Sioson fund requests donations at football game

Members of the Miya Sioson fund-raising committee will once again be stationed at the entrances of Kinnick Stadium Saturday to ask football fans to contribute to her general assistance fund.

Fund-raisers hope to generate $60,000, the amount estimated needed to cover educational and living expenses for Sioson, who was paralyzed in the Nov. 1 shootings. Approximately $27,000 has been collected to date.

Sioson is in serious condition at UI Hospitals and Clinics following surgery earlier this week to remove the bullet from her spine.

Trial for anti-abortionists set for Dec. 5

The trial date for area anti-abortionists charged with blocking entrances at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., on Sept. 3 was set Thursday at a pre-trial conference.

The trials of Renee Downs, Darrin Hood, William Dix, Tony Nuvaro, Bruce Dahlem and William Patchett have been set for Dec. 5 at 1:30 p.m. Porfirio Mendoza, also charged in the demonstrations, was tried Thursday, found guilty and fined $100 plus surcharge and court costs.

Also, Nuvaro was found guilty of disorderly conduct and obstructing the passage of Dr. Robert Kretschmar, the medical director of the Emma Goldman Clinic, into the clinic on Aug. 14.

Area Eagle stores noted for fund raising

The Iowa state Senate has awarded the Iowa City and Coralville Eagle stores a certificate of recognition for their participation in a fund-raising drive that raised over $2 million for computers and software for participating schools.

State Sen. Richard Varn and Rep. Bob Dvorsky presented the awards to store managers last week.

Santa Claus is coming to town

Santa Claus is coming to Iowa City this weekend.

Led by the Scottish Highlanders, Santa will travel through the Pedestrian Mall in a horse-drawn carriage Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. Upon arriving at the Old Capitol Center, he will be available to children for pictures until 4 p.m.

Santa will draw the winner of the Downtown Association's $5,000 Shopping Extravaganza at 4 p.m.

Magicians and storytellers will be performing, and children will be able to help Santa light the downtown Christmas lights.

Egyptian Ghali is new U.N. secretary-general

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council on Thursday chose Boutros Ghali of Egypt as the new U.N. secretary-general, marking a victory for African diplomats who insisted it was their turn to lead the United Nations.

Ghali, the 69-year-old Egyptian deputy prime minister, will take office on Jan. 1, succeeding Javier Perez de Cuellar of Peru, who announced his retirement after serving five-year terms.

A special session in international law who played a key role in talks that led to the 1979 Egypt-Israel peace treaty, Ghali received 11 "yes" votes and four abstentions from the 15-member Security Council.

Bush signs Civil Rights Act

William M. Welch
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush signed a civil rights bill Thursday that he said would "fight the evil of discrimination" and tried to silence a new furor over race by withdrawing a tentative order to end government hiring preferences for blacks and women.

"For the past few years the issue of civil rights legislation has divided America," Bush said. "No more."

But the political divisions that sustained a two-year congressional fight over the civil rights bill, and prompted Bush to veto a similar measure last year, remained sharp.

The new law negates Supreme Court decisions that made it more difficult for minorities to win lawsuits charging job discrimination by employers. It also expands the rights of women and religious minorities to sue and collect damages for job discrimination, including sexual harassment.

It was Bush's agreement to support a modified version of the bill, and drop his potent political argument that it would prompt employers to resort to racial quotas, that brought overwhelming congressional passage.

However, Bush signed the Civil Rights Act of 1991 in a Rose Garden ceremony that was overshadowed by the storm of controversy over a proposed presidential affirmative-action order circulated Wednesday evening to government agencies. Most Democrats stayed away from the signing in protest.

The order would have ended preferential hiring and promotions for women and minorities and dropped federal guidelines for hiring practices that the courts apply to private businesses — rules that had their start in the Nixon administration and have been in place for two decades.

UI reverses prohibition; screening uneventful

Diana Wallace
and Wendy Alesch
Daily Iowan

The film "Taxi zum Klo" was shown in the Union Thursday night after the UI administration backed down from its earlier prohibition on the screening. The UI's reversal followed a warning from the state attorney general's office that such a prior restraint would be in violation of the First Amendment.

The sold-out screening, which was attended by about 100 people, generated a mostly low-key response. Audience members seemed to enjoy the film, a comical autobiographical portrayal of a gay schoolteacher living in Berlin. They laughed during the humorous parts and displayed no conspicuous reaction to the more explicit scenes.

As predicted, one scene which depicted a boy rubbing his hand against a man's crotch was blacked out by holding a piece of notebook paper over the projector as the scene appeared. This first elicited boos, then brought uproarious laughter from the audience. As the scene progressed, the paper was moved downward so that only the lower half of the screen — the half containing the groin areas — was covered.

Another controversial scene, which depicted one man urinating on another, was absent from the film — apparently having been edited out prior to the showing.

A discussion followed the movie, but 80 to 90 percent of the audience left when it was over. General reactions to the film seemed to be that the controversy surrounding it was a "tempest in a teacup," as one audience member said.

"I thought it was wonderfully beautiful. I had never seen it before, and I am amazed that everyone thinks it such a terrible film," said UI student Cynthia Borsia.

"I thought it was a good movie but a bad portrayal of the gay community," said UI junior Chris Dieltz. "That guy in the movie was a real slut."

But some students, even if they were the minority, were still upset by the movie.

Ryan Schalder, a UI junior from Marblerock, Iowa, went to the movie because his mother and his

Virginia judge deemed film obscene in '83

"Taxi zum Klo" has spawned controversy not only at the UI but also at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond back in April 1983.

Richmond Circuit Court Judge James Wilkinson ruled the film obscene "beyond any standards not only of Richmond but of the country" and said showing of the movie constituted a "pandering of sex." Wilkinson blocked the film's showing by a university student group, making permanent his temporary order against the film about 30 minutes before it was scheduled to be shown.

The judge's decision came after a more than four-hour hearing in which proponents, including the American Civil Liberties Union, attempted to disprove prosecution claims that the film was obscene.

The film was confiscated in Norfolk, Va., in October 1982, and the proprietor of the theater that showed it was fined $250. The planned Richmond showing was intended to raise money for the ACLU to help pay legal fees for the Norfolk case.

The Richmond County attorney said the film was not singled out because of its homosexual content but because it was declared obscene in Norfolk.

Lawyers for the student group contended the film received critical acclaim for its portrayal of "the development and feelings of a homosexual living in West Berlin."

The judge declined to consider reviews submitted in support of the film, saying the criticism was only opinion and could not be considered expert testimony.

SOVIET UNION

G7 defers Soviet debt, offers new loans to 8 republics

Leslie Shepherd
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The world's richest industrial democracies on Thursday gave the Soviet Union a reprieve from the bill collectors, deferring $3.6 billion in debt payments and offering new loans that would be secured by Soviet gold reserves.

The agreement is aimed at allowing the Soviet Union to save its traditionally good credit rating — a prerequisite for future aid — and gives it time and money to implement vital economic reforms.

"The chance for real reform is now there," said David Mulford, U.S. representative at the Group of Seven talks with republic officials.

A communique signed at the end of the talks said eight of the 12 remaining Soviet republics agreed to repay the entire foreign debt run up by the former Communist central government and to work with the International Monetary Fund to restructure the economy.

Questions remained, however, about the exact size of the foreign debt, with estimates ranging from $65 billion to $100 billion.

Mulford, a top Treasury Department official, said all countries that lent money to the Soviet Union will be invited to a meeting to calculate the amount of outstanding IOUs. They would also be asked to join the debt-relief plan by the Group of Seven — the United States, Japan, Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Canada.

The plan allows the Soviet Union to defer payments on the principal of medium- and long-term foreign debts until at least March 31.

After a review at that point, the deferral will probably be extended to the end of 1992, providing the republics make progress on their promises to disband the old command economy and move to a free market system.

WOMEN & BUDGET CUTS

Forum: Will cuts affect diversity?

John P. Waterhouse
Daily Iowan

UI administrators and representatives from several UI academic departments presented contrasting views in an open forum Thursday on how cultural diversity and gender equality would be affected by the proposed budget cuts.

Nearly 150 concerned students and faculty members gathered in the second floor ballroom of the Union to consider "Strategic Discrimination? Effects of the Proposed Budget Cuts on Diversity."

The forum, which was sponsored by the UI Council on the Status of Women, gave those in attendance an opportunity to voice opposition to the cuts before the Strategic Planning Steering Group reports its recommendation to the Iowa state Board of Regents in December.

UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Peter Nathan said it is better for the UI to practice self-regulation, "otherwise some external group will tell us what we need to eliminate."

To put into perspective the gender and minority composition of the academic programs under review, Nathan said the number of "historically female" programs is equal to that of the programs considered "historically male."

The programs under review which are traditionally female include dental hygiene, social work, library and information science, human nutrition, home economics, and art and art history. The "historically male" programs are economics, finance, management sciences, off-campus MBA, botany and geology.

"I feel uncomfortable with saying certain programs are male and others are female," Nathan said,

"because in the midst of rapid change, the proportional amount of men and women in particular fields of study is continuously changing."

Ellen Heywood, chair-elect of the Council on the Status of Women, said the steering group "appears to have good intentions, but good intentions aren't enough."

"Even though diversity is supposed to be one of the considerations by the steering group, it seems that women faculty, students and staff aren't important," she said.

Heywood said the steering committee was naive in thinking the process of considering what programs to eliminate could be completed in three months.

The impact of how the cuts affected merit employees was described by Kathy Shaffer, presi-

YUGOSLAVIA

UI Serbs, Croats feel effects of turmoil

Students discuss the effects of nationalism on them and the fear of fascism in their homeland.

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

The civil war in Yugoslavia has divided the country, and although some Yugoslavian students at the UI have the same opinions, they still feel compelled to take sides.

UI graduate student Vesna Musieki-Kovacevic calls herself "biologically a Serb." She said she does not like to emphasize nationality but recent events make that harder.

"Two years ago, nationalism did not exist," she said. "The name wasn't important. Now we all have to pick sides."

It is hard for Americans to understand the power of nationalism, according to UI doctoral student Ranko Vujosevic.

"In the United States, no one has been here more than 300 years," he said. "People have lived in Yugoslavia since the sixth century."

Vujosevic said the differences in history, culture and religion that developed in different regions of Yugoslavia during that time have contributed to strong nationalism and the current problems.

"We reduce all relations, all the richness of human life to one ethnic point," Goran Lesaja, a UI graduate student and Croatian, said. "It's true that nationality is part of the meat around your bones and part of your soul, but I will not accept that it is the major part."

The Yugoslavian republics have a constitutional right to secede, but several students said using force was not right.

Musieki-Kovacevic said the use of military power on either side is not justifiable.

"If California said, 'Tomorrow we don't want to belong to America,' what would your government do?" she asked. "They have the right to independence. The question is how to get it."

Boris Gregoric, a participant in the UI International Writing Program, left Yugoslavia in August because of the civil war.

He said he could never take up either pen or arms against Serbia even though he identifies with Croatia.

"It's like a marriage," he said. "When two people decide to divorce, they should divide up peacefully. Why kill each other?"

But Gregoric said when an individual gets conscripted, there's no choice.

"The only thing to do is live somewhere far away," he said. "I'm not ashamed to be called a deserter. It's the only way to be — against war."

Both Croats and Serbs worry that an independent Croatia will become fascist.

Lesaja said the situation in Yugoslavia now is similar to events that gave rise to Nazi Germany: cultural frustration, economic difficulties and intense propaganda.

"It's the same, and the consequence is fascism. It is not complete but a big element," he said.

Vujosevic said Croatia could follow Vienna, Austria, and Germany and Spain in the recent surge of Nazi-related activities.

"It even happened in Louisiana," he said. "America should pay attention to what's happening. It's not just a Yugoslavian problem. It's the world's problem, too."

Lesaja said he gets tired of explaining and thinking about Croatian reasons for the war.

"It doesn't matter anymore. What matters is thousands of refugees and thousands of dead people."

Musieki-Kovacevic agreed. She said although the national army might have more military victories, she doesn't call that winning or losing.

"Peace is the only normal way," she said.

TASTE TEST

First French wine of the season comes to IC

This year's Beaujolais Nouveau premiered at John's Grocery at midnight Wednesday.

Ann Riley
Daily Iowan

It travels to Paris and London by hot air balloon and motorcycles. It came to Iowa City with a wholesaler escort.

"It" is Beaujolais Nouveau, the first wine of the season. The cork on the new Beaujolais cannot be popped until the third Thursday in November, and a crowd gathered at John's Grocery at midnight Wednesday to have the first taste of this year's crop.

John's Grocery, 401 E. Market St., is the only place in the eastern Iowa area where the wine was available Thursday, according to Wally Plahutnik, wine and spirits manager.

The only "wine holiday" of the year almost didn't happen in Iowa City because the Beaujolais didn't arrive until 10:30 p.m., Plahutnik said.

"They called and asked if we could wait for our shipment until Friday," Plahutnik said. "And I said 'no' of course."

The celebration surrounding the uncorking of the new wine "has been going on ever since people have been fermenting grapes," Plahutnik said. Since World War II people have celebrated the event by bringing the new wine from the vineyards in Lyon, France, by balloon and bicycle.

"They used to release the wine just from Lyon at midnight, and everyone would race to see who could get it first," Plahutnik said. This year, the wine was shipped from France earlier this week and traveled from the Des Moines airport to Iowa City late Wednesday night.

"The wholesaler is here watching me to make sure we don't pop the cork before midnight," Plahutnik said. John's Grocery has held the midnight celebration for the last three years.

"A group of people who don't mind being up at midnight in the middle of the week" attended the party. It was the second year in a row UI student Sean Kennedy has been present for the uncorking.

"Wine is good; holidays are good. The vin d'oc wine is very good wine for the price as long as you can drink it by Christmas," Kennedy said.

Plahutnik deemed this year a good, typical year for the Beaujolais.

"They are really, really fun playful wines — not a serious wine," he said. Nouveaus should be drunk before spring, he added, because they tend to fade quickly and would be better used mixed with oil for a salad dressing by next summer.

The low buying power of the dollar has contributed to an increase in the price of this year's Beaujolais. Prices range from $4.99 to $11.99 a bottle. John's has about 60 cases on hand.

David Greedy/Daily Iowan

A few minutes after midnight Wednesday, the wine and spirits manager of John's Grocery, Wally Plahutnik, and the store manager, Bill Alberhasky, taste the Beaujolais Nouveau, the first wine of the season, imported from France.

The wine-making has changed significantly over the years, Plahutnik said.

"It's very high-tech now. All the big operations have chemists balancing the sugar content and such. The old crushing method is gone. Anyone can make good wine all the time, and you can make great wine more often," he said.

Some factors cannot be controlled, though.

"If it rains at harvest time, you have diluted your Kool Aid. The water travels from the leaves to the grapes in minutes, bloating the fruit," he said.

With wine, region is as important as grapes because the soil is different, Plahutnik said. Later in the year the 10 individual villages in the Beaujolais region will produce their own separate vintages.

But for now Plahutnik is satisfied with the latest Beaujolais. Not only for its light, fruity flavor, but because the makers also "did a great job on the labels."

Italian film crew seeks local females as extras

Chris Pothoven
Daily Iowan

"Wanted: professional, elegant females who appear 35-60 in age to serve as volunteer extras for a partial day of shooting for an upcoming feature film."

Though the above may sound more appropriate to Los Angeles or New York, it actually applies to Iowa City. Local women will be given a chance to appear in a feature film as the Ducea Film Company of Rome, Italy, visits the UI campus for a day of shooting on "Brothers and Sisters."

Directed by Pupi Avati and produced by his brother, Antonio, filming will take place Nov. 26 at the UI Television Studio from 9 a.m. to approximately 2 p.m.

According to Dennis Hitchcock, casting director, "Brothers and Sisters" is a modern story about immigration involving an Italian mother who brings her two teenage sons to live in St. Louis.

"It's a movie about love," he said. "There are all sorts of different love relationships in this film."

The scene being filmed at the UI involves a talk-show attended by two of the stars, Hitchcock said.

"The crux of what's being said on the show is discussing relationships and feelings," he said. "It's simply adding some humor to the film."

The extras will play members of the television audience, said Hitchcock.

"We want a cross section of ages and races," he said. "It's important to the director to have real people. He likes real people in his movies."

This is the first time Ducea Films has done any filming in Iowa City, which Ducea chose because of the location and the interior of the UI television studio, Hitchcock said.

The movie will be released both in Italy and the United States, he said, and is being filmed in a combination of Italian and English, with subtitles appropriate to the scene and country.

"There are people from this country who speak bad Italian and who speak bad Italian in the film," Hitchcock said. "There are also people from Italy who speak bad English and who speak bad English in the film."

This is the fourth film produced in the Quad Cities by the Avatis, who opened an office there 18 months ago while shooting "Bix," the story of Iowa jazz great Bix Beiderbecke, in the musician's home town of Davenport. The movie was an entry in the Cannes Film Festival this year.

"The Story of Boys and Girls" is currently running in several major markets in the United States. The film has received rave reviews worldwide, Hitchcock said, and was the winner of the Best Picture Award at the Venice Film Festival.

"We're hoping the tremendous success of that film is going to open the door for other films," he said.

The Avatis recently announced plans for filming a sequel to the movie "An American Love" in the Quad Cities, with actress Brooke Shields reprising her original role.

Those interested in appearing as extras should call Dave at 354-6253.

AFAR won't demonstrate heavily

Loren Keller
Daily Iowan

Only a handful of local abortion rights activists will trek to Des Moines this weekend to assist others in defending women's clinics against expected demonstrations by the national anti-abortion group Operation Rescue. The Iowa City-based Action for Abortion Rights will not be sending a large group of members to organize clinic defenses, though a few AFAR members will go "as a show of solidarity," said AFAR co-chairwoman Carol Wallace at a meeting Thursday night.

Wallace said the Des Moines Planned Parenthood clinic is not anticipating a large-scale Operation Rescue protest. "It may very well be that they're just testing the waters and will strike later on without warning," she said.

National Operation Rescue leader and presidential candidate Pat Mahoney will speak at rallies scheduled tonight and Saturday evening at the First Federated Church in Des Moines. As part of the "National Days of Rescue," the organization is planning "child saving" activities for Saturday morning somewhere in Des Moines, although the exact location has not yet been determined.

Operation Rescue, a national anti-abortion organization, led massive rallies in Wichita, Kan., earlier this year that led to thousands of arrests.

WOMEN AND RELIGION

Newman Center addresses concerns of feminists within Catholic Church

A local priest says the church as a whole will be slow to change on feminist issues.

Susan Winterbottom
Special to the Daily Iowan

The Newman Center, an Iowa City campus-based Catholic chapel, is attempting to address issues of feminism in the Roman Catholic Church by altering the language of texts and sharing services equally with women.

The Rev. John Stecher, one of two priests who serve the Newman Center, said there are many examples of the Newman Center's efforts to serve women's needs within the structure provided by the Catholic Church.

"We use inclusive language" in both texts and readings, said Stecher. Inclusive language is the substitution of "God" or "Lord" for the repeated use of a masculine pronoun and the rejection of such masculine words as "men," "brethren" or "forefathers" which are seen to exclude women. The U.S. bishops passed these new translations of church texts at a meeting in November 1990.

In his congregation there are "several women who monitor inclusive language on their own," Stecher said. "They consider it their mission."

Stecher said that at the Newman Center, services are shared with women. Although women are not allowed by Catholic mandate to conduct Mass, they do "conduct Communion on an equal footing" as men, Stecher noted.

"We deal with the lack of ordination as well as we can," he said. "Both a man and a woman address Eucharist. There are 150 Eucharist ministers and 45 or 50 lectors and about three-quarters of them are women."

Stecher recognized the slow rate of change in the Catholic Church as one obstacle facing Catholic feminists. Before any change can happen, Stecher said, a majority has to want it, and that can take a long time in the Catholic Church.

The ordination of women as priests in the Catholic Church is sure to happen someday, Stecher said, adding that the "sense of community" within the Catholic Church often makes change a slow process. The subject of feminism is being addressed in the next Bishop's Pastoral Letter, Stecher added.

Iowa City is "very unique" in its views on feminism in the Catholic Church, Stecher noted. Because the majority of the Newman Center's congregation is composed of students, faculty and staff of the UI, they are more educated than most congregations.

Council for the Family, said in March 1989 that feminism "has a deleterious influence on the family."

Pope John Paul II, in a letter to the U.S. Bishops in April 1989, said that "radical feminism ... does not reflect or promote the full reality and true dignity of women."

In spite of these viewpoints, women are reacting in their own way to anti-feminism in the Catholic Church. An underground movement known as Women-Church holds services for women disaffected by the masculine overtones of traditional Catholic Church services. It is still a small movement, mainly because many members, such as church employees and nuns, want to preserve secrecy, fearing publicity could harm their positions in the church.

FREE SPEECH

Review staff, journalists hold debate

Campus Review staffers weigh the journal's First Amendment right to publish.

Diana Wallace
Daily Iowan

While the limitations of free speech were being tested at the Union during the "Taxi zum Klo" screening Thursday night, another First Amendment debate was underway at Currier Residence Hall — this one surrounding Iowa City's infamous right-wing newspaper, the Campus Review.

The debate, sponsored by resident assistants in Currier and Stanley halls, included two Review staff members debating two UI journalism students, seniors Terry Collins and Julie Creswell, who is also a reporter for the Cedar Rapids Gazette. About 50 students attended.

During most of what remained a lighthearted debate, Campus Review Editor Jeff Renander defended what he called his First Amendment right to print or display material some people might find offensive.

"I come in contact with things I find offensive every day," Renander said, "but I don't try to silence those voices or say they should be banned. Some of the most strident censors are those of the political left who say boldly that the Campus Review should be banned."

Instances that he said have received most objection include the "gerbil quilt," which hung in the Union as a mockery of the AIDS quilt; the Bart Simpson "Back Off, Faggot" poster; and the cover of the Review's latest issue, which featured a cartoon depicting Gang Lu, the assailant in the Nov. 1 shootings on campus, shooting a jack-o-lantern through the temple with a handgun.

"Should we be prohibited from lampooning the AIDS quilt?" Renander said. "More people die every year of cancer and heart disease than AIDS, and you don't see people making huge quilts about those."

Creswell said that while she acknowledges the Review's right to publish, she added that responsible journalism attempts to be objective and portray all sides of an issue. She cited the fact that, in the recent sexual harassment lawsuit against the UI by Professor of Anatomy Jean Jew, a federal court judge ruled that speech which Jew found "offensive" was not protected under the First Amendment.

Renander said he thought it was unfair that "hundreds of thousands of dollars" from mandatory student fees fund student groups that represent what he called a "left-wing political orthodoxy" on campus.

"Why should students be forced to pay for gay dances and gay parades and the passing out of free, flavored condoms when some students can't even afford to go to this school," he said. "We don't take a dime from you."

In response to a question about why the Review makes commentary about the weight of women who participate in gay rights parades, Renander said, "If you doubt that most lesbians are fat, just go to the parade. That's not a stereotype; that's an empirical fact."

Renander said publications like National Lampoon and Spy test the boundaries of free speech more than the Review does, yet, he said, no one on campus suggests that these publications shouldn't be sold in the University Book Store.

"Both a man and a woman address Eucharist. There are 150 Eucharist ministers and 45 or 50 lectors and about three-quarters of them are women."

The Rev. John Stecher, Newman Center

As a result, the congregation is "much more liberal than, for example, a congregation in a rural area." In Stecher's opinion, all of the five Catholic churches in Iowa City consider feminism in the church an important issue.

Feminism in the Catholic Church has been a subject of worldwide controversy.

Cardinal Adrianus Simonis, leader of Holland's 5.5 million Roman Catholics, said in 1987 that radical feminism was endangering social and religious order.

Cardinal Eduard Gagnon, a senior Vatican theologian from Canada and president of the Pontifical Stecher finds Women-Church "exclusive" to men because they do not allow men in the services. "What's the difference between that and what they're fighting?" he asked.

Stecher speculated that "the majority of women in the congregation are satisfied" with the efforts by the Newman Center to include women on an equal basis, but he recognized that while the Newman Center does what it can to serve women's needs in the church, it is still not completely solving the problem. "There's never enough," Stecher said. "There is always something needed yet."

becomes one of the basic instruments of survival."

Part of what makes a Rolex Oyster so dependable is the design of its rugged case, which is hewn from a solid block of metal, using up to sixty tons of pressure.

It takes over 150 operations just to create an Oyster case.

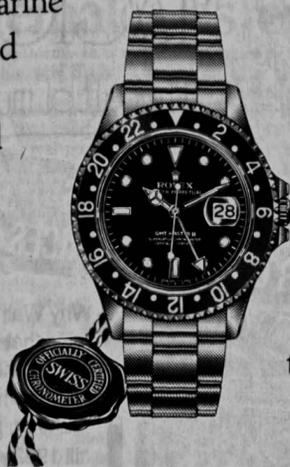

Twinlock winding crown. Designed according to the same principle as a submarine hatch, the Twinlock keeps water and other elements from reaching the movement. On the Submariner and Sea-Dweller diving models, the Twinlock is replaced by a Triplock crown that is designed to keep the watch pressure-proof to depths of 1,000 and 4,000 feet respectively.

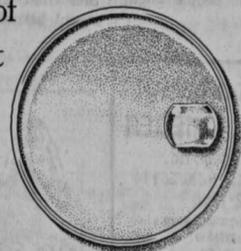

Why explorers are willing to stake their lives on a Rolex.

And once the Rolex movement is finally assembled and placed in its Oyster case, it is tested anew—this time for reliability and resistance to water pressure.

The extraordinary process that goes into making a Rolex helps explain why it has accompanied explorers to the heights of Everest and into the frigid waters of the Arctic. While there are many timepieces people count on for the time, there is one they trust with their lives.

Regents' tuition increase surprises UISA leaders

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

UI Student Assembly leaders said they were both disappointed and surprised by Wednesday's tuition increase by the Iowa state Board of Regents.

UISA Vice President Matt Wise, who attended the regents meeting in Ames, said at one time it appeared that the regents were listening to students. But by passing the proposal to raise resident tuition 7 percent and non-resident 9 percent, Wise said, they showed they didn't care.

"I thought maybe there would be a 6 or 7 percent increase passed, but not 9. We talked to the regents in September, and almost all of them said 9 was too high," Wise said. "They didn't even bring up the amendment for a 4 percent increase. It makes you wonder why you waste your time going down there when they don't even care."

Undergraduate Activities Senate Executive Officer Dustin Wilcox also expressed disappointment with the regents' tuition increase.

"It's an insult to students and an insult to our attempts to compromise. I don't think the Board of Regents has heard a word we've said. Everything is for their purpose, and they're not thinking of students and their parents," he said. "They were telling us how they appreciated our input and how it helped them to reconsider. In the end I think they said that to get us out of their hair."

Wise said that although the raise for residents dropped 2 percent from the original proposal, there was no compromise.

"It wasn't a compromise; it was the regents' decision. . . . I really don't think it matters. It's the thought of raising tuition while you're not gaining services," Wise said. "They're just trying to get as much money as they can from out-of-state students because they don't vote for the regents."

Ron Woodall, president of student government at the University of Northern Iowa, said that although he was disappointed with the outcome, he thinks the student input did make a difference.

"You can see that students played a role in keeping it lower than it would have been," Woodall said. "About six months ago, the rumors were that it would be in the double digits. Then, because of our involvement, they recommended 9. Because of our further involvement, it's down to 7."

Wise said the UISA will now focus on lobbying the Legislature for more money for higher education and sending the word to students about what an increase means.

"We want to make students aware of what they're paying. They're paying 125 percent of the per unit cost of education. That's what it costs to educate a person minus the building costs," he said.

Haitian refugees reported drowned, missing

Associated Press

MIAMI, Fla. — Sixteen Haitians drowned and 119 others were missing after a boat carrying 200 refugees capsized off the eastern tip of Cuba, Cuban news organizations reported Thursday.

In Washington, U.S. officials said they were checking reports that 135 Haitians died when their vessel sank off Cuba.

Prensa Latina, the official Cuban news agency, said Cuba had mounted a land, air and sea rescue operation after the boat capsized Tuesday night. It put the number of confirmed dead at 16, said 119 people were missing and 60 people were known to have survived.

The dispatch, monitored in Mexico City, said the dead included 12 women, two children and two men. Cuban rescue teams were tending to the survivors, the agency said.

The Cuban coast guard saved about 60 people from the turbulent waters between Haiti and Cuba, reporter Anna Peralte of Radio Havana told WINZ radio in Miami.

Hopes were dwindling for the rescue of others aboard the boat, she said.

"There are planes and boats, and they are even looking on land," she said, noting the shoreline was "wooded area, a farm area that is really isolated."

Officials with the U.S. Coast Guard and the U.S. Naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, said they had no details but were investigating.

More than 1,400 Haitians aboard U.S. Coast Guard cutters were being moved to the area around the U.S. base at Guantanamo Bay to enable the cutters to continue rescuing Haitians at sea.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said 858 of the Haitians were transferred to the Navy vessel Tortuga in Guantanamo Bay and 572 were being sent to the base itself. That would leave about 380 still on the cutters.

The flight of Haitians is partly the result of a hemisphere-wide embargo imposed against Haiti after the military staged a coup there on Sept. 30.

Tutwiler said Haitians face great danger in attempting to flee by boat. She cited as an example a 40-foot vessel severely overloaded with 238 people who were rescued by the Coast Guard last week.

"It carried no life jackets, no flares, no radio, no beacon, no charts, no navigational equipment," she said.

Such incidents have prompted the Coast Guard to estimate that only half of Haiti's boat people survive, she said.

The Coast Guard has ceased returning Haitians to their homeland for the time being in compliance with a temporary restraining order issued on Tuesday by a federal judge in Miami.

On Thursday, U.S. District Judge Clyde Atkins denied a government motion to cancel the restraining order. He scheduled a hearing for next Wednesday on a motion for a permanent injunction to succeed the restraining order.

Unemployment climbs by nearly 500,000

Karen Ball
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans filing new unemployment claims surged close to the half-million mark in early November, approaching the bleakest levels of the recession, the government said Thursday.

After stabilizing over the summer, the nation's job market is now apparently deteriorating again, at least based on how many out-of-work Americans are new to unemployment lines in any given week.

Those numbers, after hitting an eight-year high of 540,000 in March, improved to around 400,000 in July. Now, they're back to the half-million mark — a worrisome indication, analysts said, that layoffs may be wearing on and that the nation's unemployment rate may be headed higher, too.

For the week ending Nov. 9, the initial-claims level jumped by 39,000, to 493,000, the highest it's been since April 20, the Labor Department said. It followed a 33,000 rise the week before.

Some of the layoffs in early November could have been blizzard-related slowdowns in construction, analysts said. But the weakness was broader, hitting states nationwide and workers in a cross-section of industries.

"We're still talking about a number which has to be viewed as ominous," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

"People are battering down the hatches again," Dederick said of companies announcing more layoffs. "The expansion started out subdued; it leveled out in the summer. These numbers suggest the recovery has stalled out and may have slipped back into reverse."

The Bush administration sought to put the blame for dismal job conditions on Democrats in Congress.

Labor Secretary Lynn Martin said that if Congress had passed President Bush's capital gains tax cut, banking legislation and a jobs-producing highway bill, the unemployment claims number "would have been dramatically lower."

Pressed on whether the U.S. economy has pulled out of recession, Martin said:

"I know this: Too many people are out of work. There seems to be a consensus — we are in a trough, but we're moving up."

Although the economy began growing again in the July-September period, many analysts worry that the nation may be about to topple back into recession.

However, a poll of the nation's top economic forecasters released Thursday showed that only 10 percent expect a double-dip recession.

The survey of 45 forecasters by the National Association of Business Economists showed that most think a recovery is under way "despite recent disappointing economic news."

The jobless claims number can be extremely volatile from week to week and analysts hesitate to read too much into a one-week movement.

DEMOCRATIC TAX PLAN

Proposal just another disingenuous attempt to win back White House

After suffering humiliating, landslide defeats in the last three presidential elections, the Democrats are finally talking about tax cuts for the middle class. Unfortunately, talking does not truly describe what the Democrats are doing. Lying, deceiving and pandering are much more appropriate adjectives. This so-called tax cut is nothing more than another liberal attempt at social engineering.

The Democrat plan would give middle-class folks a two-year tax cut and give the poor a two-year increase in refunds. This would be paid for by a tax increase on the rich and a 10 percent surcharge on any income over $1 million. In other words, the Democrats want to tax (steal) money from the rich in order to give to the oppressed poor and middle class. It sounds just like Robin Hood, but the liberals are no Merry Men.

George Bush's lips may have moved but only because the liberals were pulling on them.

Taxes on the middle class certainly need to be lowered, but this is clearly not the purpose of the Democrat plan. If they were truly concerned about reducing the tax burden on the middle class, the Democrats would propose a permanent cut in taxes. Instead they just lower taxes in 1992 and '93 but in 1994, presumably by which time a Democrat is in the White House, taxes shoot back up. This is nothing more than a cheap stunt to woo back Reagan Democrats. Let's also remember that it was the Democrats who insisted that tax increases be part of last year's budget deal. They are the reason taxes are so high in the first place. George Bush's lips may have moved but only because the liberals were pulling on them.

The Democrats hope to pay for this fraud with increased taxes on the rich. This would make perfect sense if you believed that rich people are all mean, evil monsters who only succeed by exploiting others. The reality is, however, that rich people already pay their fair share of the tax burden. In fact, the rich pay more in taxes today than they did in 1980. The Democrats are not trying to make the tax burden fairer. Their plan, especially the 10 percent surcharge on millionaires, is nothing more than an attempt to punish people for earning too much money.

The Democrats also have the audacity to make the laughable claim that this plan will reduce the deficit. Hah! Wasn't the budget agreement supposed to do that? But more than one year after the budget summit, the deficit is higher than ever.

This "tax cut" proposal is simply another effort by the Democrats to foment class warfare between the rich and the middle class. They cannot be blamed for this. Democrats want to win the White House, and they can only do that by fooling the middle class into trusting them. But this encouragement of envy, greed and class hatred will do more damage to America than a legion of David Dukes and Willie Hortons.

A chance to learn and a place to stay, who won't do it?

To the Editor:

Have you ever considered the priceless learning experience of hosting a cultural exchange student and how it could benefit your family? Envision the cultural enlightenment that your family would be exposed to by sharing your home with a 15- to 18-year-old high-school student from a country like Argentina, Belgium, Denmark, Hong Kong or Mexico, just to name a few.

In turn, imagine the gratitude of a family who has entrusted the care of their child to you for a whole year or semester. No words can describe or measure the gratitude of that family. If you host a student and then decide that you or a member of your family would like to visit the homeland of your student, rest assured that you will discover a lifetime friendship and will receive a royal welcome from that family.

Efficiency experts not efficient

To the Editor:

The university's efficiency experts have come up with a plan to require all faculty and staff to book their professional travel arrangements through one favored private agency. They're calling it "privatization," but the more accurate term would be "monopoly."

What is the evidence that the UI travel center will do better if they have no competition? The reason faculty shop around now is that they find better deals and better service elsewhere. Discounted fares are widely available, and I've seen no evidence that a sweetheart arrangement such as this one actually saves money. One person I know had to take his family to Europe for a semester and was able to save a total of $2,000 on airfare by shopping elsewhere. I've personally saved hundreds of dollars by comparison shopping.

If the UI were footing our travel bills, it would be one thing, but in liberal arts wind up paying for the bulk of our professional travel either from external sources or out of pocket. The college may contribute the handsome sum of, say, $200 for the entire year. And for this we are expected to give up our right to find the best deal?

Why are IC rents so high?

To the Editor:

Jim Rogers cites zoning laws, downtown renewal, and health and safety regulations as primary factors restricting the supply of affordable housing for low-income residents of Iowa City ["Iowa City zoning laws make rents higher," Oct. 31]. Supply restriction is then claimed to be the cause of housing prices being above the affordable level for low-income households. Accordingly, the only solution necessary to solve the low-income housing situation in the long-run is to eliminate institutionalized regulatory requirements.

In this as in any other community there are, of course, many factors which affect the cost of renter and owner occupied housing, including interest rates, construction and land costs, market prices of existing housing, and rental vacancy rates as well as local regulatory requirements. While each of these factors has an impact on housing costs for low-income households, it is the magnitude of the effect of each which must be established in order to make rational decisions about which long-term solutions will actually achieve beneficial results for the entire community.

Assessment of the quantitative contributions of zoning regulations to housing costs in the local community entails a careful, detailed analysis of local conditions. Conclusions based on conditions existing in other localities and unsupported generalized claims about the damage caused by regulatory requirements do not form an adequate basis upon which to make choices which will have substantial consequences to many residents of this community.

Anti-Israeli rhetoric disregards history of the Mideast conflict

To the Editor:

We were both amazed and disturbed by Tunde Fratunde's "Mideast peace could bring prosperity to Africa," [Nov. 12]. Combining half-truths and the usual anti-Israeli rhetoric, the author arrives at arguments that completely disregard the history of the Arab-Israeli conflict and the relationship with Africa.

In 1947 the United Nations decided to divide mandate of Palestine into two states. The Palestinians were offered a state of their own, much larger than the one they now aspire to, but the Arabs rejected the proposal, refused to recognize the state of Israel and went to war. This war is the cause of the Palestinian refugee problem.

From its inception, Israel sought to maintain close ties with the merging African nations. The friendly relations between Israel and Africa were severed after the 1973 war when African nations succumbed to the economic pressures of the Arabs, who threatened to cut off oil supply to African countries that did not sever relations with Israel. After the Egypt-Israel peace treaty (1977), many African countries renewed relations with Israel.

As for the author's allegations regarding

Israel's involvement in the Ethiopian civil war, one only need recall how this year Israel rescued 16,000 black Ethiopian Jews who were persecuted by their countrymen.

So much for Zionism being a form of racism.

Unity

To the Editor:

On "Art Up": As the organizer of this show, I had a very definite idea in putting it together. It was not just a show of works by gay and lesbian artists — just as a show of just hetero: artists might be ridiculous, the idea was, had anyone asked me, to have a unifying forum for artists "from and around" the community — with an eye toward an issue that affects us all — AIDS — unity (not derision, division or bulk) was the point of the show. Unity, a radical idea for the '90s.

Tolerant but dumb

To the Editor:

Wednesday, Nov. 13, the liberal arts faculty approved a new cultural diversity GER. Their decision is unfortunate, for another GER means worse undergraduate education at the UI. GERs are meant to make students "broadly educated and tolerant." GERs are supposed to expose students to a variety of disciplines around them, or at least that is their intent.

As any undergraduate knows, GERs don't deliver on these promises. Most of us regard them as necessary evils, classes we have to pass but not classes to learn from. Many of these courses are introductory, which are poorly taught and poorly attended. The professors know we're not interested so teaching the GER is low on their list, too.

The UI is sidestepping its commitment to

Ernie and Mitch and the Greyhound

A warning for all of you without private transportation to white meat, dark meat, Grandma and that extra 50 bucks from Pops if you're lucky:

I do not know what hell is like (though I'm betting on rows and rows of shoddy apartment buildings with cheap red hall carpet), but I do know how you get there.

You go Greyhound.

Now I'm not saying Greyhound is all bad, at least not with respect to slander suits. After all, if you had to go to hell, at least the bus company would get you there a minimum of three hours after you were due.

And your luggage would stand a good chance of escaping the fiery pits all together. Greyhound baggage attendants are apparently paid on a strict cocaine-and-carry basis. So while you may be headed straight for hell, your luggage will probably be sent on to Colleen, Wyo.

These considerations notwithstanding, I think I can safely say that Greyhound has done for public transportation what Bruce Willis has done for the character actor.

That is why I will be sharing with you Ride of the Hound, Dance of Dependence, A Survivor's Guide.

When first entering the bus depot, it is important to remember that most Greyhound ticket agents look exactly like Ernest Borgnine in "Escape from New York." One cannot, however, expect the agent to have the same grooming skills as one of America's leading entertainers.

After a short waiting period, approximately the duration of childbirth, you and 25 pretty scary individuals will wait in line to give your ticket to the bus driver, who will probably look a lot like Ernest Borgnine in "The Poseidon Adventure." This is rather apropos since most Greyhound drivers aren't trained in subtle navigational concepts like east vs. west.

He will promptly announce that there are only six seats left. Don't Panic! Remember! You live in a country where Reaganomics was accepted as mathematically possible. There's hope for you, too.

Also, keep in mind that waiting for the next bus, which will take about as long as it takes to perform a Caesarean section, will give you ample time to explore the inner workings of the coin-operated bathroom stall provided for your convenience.

Greyhound has done for public transportation what Bruce Willis has done for the character actor.

If you are lucky, the second bus will have far fewer passengers and you will get a double seat to yourself! Once you have your seat, hang on to it at all costs. This is important because when it comes to leg room and Greyhound, everyone is a Gary Coleman. I recommend developing sort of an Israel / Golan Heights kind of relationship with your seats. Remember! At each of the approximately 87 stops between here and scenic Dixon, someone will try to take it from you.

But if you follow a few simple ideas, you may be able to keep both seats. There are two basic ways to retain seat autonomy. The first is to put your luggage on the other seat and stare out the window everytime the bus stops. This way potential seat encroachers will have to go that extra step and say, "Is this your bag?" Remember! Potential seat stealers are already burdened with the High School Cafeteria Factor. The HSCF is that childhood scar you got when you had to ask to sit down at the same table with SOMEONE YOU DIDN'T even KNOW. In high school this was an admission of personal weakness right up there with "Hello. My name is Mitch Martin. I'm an alcoholic."

My favorite strategy is to pretend like I'm sleeping. The problem is people can always tell. This is known as the Faker Factor. This, as with all things, also stems from childhood scarring. It generally happened when you were trying to get out of doing the dishes by acting like you were sleeping on the couch. But your sister, who was evil, would walk up to you and make funny noises until you giggled. At this point, your sister, who was evil, would stick as many as eight fingers between your ribs and yell "FFFAAAAKKKKEEERRR!"

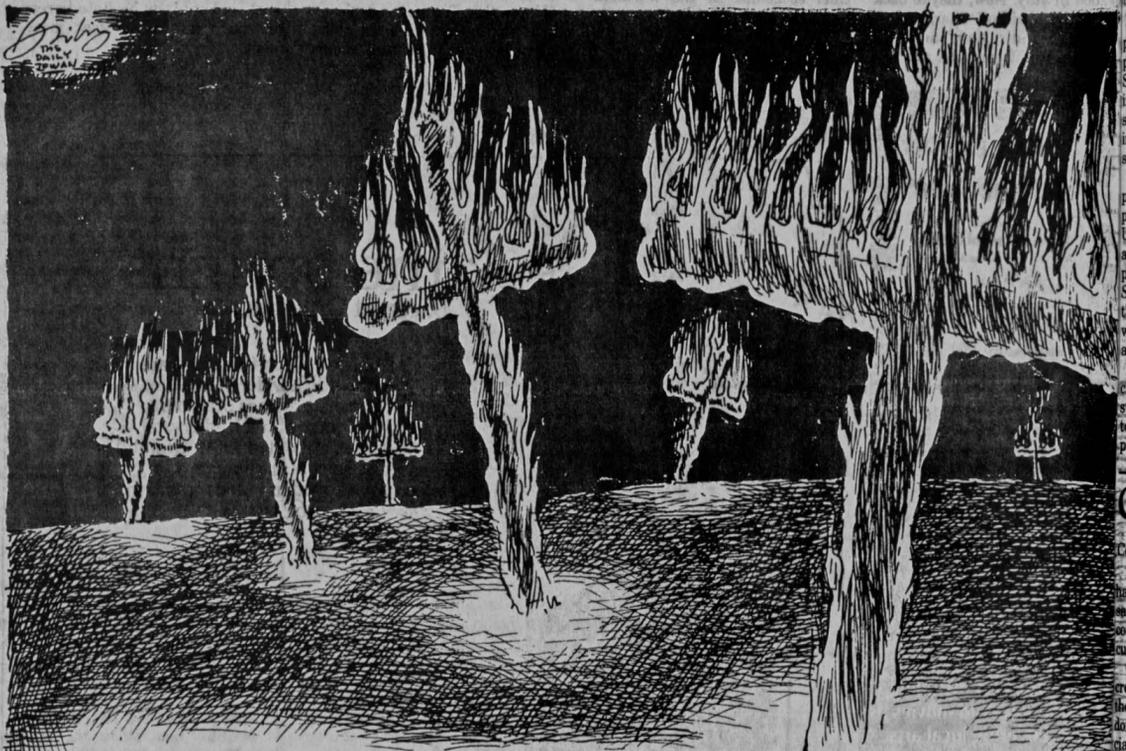

The enemy will most likely be more subtle and say, "Excuse me, is this seat taken?"

At this point you will stretch and yawn a little too much and look up to see Ernest Borgnine, as he appeared in "Cool Hand Luke," preparing to settle down in YOUR seat. (This will be particularly alarming for those of you who realize that Ernest Borgnine wasn't in "Cool Hand Luke" but rather George Kennedy. But once you realize I can only remember! two movies with Ernest Borgnine in it, you won't feel so bad.) At least not until she sits down. Then you will be very alarmed because 1) Greyhound seats are a zero-sum-gain proposition and 2) 90 percent of Greyhound riders spend a little too much time at the trough, if you get my drift blubbo-wise.

Yes, I know it is depressing, isn't it? And this being a family newspaper, I haven't even told what it's like to go to the bathroom at a bumpy 65 miles an hour standing up. Let me just suggest that you not drink pop for three days before your trip and mention that balance is very, very, very important.

HOSTAGES

Under Sutherland's trip home delayed

Terrence Petty
Associated Press

WIESBADEN, Germany — Former hostage Thomas Sutherland on Thursday was forced to postpone his return to the United States for a week after doctors discovered he has an ulcer.

The 60-year-old American educator, who was released Monday after six and a half years in captivity in Lebanon, had been expected to leave a U.S. military base hospital Thursday for a flight home.

But after he woke up with stomach pains, doctors decided that he should remain another five to seven days in Wiesbaden, where he has been staying for medical tests and a reunion with his family. The base is a traditional stopover for released American hostages.

Sutherland's doctor, Uwe Fohlmeister, said he was suffering from a peptic ulcer and gastritis, an inflammation of the stomach, but he was expected to recover.

"Being in captivity could probably activate this. He had some problems five to six weeks before he came here," said Fohlmeister, a colonel in the U.S. Air Force. Sutherland's wife, Jean, said her husband was at first disappointed by the delay in seeing other relatives and friends in the United States.

Sutherland's father-in-law died just before the former hostage's release, and Sutherland had planned to attend the funeral in Iowa today. Family members there said the funeral would be held as scheduled.

But Jean Sutherland said her husband found consolation in the hope that another American hostage would soon be released and arrive in Wiesbaden while Sutherland is there.

"We really want that to happen. His feeling is that it will," she said.

When Sutherland and Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite were freed on Monday, both former hostages said kidnapers told them more American captives would soon be freed.

The umbrella group for the hostage-holders made similar statements this week, and Iran indicated that one — Joseph Cicipio — could be released next week. But U.N. hostage negotiator Gian-domenico Picco took a more cautious tone.

"We are working for a solution by the end of the year," said Picco, who was in Milan, Italy, for a meeting with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar. "But I would like to stress that we are not in a situation of automatic releases."

Waite, seized in Beirut in early 1987 on a mission to free the hostages, remained Thursday at a secluded British air force base with his family saying nothing about his efforts at hostage releases.

Iran's top diplomat in Britain, Seyed Shamseddin Khareghani, told Sky Television on Thursday that Waite's pro-Iranian Lebanese kidnapers believed he was a spy for the CIA, a charge his family denies and says Waite wants to respond to.

Controversy surrounds Waite's role in the release of American hostages and reports that the U.S. government used him, perhaps without his knowledge, to deflect attention from the Iran-Contra arms-for-hostages deals.

Blasting Antarctica with gases could neutralize hole in ozone

Paul Rezer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A fleet of planes spraying 50,000 tons of propane or ethane high over the South Pole could possibly neutralize the Antarctic ozone hole, say scientists. They admit the idea is impractical, but believe it could start serious discussion.

"This is a concept and not a proposal," said Ralph Cicerone, professor of geosciences at the University of California, Irvine, and co-author of a study to be published today in the journal Science. "We are serious about thinking about these things, but we aren't serious about going out and doing them yet."

Cicerone and two other scientists created a computer model that suggests that by injecting 50,000 tons of some hydrocarbon, such as propane or ethane, into the dark, bitterly cold, wintertime South Polar sky they could set off a chemical reaction that would prevent the seasonal destruction of ozone in the southern stratosphere.

They said the propane or ethane gas would have to be sprayed into the polar sky by a squadron of several hundred large airplanes within the few weeks of the southern winter.

The plan, said Cicerone, is not an idea whose time has come. But he believes it is an idea that humanity may have to consider closely over the next 100 years.

For more than a decade now, atmospheric scientists have known that the ozone layer over the South Pole thins sharply during the austral winter. They have blamed it on chlorine atoms, released by human industry, which interact with ozone in the presence of darkness, stratospheric clouds and deep cold.

These atoms strip one of three oxygen atoms from ozone molecules. When this happens millions of times, the ozone layer is thinned, creating what has been called an "ozone hole" over Antarctica.

Ozone is important to life on Earth because it blocks the ultraviolet rays of the sun. This type of radiation causes sunburn, skin cancer, weakens the immune system and kills some forms of life. Already, scientists have detected increased ultraviolet radiation in Australia following the seasonal hole over the South Pole.

Industrial nations acknowledged the danger and agreed to stop producing the chemicals, principally chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, that are responsible.

But Cicerone said that the chlorine atoms that cause the ozone hole will remain active in the atmosphere for about 100 years.

CIVIL RIGHTS

White House spokesmen said Bush had never seen the document. They said it was written by his legal counsel, C. Boyden Gray and circulated without Bush's approval.

Gray accepted total blame for creating the flap. "I regret it. If it's the only mistake I make, I won't be doing too bad," he told The Associated Press. He said he did not realize how the statement would be interpreted, and that it was never intended to target affirmative action or the setting aside of federal contracts for minorities and women. "That's a mistake I should have anticipated," he said.

"I didn't think it was that big a deal," Gray added.

White House officials said Bush was unhappy about the incident. "He was clearly distressed that what should have been a fairly clear signing ceremony had been clouded," one senior official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

After the signing, the White House released a new statement in Bush's name replacing the earlier one and deleting the termination orders for affirmative action programs.

But presidential Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater refused to rule out the possibility that Bush would later order such changes.

"We support preferences and seta-sides as long as they're consistent with the law," Fitzwater said.

Separately, a senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there is strong support among Bush's advisers for proceeding with the dismantling of some affirmative action programs.

That official predicted more activity in that area and said Bush decided to remove the language proposed by Gray because "he thought this was not the right time."

"I support affirmative action," Bush said in signing the new civil rights law. "Nothing in this bill overturns the government's affirmative action program."

friends from home were aware of the situation and kept asking him questions about it. He wanted to tell them about it "firsthand," he said.

"It was a lot worse than I thought it would be," Schaller said. "It bothered me, and I am surprised that this was all the German department could come up with to teach German."

Leighton Christiansen, a member of the Iowa International Socialist Organization, one of the event's organizers, said he was pleased with the way the evening turned out.

"No one yelled or screamed or freaked out," Christiansen said. "I thought it went great."

The screening followed a statement released Thursday afternoon in which the UI administration said that "despite the fact that the university would prefer to have various legal issues settled before the film is shown, the prohibition on the exhibition of the film will be lifted."

The attorney general's opinion effectively prevented what was shaping up to be a showdown between the UI and the two student groups that hosted the screening, the ISO and the Committee for Multiculturalism and Affirmative Action. The groups had intended to show an edited version of the screening despite the UI's earlier prohibition.

In its statement the UI asserted its commitment to freedom of expression and said "censorship is inconsistent with free inquiry and must be resisted if the university is to maintain an environment that encourages free expression and inquiry."

However, the UI added that "child pornography is as repugnant to members of the university community as it is to all other Iowans."

Bill Roach, a spokesman for the attorney general's office, said the UI sought advice on the matter from the attorney general, but said, "We haven't taken any affirmative action other than to give legal advice to our client."

Roach said, "In our opinion, the film is disgusting whether it is edited or not, but as long as it is edited to be within the law then we don't see how, under the First Amendment, the screening could be stopped."

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White, who has conducted an inquiry into the film, released his findings Wednesday that the film was not pornographic. However, he said he found the scene depicting a boy's hand on a man's crotch to be in violation of an Iowa law regarding sexual exploitation of a minor.

Jeremy Buck, a spokesman for ISO and the Committee for Multiculturalism and Affirmative Action, said the groups still hope to fight the county attorney's decision about the scene deemed illegal.

"We cannot go up against this at this time because we'd get fines and be arrested," he said. "But hopefully, enough people will feel the way we do to start a campaign to get the whole movie released."

Shaffer urged the steering group to reconsider reducing any additional programs. "Do not sell out this university nor those who work here," she said.

Sandra Basgall, member of the Poll asks Europeans how satisfied they are

1 LONDON (AP) — The tranquil Netherlands is Western Europe's most content country, but strife-torn Northern Ireland is close behind, according to a survey of European attitudes.

The poll, conducted last year among 15,540 adults in Western Europe, asked, "All things considered, how satisfied are you with your life as a whole these days?"

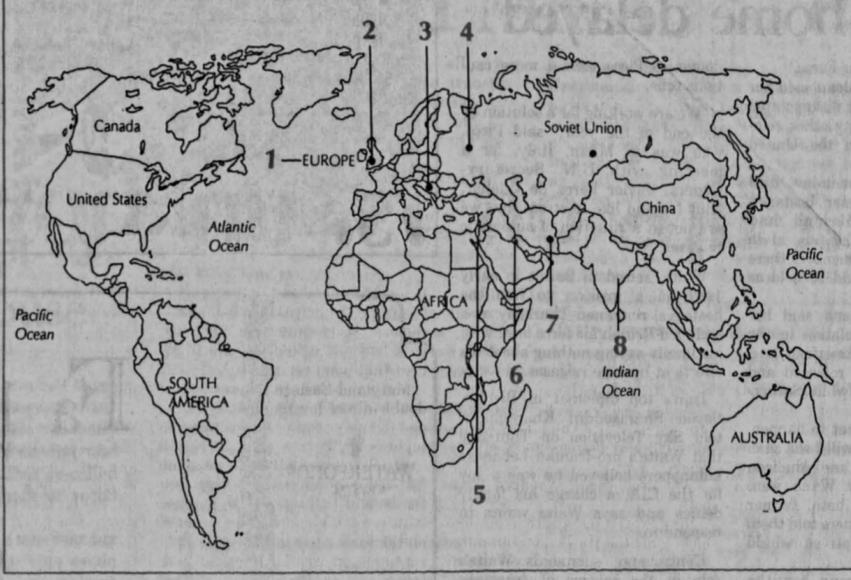

In the Netherlands, 67 percent of the respondents replied "very satisfied." But the Dutch were among the least likely to say they were proud of their nation.

Northern Ireland, where 22 years of sectarian violence has claimed 3,000 lives, and the neighboring Irish republic tied for second with 66 percent.

Other "very satisfied" replies came from 60 percent of Belgians; 56 percent of Britons; 54 percent of Italians and former West Germans; 47 percent of Spaniards; and 40 percent of the French.

Across Western Europe, 52 percent of the respondents described themselves as "very satisfied," compared with 51 percent in 1981.

In Spain, however, the satisfaction quotient showed the greatest rise. Only 35 percent called themselves "very satisfied" in 1981.

child, evil gave me my bottle" and "Now that the oil fires are out, it's my heart that's burning."

The audience at the opening Tuesday, even the toddlers, recognized him immediately, whispering "Saddam, Saddam."

A minute of silence before the play to remember the dead is about the only serious moment, although there are direct messages to the children with lines such as, "You must learn to defend yourself."

Iran allows first female concert since revolution

7 NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — For the first time since Iran's 1979 revolution, a woman has been permitted to sing in public, albeit for an all-female audience, Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency reported Thursday.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said Parisa, a renowned Iranian vocalist, gave her first concert in 13 years at a private residence in Tehran last week. About 200 women attended four days of concerts, IRNA said.

Women are required by strict Islamic laws in Iran to cover themselves from head to foot while in the company of men not immediately related to them.

Music was outlawed as un-Islamic by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini soon after the revolution. But as the fervor of the revolution started to fade, light classical music was allowed on radio and television.

About two years ago, public concerts by male singers were permitted. Many of these performances have been sold out, according to reports from Iran.

Despite the recent loosening of restrictions, President Hashemi Rafsanjani is still struggling with reversing the strict revolutionary decrees on music and other cultural activities. Musical instruments must still be registered with the Ministry of Culture and Islamic Guidance, and rock music is banned in public.

Nevertheless, tapes of Michael Jackson and other Western singers are popular with youngsters, leading to a flourishing black market in rock recordings in downtown Tehran.

Gandhi is no longer influential in India

8 NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi was killed only six months ago, but already his political influence has almost disappeared.

In elections a month after his assassination, the Congress Party campaigned as the torchbearer of Gandhi's legacy. But in weekend parliamentary by-elections, the end of the Nehru-Gandhi dynasty that governed India for most of its independent lifetime was obvious.

Outside Gandhi's constituency, where an old friend ran to fill the vacant seat, Gandhi's name was barely heard. That showed his political inheritors are coming into their own.

Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao, a 70-year-old veteran chosen to lead the party because of his close ties to the Gandhi family, has been distancing himself from Gandhi, who was killed May 21.

The men of Gandhi's former inner circle — the so-called "coterie" — are nowhere to be seen among Rao's advisers or ministers.

British animal-rightists protest fox hunts

2 LONDON (AP) — From contamination scares to bomb attacks, Britain's animal liberation groups are on the warpath, stirring strong emotions in a country where animal-loving is as traditional as blood sports.

The protesters who haunt the hunts claimed a major victory this month with the release of a secretly taped video showing a trapped fox cub being thrown to baying hounds and torn apart.

The hunt involved, the Quorn, is one that Prince Charles occasionally joins and ranks among the oldest and most prestigious in Britain.

Five top officials of the Quorn resigned, saying the blatant cruelty was against hunt rules, which stipulate that a fox at the end of a hunt should be shot in the head and then fed to the hounds.

But the sport, a favorite of the English landed gentry for more than two centuries, goes on.

It is all part of what John Bryant, spokesman for the League Against Cruel Sports, calls "the British tradition of killing things for entertainment."

of Croatia.

The reports could not be immediately confirmed, but reservists in Vukovar said they had been told their next targets were Osijek and Vinkovci, a major rail junction west of Vukovar.

Osijek is nearly encircled by Serb-dominated forces and has been shelled almost daily for several months. The barrages reportedly intensified Thursday.

Investigation shows Soviet helicopter was shot down

4 MOSCOW (AP) — A preliminary investigation into the crash of a helicopter carrying officials trying to mediate the conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan indicates the chopper was shot down, news reports said Thursday.

Twenty-three people died in the crash Wednesday, the Interfax news agency and the evening news program "Vremya" reported.

Investigators found a hole in the Mi-8, which raised speculation the chopper was shot down by a missile, Interfax said. The agency quoted the prosecutor's office of the Republic of Azerbaijan.

The victims included the interior minister of Azerbaijan, Soviet lawmakers, two generals, the head of the Nagorno-Karabakh KGB, the deputy interior minister of Kazakhstan and a Soviet defense ministry official.

Israel's Labor Party recognizes Palestinians' rights

5 JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's main opposition party on Thursday adopted a dovish platform calling for freezing Jewish housing construction in the occupied lands and recognizing Palestinians' "national rights."

The new platform of the Labor Party, which also drops a longstanding refusal to talk to the PLO, puts Labor sharply at odds with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc.

Labor's positions reflect its attempt to shore up support among Israeli moderates following the beginning of the Middle East peace conference last month.

The platform calls for a one-year freeze on settlement construction in the occupied lands. It also indicates the party is ready for a territorial compromise on the Golan Heights, annexed after capture from Syria in 1967.

At its three-day convention of 3,000 delegates, the party managed to overcome an internal split and approve a platform designed to portray it as a credible alternative of the left.

In endorsing "national rights" for Palestinians, the convention overrode calls by many doves to acknowledge "self-determination," which would be tantamount to recognizing the right to full independent statehood.

Did the Ninja Turtles liberate Kuwait?

6 KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Forget about the 541,000 U.S. troops and their coalition partners, the liberation of Kuwait was really the work of... six Ninja turtles?

Or so it goes in "Flona and the Ninja Turtles," this week's addition to a series of plays depicting the occupation.

The plot might sound familiar: A burly dictator named The Bat and his stooge-like relatives wonder where the ruling princess in the neighboring city called The Big Pearl gets all her gold. So he dispatches his goons to kidnap her, and in the process they loot the place.

But her followers appeal to the Chief Ninja, who sends The Bat a letter saying he should get outta town. He refuses so the Chief Ninja sends in the six Ninja Turtles.

The Bat bears a striking resemblance to Saddam. He also gets some of the best lines: "When I was a

Clashes continue in war-torn Croatia

3 VUKOVAR, Yugoslavia (AP) — As officials filled mass graves with hundreds of corpses left by a brutal three-month siege, Serb forces turned their attention Thursday to other Croatian strongholds of eastern Croatia.

Heavy fighting was also reported on the Adriatic coast of the secessionist Croatian republic, with 2,000 refugees reportedly fleeing.

But officials said U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance was close to winning support for a U.N. peacekeeping force for Croatia.

In Zagreb, the Croatian capital, Defense Ministry and diplomatic sources reported a massive federal army buildup around Osijek, 20 miles northwest of Vukovar. Osijek is the capital of the Slavonia region

Iowa tips off vs. unknown Hawks

James Arnold
Daily Iowan

No. 21 Iowa begins the 1991-92 men's basketball season against virtual unknown Maryland-Eastern Shore Saturday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Hawkeyes are coming off of a 2-0 exhibition schedule, which saw them narrowly beat the Ukrainian National team 85-81, and stomp an exhausted High Five team 105-67.

After the High Five game, Iowa coach Tom Davis said he would reevaluate his starting lineup and make necessary changes for the season-opener.

One of the players Davis reevaluated was guard Troy Skinner. Skinner, Iowa's main point guard for the past two seasons, will begin the season coming off the bench.

because junior Val Barnes impressed Davis with his preseason play.

Barnes averaged 9.5 points per game in the two games and made three of six from three-point range.

"Val played real well," Davis said. "He played better and Troy (Skinner) will play better coming off the bench."

"We need them. We need them both."

Iowa faces a team with a familiar nickname, the Hawks, but an unfamiliar team — made even more unfamiliar by the fact that they start three junior college transfers. Without the transfers, Bob Hoskins, a former NBA coach, led his team to a 5-23 mark in his first season at the helm.

team, 104-44.

"We don't know that much about them," Davis admitted. "They've only had one exhibition, and they beat that team real easily."

Maryland-Eastern Shore gets a double-dip of Iowa action, by going on to play Iowa State Sunday night.

Rodell Davis will start at the small forward position after sitting out the second half against High Five with a weak knee. He had surgery on the knee early in his career and continues to wear a brace to protect it.

"Rodell Davis seemed to be fine," Tom Davis said. "He's not quite 100 percent, but some of that is just chronic."

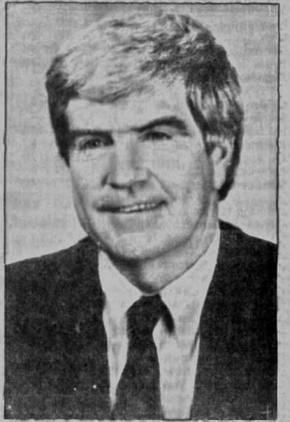

Starting alongside Davis and Barnes are juniors Chris Street and Acie Earl, and senior James Moses.

Earl averaged 21 points and 11 rebounds in the first two games. Davis was pleased with his big man's play in the preseason, but looks for him to continue improving.

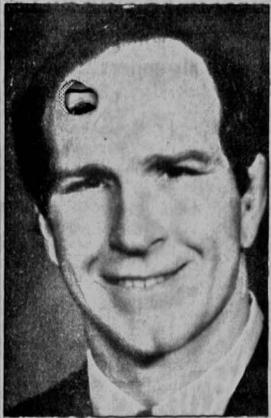

"If you look at where he is today versus where he was a couple of days ago — in terms of his day to day performance — you're amazed at how far he's come and how good he really is," Davis said. "As a coach, I'm going to look at where he can be and where we'd like him to be, so we want to keep leaning on him."

Not only did the exhibitions give Coach Davis a chance to evaluate his team — opposing coaches also joined in. High Five coach Ric Nichols said the Hawkeye team appeared young and might not be

When a coach has been at the helm of 10 NCAA team crowns and has a winning percentage of 93.8 percent over 15 years, achieving another championship may not be good enough in the eye of the beholder.

Especially if that beholder is Iowa Hall of Fame wrestling coach Dan Gable.

Gable's Hawkeyes find themselves not only with the nation's preseason No. 1 ranking, but also with the moniker, "Defending national champions."

But because the Hawkeyes are favorites to repeat as NCAA title-leists this year, winning the team championship isn't the only thing on Gable's mind.

Rather, Gable continues to set his sights on feats that have never been accomplished in the sport of wrestling. And this year, the difficult task of placing all 10 starters in the NCAA finals is foremost on many minds — including the head coach.

"Can I do it? You know people are going to say, 'No,'" Gable said. "You think I'm going to say no? You think I'm going to tell any one of those kids that they can't win the championship?"

It's this inner motivation that appears to be fueling Gable and the Hawkeyes, as they head into Saturday's season-opener — the Drake Classic in Des Moines.

If last season's Classic is any indication, then it would be an understatement to say Iowa should have no troubles this weekend.

The Hawkeyes pummeled the Loras Hawks 51-0, Mankato State Mavericks 55-0, Northern Illinois (54-0), Marquette (51-3) and the host Bulldogs (35-6).

Eight of Iowa's 10 wrestlers won championships, including 126-pounder Terry Brands, who was named the Outstanding Wrestler of the meet after pinning four of his opponents.

However, last year's meet was anything but a classic for 167-pounder Mark Reiland and heavyweight John Oostendorp.

Although Reiland capped a national championship season with a 44-5-0 mark, he started off the year by suffering an 8-6 upset at the hands of the Warriors' Bill Kumprey in his first match of the season. And the top-ranked Reiland knows it's going to take consistently good performances to achieve Gable's goal, starting this weekend.

"We all want to set the record at the national tournament and be viewed as the best team," he said. "It's tough to compare things like that but as long as we do as well as we can, we're going to be viewed as one of the top teams."

Reiland recorded 18 pins among his 44 victories last year and his career total of 40 pins ties him for seventh on Iowa's all-time list with 1984 Olympian Lou Banach.

Meanwhile, Oostendorp was the top seed at last year's Classic, only to be pinned by 12th-rated Bret Sharp of Drake in two minutes and 48 seconds. The heavyweight came within one round of being the Hawkeyes' 10th all-American at the national tournament.

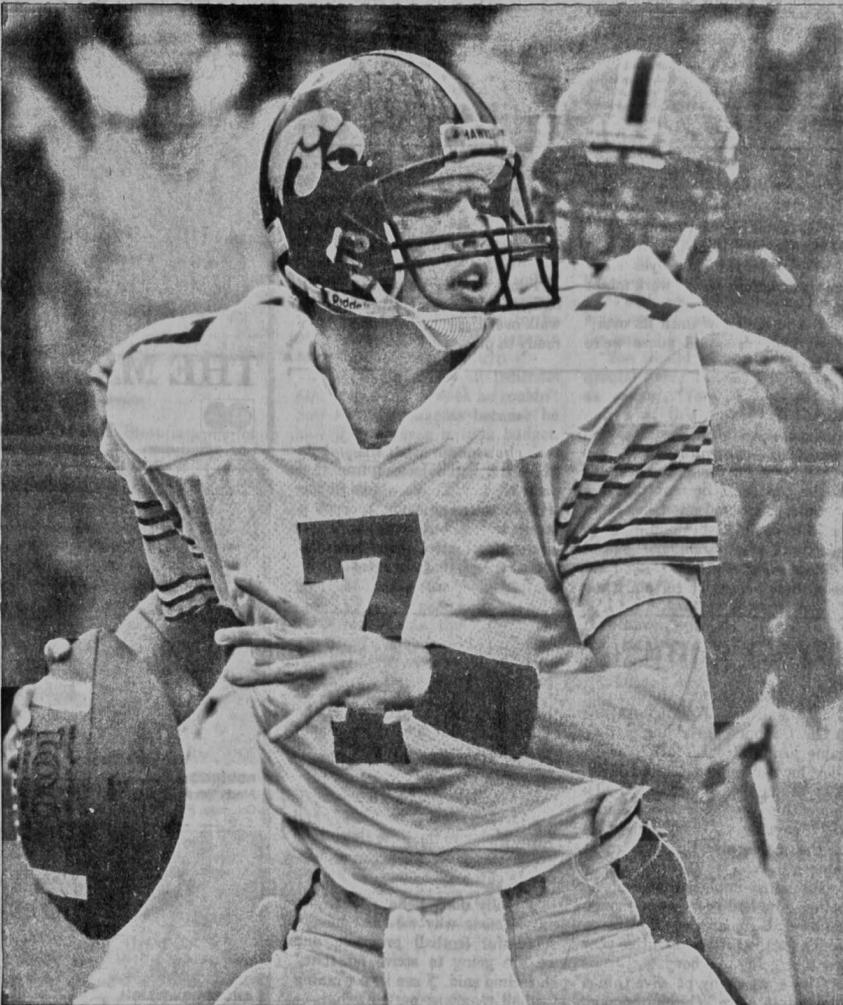

And according to Gable, Oostendorp may be the final stumbling block on Iowa's road to achieving the unthinkable.

"This year, he's the type of kid that's interested in wrestling for three months and football for three months," Gable said.

IOWA FOOTBALL

Guru Fry makes good on prediction

Andy Scott/Daily Iowan

Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers sets to throw earlier this season. Although he has been injured, Rodgers says that he wants to play this Saturday against Minnesota because it's his last home game for Iowa.

James Arnold

Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Hayden Fry has made some good calls this season for his 9-1 Holiday Bowl-bound Hawkeyes, but none of them matches his prediction that Minnesota coach John Gutekunst would not be back for the Gophers next season.

Gutekunst resigned Thursday as the Gophers head coach.

"Everybody doing all the talking says he's going to be one of Lou Holtz's assistants at the Minnesota Vikings," Fry said earlier this week. "That's what all the pro people say."

Holtz has denied rumors that he will leave the Fighting Irish for the NFL, but Gutekunst now is in need of the job.

Fry said a coaching change at this point in the season makes his job tougher (for Saturday).

"There's always that chance that they could be extremely high or extremely low if a coaching staff gets fired," Fry said. Joking with the media about Minneapolis Star Tribune writer Sid Hartman, Fry said it would be his luck that the Gutekunst situation would be solved before the game.

"Sid Hartman, I guess he hasn't made a decision yet up there on whether Gutekunst is going to be with them or not, but it would be about my luck for him to make a decision this week, and the Gophers are coming in 20 feet off the ground."

The Gophers have beaten the Hawkeyes the last two seasons. In 1989, Iowa lost 43-7 in Iowa City and last year dropped a 31-24 decision in Minneapolis on the day they received the Rose Bowl bid.

Fry said Minnesota's poor season might inspire the Gophers Saturday.

"This is a way for us to get the bad taste out of our mouth of having a very disappointing season," Fry said Gutekunst said this week. Fry blames the announcement of the Rose Bowl bid during last year's Minnesota game for a drop-off in intensity from his players. He's worried the same will happen again this year.

"It just makes our job quadrupled in preparation when we've got a bowl game in our hip pocket, knowing what we're going to do," Fry said.

One player who will be psyched for the game is quarterback Matt Rodgers. He has missed the past two games with a knee injury but wants to play this week.

"I have a lot to prove against the Gophers," Rodgers said. "I probably had the worst game of my life (in 1989)."

"I have a lot to prove..."

Matt Rodgers

Rodgers passed for 70 yards on 6 for 16 passing in the game, before Fry yanked him for backup Jim Hartlieb.

This season hasn't gone the way Rodgers wanted it to. Fry said it was tough keeping the competitive quarterback off the field in the past and would be even harder this week.

"He thinks he's going to play," Fry said. "Of course, he thought he was going to do something at Northwestern."

"He got out there during pregame warmup and he couldn't move all that well, and so it's still touch and go."

This week is different, though. This is Rodgers' last game in Kinnick Stadium.

"I have to get out there," he said. "That's the way I'm thinking now. This is my last game at Kinnick. I've been through a lot of special times at Iowa."

"It's an important game. I want to be out there."

Gutekunst resigns as Gopher boss

MINNEAPOLIS — Minnesota football coach John Gutekunst resigned Thursday amid reports his firing was imminent.

"We coaches are very egotistical and think we can change a great many things, but it's something whose time has come," Gutekunst said of his resignation after six seasons. His current team is 2-8 heading into Saturday's season finale against Iowa. He's 29-36-2 in six seasons.

"I'm a football coach," he said when asked about his future. "I love teaching. I love the competition of the game, and I love the kids and the people who play the game."

"The time comes when you have to look to new leadership in a particular program, not because the old leadership is bad, but because new

Hawkeyes square off with Kats in Lexington

Daily Iowan

Iowa's ninth-ranked women's basketball team travels to Kentucky Saturday to take on the Lady Kats, in what is the regular-season opener for both schools.

Iowa will try and improve on last year's 21-9 record which led to a runner-up finish in the conference and an NCAA tournament berth.

The Lady Kats are coming off a 20-9 record. Kentucky beat the Mexican National team 93-76 last Saturday in exhibition play.

Senior forward Stacy McIntyre led the way against Mexico with 23 points. Teammates Tedra Eberhart and Kristi Chushenberry scored 11 and 10 points respectively.

In three intrasquad games, McIntyre averaged 32.2 points, with a high of 48.

A pair of Kentucky natives will be called upon by Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer to stop the high scoring McIntyre. Sophomores Demetria Bright and Virgie Dillingham are the probable starters at forward for the Hawkeyes. Bright is a Lexington native, while

Vivian Stringer

Dillingham hails from Richmond. All-Conference selection Toni Foster returns as the team's leading scorer (15.8) and rebounder (8.2). Junior Laurie Aaron and senior LaTonya Tate are expected to start at guard for Iowa.

 able to stand in against top teams like Duke.
 Davis said Nichols was right about his team, but he said they have the ability to change that perception.
 "We'd like to be ahead of them, and the players would want to be there, but we're not there," Davis said. "That's reality. We've got a lot to do."

 "We have great potential to improve, but we've got a lot of work to do."

With teams like Maryland-Eastern Shore, Western Illinois, Drake and Centenary on the Hawkeyes' early season schedule, Davis' work might be a lot easier.
 "You never know until its over," Davis said. "I would guess we're going to have plenty of tough ones in there that will get us ready."

 "I don't think we have the kind of ballclub that can walk out and walk over these teams unless we're ready to play."

 months," Gable said. "So, I can't tell; I can't read him because he's not on par with a lot of the other guys. But right now, he's fired up and very capable. It's just a matter of whether he gets that edge back."
 At Saturday's Classic, the same combatants as last year will take part, with the exception of Mantakato State. Instead, Bradley is scheduled to send an intramural squad to "challenge" a Hawkeye club with nine wrestlers rated in the nation's top three at their respective weight class.

 "Anytime you have good athletes in the top three or four that are capable, they can get a hot hand and win it all," Gable said.
 "With somebody that's ranked and been there before, he certainly has the chance to win the whole (NCAA) title. I'm looking from that point of view. That's what's important to me. The team concept is important too, but I think with this group of athletes, that's not good enough. And that's what I'm hoping for."

GUTEKUNST: Resigns prior to Iowa game

 leadership can bring new perspective, new opportunities and new energy to an enterprise," Hasselmo said during a news conference.
 The process that led to Thursday's announcement began about two weeks ago when Gutekunst asked Hasselmo for a time to discuss Gutekunst's future, acting athletic director Dan Meinert said. Hasselmo asked Meinert to make an evaluation and that led to recent discussions about Gutekunst's job status.
 Neither Meinert nor Hasselmo would comment on the content of the evaluation, but they said there's more to it than the team record.
 They also wouldn't say whether they asked Gutekunst to resign.

Under an agreement, Gutekunst will receive one year's salary in a lump sum and will continue to receive benefits for a year.
 Also, his assistants will be paid through the duration of their contracts, most of which end in six months.
 Hasselmo expects to name an athletic director by the end of the year and a football coach soon thereafter, and apparently is ready to increase the salary significantly over the $100,000 a year paid to Gutekunst.
 Gutekunst, 46, joined the Gophers as defensive coordinator in 1984, when Lou Holtz replaced the fired Joe Salem. He became the Gophers' 22nd coach after Holtz left for Notre Dame following the 1985 season.

Before this season, Gutekunst's worst finish was 2-7-2 in 1988.
 The Gophers are riding a five-game losing streak, during which they have been outscored 160-48. Also, attendance dipped to 36,370 a game this year, the lowest since 1977, causing a $180,000 shortfall in the men's athletic department budget.
 Gutekunst implied that even he believed he had been given enough time to turn around the team, which for the fifth consecutive year won't be going to a bowl.
 "There are many positive things that are in place," Gutekunst said. "We made some strides, but this year we did not."
 "If you don't win, you can forget everything else... You also have to fill the stands and make money so the total athletic program and all the young people can have the benefits of competing at a national level. That's the reality of life at this particular time."

 Although the Gophers haven't won a Big Ten title since 1967 and haven't gone to the Rose Bowl in 30 years, Hasselmo is convinced Minnesota can win.
 "I really don't believe there are any reasons why we can't have a successful football program, and we are going to strive for that," Hasselmo said. "I see it (a winning football team) as part of what we call 'community building' within the university, which is important to our students, to our alumni, to our faculty, staff and the citizens of Minnesota."

BRIEFS

Perles fired, can remain as Athletic Director

DI wire services
 EAST LANSING, Mich. — George Perles is out as coach at Michigan State but may remain as athletic director, university president John DiBiaggio said Thursday.
 In announcing his decision to split the jobs that Perles had held for almost two years, DiBiaggio emphasized that he disapproved of one man holding both jobs from the beginning.
 "I have considered such a dual appointment inappropriate from the start," DiBiaggio said. "The jobs are separate and distinct and a mistake was made when they were joined over my objections."
 DiBiaggio said he had offered Perles a 3 1/2-year appointment to be athletic director, effective Jan. 1. Perles has held both jobs since July 1, 1990, when he replaced athletic director Doug Weaver, who retired.
 DiBiaggio said he would ask Perles to stay on as football coach until a successor could be chosen after a national search. Perles still has six years, at $123,000 a year, left on his coaching contract. He didn't get any extra pay to be athletic director.
 Perles' options appeared to be to take DiBiaggio's offer, remain as head football coach, make a counter-offer, or mount some sort of legal challenge to DiBiaggio's decision to split the Michigan State sports information director

Ken Hoffman said Perles was considering the offer, but wouldn't have any comment at least until after the final game of the season, against Illinois on Saturday.
 "For now, he wants to concentrate on football. He also wants to take some time to think about this," Hoffman said, adding it might be several days after the Illinois game before Perles made any statement.
 He quoted Perles as saying: "I'm going to take the time to give this offer full consideration. My priorities are Michigan State recruiting and my assistant football coaches. My decisions will be based on my staff and recruiting."
Gable inks leading recruit
 One of the top wrestlers in the nation has signed a national letter of intent with the Hawkeyes.
 Coach Dan Gable announced the signing of Lincoln McIlravy of Philip, S.D. McIlravy, a four-time state champion, is expected to compete at either 150 or 158 pounds at Iowa.
 In high school, McIlravy compiled a record of 145-5, including 71-0 in his last two seasons. During his sophomore and junior years, he recorded 346 takedowns and was never taken down once.
 "We feel Lincoln is without question one of the top prep wrestlers in the country," Gable said. "He's an excellent student and has the type of work-ethic we like in an Iowa wrestler. The Iowa fans will really enjoy watching this young man wrestle."

 McIlravy also won the national championship in the Cadet division a year ago, as well as a national junior title last summer.
Vikings test for AIDS
 EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — The Minnesota Vikings provided voluntary AIDS testing for players and staff this week.
 "Voluntary isn't even the right word," Vikings trainer Fred Zamberletti said. "It was a service that was provided by the organization because of player inquiry. It was more of a benefit. It wasn't something we suggested they do."
Arocha signs with Cardinals
 ST. LOUIS — Rene Arocha, the Cuban pitcher who defected to the United States on July 10, agreed Thursday to a minor-league contract with the St. Louis Cardinals.
 Arocha, a 25-year-old right-hander, also agreed Thursday to pitch with the Arecibo Lobos in the Puerto Rican winter league.
 "I'm excited, very excited and appreciative of the St. Louis and Arecibo organizations and of my representatives, Guz Dominguez and Angel Santos, for everything they have done," Arocha said.
 St. Louis won the rights to Arocha in a lottery conducted last month. The Cardinals said Arocha probably would be assigned to Arkansas of the Class AA Texas League.

the total athletic program and all the young people can have the benefits of competing at a national level. That's the reality of life at this particular time."
 Although the Gophers haven't won a Big Ten title since 1967 and haven't gone to the Rose Bowl in 30 years, Hasselmo is convinced Minnesota can win.

Aggies not looking past lowly Mustangs

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Texas A&M has practically locked up a Jan. 1 date against No. 3 Florida State in the Cotton Bowl.

All the Aggies have to do now is beat a Southern Methodist team that hasn't won a Southwest Conference game in more than two years.

The Aggies (8-1 overall, 6-0 SWC) play host to the Mustangs (1-8) on Saturday at Kyle Field.

"As a team, we're telling everyone we have to get past SMU before we can worry about anyone else," defensive end Eric England said.

England said 12th-ranked Aggies know that even a team like SMU can jump up and surprise a stronger opponent.

"A lot of teams are rebuilding in the Southwest Conference," England said. "Rice beat Baylor, and to me that keeps everything in perspective. Baylor was supposed to be a superpower. Everybody here this week is focused on SMU. We've got to keep our blinders on."

It's been five years since the Mustangs received the NCAA "death penalty" for recruiting violations and only three since former SMU coach Forrest Gregg began an unprecedented effort to rebuild the team.

With a new coach, a new athletic director and a few solid recruiting classes, the Mustangs still have irregular performances.

"I find myself telling our people we're in year 3 of what was always meant to be a 5- to 7-year rebuilding process," associate athletic director Steve Wilensky said. "We're not unlike a parent that has had a child taking piano lessons and says, 'I've heard Chopsticks. I want some Mozart.'"

"You're not going to hear Mozart from a 3-year-old, unless you've got Mozart. We don't have any Mozarts," Wilensky said.

Despite coach Tom Rossley's excitement and talk of "electricity" and attitude, the team still awaits its first post-death penalty victory in the SWC.

VOLLEYBALL

V-ballers gunning for wins

David Taylor
Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team closes out the home season this weekend with a pair of contests against Indiana and Ohio State.

Iowa will face an Indiana squad that mirrors the Hawkeyes in many ways. Both teams are in a rebuilding year and, like Iowa, the Hoosiers have struggled at times this season, winning seven matches compared to the Hawkeyes' six.

"We have been concentrating on Indiana rather than Ohio State, because I don't think they are a better team than we are," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "They are beatable, but we have to prepare for them and concentrate on playing together as a team."

Playing against Ohio State might be a different story, however. The Buckeyes have a 23-3 record, are ranked No. 13 in the country and are perched atop the Big Ten with a perfect 16-0 conference record.

"We would certainly like a chance to make Ohio State nervous," Schoenstedt said. "They are far and away the best team in the Big Ten in my opinion."

Iowa is coming off losses to Minnesota and Penn State last weekend which dropped their record to 1-15 in the conference and 6-24 overall. Winning a match this weekend would give the Hawkeyes their first victory since defeating Missouri last month, but Schoenstedt says the team can look forward to next year without forgetting that they can accomplish some things this year.

Trista Schoenbeck, Iowa's only senior

"Be patient and move on is what we are trying to do," Schoenstedt said. "I still think we can win a few more matches before the season is over, but we have to believe in ourselves."

"When we put it together on a given occasion and emphasize teamwork, we are effective."
Iowa will play Indiana tonight at 7:30 p.m. and will face Ohio State tomorrow afternoon at 1:00 p.m. Both matches will be played at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Internal squabbling may hinder Yanks

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even without George Steinbrenner, the management of the New York Yankees appears to be filled with turmoil.

Baseball agents said Thursday that the Yankees appear to be unable to discuss free agents because of internal conflicts.

General manager Gene Michael said earlier in the week he couldn't deal with free agents because he hadn't been given a 1992 budget, and agents said Thursday they wouldn't wait any longer to hear back from New York.

"He said he would call me by the end of the week last week and said he would make me an offer," said Alan Meersand, the agent for third baseman Steve Buechele. "But I haven't heard a peep since then."
Meersand was the only agent contacted who was willing to speak for attribution. However, a major agent who asked not to be identified said the same thing.

"The Yankees have exhibited an inability to have even the most preliminary discussions about free agents," the agent said.

Leonard Kleinman, the team's chief operating officer, said Thursday that all deals would be made after consultation and review among the team's top executives.
"The budget process is a continuing thing," Kleinman said. "But that doesn't exclude Gene from dealing with free agents or agents."

Michael said Thursday he wouldn't comment on free agents. However, he was quoted in Thursday's editions of Newsday as saying: "There is no way we can do anything until the money is all spelled out."

"You should talk to other people around here," Michael was quoted as saying. "You put me in the middle of this when you talk to agents. You should tell them how long we have to wait around here. I can't pass the money around here unless I have it."

Robert Nederlander, the team's managing general partner, did not return telephone calls Thursday. Kleinman denied agents' claims of paralysis.

"I think that's a perception they may have, but I don't think that's correct," Kleinman said. "We have an organization and there are procedures for review and discussion. If (Michael) wanted to make a deal, he would review and discuss it with myself and Mr. Nederlander."

Meersand is seeking a $13 million, four-year deal for Buechele, a third baseman. The Yankees were unsuccessful last year in their attempts to sign free agent third baseman Gary Gaetti and Terry Pendleton.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Cooper fights for job, Wolverines fight to win

OSU, Michigan rivalry always means something to the competitors.

Harry Atkins
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The rivalry between Ohio State and Michigan does what a great rivalry should do: It makes otherwise mature adults act crazy.

Even when there's not much on the line, there's an awful lot on the line.

For example:
— No. 4 Michigan (9-1 overall, 7-0 Big Ten) clinched the Rose Bowl berth last week. But a win on Saturday against the No. 18 Buckeyes clinches an outright Big Ten championship.

— Ohio State (8-2, 5-2) has accepted a bid to the Hall of Fame Bowl, and is trying for its first nine-win season since a 10-2 finish in 1986. But a win against the Wolverines could save coach John Cooper's job.

Cooper is 0-3 against Michigan since replacing Earle Bruce.

"I think about it," Cooper said. "You (media) won't let me forget it, will you?"

It isn't that the Buckeyes haven't been competitive. All three games have been close since Cooper took over. The scores have been 34-31, 28-18 and 16-13. But close has never counted for much in Columbus.

Last year, with 1:30 left in the game and the score tied 10-10, Cooper had Ohio State quarterback Greg Frey try an option from a fourth-and-1 situation at the Buckeyes' 30-yard line. Frey was tackled for a loss before he could pitch.

Michigan took over and kicked the winning field goal a few plays later.

"There aren't any stories written where I'm not reminded that we haven't beaten them yet, we're 0-3 against Michigan, and the option play we used last year," Cooper said.

That's what comes with a rivalry like this.

This game also does strange things to the players. In 1986, Michigan quarterback Jim Harbaugh made his famous "guarantee" that the Wolverines would win the game. Harbaugh, now an NFL quarterback for the Chicago Bears, made good on his brag by engineering a 26-24 victory.

The Wolverines went to the Rose Bowl that season, too, where they were defeated 22-14 by an Arizona State team coached by — you guessed it — John Cooper.

This year Greg Skrepenak, the Wolverines' 322-pound offensive tackle, has promised victory.

"It would be an upset if Ohio State beats us and very upsetting," Skrepenak said. "We're not going to let it happen. We're going to beat Ohio State."

Michigan leads the series 49-33-5 and has won five of the last six from Ohio State.

Rocket happy with only $4.5 million

Ronald Blum

NEW YORK — Roger Clemens says he won't be upset if Bobby Bonilla surpasses him as the highest-paid player in baseball. Clemens agreed on Feb. 8 to a four-year contract extension worth $21,521,000, an average of $5,380,250. Bonilla, the top free agent this offseason, could surpass that. Clemens, who recently won his third Cy Young Award, said he doesn't regret signing the extension and passing up a chance at the free agent market.

"I don't know how much higher it could have gone," he said. "I don't know how much better we could have done."

As of now, Clemens will be the second-highest paid player next year at $4,555,250, trailing only Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets ($4,916,667).

Clemens was in New York on Thursday to promote a new line of baseball cards issued by Fleer. He will personally autograph 2,000 of the cards, which will be randomly inserted into sets.

Clemens never collected cards as a kid, but now his wife is collecting for his two sons. He said fans should understand why he doesn't always take time to sign autographs during the season.

"Everybody has a bad day," he said. "I don't care what job you hold."

He said he doesn't like the business aspects of the card-collecting and autograph business.

"What you hate is a 4- or 5-year-old being run in and out by a 30-year-old collector making money," Clemens said. "You see parents pushing kids out of the way to get in front."

Clemens said that during his rookie year, he would get a little mail at Fenway Park asking for an autograph "on a piece of paper or anything."

As he became more popular and more successful with the Boston Red Sox, he began to get lots of mail at the ballpark and at home.

"I try to get to it all, but I have some going back to 1988," he said.

Clemens said that when he last appeared on the cover of Sports

Illustrated, within a week 400 people mailed him the cover to autograph. And some people send him specific instructions on how to sign the covers and cards.

"Now they have to take care of them," he said. "They're not flipping them. They want you to make sure you don't bend the corners. I get a full page on exactly how to slide the card out, where to sign it and how to put it back in."

"I'm still not sure if they're worth more if they're signed or not signed," he said. "There are so many aspects of it. It's hard to keep up."

Hakeem hospitalized with heart problem

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston Rockets star center Hakeem Olajuwon is undergoing tests at Southwest Memorial Hospital after suffering heart palpitations, team general manager Steve Patterson said.

Patterson said Olajuwon suffered an episode of "fast heartbeats" and checked himself into Sharpstown Hospital about 8 p.m. Wednesday. His physician, Dr. David Rothschild, later transferred him to Southwest Memorial Hospital about 10 p.m.

Team spokesman Jay Goldberg said results of the tests were not expected until late today.

"Until we hear from the doctors, we're just not going to say anything," Goldberg said.

Olajuwon, who is averaging 21.7 points and 14 rebounds a game, will not play in tonight's game against the Minnesota Timberwolves at The Summit, Goldberg said.

Olajuwon was not available for comment this morning and the 11 a.m. practice was closed to the media, Goldberg said.

This is the third time Olajuwon, 28, has required hospitalization in the past two years. In January, he suffered an eye socket injury that kept him from playing for nearly two months. He was hospitalized in July of 1989 for a blood clot in his left leg.

The 7-foot center, who is in his eighth season with the Rockets, was the top pick in the 1984 draft out of the University of Houston.

He scored 25 points and grabbed 14 rebounds Tuesday night when the Rockets defeated the New York Knicks, 90-79.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Michigan, Penn State await Iowa swimmers

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swim team will face one of their toughest challenges of the season when they travel to Ann Arbor, Mich. Friday to face defending Big Ten champion Michigan and Penn State in a tri-meet.

The Hawkeyes and the Wolverines have already had one common opponent in this young season; the Wisconsin Badgers. Iowa beat the Badgers 169 to 128 on Nov. 9.

"Michigan beat Wisconsin handily last week," coach Pete Kennedy said. Kennedy said he feels that Michigan is the heavy favorite in this meet.

The battle between the Hawkeyes and the Nittany Lions could go down to the wire. In many events, the team's times are within three tenths of a second of each other.

Iowa has an advantage in the 200 and 400 Individual Medley events. The Hawkeyes also have an edge in the backstroke events.

"The Penn State score could be lopsided in either direction," Kennedy said. "But the times will be very close."

Shelley Miyamoto

Team co-captain Shelley Miyamoto feels that based on the teams performance this year, "That there is no reason that we can't go in there and have a good meet."

Braves lose World Series and maybe their name

Carolyn S. Carlson
Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves and some American Indian leaders opened negotiations Thursday that eventually could lead the team to change its name.

At a joint news conference, Braves president Stan Kasten described Wednesday's initial meeting with representatives of the American Indian Movement as "a good concrete discussion of all of the issues."

More meetings will be held, he said, but the Braves are a business that would face "complicated and multifaceted" economic issues if it were to change its logo or name.

"As of today, there are no plans to change the name," he said. But he added, "It's fair to say I'm not seriously ruling anything out."

He said he understood that AIM's main objective was to change the franchise name, because without the name the team's fans would no longer do the things Indians find so objectionable.

Indians are offended by the fans' wearing of war paint and head-dresses, by the use of tomahawks on the team logo, and by the tomahawk chop and war chant that became famous as the Braves advanced to the World Series in October, said AIM national director Clyde Bellecourt.

But he said he wasn't interested in just trying to stop those things.

"The name has to go," he said. "Nothing is going to change, the behavior ain't going to change until the name changes. And even then, it's going to take a while after that before it will change completely."

Because of the attention the Braves fans got during the postseason, the chopping and chanting is "almost a craze today," he said. "It's going on in Kansas City with the Chiefs games, on national television. It's going on in Washington, D.C., at RFK Stadium" where the NFL's Redskins play.

Bellecourt said he was trying to line up a meeting with commissioner Fay Vincent, who had promised during the World Series to meet with him on the issue of Indian-related franchise names. The Minneapolis-based AIM staged protests during the World Series, which the Braves lost to the Minnesota Twins.

Bellecourt said his group has been trying to change the names of the Cleveland Indians, the Redskins, college football's Florida State Seminoles and others for years.

And, he said smiling, he was "very grateful" for the Braves' success this year in that it brought considerable attention to the campaign.

Kasten said, "I've been president of the Braves for five years and over that time I've got maybe four, maybe five letters from individuals (on the issue) prior to the World Series."

But he said he doesn't believe the Braves were picked on, even though the protests didn't begin until the team won its first post-season game since moving to Atlanta from Milwaukee in 1966.

"I fully understand that any cause is in need of a platform and attention, and I don't think anyone here will deny that they used the available platform in the World Series to their best advantage — something I might do if I were in their shoes," he said.

Cowboys attempt to continue win streak

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

In 1988, the Dallas Cowboys went to Washington at 2-11 and beat the Redskins 24-17. It was Tom Landry's last victory as an NFL coach.

The next year, the Cowboys won 13-3 at RFK. It was Jimmy Johnson's first win in the NFL and Dallas' only win in a 1-15 season.

So would it be a shock Sunday if Dallas inflicted the first loss on the Redskins, trying to become the fourth NFL team to go 12-0?

The oddsmakers think it would be. They've installed the Redskins as 11½-point favorites over the Cowboys, who are on the final leg of a three-game road trip through Houston and the Meadowlands. They've managed to play decently but they've also lost twice — to the Oilers and New York Giants — dropping them from solid playoff position into a seven-team muddle for three NFC wild-card spots.

Tangibles: The Cowboys, who lost 33-31 to the Redskins at home, don't have a great pass rush or great cornerbacks, meaning that Mark Rypien and his Posse may be in for a good day. But they haven't allowed more than two touchdowns in a game this season.

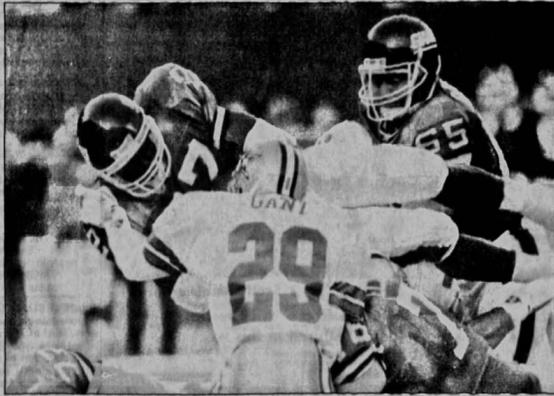

Intangibles: Everyone wants to knock off the Redskins and the Cowboys don't figure to get jobbed by the zebras again after Johnson's tirade.

UCLA quarterback set for USC

John Nadel
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In his first UCLA-USC game, Tommy Maddox had the game of his life. What he remembers most, though, is the final score — USC 45, UCLA 42.

"As you remember last year, you remember that you lost," the Bruins' quarterback said. "It was an unbelievable feeling, to go out there and go through what we went through. It came down to the last 20 seconds and we didn't win."

Playing before a crowd of 98,088 at the Rose Bowl, the Trojans won in the highest-scoring UCLA-USC game. Each team scored three touchdowns in the fourth quarter, with three TDs coming in the final 3:09. The final TD was scored by Southern Cal with 16 seconds to go.

Maddox completed 26 of 40 passes for a school-record 409 yards and three TDs and ran for another score.

"This game is like no other," Maddox said. "I don't think you have to look to last year to get motivated."

The teams meet for the 61st time Saturday at the Los Angeles Coliseum. Southern Cal leads the series 34-19-7 and is 3-0-1 since Larry Smith became coach in 1987.

Unlike many of the other matchups, not much will be at stake. The 25th-ranked Bruins (7-3) will play in the John Hancock Bowl. The Trojans (4-7) have lost five straight and a loss Saturday would set a school record.

Still, the rivalry is there. "You take the game personally every year," said UCLA coach Terry Donahue, who has a 5-9-1 record against USC. "Our seniors would like very much to win. Since 1986, we haven't done that."

Two years ago, the roles were reversed — Southern Cal was 8-2 and Rose Bowl-bound while UCLA was 3-7.

In the 1989 game, the 17-point underdog Bruins earned a 10-10 tie and just missed winning when Alfredo Velasco's 54-yard field goal attempt with two seconds left hit the crossbar. This time, UCLA is a 5½-point favorite.

"Winning this game would be a heck of a way for our players to end the year, I don't care what the record is," Smith said. "One game isn't going to make a season, but you can finish on a good note."

"Forget 3-7, it's one game, it's UCLA."

Smith won't announce until Friday, at the earliest, whether he'll start redshirt sophomore Reggie Perry or freshman Rob Johnson at quarterback. Perry started the first nine games before being replaced by Johnson.

Johnson is the younger brother of Bret Johnson, who played quarterback for the Bruins two years ago as a freshman. Deposed as the starter last season, Bret dropped out of school and transferred to Michigan State.

Rob Johnson hasn't forgotten. "But I'm always on my brother's side. Yeah, in a way, I'm playing for Bret. There's always plenty of incentive in this series."

No. 2 Huskies ready to crank it up

Jim Cour
Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Rose Bowl-bound Washington Huskies may think they're the best college football team in America, but they're running out of time to convince the folks who make the final decision.

"All the statistics and stuff like that, it speaks for itself," Washington wide receiver Mario Bailey said.

If that's true, Washington needs to turn up the volume. The second-ranked Huskies (10-0) trailed top-ranked Miami by 40 points in this week's Associated Press poll, with Miami getting 46 first-place votes and Washington 14.

The Huskies hope to change enough minds to change some of the voters' minds when they meet Washington State (4-6) Saturday in the Apple Cup, their last game before the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

"There's no doubt we have to go out against Washington State and play the way we can play,"

Huskies center Ed Cunningham said. "We can't go out and mess around and barely win. We have to go out and put on a show."

The Washington-Washington State game is called the Apple Cup because the state is far and away the biggest apple producer in the nation. The game has had a lot of importance in the past.

In 1988, Washington State, then coached by Dennis Erickson, edged Washington 32-31 and went on to an Aloha Bowl victory over Houston. Erickson is now Miami's coach, so for the second time in four years, Washington coach Don James could become a second banana — or apple — to him.

Washington will go into this year's game as a 35-point favorite. James, in his 17th season in Seattle, remembers Washington being a 35-point favorite against Washington State in the 1982 Apple Cup. The Huskies lost 24-20, an upset that cost Washington a trip to Pasadena, Calif. James, who has a 12-4 record in past Apple Cup games, has said the 1982 game ranks as his most disappointing loss.

The Huskies are focused in large part because of another disappointing loss: their next-to-last regular-season game against UCLA last season. The Bruins were three-touchdown underdogs and Washington was No. 2 then, too.

"I don't have to manufacture any great history lesson," James said. "It's there."

Washington State is coming off a 49-14 loss to No. 21 Stanford in Pullman last Saturday. Washington beat Stanford 42-7 on the road in its first game of the season.

But the Cougars, particularly 6-foot-5, 231-pound quarterback Drew Bledsoe, have Washington's respect. Bledsoe was recruited heavily by the Huskies out of Walla Walla High School but chose the Cougars.

"They can explode on you," James said. "They can spread the field and hit big plays."

'Bad Boys' get even worse

Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — The Miami Hurricanes' reputation for bad-boy behavior took a new twist when defensive lineman Mark Caesar was arrested following the team's 17-16 victory at Florida State.

Caesar's crime: losing his cool and throwing a cup of ice water. It landed in the crowd in Tallahassee, soaking a Florida State campus police officer and other spectators. Caesar was charged with a misdemeanor count of simple battery.

Miami players have been penalized in the past for taunting and fighting, but Caesar is the first to be arrested at a game.

"The fans were throwing ice and being very abusive," he said. "Me being a young man — sometimes a young man will do childish things — I retaliated and threw some ice back."

The incident occurred during the first half. Coach Dennis Erickson said the fans were as much to blame as Caesar.

"On the sidelines, the fans were pelting everybody with ice, oranges, all kinds of things were flying," Erickson said. "Mark had some ice and flipped it behind him, from what I understand."

"I was involved in the game. All I know is I got sprayed with ice a number of times from people in the stands."

By beating its intrastate rival Saturday, Miami replaced the Seminoles as the nation's No. 1 team.

African playwright's work tops this weekend's theatrical bill

Robert Fuhrmann
Daily Iowan

Theater devotees will have to toil long and hard to keep abreast of the flurry of events this weekend at the UI. Their labors should prove fruitful, though, as Third World interpretations of classic Western theater and Playwrights Workshop endeavors take to the stage, and a distinguished playwright offers his wisdom to the I.C. community.

Considered to be one of Nigeria's foremost playwrights, Babafemi Osofisan will bring "The Oriki of a Grasshopper" and "The Engagement" to UI's Theater B tonight at 8.

"The Oriki of a Grasshopper" is based on a rehearsal of Samuel Beckett's "Waiting for Godot," while "The Engagement" is an adaptation of Chekhov's "The Proposal." Both plays were written as traveling plays and thus maintain minimal stage design.

Osofisan says, "We have very minimal material means for theater in Nigeria and so in writing these plays it was necessary to keep things as simple as possible. Often they need to be performed in unlikely places — on a beach, in a classroom."

The plays represent two aspects of Osofisan's work. "The Oriki" is a highly political, very serious work, whereas "The Engagement" is a political comedy. "It's difficult in the Third World," the playwright states, "to escape the world of politics. Even at the simplest level, we are affected by it. It decides if we are going to get paid, if we are going to have running water, if there will be adequate food or medical care. It affects even who you fall in love with."

Playwrights Workshop participants Mike Geither and Mike Moran will be presenting the premiere of two one-act plays, "The Wants and Needs of the Iowa River" and "Fast Food, or in the Belly of the Dragon." The performances will take place Nov. 23 at 3 p.m. and Nov. 24 at 8 p.m.

"The Wants and Needs of the Iowa

T. Scott Krenz/Daily Iowan

Mike Geither's "The Wants and Needs of the Iowa River" will be one of two one-act plays by UI Playwrights Workshop students featured in this weekend's bill of theatrical fare.

"River" is a series of monologues by four characters, accompanied by the playwright on guitar. The speakers include a lovesick paleontologist and the Iowa River, who muse over matters both serious and humorous.

"Fast Food, or in the Belly of the Dragon" is a fragmentary monologue that explores the journey of one man's life, past and future, as he attempts to come to terms with childhood fears of his father and the monstrous images of a bloodthirsty dragon, and his present fears of fast-food customers and his own feelings of loneliness and desolation.

Noted playwright Lee Blessing, a UI Writers' and Playwrights Workshop graduate, will present a free, public lecture tonight at 8 in the 2nd Act Cafe of the Theatre Building.

Light my fire: Flame-broiling Big Mac in this week's 'Zone'

Locke Peterseim

Heigh-ho, pack your bags — the post-modern apocalypse is upon us! In just one week, USA Today has declared John Landis a genius for the Jackson video, Robbie Benson an Oscar contender for "Beauty and the Beast," and Larry King's weekly blathering, fawn-fest column in the paper is now being quoted on movie ads. Need more proof the end is nigh?

Well, when you can hear "Heroin" over the CD jukebox while eating Whoppers in Burger King, you know we're close. There's just something about listening to old Lou put a spike right in his vein while you stuff a fry right in your mouth that really lets you know that you're full on into the '90s and all is definitely not well. It doesn't help when you realize Donnie Wahlberg's little brother has remade "Walk on the Wild Side."

Luckily we're no longer meandering into this decade aimlessly, without a leader. Perry Farrell, that staggering, mumbling testament to, as my father would say, how high shit can be stacked, has been declared "Artist of the Year" by Spin.

Farrell's a moronic, egotistic, goateed puke — there's no doubt about that — but I guess that makes him the perfect person to lead us twenty-somethings. But how are we supposed to distinguish ourselves if even our label is appropriated from our mortal enemies, the Baby Boomers? I guess "Slacker" and "Generation X" are both in the running, but though I haven't seen the film and the book is still holding up the wobbly corner of my desk, I can't say I'm terribly moved by either title. Maybe that's it; The Generation Too Apathetic to Name Itself.

Let's face it, fellow children born between 1962 and 1972, we blew it big and bad — the train left the station, and we were still hanging around Vendoland. As a whole we're going to be forever stuck watching the Baby Boomers become old, cranky and a tremendous financial strain on us, while the next generation skateboards circles around us, plugged into their portable Sony Virtual Reality-Mans.

Prairie Lights will feature today a down-home gossip session with author Cathie Pelletier, whose newest novel, "The Weight of Winter," updates the lives and loves of a small town in northern Maine. WSUI will also broadcast the reading live on "Live from Prairie Lights."

Pelletier's latest joins the residents of Mattagash 20 years from where the previous book "Once Upon a Time on the Banks" left off. The characters introduced in her highly acclaimed "The Funeral Makers" are now buckling down for seven months of snow. The acute cabin fever which strikes the eccentricity-prone Mattagashers makes for some interesting small-town comedy and tragedy.

Adding to the novel's bright splashes of local color are Amy Joy Lawlor, who started out as a chubby, lovelorn teen and is now debating whether to move her feisty mother Sicily into a nursing home; Lynn Gifford, whose marriage to the town's only adult juvenile delinquent endangers her family's survival; and Prissy Monihan, whose busybody campaign to shut down the town's only bar threatens to shrink more than a few beer bellies.

Pelletier, who hails from the familiar-sounding Allagash, Maine, says her hometown has its fair share of real-life "characters," but the ones featured in her stories reveal themselves as she writes.

THEATER

Carbone 14 and flights of memory

Jennifer Horn
Daily Iowan

It's been called "a masterpiece," "poetry," "allusive and evocative," but it's difficult to say exactly what it is. Coming to Hancher Auditorium from Montreal, Carbone 14 will present "Le Dortoir," or "The Dormitory," Saturday at 8 p.m. The video adaptation of the show is one of three nominees in the "Performing Arts" category of the International Emmy Awards to be presented two days after the Iowa City performance.

A piece for 12 actor-dancers, "The Dormitory" presents images of adolescence in the '60s. Company founder and artistic director Gilles Maheu created the piece based on his experiences at the Catholic boarding school he attended in Quebec during the early part of the decade. Movement is the medium Maheu uses to evoke powerful images of sexual awakening, adolescent rage, student revolt, repressive religion and spiritual longing, all revolving around the shock of John F. Kennedy's assassination. The combined images of an old photo of Maheu's dorm and the cover of Pink Floyd's "A Momentary Lapse of Reason," a photo of rows and rows of beds on the beach, were some of many inspirations for the show.

Yves Dubé

Montreal's acclaimed Carbone 14 theatrical troupe casts a hypnotic light on a tumultuous childhood with "Le Dortoir."

Company member Jerry Snell says: "All our shows are hard to explain over the telephone because they're really visual. We use a lot of sort of cinematographic theater, where the lighting and music are very important to the show. It's not very easy to define what it is on the first vision. We jump from one image to another, to another, to another. You have to sort of think about it, let it sink in."

The audience has to create its own meaning in a Carbone 14 production. Snell says, "It's not a linear conception. 'Le Dortoir' is like going through your past and trying to bring back your memory of important emotions, not necessarily of important actions that happen." What it boils down to, he says, is: "We try to interpret real life and cut out the bullshit."

Both Snell and Maheu started out in street theater and mime, and the company formed because "we were searching for the life beyond mime." When Maheu created the company 10 years ago, they tried to bring what Snell calls the audacity of street performance inside the theater.

One thing that makes Saturday's performance unique is that it is one day after the 28th anniversary of JFK's death. Because the assassination figures so heavily into the action of the production, Snell commented on the coincidence: "You think about where we are today — in the last almost 30 years since the assassination, have we advanced, gone back, what's going on? Have we learned anything?"

Tickets for the show are still on sale at the Hancher Box Office. But if you can't make it to the show, the Emmy-nominated video will be continuously shown Saturday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. downstairs in the Union, across from the Union Pantry.

Welcome to hell: 'Rodrigo D'

Kevin Ruby
Daily Iowan

Medellin, Colombia, has only crossed my mind twice. Once, when Time featured a story on the city's drugs, crime and extreme poverty, and lately, when I recently saw "Rodrigo D: No Future." Again the story centered around drugs, crime and extreme poverty, and neither account paints a positive picture. "Rodrigo D" plays at the Bijou Friday through Sunday.

Victor Gaviria's "Rodrigo D" caused a minor sensation at its release and took top honors last year at New York's Latin American Film Festival. It also bears the honor of being the first film from Colombia to be screened at the prestigious Cannes Film Festival. But the most sensational, and frightening, aspect of the film is its off-screen history: Since the film's completion in 1986, six of the principal actors, most of whom were around 20 years old, have met with a violent death. This bit of information makes us believe the anger that bleeds from this story, set in a world of crumbling buildings and punk rock.

"Rodrigo D" follows a group of young men in their day-to-day experiences: stealing motorcycles, doing drugs, hiding out. One character, Rodrigo, sees a potential way out of the slums by becoming a punk rock drummer. Admirably, he tries to realize his dream; he buys sticks, takes "punk music" lessons (in one of the film's more amusing scenes) and even gets in on a few jam sessions. At least he tries to make something of his life, even if it is only a few steps away from the rapping fields or car thefts his friends are involved in.

Everyone in "Rodrigo D" looks like they haven't eaten for days. It's little wonder that Gaviria was able to make this film on such a small budget; chances are that his cast and crew saw this film as a way out of their slums, as Rodrigo saw punk rock as a way out of his.

"Rodrigo D" isn't perfect by any means. I had a hard time keeping all the characters — who roam through the film like a pack of nondescript, rabid wolves — and their names straight. The shot composition is nothing spectacular, and most of the acting is mediocre.

I grew up in an upper middle-class neighborhood, and I found myself being a bit of an art-snob while watching this film and commenting to myself about the film's "jagged" and "badly structured" qualities. If I had stuck to this attitude, I would have ignored the important point that carries Gaviria's film. Gaviria has a thorough understanding of the lack of opportunity that the people of Medellin have to overcome, if they're able.

The best way to describe "Rodrigo D" is like summarizing punk music — you can't get past its junky quality if you don't understand the anger and energy that inspired it. I didn't like this film immediately after I saw it. But after I thought about it, I realized how much this film really hit home — not for me, but for those six young men, dead in the streets of Medellin.

Dancer brings 'India' to IC

Natalie Lucas
Daily Iowan

The UI dance department promises an exciting journey into the world of fear and wonder with this weekend's performance of "India: A Dance Journey." This dance/theater work will be featured in Halsey Hall on Saturday and Sunday at 4 p.m.

Written and choreographed by UI M.F.A. candidate Daliene Majors, the one-hour work will be performed by 20 dancers from the UI Dance Department with the special participation of UI students, actress Ragnheidur Skuladottir and classical Indian dancer Anitha Ravichandran.

"India: A Dance Journey" expresses Majors' love for Indian dance and her personal involvement in Indian arts. Majors hopes the audience will experience the atmosphere of India through the dance and text.

As Majors' thesis project, "India: A Dance Journey" was directly inspired by her 1989 trip to the country. Majors claims her piece is "a combination of movement, text, dance, lighting (both natural and stage), authentic costumes and slides."

"Emotions such as fear and wonder are the key elements in this piece," says Majors. "Mysterious beauty, poverty, the masks of people, uncertainty and the unknown are unveiled in this journey to India as well."

One of the most important elements in the dance/play involves the audience, which will be seated in the center of the stage. This is similar to an Indian temple dance and gives the audience a sense of involvement. The featured text will be read by Skuladottir.

Majors' personal interest and studies in yoga and Bharatanatyam (classical Indian dance) parallels the philosophies of Indian dance culture. While at the UI, she has studied Bharatanatyam with Jennifer Savarirayan and Ravichandran.

Majors is a native of Omaha, Neb., where she has continued to choreograph and teach since 1980 and her graduation from New York's Juilliard School. She has taught modern dance at the Omaha Academy of Ballet, Jewish Community Center, Creighton University, University of Nebraska at Omaha, Ballet Omaha and Emmy Gifford Children's Theater.

A theatrical vortex of dance, music, film, poetry, and design from Montreal's hottest dance troupe.

Derby impresses Holiday Bowl scout

A Iowa's win over Northwestern last weekend, Coach Hayden Fry brought the Holiday Bowl scouts into the locker room to speak briefly to the players. As they turned to leave, John Derby got up and started talking about Minnesota to keep his teammates focused on their last game of the regular season. That caught the attention of one of the scouts.

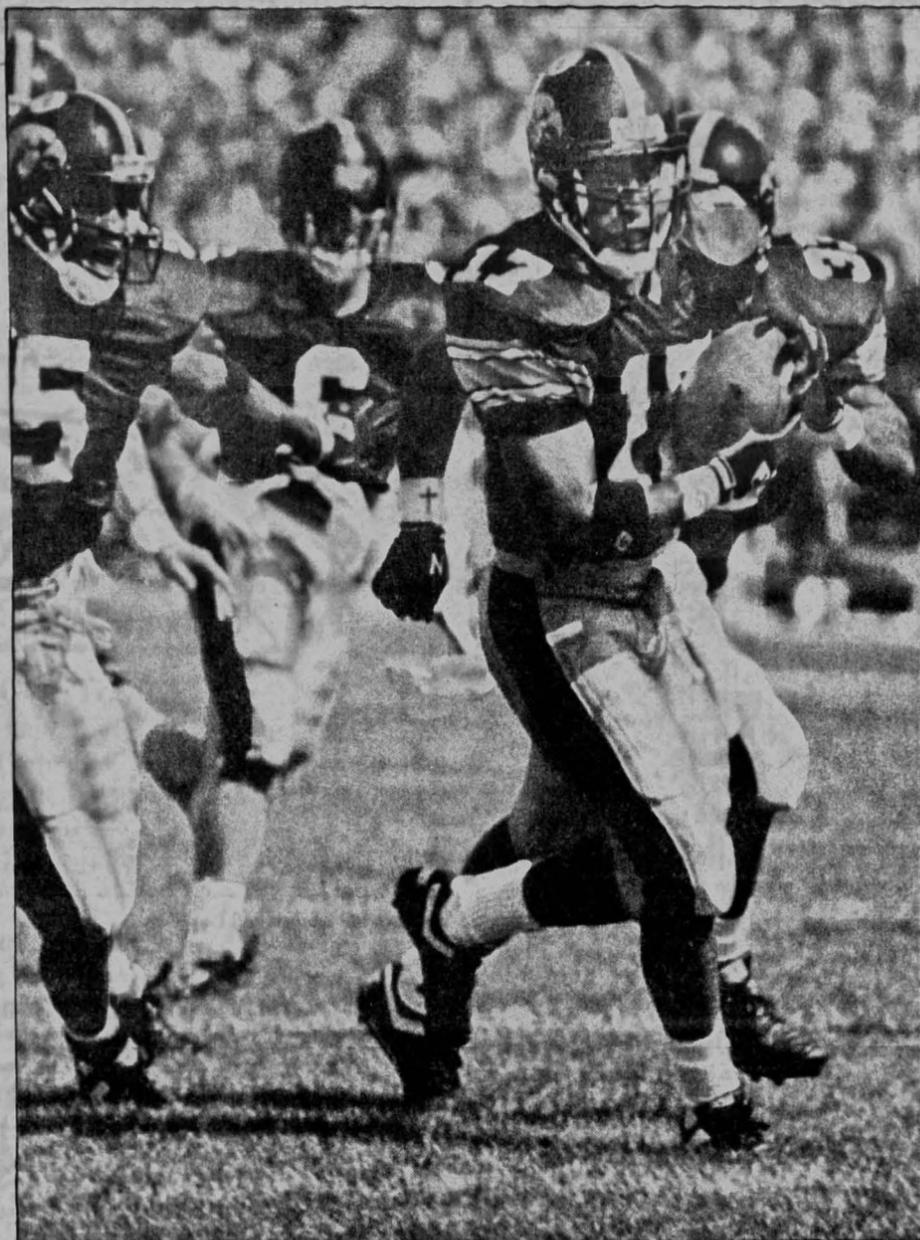

"One of the men, who is a very successful businessman, stopped and walked back and asked me, 'Who is that No. 31?' " Fry said. "I told him who he was and he said, 'He's a senior?' I said, 'Yessir.' Then he said, 'Is he graduating?' And I said, 'Yessir.' And he said, 'Does he need a job?'"

Ain't easy being Greene

Fry about walk-on defensive back Chris Greene, who was named Iowa's scout team defensive MVP for the Northwestern game: "Chris Greene is kind of in that twilight zone. He's not big enough to be a defensive end and not quite quick enough to be outstanding in the secondary. But to my knowledge he's never missed a practice."

The bright side

Fry on the good points of Iowa's punting game: "Jim Hujzak won't outkick his coverage. We won't have the snaps go over his head because he's only 10 yards back and we don't have anyone who can snap the ball that far. There are lots of positive things I've never thought about."

Laying low

WHO radio broadcaster Jim "Voice of the Hawkeyes" Zabel on what a local publication says about the 2-8 Gophers: "It says that Minnesota hates Iowa so much they've been laying in the weeds just so they can come out and beat us."

Record-setter

Mike Saunders on tying an Iowa record for TDs in a game with four against Indiana: "Of course when you tie a record, it feels good. But for each person who does that, they should list the people that are blocking for him, too, because my line did a great job today. They came right out in the first quarter and got after people and kept it up for the whole game."

faked out on the play: "Coach (Bill) Brashier called a certain type of defense, and I squeezed real hard because I thought it was going to be a pop-out. They had a very good fake, so they suckered me in, then I saw the quarterback just backedpedalling. So I had to just run after him."

Hard-hitting

Smith after the Indiana game in which he caused an interception: "The coaches always tell us that when you've got a chance to hit the quarterback, go for the ball and the sack will come after that. I was going for the ball and Teddy Jo (Faley) made a great catch. I saw it go up in the air but I didn't think anybody on our team was near it. I thought, 'Where's the ball?' Then Teddy pulled it down and I was happy."

Hawkeye Profile: Mike Saunders

'Mr. Versatility' stands out for Iowa

Michael Watkins

Daily Iowan

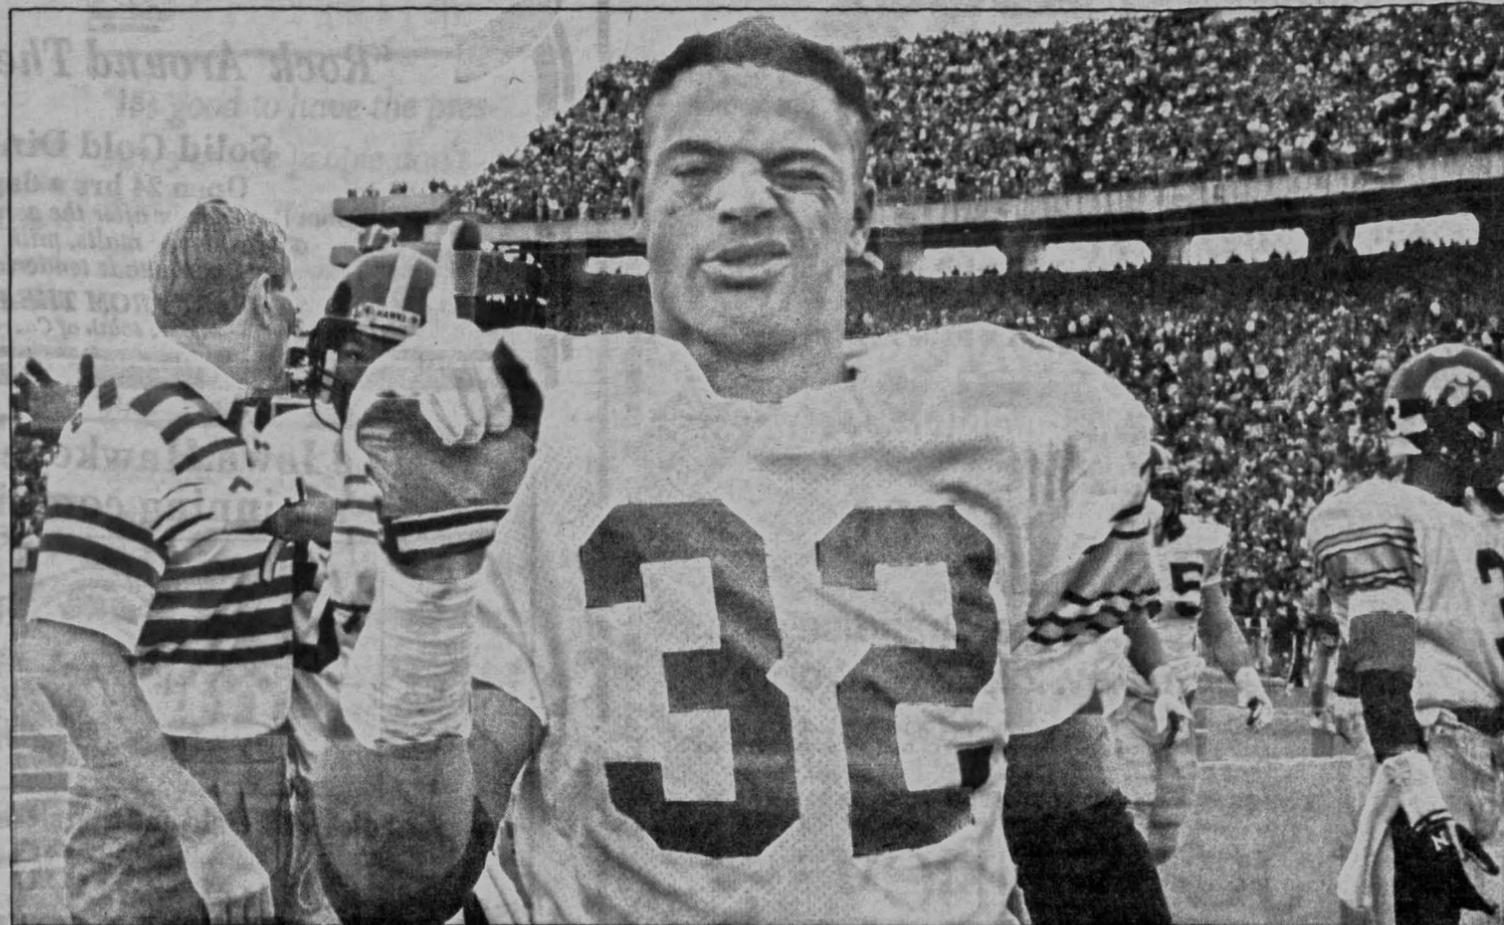

There's no denying that the presence of Iowa running back Mike Saunders (a.k.a. Mr. Versatility) during game time sends defensive coordinators into a frenzy.

This season alone the 6-foot-1, 200-pound senior tailback from Milton, Wisc., is fourth in the Big Ten in rushing with 848 yards on 172 attempts (4.9 yards per carry), is tied with receiver Jon Filloon for third on the team with 24 receptions and is seventh in the conference in all-purpose yardage with just over 104 yards per game.

He also leads the Hawkeyes with 11 touchdowns and is third in the league in scoring.

Despite his reputation as a big-play maker, the former UPI all-state selection at Milton High School wasn't always a shoo-in to succeed Iowa's "dynamic duo" of Nick Bell and Tony Stewart in the offensive backfield, particularly after having spent last season in a backup role to wingback Danan Hughes.

According to Saunders, however, his return to the starting spot in the Hawkeye backfield after a two-year sabbatical has been an easy transition largely due to the assistance and camaraderie of the Hawkeyes' current stable of running backs.

Senior Mike Saunders might be listed as a running back, but for the Hawkeyes he's Mr. Versatility. (Al Goldis/Daily Iowan)

"In a way, there were big shoes to fill because Nick and Tony are both great runners and did an excellent job for Iowa last year and are in the big league now," said the two-time all-conference and team MVP at Milton. "But with the quality backs that we have here now — Lew Montgomery, Marvin Lampkin, Paul Kujawa and myself — I don't think that you can take anything away from us. We're not concerned with being overshadowed by them."

Despite the losses of Bell and Stewart, who led Iowa to a school-record 2,699 yards rushing last year, the Hawkeye ground attack has barely missed a beat this season, accumulating 1,883 yards so far.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry credits this successful stability in the rushing game to Saunders and the offensive backfield's determination and dedication throughout the season.

"Mike has just been a tremendous asset to the team this year, particularly after having lost Nick and Tony to graduation and Scooter (Lampkin) being injured most of the season," Fry said. "He and Lew have really had to carry the load on the ground, and Mike has just been an inspiration the entire season."

But Saunders, who received Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week honors for his four-touchdown performance against Indiana, is no stranger to receiving accolades for his play. But he says that he isn't the only one who deserves credit for his output on the ground this year.

"The offensive lineman all have more experience and have been playing really well this year," Saunders said. "I think that the offensive line as a unit is the most enthusiastic, close-knit group on the field. I have nothing but good feelings as to what they've been doing this year."

A highly-touted running back/wide receiver/kick and punt returner who totalled 2,980 all-purpose yards and averaged 10.1 yards every time he touched the ball his senior year, Saunders had his choice of schools coming out of high school, including Michigan, Michigan State, Ohio State and the Naval Academy.

But after visiting the Iowa campus, Saunders knew immediately that Iowa was the right place for him.

"When I was being recruited, I had a chance to go to a lot of different schools, but I came down here on a visit and fell in love with Iowa," the sociology major said. "The coaching staff and all of the players were great, and you just can't beat Coach Fry's winning tradition."

After redshirting his freshman season, Saunders saw time at running back in a limited role. But soon the same magic that paced him to a

Senior DT finds success on first team

Erin Weiland
Daily Iowan

Before the 1991 season, Ron Geater said that as long as he stayed healthy, football would take care of itself. And it looks like his philosophy has worked.

Until the Iowa defensive tackle sprained his ankle last weekend against Northwestern, he had not been injured at all. And he has been a team leader on defense all season.

"My main goal for the whole season was just to stay healthy," said Geater, who is being projected to return to the lineup in the Holiday Bowl. "Some things you have no control over, but I've tried to stay healthy, lift weights during the week to keep my strength up and things like that. And I think that's been a big part of my success."

The senior from Marion, Iowa, is second on the squad with 84 tackles behind John Derby (91 stops). He has also recorded 15 tackles for -85 yards and has defended four passes.

Going into this season, Geater had a lot to prove to himself, coaches and critics. He played behind all-Big Ten selection Matt Ruhland for the past three years, and when Ruhland finished his eligibility in 1990, there was speculation about whether Geater could really fill his shoes.

But Geater feels that those doubts were actually a good motivational tool for him.

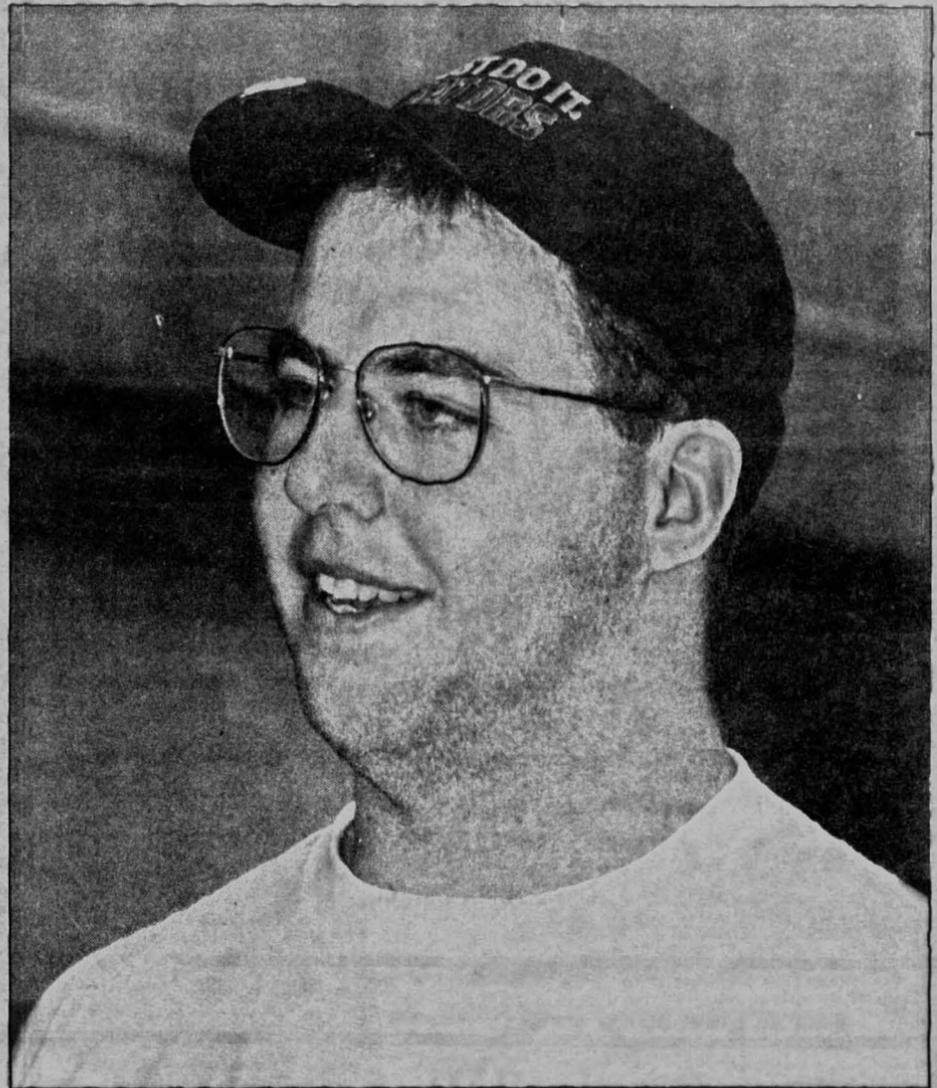

"It's good to have the pressures where people don't think you can do it, don't think you can replace them," Geater said. "That just makes it a little more fun when you can go out there and do the things they did and keep doing that."

"I've heard that people think we (Geater and tackle Jeff Nelson) are doing a good job.

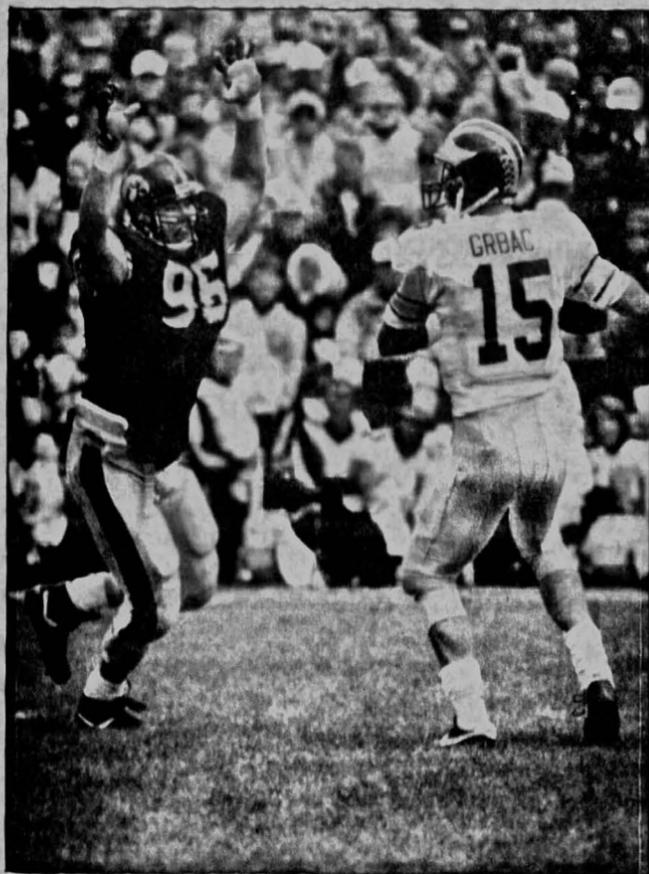

And as far as the questioning about whether we could replace Jim Johnson and Matt Ruhland, I think people are thinking that we can, and that's nice to hear."

Geater, however, said that it wasn't easy always being second-string. He looked forward to spring football when he might have a chance to earn the starting role.

"Once you go into spring ball, the coach is telling you, 'Hey, this is your chance.' If you can do it in spring ball, that's what they're looking for in the Senior Ron Geater's biggest goal for the year was to stay healthy and everything else would fall into place. Until last weekend, that formula was working for him. (Photo by Al Goldis/Daily Iowan) fall," Geater said. "So I think there's a lot more of an emphasis on the battle in the spring. That's where you have to make your move to get ready for the fall."

But when he didn't get his chance to start, Geater just took the opportunity to learn all he could from Ruhland, Johnson and the other older defensive lineman.

"Being a No. 2 guy for three years, that's pretty hard to take," Geater said. "You sit there and maybe if they have a bad game you might think to yourself, 'I could have gone in there and done better.' Then there are times in games when they did things that I don't know if I could have done. It's a give and take."

Before this season, Geater had amassed 51 tackles in his backup role. Although he wasn't a starter, Geater's past performances and talent had caught the eyes of pro scouts even before this season.

And his accomplishments this year have done nothing but improve his chances for a pro career.

Geater, who will get a degree in general studies with an emphasis on family counseling in December, says he welcomes the idea of playing in the NFL, but he's not going to focus on it.

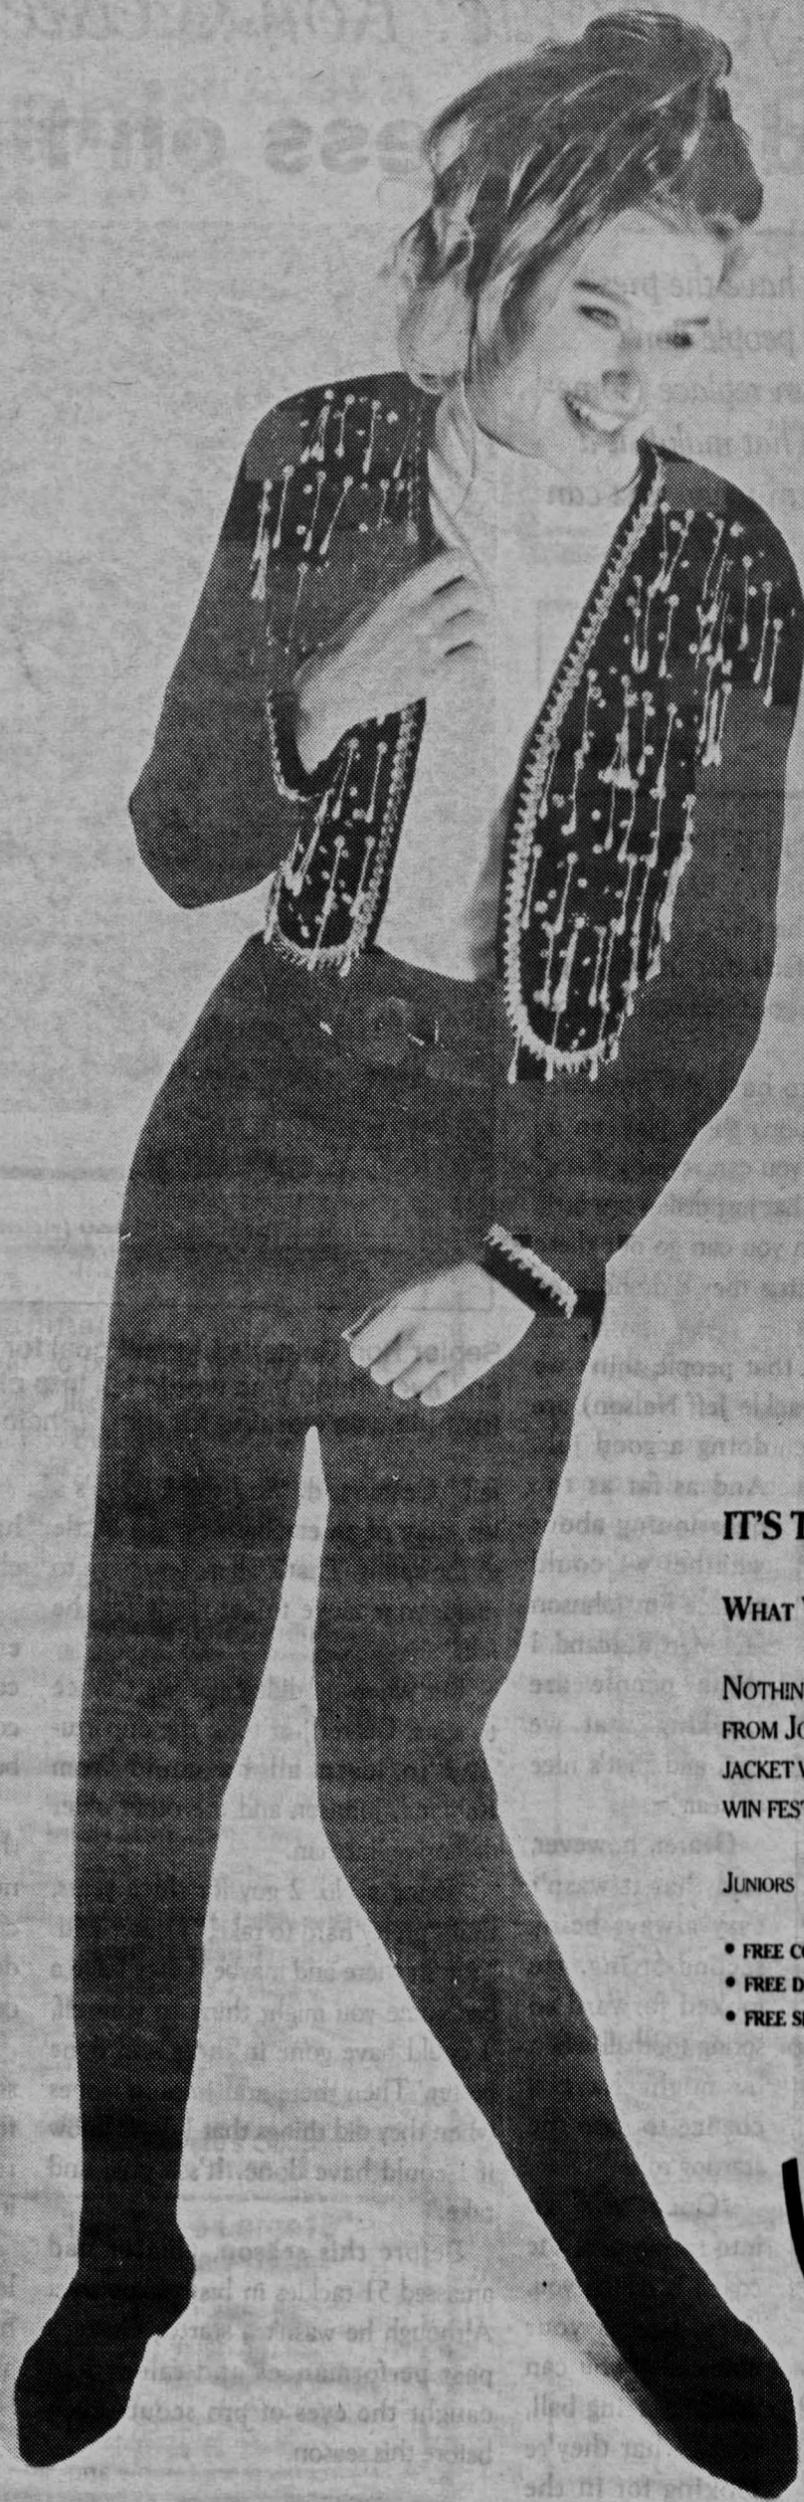

"Playing pro football is something that I've always wanted to do, but I'm not going to die if I don't get that chance," Geater said. "If it's there, I'll definitely go after it. But if it's not, I'll do something else."

"I've gone back to my old high school and done some things, coaching for football camps and things, and I really like to work with kids. So I'm looking in that area right now."

Becoming a starting defensive tackle, however, isn't the only thing Geater has had to adjust to this year. There is also his new life as a married man.

He and his wife, Nancy, were mar-

Hawkeye Profile: Teddy Jo Faley

Junior LB fulfills dream to play at Iowa

Michael Watkins
Daily Iowan

Many young Iowa boys who grow up following the impressive string of winning seasons that Hayden Fry has put together, aspire to play Hawkeye football before a capacity crowd at Kinnick Stadium.

For Dubuque native Teddy Jo Faley, that dream has become a reality.

"It was pretty much my dream from when I was a little kid," the junior linebacker said. "I always grew up cheering on the gold and black, and when the coaches gave me the opportunity to play here, I jumped all over it.

"This was my first visit and they offered me a scholarship right off of the bat. I went home and thought about it for just a couple of days and cancelled the rest of my visits."

Ever since he was little, Faley has been surrounded by the football influence, particularly from his older brothers whose excellence on the gridiron and constant encouragement led him along the same path.

"They were always real supportive in everything that I did," the pre-business major said. "They were always up for me to play basketball or run track or play golf. But I think maybe in the backs of their minds they always liked football best because that was the one sport that we all excelled in.

"They both played in high school and were real good athletes. My oldest brother played defensive tackle, but he didn't want to go to college. And my other brother was a linebacker at UNI for a year, but he hurt his knee and had surgery for the third or fourth time which ended his career.

"Football was kind of the common denominator amongst us all. But they never pressured me to play football. It was always just real supportive and 'big brotherly' type stuff."

During his career as starting linebacker and running back at Wahlert High School, Faley excelled on both sides of the line of scrimmage, tallying 110 tackles and four interceptions his senior year while accumulating 851 yards and 11 touchdowns.

For his efforts, he was named first-team all-state, as well as MVP and team captain.

That excellence has carried over into the college ranks for the linebacker, as he saw action in eight games his freshman season and appeared in all 12 contests last year as a sophomore, including a start in Iowa's 56-14 win over Northwestern.

Although he served time in the offensive backfield during his high school days, Faley says he knew that in the competitive nature of the Big Ten and college football, he would be more effective in a defensive role.

"At this level, the running backs really have such great instincts, and my instincts were never that good on the offensive side of the ball," said Faley, who ranked third on the team last season with 31 tackles (18 solo). "I was just a good athlete who could get away with it in high school, whereas at this level, they're just so much quicker than I ever was.

"But defensively, that's where my strengths lie. I can use my quickness there and my instincts are more on the defensive side of the ball, so that's where I can showcase my ability."

Fry agrees: "Teddy's one of those guys who doesn't have much experience that gets better each ball game. Originally we thought he'd be better on the pass because he's more mobile on the pass, but he's really developed into a solid run defender."

Faley currently ranks fifth on the team with 56 tackles, has recovered a fumble and has an interception this season, but he knows that even with all of his success on the football field, academics are the main reason why he's at Iowa.

Because he wears a helmet and a football jersey on Saturday afternoons, he says that other peoples' perceptions of him and his teammates are very stereotypical of college athletes and that his peers see him as just another "dumb jock." But he knows the real story.

"It's funny when you walk into a class and people start chuckling because they think that you're going to be the low end of the curve, and by the end of the semester they're wondering 'How'd he do that?'" said the Big Ten Conference all-Academic selection for the third consecutive year (3.03 G.P.A. in marketing). "Right off the bat they assume, 'Oh the teacher must like him' or this or that.

Hawkeye Profile: Lew Montgomery

Junior fullback 'full of surprises'

Jan Arnold
Daily Iowan

The fullback position is an all work, no glamour spot for many teams.

They are usually big bruisers, who can pick up the extra yard on short yardage and block for the headline-making running back.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry has done what he can to change that perception this season by using 6-foot, 212-pound Lew Montgomery as the main fullback.

The Hawkeye junior has responded by rushing for 445 yards and eight touchdowns. He was even leading the team in receptions for most of the season.

"It feels great," Montgomery said. "It's something I really never expected to do, but I'm full of surprises."

One of the main surprises is his ability to catch a pass. He has 33 receptions and averages 7.9 yards per catch — many of them coming on screens behind the line of scrimmage.

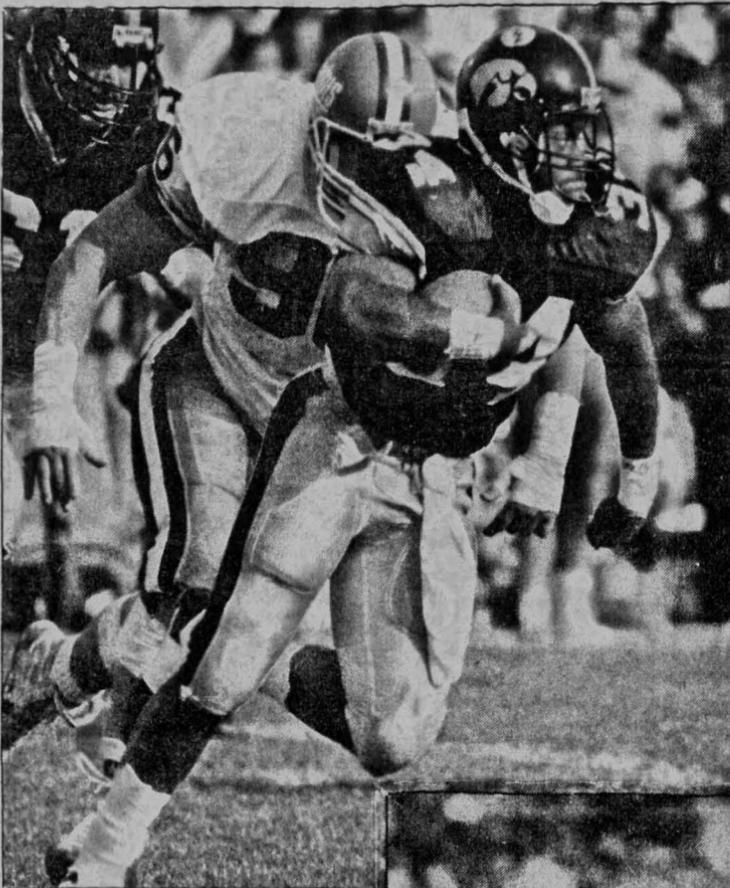

"It takes a lot of concentration," Montgomery said. "You have to be aware of where the defensive backs are. You have to be aware of where the linebackers are because you can find yourself up in there and some guy will be right up on you."

"You can get injured like that."

Montgomery, or "Lew" as he is affectionately known to Iowa fans, surprised all the coaches when he was a red-shirt freshman by going seven months without dropping a pass in practice.

He is happy that Fry has the confidence to send him out on pass patterns as well as the normal grunt work most fullbacks have to endure.

"The fullback hasn't had the opportunity to catch that many balls. They're primarily used as a blocker," Montgomery said. "Coach Fry and the rest of the coaches feel as though they can use me a lot more in pass receiving."

He may even surprise the opponent some Saturday and go on a 40-yard fly route.

"I would love to catch one and get down the sidelines, but I don't know what's in the package," he said. "I believe I can catch the long ball if it comes."

Montgomery has been full of surprises ever since he left Waterloo, Iowa, for the Hawkeyes. But Iowa football certainly wasn't a surprise to the long-time black and gold fan.

"I was a big Hawk fan even when I was little with Jimmy Fraiser, Kerry Burt, and Reggie Roby all around in the neighborhood," Montgomery said. "I've always been a Hawk fan and have always wanted to come here and see if I could have the same success that they had."

With one year remaining, Montgomery has a chance to equal and surpass the records set by previous Waterloo natives. The question remains: will he attempt to challenge his roommate, Marvin "Scooter" Lampkin, for the starting running back spot next season?

"It's something that I would like to do, but I just want to contribute as much as I can to this team," Montgomery said. "I think I'm versatile enough to do both of them. I've had a taste of it this year."

Subbing for injured Mike Saunders and Lampkin, he switched to tailback for a couple games and began learning the ropes. Now he has taken a back seat as Saunders piles up the yards.

"I kind of knew that as the season went on, I probably wouldn't be running the ball that much," Montgomery admitted.

Next season, he wants a chance at running the team into the Rose Bowl. He doesn't think there will be any conflict with his roommate of three years, Lampkin.

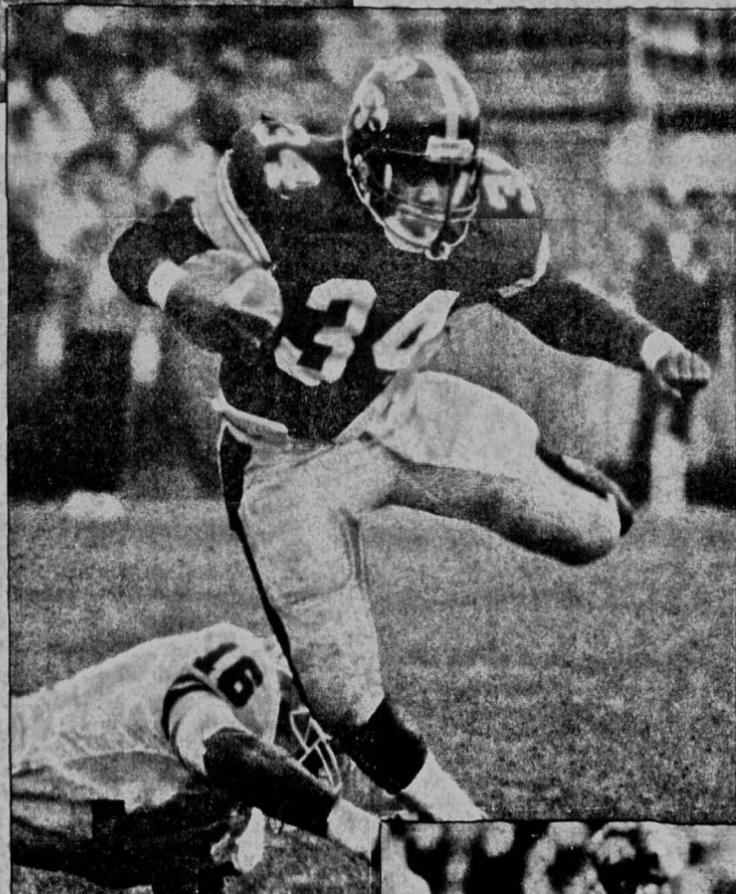

"I don't think it will be any controversy between us," he said. "We both have level heads on our shoulders. If something like that did occur, I think our friendship would remain the same."

Growing up, he followed some big names in pro sports, but not big players. Fullbacks were not among his favorites.

"There's always been Payton," he said. "I was a Lorenzo White fan, Thurman Thomas — all the good backs. "I'd like to maybe run like Earl Campbell, he was one of my biggest favorites. Other than that, fullbacks...?"

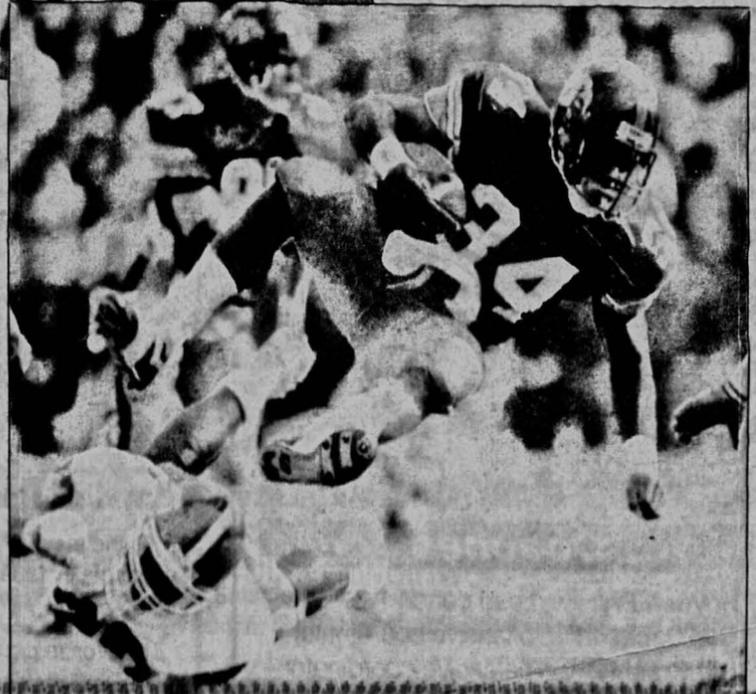

After surprising Fry in the college ranks, Montgomery hopes to go on to the pros and surprise them.

See Montgomery, page 21C

Iowa junior Lew Montgomery (shown here against Illinois Oct. 19) has been a force for the Hawkeyes at fullback in the past and this year has also filled in at running back to compensate for injuries to Mike Saunders and Marvin Lampkin.

Floyd of Rosedale

As the result of a bet between the governors of Iowa and Minnesota in 1935, possession of Floyd of Rosedale is at stake Saturday.

The bronze pig traveling trophy is currently in the hands of the Gophers as a result of Minnesota's 31-24 win in Minneapolis a year ago.

The Gophers lost their other two trophies this season and will make every attempt to keep Floyd in Minnesota. The team lost the Little Brown Jug to Michigan Oct. 25 then lost Paul Bunyan's Axe to Wisconsin last weekend.

Big Ten

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Don't worry about Big Ten football teams letting down this week, coaches say, even though most bowls have already been decided and the final games of the regular season are now mostly meaningless.

Big Ten football coaches on Tuesday insisted that rivalries and the importance of winning will make the games meaningful enough for the players.

Except for Indiana, which has to defeat Purdue to get a bid to the Copper Bowl, every other postseason berth is set in the Big Ten. Michigan goes to the Rose Bowl, Iowa to the Holiday Bowl, Ohio State to the Hall of Fame and Illinois to the John Hancock.

The big game will be No. 18 Ohio State (8-2, 5-2) at No. 4 Michigan (9-1, 7-0) with the Wolverines vulnerable since they reached their goal — the Rose Bowl.

"I don't know, it could work to our advantage or disadvantage," said Ohio State's John Cooper in the coaches' final teleconference of the year. "We look at it as the biggest game on our schedule and I'm sure they look at it the same way."

Michigan's Gary Moeller recalled it has happened.

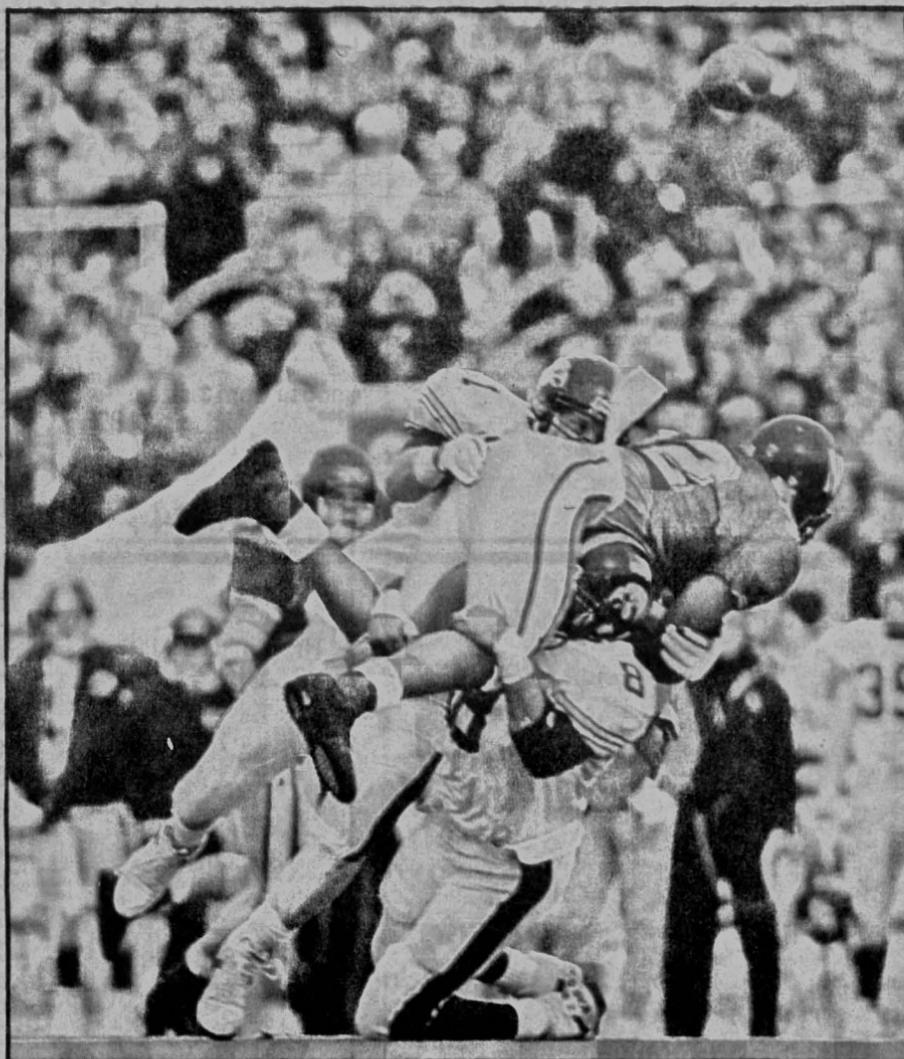

"Hopefully, there won't be a letdown because of the importance of the game," said Moeller. "A few years ago we had the rights to the Rose Bowl and the Ohio State game didn't mean anything (to us). We lost that game. We have to face reality, but we hope that won't happen again."

Of course, Michigan also wants to win the title outright. If the Wolverines lose and Iowa defeats Minnesota, Michigan and Iowa would share the title.

Indiana's Bill Mallory doesn't think there will be anymore pressure attached to the Purdue game because there will be a bowl bid if the Hoosiers win.

"It's for the Old Oaken Bucket and going to a bowl or not going to a bowl is not the most important thing," said Mallory. "That's how we look at it. If we win and go to a bowl, that adds more to it."

GO HAWKS

Beat the Gophers

Game Preview: Iowa vs. Minnesota

QB question remains for Hawkeyes

Erica Weiland
Daily Iowan

The big question remains for the Iowa football team this week as it prepares for Minnesota: What's the quarterback situation?

Senior Matt Rodgers, who went down with a sprained knee against Ohio State, insists that he "has to play in this game," as it's his last at Kinnick Stadium.

The Walpole, Mass., native also wants to break the jinx he has had against the Gophers. The Hawkeyes have lost to Minnesota in Rodgers' past two starts against them. The quarterback has only compiled 236 yards passing against Minnesota and has thrown four interceptions.

"I have a lot to prove against the Gophers," Rodgers said. "I probably had the worst game of my life my first year starting against them. I have to get out there. That's the way I'm thinking now. This is my last game at Kinnick; I've been through a lot of special times here at Iowa. ... I want to be out there."

Junior Jim Hartlieb, Rodgers' replacement against Indiana and Northwestern, suffered a shoulder injury against the Buckeyes but has played — and played well — in his two starts.

But neither quarterback has been practicing during the week.

"Paul Burmeister and Matt Eyde take all the snaps at quarterback during practice," Coach Hayden Fry said. "I would like to start Matt just because it's his last game at Kinnick Stadium and he's a senior. But he hasn't worked out yet, so right now, Jim Hartlieb would be the starter.

"Matt thinks he's going to play. It's still touch-and-go."

As far as Minnesota's quarterback, Fry says Marquel Fleetwood makes him nervous.

The junior from Decatur, Ga., has thrown for 1,567 yards this season and has rushed for 207. He is ranked fifth in the Big Ten in total offense with an average of 177.4 yards per game.

"Fleetwood is an extremely dangerous quarterback," Fry said.

Minnesota's other standout performers include running back Antonio Carter, punter Dean Kaufman, defensive back Sean Lumpkin, linebacker Andre Davis and defensive lineman Ben Williams.

Carter, a 6-foot-1, 226-pound sopho-

Gopher QB Marquel Fleetwood runs from Purdue defenders in a game earlier this season in Minneapolis. (Associated Press) more, has piled up 567 yards on 140 carries this season and is ranked ninth in the league for that effort.

Kaufman, a junior, averages 38.6

yards per punt to put him at fourth in the conference.

On defense, Lumpkin leads the Gophers with 107 tackles (78 solo), two fumbles recovered and five interceptions, which ranks him third in the Big Ten and tied for 16th in the country. He also has seven tackles for -34 yards.

Davis is another Minnesota player with over 100 tackles (102) this season, including 69 solo.

Williams leads the Gophers with seven QB sacks for -52 yards. He has recorded 94 total tackles (52 solo) and has nine tackles for loss.

But on paper, Iowa shouldn't even be concerned. The Hawkeyes lead the Gophers in every category except kick-off returns and net punting.

That's always been a childhood dream of mine — to go on and continue playing football," he said. "On that level, right now, you see more fullbacks that are a lot smaller and a lot faster; who are able to catch the ball.

"I think I have those dimensions."

But first Montgomery is concentrating on finishing his junior season in style. And that means focusing on Minnesota.

For Montgomery, beating Minnesota has special meaning, but not only because he is from northern Iowa.

"There's always a big rivalry between the two," he said. "This time last year we kind of let down and wound up going up there and getting beat.

"This year, we want to show people that we are going to give it our all throughout the entire season. We're going to go out and give 110 percent."

Anything less from Montgomery would be a surprise.

"Sometimes, we just work a little bit harder and carry our football ethic off of the field and into the classroom. That can be a big benefit when it comes to studies. If you look at the graduation rates of football players versus the average student, I know that ours are higher."

Much of this season, Faley has been stopping running backs and defending against the pass with a chronic shoulder injury that he sustained last spring. But when game time comes around and the opening kickoff is in the air, Faley says that the shoulder doesn't bother him as much because there's no better feeling in the world — especially at home.

Stadium is just unbelievable," he said. "It just makes you feel so good inside when the crowd really starts to get into the game, and you know that you have to play as hard as you can, for yourself and also for everyone else who wants you to win. It's exhilarating."

ried in the beginning of August, just a couple weeks before two-a-day practices began.

So a few days after returning from their honeymoon in Hawaii, Geater started football practice and the Geaters started making some big adjustments.

"It was an eye-opener," Geater said. "Nancy hated two-a-days; she didn't really understand. I tried to prepare her for what it was going to be like, but I even forgot how two-a-days are so demanding of us.

"But things are going better now. She goes to the games and see me play. She's starting to get into it. I have to teach her everything about what a defensive lineman does. It's kind of fun."

Geater added that he appreciates being with someone with whom he can share things other than football.

"It's nice because when you have a roommate, you go back to your room and you're always talking about football," he said. "Whereas when I go home now, she'll ask me how practice went and I'll tell her, but I don't like to dwell on it with her and she knows it.

"It makes it easier on me to be able to go home to someone who doesn't want to just talk football."

school-record 2,028 yards rushing on 235 attempts at Milton resurfaced in his first start against Minnesota, in which he rushed for 123 yards and scored three touchdowns.

As a sophomore, Saunders accounted for 1,026 all-purpose yards (11.4-yard average) at tailback and wide receiver, including returning 27 kick-offs for a 19.4-yard average. He also completed a 63-yard pass for a touchdown versus Tulsa.

But it was his versatility that made it possible for Saunders to successfully remain on the field after undergoing reconstructive ligament surgery on his left knee following the 1989 season. He put his time at running back on reserve and assumed a backup role at wingback to give his knee proper time to heal.

"(The time at receiver) definitely helped me because you do a lot less running and there's less contact," Saunders said. "It was kind of frustrating because I hadn't really been there before, and there's all of these tricks of the trade that I had to learn."

As far as Saunders returning to running back, the Iowa coaches had little concern with fitting him back in.

"We didn't anticipate any big problems with moving Mike back, but we had to see how his knee would respond," offensive coordinator Carl Jackson said. "I think Mike might be a little better threat than Nick and Tony. He has the same type of ability but he gives us another dimension."

Even as a big feature in the Iowa ground arsenal, Saunders realizes that with the Hawkeyes' balanced attack, there aren't going to be a slew of 100-yard games. But that's OK with him.

"Because there's something magical about gaining 100 yards, you want to get them," said Saunders, who has surpassed the century mark versus Purdue, Indiana and Northwestern this season. "But in our attack, I knew from the beginning of the year that there wouldn't be many individual 100-yard games."

"You look at the guys that have a lot of 100-yard games and they're carrying the ball 25-30 times a game and that's just not the way that our offense works."

With all of the changes that he has endured and all of the positions that he assumed, Saunders says that he is enjoying the role of running back this year more than any other.

"I've always had fun playing even though it's been kind of frustrating moving from position to position and never really settling permanently in one spot," Saunders said. "But now it's maybe a little more fun because I don't have to worry about getting playing time like when I was coming up through the ranks. Now I just go out and play as hard as I can."
