Judge denies shoplifting charges

BOSTON (AP) — A justice of the state's highest court demanded an apology Tuesday from a discount department store she said accused her of switching price tags on a purse.

Justice Ruth Abrams of the Supreme Judicial Court said in a statement that her attorney had obtained three similar purses Monday from three Filene's Basement stores. The price tag on each was $12 — the amount she said she paid Sunday for the purse in question.

A police report filed in the case said Abrams was accused of stealing a wallet worth $11.

Until death do us part

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A couple married for 63 years died within minutes of each other, both apparently of heart attacks, relatives said.

Kelly Thomas found his wife, Hazel, dead on the floor of their home Friday, and the trauma apparently triggered a fatal heart attack, said a son, Jack Thomas.

"They were a couple like you don't see anymore," said daughter Marian Blum. "They worked out their problems, and they loved each other."

Both were 80 years old, and had been together since they started dating in Los Angeles at the age of 15.

Libya may release Pan Am 103 terrorists

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Libya's No. 2 man said Tuesday that Libya would surrender its citizens charged with blowing up U.S. and French jetliners if an international commission examines the evidence and seeks their extradition.

Staff Maj. Abdulsalam Jalloud suggested that U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali set up such a commission.

Jalloud arrived Monday on a regional tour seeking support for Libya following a U.N. Security Council resolution demanding that Libya cooperate with demands to surrender the accused. He met with President Turgut Ozal and Premier Suleyman Demirel on Tuesday.

Candidate McCarthy visits IC

Eric Detwiler
Daily Iowan

Five-time presidential contender Eugene McCarthy vented his frustrations in Iowa City Tuesday, stating that the media has been inattentive to his campaign and that voters are more interested in rumors of infidelity than pertinent campaign issues.

"You just have to expect it now in politics or in life in general," McCarthy said. "We'll probably have to have celibacy for presidents if things go on this way."

"Clean Gene" spoke to the press before a scheduled appearance at the UI-sponsored forum on the length of working hours. McCarthy emphasized that the media and voters were more interested in adulterous allegations than the issues in the campaign.

"You can't get people's attention to anything that requires a little bit of reflection," he said.

McCarthy, who declared his candidacy last October, has done little active campaigning, received peripheral media attention and refused to accept federal matching funds for donations. "I think the whole process of the government controlling how the government is chosen is faulty," McCarthy said about the use of government funds for elections.

Government funding for elections is not the only issue where McCarthy departs in comparison to other Democratic candidates. He is also in favor of banning televised political advertisements and discontinuing presidential debates.

Perhaps the most distancing difference from his competitors is his belief that the office of the vice president should be abolished, citing the example of the Dan Quayle vice-presidency as his reason.

McCarthy said that 10 percent of the population in the United States control 70 percent of the country's wealth — an estimated $12 trillion. If elected McCarthy said he would impose a capital tax on accumulated wealth that would produce $4 trillion in revenue and wipe out the federal deficit.

"They'd only control 50 percent of the wealth then," McCarthy said of the United States' most wealthy people.

STATE OF THE UNION

Associated Press

President Bush appears in the House Chamber Tuesday evening to deliver his annual State of the Union address to a joint session of Congress. In it he outlined a new national domestic policy.

Bush vows end to hardship

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Tuesday night proposed election-year tax cuts and business incentives to revive America's economy and vowed, "We're going to lift this nation out of hard times."

Bush also outlined dramatic cuts in the U.S. nuclear arsenal. In his State of the Union speech, the president challenged the Democrat-controlled Congress to back his economic programs by March 20 or face a political fight. Invoking gulf war rhetoric, he vowed the recession "will not stand."

The centerpiece of his economic plan was a bid to put more money in peoples' paychecks by lowering tax withholding rates — even though it would mean smaller refunds a year from now. Bush said it would pump $25 billion into the economy. It would increase take-home pay by an average of $300 for more than 90 million wage-earners, the White House said.

In a nationally televised address, Bush discussed the benefits of a reduced military threat from the disintegrated Soviet Union. "The American taxpayer bore the brunt of the (Cold War) burden, and deserves a hunk of the glory," he said.

Bush said he would ask Russian President Boris Yeltsin on Saturday to agree to eliminate all land-based multiple warhead ballistic missiles. If Yeltsin agrees, Bush said, the United States will eliminate all MX missiles, reduce the number of warheads on Minuteman missiles to just one and cut the number of warheads on sea-based missiles by about one-third.

The arms proposal would mark the first time since 1945 that the United States has no nuclear weapons in production.

Over six years, the president proposed to cut defense spending by $50 billion and use the savings to finance tax reductions.

Bush's plan also would freeze federal spending on most domestic programs at current levels.

The Democrats sought to portray the tax cuts certain to come in terms of haves versus have-nots.

"... We seek a fundamental change from the unsuccessful economic policies of the past 12 years," House Speaker Thomas Foley said. "We will insist that this time, the benefits must go to working families, not to the privileged."

"We will insist that a middle class tax cut be paid for not by taking money that should go to schools and health care, but by calling on the richest of our citizens, at long

ERA

4-woman panel exhorts more female involvement

Wendy Alesch
Daily Iowan

If the Equal Rights Amendment passes in the Iowa House no laws will change and nothing radical will happen, but existing laws will be strengthened and women will be given more security, a four-woman panel said Tuesday.

Minnette Doderer, Pat Jensen, Christine Grant and Mary Neuhauser spoke before an audience of 100 people at the Iowa ERA-'92 forum held last night at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. They spoke to promote women's involvement in working for the passage of the ERA before the November vote.

Passage of the ERA will not affect abortion laws or cause other radical changes, which has been the fear of some, said members of the panel.

"The time has come," said Iowa state Rep. Doderer. "We would be the 17th state to enact this. The other 16 states are doing fine. Women haven't taken over those states or done anything strange."

Grant, the UI women's athletic director, said the ERA could help get equality for women in college athletics at the UI.

"Two states have used the ERA to eliminate discrimination against women in athletics. Washington State and Temple University have made huge progress," she said.

"There is always education to be done. Affirmative action and gender balances get women equal positions, but they are always being challenged," Neuhauser, another state representative, said.

Neuhauser also said the ERA can help to ensure the rights women have already won.

"To quote the ad, 'We've come a long way baby,' but not far enough yet," said Jensen, chairperson of the statewide steering committee to pass the ERA.

RECESSION

Aid proposed for those buying insurance, homes

Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush announced a plan to fatten worker paychecks by cutting tax withholding Tuesday night as he sketched details of a $1.5 trillion budget. He offered no quick middle class tax cut, but proposed help for those struggling to buy health insurance and new homes.

In a State of the Union address that dwelt largely on remedies for the recession, Bush also said he would ask Congress to freeze domestic spending at this year's level. He urged lawmakers to eliminate 246 federal programs he described as wasteful, and said the non-defense federal workforce would not be allowed to grow.

The budget's formal unveiling was set for Wednesday.

The outline Bush presented in his nationally televised address seemed certain to provoke an election-year tax battle with the Democratic majorities of Congress. Many Democrats favor a tax cut for the middle class to be financed by higher taxes on the wealthy. They also oppose Bush's renewed call for a cut in the capital gains tax, the levy paid on investment profits.

Bush bid the lawmakers to pass an economic package of short-term measures by March 20, including a cut in the capital gains tax rate paid on profits on property sales, the tax breaks for first-time home buyers and tax cuts for the real estate industry and for business investments.

"From the day after that, if it must be, the battle is joined," he warned.

Bush said he would propose a temporary, $5,000 tax credit for first-time home buyers, and permit those purchasing residences to use up to $10,000 from an Individual Retirement Account without penalty.

And he said he would provide tax credits of up to $3,750 for low-income families to help them pay for health insurance.

But after months of statements by top administration officials that they were seriously considering a broad-based middle-class tax cut to help spark an end to the recession, Bush included no such proposal in his package of short-term relief

TAXES

IRS offers toll-free number, local assistance

John P. Waterhouse
Daily Iowan

During the tax season, the Internal Revenue Service says there are no stupid questions.

One week ago the IRS assisted over 2,000 people through its toll-free number in just one day.

Ted Reis, public affairs officer for the IRS in Des Moines, recalls one particular phone call from a man requesting a cassette tape made by singer Willie Nelson regarding his difficulties with the IRS.

"We explained to this individual that Willie Nelson did indeed record a song about his troubles with the IRS, but our office didn't have any tapes for sale," Reis said. "We told him although we didn't carry any of the tapes, he could probably find one at a record store."

Most tax-related questions can be answered by calling the IRS' toll-free number Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. The IRS also offers Tele-Tax at 1-800-829-4477. Tele-Tax contains over 140 recorded messages explaining specific tax topics.

The IRS also works with volunteers from Iowa City and the UI to assist people in preparing their tax returns free of charge.

"We train members of AARP and UI accounting students in tax law, and they in turn assist the taxpayers of Iowa City and Coralville," Reis said.

Members of the American Association of Retired Persons work in conjunction with the IRS to provide a program called Tax Counseling for the Elderly. TCE volunteers "set up shop" in retirement homes, libraries, community centers and shopping malls to help taxpayers age 60 or older in preparing federal income taxes at no cost, Reis said.

UI senior Joe Steer, along with 80 other accounting students from the

CAMPAIGN '92

Socialist speaks to students at City High

Wendy Alesch
Daily Iowan

Presidential candidates are accustomed to being grilled by reporters and voters but Socialist candidate J. Quinn Brisben fielded a rash of questions from an unlikely audience yesterday.

About 100 Iowa City City High School students listened to Brisben's 30-minute speech and then in a question-and-answer period raked him over the coals about his socialist ideals.

Brisben is the Socialist Party U.S.A.'s 1992 candidate for president. He has been a member of the Socialist Party since 1959. He was a running mate to a Socialist Party presidential candidate, and has also campaigned for mayor of Chicago under the Socialist Party in the past. He is a retired high-school history and social studies teacher from Chicago.

Brisben first explained to the students that although he was running for president he knew he would not win. He explained that the Socialist Party was not "playing on a level field" when their total budget for the campaign is $20,000 and George Bush's budget is somewhere near $50 million.

"I am not going to win the presidency; whoever wins deserves to be stuck with it," Brisben said.

He told the students he was campaigning as a way of informing the public of Socialist ideals.

Some of the highlights of the Socialist platform Brisben touched on were: a national health-care system, a national day-care service, universal disarmament and abolishing the CIA.

"The Soviet Union has packed up their marbles and gone home and we are still trying to bankrupt ourselves building weapons," Brisben said. "We haven't noticed we don't have an enemy."

Brisben introduced his idea of national day-care centers in schools.

"Day care in high schools would be a far better use of time than study halls where students don't study anyway," Brisben said. "It may help them perform these tasks later in life or help them decide to put off having children and that would be a good thing too."

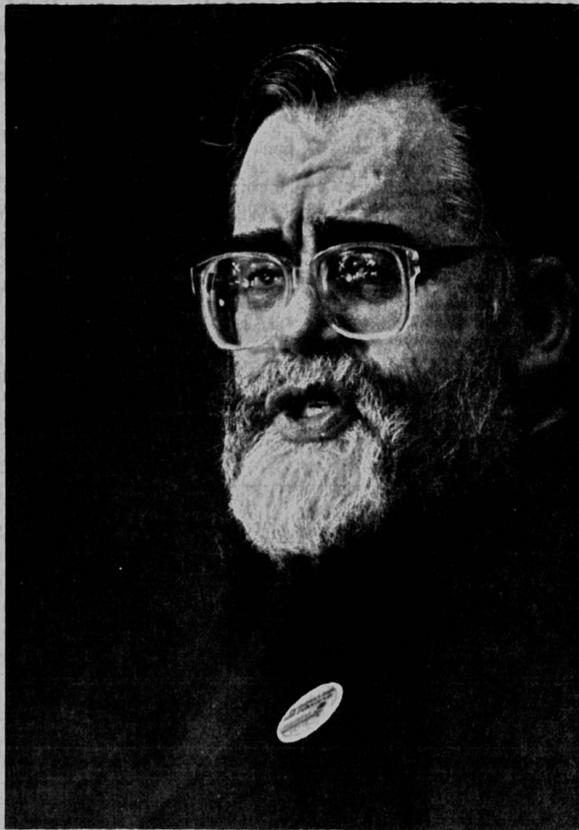

Brisben also said the money being put into defense plants could be put in to camcorder factories.

"Give the camcorders to all the people in the poor neighborhoods; this would cut down on crime and police brutality," he said.

During the question-and-answer period there were too many students with questions for Brisben to field. He finally had to stop short when the bell rang for classes to change. Students all questioned the idea behind the Socialist theory.

One student asked, "What would give people incentive to excel in a Socialist society?" Another student asked how Brisben thought "his policy of taxing the rich could ever pass through Congress when most of them are millionaires?"

Brisben was accompanied by Iowa City City Councilor Karen Kubby, who also belongs to the Socialist Party. The event ended when Kubby was named an honorary Iowa City Little Hawk.

CAR BUYING

Volkswagen unveils new incentives

Ann Riley
Daily Iowan

Volkswagen took Fahrvergnügen to new limits Tuesday when the company announced that it would take over new car buyers' car and insurance payments for up to a year if they lose their job due to the recession.

Following President Bush's State of the Union address Tuesday night, Volkswagen presented its new campaign "Grab the Recession by the Horn" in a nationally televised commercial.

The "Payment Protection Plus" program will be available to everyone who buys or leases a VW between now and March 31.

If the person whose name is listed on the finance contract loses his job due to economic reasons, VW will pay his insurance and car payments up to $500 a month for one year. The money does not have to be repaid to VW.

"Since Christmas there has been so much negative news, such as Macy's going out of business. This is something really positive," said Erin Dickinson of Carousel Motors, Highway 1 West.

"The car companies are all doing really well compared to last January during the war," she said, adding that Carousel Motors was not notified of the new program until Monday.

"Because of the president's speech, this was the perfect time to release the program," Dickinson said.

The program does not cover people who are self-employed, nor is it transferable if the car is sold. If the car is listed under two people's names and one person loses his job, VW will pay a percentage of the payments depending on the other's income.

Cost of Volkswagen vehicles at Carousel Motors range from $6,900 to $20,000, according to General Manager Pat Lind.

Candidate may sue for support

John P. Waterhouse
Daily Iowan

U.S. Presidential contender Jeffrey Marsh says if he doesn't receive more support from the Democratic Party, he'll sue.

Marsh, the 38-year-old presidential hopeful from Fairfield, Iowa, said he will claim "massive discrimination" and conspiracy charges against the Democratic National Party and each of the five Democratic presidential candidates for not including him on the party ticket.

"I can never get interviews and I believe there is a crime syndicate that dictates what goes on the front page," he said. "Once I am president, I will rip crime out of society. I'm the only one who can do it."

Born and raised in Wadesboro,

N.C., Marsh earned his Ph.D. in Science Education from North Carolina State University in 1984. He has taught for nine years in both North Carolina and Iowa.

Marsh, who said he has campaigned in each state capitol twice since January of 1991, brought his tour to Iowa City on Monday to explain how his "innovative" ideas would better the environment.

Marsh said one part of his campaign is a plan to make automobiles that would emit zero percent pollution.

"Unfortunately, the oil companies will not let this information out to the people of the United States because it would hurt the oil business," he said.

To make better use of natural energy resources, Marsh said Americans in the Midwest should rely on windmills, while in the southeast and northwest "everyone should take advantage of the power of water."

For the college student interested in paying less for tuition, Marsh said his idea, called the "angel college" program, will make an education free of charge.

"Students would need to adapt a more generic mentality," he said. "For instance, if at the campus concession stand students could purchase a cheaper 'College Cola,' then they'd be able to save a little."

As President, Marsh also said he would fight the war on drugs by using the U.S. Navy and Coast Guard to knock out the incoming shipments off the shores of Florida.

"Drugs were really introduced into the American scene in the summer of love in '67," he said. "But it is now time for us to un-introduce them."

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Members reveal decisions about November election

Catherine Coerr
Daily Iowan

When November elections roll around, Johnson County residents must select not only the presidential candidate of their choice, but must also make decisions a bit closer to home.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will have three of their five seats available in the November elections.

While Supervisors Patricia Meade and Stephen Lacina have two years remaining of their four-year terms, the remaining three supervisors vary in their future plans.

Board member Richard Myers will not be a candidate. Myers indicated that he "wants to do something else."

"There are other things to do in life than serve in public office," Myers said.

Myers is currently serving his 10th year on the board.

Charles Duffy will run for re-election. In his fourth year of office, Duffy currently serves as chairman of the board.

Betty Ockenfels, a supervisor since 1981, has not yet announced her decision regarding the elections.

Two men who are not currently on the board recently announced their candidacy.

Richard Burger, former mayor of Iowa City, has been active in countless volunteer positions in Johnson County. In 1988, Burger was inducted into the Iowa City City High School Hall of Fame for his accomplishments and contributions to Iowa City and Johnson County.

With the county facing tough times due to the reduction of state support in many areas, Burger feels that his business and government experience, in addition to his awareness of county needs, would help him to meet the challenges of fiscal management.

Walter Plotz, a farmer and small businessman, is active in the Democratic Party, the Holy Trinity Parish and other civic activities.

Plotz wants to assist Johnson County with the added responsibilities that federal and state governments are passing on to local government. He feels that his background enables him to cooperate with governmental bodies and individuals. Candidates will file their intentions to run between March 2 and March 25. The primary election on June 2 will determine whose names appear on the ballot in the fall.

County budget issues discussed at meeting

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

In a simmering discussion on Tuesday, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors once again deliberated the state of the county budget. At issue were the proposed amendments to state levies and salaries of elected officials and deputies.

Supervisors Stephen Lacina and Richard Myers disagreed on the proposed increase in levies, which according to Myers would affect commercial and industrial areas more than residential.

"I'm not happy with the levy," Lacina said, "and I cannot support it. I will not vote to increase taxes."

Myers countered Lacina by pointing out the minimum effect the increased tax will have on residential and rural areas.

Supervisor Patricia Meade agreed with Myers that the current levy is too low.

"We either pay now or get bit next year," Meade said.

The board concluded that further study of the issue is necessary before any final decisions are made.

The study will include the proposed changes in salaries of county employees, another main issue discussed at Tuesday's informal meeting.

Supervisor Betty Ockenfels proposed a zero percent increase in salaries for all elected officials.

"With all the (budget) cuts being made this year, I think we need to share in the burden," she said.

Lacina added, however, that officials' deputies deserve at least a small increase in salary. According to Chairman Charles Duffy, there are about 10 deputies who would be considered for the proposed 4 percent increase in salary.

"The issue is very complex," he said, "because some deputies would receive a raise while others would not."

Duffy said he needed more time to study the proposal and determine

"I will not vote to increase taxes."

Stephen Lacina,
supervisor

who it affects. The board agreed to delay a vote until Thursday, Feb. 6.

In other business, the board discussed a proposed zoning amendment for driveways. County Engineer Doug Frederick presented changes and additions to the current zoning ordinance concerning construction and sight distance requirements. The board approved Frederick's proposed changes.

Carol Thompson and Sally Murray of the Department of Human Services were present to discuss funding changes for the Mental Health/Mental Retardation services.

According to Thompson, the state legislature has proposed to streamline funds available for people with disabilities by combining certain allocated funds. This proposal, which would gradually be phased in through 1996, would eliminate the inefficient billing system currently being used.

"Our main concern," Thompson said, "is that the pooled funds are equal to the combined total of the separate funds that we now receive."

Thompson and Murray also discussed a similar proposal concerning the Child and Family Service Initiative, which would pool funds for foster care, family preservation, adoption and family care programs. The new system would set a cap on the amount of money received for the programs.

"The amount of money spent on any services for child care could be good," Thompson said, "but the capped level may have a detrimental effect."

SCHOOLS

Guidance program, bond referendum discussed

Counselors who began working this year as part of the program were introduced.

William Pepper
Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School Board received a status report on a new elementary guidance program and further discussed the possibility of putting a new bond referendum on the ballot in May at its regular meeting Tuesday night.

Pam Ehly, chairwoman of the Elementary Guidance Committee created two years ago to increase counseling programs in Iowa City elementary schools, introduced the counselors who began working in the district elementary schools at the beginning of this school year.

Morris Stole, a counselor at Kirkwood Elementary School, addressed the board about the importance of the program.

"No child is immune from the stress and reality and society. We provide a confidential forum for children to work out their problems," he said.

Linda Nelsen, a counselor at Hills Elementary School, added that by helping children learn to work out problems early in life, they will have a better life in the future.

"Kids need to know how to solve problems. If we could intervene early, then we could save costs down the road," she said. "It's a neat, mainstream program."

Board President Alan Leff commented that since the program is still in the pilot stage, no discussion on plans for continuing the program in the next school year have been made yet.

In other business, the board continued discussion on the possibility of putting a bond referendum on the ballot for Iowa City in the future.

Although the board agreed to a potential bond amount of $10.5 million at the last meeting, no final decision was made on when or even if the referendum would be offered.

At Tuesday's meeting, the board agreed to hold a work session as soon as possible to decide how to present an "option B" to the public, showing what the alternatives to a referendum for handling the overcrowding problem in the schools would be.

Board member Craig Willis suggested the board look at other alternatives, no matter how difficult or impractical, such as drawing more from existing fund sources or shifting students to different schools that have seats to fill them.

He added that the public may be more willing to accept the referendum if they could see that the alternatives were less attractive.

Superintendent Barb Grohe agreed bonding is the only long-term solution available.

"Even the most radical solutions I have heard are short-term," she said. "We did talk about the implications of 'option B,' but we didn't draw them out."

The members agreed to schedule a work session as soon as possible in the hopes of getting a new referendum on the ballot in May.

UISA

Environmental forum expands

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

The environmental forum which had originally been planned to focus around Big Ten students has turned into a conference with over 60 link-ups in the United States and Canada.

UI Student Assembly President Jennifer Kelly said the Feb. 12 forum, which will be held in the Union, has grown beyond her expectations.

"It started off as a Big Ten thing, then we started contacting other schools to see if they wanted to do it, and now they're contacting us," she said.

The conference will now be seen all over the country and in Canada. Schools participating range from University of California to New York University.

Those schools and communities that participate in the conference will be able to see the event on TV and they may then phone in any questions for the panel at the UI.

Environmental panelists will include: United Nations Representative Noel Brown; environmental speaker Kristin Dawkins; Iowa farmer Denise O'Brien, who frequently gives speeches concerning the environment; UI law student Brett Lorenzen and Director for Citizen Advocacy Michael McCoy.

The forum will be moderated by the Vice President of Environmental Policy at CNN, Barbara Pyle.

The conference will be divided into five different sections which will discuss various environmental problems. Each segment will start with a short videotape provided by CNN. A 20- to 25-minute discussion will follow each clip. During the discussion, those at the UI and those hooked up through satellite will be able to ask the panelists questions.

Kelly said the purpose of the conference is to have an impact on the U.N. Conference on Environment and Development, which will take place June 1-12 in Brazil.

Panelist McCoy will be one of the members who decides what the U.S. policy at the conference will be. Members of the U.S. committee will meet from March 12 to April 4 to decide their views on various environmental issues.

Kelly said the timing is perfect.

"We want to educate students and the communities, but we want action as well," she said. "I'm looking forward to it, it's going to be a big success, and we're going to have a big impact internationally; this is going to be much more than I originally expected."

The added involvement has also raised the price of the event. Originally, Kelly said, the United Nations Association and the UISA planned to spend around $3,000. The price is now around $18,000. Kelly said the money has come from various sponsors and donations.

"The National Wildlife Association has donated around $4,000 and we've had people sending in checks for anywhere from $10 to $1000," she said.

ENHANCED 911

Improved emergency system coming soon

Anne Johnston
Daily Iowan

Johnson County's new Enhanced 911 system may be implemented as early as next week, according to Supervisor Dick Myers, chairperson of the E911 Service Board.

"We've got two exchanges yet to test this week and then we're ready to go," Myers said Tuesday.

E911 is a computerized emergency telephone system that automatically displays a caller's name, address and telephone number on a screen, enabling the dispatcher to send the necessary help immediately, rather than gathering that information from the caller beforehand.

"It's going to help us find people a lot quicker and a lot easier," said David Cole, director of the Johnson County Ambulance Service.

In addition to saving time, the system will allow the dispatcher to locate someone who is unable to provide the needed information, such as a child caller, a choking victim who is unable to speak, or a disoriented person.

"We will be better able to locate people who have emergency problems with this new system than we have been in the past," Myers said.

E911 Project Coordinator Jim Haverkamp said the system, with an initial price tag of about $365,000, will have monthly recurring costs of $14,800.

It is being financed entirely by a 45-cent surcharge which has appeared on the monthly phone bills of county residents since April of 1991. Voters approved the surcharge by a 74 percent margin in November of 1990.

Cole said although E911 will improve services throughout the county, it will have a larger impact on some rural areas of the county that, unlike Iowa City and Coralville, have not had the basic 911 service in the past. Those areas include the communities of Solon, Tiffin and Oxford.

Once the new system is in operation, a call to 911 will be routed to one of two public safety answering points, either the Johnson County Sheriff's Department or the Iowa City Police Department, depending on the location of the caller.

Myers said in the event that one of those systems fails, due to a tornado for example, the other would take over.

"The chances of either one of them being totally knocked out are pretty remote, but we did design it so that one of them could back the other up, and we didn't have that capability before," Myers said.

State senate committee votes to stiffen hate-crimes law

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Senate Judiciary Committee voted Tuesday to tighten the state's hate-crimes law in response to last year's cross burnings in Dubuque.

"It's really unfortunate we have to consider legislation like this," said the committee's chairman, Democrat Al Sturgeon of Sioux City.

"The fact is that if we don't do something to try to discourage people with these kinds of motives, we almost encourage it."

The bill expands the hate-crimes law to cover those who commit criminal trespass or harassment while burning a cross or engaging in other bias-motivated activity.

Sturgeon said the bill could help prosecute people who burn crosses on public property such as school grounds.

Some prosecutors have complained that the current hate-crimes law cannot be applied to cross burners unless the incident occurred at the residence of a targeted individual.

The bill was drafted after a series of cross burnings in Dubuque received national attention last year.

"This does send a message that we're serious about not tolerating acts of hate and bigotry and ignorance," Sturgeon said.

The committee approved the bill on a voice vote without dissent.

Committee members said they tried not to infringe on free speech rights and said the Legislature's role in preventing cross burnings is limited.

"Criminal law is only a very teeny, tiny part of the solution to the problem of racism," said Sen. Richard Varn, D-Solon.

Yeltsin meets with Black Sea commanders

Thomas Ginsberg
Associated Press

MOSCOW, Russia — A day after abruptly canceling his appointments, Boris Yeltsin turned up Tuesday in southern Russia to visit with commanders of the Black Sea Fleet. One newspaper said unpredictably, "Yeltsin is becoming Yeltsin's mark."

The Russian president canceled meetings with Japan's foreign minister and others Monday and Tuesday in Moscow to tour the fleet, the subject of a dispute between Russia and Ukraine. The cancellations went unexplained for 24 hours, and renewed rumors about his health and alleged drinking problem.

Presidential spokesman Pavel Voshchanov said Tuesday the 60-year-old Russian leader was "alive, healthy and feeling fine." He denied Yeltsin has an alcohol-abuse problem.

A Russian newspaper said the

"We need now to ask about this, regardless of the previous categorical statements . . . that Yeltsin 'is in wonderful physical condition.'"

Nezavisimaya Gazeta

cancellation was another example of Yeltsin's odd scheduling practices.

"The sudden exhaustion of President Yeltsin and the unexpected change in his work schedule . . . gradually are becoming more accepted as a part of Russian political life," the reformist newspaper Nezavisimaya Gazeta wrote Tuesday.

"We need now to ask about this, regardless of the previous categorical statements by the chief of the presidential press service that Yeltsin 'is in wonderful physical condition,'" the paper said.

Yeltsin's two-day visit to the southern Russian port of Novorossiysk was not announced until Tuesday, a day after he arrived. He returned late Tuesday, Russian television said.

Voshchanov said Yeltsin made the trip to prepare for meetings next week with U.S., British, Canadian and U.N. Security Council leaders that will cover "the problems of nuclear security."

Foreign leaders have sought assurances from Yeltsin and other former Soviet states that military disputes will not threaten their agreement to keep the nuclear arsenal under a single command of the Commonwealth of Independent States.

Ukraine has claimed control over all non-nuclear and non-strategic forces on its territory.

Yeltsin met naval officers and sailors Tuesday and inspected several warships, including the missile cruiser Moskva, Russian media reported.

It wasn't immediately known how many ships are at Novorossiysk. The Black Sea Fleet is mostly based at nearby Sevastopol, Ukraine.

Yeltsin is scheduled to leave Thursday for London, England, then travel to New York to attend a U.N. Security Council session. He will visit Canada on his way home.

Yeltsin has dropped from sight several times since the failed August coup, including three days in September when aides said he was suffering from a minor heart ailment. He then disappeared for 17 days in October, reportedly to write a book that has never appeared.

On Jan. 18, after touring Russia to sell his radical economic reform program, Yeltsin's doctor ordered him to rest at home for a day.

AZERBAIJAN

Rebels down helicopter; 40 civilians killed

Deborah Seward
Associated Press

BAKU, Azerbaijan — Armenian rebels shot down a civilian helicopter over the disputed enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh on Tuesday, an Azerbaijani presidential spokesman said. About 40 men, women and children were reported killed.

The attack was the most serious incident reported in the fight for control of the war-torn enclave since another helicopter was shot down on Nov. 21, killing more than 20 people.

Predominantly Muslim Azerbaijan and mainly Christian Armenia, two former Soviet republics, have battled for three years to gain control of Nagorno-Karabakh, located in Azerbaijan near Iran but populated mostly by Armenians.

Vagib Rustamov, a spokesman for President Ayaz Mutalibov of Azerbaijan, said the helicopter was flying over Stepanakert, capital of the enclave, at about 4 p.m. when it was attacked. It was en route to Shusha from the Azeri town of Agdam.

The Azerbaijani mission in Moscow said the helicopter was shot down by a heat-seeking missile, Russian television said. The news-cast said the pilots tried "heroically" to save the aircraft and managed at the last minute to turn it away from Shusha.

Miyana Minakian, a press secretary at the Armenian Mission in Moscow, confirmed an Azerbaijani helicopter had been shot down.

The helicopter was "presumably carrying weapons and ammunition to Azerbaijanis who have been attacking the Armenian village of Karintag (near Stepanakert) for the past three days," she said. She gave no more details.

Russian state-run television also said "at least eight" people died Tuesday in ground fighting near Karintag.

It was not immediately known exactly how many people were on board the helicopter. Reports from both sides indicated the number was about 40.

The conflict in the Caucasus Mountains has claimed more than 800 lives. The warfare between the former republics has intensified since Russia's decision in December to withdraw former Soviet military units from the area.

On Jan. 2, the Azerbaijani president imposed direct rule on Nagorno-Karabakh, putting local governments under his control.

But on Jan. 19, leaders in Nagorno-Karabakh declared independence from Azerbaijan and said they wanted the disputed territory to become a new member of the Commonwealth of Independent States, the Soviet Union's successor.

Azerbaijani officials have been sent to the scene to investigate the crash, Rustamov said.

PEACE TALKS

Associated Press

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker speaks to the opening session of the Middle East peace conference in Moscow Tuesday. Palestinians boycotted the session because only residents of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip were allowed on their delegation.

Arabs, Israelis discuss future

Sergei Shargorodsky
Associated Press

MOSCOW, Russia — Although marred by discord over the Palestinians, the Middle East peace effort took on a broader look Tuesday with an unprecedented meeting between Israel and the Arabs to explore the region's future.

Such multilateral talks were the forum Israel has always sought to start meshing itself with the Arab world by sharing water resources, expertise and environmental measures.

The meeting was just a preliminary one that rarely touched on substance.

Arab participants used the occasion to stress demands that Israel surrender captured territory. But Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy said he was delighted by the mere fact that most of the Arabs came.

"This participation is unprecedented and we'll know how to appreciate it," he said. "The term 'peace,' hitherto vague, was stated clearly."

But the Palestinians defied the terms laid down by the meeting's co-sponsors, Russia and the United States, and brought a delegation stacked with members unacceptable to Israel.

Only three of the Palestinian delegates live in the occupied territories and thus meet Israel's terms. The others are from east Jerusalem or elsewhere in the Middle East.

Israel claimed it was an attempt to slip the Palestine Liberation Organization into the process, and said it would shun Wednesday's conference meetings if the terms of participation were violated.

Secretary of State James Baker faced the task of drawing the Palestinians into the talks while abiding by Israel's restrictions.

The Palestinians also faced a dilemma. A boycott could jeopardize their chances of sharing the benefits of possible regional cooperation. But they must reckon with hard-liners, who think the Palestinian leadership has already made too many concessions to Israel.

An official on the Palestinian team, speaking on condition of anonymity, said contacts were continuing late Tuesday and "we have a lot of hope we will participate."

But Palestinian leader Faisal Husseini said, "There is no need for us to participate in this meeting. We can participate in the next meeting."

Arab delegations appealed to Baker to change the formula arranged for the peace process in October. Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa challenged "the principle that any delegation has the right to veto the composition of other delegations."

Levy said Israel would not budge. He accused the Palestinians of trying to "bring in the PLO" and said "maneuvers and sulks" were futile. Israel refuses to negotiate with the PLO, which it views as a terrorist organization.

Baker appeared to offer the Palestinians a carrot by announcing that one of the working committees would examine the plight of the refugees, and indicated Palestinians from any area could participate in that committee.

But Levy said, "Israel abides by what was agreed, and will allow no deviation from the agreement. This is like a building — when you remove one brick it all falls down."

DAHMER TRIAL

Attorneys question, gather jury

Lisa Holewa
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer watched quietly Tuesday while lawyers asked potential jurors for his sanity trial if they would be disgusted by testimony about cannibalism, dismemberment and sex with corpses.

"You're going to hear about things you probably didn't know existed in the real world. Will you be able to handle that?" defense attorney Gerald Boyle asked a woman.

Dahmer has pleaded guilty but insane to the slayings of 15 young males in Milwaukee County. If the jury agrees he was insane, he would be sent to a mental hospital and could petition for release every six months. If deemed sane, he would receive a mandatory life prison sentence for each slaying.

Attorneys used one-on-one sessions with potential jurors in Judge Laurence Gram Jr.'s chambers to begin exposing them to details expected to emerge in testimony.

"The issue is not whether he slept with a dead body or whether he tasted a dead body. The issue is whether he was responsible for the killings that occurred," District Attorney E. Michael McCann said.

The attorneys also made sure potential jurors hadn't seen a supermarket tabloid story that said Dahmer ate his prison cell-mate.

Dahmer chuckled briefly with attorneys when associate district attorney Carol White mentioned the article published this week. Attorneys said there was no truth to the story.

"Do you read those stories about people in outer space having babies and them becoming president and all that junk? Do you believe it?" Boyle asked a young man.

Thirteen potential jurors had been chosen by early afternoon. Attorneys wanted to assemble a pool of 28 people from which to choose the final 12 jurors and two alternates.

The court planned to sequester those potential jurors chosen by the end of the day Tuesday.

Gram said a jury should be empaneled by Wednesday afternoon.

Dahmer sat in a corner nearest defense attorney Gerald Boyle during the private questioning in the judge's chambers. Jurors were seated at a round table across from him, but Dahmer mostly avoided eye contact with them and was expressionless. He flipped through a magazine toward the end of the morning sessions.

Three pool reporters were allowed in the chambers during questioning.

Attorneys dismissed a woman who indicated she didn't know if she would be able to set aside opinions she'd already formed about the case.

White extremists arrested on public violence charges

Tom Cohen
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police arrested 10 white extremist leaders Tuesday in raids certain to enrage right-wingers, who are already threatening violence against government moves toward power-sharing with blacks. Among those arrested on charges of public violence was Eugene TerreBlanche, head of the Afrikaner Resistance Movement, who is considered South Africa's most militant right-wing leader.

He and nine associates in the neo-Nazi group were released on bail of up to $36, and a court date was set for March 9.

The 10 men were arrested at their homes in pre-dawn raids reminiscent of sweeps in black townships during the state of emergency that ended in 1990.

TerreBlanche complained that his 10-year-old daughter "had to endure the humiliation, with tears in her eyes, of seeing her father arrested in front of his family on his own farm."

"This is what one should expect in a police state," right-winger Piet Rudolph said of his arrest.

In recent weeks, police also have arrested more than 10 other members of right-wing groups on suspicion of bombing schools and post offices to protest President F.W. de Klerk's reforms. Many observers think the bombings are likely to increase if de Klerk pushes ahead with his promise to end apartheid and share power with the country's 30 million blacks.

Robert van Tonder, leader of another right-wing group, said de Klerk was "creating a climate of hate and bitterness" with the arrests. But de Klerk said police had merely carried out their law enforcement duties. "The police are applying the laws of the land without political bias," he said.

Anti-apartheid groups have long accused the government and police of going easy on right-wingers.

The arrests Tuesday stemmed from an Aug. 9 clash between police and thousands of Afrikaner Resistance Movement members protesting outside a hall where de Klerk was speaking. Two movement members were shot to death by police and a third died when a car accidentally careened into the crowd.

It was the first time police used extensive force against right-wing whites.

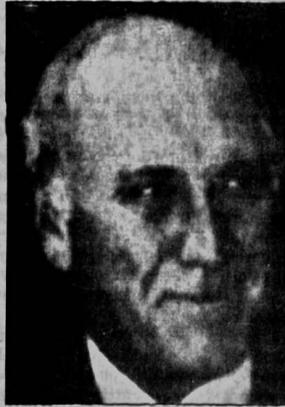

Police Col. Johan Mostert told state-run television the 10 men arrested constituted the movement's central leadership. He did not explain the nearly six-month lapse between the incident and the arrests, but such delays are common in South Africa.

TerreBlanche, 50, has repeatedly said his group would resort to violence to prevent a black government from coming to power.

His Afrikaner Resistance Movement is believed to have several thousand supporters. It holds paramilitary training drills for members dressed in khaki uniforms with swastika-like insignias.

Some members of the group have claimed responsibility for bombings, and the movement is believed to be heavily armed with explosives and automatic weapons. Most analysts believe the group could launch an effective terrorist campaign.

De Klerk has been working to split the right wing and defuse opposition to reform. On Friday, he told Parliament the issue of white self-rule could be added to constitutional negotiations on ending apartheid — an offer aimed at drawing some right-wing groups into the negotiations.

U.N. searches for weapons plants

Peter James Spielmann
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — U.N. inspectors who were roughed up by demonstrators in Baghdad on Monday are looking for secret Iraqi biological and chemical weapons production plants, according to a Security Council document.

The private report, examined Tuesday by The Associated Press, indicates for the first time that U.N. officials believe President Saddam Hussein still has secret chemical and biological weapons factories.

The report, prepared by Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali for the Security Council, was circulated today to council members.

It said the U.N. Special Commission, which is trying to destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, must identify the "development, support and manufacturing components" for the chemical and biological weapons.

"Such components clearly exist in view of the types of weapons which have been identified," Boutros-Ghali's report said.

The U.N. document is the first one obtained by the media that points to the existence of secret chemical and biological production sites that might have survived the massive allied bombing raids during the gulf war.

If such plants do exist, it is crucial that they be destroyed while U.N. inspectors still have a mandate to destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction. Otherwise, Iraq could presumably begin producing chemical and biological weapons as soon as U.N. inspections end.

On Monday, an 18-member team of U.N. chemical and biological weapons inspectors arrived at a Baghdad hotel from Manama, Bahrain, where the U.N. Special Commission is based, to begin their mission.

About 40 Iraqi demonstrators mobbed the group, jostling three of them and pinning them up against the wall of the hotel lobby. The demonstrators also blockaded the other 15 inspectors in their bus for 25 minutes.

No one was reported injured. The Security Council today authorized an official protest to the Iraqi United Nations ambassador.

The U.N. Security Council today discussed the economic sanctions imposed on Iraq, but delayed a decision because some members wanted more time to study a report on Iraq's cooperation on U.N. weapons inspection teams and other issues.

Diplomats, however, predicted the world body would decide to continue sanctions.

The incident Monday was the latest of several in which Iraq has harassed or refused to cooperate with the U.N. weapons inspectors.

Are you sure, Tom Davis to UNLV?

The Iowa basketball team's disappointing start in Big Ten play triggered predictable waves of criticism from disgruntled Hawkeye fans, and more than a few have been quick to pin the blame for the Hawks' troubles squarely on the shoulders of Coach Tom Davis.

The tired routine of demanding a coaching change whenever a Hawkeye team hits a losing streak is becoming an ugly but time-honored tradition at the UI. This time, however, frustrated Hawkeye fans may get their wish.

Davis reportedly tops the University of Nevada-Las Vegas' short list to replace current Rebels coach Jerry Tarkanian when Tarkanian retires at the end of this season. Tarkanian has made the Runnin' Rebels one of the truly elite programs in college basketball history, and UNLV is preparing a lucrative, long-term package to attract a suitable successor.

Given that type of opportunity, coupled with growing discontent among Hawkeye faithful, don't expect Davis to stick around if the Rebels make an offer.

The biggest negative associated with the UNLV opening is the inevitable comparisons with Tarkanian's phenomenal record, but that shouldn't scare Davis away. The new Rebel coach will be under intense pressure to maintain UNLV's winning tradition, but the pressure in Vegas can't be much greater than Davis has already experienced in Iowa City.

Iowa fans are routinely credited for their outstanding support of their school's marquee programs, but they are notoriously impatient with losing streaks.

Davis began his stint here by stringing together the three winningest seasons in Iowa basketball history. Last year, he guided an inexperienced squad seemingly destined for the conference basement to a 21-win season and a NCAA tournament berth. But Hawkeye fans tend to focus solely on what Dr. Tom has done for them lately.

This season's team was supposed to contend for the Big Ten title. Instead, it has slipped into the conference's second tier and needs to roll off at least eight more wins to have a shot at another tournament bid. Hawkeye fans commonly recite a litany of complaints: Davis can't recruit, he substitutes too much, his trap press is stale, his teams can't defend against perimeter shooting and his offense is stagnant.

Not surprisingly, the few fans who've heard about a potential offer from UNLV have been less concerned about the prospects of losing Davis than why the Rebels would want him in the first place.

That attitude is at least partially justified. The Hawkeyes would be better off without Davis, and the Rebels would be making a major mistake by luring him to Las Vegas. But not because of anything Davis has done on the basketball court.

There's absolutely no question that Tom Davis can coach. His first three seasons here illustrated how effective his up-tempo style can be with outstanding athletes like George Raveling left behind. Since then, Davis' recruiting ability has been sharply criticized, but he has attracted several legitimate blue-chippers. Any coach who can lure standouts like Ray Thompson, Rodell Davis and Kenyon Murray to Iowa should have no problem stocking a UNLV team with top talent.

In fact, from a purely basketball standpoint, Davis may be perfect for the Rebels. But there is a lot more at stake for UNLV right now than winning basketball games.

UNLV is not anxious to end its reign as a college basketball powerhouse, but Tarkanian's flagrant rule-breaking has created an ugly rift with the NCAA that the university will have to contend with long after his departure. UNLV President Robert Maxson and new athletic director Jim Weaver are serious about repairing that rift, so next year's Rebel coach will be expected not only to win, but to win clean.

With the Rebels already teetering perilously close to the NCAA's "death penalty," Maxson and Weaver simply cannot afford to hand over their program to a coach with a well-deserved reputation for grossly lax team discipline.

By the time Davis arrived in Iowa City, the point-shaving scandal that tarnished his coaching stint at Boston College was old news. Four seasons at Stanford had bolstered his reputation as an "educator" and helped him shed the "Dr. Snake" label he had picked up on the East Coast.

But while Davis rapidly endeared himself to Hawkeye fans by winning with Raveling's crop of future NBA draft picks, it quickly became evident that running a tight ship was not Davis' forte.

Davis' Hawkeyes attracted the wrong kind of national attention in 1989 when it was reported that Roy Marble and Ed Horton had been treated for chemical dependency during the summer prior to their senior seasons.

The following year, sophomore sensation Ray Thompson was charged with public intoxication after an incident at a downtown Iowa City bar on the eve of the Amana-Hawkeye classic. Thompson and point guard Brian Garner eventually left the team after being declared academically ineligible for the second semester.

The Hawkeyes also clashed with the University of Illinois over the recruitment of prep star Deon Thomas. Iowa assistant Bruce Pearl claimed he possessed a tape recording in which Thomas admitted being offered $80,000 and a Chevy Blazer to play for the Illini. It may never be known whether the Hawks were cheated out of Thomas' services, or simply outbid, but Pearl continues to roam the Iowa bench despite his questionable role in the controversy.

These incidents, among many others during Davis' tenure, are merely anecdotal. None of them, taken alone, warrant an indictment of Davis or the current Hawkeye program. But taken as a whole, they point to a disturbing pattern that should make any university looking to lure Dr. Tom wary.

VOTING RIGHTS ACT

Supreme Court limits government's role

Although Republicans have controlled the White House for over a decade, their influence has been limited by a moderately liberal Supreme Court and a Democratic Congress. The confirmation of Justices Souter and Thomas shifted this balance of power and the effects of this shift are now being seen. In a landmark decision on the Federal Voting Rights Act, the Court's conservative majority severely limited the scope of the 1965 law and in doing so, demonstrated that minorities can no longer rely on the judicial branch to protect their civil liberties.

The case in question encompassed two separate lawsuits brought by the Justice Department against the counties of Etowah and Russell in Alabama. The suits were filed after county boards attempted to limit the power of recently elected black officials.

Prior to the election of these black officials, individual board members maintained some administrative and budgetary authority over county roads. Commission members were able to determine which companies received contracts affecting the roads in their district.

But when blacks were elected to these posts, the previously all-white commissions transferred authority from individual members to the majority rule of the commission, ensuring that white officials could control the distribution of road contracts. Even the Bush Justice Department viewed this action as a violation of the Voting Rights Act and challenged these statutes in federal court.

A few years ago, when Justices Brennan and Marshall were still on the bench, the Court would almost certainly have ruled in favor of the plaintiffs. But with a clear majority, conservative jurists are now reinterpreting old laws, emphasizing federalism over civil liberties and traditional values before individual freedom.

Of course, this is only the beginning. Conservatives will control the Supreme Court for years to come; and as long as the country elects Republican presidents, this trend will continue. What this means is that the rights of individuals will fall further under the purview of state and local governments, and the rights of minorities will be determined by elected officials.

When voting for a presidential candidate, Americans tend to forget that their choice will affect the composition of the Supreme Court. This will not be true for long.

Future presidential elections will be affected by the public's perception of the Court. Ultimately the commitment by Presidents Reagan and Bush to nominate ideologically correct nominees may come back to haunt the conservative agenda.

Disney's not so magical business

In the Dictionary of Contemporary Slang, the entry for "Mickey Mouse, adj.," reads, "amateurish, unworthy of consideration or respect. A contemptuous term." Indeed, "Mickey Mouse operation" carries with it the same disdain that "Japanese watch" did 30 years ago. Rarely, however, has ordinary language gotten it so wrong. Anyone who believes that Mickey Mouse denotes something smalltime, second-rate, or slipshod needs a quick trip to Disney World. It is a model of relentless corporate efficiency.

Disney has always been inventive. It has always had the ability to create characters of enduring appeal. But many people are inventive. And many people create enduring characters. Disney's genius is marketing, the ability to squeeze every last dollar from every Disney creation.

The key is synergy. The movies, books, television, theme parks, hotels and product merchandising are designed to reinforce each other. A "Beauty and the Beast" stage show at the Disney-MGM theme park, for example, promotes the new movie, which in turn pulls kids into the park to see the show, which encourages them to buy the "Beauty" memorabilia conveniently sold on site, and so on.

Nothing is left to chance. It took me two days to figure out that unlike normal TV sets, the television in our Disney World hotel room did not, when turned on, return to the last channel tuned. It turned on instead to the special in-house promotional channel that hawks every amusement on the premises plus — a special little feature — "Beauty and the Beast." (For our added enjoyment, and so that we should never be out of range of the message, there was a TV speaker in the bathroom ceiling.)

The other mark of Disney efficiency is the service. Every bellhop, waiter and ride operator sports a uniform, a first-name-only name tag, and a smile, the kind usually seen only on Miss America contestants and TV weathermen. At the parks, the piped-in music comes at you from every nook and knoll so that you are never relieved of the wraparound sound of soothing background music or the have-a-good-day chatter of the staff.

The atmosphere is pleasant enough — in this day of uniformly snarly service one should be grateful for pleasantness — but one does tend to go a little insane at all the forced cheer. On my second day, I had the momentary feeling of having wandered into a Chinese re-education camp where everyone, guards included, was on Thorazine.

Of course, that is not how our 6-year-old, who thinks school is a Chinese re-education camp, sees it. He had the time of his life. Disney's product is fun, and, by and large, it delivers what it promises. Indeed, viewed as an industrial enterprise, Disney World is a marvel. Its engineers have given problems like crowd control and mass transport serious thought and have come up with solutions that would make any city administration envious. If you want to see competitiveness at work, come to Disney World.

There, however, is the rub. Competitiveness has become, by consensus, the new national mission for America (now that we have beaten communism). Every presidential candidate promises to revive the spirit, avert decline, and cure malaise by restoring America's industrial efficiency.

Yes, yes. But efficiency has a price. And the price — blandness, kitsch, mindless commercialization — is also on view at Disney World, a triumph of discipline and simplification, a vision of Japan in America.

There used to be a countervailing anti-commercial ethos in the country precisely because of the blandness and kitsch that inevitably accompanies commercial success. It was not so long ago that advertising, the "hidden persuader" that invents ever new and more artificial needs to feed demand, had an aura of unsavoriness. Now it is considered an art form. It was not so long ago that the commercialization of Christmas was considered a bad thing. This Christmas season the national lament was that Americans were not spending enough. Consumers, it seems, were paying off debt and thinking about the future instead of buying. This tempering of the usual manic acquisitiveness of the season was considered not just a threat to the economy, but somewhat un-American.

Clearly the vogue of anti-consumerism is a luxury of good times. The good times are gone now, and with them the old laments about the emptiness of consumer culture.

A trip to Disney World can make one ambivalent about this triumph of the commercial ethos. No doubt America has to become more efficient, if not strictly for the material benefits, then for the social peace that material success buys. But in the coming age of competitiveness we should prepare ourselves also for the banality that comes with relentless commercialization. For a view of that, have a day — a nice day — at Disney World.

LETTERS

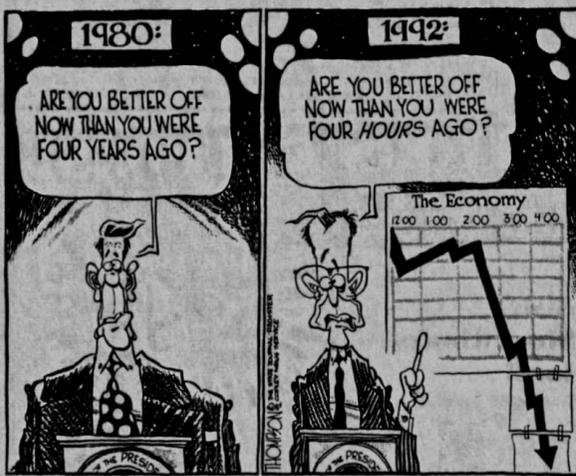

Rape victim

To the Editor:
I would like to start this letter by thanking the following people: Mr. Thomas Baker, Dean Phillip Jones, Nancy Barcelo and Vice-President Peter Nathan. I would like to thank them for making me realize it's not the rape victim who is at fault, but the people who make the rules for this University who are at fault.
Mr. Tom Baker contacted me in the summer of 1991 to tell me that the University was planning to take action against the football player who was charged with raping a woman in Slater Hall on Feb. 21, 1991. That woman was me. Weeks later Mr. Baker called again to tell me a school hearing had been set for July 25, 1991. This was canceled due to an absence of witnesses. The school hearing was then postponed until after the state trial.
After the accused was found not guilty, Mr. Baker and Dean Jones informed me there wasn't going to be a school hearing. They told me it wasn't because of the verdict, but it was because the accused was able to go into greater detail about that night than I was.

After I got their decision, I decided to appeal. Their response was supposed to take 30 days, but ended up being close to three months. After repeated calls to Nancy Barcelo, I finally received one. Not to my surprise, they didn't reverse the decision.
Throughout this whole ordeal, I, the victim, was the one who Mr. Baker was disappointed in, and I was the one who had to defend myself. The University has made me question myself for months and I finally realized it was not my fault. Just because I didn't report it to the police right away does not mean I was lying and just because I could not remember if my shoes were on or off does not make me less credible. I did the only thing I needed to do, and that was say no.
So that is why I want to thank them. They are at fault. They are the ones too scared to do anything. I did all I could do, and they are the ones who failed.

CAMPAIGN '92

Politicians keep eye on Clinton situation

John King
Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Joe Grandmaison says if he had endorsed Democrat Bill Clinton for president two weeks ago, "people wouldn't have given a damn." He's probably right.

But with Clinton's campaign sidetracked by the Arkansas governor's "cash for trash" allegations of infidelity, all sides are watching to see if the Arkansas governor can rally from crisis.

There was great interest when Grandmaison, the former state Democratic chairman, announced late Monday that he was endorsing Clinton. Grandmaison stepped forward just hours after an Arkansas woman told a news conference that she had had an affair with Clinton.

Clinton has vehemently denied the allegations of Gennifer Flowers, who first alleged the 12-year affair in a paid interview with the Star tabloid, then repeated it at a news conference arranged by Star.

Clinton supporters say that as long as Flowers' allegations remain unproven and no credible new charges arise, the governor should be able to redirect attention to the substance of his campaign.

The next days will be crucial, with Clinton headed back to the New Hampshire campaign trail on Wednesday and scheduled to appear in a nationally televised debate on Friday.

The governor is counting on friends and supporters to step forward in his defense. Many are doing so, although not without some trepidation.

"The test for me . . . (is) whether I'm willing to act publicly on my belief that this man would be an extraordinary president," Grandmaison said. "If the worst thing that I can say about me is that I stood up for a friend, there are far worse things that can be said about people."

Georgia Gov. Zell Miller was in repeated contact with Clinton advisers Tuesday, asking if he could help. His state, with a March 3 primary, will be a crucial firewall for Clinton if the Arkansas governor fares poorly in New Hampshire on Feb. 18.

Sen. John Breaux of Louisiana stood up beside Clinton at a campaign appearance on Monday. "This is an essential week," he said of his longtime friend's campaign.

Former Michigan Gov. James Blanchard contacted the Clinton campaign Tuesday, asking how he and other governors and former governors could help. Several other Clinton backers, including Oklahoma Rep. Dave McCurdy and Kentucky Gov. Brereton Jones, have offered to move up planned endorsement announcements.

In Mississippi, Rep. Mike Espy and dozens of state and local officials gathered around Clinton at a campaign event Monday, and in Texas on Tuesday Clinton picked up endorsements from a string on Texas congressmen and state legislators.

During the two-day Southern swing, Clinton drew large crowds and raised some $350,000.

That fund-raising, however, was lined up prior to the tabloid turmoil that has stalled a campaign which had previously been virtually error-free.

A greater test for Clinton will be whether he can raise the additional money needed to defend his base in the South, where the primary calendar shifts after New Hampshire and a few other states.

"None of the major Clinton people have given me or anyone I know any indication that they are leaving the campaign," said Democratic National Committee finance director Melissa Moss. She is hosting major party donors in Washington this week.

"There's a sort of wait-and-see attitude about what is going to happen next, but there have been no defections from his campaign," Moss said.

Democratic presidential hopeful Bill Clinton hugs state Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, after she introduced him in the Senate chamber Tuesday at the Capitol in Austin, Texas. Clinton spoke before several hundred supporters and says he wants to talk about issues, not allegations of marital infidelity.

Europe: U.S. preoccupied with adultery

Marilyn August
Associated Press

PARIS, France — European politicians are no saints, but what they do in the boudoir rarely makes headlines or derails a career. Their private lives — including sexual escapades — tend to be off-limits for the media.

France, where adulterous intrigue has long been a theme of novels and films, looks with bemusement on the furor over allegations of extramarital affairs involving Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton.

"I can't imagine a French politician ever talking publicly about his marriage, the way Clinton did, simply because reporters here would never ask such questions," said Thomas Ferenszi of the respected newspaper Le Monde. "The media, like the people, believe that public and private lives are totally separate."

France's most serious sex scandal occurred in the 1950s, when the president of the National Assembly was jailed for sexual involvement with minors.

"Cheating on your wife is banal. It certainly doesn't indicate whether the person is fit to hold public office, but breaking the law is something else," Ferenszi said.

An exception is Britain, where the mass media thrives on tales of misconduct among the rich and powerful.

Cecil Parkinson, Margaret Thatcher's favorite Cabinet minister, was forced to resign in 1983 after it became known that he fathered a child by his secretary. He was reinstated four years later.

And in 1963, Britain's secretary of war, John Profumo, resigned after it was disclosed that he was involved with showgirl Christine Keeler while she was also seeing a Soviet naval attaché. The revelations contributed to the Conservative Party's loss in the next general election.

Clinton, who has been married for 16 years, has denied claims by Gennifer Flowers that she had a 12-year liaison with him. Newspapers and TV stations across Europe have covered every step of the story, treating it either as a soap opera or as an "only in America" farce.

Belgian editorial writer Mia Doornaert called the allegation "irrefutable proof that Clinton is the leader of the pack. It is a tradition in the American press which shows he is taken seriously."

In Italy, commentators have wondered why Americans appear to give so much weight to a candidate's romantic life and view the Clinton case as another example of America's obsession with sex.

The Lisbon, Portugal, daily Publico called the alleged affair a "grand media carnival" whipped up to satisfy the country's "schizophrenic ultra-puritanism."

From French King Louis XIV to former Greek Premier Andreas Papandreu, European leaders have enjoyed the company of mistresses. Traditionally, they have not been held to higher standards of moral behavior than their compatriots.

Papandreu was involved in several highly publicized affairs, but was never under real pressure to resign even when one romance broke up his marriage.

"We are talking about two totally different concepts," said Belgian legislator Jean-Pierre Detremmerie. "In Europe extramarital affairs are considered a sign of good health, a feat."

Attitudes on the continent may soon change, Ferenszi said.

measures.

Instead, Bush proposed a widely expected $500 increase in the personal income-tax exemption for children but asked that it not take effect until Oct. 1 — well after many economists say the economy should be on the upswing.

Current tax law provides for a $2,300 exemption per person.

The White House said Bush's plan to cut tax withholding — which does not require approval by Congress — would pump $25 billion into paychecks this year that wage-earners otherwise would not get until 1993, for an average of $300 per family.

The change was described as permanent, and officials said more than 85 percent of taxpayers who currently receive refunds at year's end would continue to do so.

Much of what Bush proposed had been reported previously. But some surprises emerged, in addition to the changes in tax withholding:

■ A deeper-than-expected cut in the capital gains tax, paid on profits from sales of property, to a top rate of 15.4 percent. Bush had been expected to propose cutting that top rate to 19.6 percent.

last, to pay their fair share," he said.

The president openly acknowledged that his election-year message to the nation would be read by many as a partisan theme for his campaign — an aside that drew groans from the assembled Democrats. The White House also hopes it will arrest his slide in the polls.

"I am doing what I think is right; I am proposing what I know will help," Bush said.

The historic House chamber was standing-room-only, packed with lawmakers and members of the Bush Cabinet. In an unusual opening, Bush began with a joke about the high expectations for his speech: "I wanted to be sure it would be a big hit — but I couldn't convince Barbara to deliver it for me."

Recalling the allied victory over Iraq in the Persian Gulf War, Bush told Congress "we must stand together" to solve the problems at home.

"We can bring the same courage and sense of common purpose to the economy that we brought to Desert Storm," Bush said. "And we can defeat hard times together."

But on a political note, Bush challenged Congress to approve his proposals by March 20 or face a fight from the White House. "From the day after that, if it must be: the battle is joined," the president said. "And you know, when principle is at stake, I relish a good fair fight."

The major elements of Bush's program:

■ Income-tax withholding tables will be adjusted at once by the Internal Revenue Service to give many Americans more take-home pay. Even though that would reduce the size of next year's refunds, Bush said the move would put $25 billion into the economy in the next six months. Increases in take-home pay would average from around $175 for single individuals to more than $600 for two-income families, the administration claimed.

■ The personal exemption for dependent children, now $2,300 per child, would be raised by $500 for homes bought this year, with the increase would not take effect until next Oct. 1.

■ First-time homebuyers would receive a tax credit of up to $5,000 for homes bought this year, with half of the credit applying to 1992 taxes and the other half to 1993 taxes.

■ Up to $10,000 could be withdrawn from Individual Retirement Accounts without penalty for first-time home purchases.

■ All families could deduct the interest they pay on student loans.

■ The capital gains tax, the tax on profits from the sale of stock, real estate and other assets, would be cut from its current top rate of 28 percent to a maximum rate of 15.4 percent for assets held at least three years.

■ Businesses could take an extra 15 percent depreciation allowance to encourage them to invest in more equipment and machinery.

■ Tax credits and vouchers to help low and middle-income families buy health insurance, up to a maximum of $3,750 per family. Bush is expected to more fully spell out his health insurance program next month.

■ All domestic programs including benefits programs like Social Security would be frozen at current year levels.

Bush struck a no-nonsense appearance for his speech — an address that campaign advisers said was crucial for his re-election. Bush wore a stern look, pursed his lips and pointed his finger to make a point. His speech was interrupted 76 times by applause.

assistance with their taxes.

Last year VITA helped 700 people in the Iowa City and Coralville area prepare their tax returns.

Steer, chairman of VITA, said all of the volunteers received information and special training from the IRS over the winter break to help UI foreign students with the complicated 1040 Non-Resident form they are required to fill out.

Although the volunteers are unable to handle complicated returns, they can assist taxpayers with the basic 1040 form, the 1040EZ and the 1040A. VITA also informs taxpayers that they may be eligible for special credits and deductions such as the tax credit for the elderly, deductions for certain medical and dental expenses, and the child-care and earned-income credits.

"There are some people who bring in their prepared tax return for us to check for errors, and there are others who ask us to file their entire return," Steer said. "Either way, we try to educate the taxpayer so maybe next time he or she can help someone else."

The volunteers from the VITA program will assist taxpayers this year from Feb. 5 through April 15 at both the Iowa City and Coralville public libraries.

Volunteers will assist people at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., on Wednesdays from 4:30 to 8:30 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. At the Coralville Public Library, 1401 Fifth St., volunteers will be available on Thursday nights from 4:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The IRS has recommended that eligible taxpayers who want to use VITA bring with them this year's tax forms, wage and earnings statements from all employers, all interest and dividend statements, a copy of last year's tax return if available, and the social security numbers of any dependents age 1 or older.

Maggie Dameron, office supervisor at H & R Block, said many UI students call on H & R Block for a consultation regarding financial aid applications, while others need help with a particular scholarship.

"There are many foreign students from the UI who come to our office because they are confused with the complicated tax forms, which are usually quite foreign to them," she said.

Giants unwanted in San Jose?

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Anti-tax pickets rallied outside city hall Tuesday to campaign against building a new baseball stadium in San Jose, calling the deal to lure the San Francisco team south "a Giant sellout."
The protest by about two dozen people came one week after San Jose Mayor Susan Hammer detailed her plan to increase the city's utility tax rate from 5 percent to 7 percent to help pay for the proposed $185 million stadium.

COLLEGE

Depleted Irish swimming squad to compete

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame, which had two members of its women's swim team killed when a chartered bus returning from a meet crashed a few miles from the campus, will resume its schedule today with only eight participants.

The university announced Tuesday that the deaths and injuries to other swimmers will limit it when it competes against Illinois-Chicago in conjunction with men's competition between the two schools at the Rolfs Aquatic Center.

Coleman's eligibility restored in basketball

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — A federal judge ruled Tuesday that Missouri forward Jamal Coleman won't be suspended from school because of a theft conviction, and angrily criticized university disciplinary procedures as a "damned outrage."

U.S. District Judge Scott O. Wright said after a daylong hearing that Coleman, 21, may keep playing with the eighth-ranked Tigers, removing questions about the future of the senior's college basketball career.

The judge said he would make permanent a temporary restraining order he issued in December that set aside Coleman's suspension for a semester.

English fined

NEW YORK — A.J. English of the Washington Bullets was fined $3,000 for elbowing Jeff Hornacek of Phoenix in the face in Saturday's game at Landover, Md., the NBA said Tuesday.

English elbowed Hornacek with 3:28 left in the game. English also was ejected, which carries an automatic $250 fine.

Wilkins out for season

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins, needing 25 points to reach the 20,000 mark in his career, sustained a season-ending ruptured right Achilles' tendon in the second quarter of Tuesday night's game between Atlanta and Philadelphia.

Dr. David Apple, the Hawks' team physician, said Wilkins would be out for six to nine months.

Marchibroda hired by Colts

INDIANAPOLIS — Ted Marchibroda moved even further away from a Super Bowl victory on Tuesday when he was hired to coach the Indianapolis Colts, the team with the NFL's worst record.

Marchibroda, the Buffalo Bills' offensive coordinator and architect of the high-tech, no-huddle offense, returned to the Colts after being fired as their coach 13 years ago by owner Robert Irsay.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Davis worried about Badgers

Erica Weiland
Daily Iowan

Some people may consider Wisconsin (10-8, 1-4 in the Big Ten) a doormat. But it is one team that has been giving the Iowa men's basketball team plenty of problems in the last few years.

And Coach Tom Davis doesn't expect any difference tonight when the Hawkeyes (10-5, 2-3) face the Badgers at 7 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"Wisconsin has just played so well against us that I'm obviously concerned coming into this game," Davis said. "They're probably quicker and more athletic than they were a year ago, and again, shooting well from the outside."

The Hawkeyes haven't defeated the Badgers since a 78-70 win at home in 1989. Last year Iowa fell 91-79 at Madison and 56-55 to Wisconsin at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Shooting guard Val Barnes led Iowa in the first contest with 19 points, but Coach Steve Yoder's squad sported five players in double figures.

In the game in Iowa City, the Hawkeyes rallied from a 13-point deficit in the final six minutes, taking the lead on a 3-point basket by point guard Kevin Smith with six seconds left. Badger Brian Good, however, hit a 3-pointer as time expired to give his team the victory.

Good is back this year and that's bad news for Iowa fans. He is shooting .471 from 3-point range. But he is only one player Davis is concerned about.

"Brian Good, for example, is probably the best 3-point shooter in the league," the Iowa coach said. "He probably was a year ago but didn't shoot enough. He's very, very good. And they've got three or four other guys."

"(Tracy) Webster is proving to be a good 3-point shooter for as young as he is. He's so quick that if you back off of him, he stops and hits the 3-pointer. And he's shooting at a real solid percentage. They've got the ability to hurt you outside as well as inside and I think that speaks for the development of their ballclub."

Webster, the starting point guard, is averaging 17.6 points and 3.8 rebounds per game. A graduate of Thornton Township — the same high school in Illinois that teammate Louis Ely and Hawkeye Rodell Davis attended — Coach Davis recruited Webster in high school and is impressed by the sophomore's impact on the league this year.

"Webster is outstanding," Davis said. "He's really proven himself, I think, as one of the better point guards in the league."

Davis cited Wisconsin's personnel as one of the reasons for Iowa's problems against them. Other than Webster, the Badgers will be starting second guard Michael Finley (11.3 points, 4.3 rebounds), forwards Billy Douglass (3.3, 2.0) and Ely (8.0, 3.2) and center Grant Johnson (3.9, 4.2).

"They've got some good personnel again this year," Davis said. "They're going to beat some very, very good ballclubs this year because they have the good dimensions. They have the good backcourt play, some experience in the Jury seating should finish today

INDIANAPOLIS — Attorneys in Mike Tyson's rape trial clashed Tuesday as each side tried to probe potential jurors' fundamental feelings about rape: whether a woman might "ask for it," or lie about it.

Eleven jurors — seven men and four women — have been seated. Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia J. Gifford estimated as court adjourned for the day that selection of a panel of 12 jurors and four alternates would end Wednesday, with motions and opening statements thereafter.

Tyson, 25, has been charged with rape, criminal deviate conduct and confinement. If convicted, the former world heavyweight boxing champion could be sentenced to 63 years in prison.

"Do you think someone could make a false accusation of rape?" defense attorney Kathleen Beggs asked one prospective juror. Prosecution objections that the question was "fact-sensitive" to the case prevented an answer.

Deputy Prosecutor Barbara Trathen objected again when Beggs asked, "Do you have the feeling that a woman who accuses someone of rape must be telling the truth or she wouldn't have come forward?"

Defense attorneys renewed the objections later when special prosecutor Greg Garrison tried to ask about whether bad judgment by victims justified the crimes committed against them.

"Some people ask for it — and get what they ask for?" Garrison asked one potential juror. "Sometimes," replied the man, who was released from the jury pool.

Tyson's accuser, an 18-year-old Miss Black America contestant, told police she met the fighter at a pageant rehearsal on July 18 and went with him to his hotel room in the pre-dawn hours of July 19. She said he restrained her on the bed and raped her.

The boxer, who has been accused often of fondling women, insists his accuser consented to sex.

"The woman knows what happened. I know what happened. I'm backcourt other than Webster, who's new. They have some good quickness in the front court, the two big guys they rotate at center. Good basketball team."

Sophomore forward Chris Street said the Hawkeyes will have to concentrate on guarding the inside-out pass and staying out of foul trouble against Wisconsin.

"I think they're going to look inside and try to maybe get Acie (Earl) in foul trouble because they do have some good athletes that can score inside," Street said. "We just need to stay out of foul trouble and play as hard as we can. . . . It's going to be a tough test for us, and I just hope we can get a win at home."

Iowa is expected to use its regular lineup, with the exception of starting Davis at second guard for Val Barnes, who suffered a foot injury last week against Northwestern but will be coming off the bench tonight. Kevin Smith will be at point guard for the Hawkeyes, with James Moses and Street at forward and Earl at center.

All-Star reserves selected

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dikembe Mutombo, the Denver Nuggets' highly celebrated rookie, will be the only first-year player in the NBA's 42nd All-Star game Feb. 9 at Orlando.

The 7-foot-2 Mutombo, the first rookie chosen to play in the All-Star game since San Antonio's David Robinson in the 1989-90 season, was one of 14 reserves named Tuesday by the league's head coaches.

Mutombo, who will be on the West team, leads all rookies with 18.5 points and 13.3 points per game, and ranks third in the league in rebounds and eighth in blocked shots with an average of 2.63 per game.

Also selected as reserves for the West team were Otis Thorpe and Hakeem Olajuwon of Houston, Jeff Hornacek and Don Majerle of Phoenix, James Worthy of the Los Angeles Lakers and John Stockton of Utah.

Picked for the East team were Scottie Pippen of Chicago, Reggie Miller of Indiana, and

Fielder signs 1-year pact for $4.5 million

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Cecil Fielder agreed to the largest single-season contract in baseball history on Tuesday, while Mark McGwire took a rare payout for a player in salary arbitration.

Fielder, who had 95 homers and 265 RBIs during the past two seasons, settled with the Detroit Tigers at $4.5 million. He had asked for an arbitration record $5.4 million while Detroit had offered $3.2 million.

The deal, which makes Fielder No. 10 on the salary list by average annual value, tops the previous high for a single-season contract, Nolan Ryan's $4.4 million 1992 salary with the Texas Rangers.

"Both sides agreed that we're going to continue talking about a multiyear deal," said Jim Bronner, one of Fielder's agents. "This puts him in good position for a multi-year deal."

Fielder, 28, is eligible for free agency after the 1993 season. In 1991, he hit .261 with 44 homers and 133 RBIs.

"We wanted to avoid any further to-do on either side," Tigers general manager Jerry Walker said. "That's the main thing we tried to get done."

Six other players in arbitration agreed to one-year contracts Tuesday, leaving 102 remaining. McGwire saw his salary decrease from $2,875,000 to $2.65 million, halfway between his request for $2.85 million and the Oakland Athletics' offer of $2.45 million.

McGwire hit .201 with 22 homers and 75 RBIs last season. A year ago, the only cut in arbitration was taken by Dodgers infielder Jeff Hamilton.

In other signings, reliever Mike Maddux and San Diego settled at $510,000, a $400,000 raise. Pittsburgh outfielder-first baseman Lloyd McClendon agreed at $465,000, a $190,000 raise.

Outfielder Mark Carreon, obtained by Detroit last week in a trade with the New York Mets, settled at $355,000, a raise of $140,000. Catcher Joe Girardi and the Chicago Cubs agreed at $300,000, a raise of $75,000. And late in the day, San Francisco infielder Greg Litton agreed to a one-year contract.

Meanwhile, Kansas City agreed to a minor-league contract with free agent infielder Curtis Wilkerson, who would get a $200,000 major-league deal if he makes the team.

SUPER BOWL

Some reflections on Super Bowl XXVI

Attending the big game is truly an experience

James Anderson
Daily Iowan

The haze of the Super Bowl parties have finally lifted and "Hail to the Redskins" no longer rings in my ears. But having the opportunity to attend Super Bowl XXVI and run around in Minneapolis during Super Bowl week, the game will never look the same on television.

The Super Bowl is a football junkie's dream, a sensory overload amidst a frenzied horde of football freaks who go berserk amidst the excesses of parties and pre-game hype.

The accounts of Super Bowl XXVI have been chronicled and the consensus by many is that the game was a bore. It may not have had the cliff hanger ending of Super Bowl XXV which was decided on a missed field goal on the last play of the game, but from the stratospheric seats of Section 212, row 22, seat 20 in the upper deck of the Metrodome, it was an exceptional contest.

But it was in the stench and sweat of the victorious Redskins' locker room as they each took turns lifting and cradling the Vince Lombardi Trophy, that the Super Bowl came to life.

Television does not adequately convey the behemoth size of the offensive linemen of the Redskins, affectionately known to their fans as "the hogs."

With their fingers bunched together in athletic tape, pink surgical scars tattooing their bodies and their forearms bloodied by the artificial turf, the soft-spoken hogs took their earned place in the glory of a Super Bowl victory.

But being at the game is only a small aspect of Super Bowl frenzy. Wandering around the bunker that the NFL had created provided the perfect opportunity to stop and chat for a couple minutes with others who have played in the sporting colossus of the Super Bowl.

It was in the stench and sweat of the victorious Redskins' locker room, as they each took turns lifting and cradling the Vince Lombardi Trophy that the Super Bowl came to life.

I consider myself fortunate to have had the opportunity to shake the hands of two of the greatest men ever to carry a football - Walter Payton and Franco Harris. What a kick it was to spend a minute with the maverick owner of the Los Angeles Raiders, Al Davis, and get a good look at the his three lug nut sized Super Bowl rings packed with diamonds as he enthusiastically spoke of former Hawkeye Nick Bell who now wears the Raider Silver and Black.

One can also hear the frustration that lingers in the voice of one of the greatest pass rushers to play the game, Minnesota Viking Carl Eller as he painfully recalls losing four Super Bowls and failing to capture the coveted Super Bowl ring.

The closer it came to game time the louder and more excessive the parties grew. By late Friday afternoon the legendary excesses of the Super Bowl emerged as the high rollers jetted into the Twin Cities in their tuxedos, sequined dresses and full length fur as the NFL cranked the liquor spigots wide open.

But for those who forgot their tuxedos and were content to ignore the lifestyles of the rich and famous, the proper alternative party invitation (or press credentials) ensured ample opportunities to hang out in the media lounge and slowly slip into football comatose caused by a continuous flow of Heineken and pro football highlights dating back to when players wore leather helmets. A thank you note to NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue is definitely in order for picking up the week's bar tab.

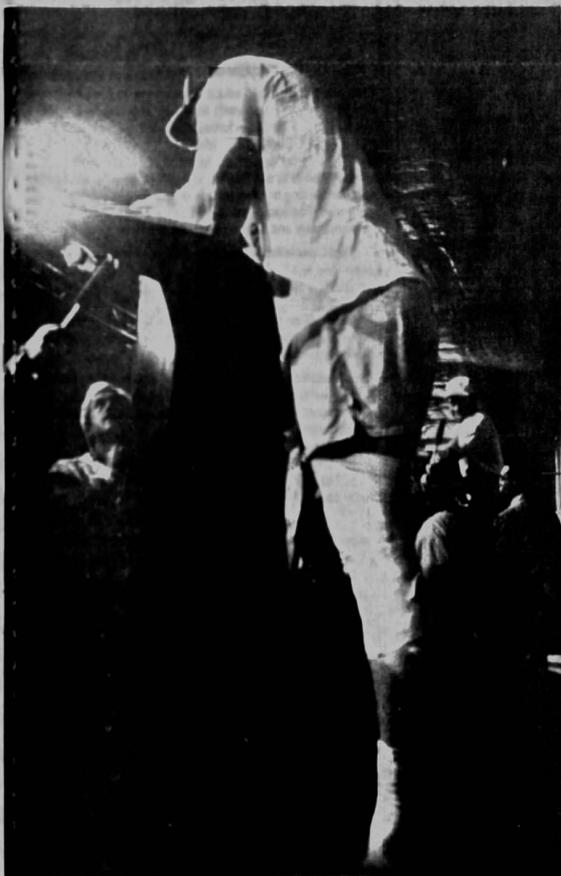

The city was also filled with Bills fans in furry helmets with horns and Redskin fans in feather head dresses being shouted at by protesters who did not want team names to be used as mascots.

There is an axiom in journalism that says there is no substitute for being there, this axiom definitely holds true for the fan of professional football. Having watched every Super Bowl for as long as I can remember, the big game will never look the same again... but there is always next year in Pasadena.

(From right) Former Pittsburgh Steeler Franco Harris, NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue, former Chicago Bear Walter Payton and other football fans

wait for their stage cue in the Green Room of a nationally-televised Super Bowl party Saturday night at the Target Center.

Super Bowl watched by second largest total ever

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Washington's 37-24 victory over Buffalo in the Super Bowl on Sunday was watched by an estimated 120 million people, the second highest number ever to watch the game, CBS Sports said Tuesday.

The national rating for the game was 40.3

with a 61 share, the network said. A rating is the percentage of all TV households in America, and a share is the percentage of televisions actually in use at the time. Each ratings point represents about 921,000 homes.

Only the 1986 Super Bowl between Chicago and New England was seen by more people.

MUSIC

Hitmaking C & W duo at Stallion

Kenny Putnam
Daily Iowan

Dust and dance wax will fly Thursday night when Arista recording artists Brooks and Dunn open at The Red Stallion, 1010 E. Second Ave., in Coralville. These lanky, hard-singing songwriters have poured gas on traditional honky-tonk music to create a hot new sound.

They have scored two No. 1 singles off their first record, Brand New Man. A third tune, "Neon Moon," not yet released as a single, is already crawling up the charts.

Originally brought together to write songs, Eric "Kix" Brooks and Ronnie Dunn were signed to a recording contract as soon as Tim DuBois with Arista heard their first three compositions — one of which is their current hit "My Next Broken Heart."

Their first No. 1, "Brand New Man," left Dunn, a Tulsan who moved to Nashville, Tenn., after winning the Marlboro Talent Search, numb.

"The second one hit me harder and felt better than the first," said Dunn. But "it takes a bunch of number ones these days to stay in there and be a contender," he said.

Born a Texan, Dunn grew up playing in his father's dance band and later in high-school groups. Moving with the family to Tulsa, Okla., Dunn fell in with people of Leon Russell's Shelter Records, located there. He left his mark on Tulsa's celebrated music scene and had a short run with Churchill Brooks and Dunn will be kicking up the dust down at the Red Stallion Thursday.

Records before it closed shop. Dubois coaxed Dunn to Nashville, where the gears of country music grind.

"You have to be present to win," Dubois told him.

Brooks was already in Nashville working as a writer for Tree Publishing. He wrote "Modern Day Romance" for The Dirt Band and Highway 101's "Who's Lonely Now." Ricky Van Shelton, Holly Dunn, The Oak Ridge Boys and Nicolette Larson have also used his material.

Brooks and Dunn like working together. Their writing, with the contributions of Don Cook, has produced a hit record, and "performing is a lot more fun," said Dunn.

"It's felt real good," said Brooks. "We're enjoying sharing the spotlight, kicking it back and forth. Musically, we both kind of feel things the same way, so the honky-tonk sound and the progressive edge the music has isn't something we tried to do. It's just what evolved."

A featured sideman at Thursday's performance will be Barry "Byrd" Burton on steel guitar. Burton was a charter member and lead player of The Amazing Rhythm Aces. Since then he has been doing sessions and producing records in Nashville between touring dates with Dan Fogelberg and Dolly Parton, among others.

Opening for Brooks and Dunn is Cheyenne. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster, (319) 363-1888, Dancers Inc., 1008 E. Second Ave., Coralville, or The Red Stallion.

John Lindberg), will be "breaking new ground in chamber jazz" (Downbeat) at the Sanctuary.

Cutting edge jazz comes to IC

Brett Ratner
Daily Iowan

One of music's most innovative hybrids will come together Thursday night as the String Trio of New York fills the Sanctuary with its jazz-laden classical music... or is it the other way around?

"The unique thing about the trio is that they use their classical music background as a foundation to explore jazz-style improvisation," said UI music professor Steve Grismore. "Because of this, their music can be appreciated by jazz and classical aficionados alike."

According to Grismore, the group has been known to delve into "Hendrix-ish" rock styles as well.

The String Trio of New York is composed of violinist Charles Burnham, guitarist James Emery, and bassist John Lindberg.

All three individuals possess lists of credentials that include collaborations with, among others, Henry Threadgill, James Blood Ulmer, Carmen Moore, Anthony Braxton, and John Carter. Among the myriad awards and commissions the group has garnered individually and collectively have been those from ASCAP and the National Endowment for the Arts.

The cozy interior of the Sanctuary, 405 S. Gilbert St., promises to light up with the solid, "soloistic" grooves of Lindberg, the "fierce and persuasive" fretwork of Emery, and the "graceful swing" of Burnham.

Verbal relief for monthly horror

Mandy Crane
Daily Iowan

The following is an open letter of apology to my roommate (whom I'll call Archie) for the hormonal changes my body is currently going through:

Dear Archie:

Like most young American women I don't always get along with my mother. For a long time, what she said was day I'd say was night, et cetera. We were having a heart-to-heart recently, and I was beginning to think I could agree with her after all when she announced, "I think this PMS stuff is a bunch of hokey." (Or something to that effect.)

That did it. Not only were my misbehaving hormones being attacked by another woman, they were being attacked by a woman whose menopausal mood swings and heat flashes have been stretched out to last the past 10 years or more. Excuse me? And she says I have biological problems?

As a man, you might be ready to fold up this page and rush off to your 9:30 class, but hear me out. Premenstrual syndrome is not a joke. Tensions run high and body parts ache. It might be different if these pains were caused by physical stress or emotional duress, but no, the sole reason women go through this agony each and every month is simply because we're female. That should be reason enough to be a little cranky.

Some women have the nerve to announce they never get PMS. I laugh at them. How do they expect to conquer the world when they haven't experienced the excruciating scraping a sheet can create over your breasts at bedtime? They don't know what suffering is.

My poor, poor roommate. You had no idea when you agreed to share a two-bedroom duplex with this fun-loving blonde that you'd be in for a monthly trip to hell.

When it's "that time," you've found me non-communicative — except when I yell. The only way I can laugh at this time is maniacally at other people's misfortunes. I scream at the television, my clothes, my body and the bathroom scale. I say I need to eat better yet you find me with a spoon in a roll of cookie dough or my fist in a bag of lime-flavored Tostitos.

Did I ever tell you about Mr. F., my ex-boyfriend? His favorite snack was buttered and salted popcorn with pieces of a dark chocolate candy bar tossed in and a Coke. Every 28 days he'd pull me aside and suggest I had a chemical imbalance or an emotional disorder. He'd ask why I wouldn't let him touch me. The relationship went steadily downhill from there.

Friends who happen to be male can be just as bad. I told one of my friends that I broke down and cried in the financial aid office last month probably because of PMS. He wryly asked, "Oh, has a week passed so quickly?" Stop laughing.

As a budding naturalist, I've tried everything to "cure" my ailment: homeopathic PMS remedies, encapsulated herbal mixes, and lots of Vitamin B complex. I'm trying to eat better but the wave-cut potato chips taste so good — followed by a bag of Hershey's Kisses. A salad? When there's this microwave cupcake mix sitting right here? I better use it up before it spoils.

I apologize for the time I came home from the grocery store two months ago to find you making toast. You asked why it wasn't browning as it should be. I came over and bellowed in the most sadistic of tones: "That's because you have it in the wrong slot!"

I don't know what came over me. It must have been that can of high-sodium tomato soup I had for lunch.

This semester, I swear I'll do better. I'll stay on a regular vitamin regimen and load up on Evening Primrose Oil and black cohosh when the going gets tough. I'll eat only leafy greens and Grape Nuts and drink lots of water. I'll take Midol like baby aspirin.

And if that doesn't work I'll do as my foremothers did and take off and hide in a cave for a while.
