UI libraries to reduce hours during break

The UI library system will operate at reduced hours over the Thanksgiving break.

Tuesday and Wednesday, the south entrance of the Main Library will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. The building and all services will be closed Thursday. The south entrance will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. both Friday and Saturday, and from noon to midnight Sunday.

Departmental libraries will also reduce hours. The Music Library will be closed Thursday through Saturday and all other departmental libraries will be closed through Sunday.

Gas leak forces building evacuation

A gas leak at the Burlington Street Plaza forced the evacuation of 22 people Monday.

The Iowa City Fire Department responded to a call at 4:30 p.m. from Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric to evacuate the complex from 304 to 318 1/2 East Burlington St. after a gas odor was detected in the basement.

The leak was discovered and repaired by 6:25 p.m. There were no injuries or damage.

Raymond L. Bywater dies at age 80

Raymond L. Bywater, lifelong resident and booster of Iowa City, died Monday morning at his home at age 80. Bywater was a 1933 UI graduate, majoring in business with a minor in journalism.

Bywater was chairman of the board of The Economy Advertising Company, founded by his grandfather in 1896. He was an active booster of Iowa City and a faithful follower of UI sports. Since 1929 he had missed only four Hawkeye home football games.

Services will be Friday at 2 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church. A memorial fund benefiting the new College of Business Administration building has been set up with the UI Foundation. Another memorial fund has been established with the Mercy Hospital Foundation.

Marijuana doesn't affect reproduction hormones

Chronic use of marijuana has no significant effect on reproductive hormone concentrations in either men or women, according to a recent UI College of Medicine study.

Results of the study differ from a widely publicized report that appeared in the New England Journal of Medicine in 1974 that showed chronic marijuana use decreased testosterone levels in men.

Hormone levels of both men and women who used marijuana regularly were measured in addition to those of non-users.

14th truce largely holds in Yugoslavia

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Sporadic shelling echoed around the strategic city of Osijek Monday, but the 14th cease-fire in Yugoslavia's civil war reportedly held elsewhere in Croatia.

Some federal troops began withdrawing from army garrisons in Croatia after the republic's government had to lift a blockade on the base. Croatian and federal military leaders reached an agreement in Zagreb for an exchange of all prisoners.

Slavko Dokmanovic, president of Vukovar's City Council, said Monday that about 5,000 people died in the fight for his town.

Unions await Branstad testimony

Eric Detwiler
Daily Iowan

The court battle between the state of Iowa and its largest union continued Monday over Gov. Terry Branstad's controversial veto of an allotted $19.2 million increase in wages for state employees.

Branstad vetoed a pay raise of 3 percent in fiscal year 1991 and a 5 percent increase in fiscal year 1992. The increases that were vetoed were awarded to the state unions in binding arbitration.

Branstad justified his veto by saying that the funds for the increase were not available in the state budget due to the current budget crisis.

The suit has been brought into Polk County District Court by three union groups — the Iowa United Professionals, the State Patrol Officer's Council and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees union.

Don McKee, president of the AFSCME Council No. 61, said Monday that the money was available, but Branstad had chosen to spend it on his own personal projects.

"They believe the governor has the right to veto any bill regardless of the effect it has on the employees," McKee said. "I believe the issues that have been laid out are clear. It comes down to spending priority. Gov. Branstad clearly felt some of his programs were more important than the ordered wage increase for the state employees."

Branstad is expected to testify later in the trial, perhaps as early as next Monday. According to the governor's Press Secretary Dick Vohs, Branstad wants the chance in court to further explain and justify his actions.

"The union position is they want their 9 to 19 percent salary increase no matter what," Vohs said. "They don't seem to care about any other part of the budget or whether it's balanced at all."

McKee said Monday the unions were looking forward to the governor's upcoming testimony.

"If he does testify it will be under oath, and we will do everything in our power to impeach his testimony," McKee said.

The trial is expected to last until mid-December with a verdict that could be issued as late as February because of the amount of testimony involved.

"The fact is there are no more funds," Vohs said. "Branstad had to veto $140 million just to bring the budget down to zero."

Both the state and the unions have said they will appeal the case to the Iowa Supreme Court if the decision goes against them. If the current trial is appealed, the suit will probably come before the Iowa Supreme Court next spring.

Republics refusing to endorse treaty

Brain Friedman
Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev on Monday suffered a serious setback in his bid to hold the nation together when the leaders of seven republics refused to endorse a treaty to create a new political union.

Instead of initialing the Union Treaty as planned, the leaders decided to send it to the legislatures of their republics for consideration, a weary Gorbachev said after a four-hour meeting.

He warned again that time was running out for holding the nation together as a looser confederation, with most powers moving from the Kremlin to the republics. He said economic, ethnic and other problems cannot be addressed until the union question is settled.

In a further blow to Gorbachev's efforts, the powerful Ukraine stayed away from Monday's meeting. The leader of Azerbaijan also did not attend because of escalating tensions with neighboring Armenia, and Gorbachev said Armenia and Azerbaijan were verging on war in their ethnic dispute.

Members of the State Council — the body set up to run the Soviet Union after the abortive August coup — reportedly clashed sharply over the Union Treaty's wording at a closed session at a government villa outside Moscow.

During a live, nationally televised news conference, the normally confident Gorbachev appeared nervous and hesitant as he tried to put the failure in a positive light.

He said the decision to send the document to the legislatures without endorsement of the leaders represented a sort of "collective initialing" and predicted it would be signed "around Dec. 20."

In reality, however, it was a major blow to his plan to preserve the country while retaining some sort of national authority.

The pact now will be debated by local legislatures where it almost certainly will face further revision, delay and potential opposition. Original plans called for republic leaders to sign it, then have the legislatures ratify it.

"The country and society are in such a state that the process should move ahead, as reforms will not work, nor the economic treaty, nor anything else, unless we untangle this main knot of statehood," Gorbachev said.

He also failed to win endorsement

FACULTY SALARIES

Regents say discrepancies result from outside factors

Heather Pitzel
and Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

A report from the Iowa state Board of Regents which showed male faculty earning approximately $6,000 more than females does not address specific factors such as area of discipline and experience, according to UI faculty and administrators.

Many said the discrepancy simply reflects what is going on outside state institutions in the private sector.

Regent Mary Williams said the salary gap shows that universities are involved in "followship" instead of leadership.

"The university doesn't fail to take proactive positions on quality health care or improving the reputation of athletics — this is an area I expect they will act on," Williams said.

The UI performs routine checks on salary equity according to Sara Wolfson, associate vice president for faculty personnel and development in academic affairs.

Wolfson said salary increases are checked and departments are contacted if it appears there is a discrepancy between salary by gender within the same rank. The UI has not done a recent check because faculty salary increases were not appropriated.

The salary gap did not surprise Catherine Ringen, chairwoman of the linguistics department and former president of the Council on the Status of Women.

"I'm not justifying it, but in areas that are traditionally dominated by women the salaries are lower because relative salaries fall as soon as large numbers of women enter the field," Ringen said.

Affirmative Action Director Susan Mask said the data shouldn't be dismissed, but more criteria such as years of experience, time in the position and the discipline should be examined.

Mask suggested a salary review within rank would be more telling. Williams said women have come a long way but not far enough. She said she remembers working for $10,000 as an assistant professor in 1970.

"I thought that was a lot of money," she said. "Then I looked around and saw what others were being paid."

Williams said that era marked a time of "tremendous upheaval in women's salaries — equity was an important issue."

Ellen Heywood, president-elect of the Council on the Status of Women and resident assistant in preventive medicine, agreed. "Women felt they'd fought and, not that they'd won, but things were on the right track."

Heywood said the gap may exist because women haven't been in the system long enough or that their

GROUNDWATER PROTECTION

Survey: 22% of retailers not complying with program

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

Area retailers who sell products that contain environmentally hazardous materials are failing to comply with a program designed to reduce groundwater wastes, according to a survey by members of Environmental Advocates.

The Consumer Information Program is part of the 1987 Groundwater Protection Act, which requires retailers to pay for a $25 permit to sell the hazardous products. In addition, they must put stickers on the products warning consumers of their dangers and supply informational pamphlets and posters near the products.

Members of Environmental Advocates held a news conference Monday morning to release the results of their six-week survey of 47 retailers in Iowa City and Coralville. They found retailers to be in very poor compliance with the Consumer Information Program.

Only two of the 47 retailers — 4 percent — were in total compliance with the requirements, while 22 percent were in total non-compliance. Seventy-four percent of the retailers were in partial compliance, meaning they observed one or two of the requirements.

These findings were compared with the same survey done in 1989. That year, none of the retailers were in total compliance, while 46 percent were in total non-compliance.

"The results of this survey once again lead us to ask, 'Just how effective is the Consumer Information Program of the household hazardous materials law?'" EA member Lori Enloe said in a statement.

This program, she said, is "an important step in providing consumer information and helps reduce these wastes. However, the current program continues to be ineffective."

EA member John Moreland said the high non-compliance among retailers is a result of the hiring freeze instituted by the Iowa government. The Waste Management Authority Division of the Department of Natural Resources has only one staff member to implement the program, and although the money generated from the permit fees would allow them to hire additional staff members, they

Candidate Laughlin visits local school, blasts Harkin

Loren Keller
Daily Iowan

Taking the podium to the song "One Tin Soldier," Democratic presidential candidate Tom Laughlin spoke his mind to about 400 Iowa City High students Monday, calling Iowa senator and fellow candidate Tom Harkin "a sleazeball."

Laughlin, who starred in the "Billy Jack" movies in the early 1970s, prided himself on being a non-politician and spoke extensively of his distaste for elected officials, political action committees and politics in general.

"Politicians by the nature of politics must lie," Laughlin said. "Never trust a man in a pinstripe suit and a red power tie. The moment you see that you know you're dealing with a corrupt liar."

Laughlin announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination Oct. 20 in his hometown of Milwaukee, Wis., though he believes there are other non-politicians more qualified to be president than he.

"I was trying to get Bill Moyers or Norman Schwarzkopf or someone better than me to run," Laughlin said. "The only two people less qualified to be president than me are George Bush and Tom Harkin."

As an outspoken critic of the electoral system, Laughlin has repeatedly called for its reform. "I run because I can't take it anymore, and I want to change the system," he said.

Laughlin is calling for Harkin to either demand a secret ballot at the caucuses or withdraw from the race. He accused the Iowa Democratic Party of using "muscle and threat" in the open caucus to make members support Harkin, Iowa's "favorite son." As a result, he said, the Iowa caucus will be less significant in terms of the national election.

"Iowa is in danger of becoming a nonentity as far as national primaries are concerned, and that's not a trivial thing," he said. "People will say Iowa doesn't matter anymore."

Iowa will enjoy an "eight- or nine-day euphoria" before it is overridden by the New Hampshire primary, Laughlin said.

Laughlin stressed that elected officials have lost touch with their constituents but continue to act in their own self-interest. "The only way to have a democracy is to have the elected representatives have their self-interests so interwoven with the people they represent, that in acting on behalf of their own self-interest, they act on behalf of the people," he said.

After Laughlin's 45-minute speech in which he referred to Harkin as a "sleazeball," City High government teacher Dale Hibbs said, "We'll make the same podium available to Harkin."

Laughlin is the only political candidate who has visited City High this election year. Harkin has not visited the school within the last seven years, Hibbs added.

Past visitors to City High have included 1988 presidential hopefuls Michael Dukakis, Pete DuPont, Jesse Jackson, Jack Kemp and Socialist candidate Willa Kenover.

Iowa Sen. Charles Grassley, Rep. David Nagle, Gov. Terry Branstad and 1988 candidate for governor Don Avenson have also visited the school.

OSAGE, IOWA

UI foreign students spend holiday with Iowa families

John P. Waterhouse
Daily Iowan

In 1954, visiting UI foreign students helped to restore a church destroyed by fire in Osage, Iowa. Over 37 years later the people of Osage continue to show their appreciation by inviting foreign students to participate in a traditional Thanksgiving dinner.

The UI Office of International Education and Services in cooperation with the people of Osage have invited nearly 30 UI foreign students to experience a traditional Thanksgiving dinner this weekend.

The small farming community of 3,700 people located in northern Iowa gives the students a chance to witness small-town Iowa that they can't necessarily experience in Iowa City, said Liz Pearce-Burton, QIES international activities coordinator.

She said the people of Osage are very receptive to the foreign students. "A lot of people feel so sorry for the students that they invite them to stay for three days during the Thanksgiving holiday in their homes," she said.

The tradition began in 1954 after a church was destroyed by a fire and a group of foreign students visiting for the holiday responded by collecting funds for the rebuilding of the church. To express their appreciation, the Osage Rotary Club has sponsored a Thanksgiving trip almost every year for the students.

Larry Kirschner, a member of the Rotary Club, said the Thanksgiving trip provides the students with a "unique holiday experience" and gives those families in Osage who open up their homes "a chance to get to know someone from another country."

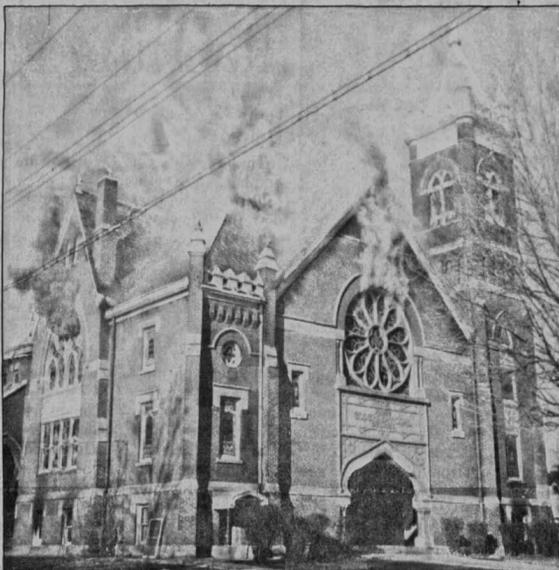

He said of all the foreign students at the UI, only 3 percent of those have probably been in an American home.

"This figure is significant because these students are exposed to the UI campus and fast food restaurants. But that is only part of our culture," Kirschner said.

The chance to actually share a traditional holiday meal has surprised both the foreign students and the host families.

"There have been students who have said they were afraid of the dogs in the homes they stayed at," Pearce-Burton said. "They usually associate a dog as an animal that should be kept outside. It's like having hogs or a cow roam through an American house."

While in Osage, the students have the opportunity to visit a farm, go bowling with their host families and will attend a banquet Friday evening in their honor.

Pearce-Burton said in addition to the Thanksgiving trip to Osage, there are some foreign students who like to spend their Thanksgiving holiday with friends, while others share a dinner with the Program.

She said in past years when she picks the students up in Osage, they are "blown away when they realize they all had the same thing to eat although they stayed in separate homes."

UI professor aids Moscow's reorganization

Chris Pothoven
Daily Iowan

As the government and lifestyle in the Soviet Union evolves and changes from its former communist structure, many new and old social issues are emerging.

To help the Soviet people deal with these issues, a UI professor recently traveled to Moscow as part of an international effort to assist in the reorganization of the Soviet social system.

Tom Walz, a UI professor of social work, served as part of a three-member team from the International Association of Schools of Social Work that introduced the profession of social work to the U.S.S.R.

While there, he worked with the recently developed Soviet Bureau of Family and Cultural Affairs.

"It's essentially a new structure created under the new government," Walz said. "Their job is to rethink the policies and programs with respect to the needs of families."

The bureau is involved in reviewing current social programs and identifying areas with greater needs, he said, as well as examining various social programs around the world.

Through his work with the bureau Walz became the first North American in Soviet history to address a class of Soviet social work students. The class, he said, is part of a three-year social work program run by the bureau.

Walz also lectured and held individual consultations with a group of 35 Soviet professors, he said. Following a series of monthlong seminars, these individuals will be expected to develop social work programs at their institutes and universities.

"They've launched the programs, and now they're sort of learning on the run," he said.

Eventually, the Bureau of Family and Cultural Affairs and other government agencies will need to develop a model to use in Soviet social work.

"They've got to decide how much of a role philanthropy, the Russian Orthodox Church, the government, trade organizations and other things will play in the social system," Walz said. "They can't introduce a lot of foreign things. They have to pay attention to the culture already there."

He doubted the Soviet Union will adopt the type of social system present in the United States.

"I expect they'll go in the direction of the North European social welfare state," he said. "Overall, it probably is a system that is more superior to ours."

The main factor in determining what type of social programs need to be developed is the introduction of capitalism in the U.S.S.R., Walz said.

"One of the key issues is that with capitalism come some very serious problems," he said. "They're going to have to gear up to deal with those."

Two of the most substantial new problems facing the Soviet social system are unemployment and homelessness, Walz said. Under the Communist system, employment was guaranteed.

"Once you go to a free market system, wow! Unemployment is going to hit hard," he said.

The "new" Soviet Union has also inherited the problem of family breakdown, Walz said. Under communism, families were mainly seen as providing workers.

"I was very surprised at the severity of the family problems in the Soviet Union," he said. "There is a substantial problem with family instability and family tension. You have problems with abortion, problems with alcoholism, problems with the care of dependent and neglected children."

"Other problems which go hand in hand with the problems of a capitalist society are yet to hit."

UISA

Wise 'cleans house,' seeks more concerned senators

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

Approximately two months after switching from president to vice president of the UI Student Assembly, Matt Wise has delivered on his call for a UISA housecleaning and is now proposing a plan to fill empty senate seats.

Wise said that the number of senators in the two undergraduate senates has dropped from around 25-35 in each senate to 12. But, he said, the smaller numbers have been fine with him.

"I'd much rather have 10 or 15 active members who are really concerned than 25 or 30 who are sitting around and are there to build their resumes," he said.

Wise said the majority of retired senators left on their own. However, some were "taken off the rolls" after missing more than four meetings.

In order to fill the vacant seats, Wise has proposed a petition election system to the Student Elections Board. Under the plan, students interested in being a senator have a petition signed by 100 people. When the petition is complete, the student will receive a seat.

UISA President Jennifer Kelly said that Wise's special election plan is a quick and inexpensive way of getting new students involved.

"We've been trying to do this at a lower cost than the regular election. I think it's a good idea. It's quick, inexpensive and you'll constantly have people there who want to be there, which is what is most important for student government," she said.

Kelly said the Student Elections Board has yet to decide on the proposal. However, she'd like to see new senators start to fill the approximately 25 open seats as soon as possible.

"The board still hasn't come out with a new system. I'd like to see that happen soon," she said. "As soon as that's done, things should be smooth."

CHILD CARE

Male caregivers defy industry stereotypes

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

Men are breaking down gender barriers in the traditionally female field of child care, but stereotypes and suspicion of abuse by males still exist.

The work-study staff at Brookland Woods Day Care, 309 Melrose Ave., consists of 17 men and 13 women. Director Sharon McDonald said most of the men are good child-care providers.

McDonald described her male staff as less rule-oriented, more competitive in games and more likely to yell, "Hey, let's go play some ball!" than women.

"Men aren't less tender but less protective with children," McDonald said. "They tend to expect more from kids. If a child is cranky, a male staff member will say 'shape up' whereas a woman will say 'oh, he's tired.' I seriously think these things are genetic."

It's good for children to see both sexes doing the same work and spending time with them, McDonald said. The male role models are especially good for kids from dysfunctional families but are also good for those from nuclear families. She said children from nuclear families often don't spend enough quality time with their fathers.

She explained the staff encourages young boys to do non-traditional activities, and they are more likely to go into the housekeeping room to play cooking, grocery shopping and sewing if a male staff person is there.

"The main reason I'm here is the children."

Terry McCall, day care director

When parents inquire about staff doing private baby-sitting, McDonald said requests between the genders are even. She did note that when girls become 5 years old they tend to want female baby sitters at home, although they like the male staff.

One downside for male child-care providers is the suspicion they encounter due to greater awareness of sexual abuse and the statistics that show more men commit sexual abuse than women.

"We certainly are aware men are in a more awkward situation when it comes to child abuse — there's a higher chance they may be suspected of it," McDonald said. "If they're uncomfortable with changing diapers, they can have someone else in the room until they get comfortable. But we never get complaints about our male staff."

Terry McCall, director of Rainbow Day Care Center, 407 Melrose Ave., said he had difficulty getting started in child care 10 years ago. Some other directors wouldn't talk to him, he said, and it was only after a couple years that they would ask for his input.

McCall said he attends child-care meetings now where he is the only male. He acknowledges he is in a traditionally female field and said there is only about one male for every 100 female child-care workers. The one man is usually in an administrative position, McCall said.

"If I can't go play in the sandbox and sled with the kids, why am I in child care? I don't want to be a form-filler, although that's an important part of my job. The main reason I'm here is because of children," McCall said.

He said gender barriers in day care are falling but some are still intact, though sometimes subtle. Male staff members are still seen as potential abusers, he said. McCall noted one parent removed a child simply because he was a male director.

"When someone comes in they see me with long hair, a big bushy beard and a flannel shirt. Parents expect an administrator with business clothing, but I can't be outside sledding with children dressed like that," McCall said. "If parents don't like me, it's usually because of my personal style. It's not a gender problem."

Rainbow Day Care employs five men out of a staff of 26 people. McCall said the reason for the low number of men is the lack of male applicants.

McCall said in his experience, parents tend to prefer males for baby-sitting at home because "they are often more willing to rough and tumble with kids."

"Male staff are learning how to be nurturing and caring and that it's OK to be a little silly. As a society, we're so socialized into our gender roles — men aren't supposed to be loving and gentle," McCall said. "We're trying to overcome those stereotypes."

COLLEGE OF LAW

Circuit Court judge visits UI, speaks with students, faculty

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

Circuit Court Judge Alex Kozinski, who has raised the ire of many Washington legislators, spoke to UI law students and faculty Monday. The lecture was part of his three-day visit as judge-in-residence at the College of Law.

During a speech on the American legal system to approximately 125 members of the UI community, Kozinski discussed judges who twist the law to fit the way they want to rule and the importance of the First Amendment, among other topics.

The judge has been the object of controversy in Washington, D.C., according to Professor of Law James Tomkovicz, because his decisions don't follow any party line.

Kozinski, who has been described as a "classic libertarian," favors limited government, a free and unfettered market, and individual rights.

After the lecture, Kozinski was asked to comment on the recent Clarence Thomas/Anita Hill hearings.

"I don't know," he said. "It's an exceedingly difficult question, and I just don't know."

He then pointed out what he felt to be an important lesson from the case.

"The most important point to be taken away from all of that is that people get put away for years and years under less evidence than that," he said. "It's frightening how often in criminal cases you get decisions with no clear evidence."

CITY COUNCIL

Parking solution creeps closer

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

The Iowa City City Council came another step closer to finding a solution to the parking problem in downtown Iowa City at the council's work session Monday night.

A majority of the council was in favor of building a multilevel parking structure on the Recreation Center parking lot. City staff members will work on establishing costs and financing, and the plan will be brought to the council again for review.

There was discussion on where parking was most needed. Some council members felt that additional spaces should be added south of Burlington Street to encourage more development there.

"I don't think anything is going to happen in the development of the south Burlington area unless we do something about the parking there," Mayor John McDonald said.

Councilor Randy Larson was in favor of filling the present need for parking in the immediate downtown area, however.

"I figure we need 300 new spots for right here. I'm concerned that if we build something here and south of Burlington that the rates are going to increase too much," Larson said.

Earlier the council had considered building a deck on top of the Chauncey Swan and Recreation Center lots.

"The Chauncey Swan lot has always been identified by consultants as the most attractive lot," Joe Fowler, city transportation planner, said. "But the Rec Center lot won't make that much of a difference."

Councilor Darrel Courtney said that the Parks and Recreation Commission was not in favor of building onto the Recreation Center lot. He said the commission fears that building a ramp would restrict expansion to the center.

They were also concerned that it would hinder the drop-offs on the side of the building, but city staff reported that the design would not interfere with drop-offs.

 expire Dec. 31. The extensions are strongly supported in both parties as helpful in a time of economic stress.

Banking committees worked on must-pass bills to replenish the Federal Deposit Insurance fund by $30 billion and to provide $80 billion to close down ailing savings and loans. And negotiators pressed to improve unemployment benefits even beyond the extension enacted two weeks ago.

On Nov. 20, debate revolved around whether helping dismantle the former adversary's nuclear weapons was an urgent enough need to warrant U.S. taxpayers picking up part of the tab.

The question... is whether, having won the Cold War, we are willing to join with our former adversaries to eliminate the armageddon arsenals it produced, said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. "To defeat it would be a reckless gamble with history."

Senators also voted 87 to 7 to allow the Pentagon to use an additional $200 million for emergency airlift of food and medical supplies to needy areas of the Soviet Union this winter.

The Soviet aid provision was attached to a technical bill allowing implementation of the CFE treaty by authorizing transfer of some conventional weaponry to other NATO countries.

The bill still had to go to the House, which has approved the CFE-implementation measure, but without the Soviet aid provisions.

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush was

"extremely pleased by the Senate's resolution of advice and consent to ratification of the CFE Treaty."

"This action could not be more timely," said Fitzwater, adding that the treaty "is the cornerstone of the new security structure we have been working to construct in Europe."

The proposal would allow the Bush administration to shift up to $500 million from elsewhere in the Pentagon budget to provide technical help to the Soviets to dismantle as many as 15,000 tactical nuclear weapons over several years.

The weapons include nuclear mines, artillery shells, bombs and short-range missile warheads that President Mikhail Gorbachev has promised to destroy. That promise is similar to a pledge by President Bush to get rid of tactical nuclear weapons in the U.S. arsenal.

Intelligence reports have painted a picture of deteriorating order in the Soviet Union as republics assert their independence and competing political leaders grope for power. Food shortages and economic upheaval are adding to the volatile mix, experts say.

The aid measure was a pared-down version of a $1 billion Soviet aid package that was withdrawn less than two weeks ago after it ran into a tide of anti-foreign aid feeling in Congress.

Monday's debate highlighted U.S. confusion about how to respond to a situation it cannot predict — whether American security is best served by aiding its former adversary or by standing back and watching it self-destruct.

SYSTEMS UNLIMITED

Local agency marks 20 'very special' years

Anne Johnston
 Daily Iowan

Systems Unlimited, Inc., a non-profit agency geared toward helping people with developmental disabilities, will be celebrating 20 years of service with an anniversary banquet the evening of Friday, Dec. 6.

The banquet, which has been dubbed "A Very Special Event for Very Special People," will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Union. More than 400 people are expected to attend, including staff, board members, members of the community and several clients.

"It's an evening of celebration. A lot of people are living very successful lives today by recognizing their abilities rather than their disabilities," Chief of Programs Ginny Kirschling said.

Since Systems Unlimited began in 1971 with the establishment of a children's group home, it has expanded to include 13 group homes as well as apartments and in-home services. The organization serves more than 330 people with varying levels of disability, ranging in age from 8 to 67.

Kirschling said that the growth Systems has experienced is due in large part to support from parents, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, the Johnson County Association for Retarded Citizens and the Department of Human Services.

"You couldn't have 20 years of success without that kind of community cooperation," Kirschling said.

"Our whole intent is to move people toward independence. We know that not all of them are going to make it, but that's the direction we want to go, and some of them do make it," Executive Director Jim Ziolkowski said.

One of those who made it, and who will be among those attending Friday's banquet, is Coralville resident Barb Easler, described by Ziolkowski as "a prime example of what Systems is all about."

Fifteen years ago Easler, who uses a wheelchair, moved into one of Systems' group homes where she remained throughout high school. After a year at college, she returned to enter what is now known as the CSALA Program, or Community Supervised Apartment Living Arrangement, where she remained for seven years until she moved into her own apartment in 1988.

"Systems Unlimited is a wonderful program," she said. "They take the person as a person first and the disability second. They don't say, 'Well, this is as far as you're ever going to go.' They don't put limitations on you, and as a disabled person, we don't need the limitations. We need people that are going to say, 'You can do anything you want to. Go after it.'"

Last January Easler was hired as a receptionist at the Nelson Center, where Systems Unlimited clients work on development of vocational skills.

The upcoming banquet, which will feature awards presentations, a raffle drawing and music, is shaping up to be a success.

"We've had a tremendous outpouring of enthusiasm and hard work on the part of staff to get this done. A lot of people donated many, many hours of their time," Ziolkowski said.

In order to raise money for the banquet and to keep the ticket price down, many of those people have been standing outside UI football games and Hy-Vee Food Stores, selling raffle tickets.

SOVIET UNION

 before a critical referendum on independence this Sunday in the Ukraine, the strongest of the five Soviet republics that refused to attend Monday's session. The Ukraine has balked at signing the treaty although it has agreed to join in an economic grouping with eight other republics.

Russia, the largest republic, is the most important participant in the new union, but the Ukraine's absence would severely weaken the confederation. With 53 million people, the Ukraine is an agricultural and industrial power, and Gorbachev has said a union without it was "unthinkable."

Several changes are to be made in the Union Treaty before it is sent to the legislatures, Gorbachev said. He did not spell out the revisions.

The treaty would limit the Kremlin's role to foreign affairs, strategic nuclear arms and coordination of economic policy. It also would establish a five-year, directly elected national presidency and an independent judiciary and would let the republics introduce their own currencies.

Part of Monday's debate apparently centered on whether the new union would be a real nation or merely an association similar to the European Community. Gorbachev said it was agreed to keep it as a "confederated democratic state."

Gorbachev said the leaders of the seven participating republics were under political pressure over the document and were leaving themselves some "room for maneuvering" by seeking approval from the legislatures.

"Pressure is being put on my colleagues by various movements which raise doubts about the usefulness of preserving the state," he said without elaborating.

The Interfax news agency said Azerbaijani President Ayaz Mutalibov told Gorbachev he was absent because the situation between Azerbaijan and Armenia "was extremely tense."

Azerbaijan reportedly was weighing breaking off relations with Armenia today, and Gorbachev said the two republics were "verging on a real war."

SALARIES

 involvement in some fields such as law is very recent. She said she rejects the explanation "that women don't have educational credentials."

"Many women are in non-valued areas," Heywood said.

Williams said she expects more discussion from the regents when further data is obtained. Board President Marvin Pomerantz put the responsibility in the hands of the institutions.

"We are looking to them to take appropriate action," he said. "We want to see equalization in terms of total job environment."

ENVIRONMENT

 cannot due to the freeze.

"Without adequate staff this program will continue to flounder," Moreland said.

Enloe said the goal of the program is to let consumers know what products are hazardous, why they are hazardous and what alternative products they can choose. Many consumers don't realize the many hazardous products they may have in their homes including paint remover, car wax, carpet cleaner, toilet bowl cleaner, motor oil and batteries.

According to the EA, each household in Iowa deposits 15 pounds of hazardous material into landfills every year, making up 1 percent of the waste stream. The landfills where these wastes end up are not equipped to safely handle them, resulting in leakage into the groundwater and contamination of drinking water.

Enloe said that although it may not be possible to eliminate all the hazardous materials available, consumers should minimize their use and look for alternatives. In addition, the EA encourages manufacturers to produce less toxic products.

CAROL WALLACE

Regan's brand of feminism betrays women

Teresa Regan claims to represent the "true" feminism in her opposition to the "oppression" of abortion ["Pro-choice attitude betrays women's liberation," Nov. 13].

She offers three basic arguments to support her case: 1) the fetus is a full human being, deserving of the same rights as any other group in society, 2) abortion poses a serious hazard to women's health and lives, and 3) support for abortion rights is based on a selfish disregard for the rights of others. Each of these arguments is based on extremely flawed premises.

Regan argues that the idea that the fetus is a human life from the moment of conception "cannot seriously be up for debate." There are, in fact, serious grounds for debate. Many social and religious traditions have established the beginning of life at anywhere from the moment of "quickening" to the moment of birth. Others have recognized that the problem of exactly when life begins, just as that of when life ends, is an extremely complex blending of medical and moral questions with no clear-cut answers and have therefore left the determination up to the individual conscience of the person involved.

The fetus cannot be equated with "women . . . blacks, Jews, homosexuals, gypsies and the handicapped" who have at different times been denied legal personhood. There is a clear difference — the fetus is a fully dependent part of the body of the woman who carries it. During the first trimester, when 91 percent of abortions are performed, there is no evidence that the fetus has any cognitive or sensory functioning.

Regan's second premise is that abortion is extremely hazardous to a woman's health. This is patently untrue. The facts show that when performed in a safe, sanitary environment, abortion is actually much safer than many other common surgical procedures.

These are the facts: One woman in 200,000 dies from complications of legal abortion. Seven times this number die from childbirth, and many more develop severe complications. Less than one-half of 1 percent of women who have first trimester abortions require any additional surgery or hospitalization.

The list of potential risks which Regan offers is, in fact, an extremely accurate description of the complications that occur regularly when abortions are performed in unsafe, illegal circumstances. Before 1973, 10,000 women in the United States died every year due to illegal abortion. To this day, 200,000 women die every year from unsafe abortions in countries where abortion is illegal or restricted.

Regan's final arguments are that the abortion rights movement is based on a selfish "me" first mentality and that we believe that women "can only be equal if we are unpregnant . . ." I can't help wondering which is really more selfish: supporting the individual moral and ethical decisions that others must make based on their own circumstances? or imposing our own narrow sense of morality on others with no regard for the situations in which they find themselves?

The abortion rights movement understands that the ability to control her own reproduction is an integral part of every woman's freedom. As long as other means of preventing pregnancies are not perfect, abortion must be available as a backup, otherwise women become slaves to their reproductive capacity or are forced to take desperate, unsafe measures to end unwanted pregnancies.

The anti-abortion movement, on the other hand, has shown many times that its primary concern is not just with protecting the fetus — that it considers a human life, but rather — that the attack on women's reproductive freedom is part of a larger right-wing offensive against women.

Phyllis Schlafly insists, "Women have babies, and men provide the support. If you don't like the way we're made, you've got to take it up with God." Jerry Falwell says, "Most of these feminists need a man to tell them what time of day it is and to lead the home. And they blew it, and they're mad at all men." And the Rev. Paul Marx, president of Human Life International, proclaims, "Inequality is the natural condition." These attitudes reveal the true underlying agenda of the anti-abortion movement.

All of us would like to live in an ideal world where no woman ever faced an unwanted pregnancy. In a world where contraception was free, available to all, 100 percent safe and infallible, in a world where sex education was perfect, where there was no poverty that leaves a woman with no way to feed and care for the children she already has, in a world where there was no such thing as rape or incest or domestic violence — in a perfect world, there might be no need for abortion. We're a very long way from achieving that perfect world.

Something to consider on Thanksgiving Day

Thanksgiving will undoubtedly have special meaning to Thomas Sutherland following his release by Shiite Muslim captors in Lebanon. For most of his six-year internment, Sutherland was chained to a wall.

While Sutherland will be spending his Thanksgiving with family and friends, another American hostage, Terry Anderson, will spend his seventh Thanksgiving in captivity.

Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press and the longest-held Western hostage, was taken prisoner by the Islamic Holy War in March 1985. According to the recently freed Sutherland, Anderson "is no longer chained to a wall" but is "still in a room with very little fresh air and no daylight whatsoever." Americans Joseph Cicippio and Alann Steen — taken captive in 1986 and 1987, respectively — are also being held prisoner.

With the exception of President Ronald Reagan's attempt to exchange arms for hostages, the policy of the United States government has been one that refuses, at least publicly, to negotiate with those who hold Americans hostage.

With the exception of President Ronald Reagan's attempt to exchange arms for hostages, the policy of the United States government has been one that refuses, at least publicly, to negotiate with those who hold Americans hostage. Reagan's covert fiasco only demonstrated U.S. frustration in trying to free captive Americans.

There are no easy solutions to achieving the release of Western hostages or peace in the Middle East. However, the upcoming Middle East peace talks scheduled to take place in Washington, D.C., are an ideal forum for Secretary of State James Baker to make a formal appeal to the conference delegates for the release of Anderson, Cicippio, Steen and all hostages.

Having to follow a policy of patience is unquestionably frustrating to most Americans and painful for the hostages and their families. The policy is also an uncertain one because there are no guarantees of tomorrow. Marine Col. R. Higgins was hanged by his captors.

The tales of hardship endured by Terry Sutherland during his captivity and the uncertain future for the remaining three American hostages should at least give all who are free a reason to be thankful, and more importantly a reason to remember those still held hostage.

Rethinking the '60s

To the Editor:
I found Jim Rogers' editorial, "Flight from maturity, the '60s generation" [Nov. 21], quite offensive. His peculiar attempt at social analysis is simplistic and dangerous; he yokes the escalating divorce rate to a spiteful and loaded representation of an entire decade of American history. Worse still is Rogers' typical call for a return to "traditional" American values when what is called for is a more complex and thoughtful examination of this . . . social upheaval of staggering proportions expression of a "maturity" that actually functions to force individuals to invest in a house, cars, a job and all the trappings of the nuclear family. Rogers is right; there is no time for revolutions — failed, attempted, small or large — when you are keeping up with the Joneses.

Finally, I think Rogers should ask himself if there is such a thing as a . . . stable, intact family." Rogers assumes that the nuclear family is a unit that is naturally free from the "self-indulgence" and "selfishness" that he ascribes to the '60s generation. Since Rogers is so keen on statistics, maybe he should consider the large number of "broken lives" that have resulted from incest and domestic abuse. The nuclear family does provide a program as Rogers' source William Galston puts it — it programs a child to respond obediently to the patriarchal power systems that he or she will encounter again and again.

By blaming the "perverse ideal" of the '60s for today's social problems, Rogers overlooks other reasons that divorce has been on the rise. Unwanted pregnancies in populations where sex education is scarce and birth control unavailable often force couples to marry who will later divorce.

Further, marriage is represented in the American media as the ultimate

Buchanan wants to lead the Republican right

It seems conservative columnist Pat Buchanan is preparing to challenge President Bush and his brand of moderate Republicanism in the 1992 New Hampshire primary. Yet things are not always what they seem. Buchanan's challenge to Bush is not really about 1992. It is about 1996. Its goal is not the presidency but control of the conservative movement. And its principal target is not Bush's moderate Republicanism but the heresy of neo-conservatism.

Barring a miracle, such as an economic collapse, Buchanan has no chance of taking the White House. But that is fine with him. His goal in '92 is to claim hegemony over the conservative movement and to establish himself (and his Old Right paleoconservatism) as the only true heir to Ronald Reagan.

Anyone who has followed Buchanan's writings and ravings of the last year or two knows that while he has been critical of Bush's moderation, he has been positively deranged on the subject of neo-conservatism. "Before true conservatives can ever take back the country," writes Buchanan, "they are first going to have to take back their movement."

To understand this fight, one has to understand the deep and growing split in post-Reagan, post-communist American conservatism. On one side is Buchanan's reactionary (paleo) conservatism. It is narrow, xenophobic and ultranationalist. Its foreign policy is isolationist; its economic policy is protectionist; its domestic policy is anti-immigrant and closed to minorities. It is pessimistic and angry. Its leader, articulate and ubiquitous, is Pat Buchanan.

He has not borne it. Instead, he has attacked, calling his rival conservatives "ideological vagrants," "fleas" whose "relationship to the movement has always been parasitical." And parasites with chutzpah. "There are today scarred veterans of the Goldwater and Reagan campaigns" — guess who? — "taking instructions from ex-Democrats who worked for Lyndon Johnson and the right. He must liberate it from neoconservative deviationism.

In 1992, Buchanan may dream of winning the nomination, but the most he can realistically hope for is to pull Bush slightly to the right. And pulling moderates slightly to the right is not why a man of Buchanan's energy, ideology and ambition enters the electoral arena for the first time in his life.

He does so not to serve as a corrective but to begin a conquest, a slow conquest modeled after that of the now-betrayed Ronald Reagan. He knows that his reactionary wing of the Republican Party is in no position to take over the country. Today it is not even in a position to take over the Republican Party. But the agenda for 1992 is modest: To take over the Republican right.

New Hampshire '92 is a wonderfully opportune place to start it. Not just because of the recession and the very pro-Pat Manchem Union-Leader, but because Buchanan will have the (right) field all to himself. His neoconservative nemeses have no one to run against him.

The only plausible candidates, Kemp and Bill Bennett, are not about to enter a race that would pit them against Bush, whom they have no intention of embarrassing. That leaves Buchanan the sole challenger on the right (if one excludes ex-KKK wizards). It gives him an unencumbered chance to establish himself — for '96 — as the leader of the Republican right and the definers of its one true paleoconservative faith.

Charles Krauthammer's column is syndicated by the Washington Post Writers Group.

Anyone who has followed Buchanan's writings and ravings of the last year or two knows that while he has been critical of Bush's moderation, he has been positively deranged on the subject of neoconservatism.

On the other side is the more mainstream, progressive (neo) conservatism. It favors free trade and an actively internationalist foreign policy. It is welcoming to immigrants. It is against racial preferences, but its leading intellectuals always rejected segregationism in the past and its most important contemporary political figure, Jack Kemp, has been tireless in advocating opportunity for and openness to minorities.

Neoconservatism became dominant during the Reagan years, and this, more than anything, has left Buchanan unhinged. That these interlopers, these carpetbagging latecomers, these treacherous ex-liberals should have hijacked the Reagan revolution from people who had been "Right from the Beginning" (the title of Pat's autobiography) was more than he could bear.

Hubert Humphrey." Here he is talking not about Kemp, a mere frontman, but about neon intellectuals like Irving Kristol who, in Buchanan's demonology, are pulling the strings from the conservative foundations and publications they have taken over.

What to do? Buchanan quotes approvingly libertarian writer Murray Rothbard: "The first task of genuine conservatism is to throw off the neon control." Buchanan sees the political apparatus of conservatism falling to his enemies, and he is tired of being a mere color commentator to the event.

Hence New Hampshire. What does Buchanan hope to achieve there? No doubt he would like to overthrow the Bush moderates who took control of the post-Reagan Republican Party. But before he can really go after them, he must get control of

Freed Sutherland returns to United States

Associated Press

Former hostage Thomas Sutherland, accompanied by his wife Jean, waves to well wishers as he rides through Dallas-Fort Worth International airport in Grapevine, Texas, Monday afternoon.

Jean Pagel
Associated Press

GRAPEVINE, Texas — Thomas Sutherland arrived in the United States Monday after six and a half years as a hostage in Lebanon and said he would go back some day if his family and the government let him.

"Beirut is a different place from what it was," said Sutherland, accompanied by family members after a flight from Germany.

The American University in Beirut, where Sutherland was dean of agriculture when he was abducted June 9, 1985, was shattered by a bomb recently and needs rebuilding. "I would like to be part of that if it's possible," he said.

Sutherland spoke to reporters at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport before going on to Berkeley, Calif., for Thanksgiving at the home of a daughter who is nearly nine months pregnant and couldn't fly.

"It's going to be absolutely wonderful," Sutherland said. "There just isn't enough time in the day to catch up on everything that's happened."

His wife, Jean, said she had no fear about going back to the Middle East, where she felt "very comfortable." Sutherland said it would be months before he made such a decision, and he would first listen to what his family and the State Department tell him.

Sutherland, 60, and Terry Waite of Britain were released Nov. 18. Their release was widely seen as the most important sign that freedom is near for all hostages taken by Iranian-backed Shiite Muslims in Lebanon.

Sutherland's captors told him two of the three remaining U.S. hostages would be freed in a few days. American Terry Anderson, the longest-held Western hostage, would be released by the end of the month, Sutherland said.

"They're running a little late," he said. "That's not unusual for that particular organization. I'm still very hopeful."

Sutherland said his captors are "committed to finishing it up once and for all."

After his release, Sutherland spent six days at the U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden, Germany, where doctors treated him for gastritis and an ulcer. Air Force spokesman Capt. Ray Cornelius said Sunday that Sutherland was in "very good condition."

Sutherland was accompanied back to the United States by his wife and daughters Joan and Kit. The family planned to spend Thanksgiving at the home of a third daughter, Ann.

"My dad and I haven't had that much time to go over what each of us has been going through," Ann Sutherland said.

The family had a 90-minute layover at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport, where they went through U.S. Customs, met with reporters and visited with other air travelers before flying to San Francisco.

Sutherland grew up in Estes Park, Colo., and lived in Fort Collins.

At least six Westerners are still missing in Lebanon, including two Germans and an Italian.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was abducted March 16, 1985. He and Sutherland spent much time together in captivity.

Officials may call new election to reconfirm Aristide's ouster

Politicians expect the flood of refugees to force the United States to end the embargo.

Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haitian authorities said Monday they were prepared to call new elections in defiance of the international community, which wants the reinstatement of deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Some politicians expressed confidence that the United States, grappling with a sudden surge in Haitian boat people, would ease a punishing trade embargo even if Aristide were not returned to power.

The State Department reported 315 Haitians were rescued by the Coast Guard on Sunday, the most in a single day since the exodus began almost a month ago. Since Oct. 29, 4,530 Haitians have been picked up, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said.

Sen. Thomas Dupiton, who participated in failed talks over the weekend between Aristide and Haitian politicians in Colombia, predicted the provisional government would move ahead with elections.

"Since we have arrived at this point, I believe those who are in charge will set everything in motion in order to implement the constitution," Dupiton said in an interview.

After Aristide's ouster Sept. 30 in a military coup, lawmakers were pressured by the army to declare the presidency vacant and name a new provisional government, which would call elections within 90 days.

The Organization of American States denounced the coup, refused to recognize the new government and called for a trade embargo to push for Aristide's reinstatement. The embargo has created a severe fuel shortage and crippled Haiti's economy.

The OAS-mediated talks between Aristide and legislators broke down when the legislators refused to call for Aristide's reinstatement.

At a news conference in Port-au-Prince Monday, lawmakers charged Aristide with intransigence.

Senate President Dejean Belizaire said Aristide had "posed the problem in unconditional terms." Haitian society is badly divided on the issue, Belizaire said, and the legislators lacked the authority to agree to Aristide's return.

In Washington, Tutwiler expressed regret that no agreement was reached in the Cartagena talks.

"We continue to believe that these negotiations are the way to solve Haiti's crisis," she said.

Haitian legislators wanted to avoid a pledge that mentioned Aristide by name, preferring a generally worded promise to restore democracy. Aristide insisted on specific wording.

Haiti's armed forces are vehemently opposed to Aristide's return. Some soldiers have vowed to kill him if he comes back to Haiti.

Aristide, a 38-year-old activist Roman Catholic priest, took office in February after a landslide victory in the country's first free elections ever. He enjoys the support of the impoverished country's masses, but alienated the military and many in a wealthy elite accustomed to wielding political power.

Aristide's critics contend that he abused his authority, ignoring the legislature and encouraging mob violence against those who opposed him.

It was not clear whether the OAS would make a new bid at a negotiated solution. The OAS' representative in Haiti, Laurent-Paul Tardif, said he had "no idea" what new measures might be taken.

Marc Bazin, a conservative politician, said new elections were needed to "get the country back to normal."

Bazin said he expected the United States would be forced by the flood of Haitian refugees to lift the trade embargo it began implementing Nov. 5.

Thousands of Haitians have been plucked from rickety boats at sea by the U.S. Coast Guard since the coup, with the numbers steadily increasing the past two weeks. The Coast Guard says it is running out of ships to hold the Haitians, but it is barred by a federal judge in Miami, Fla., from repatriations.

Authorities bust operation with assistance of banks

Carolyn Thompson

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Authorities on Monday cracked a ring that allegedly laundered millions in Colombian cocaine money through banks across the nation, including one that figured in the collapse of Rhode Island's banking system.

The ring laundered as much as $500 million during the past two years from the Colombian-based Cali and Medellin cocaine cartels, much of it through Rhode Island banks, said U.S. Attorney Lincoln Almond.

The investigation grew from a previous one that uncovered a $1.1 billion money-laundering operation based in New York, Miami, Fla., and Los Angeles, Calif., in 1989, Customs Commissioner Carol Hallett said at a Washington, D.C., news conference.

"There were literally dozens of banks that were involved that have been very helpful to us," she said.

Banks involved were in Rhode Island, Los Angeles, Miami, New York and possibly Massachusetts, she said. John Hensley, assistant customs commissioner for enforcement, said about 25 banks were involved including some in Switzerland, England, Colombia and the Caribbean.

The investigation began in Rhode Island in 1989 and expanded into an international investigation last year, Hallett said.

Federal authorities, alerted by bank documents to large sums of cash coming into the banks used in the scheme, urged the banks to go along with it, Almond said.

"We were on to them from the start," he said.

"Money is really, we believe, the fuel that feeds the drug lords," Hallett said. "The drug traffickers and the kingpins are as addicted to money as the users are to the drugs."

A total of 50 people were named in indictments from at least five states and at least 35 had been arrested, the Justice Department said. Most will face charges of racketeering, conspiracy and money laundering and the ringleaders could face life in prison without parole, Almond said.

Indictments were returned in Atlanta, Ga., New York, Providence and Miami, and a criminal complaint was filed in Los Angeles. One bank, Heritage Loan and Investment Co. of Providence, was not filing the required forms for handling large cash transactions, Almond said.

About $15 million illegally went through Heritage before it closed after its president, Joseph Mollicone, embezzled $13 million.

Mercury's candor opens door for AIDS victims

Jessica Baldwin
Associated Press

LONDON — Like Magic Johnson saying that he is HIV positive, rock singer Freddie Mercury's deathbed announcement that he had AIDS will help make it easier for others to go public, AIDS groups said Monday.

Mercury, flamboyant lead singer of the rock group Queen, died Sunday at age 45, becoming Britain's best-known AIDS victim a day after he announced he had the disease.

"It will have saved many lives as people have begun to realize that AIDS is real and that HIV is no respecter of persons regardless of health or wealth," said Peter Glover, spokesman for the charity AIDS Care Education and Training.

Distraught fans gathered Monday outside the west London home where Mercury died of pneumonia brought on by acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

British radio stations played hits from Queen, the band formed by Mercury, Brian May, John Deacon and Roger Taylor in 1971. The band, which combined hard rock with elements of cabaret and even opera, sold more than 100 million records worldwide.

"We have lost the greatest and most beloved member of our family," May, Deacon, Taylor and Manager Jim Beach said in a statement. "We feel overwhelming grief that he has gone ... but above all great pride in the courageous way that he lived and died."

AIDS groups drew parallels between Mercury's last-minute announcement and the declaration by U.S. basketball star Johnson this month that he has the virus that causes AIDS.

But some cautioned that Mercury's lifestyle would make his announcement less effective than Johnson's declaration in promoting the message that everyone, not mainly homosexuals and drug addicts, is at risk. Mercury was bisexual.

"What we're finding ... is that AIDS can strike just about anyone, and you wouldn't necessarily think that they'd been particularly at risk," said Dr. Patrick Dixon, an AIDS specialist.

Other well-known Britons who died of AIDS include Ian Charleson, a star of "Chariots of Fire," and film director Tony Richardson, former husband of actress Vanessa Redgrave.

Princess Diana is Britain's best-known supporter of AIDS charities. She makes high-profile visits to AIDS sufferers, making a point of shaking hands and being photographed with them.

Mercury's announcement was prompted by speculation in tabloid newspapers.

In a statement Saturday, Mercury said he kept quiet about having AIDS to "protect the privacy of those around me."

"Hopefully the link Freddie Mercury has with his fans will keep the issue close to their hearts," said Victor Van Wetering of the Terence Higgins Trust. The trust is named for Britain's first known AIDS victim.

Bouquets of flowers were heaped Monday outside the walls of the house in London's Kensington district where Mercury lived as a recluse for the last two years.

Rate of hearing loss in men 30-80 twice that of women of same age

Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Men over 30 are losing their hearing more than twice as fast as women do at least through age 80, faster than previously supposed, a federal study suggests.

Results also suggest that men in more recent generations have poorer hearing at any given age than men in earlier generations, said study co-author Jay Pearson.

But several hearing experts said they were wary about the reported hearing loss trends for middle-age and younger men and the apparent worsening of hearing from one generation to another.

The study probably should not cause concern unless follow-up research confirms it, said Dr. Alexander Schleuning, professor and chairman of the department of otolaryngology, head and neck surgery, at the Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland, Ore.

Pearson agreed he "wouldn't want to go ringing alarm bells based on this study."

He said mostly well-educated volunteers from the middle class to upper middle class were studied so it is not clear whether the findings apply to the general population. Nor is it known whether the declines researchers found over 10 to 15 years will continue, he said.

Still, he said, the study "raises enough concerns that you definitely want to find out whether this is holding up in other places." He said the cause of the reported hearing loss in men is not known, "but if you want to speculate from what the conventional wisdom is on noise exposure, I would think you'd want to be careful about the noise you're exposed to at work and in your leisure."

The results also suggest a possible influence from some kind of societal trend, like use of high-powered stereo equipment, he said.

Pearson, a researcher with the National Institute on Aging, spoke in a telephone interview before presenting the work Monday in San Francisco, Calif., at the annual meeting of the Gerontological Society of America. He did the study with Larry Brant and other colleagues at the institute.

The study is part of the long-running Baltimore Longitudinal Study of Aging. It tracked the results of hearing tests repeated every two years on a group of 1,158 men and 551 women.

The men were followed for an average of 10 years and the women an average of five years. Their ages through the study period ranged from 30 to 80.

The tests focused on sound at 1,000 hertz, 3,000 hertz and 6,000 hertz, frequencies important for understanding speech.

As found in earlier research, men consistently had poorer hearing than did women of the same age at the three pitches.

The conventional explanation is that men are exposed to more loud noise from the workplace, military service and leisure activities like hunting and carpentry.

7 field hockey players named all-MCFHC

IOWA CITY — The Hawkeye field hockey team placed seven players on the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference first and second all-Conference teams, the MCFHC announced Monday.

Iowa coach Beth Beglin was honored as the conference's Coach of the Year for the third consecutive season, while senior Lisa Sweeney was named the Offensive Player of the Year.

"No way!" Sweeney exclaimed as she found out about the honor. "I expected a lot out of myself, but I didn't look past every game."

Sweeney joined Jibs Thorson, Amy Fowler and sophomore Tiffany Bybel on the first team. Fowler was also named to the first team a year ago.

Senior goalkeeper Eileen Moyer, junior Jamie Rofrano and sophomore Heather Bryant made it to the second team. It was the second year in a row for Bryant.

BASKETBALL

Spurs players in dispute with owner

SAN ANTONIO — San Antonio Spurs players are at odds with owner Red McCombs, who they say isn't committed to winning because he won't regularly charter planes for the team's out-of-town trips.

The dispute, which has simmered since last season, intensified Monday with the publication in San Antonio newspapers of an "open letter" from center David Robinson to McCombs.

"I'm finally fed up," the letter said. "I tried talking to you in a civilized manner, but obviously you didn't respect that because nothing has been done."

Robinson said commercial flights from San Antonio to other NBA cities usually are not direct and connect through Dallas, Houston, Salt Lake City and elsewhere.

Leaving hotels early to catch commercial flights "puts us at a distinct disadvantage especially when every other team that has a legitimate shot at winning a world championship has their own plane and are sleeping in their own beds," Robinson said.

Other Spurs players said the rest of the team agrees with Robinson.

Healthy Olajuwon checks out of hospital

HOUSTON — Houston Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon, looking relaxed and fit, checked out of a hospital today after undergoing four days of tests for an irregular heartbeat.

"I'm so happy all the tests showed I was normal," Olajuwon said. "I didn't know that I was that healthy. I don't know why they had to put me on injured reserve."

The Rockets placed Olajuwon on injured reserve Saturday, meaning he can return Dec. 5 against Atlanta if he gets medical clearance.

Olajuwon checked into Memorial Hospital-Southwest after his heart started beating rapidly.

"I wasn't concerned at the time because I felt normal but my heart was beating fast," Olajuwon said. "But because of all this technology, we found that my heart rate was up."

COLLEGE

Cincinnati linebacker found dead in dormitory

CINCINNATI — University of Cincinnati police are investigating the possibility that linebacker Andre Sherrod killed himself in his dormitory room Sunday, a school spokesman said.

The university's emergency operator received a call Sunday at 6:50 p.m. reporting that a man was lying in a pool of blood in a hallway of the Dabney Hall dormitory, university spokesman Greg Hand said today. Campus police and rescue squad personnel found Sherrod in the hallway near a dorm room, Hand said.

Sherrod, of New York, played in Cincinnati's final game Saturday, a 30-19 loss to No. 13 East Carolina.

The "warmup" is over and it's back to business for the Hawkeye wrestling team.

After pummeling a Drake Classic field by a combined score of 156-0 last Saturday, the No. 1 and 3-0 Hawkeyes should get their first taste of tougher competition Saturday at the Northern Open in Madison, Wis.

"We had a pretty good team effort for being early in the season," said top-ranked 142-pounder Troy Steiner, who recorded two pins and a technical fall last weekend. "It was just a warmup. We've got some big meets coming up and I think we're ready."

"Big" can be used to describe the importance of the non-scoring meet for the Hawkeyes, but it can also

"We've got to be ready for this one. It'll be more of a test. It's good to get momentum going."

Terry Steiner, Iowa wrestler signify the size of the Open. Between 35 and 40 teams are scheduled to compete — 350 individuals in all.

But in addition to the large contingent that will try to shake up the national rankings, Iowa will get a mini-preview to the Big Ten season. The 18-time defending conference champion Hawkeyes will see several Big Ten teams this weekend, including Michigan, Minnesota and Northwestern.

The Wolverines finished second to Iowa in the Big Ten race last season. They went on to take 12th in the NCAA Championships, while the Gophers placed eighth in the conference but seventh at the Nationals.

Other squads that will compete are Wisconsin-Stevens Point, Northern Iowa and a portion of the Iowa State team.

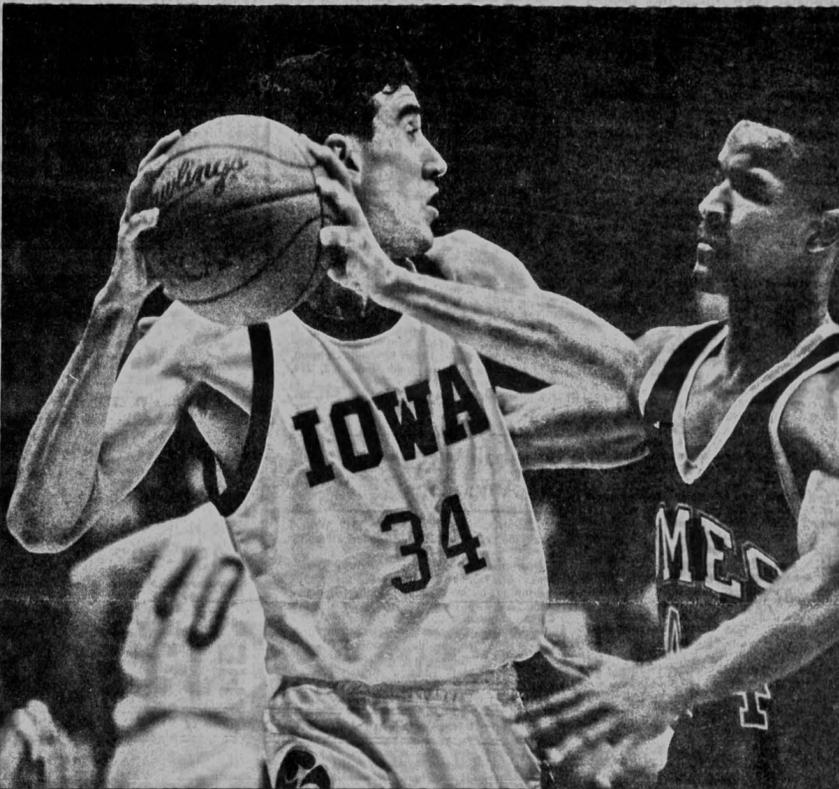

"We've got to be ready for this one," said second-ranked 150-pounder Terry Steiner, the Outstanding Wrestler at Drake. "It'll be more of a test. It's good to get momentum going."

At Drake, the Hawkeyes demolished Loras 57-0, Marquette 51-0, the Bulldogs 48-0 and an intramural squad from Bradley, 60-0. Unfortunately for Iowa, the dual with the Braves does not figure in team scoring because it was only an exhibition.

Prior to the season-opener, Coach Dan Gable had expressed concern that part of his team was plagued with injuries.

But apparently the Hawkeyes got better in time for the Classic, as 12 wrestlers made the all-Tournament team: 118-pounder Chad Zaputil, Terry Brands (126), Tom Brands (134), the Steiners, Tom Ryan and Rich Catalano (158), Keith Trammell and Mark Reiland (167), Bart Chelsevick (177), Travis Fiser (190) and heavyweight John Oostendorp.

Iowa junior Wade Lookingbill keeps the ball away from a Maryland-Eastern Shore opponent last Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Hawkeyes will take on Western Illinois at the Arena tonight.

Leathernecks enter the Hawkeyes' lair

James Arnold

Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeye basketball team may consider changing its name to the spiders the way it brings in smaller opponents and eats them up on court this season.

Saturday night the Hawkeyes opened with a 101-45 win over Maryland-Eastern Shore — the Hawkeyes' largest margin since a 101-48 decision over Wisconsin in 1985-86 season. In the final exhibition, the Hawkeyes beat High Five 105-67.

Only an 85-81 win over the Ukrainian National team kept Iowa under the century mark.

The next team to enter the web known as Carver-Hawkeye Arena is Western Illinois. The Leathernecks went 1-1 in exhibitions — beating Marathon Oil 95-77 and losing to a German team 71-68.

Iowa coach Tom Davis feels that this team will put up more of a fight than previous teams because Western Illinois is more familiar with Iowa basketball.

"They're so close," Davis said. "This would be a big game for them to come in here because they know the Big Ten."

Head Leatherneck Jack Margenthaler is coming off a disappointing season in the Mid-Continent Conference. His team finished 13-15 and lost to fellow Mid-Con team Northern Iowa twice (73-53 at home and 77-58 in Cedar Falls.)

It was Margenthaler's fourth time under .500 in 15 seasons at the helm. He was a player at Houston and assistant at Drake before settling in Macomb, Ill.

"The coach is really good," Davis said. "He's been around big-time programs and he's done an excellent job there at Western."

After shooting 11 percent from 3-point range in the first half, the Hawkeyes came back and made 2-4 in the second half.

Davis hopes more consistent 3-point shooting from seniors Troy Skinner, Rodell Davis and James Moses and junior Val Barnes will also catapult this team upward.

"We're trying to be a good balanced team that will occasionally shoot a lot of threes but will also go inside a lot," Davis said. "We're not there yet. That's a hard thing to teach. It takes time."

Freshman Paul Lusk and junior Wade Lookingbill started off the season against the UMES playing well after both of them sat out last season with injuries. Lusk had nine points, but dished out four assists. Lookingbill led the team with four steals and scored eight

SPORTS COLUMN

Turkeys of the year awarded by DI sports staff

Daily Iowan

Tisn't the season to be jolly so we want to hand down the 1991 Turkey awards for local and national sports boners.

Turkey awards for 1991 go to:

Tom Davis, for saying the games against Maryland-Eastern Shore, Western Illinois, Drake, and Centenary would test his Hawkeyes.

Minnesota's Gophers, for not taking the 23-8 snow bowl beating after a 2-9 season without fighting with the Holiday Bowl-bound Hawkeyes.

The young Iowa Volleyball team, who have gone 1-16 in the conference and 6-26 for the season. They could make us eat our words this weekend with wins over Michigan State and Michigan, though.

Coe College, for being blitzed 75-2 in the NCAA Division III Playoffs last weekend against St. John's College. Is it true Coe was 9-1 before the game, and not 1-9? Way to score running back an extra point.

The BYU team, who couldn't help Ty Detmer repeat as Heisman Trophy winner. You can't throw to the tight end all year long.

Floyd of Rosedale. No one cares as long as he is in Iowa.

The Redskins, for losing to Dallas.

Green Bay, for losing to everyone.

Da Cubs, for not beginning with the letter B. The "Bubs"

High Five coach Rie Nicholls, for saying Iowa wasn't as good as the big name teams, even after the Hawkeyes punished his team 105-67.

The Bowls, for having 10-1 Iowa not play on New Year's Day. At least the Hawkeyes get to play BYU.

Chris Street, for complaining about rebounding statistics in the Prime Time League.

The Atlanta Braves, for beating the Dodgers in the record book, but not beating them head-to-head.

Sam Smith, the Chicago Tribune writer and author of The Jordan Rules, for even thinking of interfering with the Bulls' "repeat" championship run this season.

Chicago Bears fullback Brad Muster, for saying the Indianapolis Colts were "a great 1-10 team." So what does that make them now that they're 1-11?

The NCAA committee, for not giving the Iowa field hockey team a first-round bye and the chance to host a second-round game to go to the Final Four. The top four teams in the nation receive byes, but somehow, the Hawkeyes were left out despite having the third best record during the regular-season.

The National Hockey League, for failing to realize that the current 80-game regular-season format doesn't mean anything.

Those of you who ever picked two college football teams to tie during the On The Line competition. You know who you are.

The 10,000-plus women who slept with Wilt Chamberlain.

MTV, for not having a Rock 'N Jock kickboxing tournament starring Axel Rose.

Raycom Sports, for rehiring Larry Morgan and Mac McCausland to announce Hawkeye basketball games.

KCRG TV-9, for having an "Outdoors" segment during its sports-casts. Yawwwwn.

KGAN for having John Baer wear a skirt, or...

To John Baer for wearing a skirt on his Sports Challenge segment.

Monday Night Football commentator Dan Dierdorf, for rarely knowing what he's talking about.

Oklahoma State wrestling coach Joe Seay, for encouraging his wrestlers to lie during an NCAA investigation of the program.

The NCAA Bowl committee again, for allowing 18th-ranked Notre Dame, owners of an 8-3 record, to play on New Year's Day.

To the Big Ten for having so few good kickers that Jeff Skillett is all Big Ten.

To the Dolphins because they know they're not as good as the Patriots.

(Last one) Anyone who finds any of these statements offensive. Who says Christmas 'tis the only season to be jolly?

To the Dolphins for having a PR assistant named Fudge Brown (ie).

Bono leads 49ers over Rams

Ken Peters

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — He'll probably never make anyone forget Joe Montana or even Steve Young, but on Monday night, being Steve Bono was plenty good enough.

Staging a passing show even Montana might envy, Bono threw for 306 yards, completing 18 of 33 passes as the San Francisco 49ers buried the hapless Los Angeles Rams 33-10.

Bono, a third-stringer thrust into a starting role because of injuries to Montana and Young, threw for 274 yards in the first half to stake San Francisco to a 30-3 lead. He threw only seven passes for 32 yards in the second half.

The 49ers went on to even their record at 6-6 and keep their playoff hopes alive while dealing the Rams (3-9) their sixth straight loss.

With Montana and Young watching, smiling and offering advice and lots of congratulations on the sidelines, Bono had by far the finest game of his seven NFL seasons.

He had never before thrown for more than 187 yards, and that was last week against Phoenix. Before this season, his best outing a 164-yard performance in a strike-replacement game against Atlanta.

Making his third consecutive start for the 49ers, Bono completed passes of 41 and 78 yards to set up the 49ers' first two scores; connected for 23 and 29 yards on their third touchdown drive; then had completions of 24 and 18 yards as they made it 30-0 late in the second quarter.

John Taylor had 100 yards in receptions by the end of the first quarter, on four catches that included a short pass he turned into a 78-yard gain. Taylor finished with 121 yards on six receptions.

Harry Sydney scored two of the first-half touchdowns, the first on a 1-yard run and the second on a 2-yard pass from Bono.

Tom Rathman also scored on a 1-yard run, and Dexter Carter added a 3-yard touchdown run.

FOOTBALL: 49ers beat Rams

Mike Cofer provided the 49ers' only scoring in the second half with a 39-yard field goal in the final quarter.
While the 49ers could seem to do no wrong, the Rams did little right. Their secondary, ranked 22nd in the NFL in pass defense, simply could not stop Bono in the first half.
And, until Los Angeles drove to a 37-yard field goal by Tony Zendejas on the last play of the half, the Rams' offense was almost completely shut down by the 49ers.

A couple of plays in the first half seemed to sum up the Rams' futility:
On the kickoff following the 49ers' second touchdown, the ball bounced off the Rams' David Lang in the end zone and bounded back across the goal line. LA's Vernon Turner scooped the ball up on the 1-yard line and frantically scooted back into the end zone, where he was pinned by the 49ers' Darin Jordan for a safety that gave San Francisco a 16-0 lead.
In the second quarter, the Rams

BASKETBALL: What a tangled web they weave points.

"I got a long ways to go but I'm happy to be out there again," Lusk said.
Barnes gained control of the point guard position with outstanding play in Iowa's exhibitions. He weaved a web around the "one spot" with 12 points, four assists and two steals in the opener.
He said that the game against Western Illinois might be a stiffer test for the Hawkeyes, but it might be even stiffer for the Leathernecks.

"They know that they are going to come in and they're going to try and play us really tough," Barnes said. "I'm sure they will, but I'm sure also that we'll be tougher than we were (against UMES)."
Freshmen Russ Millard and Phil

Chime and sophomore Jim Bartels have yet to play in any games for the Hawkeyes. Davis said they are good players, but can't crack the top 11. Davis said their chances of playing could decrease even more if he goes with a top 10 or nine players.

"I just can't play too many," Davis said. "So I've made a real commitment in this early part of the year to work the top 11 real hard.

"That's probably too many. I should probably drop down to 10 or to nine. I would guess we may in fact be doing that."
The Hawkeye playing the least amount of minutes so far this season has been junior center Jay Webb. Webb has averaged 10.3 minutes, 4.3 points and two rebounds per game.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Brower, Dahl earn all-America honors

Steve J. Collins
Daily Iowan

Iowa senior Jennifer Brower and teammate Tracy Dahl earned all-America honors Monday in Tucson, Ariz., at the NCAA Cross Country Championships.

Brower led all Big Ten runners, completing the 5K course in 17:17 for 22nd place. Dahl finished 30th in 17:42. The pair finished 17th and 23rd among American finishers.

"Both athletes had set their eye-sight on the all-American honor from the very beginning and it was rewarding to see them run so well with such an elite group of runners," Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said.

As a team the Hawkeyes scored 342 points to finish 16th out of 22 teams, matching their national ranking. Among Big Ten schools, Iowa finished behind Wisconsin, Penn State and Michigan while edging Minnesota by one place. Villanova, led by individual champion Sonia O'Sullivan (16:30), won with 85 points.

Other Iowa finishers were: Jenny Johnson (117th in 18:36), Christine Salsberry (135th in 18:50), Tina Stec (140th in 18:55), Erin Boland (155th in 19:14) and Amy McRell (178th in 20:51).

"We didn't get a lot of support from some of our other scorers," Hassard said. "I think it's very important to score at least in the middle of the field with our third, fourth and fifth runners."

Hassard said the combination of high altitude, dry weather and a tough Conquistador Country Club course took a major toll on all the runners.

"Some of them were practically walking up some of the hills," he said. "It was a very demanding course."

Brower and Dahl became only the fifth and sixth cross country runners in school history to earn all-America honors and the first duo since Nan Doak and Jenny Spangler in 1982 to do it in the same year.

Hassard said that Christa Holmes, who missed the meet with a stress fracture in each leg, had the potential to be the team's third all-American.

"The plan from the beginning of the year was to have three in the top 30 or so, and that would have started us off towards a higher finish," Hassard said.

Louisville drops out; Kentucky falls in poll

Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

Pittsburgh's impressive victory at Rupp Arena last week affected two teams from the commonwealth of Kentucky in the college basketball poll.

The Panthers' 85-67 win at Kentucky in the second round of the preseason NIT dropped the Wildcats from fourth to 13th in the rankings released Monday. To make room for lightly regarded Pitt in the first regular-season poll, the voters knocked Louisville out of the Top 25 despite the fact the Cardinals won their season-opener by 29 points.

Duke, which opened its season Monday night, increased its lead in the No. 1 spot from the preseason poll, receiving 61 of 64 first-place votes and 1,597 points from the nationwide panel of writers and broadcasters who voted on games through Sunday. The Blue Devils had 49 first-place votes in the preseason poll.

Top 25

The Top Twenty Five teams in the Associated Press 1991-92 college basketball poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, records through Nov. 24, total points based on 25 points for a first-place vote through one point for a 25th place vote and last week's rankings:

Carolina St. 1.

Michigan, Pittsburgh and Arizona State.

Pittsburgh became the fifth Big East team in the Top 25, joining Seton Hall, St. John's, Connecticut and Georgetown. The Panthers beat Manhattan at home and then went to Kentucky for the big upset to earn a trip to New York for a semifinal meeting with Oklahoma State, which moved up two spots with wins over Evansville and Purdue. Georgia Tech, which moved from 23rd to 18th with wins over James Madison and Colorado State, and Texas, which was 26th in the voting after beating Washington and Princeton, meet in the other semifinal.

Louisville, which went from a sub-500 season to a No. 25 ranking in the preseason poll, beat Howard 102-73.

Smith, Devlin named first-team all-Big Ten

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Iowa's second-place finish in the Big Ten Conference football race must have been a team effort.

Although the Hawkeyes are 10-1 and ranked seventh nationally, only two Iowa players were named first-team all-Big Ten on Monday — center Mike Devlin and defensive end Leroy Smith.

Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers, offensive lineman Rob Baxley and linebacker John Derby were second-team picks. Eight other Iowa players received honorable mention.

Desmond Howard of league champion Michigan was named the league's offensive player of the year. Seven other Michigan players earned first-team honors, including linebacker Erick Anderson, who shared the defensive player of the year award with cornerback Troy Vincent of Wisconsin.

Michigan's Elvis Grbac was the first-team quarterback in the voting by writers and broadcasters who cover the Big Ten. Rodgers had earned that honor last year.

Ohio State had four players on the first team, while Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Purdue matched Iowa with two selections.

Smith, a 6-foot-2, 214-pound senior, set a Big Ten record with 17 sacks this fall. Devlin is a 6-3, 275-pound junior who has been a starter since the middle of his freshman year. He was a second-team pick last season.

Rodgers slipped to the second team this year despite another good season. He became only the second Iowa quarterback to pass for more than 2,000 yards in three different seasons even though he missed two games because of a knee injury.

The senior from Walpole, Mass., completed 166 of 255 passes for 2,054 yards and 14 touchdowns.

Grbac played in every game, throwing for 1,955 yards and 24 touchdowns. His favorite target was Howard, who set a league record with 19 touchdowns.

Running back Mike Saunders and wide receiver Danan Hughes were among the Iowa players who received honorable mention. The others were fullback Lew Montgomery, tight end Alan Cross, offensive lineman Scott Davis, defensive tackle Mike Wells, defensive back Brian Wise and place-kicker Jeff Skillett.

Men's swimming team heading to U.S. Open

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

Eleven members of the Iowa men's swim team travel to Minneapolis this weekend for the U.S. Open Tournament, featuring many of the top swimmers in the world.

Hawkeye coach Glenn Patton said he feels that this tournament will be the top meet of the fall semester.

"This tournament will be an opportunity for our elite level athletes to face top competition," he said. "This is the kind of challenge that many of these swimmers need."

Artur Wojdat, Stewart Carroll, Rafal Szukala, Mike Johnson, Matt Smith, Erik Marchitell, Keith Gunderson, Brad Gaeth, Eric Kirch, Rob Meadows and Dan Stoppenhagen will be swimming for the Hawkeyes.

This meet will be a 50-meter long-course meet and will be a good tune-up for the squad as their next two meets will be long-course meets.

AIDS IN SPORTS

Navratilova airs opinions on Magic situation

Martina Navratilova eyes a volley in tennis action. Navratilova said Monday that if she contracted the AIDS virus, it would be different than when Magic Johnson contracted the virus.

Bert Rosenthal
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Martina Navratilova defended and attacked Magic Johnson on Monday.

In a taped appearance on the "Donahue" show, to be aired Wednesday, the tennis star said she supported the companies who have not dropped Johnson after the Los Angeles Lakers guard said he was infected with the AIDS virus.

"I don't think we should be dumping him if they were committed to him," Navratilova said. "If he's telling the truth, they shouldn't penalize him."

But she did penalize him for his promiscuousness.

"That Magic said he had been promiscuous with about 1,000 women is staggering to me," she said.

"If a woman had made those revelations ... well, not necessarily a woman ... if they got AIDS because they weren't protecting themselves, corporations would drop them like a hot balloon."

"And if a ... woman said this, she would be called a slut. ... And if a male or a female athlete got it through homosexual contact, they would not be a hero."

"He (Johnson) should not only be telling people to put a condom on, but not to be promiscuous."

Asked about the women who had sexual relationships with Johnson, Navratilova said, "It doesn't say much for the women, but it doesn't say much for him, either."

Navratilova said she was surprised that her recent comments about Johnson and "double standards" got such a wide, favorable reaction.

"People said it was about time," Navratilova said, as she was seated next to her toy fox terrier, "K.D." for Killer Dog. "It was something I couldn't believe nobody else did."

Navratilova, 35, said her sexual preference has prevented her from getting endorsements outside tennis and public service endorsements, even though she has been one of the world's most successful athletes for years.

That, she said, was unfair.

"I am believable!" the outspoken Navratilova asked. "If I endorse something, I am going to use it?"

But she said sponsors think people might shy away from using a product because of her beliefs.

She said that represented another "double-standard."

Navratilova also defended herself.

"I am proud that whatever sexual preference I have taken has been accepted," she said. "I like my life now."

"Gay people are not weird or strange. There are a lot more qualities to people than who you sleep with. (People) should live and let live."

"I have had the strength to come forward, and people accept me for who I am."

TRADES

Former Cardinal Ken Hill throws a pitch during action last season. Hill was traded to the Expos for firstbaseman Andres Gallarraga Monday.

Cardinals trade pitcher Hill for Montreal 1B Galarraga

R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Cardinals filled a hole in the middle of their lineup on Monday, acquiring first baseman Andres Gallarraga from the Montreal Expos for right-hander Ken Hill.

The deal comes less than a week after the Cardinals said they would not pursue any of the major free agents. They had been expected to join the bidding for Bobby Bonilla or Wally Joyner.

Galarraga, 30, slumped to a .219 average with nine home runs and 33 RBIs in 1991, playing only 107 games. However, he averaged 21 home runs and 88 RBIs in four previous seasons. He has a .269 career average.

"We needed to get a little punch in the lineup," Cardinals manager Joe Torre said. "We didn't want to give up an arm like Kenny Hill, but you've got to give up quality to get quality."

Hill, who will be 26 next month, was 11-10 with a 3.57 ERA last season for St. Louis. His career record is 23-32.

"We are obtaining a solid, accomplished major league starter," Montreal general manager Dan Duquette said. "Hill is an emerging talent who ranked with the best in baseball as one of the toughest pitchers to hit last year."

Hill, touched at his home in Lynn, Mass., said he was shocked by the trade.

"I never expected it," Hill said. "But I've been traded before and I guess I'll just have to start over again."

As his record shows, Hill was inconsistent in a little more than two seasons with the Cardinals.

"I had good times and bad times on the field," Hill said. "That's part of the game and you've got to live through it."

Cardinals general manager Dal Maxvill said St. Louis has been interested in acquiring Galarraga for some time. The Cardinals are moving in the fences for next season after finishing last in the majors with just 68 homers in 1991.

"Not only does he hit with power but he is an excellent first baseman who solidifies our infield considerably," Maxvill said.

Galarraga will replace Pedro Guerrero, who became a free agent after the Cardinals expressed no interest in re-signing him. Guerrero hit .272 last season with eight home runs and 70 RBIs, but had only 21 extra-base hits.

Almost a third of Galarraga's hits have been for extra bases. His biggest season was in 1988, when he hit .302 with 29 home runs, 42 doubles and 92 RBIs and was named to the NL All-Star team.

Galarraga is signed for 1992 at $2.2 million in the final season of a three-year, $6.85 million contract. The Cardinals have an option for 1993 at $3 million.

Hill, who made $180,000 in 1991, is eligible for salary arbitration.

Timberwolves deal Corbin to Jazz for Bailey, draft pick

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — The Minnesota Timberwolves on Monday acquired Utah forward Thurl Bailey and the Jazz's second-round draft selection in 1992 for forward Tyrone Corbin.

The 6-foot-11 Bailey, for several years one of the NBA's best reserve players, averaged 14.7 points and 5.7 rebounds in eight years with the Jazz. Corbin, a 6-6 forward, averaged 10.9 points and 5.4 rebounds in six years with San Antonio, Cleveland, Phoenix and Minnesota.

In 11 games for Minnesota this season, Corbin averaged 14.4 and 6.3 rebounds. Bailey averaged 9.4 points and 6.0 rebounds in 13 games for the Jazz.

Minnesota coach Jimmy Rodgers says the addition of Bailey will help the Timberwolves gain size and versatility at the forward position.

Bailey played collegiately at North Carolina State and helped the Wolfpack with the national title in 1983.

Corbin played at DePaul.

A baby is our dream! We're full of love and fun, and more than anything, we'd love a baby to start our family. You can have peace of mind knowing your child will grow up surrounded by laughter, a loving full-time Mommy, and a Daddy who adores children. This decision you make with so much love will give your baby the opportunity for wonderful times and all the good things life has to offer. Please call us collect anytime! Jane and Robert, 914-948-3367.

WE HOPE you will consider us to be the parents for your new baby. Our home life is loving, stable, and secure and we yearn to start a family. Christian values, excellent schools and lots of cousins (of which six are adopted) are all part of a happy life awaiting your child. Legal/confidential. Please call Kathleen or Andy, collect, evenings or weekends, (201)445-6392.

MAILED ADOPTION
Iowa married couple, unable to have children, will provide a warm and loving home for your baby. Medical and legal expenses paid. Call either Janet and Wayne, 712-274-2559, or their attorney, 217-352-7941, collect.

MOVIE REVIEW

Hector Elizondo and Robert Loggia cheer on their motley team of misfits in the unnecessarily rotten "Necessary Roughness."

'Roughness' seems unnecessarily rotten

The new football flick, "Necessary Roughness," proves to be rough on our reviewer.

Kevin Ruby
Daily Iowan

Let me leave no room for doubt: "Necessary Roughness" is an asinine bag of garbage slimly disguised as "entertainment." It's the type of film that is traditionally released this time of year, when most of the big boys in Hollywood are holding their better projects for the Christmas rush. The only thing that kept me from leaving this thorough waste of time was the knowledge that Scorsese's new picture was soon to be released and better art was on the way.

Should I even bother describing a plot to you? "Necessary Roughness" is about a college football team, at the mythical Texas State University, that must start over from scratch after numerous recruiting violations from the previous season. The college's president searches for a leader and finds him in Hector Elizondo ("Pretty Woman"), a straight-arrow man who led another team to the Cotton Bowl under miraculous circumstances. The Elizondo character is so idealistic that he willingly steps down from his ESPN guest commentator position to get a chance at the coaching job. This is only five minutes into the film, the point when I also realized that "Necessary Roughness"'s transparent plot was already getting dangerously, and unnecessarily, thin.

The rest of the film follows Elizondo, at odds with his rogue players as well as the slimy academics dean who would rather see the team fall apart. The players have all sorts of individual problems, but I won't bother describing them since they are carbon duplicates culled from other bad sports films like "Major League" or "Wildcats." At the very least, "Necessary Roughness" is environmentally safe, working with a recycled plot.

Now, I don't hate sports films. Sports movies can actually be a lot of fun, if they are handled with a bit of intelligence and attempt to develop a story beyond the playing field. One of Tom Cruise's earliest films, "All the Right Moves," clearly illustrates this; it dealt with a golden boy's chance at escaping the steel mills with a college football scholarship. But "Necessary Roughness" doesn't even attempt that — it's a meandering beast made up of clichés, stupid gags and worn-out plot devices. Perhaps in a perverse way, I actually admire this film for completely avoiding any note of originality.

VIDEO REVIEW

Jackson, U2 videos reviewed

We cast a 'TV Eye' on the latest gaggle of video offerings.

Steve Cruse
Daily Iowan

A few music video reviews 4 U:
 ■ Michael Jackson, "Black Or White": 1991 has been a banner year for autoeroticism, with emissions from The Divinyls (feigned, cute), Madonna (feigned, baroque), Pee-wee Herman (real, disturbing) and now Michael Jackson, proudly displaying to all of us his unzipped mysterious crotch in the (now-censored) coda to his new video. Beat It, indeed. The bowlerized version, which might be called "Michael Is the World," is a lot of colorful inane motion that takes us around the globe, and nowhere.

As for the song, it's catchy, it expresses a worthy sentiment, it's — attention Kurt Loder! — "Stonesy" (recycling the riff from "It Must Be Hell," which the Stones themselves recycled from "Soul Survivor"), Michael squeaks 17 times, I like it. On the other hand, surely race relations in this country have evolved to the point that the subject deserves a more sophisticated treatment than a retreat of "Ebony and Ivory." "Straight Or Gay" — now that would have been an inspiring declaration.

■ Guns N' Roses, "Don't Cry": Where's Izzy? you (and Duff) ask. Well, probably at home drinking Jack Daniels, perfecting his curlicue and congratulating himself for sitting out this incoherent, morbid disaster. The song is certainly pretty, and two images are admittedly memorable: The scene in which Axl, lying in a white hospital room, is confronted by two doubles of himself; and the climactic shot of the satyr, his hands tragically aquiver as he reaches toward the light. But none of this adds up to anything, not even a compelling statement on rock-star egoism. It's also the first truly sexist video the band has made. (Do you think, maybe, that among the director's commands to the actresses — particularly the woman shown riding in the car with Slash — was: "Act bitchy?") Thankx a lot, Joseph.

■ Prince and the N.P.G., "Cream": It's nice that Prince was able to work not one, but two slang terms for orgasm into his title this year. Lyricaly, this one is essentially a series of hilarious pseudo-compliments ("You're so cool, everything you do's a success," etc.); the music is seductive and slinky and terrific.

■ Hammer, "2 Legit 2 Quit": The video's explosive opening, in which Hammer appears then disappears within a wall of flame, brings to mind the scene in "The Wizard of Oz" in which the Wizard's true identity is revealed: Never mind the publicity director behind the curtain, he might be saying. (Nothing proves illegitimacy more than loud protestations of one's legitimacy.) Nice KLF impersonation, though.

Too dangerous for public consumption? Michael Jackson squeals and gyrates in racially technicolor "Black or White."

■ U2, "The Fly": Be afraid. Be very afraid.

Ballet Iowa leaps into holidays

Des Moines' Ballet Iowa celebrates the holidays with Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker."

Robert Fuhrmann
Daily Iowan

Des Moines' Civic Center stage will turn to the ambiguously candy-colored world of little girls and dancing mice as Ballet Iowa presents Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker" Thanksgiving weekend, Nov. 29 and 30 at 7:30 p.m. and Dec. 1 at 3 p.m.

This year's performance showcases the talents of principal dancers Elizabeth Harano and Rafael Delgado under the artistic direction of Konstantin Uralsky. Joining the 13-member troupe onstage is a host of dance students from the School of Ballet Iowa and other Des Moines area schools.

The ballet was inspired by E.T.A. Hoffmann's story "The Nutcracker and the Mouse King" published in 1819. Hoffmann's tale, filled with ominous implications, concerns a little girl who fantasizes that her monstrous toy becomes a handsome and loving prince. She is, according to interpretation, a child yearning to be a grown woman and her story is a sign of what is to come, but, with the arrival of the evil spirits, it is made clear that it will not always be easy to harvest the fruits of her labors. The world around the little girl is indeed silly, frivolous and sometimes unpleasant, and it appears that the only way to secure happiness, after overcoming fearful ordeals, is through dreams.

Throughout the last century, many choreographers have attempted to find innovative ways to present this challenging fantasy, originally choreographed by Marius Petipa and his assistant Lev Ivanov. "The Nutcracker" was first presented in December 1892 in St. Petersburg and later staged in Moscow with the renowned Bolshoi Ballet.

Director Uralsky studied the piece as a special research topic while at the Moscow Academic Choreographic School and as a professional dancer with the Bolshoi. Using insights gained from the original notes by Tchaikovsky and Petipa, Uralsky has created this new version of the ballet, recalling the original production while bringing his own interpretation of the ballet to the audience.

Tickets are available at the Civic Center Box Office in Des Moines and at all Ticketmaster outlets. Individual ticket prices range from $12 to $25. Discounts are available for those under 18.

Day Without Art observed

Daily Iowan

Next Sunday is the World Health Organization's AIDS Awareness Day, and that day will kick off an array of events in Iowa City related to the national AIDS Awareness Week, Dec. 1-7.

■ Day Without Art, an open art exhibition, will be put on display Sunday in the Checkered Space of the UI Art Building in conjunction with the national group, Visual AIDS. Visual AIDS will sponsor both the exhibition and Night Without Light. The display is dedicated to informing the public and memorializing the victims of the disease, and will be open to the public throughout AIDS Awareness Week.

■ As a part of its "Music in the Museum" series, the UI Museum of Art will feature the Cantores a cappella choir on Sunday at 2 p.m. The performance of Gregorian chants, titled "Scenes from the New Testament," will be dedicated to the memory of Kerry Grippe and William Hibbard.
