, according to the U.S. Office of Smoking and Health. The reasons that minors are still choosing to light up are unclear.

"A lot of young people start smoking for many different reasons," Siple said. "It seems pretty harmless when a person starts smoking, but what people don't realize is that they can easily get addicted. Then when it comes time to quit, they can't."

Peer pressure has always been an accepted cause for teen-age smoking. In a study of 433 Muscatine students, a group of UI researchers found a strong link between teen-agers who smoke having friends who also smoke.

Siple agrees that peer pressure probably plays an important role in student smoking. "If one person does it, or a small group of people are smoking, it's easy for a person to say 'Well, what the heck, I think I'll give it a try. There's no harm in just one.'"

Dan Fanelli, a UI senior in film, began smoking at the age of 14. He said pressure from friends who smoked probably had something to do with his starting. "I was definitely influenced by other people, but I was curious to try it," he said. "I can't say I was completely pressured."

UI senior Kathleen Butts said her friends had nothing to do with her decision to start smoking at age 16. "None of my friends smoked. I was kind of trying to distance myself from that whole high-school thing," Butts said.

Many people blame the tobacco industry for targeting its products to minors and causing children to become addicted. Despite a national legal smoking age of 18, minors spend over $1.3 billion a year on cigarettes.

"Advertising makes smoking look very glamorous to children," Siple said. It is also easy for minors to obtain cigarettes, she added.

In 1990 an organization called Stop Teenage Addiction to Tobacco found in a nationwide survey of stores selling cigarettes over the counter that three out of four would sell them to children as young as 11.

"It is associated with a lot of things that young people want to be thin, attractive, sexy, successful. All of those types of things."

This image of smoking was noticed by Fanelli. "Even though I know it's bad for you, to me there's always been something glamorous about smoking," he said. "If I'm watching a movie, and I see someone light up a cigarette, it just looks good."

At the college level, the main reason given for smoking is to relieve stress, Siple said.

"You might have someone who never smoked before until finals come along. All of a sudden they need something to help them deal with the stress and cigarettes seem to be an easy answer."

Stress is definitely a reason to keep smoking, Butts said. "It is relaxing. It helps me when I'm studying and I get all wound up," she said. "I just smoke a cigarette and back up for a minute. Then I can calm down and start again."

Fanelli quit smoking twice for over 10 months and claims stress is the reason he began smoking again.

"I'm trying to quit. I've quit many, many times," he said. "Now it's just to the point where I'm sick of it, and not only that but it costs a lot."

Fanelli and Butts said they spend around $15 a week on cigarettes.

They both also said smoking can be a cure for boredom. "I think for me more than a craving for nicotine, it's an oral fixation. I always need to have something in my mouth and in my hand," Fanelli said.

The smoking trend among girls is rising quickly. By the mid-1990s the percentage of women smokers is expected to exceed that of their male counterparts.

"I think women start smoking as a way of controlling their weight," Siple said. "They'll have a cigarette after a meal instead of dessert."

Quitting is a real problem for people who are addicted to smoking. "It's a lot harder to stop than people will ever imagine it will be," Siple said.

The majority of smokers who do quit successfully do it on their own, she said. "They don't go to a program or get any kind of drugs or anything like that. They just quit," Siple said.

Fanelli and Butts both said they regret ever starting and plan to quit someday. "I think it's one of those things that your parents always say to you. 'Don't start because you'll never be able to quit,' and you don't listen to them," Butts said. "But once you've started, you wish you had."

UI FOUNDATION

New board of directors named; 2 alumnae added

Daily Iowan

Two UI graduates, Mary Anneberg Petersen and Carroll Reasoner, have been elected to the UI Foundation Board of Directors.

The foundation announced elections of new directors and officers following its regular fall meeting.

Petersen served on the Iowa state Board of Regents for 12 years and was president for eight. She is a 1951 UI graduate, received the Distinguished Alumni Award for Service in 1983 and was inducted into the Iowa Hall of Fame in 1984.

Currently serving on the national steering committee for the UI Foundation's fund-raising campaign for the Iowa Women's Archives, Petersen is a board member of the Carnegie and W.K. Kellogg foundations.

Reasoner is a partner and vice president of the Cedar Rapids law firm Shuttleworth and Ingersoll. She received her bachelor of arts degree in psychology from the UI in 1973 and her law degree in 1976. She was the first person to be elected president of the Iowa Bar Association, a position she currently holds.

Reasoner is also first vice chairwoman and executive committee member of St. Luke's Methodist Hospital in Cedar Rapids.

The foundation's Executive Committee for 1991-92 has also been elected. Members are regents President Marvin Pomerantz; Jill McLaughlin of Moline, Ill.; Richard Levitt of Minneapolis, Minn.;

Carroll Reasoner

Charles Grannon of Ridgewood, N.J.; Wallace Sulentic of Waterloo; and ex-officio members UI President Hunter Rawlings and Richard Kautz of Muscatine.

24-hour study in Union in works for next semester

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

Plans are under way to install a 24-hour study room for students in the basement of the Union, according to Undergraduate Activities Senate Executive Officer Byron Wallace.

Wallace said that while no date has been set for the service, he would like to see a pilot program begin by spring midterms.

"I'll be pushing for midterms so that we can get some student response," he said. "Then we can have it permanently established for finals, summer session and next fall."

What stands in the way of the program are the logistics.

"We've been looking for a place for 24-hour study. . . . We may have a section of the IMU basement closed off for studying and the Union Market open. The funds from the market would help cover the cost," he said.

Union Director Jean Kendall said that practicalities are a problem.

"What they have asked for is an access area on the ground floor that includes food services. We need to figure out how it would be possible to do that now," she said.

Kendall said that when it's time for the third phase of the Union renovation, it's possible that a study area may be included in the plans. However, the second phase, which ended close to three years ago, was a $10 million refurbishing and the funding for another renovation isn't there.

"There is no time line on the third renovation mostly because of the financial situation of both the state and the university — it's an ongoing thing," Kendall said.

Kendall also said that although this plan varies from past 24-hour study areas, failures of similar plans make her wary.

"There's a lot of things involved. We've never had much use of these areas," she said. "I'd like to be sure students are interested in having an area 24 hours a day. Pilots haven't been well attended."

However, she didn't rule out the possibilities.

"I'm certainly not opposed to it if there is a way to make it work, and I'd like to help. We need to look at the cost and other things that we have to be concerned about," she said.

ICLU: Ban on German film violates 1st Amendment

Daily Iowan

The Iowa Civil Liberties Union Wednesday condemned as "censorship by prosecutorial fiat" the stance of Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White regarding the German film "Taxi zum Klo" and called upon the UI to rescind its denial of permission to two campus groups to screen the film in the Union.

"Whatever one's opinion may be concerning this film, there has been no judicial determination that it violates either the state obscenity statute or that one scene violates Section 728.12," said ICLU Executive Director Criss Farley.

"Absent such a judicial finding, either the blanket banning of the film by the university or the imposition of a requirement that any screening be 'edited' or 'editorially masked' as suggested by White is, we believe, an unconstitutional prior restraint in violation of the First Amendment.

"This is censorship by prosecutorial fiat, which is now being compounded by the university's blanket ban of the film screening."

The ICLU said it was not evaluating the merit of the film, and that, in permitting the screening, the UI would not be endorsing or sponsoring the film but would be demonstrating the university's commitment to principles of academic freedom.

"When the university engages in censorship, its vital function as the setting for the free exchange of ideas and information is demeaned," Farley said.

CROSS BURNINGS

Guardian Angels fly to Dubuque's aid

Associated Press

DUBUQUE — Members of the Guardian Angels said Wednesday they are coming to Dubuque to help stop cross burnings and to demonstrate that blacks and whites can work together.

"My goal is to make clear that not every black person is bad," said Thomas Hunt, regional coordinator for the Guardian Angels.

Hunt said six black members and six white members from Chicago would arrive in Dubuque today and check in with city police.

They were meeting Wednesday night in Chicago to talk about what they might encounter in Dubuque.

"How the guys are supposed to approach different situations," Hunt said by telephone from Chicago.

Hunt said the Guardian Angels, who usually deal with urban crime, will encounter different situations.

"This is not like dealing with a purse snatching," he said. "You're dealing with blind hatred."

Police Chief John Mauss would not confirm that the group was coming to Dubuque.

"I'm not making any comment. I'm not even saying that they are coming," Mauss said.

But he said he welcomed anyone who was trying to help Dubuque shed a recent image as a racially divided city.

"For the most part their intentions are good," Mauss said. "I appreciate any good that they do. I believe the community itself is doing the bulk of the work."

"This is not like dealing with a purse snatching. You're dealing with blind hatred."

Thomas Hunt,
Guardian Angels' regional coordinator

Police said two cross burnings last weekend brought to 10 the number of such incidents that have plagued the mostly white city since July. Of the city's 58,000 residents, about 330 are black and fewer than 2 percent are members of minority groups.

"We haven't had any the last couple of days. We're still obviously working on the ones that we've had," Mauss said.

Bond was set Monday at $10,000 for William Allen, 31, who turned himself in Sunday. Allen had been wanted on a warrant charging him with possession of an incendiary device after five burning crosses were found Nov. 10 along a city street outside an apartment house. Earlier, David Israel Simpson, 19, was arrested on the same charge and ordered held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Gov. Terry Branstad plans a Thanksgiving-evening visit to Dubuque to start "a time for healing." The governor said he will attend a non-denominational prayer service Nov. 27 that is being organized by church and community leaders.

In addition to the cross burnings, racist remarks such as "the KKK lives" have been painted on school buildings.

The Guardian Angels' statement said the New York City headquarters of the group received six calls Monday from frightened black residents asking members to patrol in Dubuque and "show how young people, black and white can work together."

"I'm expecting confrontation from opposing groups," Hunt said. "I'm

2nd life begins with transplants

The number of patients needing transplants has nearly doubled while the number of donors has decreased.

Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

Editor's note: This is the first of two articles.

At age 29, Vince Matulionis is leading a normal life.

Five years ago, however, the Iowa City resident didn't know if that would be possible. An infection had caused his kidneys to fail, and Matulionis was into his seventh month of dialysis. He was spending five hours a day, three days a week, hooked up to a machine that was saving his life.

Then a donor kidney became available, and Matulionis underwent a transplant at UI Hospitals and Clinics. Since then, he says, he has never felt better. Matulionis is one of thousands for whom an organ transplant has either prolonged or drastically improved the quality of life.

The science of organ transplantation has advanced rapidly over the past 20 years. With it, public knowledge about its possibilities has also increased. But the public remains naive about many aspects of transplantation, and this naivete prevents many from donating, say medical experts. This has led to a serious shortage of donors.

Some 15,000 transplants are performed in the United States each year. Yet that number falls far short of the 24,000 patients currently on waiting lists for organs. Just four years ago, the number waiting was only 13,000.

Iowa figures are comparable, according to Barbara Schanbacher, organ transplant coordinator at UIHC. Some 200 Iowans await transplants, nearly double the number four years ago, she said. One-third of these people will die while waiting.

Jim Kisthard, executive director of the Iowa Organ and Tissue Procurement Program, said one reason for the lack of donors is the widely held idea that most organ transplants are still experimental and therefore likely to fail.

"We need more understanding nationwide. There is a difference between awareness and understanding that what we're doing is not an experimental chance at making some sci-fi surgery work," he said.

Organ transplants are becoming more and more successful, he said. At UIHC, one of the leading transplant centers in the nation, 119 transplants were performed last year. UIHC is the only hospital in the state approved to transplant all possible organs including hearts, lungs, kidneys, livers, pancreata and corneas, as well as other tissue such as skin and bone.

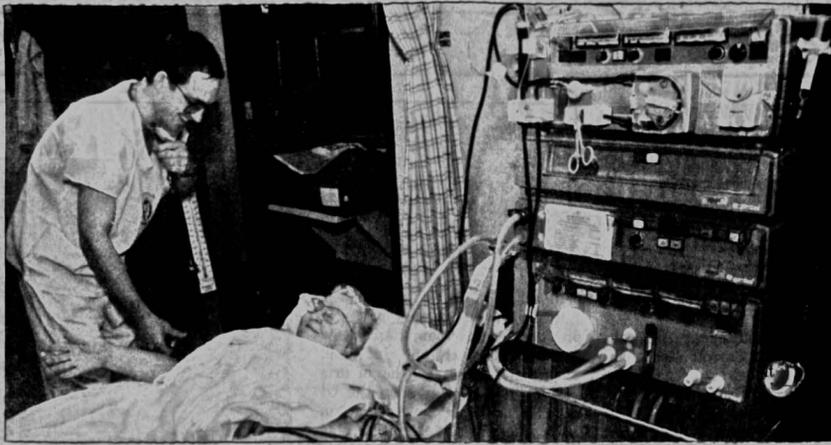

The UIHC Organ Procurement Organization staff is the designated organ retrieval team for the state. Its members regularly fly statewide and nationwide to retrieve donated organs and are responsible for the matching of organs to recipients.

As director of the program, Kisthard is well aware of the good organ donation can do. He is also well aware of the fact that while the number of patients added to waiting lists increased 15 percent last year alone, the number of people willing to donate has actually decreased. Kisthard said he thinks the shortage is due in large part to several misconceptions about organ donation.

One of the biggest of these, he said, pertains to the concept of brain death, which must occur in a patient before organ donation is considered. Kisthard said some people hold the misconception that a brain-dead person isn't actually dead but rather is in a comalike state.

Brain death is death, Kisthard stressed. Brain function has stopped and will never begin again. A brain-dead person is unable to breathe without the help of a machine and has no memory, consciousness, feeling, sight, touch or other sense.

With respirators, a person can receive oxygen, maintain vital organs and can function for a short time, he said. But this ability to maintain vital functions after an individual has died should never be confused with life. To diagnose brain death, two physicians caring for the patient in intensive care must follow specific neurological tests.

Another misconception is the idea that if a person has a donor card, the attending physician won't try as hard to save him. This is absolutely false, said Reggie Morrow, education director for the OPO.

"The donor card is a noble gesture, but we always go to the next of kin about donation," he said. "The card helps alleviate stress on the family in terms of not knowing what their loved one would want."

Brain death must be diagnosed by physicians separate from the OPO, Kisthard said. The transplant team is never involved until after this has been done.

Neither does the transplant team go to the scene of accidents to recover organs, Morrow added.

"That's for lawyers," he said. A misconception that has particularly hurt donation, and one which was given attention in an Ann Landers column, is the idea that donation costs are charged to the donor.

"That's not true at all. The costs are the responsibility of the procurement program," Kisthard said. "The Landers column has had a retraction so hopefully the damage has been reversed."

The issue of body mutilation is also of concern to some considering donation. They believe that if organs are donated, the body will be unrepresentable for an open casket funeral. This too is false, Kisthard said. Incisions made in the donor are sewn up much as if the person were still alive, and at an open casket funeral one could not visibly tell organs had been donated.

Matulionis, who began carrying an organ donor card even before his kidneys failed, said he considers himself lucky to have had a transplant. Having had no health problems related to his new kidney, he now leads a normal, active life and is engaged to be married. More people should consider organ donation, he said, but he can guess why they might not have before.

"It gets into things people are uncomfortable dealing with, like the issue of mortality. People don't like to think about that," he said.

Medical board suspends Dr. Kevorkian's license

Jeff Holyfield
Associated Press

LANSING, Mich. — The Michigan Board of Medicine on Wednesday suspended the medical license of Dr. Jack Kevorkian, who has helped three women kill themselves in the last two years.

The board voted 8-0 to suspend Kevorkian's license even though the retired pathologist, dubbed "Dr. Death," has said repeatedly that he would help more people commit suicide even if he lost his license.

"It is clear that suicide is not a medically accepted and approved practice," said Dr. Ananda Prasad, a board member.

One of Kevorkian's attorneys, Michael Schwartz, said Kevorkian still could help people kill themselves. "Dr. Kevorkian can do anything that any unlicensed human being can do if asked for advice," he said.

But another board member, Dr. Emma Jane Conklin, said if Kevorkian helps more people commit suicide, it could be interpreted as practicing medicine without a license and leave him open to criminal charges.

No one answered the telephone at Kevorkian's Royal Oak home Wednesday.

Kevorkian, 63, first came to authorities' attention in June 1990 after he helped Alzheimer's patient Janet Adkins of Portland, Ore., die by hooking her up to a suicide machine he invented. Adkins pushed a button to give herself a lethal injection.

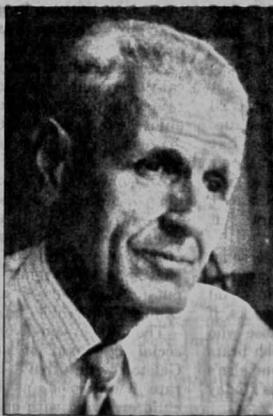

A murder charge against Kevorkian was dismissed after a judge ruled that Michigan has no law against assisted suicide. But he was barred from helping people commit suicides in Oakland County.

However, in October, he called police to an Oakland County cabin about 40 miles north of Detroit where he had helped two women commit suicide.

Sherry Miller, 43, of Roseville was suffering from multiple sclerosis and Marjorie Wantz, 58, of Sodus was suffering from a painful but not terminal pelvic disease.

Wantz gave herself a lethal injection using a device similar to the one Adkins used. Miller inhaled carbon monoxide through a mask.

The Oakland County prosecutor's office is investigating the deaths

Dr. Jack Kevorkian, the retired pathologist who has helped three women commit suicide in the past three years.

but has brought no new charges against Kevorkian.

Dr. Philip Margolis, who abstained from Wednesday's vote, said the medical, ethical and legal issues were too complex to tackle with a summary suspension.

"I think, at least from my point of view, there is no immediate menace to his activities," he said. "This is a very complex issue, which will take a lot of thought on everybody's part, whether it be the Legislature or us or whomever."

Buchanan blasts Bush economics

John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Commentator Patrick Buchanan said Wednesday that "White House mites" were trying to link him to former Ku Klux Klansman David Duke in an effort to keep him from mounting a conservative challenge to President Bush.

Buchanan said that if he does run in GOP primaries next year, it will be more than a symbolic protest from the right.

Buchanan spent much of a Capitol Hill news conference delivering a campaign-style attack on Bush, but insisted he would not make a final decision about a presidential run until a few days after Thanksgiving.

Buchanan said he needed to be sure he had time to assemble a credible organization before the February New Hampshire primary.

"I will run only if I think I have a long shot of breaking through the line of scrimmage in New Hampshire and going the distance," he said.

Bush told a television interviewer Wednesday he has no plans to debate any opponents in the Republican primaries. His spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said that if Bush "chooses not to do it, there's no reason why he should."

Fitzwater said Bush's policies have reflected "mainstream conservatism." He added, "Certainly Pat's free to do whatever he wants, but the president's in a very strong position with the conservative movement."

Associated Press

Commentator Patrick Buchanan addresses reporters in Washington Wednesday, saying that if he decides to enter the Republican presidential primaries it will be more than a symbolic conservative challenge.

Buchanan criticized Bush's economic policies and support of a $25 billion foreign-aid bill at a news conference hosted by conservative Republican Rep. Toby Roth of Wisconsin.

Roth and Buchanan criticized both the size of the bill and efforts to push it through the House with little debate. Buchanan said some provisions of the package amounted to "global socialism."

Buchanan said "White House lobbyists and Hill colluders" were trying to sneak through the two-year foreign aid bill to "take it out of the politics of 1992, which is where foreign aid ought to be debated."

Buchanan said that should he run, he expected to make a credible showing in New Hampshire and then plans to enter GOP primaries in the West and South, where Duke, too, might be on the ballot.

After losing the Louisiana gubernatorial race, Duke said he might enter selected GOP primaries, saying he and Buchanan could be a conservative "one-two punch" against Bush.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee reprimanded former assistant Democratic leader Alan Cranston Wednesday for "improper and repugnant" dealings with Charles Keating, wrapping up a tumultuous two-year investigation growing out of the savings and loan scandal.

After committee members presented their report on behalf of the full Senate, Cranston took the floor to accept the action "with deep remorse in my heart." But he then spent nearly an hour — in an unrepentant and contentious mood — denying he was guilty of many of the committee's accusations.

The Senate, in an unprecedented action, took no vote on the report that accused the California Democrat of "an impermissible pattern of conduct in which fund-raising and official activities were substantially linked."

In past cases, the Senate has taken a censure vote after such highly critical findings have been presented by the ethics panel.

The decision not to take that step this time marked a compromise between the view of the committee's Republicans, who favored censure, and Democrats who sought a lesser rebuke. The committee found Cranston violated no law or Senate rule.

Cranston's remarks enraged committee Vice Chairman Warren

Rudman, R-N.H., who told colleagues the Californian's statement was "arrogant, unrepentant and a smear on this institution."

The committee said it found "extenuating circumstances exist" in Cranston's case, noting his poor health and intention to retire.

While accepting its reprimand, Cranston — who is 77, ill with cancer and leaving the Senate next year after 24 years — made clear he would have fought a tougher sanction.

Cranston was among the "Keating Five" senators who received $1.3 million in political donations from Keating and associates while intervening with thrift regulators on behalf of the owner's Lincoln Savings and Loan. More than $900,000 went to Cranston's campaigns and causes.

The committee said the linkage in Cranston's case deserved severe punishment. The panel last February ended its case against the four other senators with ties to Keating, finding that they used bad judgment but that the links between the contributions and intervention were not as strong.

The Senate chamber was virtually full to hear Rudman and outgoing ethics Chairman Howell Heflin, D-Ala., present the panel's findings. Then Cranston began, with a pat for encouragement from his new attorney — Harvard Law School Professor Alan Dershowitz. The senator fumbled with his hand-held microphone for a moment, and then spoke in a forceful voice.

Glancing up from his speech to stare at his colleagues, Cranston said his fund-raising efforts and the easy access he granted to constituents such as Keating were no different than the behavior of other senators.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., denied any wrongdoing after he was reprimanded for his role in the Keating Five affair.

"So let me ask: Since I have been singled out for a reprimand on access today, who among you can be sure you will not be singled out for a reprimand on access tomorrow? Here, but for the grace of God, stand you.

"There is only one way out: Get money out of politics. Enact public financing, and enact it now."

Rudman retorted that Cranston's "everybody does it" defense was "poppycock" and "unworthy of the record of the senior senator from California."

In contrite remarks opening his statement, Cranston had said, "I rise with deep remorse in my heart to accept the reprimand of the committee. I deeply regret the pain all this has caused my family, my friends, my supporters and my constituents."

RACISM IN AMERICA

Looking into the future

The recent spate of cross burnings here in Iowa, along with the continued rise of David Duke nationally, points to the problems that the United States continues to have in solving its race problems. These problems defy easy solutions; unless Americans begin to take drastic measures now, America may find itself on the brink of race war.

It is clear, despite the Bush administration's claims to the contrary, that the U.S. economy is in serious trouble. The so-called "Reagan Revolution" of the 1980s has had terrible repercussions for the working class in the United States. Many blacks and whites who formerly held manufacturing jobs have lost them and have had to endure the haunting specter of underemployment and unemployment.

It is here where the seeds of the Duke ascendancy were partially sown. Poor and middle-class working whites, uneducated and feeling powerless, found a scapegoat — blacks. The latent racism present in many whites now has found a new platform. As a result, racism continues to spiral out of control, with the excuse being blacks have gotten too much and are to blame for society's ills. Nothing could be further from the truth.

For many people, the elections in Louisiana represented a litmus test on the state of race relations in the United States; as expected, the voting was based primarily on race, with 96 percent of blacks voting for the Democratic candidate, Edwin Edwards, and 55 percent of whites voting for the Republican Duke. Duke's campaign against affirmative action and welfare clearly won over a rather significant portion of the white electorate in Louisiana. Duke's slick brand of race-baiting, taken from the George Bush / Jesse Helms book of campaigning, represents a new low in American politics and does not bode well for the future.

The Republican klansman from Louisiana realizes the antipathy of many whites and attempts to use it to his advantage. The sad part about the current episode is that Duke is not as far out of the mainstream of political thought as certain Republicans and Democrats would like us to believe.

As long as the economic climate continues to worsen in this country and the residual problems of crime and corruption continue, whites will continue to blame blacks, and racism will continue to worsen. The militancy of blacks will also continue, as evidenced by their overwhelming turnout in the Louisiana gubernatorial elections and the growing violence in the inner cities as their relative economic situation continues to worsen. Unless Americans are willing to take some bold steps toward solving their racial problems, they may be in for more than what they bargained for.

Drop us a line, Locke

To the Editor:
We must apologize to Locke Peterseim ["Zone-ster's patience tried, found wanting," Nov. 15]. Iowa City is intolerable to him since the shooting, and it's our fault, all 60,000 of us. Henceforth we'll keep our distress quiet and try to quit being stunned, Locke. Sorry for the sloppiness.

Somehow it seems OK to me that when a generally peaceful community is subject to mass murder, people get upset. People talk about it, write about it, agonize over it. Workers and students at the university, particularly in or around Van Allen and Jessup, tend to get jittery; some may even find themselves overwhelmed. According to Locke we're all melodramatic, hack poets out for a good cry.

It's obvious you've had it with Iowa City, Locke, and I dare say after your column most of Iowa City has probably had it with you, too. I suggest you take the first bus to L.A. or New York or some other tough metropolis, someplace with guts, where murder is mundane. Let us know how you like it.

Trash the "White Trash"

To the Editor:
I would like to comment on the "White Trash" piece performed during Dance Gala '91. While I appreciated the athletic and energized dancing, I was appalled at the subject matter and the audience's reaction to it.

It began with a man making mock swings with a baseball bat, in the air at first. But then he swung deliberately at the woman, stopping just short of her face. And people laughed. It only got worse from there, with both beating up on each other. But the lowest point came in the final moment, when they ended in a passionate clinch.

Unfortunately, for some people this scenario is reality. They have somehow gotten the idea that that is what "real love" is like — violent fighting and passionate making up. This idea comes in part from media and literary portrayals of such relationships as "OK." (Think of "Gone With the Wind"; Scarlett and Rhett fight, he carries her up the staircase kicking and screaming to his bed, the next morning Scarlett is a happy camper.)

I do not believe in censorship of the arts but instead look upon controversial items as opportunities for people who have opposing viewpoints to express their opinions.

You have only to have been hit once, or know someone who's been hit, to know that domestic violence is not funny. I hope people will look down on and speak up against domestic violence. But it is sadly true that many people do indeed identify with the warring couple in "White Trash."

Flight from maturity, the '60s generation

The "do your own thing" generation of the '60s turned into the "Me" generation of the '80s. Those who screamed adolescent cant in the '60s aged 20 years but never grew up. The only thing that changed was that their screed turned into a self-indulgent whine about "needs." Different decades to be sure, but same chapter, same verse.

Since the '60s, a perverse ideal of personal autonomy has been gradually and progressively enshrined in America's legal and social culture. But this notion of autonomy works, if it works for anyone at all, only for those who are already strong. As usual, the selfish brats of the '60s write their checks on someone else's account. Back then it was their parents', today it is on their children's.

The cult of personal autonomy is destroying the children of the '80s and '90s. This fact is finally receiving the concerned attention that it deserves, not least in the growing recognition of the devastating effect that easy divorce has on children's emotional, social and economic well-being.

In a recent issue of The New Republic, University of Maryland Professor William Galston recites the well-known data on childhood devastation brought on as children dysfunctionally adapt to and resign themselves to the anomie of parentless lives: Suicide has tripled among teen-agers, violent crime has increased and the proportion of teens using illegal drugs today far exceeds the proportion of teen drug use 30 years ago.

He adds: "For most children, [divorce] comes as an 'unwelcome shock,' even when the parents are openly quarreling. In the short-term, boys seem to have a harder time coping than girls, in part because of an 'escalating cycle of misbehavior and harsh response between mothers and sons.' Girls more typically respond with internalized disruption rather than external behavior — with heightened levels of anxiety, withdrawal and depression that may become apparent only a few years later."

And, of course, the economic effects of divorce upon children are also well-known. Fifteen percent of children in a two-parent household are in poverty. This number increases to a full 50 percent for children in one-parent families. How long can we ignore the obvious, as Galston puts it, that "the best anti-poverty program for children is a stable, intact family."

The numbers on divorce and children detail a social upheaval of staggering proportions. Galston writes that "[In 30 years] the divorce rate has tripled, as has the percentage of children living with only one parent. Of white children born in the early 1950s, 81 percent lived continuously until the age of 17 with their two biological parents; the projected rate for children born in the early 1980s is 30 percent. The corresponding rate for black children has fallen from 52 percent in the 1950s to only 6 percent today."

The cost of the puerile parental search for autonomy and "self-fulfillment" is the broken lives of their children. Unlike their parents and their parents' parents, the '60s generation plays while thinking they don't have to pay. Their children aren't so lucky; they have to pay for their parents' conceit.

Although irremedial damage has been done already, there's no reason to compound the errors and resign ourselves to being a nation awash in broken lives. Most of the change needs to come on the individual level as those who commit to marriage and who bring children into this world own up to their responsibilities, but there are some legal changes that can help matters.

Cracking down on deadbeat fathers who don't pay their full child support would mitigate much of the economic deprivation of divorce upon children and perhaps even reduce the incidence of divorce in the first instance.

Child support collection laws today are little more than a hodgepodge of state laws. Delinquent fathers can simply move across state-lines in order to avoid or delay judicial enforcement of support decrees. These programs need to be unified in a federal program with national scope.

Galston, however, is a little too sanguine in his judgment that such proposals would "do little to reduce the incidence of divorce." People respond to shifts in incentives and costs. No-fault divorce laws made divorce "cheaper" in time, money and hassle.

Spouses responded to the changes in the payoffs, got divorces and forgot about the kids. If we don't let parents fob off their responsibilities by getting a divorce, then divorce becomes more "costly" and we'll get less of it. This is also a good argument to repeal no-fault divorce legislation — a throwback to a failed social revolution.

Of course, those nurtured on the myth of the '60s — on the myth that irresponsibility is costless — will squeal at the impairment of their autonomy and at the insistence that they bear responsibility for what is theirs. Let them squeal.

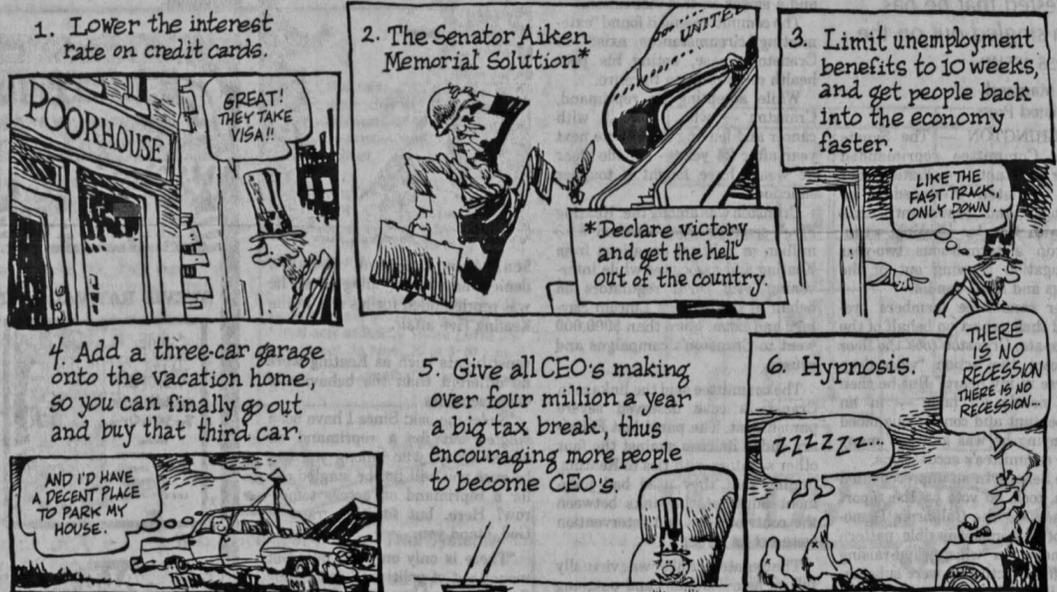

To be sure, it's too late to prevent or to remedy a lot of the injury. But what else can the children of the '60s generation say to their parents other than what the parents of that generation also said to them: Grow up.

BEATING the Recession THING: The Bush Method

NAT HENTOFF

A gaping hole in what we teach our children

Craig Klugman, editor of the Journal-Gazette in Fort Wayne, Ind., was asked to speak about the press to a senior social studies class at a local high school. He discovered that the students were not fond of the press because, they said, it keeps harassing Dan Quayle and is always getting in the way of government officials who are trying to do their job.

Klugman asked the youngsters if they knew what was in the First Amendment. The response was very sketchy. He then asked them if any of their courses had ever really gotten into the Bill of Rights, the post-Civil War amendments, anything like that. They shook their heads from side to side, and their teacher admitted they had not learned very much about those things.

The newspaper editor began to do some research about this large and deep hole in the education of America's young. As he later told a colloquium on the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights at Valparaiso University School of Law, textbook instruction in the First Amendment is "too didactic and abstract." And so, students memorize it and forget it.

This is also what I have found in talking to public school students in various parts of the country. Yeah, they say, they had the First Amendment one day and it stayed in their heads not much longer than information about the mean annual rainfall in Topeka, Kan., which they also had one day.

Klugman noted in his talk that an evaluation of "five 12th-grade texts and five used in the ninth grade found that they deal strictly in definitions, not explanations."

As Thomas Eveslage of Temple University has emphasized concerning other studies of textbooks, there is "none of the conflict, the dynamics of the evolving democracy. As for the First Amendment, the reader is rapidly taken through many brief annotations of Supreme Court decisions. Cases are not explained in depth and are rarely set in sociopolitical context."

notes, is "mentioned." Freedom of speech, for instance, does not come bounding off the page to make students realize that this constitutional right belongs to them — that it is a personal right, not just some ritual object.

But then most adults, including school personnel, do not believe the First Amendment has anything to do with students. It's in their schoolbooks so they'll be proud to be Americans, but it is not to be used by them.

In his speech at Valparaiso, Klugman reported that in Fort Wayne, "at one high school, the principal spiked a story (in the student paper) that revealed the tennis coach was

Students do learn about censorship from above, and if they had been tempted at some point to take the First Amendment seriously, they eventually add it to Santa Claus among their discarded fantasies.

Far too many high-school principals need an intensive course in the Bill of Rights, which they will never get. And the damage they do — along with the teachers and the authors and the publishers of lifeless textbooks — goes on long after the students have left school.

Following his field research in the training grounds of constitutional democracy, Klugman was not surprised by an extensive study released this year by the American Society of Newspaper Editors. It showed, among other things, that of Americans 18 to 34 years old, one out of five said that newspapers' right to editorialize... during a political campaign should not be protected at all.

The study as a whole concluded that if the First Amendment were on the ballot for ratification in this anniversary year, it would — as written — lose.

Yet, in practically all the many volumes of prescriptions of how to make the schools work, there is scarcely any mention of the need to figure out how to make the Constitution come alive in the schools.

The Constitution, Justice Abe Fortas said for a majority of the Supreme Court in 1969, does not stop "at the schoolhouse gate." It just lingers there, waiting to be invited in.

Students are not fond of the press because, they said, it keeps harassing Dan Quayle and is always getting in the way of government officials who are trying to do their job.

The stories are not told. The people in the cases are not seen and heard. (But such a book does exist: Peter Irons' "The Courage of Their Convictions," a Penguin paperback, which should be in every school in the nation.)

Klugman decided to look into the eighth-grade text at Memorial Park Middle School in Fort Wayne. The book is called "The American Nation," published by Prentice Hall in this very year of the grand celebration of our basic liberties in the Bill of Rights.

"The First Amendment," says Klugman, "is mentioned five times in the book." The key word, as he improperly collecting court fees from his players.

"The story was true, my own newspaper confirmed it in our reporting. When I editorialized about censorship, the principal told me that he opposed censorship, but he felt, at this time at his high school, relationships among the faculty were paramount, and such a story would make those relationships difficult."

That story did escape from the principal and was printed in Klugman's paper. But, as Klugman says, "we have no idea how many stories are killed that never see the light of print."

32 dead, 41 injured in freight train disaster

TEHUACAN, Mexico — Rescuers used shovels and cranes to search for victims after a runaway freight train burst from the tracks at a busy highway intersection, crushing cars and smashing buildings in this southern town.

The death toll in Tuesday's wreck stood at 32, making it one of the worst Mexican railroad tragedies in memory. Hospital officials said at least 41 other people were treated for injuries.

Luis Gonzalez Castellon, who is coordinating the investigation, said earlier reports that more bodies were found in the debris, bringing the toll to 36, were false.

Officials were investigating reports that after the train's brakes failed, the crew uncoupled some cars and leapt to safety while the rest of the train — with no one at the controls — sped up to more than 50 mph and derailed.

Soldiers and federal highway police searched for more victims through the night in this picturesque community known for its bottled mineral water by the same name.

President Carlos Salinas issued a statement of condolence to families of the victims, most of whom lived in the Tehuacan area, 120 miles southeast of Mexico City.

The force of the derailment hurled some of the heavy railroad cars more than 40 yards from the tracks, scattering twisted steel and powdery concrete dust as well as the sorghum the train was carrying.

Investigators said 19 cars waiting at a busy highway intersection on the northern edge of Tehuacan were crushed or damaged. Five buildings, including a discotheque and a restaurant, were damaged.

But the 12:30 p.m. accident spared a nearby school.

Herbe Ponciano Mokul, a federal district attorney heading a four-person investigative team, told reporters the locomotive had apparently lost its brakes but refused to elaborate.

North, South Korea agree to eliminate nuclear weapons

The Communist North is still refusing to allow international inspection of its nuclear facilities.

check its nuclear facilities. Nations in the region have become alarmed over intelligence reports that the North is nearing capability to produce nuclear warheads.

The North Koreans deny they are trying to produce nuclear weapons. But they say they will not open their nuclear program to inspection until inspections confirm no nuclear weapons remain at U.S. bases in South Korea and South Korea removes itself from the U.S. nuclear umbrella protection.

President Bush announced in September that U.S. tactical nuclear weapons would be withdrawn from South Korea. On Nov. 8, South Korean President Roh Tae-woo pledged his country would not make, possess or deploy nuclear weapons and challenged North Korea to do the same.

Reports of a Wednesday agreement came after a border meeting between officials preparing for talks Dec. 10-13 between prime ministers of the two nations, which have been bitterly divided into Communist North and capitalist South since the end of World War II.

The meeting occurred when Secretary of U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney visited South Korea for defense consultations that focused on the North's nuclear development.

SEOUL, South Korea — Communist North Korea agreed in principle Wednesday to a call to rid the Korean peninsula of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, government sources said.

If confirmed, the agreement could signal a change in the North's resistance to a pact with rival South Korea on eliminating weapons of mass destruction.

Sources speaking on condition of anonymity cautioned that it was premature to expect North Korea to bow to world pressure and open its nuclear facilities to international inspection. But one said tentative agreement could lead to future negotiations.

The national news agency Yonhap also reported an accord, but then quoted Lee Dong-bok, one of three South Korean delegates at the meeting, as denying the North had done so. Lee could not be located for comment.

CAMBODIA

Sihanouk named as president amid hopes for reconstruction

Denis D. Gray
Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — The government named Prince Norodom Sihanouk as president Wednesday, giving him additional stature in Cambodia's struggle toward reconciliation.

Cambodia's leaders said they were creating a dual presidency, to be occupied by Sihanouk and Heng Samrin, the country's current president. The colorless Heng Samrin, installed by Vietnam after it invaded Cambodia in 1978, has little power and is said to be ill with typhoid.

A statement from the Vietnam-backed government said Sihanouk will remain president until the 1993 elections and that he might again become king, a position he abdicated in 1955.

The statement said the Phnom Penh government and the People's Party of Cambodia were determined to create favorable conditions for Sihanouk "to accomplish his royal mission of national reconciliation and national reconstruction."

It called on everyone to vote for Sihanouk in the 1993 elections "so that he can provide a long-lasting protection for his children."

The 69-year-old Sihanouk returned to the Cambodian capital from 13 years in exile last week. His return followed the formal end to the civil war last month with the signing of a peace treaty in Paris.

Sihanouk's new duties were not defined, and it was unclear how much power the position would give him. The real powers in Phnom Penh have been Premier Hun Sen and Chea Sim, who heads the former Communist Party.

The prince already heads the Supreme National Council, a group composed of leaders from the four factions in this Southeast Asian country of nearly 7 million people. The council is to pave the way for U.N.-sponsored elections in 1993.

Sihanouk had previously been allied with the two groups, in a guerrilla coalition opposed to Hun Sen's government.

FRANCE

Group poses anti-immigration

David Crary

Associated Press

PARIS, France — The far-right National Front has given France's divided political establishment a target for common outrage, proposing a 50-point anti-immigration program that critics liken to apartheid and Nazism.

"I hope this scandal will wake up the French," Kofi Yamgnane, an immigrant from Togo who now serves as a deputy Cabinet minister, said Wednesday. "I hope the French have learned that Front leader Jean-Marie Le Pen is an extremely dangerous man."

The 50 "concrete measures" were unveiled last weekend by Le Pen's deputy, Bruno Megret, at a political rally in Marseille.

Among the most controversial were proposals to use chartered boats to deport foreigners and to establish guarded camps to hold those awaiting expulsion.

Other measures would invalidate naturalizations granted as far back as 1974, base future naturalizations on blood ties rather than residency of one's parents, outlaw dual citizenship, restrict the establishment of mosques, allow only a set quota of immigrants in each public school class and halt assistance payments to immigrant families.

Regarding employment, Megret said foreign workers should be fired first in the event of layoffs, and proposed separate social security systems for French and foreign workers. He proposed use of a new manufacturing label — "Made in France by the French."

Foreign students should receive scholarships only if they pledge to leave France after their studies, he said.

"When will foreigners living in France have to start wearing a star?" asked centrist political leader Bernard Stasi, alluding to Nazi decrees that forced Jews to wear the Star of David.

He said the National Front "clearly wants France to be the new land of apartheid."

Many politicians and anti-racism activists said Megret's proposals evoked the Vichy regime of World War II, when French officials collaborated with the Nazis implemented discriminatory laws against French Jews.

"It's the return of a dark, fascist tradition that we had thought was forgotten," said Jean Auroux, leader of the governing Socialists' caucus in the National Assembly.

Immigration, specifically the presence of hundreds of thousands of Muslims from North Africa, has been France's most troublesome social issue for years as unemployment rose and violence worsened in low-income housing projects.

Opinion polls consistently show Le Pen's support at 10 to 15 percent.

be on the UI payroll. The vice president for statewide health services will be UI Hospitals and Clinics Director John Colloton, whose salary will be paid by the hospital.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Peter Nathan's new title will be provost, signifying his role as chief academic officer above the vice president for health sciences.

Board members suggested the addition of another new position, associate vice president for health sciences, who would help add emphasis to undergraduate education.

Rawlings said he approved of the idea, and it would be included in discussions in the 18 months prior to reorganization.

Finance and University Services

Regents approved the appointment of Doug True, UI assistant vice president and treasurer, as interim vice president for finance and university services to replace Susan Phillips, who will resign Dec. 2 to take her seat on the Federal Reserve Board.

True has been treasurer at the UI since 1988 and was appointed assistant vice president in July. He served as director of business and finance for the regents from 1985 to 1988. His salary will be $100,000.

Pomerantz delivered a "bittersweet" message to Phillips. "We couldn't be more proud, and saddened, that you're leaving. You're the best who has ever been in your position," he said.

Daum Hall

The regents received a presentation by Deloitte and Touche on possible uses of Daum Hall.

A focus group study showed students' five priorities — price, proximity, safety, flexible board plans and a peaceful environment — could be accommodated without physical redesign of the building.

The UI proposed that Daum Hall remain open, and physical modifications be postponed until the effectiveness of programmatic changes is measured. The regents postponed further discussion on the matter until the next meeting.

Proposed changes based on conclusions from the study include the following: targeting freshmen and sophomores; moving toward double and single rooms; expanding board plan flexibility; designating upper-class floors; redefining the role of RAs; and informing parents and students on price issues.

showing the film. "I do not intend to prosecute the people involved. The reason is that the understanding in respect to sexually explicit acts has grown over the years. They had very little understanding that the scene was in violation," White said.

"From today forward, anyone showing the film with that scene will be subject to prosecution," he said.

During the press conference White reviewed the Iowa law that defines obscenity and said that while the film was considered "offensive to a great number of people," it lacked the qualifications to be considered obscene.

"To be considered obscene the material has to lack any serious literary, scientific or political value. My conclusion is that there is not evidence that proves beyond a reasonable doubt that the film lacks this," White said.

"If the one specific scene is masked, I have no legal reason why it could not be shown. Now it is a matter of policy."

Following the press conference Buck said the film would be shown, with the scene cited by White blacked out by holding a piece of cardboard over the projector when the scene appeared.

After Rawlings issued the statement denying permission to show the film, Buck said, "The university has not given any good reason why we can't show it. This is blatant censorship. There should be no problem if we omit the one section. White stated directly it would be OK to show it if this part was omitted."

White's decision was outlined in a four-page letter handed out at the press conference. The consensus among UI administrators was that White's letter was too complex to make a decision at this time regarding whether the film can be shown. In order to reach a policy decision, they said, other films in the university library may have to be reviewed for offensive content.

Rawlings said the process will be looked over by legal advisers in his office. There is no time frame for the decision, but it will take "a very long time," he said.

"My sense is that the university acted responsibly in its view of the primacy of free speech and that the showing of the film is inappropriate in this case," said Vice President for Academic Affairs Peter Nathan.

"The cancellation was very much a context decision. The university felt it would have been senseless to expose students and faculty to criminal sanctions," he added.

the rest of the body, but that was the only time they really mistreated me."

Sutherland said his captors told him they originally wanted to kidnap the president of the American University, not him.

"I am happy they didn't get him, but I wish they hadn't got me," he said.

Military officials said the Scottish-born Sutherland of Estes Park, Colo., would return home to the United States today on a commercial flight.

He said he wanted to eventually return to his job.

Sutherland dwelt on the plight of those left behind, remarking:

"Bearing in mind that my great friend, Terry Anderson, whom I've come to admire, respect and love over the last six and a half years that we've been lying on the floor and chained to the wall together, 23 hours and 50 minutes a day — he's still there. He's not chained to the wall anymore; he talked them out of keeping the chain on since he was just going to be alone and they figure he wasn't going to be dangerous anymore.

"But he's still there, and I hope that plans ... will indeed be carried through such that Terry will be free like us, that Joe Cicippio and Alann Steen will likewise be soon free, and that this drama for the Americans will be ended forever."

And not just "our hostages," he made clear "... I hope also that all hostages will be released in the very near future."

News Agency, in a dispatch from Beirut, said Cicippio "stood a better chance" of being freed first than the two other Americans still held in Lebanon — Terry Anderson and Alann Steen.

The prediction that Cicippio would be freed after more than five years of captivity cheered his family in Norristown, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia.

"We've been waiting an awful long time for this to happen. ... We hope to see Joseph in the very near future," said Thomas Cicippio, the captive's brother.

Cicippio's wife, Elham, reached by telephone at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut where she works, said, "It's great. I'm glad. It's good news."

Also Wednesday, an Iranian newspaper that has accurately predicted previous hostage releases reported that one or two hostages could be freed within two weeks.

guarantees and $1 billion in humanitarian help. Madigan said the administration might provide additional aid next year.

Recognizing the breakup of the Soviet central government, Bush earmarked the new assistance for the republics, with the federal government acting as an agent. Madigan said most of the money will be used to buy feed grains for poultry and livestock.

Madigan said the 12 republics had signed an agreement that spells out how much assistance each will receive and commits them, individually and collectively, to repaying the debt.

Until now, Bush had been reluctant to deal with the republics out of a desire to avoid undercutting Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. However, there is a growing recognition in the administration that the central government is collapsing as the republics assert control.

The program includes $1.25 billion in credit guarantees and $165 million in outright grants for emergency food purchases and technical assistance. He said the United States also will set up a model farm in the St. Petersburg area and develop wholesale markets around Moscow and Kiev to instruct Soviet farmers and food distributors.

The credit guarantees will be available in stages, with $500 million available immediately and $250 million released monthly in February, March and April.

Although the republics are strapped for cash, Madigan said American taxpayers should not worry that the Soviets will default on the loans.

"I'd suggest that on the basis of our history with these people to date that there isn't any likelihood of that at all because they've always paid us in the past and they are current on their obligations with us now, and they will be more payments due from them or by them before all of these credits are able to be used."

NBA Magic wants a team

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson is taking steps toward realizing his dream of owning an NBA team, but that team apparently won't be the Los Angeles Lakers.

Johnson, who retired from the Lakers 12 days ago after testing positive for the virus that causes AIDS, said Tuesday night that he had talked informally with team owner Jerry Buss about buying the Lakers.

However, a spokesman for Buss said he isn't selling.

"He has no intention of selling the Lakers," Bob Steiner said. "He plans to have his children run the team after him."

Johnson recently talked to NBA commissioner David Stern about buying a team and they discussed five that could be available. Johnson would not name the teams.

Smith can talk to USC

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State athletic director Jim Jones said Wednesday that his office has sent a letter which would enable former Buckeye tailback Robert Smith to discuss a transfer to Southern Cal.

Smith left the Ohio State team in August, saying that the coaching staff did not give academics a high priority. He is currently attending classes at Ohio State and is on a track scholarship.

Smith spoke with Jones Monday and requested a letter which could lead to a transfer to Southern Cal, his second choice when he selected Ohio State in the spring of 1990.

"We had a chat, let's put it that way," Jones said of the meeting. "It's important that we sat and chatted. We certainly aren't enemies."

Meanwhile, NCAA regulations prohibit officials at Southern Cal from discussing a potential transfer until a release has been received from the other school.

"Robert Smith contacted us, but we immediately told him that we couldn't talk to him until we received a letter of release from Ohio State," Southern Cal coach Larry Smith said Wednesday. "We have not received that letter yet."

BASEBALL

Mike Scott retires

HOUSTON — Mike Scott, who led Houston to the NL West title in 1986, told the Astros on Wednesday that he will retire.

Scott, 36, had surgery last winter on his right shoulder to repair a labrum tear. He made two starts in 1991, going 0-2 with a 12.86 ERA in seven innings, and then went on the disabled list with a sore shoulder.

Scott, who made $2,337,500 last season, was eligible to file for free agency earlier this month but did not. His retirement had been expected.

Scott, the only Cy Young winner in Houston's history, was honored on Sept. 25, the fifth anniversary of his no-hitter against the Giants that clinched the division title.

NFL

Green Bay's Braatz fired

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Green Bay Packers on Wednesday fired operations vice president Tom Braatz, who oversaw four losing seasons during his five years with the team.

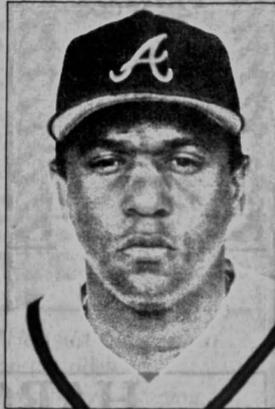

Green Bay decided not to renew Braatz's contract, which expires at the end of January, Packers President Bob Harlan said at a news conference.

"It's something I've been looking at for a long time," Harlan said. "I think we need a new direction — a strong football person who comes from a winning background," he said.

Braatz, 58, has overseen the Packers' football operations for the past five years. During that time, the Packers had four losing seasons, but finished 10-6 in 1989.

Green Bay is 2-9 this season.

Pendleton edges Bonds in MVP voting

Terry Pendleton

Ed Shearer
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Terry Pendleton of the Atlanta Braves won the National League's Most Valuable Player Award on Wednesday, beating Barry Bonds of Pittsburgh in the closest election since 1979.

Pendleton, who signed with the Braves as a free agent and won his first NL batting title, got 274 points from the Baseball Writers Association of America to 259 for Bonds, who won the MVP award in 1990.

Pendleton received 12 first-place votes, 10 seconds and two thirds in the balloting. Bonds got 10 firsts, 10 seconds, one third and three fourths.

The last time the NL balloting was this close was in 1979, when Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh and Keith Hernandez of St. Louis each got 216 votes, the only tie in MVP voting.

Pendleton's victory gave the Braves three of the BBWAA's four NL awards. Bobby Cox won Manager of the Year and Tom Glavine won the Cy Young Award.

"I never dreamed about winning the National League MVP award," Pendleton said. "I dreamed about winning it in the playoffs or World Series, but anybody could win it in a short series."

Still, he said, the award was only a consolation prize. "What I really wanted this year was a World Championship ring. That's what I show up at spring training every year for," he said.

Pendleton noted that the award reflects the success of the Braves, who went from last place to NL champs. "If we had finished second I don't think I'd be standing here now. I'll say we've come a long way in a short time."

The 31-year-old Pendleton hit .319 — 52 points above his career average — and won the batting title by one point over Hal Morris of Cincinnati. Pendleton had a career-high 22 home runs and 86 RBIs.

Bonds didn't raise his average above .200 until late May, but was the catalyst as the Pirates became the first NL East champion to repeat since Philadelphia in 1978.

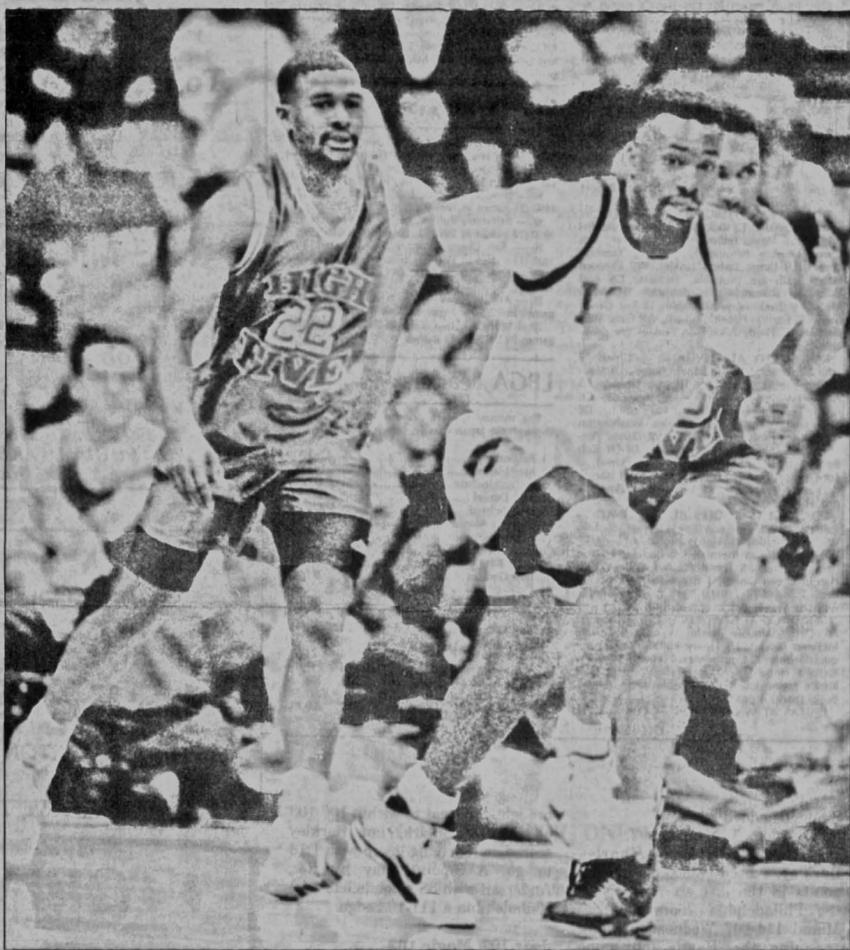

He finished with a .292 average, 25 homers and 116 RBIs, numbers that rivaled his 1990 statistics — a .301 average with 33 homers and 114 RBIs. Bonds also had 13 assists and is expected to again win a Gold Glove.

Bonds' teammate, Bobby Bonilla, finished third in the voting with 191 points. Will Clark of the San Francisco Giants was fourth with 118 and Howard Johnson of the New York Mets was fifth with 112.

Pendleton became only the second Atlanta player to win the MVP award. Dale Murphy won it twice, in 1982 and 1983. Bob Elliott won the MVP in 1947 when the Braves were in Boston and Hank Aaron won it in 1957, when the Braves were in Milwaukee.

Pendleton was bothered by a left hamstring pull in 1990 and his average slumped to .230 with six homers and 58 RBIs in 121 games. After spending his first six-plus seasons with the Cardinals, he signed with Atlanta as a free agent. See PENDLETON, Page 2B

Davis awards point spot to Val Barnes

James Arnold
Daily Iowan

It didn't take long for Val Barnes to make his presence felt for the Hawkeyes this season.

Tom Davis announced Wednesday that the junior from Wichita, Kan., has taken over the point guard spot from Troy Skinner.

"Val played real well," Davis said at his press conference. "He clearly was the better point guard, so you start him and hope it works well for both people."

Barnes was forced into the "one spot" after sophomore Kevin Smith was forced to the sidelines due to academic troubles.

Barnes scored only five points in the Hawkeyes' win over the Ukrainian National team, but hit Iowa's only 3-pointer in the contest. Against the High Five team, Barnes came off the bench and led the Hawkeyes to a 105-67 win. He dished out eight assists and scored 14 points, playing 27 minutes to Skinner's 16.

"We need them both, there's no question about that," Davis said. "It's who deserves to play."

Last season, Barnes averaged 11.5 points per game and was an honorable mention all-Big Ten selection. This season, Barnes has received even more praise — named as one of the top 100 players in the country by Basketball Almanac and honorable mention all-America by Street and Smith.

Barnes said he has been working hard on the position in practice since the loss of Smith, and hopes to continue playing well.

"It's been kind of difficult, but Coach Davis hasn't given up on me so I'm not going to give up," Barnes said. "I'm just going to try to keep working and try and get better at it."

After the High Five game, Barnes said that he didn't have a preference between the one and two positions, but would change his mind if he keeps playing well.

"I still don't have one," Barnes said, "but I'm beginning to like the one a little bit more than I did."

The odd man out is Skinner. The senior from Palmer, Iowa, has one more year to prove the critics wrong about his poor shooting percentage — but will now have to earn the starting job back.

Skinner shot poorly in Iowa's only exhibitions — going 2-10 and 2-8 from 3-point range. Davis said the reason for the change was because Barnes was playing well, not because Skinner was playing badly.

"(Skinner's) going to shoot well. He only took four shots in that first game — three of them for three," Davis said. "He missed three 3-pointers; that's pretty easy to do. He doesn't get many easy shots that build up your percentage. When he has an 0-4 night, you have to understand."

Skinner is not out of the chase, however. Davis said his starting. See BARNES, Page 2B

Jackson becomes one-sport Bo

John Nadel
Associated Press

Bo must have known, but now it's official — to the surprise of very few, football is not part of his future any longer.

He's just one-sport Bo again. "You had to think all along his doctors were going to recommend he not play the game," Los Angeles Raiders coach Art Shell said Wednesday at the team's headquarters in El Segundo, Calif. "Obviously, they told him he shouldn't play football anymore, and he's going to live with that."

Jackson said a day earlier in Chicago that he's strictly a one-sport athlete from now on, and that sport is baseball.

"As far as I'm concerned, I have to do what my doctors told me," Jackson said. "I can't argue with it."

Jackson's announcement that he would not play football again was made at a Chicago sporting-goods store that was featuring his athletic equipment. It came a month after he failed a physical with the Raiders.

A 6-foot-1, 230-pounder with blinding speed, Jackson sustained what turned out to be a career-ending hip injury early in the third quarter of the Raiders' 20-10 victory over Cincinnati in an NFL playoff game last Jan. 13 when he was tackled at the end of a long run.

Iowa game may be last for Minnesota coaches

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — John Gutekunst, whose Minnesota Gophers will finish with their worst record since 1983 if they lose to Iowa Saturday, will not return for a seventh season as head coach, the Star Tribune reported today.

The newspaper, quoting several unidentified "highly placed university sources," said Gutekunst is expected to resign before or after the season finale at Iowa.

University President Nils Hasselmo, Gutekunst and interim athletic director Dan Meinert declined to comment to the Star Tribune.

KSTP-TV, quoting an unidentified member of Gutekunst's staff, said today that Gutekunst told the staff this morning, "We've all been fired."

But Gutekunst said today at his weekly news conference that nothing has been resolved about his job status yet. He said he plans to have further meetings with Hasselmo.

Asked if he would like to coach the Gophers next year, Gutekunst said, "I'm a football coach, let's put it that way."

Gutekunst met with Hasselmo and Meinert Tuesday night and Meinert told The Associated Press today that no decisions have been made about Gutekunst's job status.

"I'm not going to comment on anything until John and I talk again," Meinert said, adding that he planned to meet with Gutekunst soon, possibly today.

SuperSonics beat Pistons, silence observed for Utley

Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Gary Payton scored seven of his 14 points down the stretch and the Seattle SuperSonics extended their winning streak to four games with a 91-86 victory Wednesday night over the slumping Detroit Pistons.

The Pistons, who won four of their first five games, have lost five of their last six. The 5-6 start is their worst since the 1986-87 season when they also lost six of 11.

Payton's 3-point shot gave the Sonics an 80-68 lead with 5:48 left in the game.

But Joe Dumars scored eight of his 19 points in a run that saw the Pistons cut the deficit to 85-84 with 1:30 remaining. Then Payton scored from underneath the basket on an inbounds play, Ricky Pierce followed with a jumper and the Sonics were out of danger.

Pierce led Seattle with 18 points. Orlando Woolridge scored 25 for Detroit.

Before the game, the Pistons asked for a moment of silence in honor of Mike Utley, the Detroit Lions' offensive guard who was paralyzed from the chest down in a fall during an NFL game Sunday against the Los Angeles Rams.

PHILADELPHIA - Charles Barkley scored nine of his 29 points in the last six minutes as the Philadelphia 76ers held off Miami 114-107 Wednesday night, snapping the Heat's four-game winning streak.
Hersey Hawkins added 27 points for Philadelphia, which moved past Miami into first place in the Atlantic Division.
Philadelphia led by as many as 19 points in the second quarter and held a 91-78 advantage at the end of three periods. But Miami went on a 15-3 run at the start of the fourth quarter, cutting Philadelphia's lead to 94-93 on a rebound basket by Grant Long with 6:24 remaining.
A 3-point shot by Kevin Edwards brought the Heat to within 106-103 at the 1:31 mark, but Barkley scored on a driving layup with 1:13 to go. A 3-point play by Ron Anderson with 38 seconds left gave Philadelphia a 111-103 edge.

Jazz 107, Magic 102

ORLANDO, Fla. - Karl Malone and Jeff Malone each scored 26 points Wednesday night in helping the Utah Jazz withstand a late rally and beat the Orlando Magic 107-102.
The Magic outscored Utah 7-1 in the last two minutes to cut the deficit to 105-102. But Jerry Reynolds turned the ball over beneath the Orlando basket with six seconds left, and Jeff Malone hit two free throws with two seconds remaining.
Thurl Bailey scored 21 points for Utah, 19 in the first half.

NBA

Lakers continue their winning ways A.M.

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — It's six games A.M. (that's After Magic) and the Los Angeles Lakers are the surprising owners of a five-game winning streak.

A 103-95 victory over Phoenix on Tuesday night extended the streak, which is second only to Chicago's current six-game string. What's remarkable is that the wins have come amid the emotional turmoil caused by Magic Johnson's retirement.

The day after Johnson announced he had the virus that causes AIDS, the Lakers traveled to Phoenix and lost to the Suns 113-85. But since then, they have beaten Minnesota, Golden State, Houston, Atlanta and Phoenix.

They are adjusting. There's little question that the presence of Johnson, who led the team to five NBA championships during his 12 seasons, at the last two games and the groundswell of public support for him has put the Lakers on an emotional high.

But how long can it last? "We're taking it one day at a time," coach Mike Dunleavy said. "We understand we've got a long way to go."

In his first appearance at the Forum as a retiree, Johnson sat on the bench during Sunday's 111-89 win over the Hawks and inspired his teammates, slapping high fives and coaching from the sidelines. He did the same Tuesday night.

To keep him around, the Lakers are trying to get the NBA to issue him a waiver that would allow him to sit on the bench through the season. While awaiting the league's response, the team placed him on the injured list Tuesday.

"He's just like a coach on the sidelines," said Sedale Threatt, who succeeded Johnson as point guard. "Everybody's listening. It's still his team, no question about it."

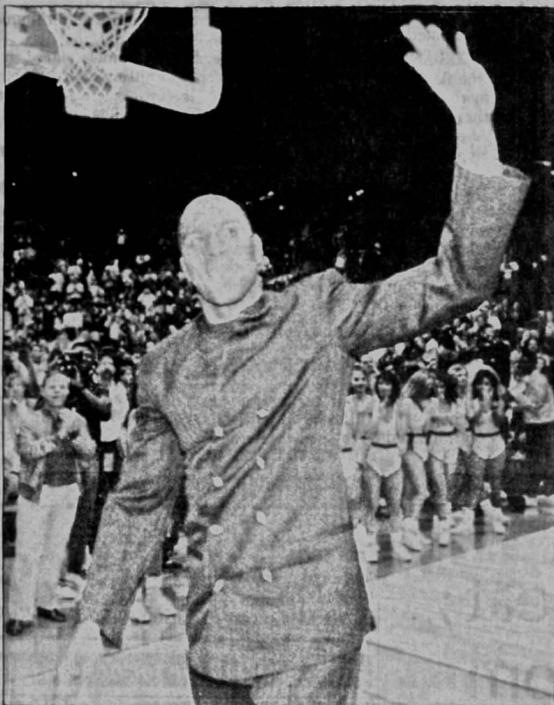

Forward James Worthy said that although Magic is gone, the scheme is still the same.

"We're still trying to run the same plays," he said. "It's the start of the season for us, just like other teams. I don't think our goals are any shorter than in the past."

What's helping the Lakers is their defense and some key contributions from Threatt and others.

Against the Suns, Los Angeles had a season-high 16 steals, including four by Vlade Divac and three by Threatt, who also had eight defensive rebounds. The Lakers have held four of their last five opponents under 100 points.

"We have a different look so we're going to have to win games different ways," forward Sam Perkins said. "One of those ways is defense."

Obtained by the Lakers to continue the role he's played throughout his eight-year career, that of a reserve, Threatt has performed ably as a starter. His 16 points per game are the team's second-best, and he's averaging 7.7 assists.

Terry Teagle has provided a spark off the bench, especially in the last two games. Against the Hawks, he scored 15 points in 18 minutes with a steal and two assists. Ten of his 14 points against Phoenix came in the fourth quarter, four on consecutive long jumpers that gave the Lakers an eight-point lead with just under a minute to play.

"My play has come from getting consistent playing time," he said. "It's all about being on the court. You can't show what you can do sitting on the bench."

Holyfield to defend title against Smokin' Cooper

Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Evander Holyfield and Bert Cooper sought Wednesday to legitimize their Saturday fight in wake of criticism — from sports writers, fans and most recently Mike Tyson — that the match is a sham.

"I was going to fight him, but he went and pulled out," Holyfield retorted when asked about Tyson's ridicule.

Tyson and promoter Don King, in Atlanta Tuesday to help a local Feed the Hungry program, charged that the heavyweight champion was pulling a fast one on the public by facing an unranked boxer.

"This kind of stuff is no good for boxing," King said. "They got Razor Ruddock, Lennox Lewis, George Foreman. You got all those other guys ranked, and he's not fighting them."

Tyson, the former heavyweight champion, missed a chance to reclaim his title from Holyfield because of injured ribs. Holyfield's next opponent, Italian boxer Francesco Damiani, withdrew Sunday after twisting his ankle during practice last Thursday.

Cooper had previously asked to fight Holyfield in November, so Holyfield scheduled him.

The International Boxing Federation and World Boxing Association on Tuesday sanctioned the fight. Holyfield will earn about $6 million and Cooper $750,000.

"We didn't ask Damiani to pull out. We got the first person available," Holyfield said at a news conference Wednesday. "Bert Cooper was the only man that stepped up to take the opportunity. In life, if you're ever going to be the best, you have to step up to the plate and take the opportunity."

Holyfield promoter Dan Duva said the fight is legitimate because Cooper is considered the world's No. 11 boxer. And Cooper will move up when new rankings come out because last month he knocked out No. 9 Joe Hipp, Duva added.

"Regardless of his rank, I call Bert Cooper a desperate man, and a desperate man is a dangerous man," Duva said.

"Evander Holyfield has everything to lose and nothing to gain. Damiani might take 12 rounds, but he's not going to hurt you. Bert Cooper will take you out with one punch."

Cooper promoter Rick Parker insisted the new rankings will rate his boxer No. 9.

"I'm a little bit appalled that people say this is some kind of sham or put-on," Parker said. "King should relax because I am going to do everything to persuade Bert to fight. Tyson after he gets done with Evander Holyfield."

Cooper (26-7) wasn't as verbose. "I'll do all my talking after the fight," was his only comment during the news conference.

Parker predicted the fight will go five or six rounds, until Holyfield's ego causes him to stand in the middle of the ring and punch Bert, and Bert Cooper will KO Evander Holyfield.

Strawberry tells L.A. to can Kal Daniels

Associated Press

Darryl Strawberry takes a swing last season. He took a verbal swing at fellow Dodger Kal Daniels, saying he doesn't want to play hard and should be let go.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Darryl Strawberry, who fled controversy in New York for a more tranquil baseball life, made it through his first season with the Los Angeles Dodgers without causing any ripples. He waited for the offseason.

Mincing no words, Strawberry says the Dodgers should dump Kal Daniels.

"I don't want to deal with what we dealt with last year, a guy like Kal, a player who doesn't want to play," Strawberry said. "Trade Kal. If he doesn't want to play, get him out of here. And you can quote me on that."

Daniels countered by questioning Strawberry's state of mind. "I love the guy like a brother, but if he is going to back-stab me like that, evidently he has a mental problem," Daniels said. "Darryl signed the big contract, and he thinks he's all-world."

"Well, he's not. The first half of the season he was invisible. If he doesn't want to play with me, well, the feeling is mutual."

Daniels played in 137 games in 1991, hitting .249, 49 points below his career average, with 17 homes and 73 RBIs, 10 less homers and 21 less RBIs than the previous year.

"Somebody has to finally say something about him, and I'll be the guy," Strawberry said. "I'm talking about us needing somebody who is determined to play with injuries, somebody who won't get kicked out of a game in the first inning in the pennant race, somebody who always wants to be there."

"When it comes to winning, you can't have players who do some of the stuff that Kal did. Others agree with me. Of course they do."

But Daniels, who has arthritis in both knees, said "nobody plays with injuries like I do. I'm in pain every day, but you never hear me complain. Darryl complained the whole first half about his shoulder."

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Indiana is team to beat; Ohio St. and Iowa loom

Joe Mooshil
Associated Press

It seems strange picking a team that has lost its last two games as the favorite in the talent-laden Big Ten. But, then, that's the way it is when dealing with Bob Knight's Indiana Hoosiers.

Forget the loss to Kansas in the NCAA regionals last season. And the one to UCLA last week in the Tip-Off Classic. Knight has the kind of talent he likes to mold into a team gradually.

"I just don't think we are capable of playing against a really good team at this point," Knight said after the 87-72 loss to UCLA.

Maybe not at this point. But by season's end, Knight should have the conference title in pocket with a shot at his fourth national championship.

In Calbert Cheaney, Indiana has one of the best players in the country. He is surrounded by an excellent cast that includes seniors Eric Anderson and Jamal Meeks and renowned sophomore Damon Bailey. Freshman Alan Henderson also could be a factor.

Indiana's main threat in the conference again will come from Ohio State. The two teams shared the title last season, but neither could get any farther than the round of sixteen in the NCAA.

Jimmy Jackson, the Big Ten Player of the Year, is back with the Buckeyes. Coach Randy Ayers again has the backcourt tandem of Mark Baker and Jamaal Brown but will miss bruisers Perry Carter and Treg Lee.

Former Hoosier Lawrence Funderburke joins the Buckeyes and will wear watching.

Iowa and possibly Michigan could be title contenders.

Coach Tom Davis at Iowa has everyone back from a team that reached the second round of the NAAs before losing to eventual champion Duke.

Acie Earl, a 6-foot-10 sophomore, has developed into a shot blocking force. Wade Lookingham rejoins Iowa after a year as a medical redshirt.

Michigan, the 1989 NCAA champion, is coming off its first losing season since 1982. But Steve Fisher has recruited an outstanding class.

The "Fabulous Five" include Chris Webber, Jalen Rose, Juwan Howard, Jimmy King and Ray Jackson.

"The freshmen at Michigan can play," Illinois coach Lou Henson said. "Michigan has the ability to win it all."

Despite NCAA sanctions, Illinois had an outstanding season by finishing in a third-place tie with Michigan State, last year's pre-season favorite.

Henson lost leading scorer Andy Kaufmann because of academics, so he will have an all-sophomore starting lineup headed by Deon Thomas and Rennie Clemons.

Jud Heathcote, the Michigan State logician, lost Steve Smith and summed up his chances by saying "if Mike Peplowski, Matt Steigenga, Mark Montgomery and Dwayne Stephens play like they did last year, we're not very good. If they emerge as players, we'll be okay."

An axiom in the Big Ten is never underestimate Purdue under Gene Keady.

Keedy will be without Glenn Robinson, prop 48, this season. Matt Painter, Craig Riley and Woody Austin return. Freshman Cuonzo Martin should help.

At Minnesota, Clem Haskins will have a sophomore lineup that went through growing pains last season. Players to watch are Randy Carter, Dana Jackson and Ernest Nzigamasabo.

Steve Yoder led his entire starting lineup and will have to rebuild through reserves. But he has an outstanding freshman in Michael Finley, and Tracy Webster (prop 48) is eligible this season.

Northwestern was winless in the conference and finished last for the seventh straight season. The Wildcats should break the string with leading scorer Todd Leslie back and the development of sophomores Kevin Rankin and Pat Baldwin.

In the Big Eight, Oklahoma State under Eddie Sutton is favored. Sutton returned to his alma mater last year and led the Cowboys to a share of the title with Kansas and into the final 16 in the NCAA.

"This team potentially can be better," said Sutton. One reason is the return of Byron Houston. Two others are 7-foot freshman Bryant Reeves and 6-9 Randy Davis.

Kansas went all the way to the championship game before losing to Duke. But the Jayhawks lost three starters, including Mark Randall and Mike Maddox. Coach Roy Williams has Adonis Jordan and Alonzo Jamison back plus 6-8 Ben Davis.

Oklahoma and Billy Tubbs had an off-season at 20-15 and had to settle for the NIT after eight straight NCAA appearances. The Sooners figure to contend with four starters returning, including Jeff Webster.

Missouri won its last six but couldn't play in the NCAA. The Tigers lost Doug Smith but have Anthony Peeler back.

Nebraska had a 26-8 record but will be without Rich King, its leading scorer and rebounder. Iowa State, Kansas State and Colorado will bring up the rear.

Elsewhere, DePaul is no longer an independent. Joey Meyer's Blue Demons have joined the newly created Great Midwest Conference that includes Memphis State, Cincinnati, Marquette, Alabama-Birmingham and St. Louis.

DePaul, loaded with talent but no superstar, should win it with arguments from Memphis State and Cincinnati.

There are three new coaches in the Missouri Valley Conference, but dean Rich Herrin at Southern Illinois has lots of talent including Ashraf Amaya. Wichita State could challenge the Salukis.

Xavier should repeat in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, cut to six teams with the defection of St. Louis and Marquette to the GMC. Evansville and Dayton will battle for the important second spot since two teams will get byes in the MCC tournament.

Eastern Michigan lost five of its first six players from the team that won the Mid-American title and defeated Mississippi State and Penn State in the NAAs. Ball State with Chandler Thompson and Ohio with Louis Geter are the top contenders.

Wisconsin-Green Bay should win the Mid-Continent and repeat its trip to the NCAA with coach Dick Bennett's son, Tony, returning. Wright State, a newcomer to the league, will be Green Bay's chief challenger.

BANDS

The Rockodiles will spice up your Saturday night at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St.

The Rockodiles jump-start your jambalaya Saturday at Gabe's

Brett Ratner
Daily Iowan

Iowa's "swamp rock" kings, the Rockodiles, take time out from the recording studio to treat Iowa City to their unique blend of traditional Southern styles Saturday at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St.

"This weekend we will feature an even more varied group of styles," said singer/guitarist/songwriter Kevin Gordon. The band's sound is already a swirling concoction of blues, rockabilly, country, Cajun and zydeco. According to Gordon, the added spice of new songs like "King of Kings," a "speed metal gospel tune," makes the Rockodiles one of the most versatile bands in the area.

They are one of the most authentic as well. As exhibited on their debut release, Carnival Time, the band takes full advantage of Gordon and multi-instrumentalist Mitch Moss' Louisiana heritage.

Moss, who hails from the southern part of the state, adds a Cajun flair that complements Gordon's deep blues background — inherent to the northeast region. "We try to mix it up into a rootsy blend but try not to make it predictable," said Gordon.

Add to that the solid backbeat compliments of Mike Murray and Steve Hayes, two of I.C.'s most prolific musicians, and you have a spicy-hot, Southern sonic feast that shouldn't be missed.

The band is currently putting the finishing touches on a new album which is scheduled for a January release. Those too impatient to wait can rest assured because the band plans to showcase several of these tunes Saturday.

Gordon stresses that the show's variety will provide something for everyone to enjoy.

"People often think about us as a blues band in the stock sense of the word, but that's only part of our background," said Gordon. "Our versatility is our strong point, and our mix of influences enables us to put a degree of energy and spontaneity that otherwise we couldn't have."

READING

Reading by Fowler in IC tonight

Kimberly Chun
Daily Iowan

Tonight author Karen Joy Fowler will take readers to a Victorian-era America in which few have ventured. Fowler will read from her latest work "Sarah Canary" at Prairie Lights tonight at 8.

Fowler's novel follows the erratic trail of a mysterious, wild and perhaps mad woman called Sarah Canary and the colorful assortment of characters who pursue her on through the 19th-century Northwest. Chin, a Chinese railway worker, leads the string of outsiders — an insane-asylum escapee, a free-love suffragette — in a chase after Canary that results in what Kirkus calls "a baroque tale of mystery, cruelty and wonder."

In a phone interview last week, Fowler claimed "Sarah Canary" was inspired by a historical incident that she had come across and recounts in the novel.

"An Indian had murdered a Chinese cook at the asylum for the insane," said Fowler. "He was sentenced to hang, but the whites in the town were outnumbered by the Indians in the area and were afraid of reprisal. So they stopped a transient Chinese man who happened to be passing through the town and made him execute the murderer. I was troubled and fascinated by the story, particularly by the Chinese man, why he agreed to do it, and mostly what happened to him. I tried to imagine the answer to these questions, and that's where the story started."

Historically peripheral characters such as Chin are pushed to the forefront of Fowler's novel. "With Chin, I also wanted to look at the appalling literary convention of the minority sidekick," said Fowler. "I wanted to deal with the way some people in our culture are invisible or perceived only in a supporting role."

Fowler came to writing after completing her graduate work in Northeast Asian politics. She believes that her fictional subjects have been somewhat influenced by her academic work.

"The subjects that fascinate me are cross-cultural — when one culture bumps up against another — and the historical accidents that happen because of that," said Fowler.

Throughout "Sarah Canary," one is struck by the excerpts of historical events which punctuate "Sarah Canary"'s narrative.

"I can't explain the excerpts artistically; I just found those incidents all intrinsically interesting," said Fowler. "I think the color tends to bleed out of history over time. We lose a sense of how colorful it was, all the different voices, all the strange and improbable events."

"It seemed that when I read of 1873, the era resembled nothing so much as the '60s with its sexual cults, a very radical feminist movement, a devastating war the country was still reeling from and veterans returning from war. I wanted those sections to give a richer picture than what one might expect of the Victorian period — that it was quiet and sedate — when it was anything but."

Following Fowler's reading, Eurudice will also read from her work.

Jackson provokes audiences with new 'Black or White' video

Falak Kagda
Daily Iowan

Reportedly 500 million people tuned in last Thursday night when Michael Jackson burst back onto the music video scene, generating a frenzy of attention and controversy with his latest video "Black or White."

Stay up late and watch it. It begins with Macaulay Culkin blasting Dad, George Wendt, out the roof of the house and ends with Homer Simpson yelling at Bart to turn it off. In between, there's Culkin rapping that he's "not going to spend my life just being a color" — ironic considering how much Jackson's skin color has lightened over the years. Arguably, the best scene is the lip-synching male and female faces of all shapes, sizes and colors melting into one another.

As the camera pulls away from the last face, a black panther slinks away from the set and is transformed into Jackson. He strides down a deserted alley and readies his hands at his hips in a stance right out of "Gunsmoke." Jackson's silent dance moves suggest combat. He smashes the windows of a car and, reminiscent of "Do the Right Thing," hurls a trash can through a store window. Throughout, Jackson spins, squeals, and grabs his crotch. It ends with Jackson transformed back into the black panther.

It is the apparent violence and the crotch-grabbing that has grabbed the attention of critics. Bowing to pressure, Jackson says he will cut the sequence from the video. But I ask myself, why would Jackson include that scene? And why all the outrage? No one says anything when Madonna grabs her crotch or when Schwarzenegger blows everything to high heaven.

I think Jackson means to convey that the gang violence, the street warfare, the cowboy-gunfight stuff is egotistic, macho self-indulgence.

He's saying that we need to zip it up like he zips up his fly. And the transformations, reflecting the Black Panther Movement, emphasizes that his message is particularly directed at blacks. But his intent is unclear. He'd be better off making a public service announcement.

And the outrage? Madonna's crotch-grabbing is OK because women have nothing down there really to grab. And violence is OK when some white he-man is the perpetrator, but Jackson has to cut it from his video. "Black or White," man or woman — unfortunately, it does matter.
