Van Allen to give Presidential Lecture

UI Regent Distinguished Professor James Van Allen will deliver the UI's ninth annual Presidential Lecture at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in Clapp Recital Hall. The event is open to the public. Following Van Allen's speech there will be a musical performance and presentation of a sculpture.

Iowa City men arrested for marijuana offenses

Four Iowa City men were arrested Wednesday following an investigation that uncovered several pounds of marijuana, scales and packaging equipment. Kha Phan, Christopher Ronnebaum, Shane Colby and Anthony Anders were all arrested on charges ranging from delivery of a schedule I controlled substance to possession of marijuana and violation of the Iowa Drug Tax Act. The arrests resulted from a joint effort of the Davenport Police Department's Street Crimes Unit, the Iowa Division of Narcotics Enforcement and the Johnson County Area Multi-Agency Task Force.

Time spent watching TV increases for youth

WASHINGTON (AP) — American youth are spending more time in front of the television, according to a government-financed report released Thursday. The Nation's Report Card, as it is informally called, surveyed TV viewing by children ages 9, 13 and 17. Viewing habits were broken down into less than three hours a day, three to five hours a day and more than five hours a day. At all three ages, a majority of youngsters reported watching more television in 1990 than in 1982 for 9- and 13-year-olds and 1978 for 17-year-olds.

The report also said that, for all three ages, achievement levels tended to fall as viewing rose. The report, formally called the National Assessment of Educational Progress, has been monitoring scholastic achievement since 1969.

U.S. eases procedures for would-be immigrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with a mounting exodus of boat people, the U.S. Embassy in Haiti made plans Thursday to give Haitians suffering political persecution the opportunity to come to the United States legally. The move departs from the normal practice of accepting applications for political asylum only from aliens who are traveling or residing away from their native land.

Rawlings encourages cooperation

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings discussed the university and community public images and praised the Iowa City and Coralville communities for their support of the UI during his annual town/gown speech Thursday afternoon. Rawlings compared the UI community to Aristotle's city-state, based on classical Athens, which is "large enough to offer diversity and excitement but small enough to be experienced as a whole." The surrounding communities and the UI have created what Rawlings referred to as "a humane and urbane setting."

"We have the friendliness and warmth of a close-knit community combined with the international, forward-looking outlook of a metropolitan area," he said.

The "special Iowa style of unpretentious sophistication" will draw students and faculties from both troubled coasts, Rawlings said.

The UI community needs to market itself to compete for student enrollment and research grants, he said, and create an image.

The image many Iowans have of the UI community as large, urban and liberal should be combined with the out-of-state image of Iowa as small, rural and quaint, Rawlings said, into the best of both — "dynamic and idyllic."

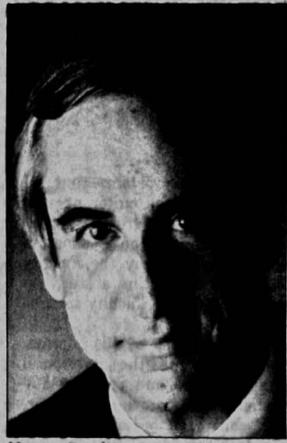

He said the "student-friendly attitudes" of Iowa City and Coralville community members last year helped the UI attract a healthy number of new students, despite demographic decreases in the Midwest.

The uniqueness of community participation, including such programs as sending letters from the mayors of Iowa City and Coralville to all prospective students accepted to the UI, impressed parents and students, Rawlings said, and convinced some to attend the UI.

"The feeling that the community cared and was important to the university and worked hand in hand with the university is invaluable to us as an institution," he said.

The number of new applicants for next fall is running 14 percent to 15 percent ahead of last year, due in part to the "major assistance" of the community, Rawlings said.

CAMPAIGN '92

Ruth Harkin gestures while speaking on behalf of her husband, Democratic hopeful Sen. Tom Harkin during a campaign stop at the Masonic Temple in Iowa City Thursday night.

Ruth Harkin speaks to local Democrats

Eric Detwiler

Ruth Harkin, wife of presidential candidate and Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, told an enthusiastic gathering of supporters Thursday night at the Iowa City Masonic Temple, 312 E. College St., that the Harkin campaign was gaining steam.

"I think things are going very well because Tom is beginning to gain momentum as he's going into the final stretch," Harkin said. "He's going up in the polls, and he's attracting large, large crowds in the state."

Nearly 60 local Democrats attended the 7:30 event to listen to a half-hour update on the campaign from Harkin and ask her questions. The meeting was a partial celebration of the fact that Tom Harkin had passed presidential rival Bob Kerrey by a point in a New Hampshire poll.

"Tom is really moving up in New Hampshire, and he has now passed Sen. Bob Kerrey in the polls," Harkin said. "Also today, 50 members of the New Hampshire Legislature endorsed Tom's candidacy."

Harkin added that they hope to place well in that state primary after a boost from the Iowa caucuses.

"I think it's critical that Tom place in the top three in New Hampshire," Harkin said. "But I would not want to make any kind of predictions just because it's such a late-blooming process. People in New Hampshire decide very late in the game who they're going to vote for."

The Harkins have been married since 1968, and both graduated from law school in 1973. Ruth Harkin currently works in a law firm in Washington, D.C. They have two daughters.

Harkin said she was pleased with the support Tom Harkin's campaign had received from people all over the United States and added that most of it was from grassroots organizations.

"Tom has more individual contributions than any other candidate,"

UNITED NATIONS

Security Council offers peace keeping proposal

Peter James Spielman
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — President Bush and the world's other top leaders gathered Thursday for an unprecedented Security Council summit to coordinate policy on peacekeeping, disarmament and quelling aggression.

On the eve of the high-profile, 15-nation gathering, U.N. diplomats wrapped up days of arduous wrangling over whether to also emphasize human rights, democracy and economic justice and sent a final text to their leaders for approval.

In the end, those points were included, but often in language diluted from earlier drafts.

British Prime Minister John Major will preside over Friday's summit, the first of its kind in the council's 46-year history. Thirteen heads of state or government will sit with him at the circular table in the council's chamber, along with two foreign ministers.

"The Security Council is more and more the focus of all the work that is being done in collective security against aggression and against threats to international peace and security," said the British ambassador, Sir David Hannay.

Britain is president of the council this month, and Major proposed the summit.

The council's new high profile was underlined last year by its role in the future, the Comanche, would stay in the development lab longer instead of entering production. Bush also opted to delay money for the Army's next-generation tank.

Ambassadors of the 15 council nations reached general agreement Thursday on the text of the non-binding communiqué to be issued by the leaders on Friday and sent it to their respective governments for approval, said Hannay and U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering.

Hannay said he believed the draft communiqué had "very broad support" but said more consultations could take place. The document was to be adopted by consensus, without a vote.

China tried to minimize references to human rights, "democracy and representative forms of government." India, which has not signed the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty, was reluctant to endorse nuclear disarmament. Neither country wanted a precedent for international interference in these areas, diplomats said.

The proposed text of the statement to be adopted by the council members includes the following:

■ Notes that tumultuous change in recent years, "however welcome, has brought new risks for stability and security."

ECONOMY

Report: Factory orders drop, layoffs continue to increase

John D. McClain
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a rash of discouraging economic news, the government said Thursday that orders to factories for durable goods dropped sharply in December and business layoffs were continuing to rise through the middle of this month.

A separate report said consumers' spending was up only slightly last month in yet another sign of economic stagnation. Americans' personal income was up, but that was partly due to rising jobless payments because of the national economic slump.

U.S. businesses — and the Bush administration — are anxiously seeking any sign of revival. But Gilbert Benz, an economist with the Swiss Bank Corp. in New York, said the reports suggested "there basically will be no growth in the first quarter of this year."

"The economy is kind of standing on rubbery legs," concurred economist Robert Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "It isn't falling down. It's maintaining its equilibrium, but it can do no more."

President Bush did not comment on the new reports during a speech to businessmen in Philadelphia but saw reason for hope in other economic signs. He said, "Inflation is down; inventories are down; the market has been expressing optimism in the future; interest rates are down and this is no time for gloom and doom."

The Commerce Department reported that orders for long-lasting, usually expensive durable goods such as cars and computers fell to a seasonally adjusted $117.7 billion in December. The 5 percent decline was the largest since orders plunged 11.2 percent in November 1990.

Orders were down 4.6 percent for all of 1991, the largest loss since the recession year of 1982 when they fell 6.7 percent.

Transportation orders were down 13.9 percent in December, accounting for most of the overall decline. If not for the transportation problems, total orders would have been down just 1.6 percent.

DEFENSE

SDI funding continues to grow

Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is pushing for a huge increase in spending on Star Wars missile defenses even as the overall Pentagon budget shrinks and many of the military services' cherished weapons projects get the ax.

The Strategic Defense Initiative to develop a shield against ballistic missiles of all ranges is the biggest winner in President Bush's proposed 1993 defense budget.

The most prominent losers are the Seawolf attack submarine program, which would end after a single $2 billion submarine is built — instead of 36 — and the B-2 stealth bomber program, which Bush wants to cancel after 20 planes — rather than 75 — are built.

The Army took some heavy hits, too. Its light helicopter of the future, the Comanche, would stay in the development lab longer instead of entering production. Bush also opted to delay money for the Army's next-generation tank.

The Strategic Defense Initiative, or SDI, has benefited on Capitol Hill from a perception that Iraq's use of Scud missiles in the Persian Gulf War — and the Patriot missile's success against the Scud — makes SDI urgent.

"We must have this protection because too many people in too many countries have access to nuclear arms," Bush said in his State of the Union speech Tuesday.

Bush and Russian President Boris Yeltsin are expected to discuss SDI at a meeting Saturday at Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains. On Wednesday, Yeltsin proposed that Moscow and Washington join in creating and operating a joint system of ballistic missile defense.

Unlike the Patriot system, which is designed to shoot down high-flying aircraft and short-range battlefield missiles, an SDI system is intended to shoot down ballistic missiles of any range fired at

FACULTY FAMILIES

Task force addresses difficulties at UI

Improving the situation of faculty spouses and partners will help the university.

Estela Villanueva
Daily Iowan

Solutions to problems that UI faculty couples encounter are the focus of a new task group.

The Task Force on Spouses, a committee formed by the Faculty Council, is conducting a study on situations affecting faculty spouses and partners.

"The importance of this information is to improve the situation of faculty spouses and partners and by doing so improve the university," said Faculty Council Chairman Jack Fix.

Employment for faculty spouses and partners is a major area of concern, and is often the deciding factor between acceptance or rejection of a faculty appointment. This is also one of many aspects of the relationship that the Task Force is addressing.

"It is in the university's own interest that the situation of faculty spouses and partners be as satisfactory as possible because the faculty member's satisfaction with his or her situation takes this factor into consideration," said George Nickelsburg, chairman of the Task Force on Spouses.

The initial idea behind the task force arose from the efforts of Nickelsburg and his wife, Fix said. The couple pressed several organizations to recognize the importance of faculty families, particularly spouses and partners, in relation to the 1989 strategic-planning goal of a high quality of life at the UI.

The Faculty Welfare Committee responded to this suggestion by advising the Faculty Council to appoint a task force that would study the situation of faculty spouses and partners.

The Task Force on Spouses was then appointed by Fix last summer, and includes five faculty members to be filled out by spouses and partners.

Topics discussed in the questionnaire include perceptions on how the UI has helped in finding employment in the community, what kind of information the respondent has received and would like to receive from the UI, and whether the respondent would like to meet other spouses and part-members, three staff members and one representative from the Iowa City business community.

Members were selected to represent faculty from the colleges at the UI, spouses that are not members of the faculty, and liaisons to the UI President's Office and the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce. Several members were chosen specifically for their considerable and related expertise in family relationships, Fix said.

The charge put forth to the Task Force was to collect information that would help determine a wide spectrum of situations that prevail for spouses and partners of UI faculty members.

To implement the study, the Task Force devised a questionnaire that was sent to the homes of 1,750 tenure-track and tenured faculty members. Additional data are expected to come from a form included with the questionnaire regarding interest and participation in focus groups.

Before the questionnaire was mailed, Nickelsburg corresponded with 64 universities in 46 states about similar studies on faculty spouses and partners. Nickelsburg received 33 replies, mostly regarding spousal employment as it relates to faculty couples, he said.

The topics addressed in the UI's questionnaire are more broad-ranging and discuss other issues such as child care, Nickelsburg said.

The task force is in the process of organizing the information from the other universities, along with the questionnaire and data from focus groups. Formal recommendations will be presented to the Faculty Council by next fall, which will be passed on to the principal administration, Fix said.

Recommendations from the task force regarding the questionnaire will help determine the following:

- Methods to help facilitate communication within and among relevant groups that can help to better the situations of faculty, spouses and partners.

- Possible means to improve the UI and its faculty by enhancing the situation of faculty, staff and partners.

- The relationship of possible improvements for faculty, staff and partners to measure newly enacted or already under consideration within the university or its surrounding community.

NATIONAL CONTEST

IC bands may have shot at trip to Florida

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

As Spring Break '92 approaches, many students may dream of lying on the beach in sunny Florida. If all goes well for a UI student band, the dream may also include the sounds of music.

"Thanks to a contest to find the best college rock 'n' roll band in the country, a student band may win the chance to compete in the Dodge Rockin' Campus Bash during MTV's Spring Break '92 in Daytona Beach, Fla.

According to John Bagby of KRUI radio marketing and promotions, the contest, sponsored by Dodge, is being held nationwide. Twenty bands will be selected from each region, with the five finalists from each region competing during the MTV special to determine the champion.

Bagby said that the grand prize awarded to the winning band will be $2,000 plus the opportunity to cut a demo in a professional recording studio.

"To enter," Bagby said, "each band must include one registered UI student if the band has four or less members, and two registered UI students if there are more than four members in the band. Also, no professional recording artists are eligible."

The UI will select its regional finalist, the "best band in Iowa City," on Feb. 8, at Carnaby Street, 121 E. College St., formerly New Sensations, in Iowa City. Bagby said bands can submit tapes to KRUI until Friday, and the best three will be selected to compete on stage.

According to Bagby, Carnaby Street, unlike bars that normally host bands like Gabe's and the Yacht Club, has separate rooms that will most likely allow the event to be open to all ages.

"No alcohol will be served in the stage area," Bagby said. Wristbands will be given to students of age and they can drink alcohol in a separate area, but no alcohol will be allowed in the stage area.

The judges of the Iowa City contest will include representatives from KRUI, Carnaby Street and the UI music department.

Bagby said the three bands would be chosen by Monday. All music will be original.

KRUI radio, a student radio station, was contacted by the National Association of College Broadcasters about the contest. Bagby said that KRUI has received a number of tapes and that many bands are rushing to make one to submit by Friday's deadline.

JFK ASSASSINATION

Lawyers defend commission findings

Investigating attorneys say the secrecy leads to distrust of the government.

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — All surviving lawyers for the commission that first investigated the death of John F. Kennedy demanded release of secret files in the case Thursday.

"There is nothing in them that would change the conclusion of the Warren Commission," said David Belin, a lawyer for the commission and defender of its conclusion that there was no conspiracy to kill Kennedy in 1963.

"Based on all of the evidence, we remain convinced that Lee Harvey Oswald fired all of the shots that killed President Kennedy and Officer Tippit," said a statement signed by 13 attorneys.

The statement said the only exception would be autopsy photos, and then only if the Kennedy family still wants them concealed. Belin said he would release the pictures, too, but that some of the other attorneys disagreed.

Belin attempted to win release of all the documents in 1975 but failed. "It's an example of excessive secrecy of our government. It contributes to the decline of trust," he said.

He said there's a better chance for release now because of renewed interest in the case.

"After 28 years, there's no reason all the documents can't be released," he said.

Belin said the documents represent less than 10 percent of the Warren Commission documents and fall into three categories aside from autopsy photos:

- Identity of confidential informants.

- Procedures relating to protection of a president.

- Isolated hearsay allegations that were investigated and found to have no merit.

He said methods of protecting the president have changed and that releasing the 1960s system would not expose contemporary officials.

Belin again blasted the Oliver Stone movie "JFK," saying the film has dozens of lies as it purports to review the assassination. He said Stone knows the movie is false and won't appear with Belin to defend himself. "Oliver Stone is afraid of me," he said.

He said the movie is a modern-day example of McCarthyism, a term used to describe baseless attacks by the late Sen. Joe McCarthy in the 1950s.

Polls show a majority of Americans believe there was a conspiracy to kill Kennedy. Belin said that if any good is to come of the movie, "I hope the American people learn how easy it is to mislead the American people."

The letter is signed by Belin and Joseph Ball, a California attorney, who were the two attorneys attached to the commission's probe on who actually did the shooting. Among the other attorneys is Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa.; William Coleman Jr.; Melvin Risenberg; Burt Griffin; Wesley Liebler; Richard Mosk; J. Lee Rankin; Norman Radlisch; W. David Blawson;

Samuel Stern and Howard Willens. Belin said he was not sure what action was needed to release all of the documents.

In a related development, former President Gerald Ford, the only surviving member of the commission, has asked House leaders to press for release of all files concerning the assassination.

Ford made the request in letters to House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, who was chairman of the House Select Committee on Assassinations. The Washington Post reported Ford's request and Stokes' office confirmed it had received his letter.

Stokes headed the two-year House committee probe in the late 1970s, which concluded Kennedy's death probably resulted from a conspiracy and that there was a high probability that two gunmen fired at the president.

Ford said the Warren Commission finding is correct but that it's important to reveal the documents and end doubts about their contents.

Proximity of elections confuses prospective candidates

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

The availability of two separate election petitions for the UI Student Assembly has created confusion among prospective candidates, said UISA President Jennifer Kelly.

Kelly said the confusion has been brought about because a UISA special election is taking place at the same time that petitions for the formal elections are being distributed.

"Because they're so close it's confusing," she said. "With formal elections coming in a couple of weeks, and the special elections going on — we're trying to make sure people understand what is going on."

Undergraduate Collegiate Senate Executive Officer Byron Wallace said although petition response has been very good, some of the candidates are confused about the difference between the two petitions.

"The response coming back has been great, but we did have one problem in that a lot of people didn't realize the special election seats start now and run until April, and the formal election seats run from this April until next April," he said.

The special election petitions require 50 signatures, and then the applicant is awarded a seat. There are currently 38 undergraduate and 60 graduate seats available.

The formal election petitions require 75 signatures, and the applicant is then placed on a ballot and is elected to office.

Kelly said the idea behind the special election is to be able to fill empty senate seats; and the timing of the election will change next year.

"The idea behind the special election isn't necessarily to have it at a certain time, but rather to have an ongoing process of filling up seats," she said. "One problem this year was that we didn't have a special election process. Then many senators weren't able to complete their term. We needed more people. Next year it will be an ongoing process to fill the seats so that the government will keep functioning at a level it should."

In order to clear up the confusion, the UISA had an informational table set up in the Union basement Thursday and will also have one today.

SEX OFFENSES

Facilitator in local program: Required treatment helpful

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

A facilitator in a local sex offenders program said he hopes the recommendation of a mandatory in-prison treatment program would be helpful for sex offenders.

The community program is a joint effort by the Lutheran Social Services and the Department of Corrections. One of the facilitators in the group, Dick Hines, described the program as a group of adult men, age 18 to 49, most from Johnson County who have been convicted for sex offenses.

"These guys convicted of sexual offenses need to be held accountable for their crimes, not only through the justice system but also treatment — so these two can be combined in assisting these guys," Hines said.

He explained the group is based on a model which focuses on victim empathy, relapse prevention, sex education and interpersonal skills. The victim empathy component tries to make offenders understand that when they commit sex abuse crimes they're hurting someone else.

The group watches videos of victims talking about their experiences and the group participates in role-playing, Hines said.

"Sex offenders are interested in their own needs, not someone else's needs. They depersonalize the victim," Hines explained. "In treatment we try to get them to think beyond themselves and to realize it is a human being they're hurting."

"Sex offenders shouldn't get out even a day early if they haven't completed the treatment program."

J. Patrick White

In relapse prevention, offenders learn how to take care of their personal needs. Some of the motivating factors behind rape are power and control because the offenders don't feel control or power in their own lives, Hines said. They learn what their red flags and warning signs are and how to constructively deal with their feelings.

There have been people who don't want to be there, he said, but group therapy can be a very difficult experience. They get confronted by other offenders about their behavior. Hines said if they don't want to work at treatment then they are discharged and the Department of Corrections deals with them.

The reason for the sexual education, Hines said, is that many of the men he gets in his group have little or no information about human sexuality, STDs or anatomy.

J. Patrick White

Many offenders have poor social skills, especially in relating to other adults, Hines said. There are themes of emotional abandonment, physical and sexual abuse, and alcoholism among the offenders in his group.

Hines said he gets voyeurs, exhibitionists, child molesters and rapists in his group but none that have committed murder. Most people laugh when they think of exhibitionists, he said, but it's a serious crime.

"As a society, we don't take voyeurism and exhibitionism seriously. Research shows these tendencies get worse and are symptoms of deeper problems," Hines said.

Legislature hears recommendation

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

A recommendation to make an in-prison treatment program mandatory for convicted sex offenders has been presented to the Iowa legislature from the Iowa County Attorneys Association.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White explained that sex offenders often get discharged after serving only 50 percent of their sentence due to "good and honor time," regardless of whether they complete the program.

"Sex offenders shouldn't get out even a day early if they haven't completed the sex offenders treatment program," White said. "Good and honor time doesn't contain any exceptions for programs and offenders can thumb their nose at treatment and still be released into the community. I don't think it's fair or safe. Sex offender treatment should be considered a part of good and honor time."

The current in-prison program is not voluntary, in the sense that inmates are screened — treatment depends on someone being receptive to it. They won't put someone in the program who's belligerent or hostile, White said.

Jack Ibersen, a parole probation officer in the Department of Corrections, said he doesn't think treatment should stop at the in-prison program.

"In the community offenders have to deal with a different set of stresses than in an institution," Ibersen said. "They need some form of aftercare. Due to the compulsive nature of the sexual offenses, it's a lifelong program to learn to manage their addictions. There's always the risk of reoffending."

There is no cure for sex offenders, Ibersen said. Those who think they're cured are the ones most at risk to reoffend. Ironically, those with multiple prior convictions are the ones having the most success in the treatment programs, he said, because they are the most aware of the risk of reoffending.

"Sex offenders are interested in their own needs, not someone else's needs."

The Department of Corrections monitors offenders on probation or parole by making home visits that are geared to the individual. For example, Ibersen said, offenders who are into pornography would be restricted from having it in their possession if it is one of their specific risk factors.

"We try to intervene in their behavior before a relapse, such as drinking or pornography," Ibersen said.

Ibersen said that a sex offender who is on probation and gets a new conviction will have probation revoked and the offender will go back to prison. Offenders who are off probation or parole and get a new conviction will serve more time and be provided the opportunity to go through the program again, he said.

One problem Ibersen noted is when sex offenders are given deferred sentences, which means they are given clean criminal records if they complete probation and the program. Offenders can then go on to jobs where they have a high degree of access to potential victims, such as medical or educational jobs, he said.

"We have battles with some of the defense attorneys who say their clients should not have to go through treatment because they plea-bargained to a lesser offense," Ibersen said. "We don't discriminate between types of sex offenders — they all need treatment."

When sex offenders can't be treated effectively in the community, he said there should be a quicker route to get them out of the community where they're a danger. Ibersen said he believes sex offenders are among the most serious criminals and is disappointed in the way society handles them.

"We live in a society that places more value on their property than on their children. Child molesters get lighter sentences than someone who steals property from others," Ibersen said. "Lascivious acts with a child carries a five-year sentence while stolen property acts — some of those carry 10 years."

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Zoning application receives final approval

Development of land now depends on Iowa City City Council.

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors on Thursday approved for the third and final time a zoning application from Karl Buchmayer, which calls for the rezoning of 64.5 acres of land off Highway 1. The board voted 3-2 in favor of the application, the same outcome as one week ago. Supervisors Richard Myers and Betty Ockenfels again voted against approval of the application.

Development of the land now depends on the Iowa City City Council who must approve a preliminary subdivision plat submitted by Buchmayer.

The land in question is an area north of Fox Lane that falls within a two-mile fringe boundary around Iowa City. An agreement between the city and the county, which allows the city to review zoning applications and approve or deny plat applications in this boundary, has caused controversy between the county and the city.

The City Council voted on Jan. 21 to deny the zoning application submitted by Buchmayer.

Buchmayer's plan is to subdivide the land north of Fox Lane and add a separate access road on top of a hill. Chairman Charles Duffy, who voted in favor of the application, said the sight distances from this road would be safer for traffic.

But City Council members say the extra access road is unnecessary and all residents should use Fox Lane.

INTERNATIONAL FASHION

Show will spice up basketball halftime lull

Anne Johnston
Daily Iowan

Rather than going for a hot dog or soda during halftime tonight, fans at the Iowa women's basketball game may want to stay in their seats to catch a preview for an upcoming international fashion show.

Students from South Africa, India, Pakistan and Zimbabwe will be modeling their national dress for the crowd in an effort to promote a fashion show at the third annual Celebrating Cultural Diversity festival, which takes place Sunday,

"Clothing seems to be a very big part of humans' lives."

Siu-man Ting, coordinator

Feb. 9, at the UI Fieldhouse.

The festival, which is being sponsored by the UI Office of International Education and Services, will also offer international games, demonstrations, crafts and food.

Siu-man Ting, coordinator of the fashion show, said the halftime promotion will be just a sample of the upcoming show, where over 50 different countries will be represented.

"Clothing seems to be a very big part of humans' lives and it can reflect how they live and how they interact with other people, so we would like to use clothing as a means to promote international understanding," Ting said.

Ting, who is also the international activities assistant at the International Center, said that a basketball game is the perfect opportunity to promote next weekend's festival.

"Our target population is those who like sports games and are interested in international games and activities as well," Ting said.

Another halftime show featuring different countries will be presented to fans at the Iowa men's game against Michigan State Thursday night.

MEDICINE

Iowa's Hemlock Society promotes euthanasia

Kelly Hassenstab
Daily Iowan

Members of the Hemlock Society will be in Iowa City Saturday to promote the idea of physician-assisted suicide.

Ila DeLuca and Joe DeLuca, founders of the Hemlock Society of the Quad Cities, will join UI law Professor Sheldon Kurtz and Iowa City physician/attorney Vernon Varner in a panel discussion about the legal, medical and ethical aspects of doctors helping terminally ill patients take their own lives.

The informational meeting will be held in the third floor lounge at the Oaknoll Retirement Residence, 701 Oaknoll Drive, from 2 to 4 p.m.

According to meeting organizer Jack Savage, the issues of living wills and durable power of attorney will also be covered.

The Hemlock Society, named for the poison Socrates used to kill himself, is, as group literature states, "an educational and research organization supporting the option of physician aid in dying for those who are terminally ill."

The concept of physician-assisted suicide has been the focus of national attention and controversy recently. Society founder Derek Humphrey's suicide manual, "Final Exit," outlining foolproof methods, became a national best seller last fall; around the same time, Dr. Jack Kevorkian was indicted in Michigan on murder charges for engineering a "suicide machine" for a cancer patient.

Critics have accused the group of encouraging terminally ill people to kill themselves and ignoring concerns of family members.

Another point of view about the subject will be offered by medical ethics scholar and UI Professor of Pediatrics Dr. Robert Weir at an open meeting of the Memorial Society of the Iowa River Valley at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., on Sunday, Feb. 9.

American territory.

The nation has sunk about $25 billion into SDI over the last nine years. It's likely to take at least $20 billion more to get even a limited system into operation.

The president asked Congress on Wednesday to provide $5.4 billion for SDI. That's nearly a one-third increase over this year's $4.15 billion.

Even if Congress granted no increase for SDI in 1993, it would still be the most expensive weapons project in the defense budget. And if Bush were granted his wish on SDI spending, it would consume 14 percent of the research and development segment of the proposed $286 billion military budget.

"It is a crucial item for us," Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said at a news conference Wednesday.

Cheney said it is important for the United States to acquire a means of shooting down ballistic missiles even though no country outside the former Soviet Union has missiles that can reach U.S. soil, other than allies Britain and France.

"We have to anticipate, I think, that there will be a proliferation" of ballistic missile technologies, Cheney said.

Congress last year told the Pentagon to develop, for deployment by 1996, an SDI system of 100 interceptor rockets that probably would be based near Grand Forks, N.D., site of the short-lived Safeguard anti-missile system in the mid-1970s.

SDI is the biggest new weapons system to come out ahead in the 1993 budget proposal, but it is not the only one:

■ The Air Force would get $2.2 billion for development of the F-22 stealth fighter, intended to replace the F-15 fighter.

RECESSION

On the other hand, military orders soared 86 percent and without that gain the overall orders decline would have been a staggering 8.9 percent. Military hardware orders are expected to decline in coming months because of cutbacks in the Pentagon budget.

In a second report, the Commerce Department said consumer spending slowed to a 0.3 percent gain from November's 0.4 percent increase. Spending was up just 3.9 percent for the year after rising 6.4 percent in 1990.

Larry Meyer of Laurence H. Meyer & Associates, a St. Louis economic forecasting service, said, "Confidence is still down; the unemployment rate will probably continue to grow. We're not likely to see much more than 1 percent growth in consumption in the first quarter."

That would bode ill for the economy, since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

While personal incomes jumped 1 percent in December, the department said half of that gain was due to increased unemployment insurance and farm subsidy payments and a one-time bonus for automobile workers.

The income gain for the year was 3.3 percent, less than half the 6.8 percent advance in 1990 and barely beating a 3.1 percent increase in inflation.

In yet another discouraging report, the Labor Department said the number of new claims for unemployment assistance rose by 24,000 to 464,000 in the week ending Jan. 18.

It was the second straight increase in jobless claims and more than erased the improvements seen around the first of January, when holiday-shortened workweeks spurred a decline in the number of people reporting layoffs.

Benz said the renewed jobless claims report "suggests employment will not advance very much in the first quarter and subsequently, income and consumption will not pick up either."

In the durable goods report, Commerce revised November's increase of new orders to just 0.4 percent from the 1.0 percent estimate a month ago.

Unfilled orders also declined — for the fourth straight month.

■ Urges the secretary-general to prepare recommendations by July to increase the U.N.'s capacity for "preventive diplomacy, for peace-making and for peacekeeping."

■ Endorses current efforts in disarmament and arms control, and calls the spread of arms a threat to international peace and security.

■ Reaffirms the commitment to the use of U.N. collective security measures to deal with "threats to peace and to reverse acts of aggression."

■ Notes the spread of "democracy and responsive forms of government" in many parts of the world, and encourages the completion of the dismantling of South Africa's apartheid system.

■ Expresses concern for the "humanitarian situation of the innocent civilian population of Iraq." A reference in the earlier

British draft that said Iraqis "had to suffer because of decisions by their leaders" was deleted, at the behest of Third World diplomats, as being too specifically critical.

■ Expresses concern over "acts of international terrorism," apparently a U.S.-British barb at Libya's alleged sponsoring of terrorist bombings of U.S. and French airlines. Some Third World diplomats objected to this paragraph, but it survived the amendment process.

Western diplomats said the communiqué was deliberately broad in tone and short on specifics.

Flanking Major at Friday's meeting will be U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and the leaders of the other permanent council members: President Bush, China's Premier Li Peng, French President François Mitterrand, and Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Also at the table will be leaders of Austria, Belgium, Cape Verde, Ecuador, India, Japan, Morocco and Venezuela.

Only Hungary and Zimbabwe will be represented at a lower level, by their foreign ministers.

Although Harkin admitted the campaign schedule was hectic, she added that the pressure was something she was used to.

"For me personally, it's not unlike working with Tom in the Senate races," Harkin said. "I really haven't felt anymore press scrutiny one way or another."

EDITOR WANTED

Iowa City's morning newspaper is also Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 50 young professionals, an editorial budget of more than $200,000, and circulation of 20,500. The Board of Student Publications Incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 1992, and ending May 31, 1993.

The editor of the DI must have strong journalistic abilities and dedication, as well as skills in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily such factors as scholarship, previous newswriting and editing experience (including work at the DI or another daily newspaper), and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff.

Applicants must be currently enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate degree program at the University of Iowa. Deadline for the candidate's submission of completed applications and supporting materials is noon, Friday, Feb. 21, 1992.

MILWAUKEE TRIAL

Attorneys argue sanity of Dahmer

Lisa Holewa
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Jeffrey Dahmer was compulsively driven to have sex with dead men, fantasizing about it at age 14 and finally launching a killing spree aimed at creating zombies to sate his lust, a defense attorney told jurors Thursday.

"This was not an evil man. He was a sick man," attorney Gerald Boyle said in opening statements at Dahmer's sanity trial.

But prosecutor E. Michael McCann said Dahmer was sane when he ate the flesh of three of his victims, performed sexual acts with some of their severed heads and performed crude brain surgery on others to make them his "sex slaves."

"Mr. Dahmer knew at all times that what he was doing was wrong. This is not the case of a psychotic man," McCann said. He said Dahmer planned his actions in advance.

During the opening statements, a few relatives of Dahmer's victims wept silently in the courtroom and held each other's hands. Some people had photographs of the slain family members pinned to their clothes.

Two rows behind them, Dahmer's father and stepmother sat expressionless, also holding hands.

Thursday afternoon, testimony got under way with a Milwaukee police detective, Patrick Kennedy, who began reading Dahmer's lengthy confession, which detailed points made in opening arguments.

Jurors must decide Dahmer's sanity when he killed and dismembered 15 young males in Milwaukee County. Their decision will determine whether he is sent to prison or a mental institution.

Carolyn Smith, sister of Eddie Smith, a victim of Jeffrey Dahmer, is consoled by Pastor Durain Hughes Thursday following a briefing by attorneys at Dahmer's sanity trial.

Dahmer has pleaded guilty but insane to the 15 slayings and has confessed to killing and dismembering two other young men, one in Ohio, since 1978. He was arrested July 22 when a man who said he'd been attacked took officers to Dahmer's apartment, where they found the body parts of 11 young males.

Boyle argued that Dahmer tried to control his sexual fantasies. Dahmer tried to dig up bodies from cemeteries, and he once stole a mannequin from a store.

"He was quiet, shy and alone... He was very isolated. He was depressed and lonely," Boyle said. "Then he started thinking, 'If I can keep them, they won't leave.' And he started thinking about drugging them."

Dahmer wanted "to create zombies, people who would be there for him," Boyle said.

The victims "became sacrificial lambs to Mr. Dahmer's fantasies," he said.

Boyle said Dahmer killed to fulfill homosexual desires, not because of his victims' race. Dahmer is white and most of his victims were black. "The evidence is going to show...

that Mr. Dahmer's obsession was to body form, not color," he said.

Dahmer's first victim was a teenage hitchhiker Dahmer killed at his family home in Ohio in 1978, Boyle said.

Then the killing spree started in November 1987, when Dahmer took Steven Tuomi, 24, of Milwaukee, to a hotel to drink and have sex, Boyle said.

"When Dahmer woke up, he was laying on top of Mr. Tuomi. Mr. Tuomi was dead," Boyle said.

Dahmer went out and bought a large suitcase, and the next night put the body in it and took the body to Dahmer's grandmother's home.

"He took the body out of the suitcase and slit it open and he masturbated," Boyle said. "And he removed the head and retained it for a long period of time."

McCann agreed that doctors said Dahmer "did take pleasure out of a dead body," but contended that wouldn't qualify a person as insane under Wisconsin law.

Dahmer faces charges in the Ohio death at the close of the Milwaukee proceedings.

DESERT CHASE

Ordeal ends in shooting of hijacker

Lynn Elber
Associated Press

COLTON, Calif. — A man apparently desperate to return home to talk to God hijacked a Greyhound bus, taking eight people on a 320-mile dash across the desert before police killed him Thursday in his driveway, authorities said.

Reynaldo Andrade Gonzales, 33, described as suffering "religious hallucinations," commandeered the bus late Wednesday in Phoenix, Ariz., and careened west on Interstate 10 for 4½ hours with police in pursuit.

The passengers, seven adults and a child, weren't hurt during the chase, which reached speeds up to 80 mph and included a collision in which a California Highway Patrol car was forced off the road near Palm Springs.

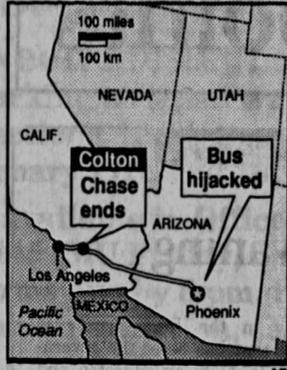

"The bus crossed over several lanes to take out the unit (car)," said CHP dispatcher Bill Brown. "The bus hit him once and sent him into a spin-out. The officer was unhurt. After that, the units backed off."

"The passengers said he didn't seem to know how to drive the bus and he even asked them for help," said Liz Dunn, spokeswoman for Dallas-based Greyhound Lines Inc.

But neighbor Mark Trimble, 18, said Gonzales had worked for a charter bus company and drove on school field trips.

Police set out five different sets of spikes to puncture the bus' tires, but the bus didn't stop despite several flats.

The chase ended when Gonzales turned down a residential street in this blue-collar community 50 miles east of Los Angeles, and "The good guys and the bad guy came together," said Sgt. Terry Dunn of the San Bernardino County sheriff's office.

Colton Chase ends Bus hijacked

The bus stopped in front of Gonzales' house. Gonzales, who was unarmed, was shot to death at 3:45 a.m. by a Colton officer after a struggle with officers in his own driveway, said Sgt. Dennis Casey of the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department.

"It seems like he was determined to reach his home," Casey said.

A small group of neighbors gathered around a TV truck after the shooting to watch a videotape showing Gonzales leaving the bus. After he walked off-camera, there was a sharp crack of gunfire.

"People are upset," said neighbor Mark Trimble. "They want to know why the police shot an unarmed guy. He was walking toward his home without the intent to harm anyone."

Residents recalled how Gonzales once administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a 3-year-old girl who had fallen into a swimming pool. "He saved the child. He's a wonderful man," said Pat Cervantes.

The hijacking began 4½ hours before the shooting when Gonzales climbed into the driver's seat while the bus was stopped in a downtown Phoenix terminal and the driver was in an office.

Agreement on arms reductions for Britain evades Major, Yeltsin

Maureen Johnson
Associated Press

LONDON, England — Boris Yeltsin called on Britain, France and China today to follow American and Russian pledges for deep cuts in nuclear arms. But Prime Minister John Major rebuffed the appeal. Yeltsin, on his first foreign trip since the collapse of the Soviet Union, stopped in Britain en route to the United States and Canada.

Following four hours of talks, Major said at a joint news conference with Yeltsin that the two sides had agreed to cooperate on handling surplus Soviet nuclear weapons and safeguarding nuclear materials.

He also said Britain would send a technical mission to Moscow to "assess the immediate needs at firsthand."

But both Britain and France, whose arsenals together amount to less than 6 percent of the number of U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons, say they have too few weapons to reduce. They also argue that it will take more than a decade for the United States and Soviet pledges to be fulfilled.

Major had insisted previously that Britain will press ahead with plans to build four submarines with Trident missiles, potentially more than doubling the number of warheads from its Polaris fleet.

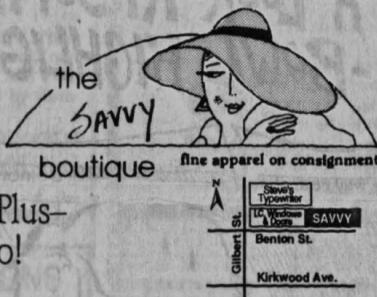

Yeltsin played down the disagreement. "Mr. Major has put forward his position, which I respect, and we shall not blow this matter out of proportion in the mass media," Yeltsin said at the end of their discussions.

Major also announced that Britain will extend $504 million in export credits and investment insurance to Russia and other former Soviet republics.

Yeltsin, soliciting aid, said it was more a question of tapping "our mutual resources in order to help Russia embark on a civilized road and join the international community."

STATE GOVERNMENT

Iowa's trust waning

The current ethics controversy in the Iowa Senate is symptomatic of the general malaise that has beset the government of the state for the past decade. Only an educated and informed public can combat the effects of legislative looting and executive entitlements experienced in this period.

Recent weeks have seen allegations that Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, an Audubon Democrat, pocketed $7,000 for mileage and postage during 1991 and an additional $13,000 for a van, all of which came from campaign contributions. Governor Terry Branstad and his campaign committee are under investigation after trading the van involved in a tragedy last summer, in which the governor's son Eric accidentally killed an Iowa couple. The damaged vehicle, owned by the committee, was traded for a new van and ownership transferred to the governor.

Iowa's trust in our public officials is waning and this situation must be corrected, but not through the pointless posturing of the officials themselves.

Senator Joseph Welsh of Dubuque has brought charges against 14 of his colleagues, but only because he himself is embroiled in a fight for his political life. People across the state have lost money and are losing jobs due to his influence peddling.

Iowa's trust in our public officials is waning and this situation must be corrected, but not through the pointless posturing of the officials themselves. The inhabitants of Iowa (including out-of-state students) and especially the media "watchdogs" must give close scrutiny to the course of events in this state. These events affect all of us. And they either do directly, as tuition increases and fewer university services, or indirectly, such as fewer job opportunities due to malfeasance.

The bowdlerization of this nation's news organizations has not passed by Iowa. If you are not satisfied with your public officials, speak out. If you are not happy with the lax coverage of events that the media "you depend on" provides you, complain to their managers. Thomas Jefferson believed that our democracy would depend on an educated, informed citizenry. Jefferson also said that given a choice between government and a free press, he would rather depend on a free press. We need to force our press to exercise those rights and inform us.

LETTERS

Rape victim

To the Editor:

Jennifer Alberts brought charges for third-degree sexual abuse against Marquis Porter in April 1991. The state trial was held in September 1991; the defendant, Mr. Porter, was found not guilty.

Ms. Alberts was told by Mr. Tom Baker, assistant to the Dean of Students, that there would be a school hearing on July 25, 1991, to determine if the University would take any action against Mr. Porter. The defendant's lawyer asked for a continuance because his witnesses were not in town. This was agreed upon.

Since then, Mr. Philip Jones, Dean of Academic Affairs, decided that the University would bring no charges against Mr. Porter. Ms. Alberts appealed the decision on October 19, 1991. Associate Dean Ms. Nancy Barcelo, who was handling the appeal, told Ms. Alberts that she would receive a decision within 30 days after her appeal was received by the Office of Academic Affairs. This policy concerning appeals is in Article B, section 7 of the Code of Student Life, but Ms. Alberts was told that this policy did not apply to sexual abuse cases.

On January 25, 1992, Ms. Alberts received a letter from Mr. Peter Nathan, Vice President of Academic Affairs, stating that he has "decided to uphold Dean Jones' decision not to bring charges against the accused student." He also stated that a mutual No Contact Order is no longer in effect. Mr. Nathan thanked Ms. Alberts "for her patience and cooperation as we conducted this review, which we regret took somewhat longer than usual." Certainly longer than 30 days.

In addition to dealing with the trauma of sexual abuse, Ms. Alberts also suffered at the hands of the University. If all similar cases are handled in a similar manner, how can any woman feel protected and safe on this campus?

Defending Noggin

To the Editor:

In response to the "Degradation of Women" editorial, I'd like to make a few points. First of all, both Mr. Hunter and I are pro-choice. AFAR's reaction to the December issue of Noggin has alienated us as potential supporters. Second, the story in question is true. It was about a rather unusual murderer and not about abortion or women. The women in the story are not meant to be interpreted as "sex objects." If Dana Cloud and Carol Wallace find anything sexy about that story, then maybe they should seek professional help.

As far as those accusations of "women-hating propaganda of the worst kind" are concerned, I'd say we are in damn good company. Such "misogynists" as Jonathan Demme, Alfred Hitchcock, Tobe Hooper, Robert Bloch and Jodie Foster have all been involved with media projects concerning Ed Gein. This attack on Noggin Magazine and on our personal character is yet another example of how the "liberal" left can be just as oppressive and narrow-minded as any right-wing extremist. If the likes of AFAR held as much reverence for everyone's personal freedom and liberty as they do for their own "political and social agenda," then maybe reactionary misinterpretations like this would be a thing of the past.

The claim that Mr. Hunter misrepresented the magazine is an idiotic excuse to exercise snobbish elitism of the worst kind. So, if you don't like it, don't read it. If you try to impose your moral evaluations on everyone else, it might be interpreted as fascism. And that's a big no-no.

Support for Thomas Baker

To the Editor:

I simply cannot believe the statements made about Mr. Thomas Baker in last Wednesday's DI "Letters" section. To suggest that he would not have done all he could for any victim of any crime at the University of Iowa, especially an alleged rape victim, is preposterous.

From a legal standpoint Mr. Baker has perhaps one of the brightest minds in this community, and I know from a personal standpoint that he cares for the people who come to him. It might be advisable for people to stop apologizing for themselves by blaming the system, which works fine as it is, as do the minds behind that system.

MITCH MARTIN

Not to praise Dave, but Barry him

I hereby announce the first and last annual Dave Barry Highly Presidential contest.

As a DI columnist, I have been called a New York Times Groupie (guilty), a WASP Woody Allen wanna-be (maybe) and Mike Royko with less hair (no way). But the worst is that I am a Dave Barry rip-off.

THIS IS NOT TRUE, YOU EXPLODING BOOGERS. Why, Mr. Barry himself told me, last time he was here, that I had a distinct personal voice. That he demanded its immediate return I took as a harmless jest among revered colleagues.

Mr. Barry will be returning to the IMU Wednesday night to kickoff his presidential campaign and, in return for the plug I committed not fourteen words ago, his Iowa campaign manager has promised me several Dave Barry books to give away in a contest of my own making.

You see, this shadowy figure, like any party operative who wants to garner the coveted political title of "greasy," knows a person's weaknesses. I have several weaknesses: homonyms, the Chicago Bulls, constantly hedging my bets, pizza-pizza, and Jimmy Carter. But my biggest weakness is a fondness for contests. In eighth grade, I won the school raffle. The principal announced over the PA that I had won a mini pool table (which had only four balls missing). It was wicked.

It has always seemed to me that to be lucky is to have a bit of the gods in you. If I could, I'd be holding contests all the time. Mitchboat gambling, Lotto A-Martin-ica, Wheel of Baldness, The Price is Rigged, you name it.

And what better contest could we have than one celebrating the biggest contest of them all: the presidential race.

One lucky guy overcomes a field of the mighty in a contest to out-bland each other for a house, a plane, a helicopter and free medical care at your very own Naval Hospital (something of a misnomer, they do the whole body). On top of that, the winner can sit on his butt for four years until he has to bribe a small New England state known for not smiling into re-electing him. What a deal!

As both of my regular readers (Hi, mom) know, this is not the first contest to appear in this column. Last summer I held the Get A Life, Win a T-shirt Contest. By the way, proud Winner Dan Wieseman (correct spelling omitted to protect the innocent), is ineligible. He said I should get a life by joining the Mafia. Well, thank God I didn't or Bill Clinton would have been bad-mouthing me to every chick in Little Rock. Also, people will think the fix is on if my own bartender keeps winning every contest.

Why, Mr. Barry told me, last time he was here, that I had a distinct personal voice. That he demanded its immediate return I took as a harmless jest among colleagues. Mr. Barry will be returning Wednesday to kickoff his presidential campaign.

No sirree, this contest is buy the book. First place will receive a copy of "Dave Barry Talks Back." Second and third place can fight over copies of his "Guide to Life" and "Travelers Guide".

Here are the questions:

- 1) What is Dave Barry's favorite trade barrier?
- 2) The name of Dave's main dog is Ernest. What is the name of his emergency back-up dog?
- 3) Dave Barry went to college with what current University of Iowa President?

4) Multiple Choice: Two cars are ten miles apart on a one-way road. The eastbound car is traveling at fifty miles an hour. The westbound car is traveling at forty. When will they collide?
A) Yes, Lisa.
B) The water's warm now, Lisa.

C) If those damn Japanese wouldn't make cars that go fifty miles an hour, there wouldn't be a problem, now would there?
D) According to Dave, Iowans are so enthusiastic that if they were asked to put a table utensil in their eyeball, they would respond "You bet!" What is the table utensil of choice?

Tie-breaking Essay (10 words or less):
The 20th century witnessed a level of violence unprecedented in history, but you can bet if they put John Gotti on trial, the 20th century's gonna get sick all of a sudden and quietly slip out of town, if it knows what's good for it.

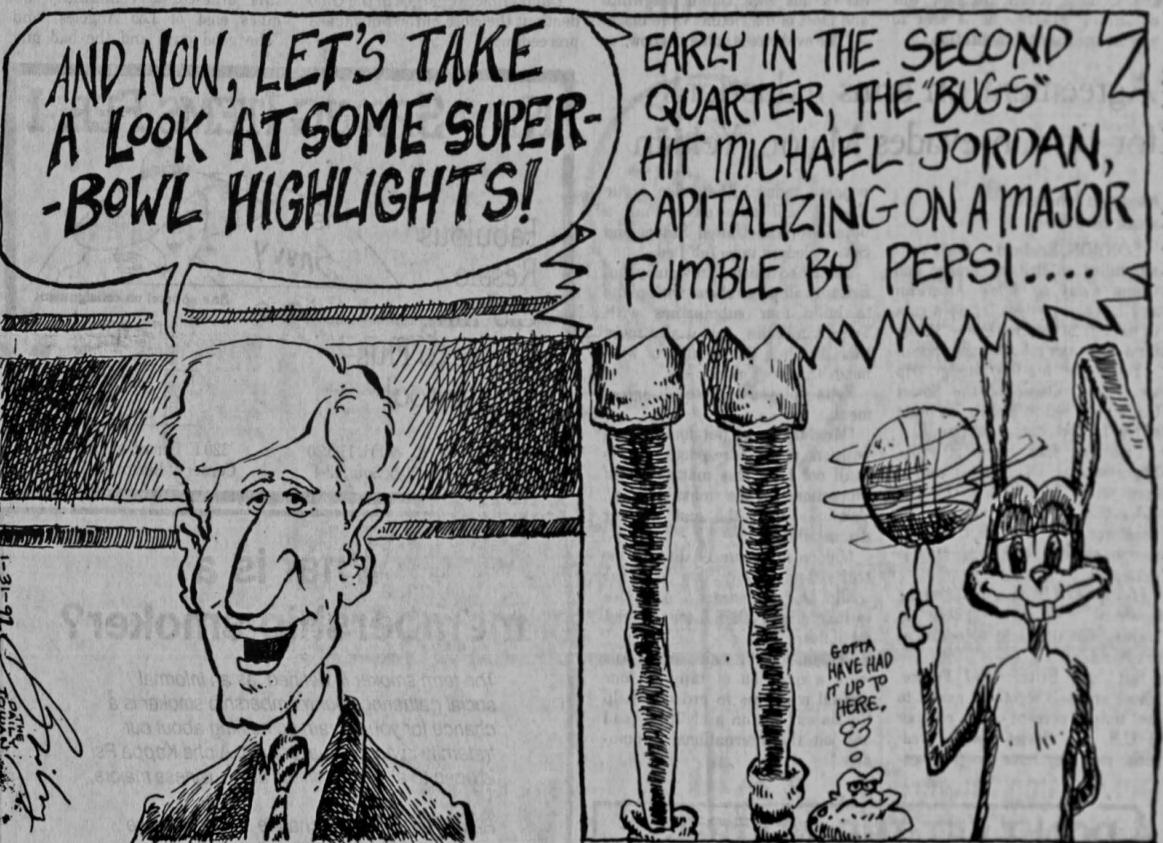

Murder, war, pillage, poverty and Debbie Gibson have all struck a lot. How, pray tell, can one say there is a God?

Mail your answers on a 3 x 5 card to The Daily Iowan 201 Communication Center, Iowa City, IA 52242, in care of "The Hawley-Smoot Tarriff/Zippy/HR3/C/Fork Contest." I would concentrate on the essay part, personally. And let me just add that this is a real contest. The books, the shadowy campaign manager and the grassy knoll gunman all exist. No really. The winner will have her or his entry printed in this space.

Please give this your immediate attention. Remember, Dave might be a Democrat. There are only two generally accepted ways for a Democrat to raise his recognition rating: sleep around practically in public or do crack cocaine. It has already wrecked the career of one fine Democrat. Rob Lowe, you will be missed.

RUSS BAILEY

DAN DORFMAN

The bad turn of politics and media

Sex sells. No two ways about that. It sells us clothes, perfume, cars; you name the product, sex will sell it. But, a frightening trend is taking hold: Sex is selling the American people its news and dominating the American political landscape. What's even worse, the American people are buying.

The media has created another sex scandal in our political system. The Bill Clinton for President campaign is now in serious jeopardy because a bimbo in Arkansas sold her story to a rag that is usually preoccupied with Elvis sightings, Oprah's latest diet and aliens invading Earth.

For some unknown reason, the "legitimate" media has picked up on this story, thereby giving an element of credibility, especially when the media makes this the number one story. Clinton has been dogged with questions about his sex life repeatedly for the past several days. Isn't it ironic that the same media that anointed Clinton the front-runner for the Democratic nomination just a few weeks ago, is now on the verge of destroying his cam-

For some unknown reason, the "legitimate" media has picked up on this story, thereby giving an element of credibility, especially when the media makes this the number one story. Clinton has been dogged with questions about his sex life repeatedly for the past several days.

Clinton's run for the presidency is in trouble because this woman claimed to have an affair for 12 years in Arkansas. Never mind the fact that she was paid for the story. Never mind the fact that after she was paid, her story somehow changed from what it had been earlier. Never mind the fact that apparently there are discrepancies in her story that could fill a book the size of "Moby Dick." Never mind all of this: The media has treated this garbage seriously, and now a man who had been trying to wage an uphill battle for the presidency may have his campaign dissolve around him.

The sad truth is that the media, facing declining revenues in a recession, feels that it has to come up with a story to sell to the American public. So what do they come up?

Their favorite standby: sex. The media figures that in the tradition of the sex scandals of the recent past — Gary Hart, Jim Bakker, William Kennedy-Smith and Clarence Thomas — this Clinton story will sell newspapers and increase viewership. Items such as the troubled economy, health care and the budget deficit are boring to most people and don't sell. But sex does.

Another sad truth is that the American people eat this stuff up. For example, the Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill hearings, publicly discussing public hairs on Coke cans, easily beat the American League play-off game in the television ratings. Before the sexual harassment charges came out, few Americans cared about the selection of the new Supreme Court justice.

Then we had the Kennedy-Smith story. "Primetime Live" usually gets trounced in the ratings. But the night Patricia Bowman, the accuser, was interviewed, the ratings skyrocketed, knocking off the highly watched "L.A. Law."

Americans like sex stories, but the media has to have some self-control. That is something that has not happened with the Clinton case, either. The victim of the press "feeding frenzy" is not only Clinton, but the American people as well. The more time and energy spent on sex stories that are based on rumor, innuendo and a highly dubious source lowers the chance for a serious campaign in 1992, one looking at the real issues and problems of the United States.

Bill Clinton is not a saint. On "60 Minutes" he basically admitted to having committed adultery. But that is between Clinton and his wife. It is none of the American people's business. Public citizens are entitled to some privacy.

Journalism and politics in this country have taken a very sad turn lately. It is up to the American people to say they have had enough of this trash. If they don't, there will be just more idiotic sleazy stories in the future.

Spacelab studies successful

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Discovery landed in California sunshine Thursday after an international shuttle crew studied the impact of cosmic radiation and weightlessness on a menagerie including worms, slime mold and insects.

"Everything was just outstanding and everybody is very happy," said Robert Snyder, scientist in charge of the shuttle's payload, which will help pave the way for research aboard NASA's planned space station.

The shuttle's twin sonic booms reverberated across the chilly Mojave Desert minutes before a crowd of 18,500 spectators watched Discovery and seven astronauts land on a concrete runway at 8:07 a.m. PST.

"Roger, Discovery, and welcome back. Your mission has given us a preview of space station operations and a look at the international cooperation that will be part of future space exploration," Mission Control's John Casper said.

The astronauts spent eight days in space, traveling 3.3 million miles as they circled Earth 128 times. They were "doing very well" after the landing and Discovery was "in extremely good shape," with little damage to its heat-shield tiles, said Dick Covey, acting chief of NASA's astronaut office.

Discovery's Spacelab payload, the $70 million International Microgravity Laboratory, contained 55 experiments involving 225 scientists from 14 nations. The research dealt with how weightlessness and space radiation affect astronauts, various plants and animals, and the processing of crystals and other materials that may be used in new medicines and other products.

research to be conducted on NASA's $30 billion space station Freedom, spokesman Mark Hess said. Space station construction is set to begin in late 1995. People will start working aboard it in late 1996 and it should be staffed continuously beginning about 2000, he added.

The astronauts sat in spinning chairs and sideways-lurching sleds for studies of how humans adapt to the nauseating effects of space travel.

Shuttle Commander Ronald Grabe, pilot Stephen Oswald and mission specialist William Readdy will fly home to Houston on Friday after medical tests.

The other four astronauts will stay in California until Saturday night, repeating many of the tests conducted on the shuttle, including sled and rotating-chair rides, reflex and eye-movement exams, and urine and blood tests.

Those astronauts are payload commander Norman Thagard, mission specialist David Hilmers and payload specialists Ulf Merbold of Germany and Roberta Bondar, the first Canadian woman to fly on a shuttle.

The mission was the 45th shuttle flight, the 15th for Discovery and the first of eight flights planned this year.

The shuttle was launched from Kennedy Space Center in Florida on Jan. 22 and was supposed to have landed Wednesday. NASA extended the flight by one day to allow more time for experiments.

Because of that one-day extension, Thagard set a record for the most hours spent on shuttles: 604 hours and 44 minutes. The old record of 596 hours was set on the last shuttle flight by Story Musgrave.

A steering jet on the shuttle leaked propellant overnight, spewing a whitish-blue stream of ice crystals into space, but NASA said other jets worked properly and were sufficient for a safe landing.

The shuttle's menagerie included mouse embryo leg bones, 7.2 million roundworms, 3,942 stick insects, 180 fertilized frog eggs, slime mold, lentil roots, 3 billion yeast cells and hundreds of wheat and oat seedlings. The shuttle also carried 480 fruit flies, but they were accidentally killed by disinfectant.

Gregory Nelson, a cell biologist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, called himself the "beast master" in charge of the roundworms.

The Ecu: New European currency?

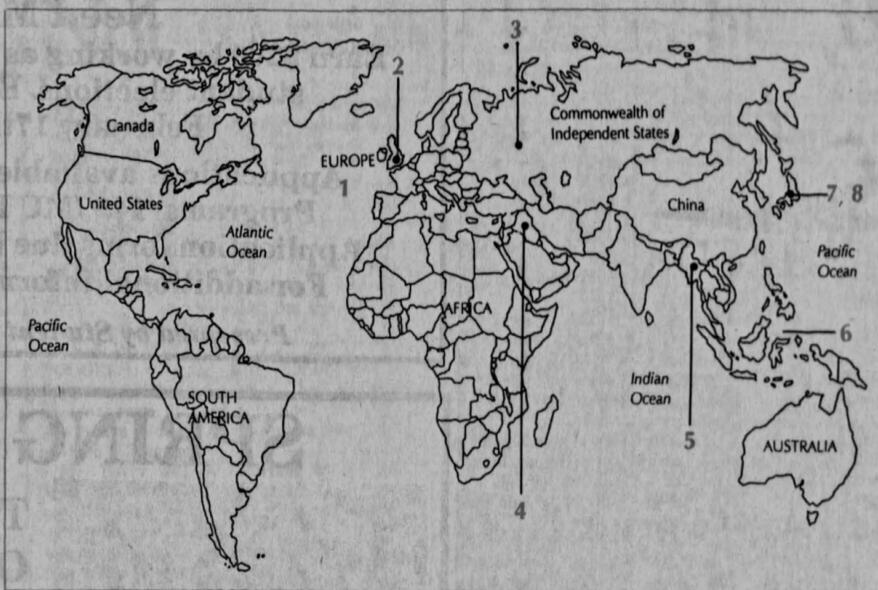

LONDON, England (AP) — The ecu — it's a medieval French coin, the butt of jokes in Portugal, confused with a cow in Germany; and Chancellor Helmut Kohl doesn't want it in his pocket.

The German leader thinks ecu — pronounced "EH-cue," "eh-COO" or "AY-coo," depending on whom you ask — is an ugly name for the future common currency of the 12-nation European Community. It's the English acronym for "European currency unit."

"Having a common currency is momentous. It will certainly not be called an ecu. Surely there's a better name," Kohl said last week.

He didn't say what it might be. And diplomats at the community's headquarters in Brussels said Kohl is unlikely to have his way. A treaty on European Community economic and monetary union to be signed next month would all but commit the 12 members to "ecu."

The community plans to have a single currency by 1999 that would eventually replace the money now used by member-states. The ecu already is used as a bookkeeping device for international transactions and in the European bond market, but no currency is in circulation yet.

Breast-feeding may help children's IQ

LONDON, England (AP) — Children who were fed breast milk scored significantly higher on IQ tests than children who received formula only, according to a study of 300 children who were born prematurely.

The study is not definitive proof, but "very strong evidence" that an as-yet-identified substance in breast milk affects mental development, said Dr. Alan Lucas, the researcher and head of Infant and Child Nutrition at the Medical Research Council's Dunn Nutrition Unit in Cambridge.

The results are reported in the Feb. 1 issue of Lancet, a British medical journal.

Previous studies linking breast milk to intelligence have caused considerable controversy. Many doctors wondered whether benefits attributed to the milk were in fact due to mothers' motivation and education, or bonding during feeding.

In the new study, investigators said they were able to isolate and assess the effects of the milk itself because both groups of children had been fed via tubes. They had been too premature to suckle.

Bugs Bunny in Russian?

MOSCOW, Russia (AP) — Bugs Bunny is humanitarian aid?

So asks a leading Russian newspaper, commenting on a week of American television being beamed to millions of TV viewers in the former Soviet Union.

The video smorgasbord includes Bugs cartoons, sitcoms, miniseries and films, like Sunday's Russian-dubbed "Bonnie and Clyde."

The three hours of nightly programming is appearing free of charge on the main channel across Russia and the rest of the former republics as an experiment of Warner Brothers International Television.

The company hopes it will lead to a more permanent venture.

Before "Bonnie and Clyde" began shooting their way across the screen, viewers saw a 15-minute commercial describing Time-Warner — "Oman Brothers," as the Russian announcer called it — and its extensive media holdings.

Among the other broadcasts will be the films "Superman," "Being There," and the 1981 version of "The Postman Always Rings Twice"; an episode of the series "Murphy Brown," "Life Goes On" and "Perfect Strangers"; the miniseries "Napoleon and Josephine"; and several Bugs opuses.

Iraq blames U.N. for food crisis

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Iraqis face growing hunger and disease, and Saddam Hussein has tried to focus their anger against the United Nations for not lifting an 18-month-old economic embargo, Iraqi travelers say.

On Monday, Iraqi soldiers stood by as protesters roughed up U.N. weapons inspectors in Baghdad in an outgrowth of regular, government-staged demonstrations against the sanctions.

But there's some question whether Iraqis generally blame U.N. sanctions for their plight. People fighting a losing battle to make ends meet are seeing scarce food supplies go to the ruling elite and military.

The U.N. Security Council has offered to slightly ease the embargo imposed since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, giving Baghdad the go-ahead to sell oil worth $1.6 billion to buy food and medicine.

President Saddam Hussein's government rejects that because 30 percent of the money must go to Kuwait as reparation for the 1990 Iraqi invasion.

Thousands of Muslims flee Burma

MARRISHA PALONG, Bangladesh (AP) — Muslim refugees, fleeing Burma by the tens of thousands, say its military rulers are conducting a systematic terror campaign to drive Muslims out.

More than 60,000 Burmese Muslims have found temporary refuge in Bangladesh in the last 10 months. More arrive daily across the border from Arakan state in predominantly Buddhist Burma.

Individual stories cannot be verified because Burma's doors are closed. But the fact that Muslims leave fertile Arakan and virtually all their possessions for a precarious future in one of the world's poorest nations testifies to their plight.

Lalu Abu Hasem said three soldiers entered her house, pursued her when she fled, then beat her with a broom and took turns raping her.

Like other women who reported sexual abuse, her husband had been taken away for forced labor, leaving her vulnerable, she said at a makeshift camp for 7,000 refugees in Marrisona Palong.

ASEAN creates free-trade zone

SINGAPORE (AP) — As a first step toward creating a regional free-trade zone, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations agreed Monday to begin phasing in tariff cuts for goods produced in the six member-states.

The leaders of the Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand, Brunei, Malaysia and Singapore endorsed a plan calling for the trade zone to be in place in 15 years. The six nations have a combined population of 300 million people.

"As the world breaks up into economic blocs, we must ponder deeply on what ASEAN should do to respond to what is perceived to be an emerging new world order," said President Corazon Aquino of the Philippines.

She said the free-trade zone was necessary "to ensure against a world which, while renouncing war as an instrument of policy, adopts economic exclusion and attrition as a new strategy of national defense."

Japan may change business poli...

TOKYO, Japan (AP) — As "Japan bashing" swells overseas, some Japanese business officials are saying it's time for their country to change fundamentally the way it competes by following more closely the ways of the West.

Akio Morita, chairman of Sony Corp., is among executives sparking the new debate by saying Japanese companies must pay their workers more, raise profit margins and adopt the same rules of competition followed in Europe and the United States.

"Japan is in desperate need of a new philosophy of management, a new paradigm for competitiveness," Morita said in a recent speech.

In Parliament today, Koshiro Ichida, head of the Clean Government Party, said he worries that unless Japan finds a way of fitting in with the rest of the world, trade tensions will worsen.

Oxygen from moon dust?

TOKYO, Japan (AP) — Japanese and American engineers have succeeded in a major experiment toward extracting oxygen from moon dust, a key for building a base for astronauts on the moon, Japanese officials said today.

In the experiment, engineers observed how gravity levels one-sixth as strong as the Earth's would affect the production of oxygen, said Hideo Imamura of Shimizu Corp., a major Japanese construction firm.

Using data from the experiment, Shimizu and Carbotech Inc., a Houston-based engineering firm, plan to jointly design equipment for producing oxygen, Imamura said.

Such equipment would be necessary to produce oxygen for astronauts at any future moon base, and it could also be used to make oxygen to fuel rockets or manufacture certain metals, such as titanium or steel, Shimizu said in a statement.

Imamura said the experiment was carried out Wednesday in Houston aboard a KC-134 airplane in which a low-gravity environment like that of the moon had been created.

Another Clone arrested

AMES, Iowa — Iowa State basketball player Donnell Bivens was arrested for shoplifting at a local supermarket, the second team member to run afoul of the law this week.

Ames police said a security guard saw Bivens take four items out of a Cub Food store Wednesday night without paying for them. The items were valued at $4.92, police said.

Bivens, a reserve forward, was released following his arrest. He pleaded guilty Thursday to a fifth-degree theft charge, was fined $20 and released.

Fry inks another Texan

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Iowa football coach Hayden Fry has a good recruiting year in his home state of Texas.

Fry has received commitments from three high school players in that state, the latest from defensive back Billy Coats of Lamar High School in Arlington.

SuperPrep magazine ranked Coats as the nation's No. 5 defensive back. He intercepted three passes and made 49 tackles last fall and has been timed at 4.45 seconds in the 40-yard dash.

Iowa earlier received commitments from running back Sedrick Shaw and wide receiver Demo Odems, both from Lyndon B. Johnson High School in Austin, Texas.

The Hawkeyes also will sign linebacker Billy Ennis-Inge of Kirkwood, Mo. Ennis-Inge, a 6-foot-5, 215-pounder, made 127 tackles this past season. He runs a 4.6-second 40 and is ranked No. 27 nationally by SuperPrep.

Nintendo still has a chance

NEW YORK — A Japanese-led group's $100 million offer for the Seattle Mariners was forwarded to baseball's ownership committee Thursday and the committee will immediately begin its background checks and deliberations.

The group, which is 60 percent controlled by the owners of Nintendo, formally presented its offer to the Mariners on Wednesday. Commissioner Fay Vincent has said he thought it was unlikely a sale would be approved because of baseball's preference for local ownership.

Abbott signs

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jim Abbott avoided an arbitration hearing with the California Angels on Thursday by signing a one-year contract for $1.85 million.

Abbott, 24, had an 18-11 record with a 2.89 earned run average and five complete games for the Angels last season, his third in the big leagues. He made 34 starts and pitched 243 innings, walking 73 and striking out 158.

Tyson accuser: 'He laughed like it was a game'

Lisa Levitt Ryckman
 Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Tyson's teen-age accuser told a jury Thursday the former heavyweight champ pinned her on a bed with his forearm, stripped her, raped her and laughed while she cried in pain and begged him to stop.

"I said, 'Please, you're hurting me! Please, stop!' And he started laughing, like it was a game," the 18-year-old woman told the jury in Marion Superior Court.

Tyson, 25, is charged with rape, confinement and criminal deviate conduct. If convicted, he faces up to 63 years in prison.

The woman, a college student and a Miss Black America contestant, testified in a clear voice about meeting the boxer at a pageant rehearsal on July 18 and making a tentative date with him.

She said she had gone to bed when Tyson called her from his limousine and asked her to go out. She said she agreed after he said they would talk and sightsee.

When she got to his car, she said, "He grabbed me and tried to kiss me. I kind of jumped back, and he said, 'Oh, you're not like these city girls. You're a good Christian girl.'"

The woman said they stopped at Tyson's hotel, presumably so he could make a phone call. They were watching TV and talking casually when Tyson's tone suddenly changed, she told the eight-man, four-woman jury.

"He said, 'Do you like me?' And I said, 'I don't really know you. You seem OK.' And his voice changed, just like that. He said, 'You're turning me on.'"

The woman said she told Tyson, "I don't know what you think I came up here for, but I'm going to the bathroom, and when I come out I want to see Indianapolis, like you said."

Tyson agreed, but when she emerged from the bathroom he was sitting on the bed wearing only his underwear, she said.

"I was terrified," she said. "I said, 'It's time for me to leave.' He said, 'Come here,' and grabbed my arm. I said, 'Stop! Get off me!' I tried to fight. It was like hitting a wall."

"He kept saying, 'Don't fight me, don't fight me, relax, don't fight me,'" she said.

She said he assaulted her and she begged him to stop. "I was saying anything: 'I have a future, I can't have a baby, I don't need a baby.' And he said, 'So we'll have a baby.'"

Tyson's lawyers briefly cross-examined the woman, who was the second prosecution witness, before court adjourned for the day.

In opening statements, special prosecutor Greg Garrison portrayed the accuser as a selfless overachiever dazzled and destroyed by the superstar boxer. The defense depicted a gold-digger who concocted a story of rape out of anger.

"Our contention is, (she) bears false witness against Mr. Tyson," said defense attorney Vincent Fuller. "She found herself treated as a one-night stand, and she has a compelling desire for money."

Fuller indicated that Tyson will testify in his own defense, saying, "He will tell you when he engages in sex it is not unusual for his

Surprising Gophers next for Hawkeyes

James Arnold
 Daily Iowan

He's the classic PTPer as a prognosticator and he jukes and jives with the best of them in the ESPN booth. But not even Dick Vitale predicted Minnesota's hot start this season.

The Gophers are off to a 13-7 (5-2 in the Big Ten) start and are poised to break into the top 25 with a win over Iowa Saturday at noon in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Gophers have already equaled last season's conference win total, when they went 5-13. Minnesota's 8-5 preconference record is deceiving because they had to face the likes of Arkansas and Iowa State before entering league play.

The King of Quips, Vitale, picked the Gophers to battle it out with Northwestern and Wisconsin for the cellar of the Big Ten and gave them no chance for a postseason bid.

Iowa coach Tom Davis is impressed with Minnesota's resiliency after coming back this season without their leading scorer, Kevin Lynch.

"They're one of the more surprising teams in the league," Davis said. "They're playing aggressively, but I guess you look at their personnel and you shouldn't be so surprised."

The Gophers are led by freshman guard Voshon Leonard — who scores at a 13.5 clip and shoots 38 percent from the three-point arc. Guard Arriel McDonald, center Bob Martin and forwards Dana Jackson and Jayson Walton all score between seven and nine points respectively.

Three-point shooting machine Townsend Orr (62 percent in conference) spells the guards.

"Clem's (Haskins) done a good job of getting them to play well," Davis said. "So they put themselves right in the thick of things when they weren't thought to be that good going into the year."

"I think they're for real."

Although Minnesota is making a name for itself, Iowa forward Chris Street is one Hawkeye who is not impressed with names.

"You see he's almost fearless, which you like to see," Davis said of the 6-foot-8 sophomore. "He's not intimidated by the Big Ten."

Street is coming off of a career night against Wisconsin in which he scored a career-high 17 points and grabbed a team-leading nine rebounds. He also nailed a near three-pointer at the end of the game to break the Badgers' back.

Street wasn't satisfied though. "I thought I had about two or three (blocks), so I was a little disappointed in that because I don't get a lot of blocks," Street said.

Center Acie Earl looks to have his hands full taking on the 7-foot, 260-pound Martin. Earl broke the Hawkeye record for blocking shots against the Badgers with nine and said he hopes that a win will send Iowa on its way toward a postseason bid.

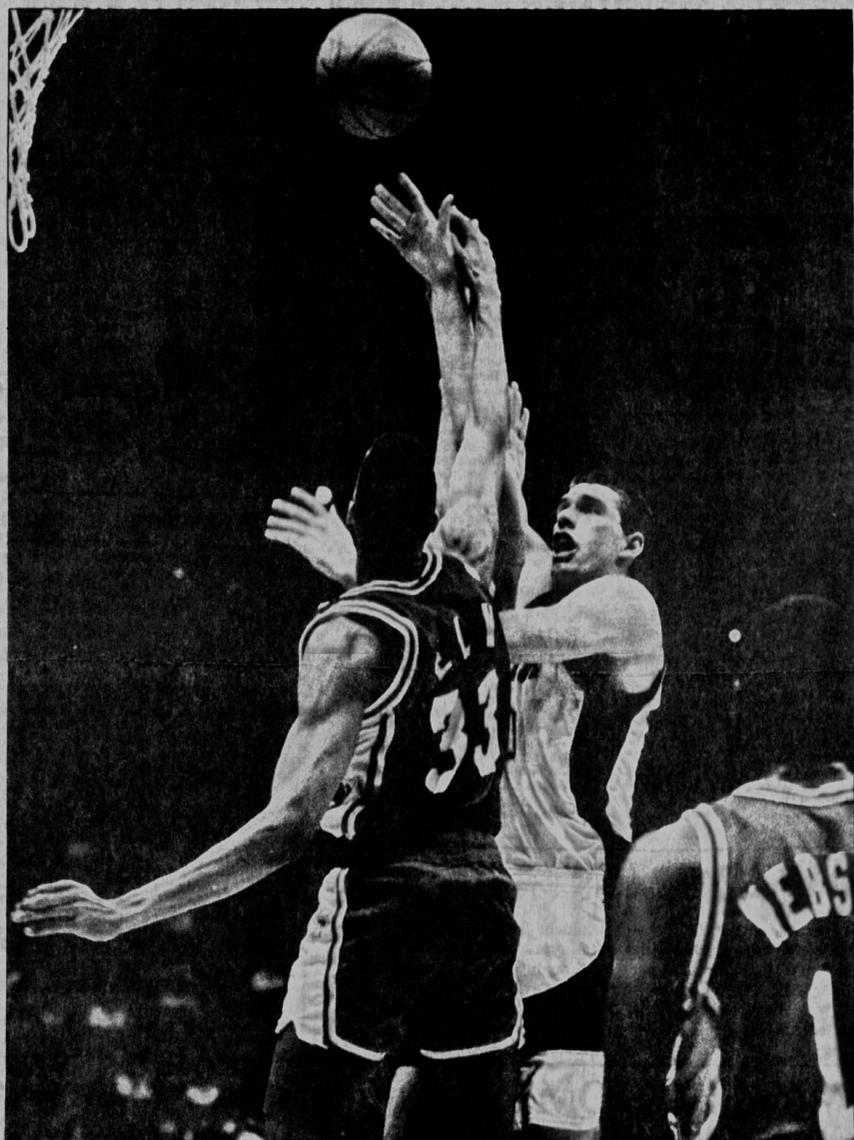

"If we get these two wins coming up, that will put us right at third or fourth place," Earl said.

Earl and the rest of the Hawkeyes will have to be prepared for anything because Minnesota doesn't score a lot, they have just found ways to win.

"Some nights they've hit the threes and some nights they've penetrated," Davis said.

Davis said the key to Minnesota's success has been a cohesive mix of veterans and rookies.

"It's a combination of (Martin's) improvement, other returners' See HAWKEYE MEN, Page 2B

Hawks hope for bigger league lead

DI wire services

The Big Ten-leading Iowa women's basketball team looks to build a two-game cushion between itself and all other contenders when it plays host to Illinois and Purdue tonight and Sunday.

The No. 5 Hawkeyes take on the Illini in a 7:30 p.m. contest tonight and meet the No. 10 Boilermakers at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Iowa (14-1 overall, 5-0 in the league) is paced by juniors Toni Foster and Laurie Aaron, who average 14.3 and 11.3 points, respectively. Foster also grabs 8.4 rebounds per game.

The Hawkeye bench has also been strong this season, contributing 29.4 points and 14.4 rebounds to boost the 45.7 points and 21.1 rebounds provided by the starters.

The Illini (5-10, 2-4) suffered two losses to No. 8 Penn State, but registered their first win over a ranked team with a 70-58 victory over now-22nd ranked Northwestern last weekend. Illinois is led by sophomore Mandy Cunningham, who averages 14.7 points and 3.3 rebounds.

The Boilermakers (12-3, 4-1) have

Iowa sophomore Necole Tunsil posted wins over two ranked teams — now-No. 8 Penn State and Northwestern. Their three losses, however, came at the hands of teams unranked at game time — Bowling Green, Miami and Michigan State.

WRESTLING

Lions not intimidated by Iowa, Carver-Hawkeye

Jay Nanda
 Daily Iowan

Every year, the Penn State wrestling team earns its exclusive spot in the Iowa media guide. But it's not for a notable achievement worth bragging about as far as the Hawkeyes are concerned.

The Nittany Lions are the only team ever to enter the den known as Carver-Hawkeye Arena and leave victorious, as they posted a 19-18 upset of Iowa in 1988, which snapped a 46-match Hawkeye home winning streak at the time.

But that isn't the only mark of futility Penn State has leveled Iowa with.

Last season, the Nittany Lions darkened Iowa's otherwise perfect record of 25-0-1, the winningest in Hawkeye annals, with a 19-19 tie at the National Duals in Virginia, which was even more surprising since the Hawkeyes had demolished Coach Rich Lorenzo's squad 32-6 a month before at Penn State.

Needless to say, there will be more pride at stake than usual for the 7-0 Hawkeyes when the 11-0-1 Nittany Lions invade Carver Saturday night at 7:30. Iowa has an all-time mark of 71-1 at the Arena.

"They haven't been wrestling that well this year, but at this time of the year, you start getting better," Iowa coach Dan Gable said of Penn State. "I don't think that they're labeled as one of the best teams right now, but they could be."

Lorenzo, for one, isn't showing any signs of being overwhelmed by the mystique of Carver, but it's not because of the win in 1988.

"I don't think that has anything to do with this rivalry," said Lorenzo, whose Nittany Lions won't be a member of the Big Ten until next season. "If anything, it will bring the red flags out and let them know that the one team that beat them is coming to town."

"We have a good team," he added. "They've been wrestling well from top to bottom."

The No. 1 Hawkeyes will also be at Dixon, Ill., tonight for a Big Ten double-dual against 1-4 Illinois and 4-3 Northwestern, during which Gable should have no difficulty in winning his 100th career conference dual. However, tonight's meets may be considered to be nothing but a puff of smoke before the fire really heats up against the No. 3 Nittany Lions.

Johnson hints at a comeback

Associated Press
INGLEDOD, Calif. — Los Angeles Lakers general manager Jerry West said Thursday the team still plans to retire Magic Johnson's jersey Feb. 16 despite the fact that Johnson has alluded to a possible comeback.

"Earvin has not talked to me about playing again for us, so we are proceeding with plans for his jersey retirement on Feb. 16," West said in a statement issued by the Lakers. "There is only one thing we are concerned about and that is his health."

"Whether Earvin plays again or not is his decision and, as always, we are behind him 100 percent whatever he decides. We are in favor of whatever is in his best interests."

Plans call for Johnson's jersey to be retired at halftime of a nationally televised game against the Boston Celtics.

Johnson, 32, wore No. 32 for the Lakers for 12 seasons and led them to five NBA championships.

On Nov. 7, Johnson announced his retirement because he had contracted the virus that causes AIDS, but during an impromptu news conference before the Lakers' game against Golden State Wednesday night, he left the way open for a possible return.

"I'm all right to play right now, if I want to play," he said. "The only thing that would keep me from playing is myself. If I want to come back, I could come back. I haven't ruled out coming back."

The NBA's three-time Most Valuable Player and all-time assist leader is scheduled to play in the NBA All-Star game Feb. 9 at Orlando, Fla., and in the Olympic Games at Barcelona in July.

Wilkins should be ready by next year

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Atlanta Hawks star Dominique Wilkins should be back in action next season, his surgeon said Thursday, after the All-Star forward underwent surgery for a torn right Achilles' tendon.

"It went fine, looks good and looks like it ought to heal well," said Dr. Jack Hughston, who performed the 1½-hour surgery at his Hughston Sports Medicine Hospital.

Hughston said he had to splice and weave together 30 to 40 strands of the tendon that had torn loose and "looked like the end of a mop."

He said Wilkins, 32, should return to full strength, but not before at least six months of recovery.

Wilkins ruptured the Achilles' tendon during the second quarter of Tuesday night's game against the Philadelphia 76ers. He had been named as a reserve on the NBA East All-Star team just hours before, and was only 25 points short of becoming the 17th NBA player to score 20,000 points.

If all goes well, he will be able to

Sixers owner tells team to not 'just show up'

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Owner Harold Katz, coach Jimmy Lynam and the Philadelphia 76ers players held a 46-minute team meeting after practice Thursday to consider Katz's complaint that the team lacks focus and intensity against bad teams.

"We had a private meeting and I left it with the guys," Katz said. "It's going to remain private. I will discuss nothing about the meeting."

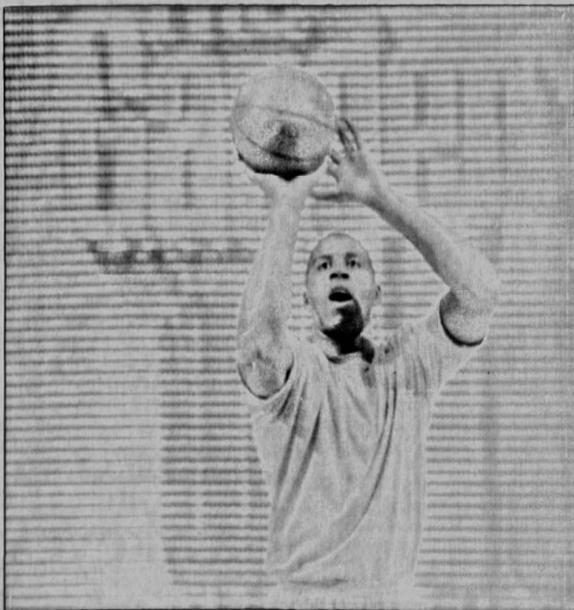

"Hopefully from everybody talking and speaking their minds, we'll get it done."

He said he spoke at length, vented his frustrations but gave every player a chance to express his feelings.

"And they all spoke," he said. "Everybody was active."

"But I think it's obvious that we have lost to every bad team ... that there is a reason why we are losing to those bad teams. We just had a team meeting discussing that purpose."

"I think that sometimes we go out and we think we are so much better that we'll show up and beat his health, his stamina in daily workouts and his body's response to the drugs he is using to treat the virus.

"The key is staying healthy, and that's what I'm doing," he said. "I've been playing against people for a month — banging, hitting, driving, shooting, the whole thing. The way I'm going, the way I feel, the way I've been playing and practicing, I feel great."

Johnson's remarks didn't surprise Lakers owner Jerry Buss.

"I don't think this is anything that new," Buss said. "I think Magic has always had in the back of his mind that he has felt terrific. He's been working out and looks tremendous."

"He had to be informed that he was ill, because he certainly didn't feel ill. So I just think he did the prudent thing and said, 'Well, if the doctors tell me not to play for a while, I'll do it for a while and see.'"

"But that time period is passing and he's feeling better than ever. So this doesn't come as a big surprise to me."

Johnson's regimen over the past two months has included four miles of running per day and scrimmage games in local health clubs. He regularly shoots baskets two hours before Lakers home games, and during the past week has begun running simulated fast breaks to build up his stamina for the All-Star game.

Johnson's doctors advised him to retire when tests for an insurance policy revealed the virus. But now he is thinking about returning to the NBA — if not this season, then next.

"It's not up to my doctors, because everything is great," Johnson insisted. "It's all on me. My doctors can advise me, but they're not in my body."

resume that chase next season.

"You plan on (the surgery) working," Hughston said. "You're always shooting for 100 percent."

"He better get back to 100 percent, or I'm in trouble."

He said Wilkins would spend three months in a brace, then would work on regaining his motion and strength at least over the next three months. Once the tendon heals, he said, there would be little chance of the injury recurring.

"I'm counting on him coming back all the way," Hughston said. "His talent and his drive made him, and it will help him now." He said the tendon had become frayed, leading to the injury.

It was the first major injury of Wilkins' career. He had missed only 18 games because of injuries during his first nine seasons in the NBA.

Hughston said Wilkins told him before the operation "that he was nervous."

"I said, 'You and I are in the same boat,'" said Hughston, who was assisted during surgery by two doctors.

them because, like last night, a team like Indiana has won only three games (this season) on the road so we can beat them."

The 76ers were beaten 115-90 by the Pacers Wednesday night.

"The truth is that the talent level in this league is too good on every team just to go out and show up," Katz said.

Katz was asked if he felt he got his message across.

"I don't know," he said. "We can talk all day, but you've got to go from talk to action. I'll only be happy when I see it. If we go from talk to action then I'll be happy."

Katz's outburst was prompted by two straight losses after the Sixers (21-23) had built a five-game winning streak. They blew a 16-point lead in the fourth quarter Tuesday night at Atlanta, then came home and lost to the Pacers.

"We had a streak that could have lasted through 11 or 12 games," Katz said. "I was very pleased in that five-game period. Then we went ... a giant step backwards last night."

Katz appeared to give Lynam a vote of confidence after Thursday's meeting.

NFL PRO BOWL

Lott proves to 49ers that he has a lot left

Ken Peters

Associated Press

HONOLULU — It was a strange feeling, Ronnie Lott said, when he learned at the Pro Bowl last year that the San Francisco 49ers were letting him go.

"When you're over here with the all-stars and hear that, it was devastating," Lott said. "And my (49ers) coaching staff was over here at the same time. But they have to make those decisions."

"I just tried to enjoy the week and the game, not be too down about it, tried not to be too negative."

Despite the jolt of being left unprotected in the Plan B draft by the 49ers, Lott played extremely well in the Pro Bowl, making some of the hardest hits of the game.

A couple of months later, he signed with the Los Angeles Raiders.

Lott continued to excel with the Raiders.

Moving to strong safety, he led the NFL in interceptions this season with eight and was third on the team with 93 tackles while starting all 16 games.

Once called the "heart and soul" of the 49ers' defense by San Francisco coach George Seifert, Lott also brought along that intangible leadership to the Raiders.

After the season, his Los Angeles teammates voted him the Commitment to Excellence Award as "the player who best exemplifies the pride, poise and spirit of the Raiders."

Although he has 59 career interceptions, tops among active NFL players, in his 11-year career, Lott is known more as one of the league's hardest tacklers.

"He has phenomenal hitting ability," Raiders nose tackle Bob Golic said. "You'll hear a loud noise and you know Ronnie's hitting someone."

Lott said it was an adjustment when he first joined the Raiders.

"It was difficult having to learn a lot of new things, and to fit in and learn about the conference (the AFC) and the new players you go up against," he said. "But I think when the ball's snapped, it's always the same. You've just got to ... try to make things happen."

He feels no bitterness toward the 49ers, who had made him a first-round draft pick, the eighth player taken, when he came out of Southern California in 1981.

When they made the decision to leave him unprotected, the 49ers probably figured Lott, 32, was nearing the end of his career. In addition, he had suffered a couple of knee injuries that sidelined him late in the 1990 season.

"There was some emotion, because I was leaving my friends (in San Francisco)," he said. "But there was no animosity, no hard feelings. I think they had to make a business decision for themselves as well as a decision to work on the future."

"The thing I had to do was to seize the opportunity."

Asked if he had doubts about himself and his ability after being cut by the 49ers, Lott said, "Yes, but I have questions like that every week. You always wonder if you're going to still make the plays, still do things. That's a part of the game."

TENNIS

Wins, not money, drive Jim Courier

Tim Liotta
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Being No. 1 would rank second for Jim Courier, who prefers earning Grand Slam victories over his top rivals than any number rating handed him by a cold, calculating computer.

Courier would become the first American in 6½ years to be ranked the No. 1 tennis player in the world if he reaches the final of the Volvo San Francisco next week. He is currently ranked second behind Stefan Edberg of Sweden.

"Tennis is not about rankings, it's about titles," Courier said Thursday in a conference call. "That's what is important to me. I much prefer my French and Australian titles to being No. 2 in the world because the computer can be partial."

"Stefan or Boris (Becker) could play 30 tournaments and I play 15, and although I have a better record, they play more tournaments and will be ranked higher. Winning tournaments isn't like that. If you won the tournament, you won the tournament."

The 21-year-old from Dade City, Fla., who earlier this month added the Australian Open title to his 1991 French Open championship, is 19 points behind the top-ranked Edberg, whom Courier beat in the Australian final. Courier would overtake Edberg by reaching the semifinals at San Francisco and earn 15 bonus points. Reaching the final would erase any need for bonus points, which are earned by beating a player ranked in the top 200.

The last American to be ranked No. 1 in the world was John McEnroe on Aug. 26, 1985.

"It would be significant to me that the last guy from the country (to be ranked No. 1) was McEnroe," Courier said. "To follow him would be an honor. I think it's a goal every tennis player or athlete would like to achieve, and I'm on the verge of it. It would be something I would always have."

And it appears that, once on top, Courier could hold onto that distinction for a while because the ATP computer rankings are based on a player's result over the previous calendar year.

Jim Courier

Courier will play tournaments at San Francisco, Brussels and Stuttgart in the next month. He only has to improve upon disappointing 1991 results at Memphis and Philadelphia to increase his lead over Edberg.

Edberg won at Brussels and Stuttgart in 1991, but is scheduled to skip Brussels this year before playing at Stuttgart.

"If you get (to No. 1) to stay there, you can't think about it," Courier said. "If you do, it's more taxing. I don't think anybody who has been up there ... you have to keep winning. That's what you have to concentrate on. ... If you don't have points on the computer, you have nothing to defend."

NBA

Rice turns on the Miami Heat

Associated Press

MIAMI — One reason the Miami Heat is becoming a winner is that Glen Rice has become a scorer.

Rice is averaging 28 points per game over the past eight games. It's no coincidence that the Heat has gone 6-2 during that stretch. And Miami, seeking its first playoff berth ever, is 21-23, after winning only 24 games all last season.

"My confidence is higher than it has ever been," the third-year pro said. "It feels like anything I throw up is going in."

In his first two years in the NBA, the 6-foot-8 Rice was a threat only as an outside shooter. Lately, he has shown an ability to penetrate, and as a result he is doing more damage inside.

He's also scoring more at crunch time. Wednesday night against Seattle, Rice hit a 3-pointer with 1:21 left to tie the score, then tipped in an airball with 31 seconds left for a one-point lead.

Miami went on to its first-ever victory over the Sonics, 119-114. Rice finished with 30 points to become the first Heat player to reach 30 in three consecutive games.

Rice leads the NBA with 76 3-pointers. His percentage from that range is a solid 38.6.

"My shot is just a gift," he said. "I don't work hard on it. I think, 'What if I really concentrate on it? I might only miss two or three a game.' That's the next step."

Heat coach Kevin Loughery, who made his living with a jump shot as a player, is amazed at the mechanical ease with which Rice shoots 3-pointers.

"Most guys need a lot of leg and oomph from that distance, but Glen uses very little energy — just a flick of the wrists," Loughery said. "Because he doesn't need time to set himself, he can get it off so quickly he beats the defensive rotation. Hesitate, and the shot is gone."

Rice is averaging 20.8 points, but was not picked for next week's All-Star game at Orlando.

"I'm not going to lose any sleep over it," he said. "But I would have liked to have been on the team. I can use (the snub) as motivation."

WOMEN'S TRACK

Hawkeyes looking to get back on track

David Taylor
Daily Iowan

A week after losing a controversially-scored meet to Big Ten power Wisconsin, the Iowa women's track team gets little rest as they move on to face Illinois, Michigan, Southern Illinois and Western Illinois in the Illinois Triangular this weekend.

It will be the second week in a row that Iowa will go up against a team from the upper division of the conference. However, this time there will be three other quality teams to worry about besides perennial power Illinois.

"All four of these teams have done well through the years and they all have respectable traditions," Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said. "There will be good meet chemistry and a lot of excellent athletes competing."

The Hawkeyes swallowed a bitter pill last weekend when they left Wisconsin thinking they had won the meet, only to find out the next morning that a scoring error had been made and Wisconsin was the winner.

"I will make sure the meet is scored right this time," Hassard said.

Scoring problems aside, this looks to be one of the tougher tournaments that Iowa will compete in this year. It will be a scored meet, and there will be more events than there would be in a normal dual or triangular meet. The meet will closely resemble the season-ending Big Ten Championship meet with 5000-meter, 800-meter and 4 x 800-meter races being added to the schedule of events.

"The emphasis will be on both team scoring and individual performance," Hassard said. "I've spent hours working on the combinations based on the other teams, and in order for us to do well as a team and individually these options that we decide on become important."

"More care and time is given when the meet is scored and we have to go by what our strengths are as a team," Hassard added.

Hassard said that while he felt that Illinois was the top team at the meet, Michigan could be improved this year.

"There is a lot of parity within the conference this year," he said. "Michigan is kind of middle-of-the-road, but they have strong middle distance and distance runners which might hurt us a little."

"It's going to be a tough meet, but if we do well we could wind up at the top," Hassard said.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Hawks open up with improved Minnesota

David Taylor
Daily Iowan

After a three month break, the Iowa women's tennis team heads back into competition this weekend in Minneapolis. It will be the first dual match of the year as well as the opening of the Big Ten schedule for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa will compete against Minnesota today, then participate in the Gopher Invitational Saturday. Despite the long layoff, Iowa coach Micki Schillig says that her team is ready.

"The players are up for this, and we had a good discussion this past week, so I think we are ready to put things together," Schillig said.

"We'll just try to look at where everyone stands at this time."

Iowa will be up against an improved Minnesota squad that finished close to the Hawkeyes in the Big Ten Championships last spring. The Golden Gophers return their top two players from last year and Schillig said that they should have a stronger line-up this time around.

"I know that they are improved, but their background is a little unknown to me," Schillig said. "I know that they should be better than they were last year."

The Hawkeyes could be a little short-handed this weekend but will take eight players. Tracey Donnelly has been hampered by a neck injury and her status is uncertain for the weekend, although Schillig said that she might play in singles only.

"All I'm thinking about now is who will be healthy when it is time to play," she said. "I'll look at who is playing best and what they have done so far."

For the Gopher Invitational, the format will basically be that everyone plays everyone, with four teams competing. Drake and Nebraska will round out the field for the tournament.

Concerning where Iowa stands this year, Schillig said that she felt they were "way ahead" of where they were last year, and the combination of youth and experience have helped the squad.

"We have a strong support system of personalities in the upper positions," she said.

MEN'S GYMNASTICS

Strong performances have men optimistic about season

Yohlunda Mosley
Daily Iowan

As members the Iowa men's gymnastics team prepare for competition against Wisconsin-Oshkosh, it's hard to ignore the optimistic attitude that the squad has about its upcoming season.

The Hawkeyes are confident that after two recent impressive finishes at the West Point Invitational and the Windy City Invitational, the 1991-92 season will be outstanding.

"We met all the best teams in the Eastern division in these competitions and basically finished fifth," said Iowa coach Tom Dunn, whose team will host Wisconsin-Oshkosh Saturday at 3:30 p.m. at North Gym of the Field House.

In order for the Hawkeyes to compete in the NCAA Eastern Regionals, Iowa will need to finish no lower than fourth in the competition. The Regional meet is scheduled for Carver-Hawkeye Arena on April 11.

Iowa competed against some of the strongest programs at the invitationals, finishing third in competition at the West Point Invitational with a score of 269.40 despite only one individual victory, by Garry Denk in the parallel bars. Temple placed first in that competition, followed by Penn State.

Dunn was pleased by his squad's effort but felt that their performance could be much improved.

"We were a little rough because of finals and the Christmas break," Dunn said.

Still, the invitational gave the Hawkeyes the opportunity to compete against two teams that Dunn feels are definite contenders for the NCAA Regionals.

"Temple and Penn State are two Olympic caliber teams with real strong programs," the coach said. "They will be key teams for us to beat to go to the NCAA Championships."

With a score of 276.80, Iowa placed third in the Windy City Invitational — Rich Frye was Iowa's only individual winner, on the pommel horse. Dunn felt that his squad's performance had improved significantly since the West Point Invitational, with a noticeable improvement in the team score.

This season the Iowa men have pushed back the start of their season.

"This gave us the opportunity to learn some new things, with some big improvements from last year," Dunn said.

Iowa's primary reason for participating in the invitationals was to qualify athletes for the United States Winter Nationals, scheduled next weekend in Colorado.

Iowa successfully qualified six gymnasts for the nationals: senior Rich Frye; junior transfer from Wisconsin, Don Brown; juniors Chris Kabat and Adrian Besancon; sophomore Garry Denk; and freshman Mark Kuglitsch.

Dunn feels that this team has a lot more depth than last year and expects a lot more competition for starting positions. "Since you can only qualify six gymnasts, there's going to be a lot of competition to be one of the top six," Dunn said.

Dunn said he is happy to report that all of his gymnasts are healthy, which will be very important due to the competitive nature of the Big Ten.

"The Big Ten Conference is going to be a dog fight," Dunn said. "There's a lot of good competition and good depth."

Iowa meets Wisconsin-Oshkosh this weekend and Dunn hopes to see some improvement in areas that the Hawkeyes were weak in last weekend. "We're pretty balanced in all areas. In the two earlier meets we dominated team competition in the parallel bars and did great in the floor exercises," Dunn said. "But I'd like to see some improvement in vaulting and the horizontal bars."

Overall, Dunn is optimistic about the upcoming dual meet.

"We should win the meet this weekend, but more importantly, I'm looking for the kind of continued improvement we demonstrated in the Windy City tournament," Dunn said. "We need to start scoring a little higher and becoming more consistent on our routines."

"When that happens we'll be able to hang in there with the best in the nation."

'Chorus Line' kicks off at UI

Jon Price
Daily Iowan

Okay, here goes: The winner of nine Tony Awards, the Pulitzer Prize, five Drama Desk Awards, The New York Drama Critics Award for Best Musical and a Special Tony Award as the longest-running show in Broadway history, "A Chorus Line" hits Hancher Auditorium today and plays through Sunday. Let's face it, with those awards and a book based on the lives of dancers, this musical is Broadway.

"A Chorus Line" was originally conceived, choreographed and directed by Michael Bennett. The national touring production is directed by Baayork Lee, who played the original Connie when "A Chorus Line" originally opened on Broadway. The role of Connie is based on Lee's life.

Regarding the musical which features, "One (Singular Sensation)" and "What I Did For Love," I talked to Jim Litten, the assistant director of the touring production.

What's your relationship to the original Broadway production of "A Chorus Line"?

I was one of the first replacements in the show. I played Mike and the choreography was changed to fit me.

Did they keep the complete flip in "I Can Do That"?

They added the flip when I came in.

You just returned from the European tour of "A Chorus Line." How have European audiences compared to American?

There's a language barrier to begin with. American humor didn't translate that well. Especially the sarcasm. They just didn't get it.

What about the venues? Did you find yourself playing in smaller theaters?

It was mixed. I mean, intimacy in the show is important. The role of Zach, who's the director in the musical, sits toward the back of the theater. This helps the audience feel more a part of the show. But we were playing spaces the size of football fields in Germany and 5,000-seaters in Tokyo, and we still sold out every night, so intimacy is just part of the appeal.

Have there been any changes made to adapt or update the script?

None. It's a period piece—clearly about the '70s. That's one of the reasons Baayork and I are working on it. She's re-staged the choreography exactly the way Michael Bennett had it 17 years ago.

So is there any kind of allusion to AIDS through the homosexual role of Paul?

That's a very personal issue to the production. All but one of the original creative team of the show has died of AIDS. We've organized AIDS benefits and given benefit performances, but if you're asking if there are script changes, no.

It's often been said that the song, "What I Did For Love" seems to be stuck in. Has the production ever dealt with smoothing it in?

Oh, no, I think that's the dancer's anthem. In New York, the Actors' Equity has 30,000 members and only 1 percent of those people are employed at any given moment. They're not in it for the money, it's their love for theater. They're out doing other things like busing tables to keep themselves alive. Things are getting worse too. I don't want to mention names, but one former actor had a lot to do with changing our tax rules, and making it easier to invest in unstable markets. It's brought the whole economy down and Broadway's taken a punch for that one.

How does this musical compare to contemporary musicals?

Musicals today are relying on visual, spectacular effects. There are not a lot of dance shows, with the exception of "Cats," that are out there. "Phantom" and "Les Miz" are on an operatic level at best. That's not to say "A Chorus Line" doesn't have visual spectacle.

What is it about "A Chorus Line" that appeals to an audience today?

Everyone can relate to at least one or two characters in the show.

Marc Bryan-Brown

What I Did For Attention: "A Chorus Line" comes to Hancher Auditorium with 8 p.m. performances on Friday and Saturday, and 2 p.m. matinees on Saturday and Sunday.

ART REVIEW

Chicken crosses tracks to Tofu Hut

Shayla M. Thiel
Daily Iowan

Local artist Mark Schipper continues to make his mark on the Iowa City area. An exhibit of his works entitled "Confessions of a Chicken, Part 1" is now turning heads at the Tofu Hut, 610 S. Dubuque St.

Schipper kicked off his showcase last Saturday with a reception at the video store, and his work will be on display through this weekend. This is certainly not the artist's first exhibition; his works have been displayed locally in the Union, King Stingray's, the Great Midwestern Ice Cream Company and Cedar Rapids' Art Cellar. His show is the seventh the Tofu Hut has sponsored since its opening.

Schipper's current display offers an ocean of contrast to viewers in a variety of media. The comical title, "Confessions of a Chicken, Part 1," should not throw people. The art itself is surprisingly serious—and untitled. Schipper says he rarely titles his work, and when he does it is merely "an afterthought, if anything."

There is nothing chicken-like about the oil paintings. Schipper's use of color contrasts in a given work are both fascinating and pleasing, and one has to wonder if the subtle human faces lost in the textured thickness of deep colors depict peace, rage, or a level of insanity.

My favorite painting resembles a picture of cell-like structures often found in biology textbooks. The blues and greens are offset by slight dashes of orange. The work seems three-dimensional with its contoured shapes and shades of personified depth; faces reveal different conflicts and forces within an undefined body, and it was difficult to decide whether the painting provoked my anger or joy.

The amazing thing about Schipper's exhibit is that all the works are quite different from each other; he cannot be accused of conveying only one distinct personality and rather explores his own depth as an artist by including a variety of mediums.

Although Schipper admits choosing a favorite is as difficult as "choosing a favorite son or daughter," he admits partiality to a pastel work. This particular piece, among a few others on display, portrays surrealistic figures. The figures in this and other charcoal-and-pen pictures seem to lurk like desperate, angry souls.

A sculpture/mask of types of "scorched" wood provides intrigue, and a watercolor hints at something erotic with its hazy hues and implies a loss of innocence of sorts.

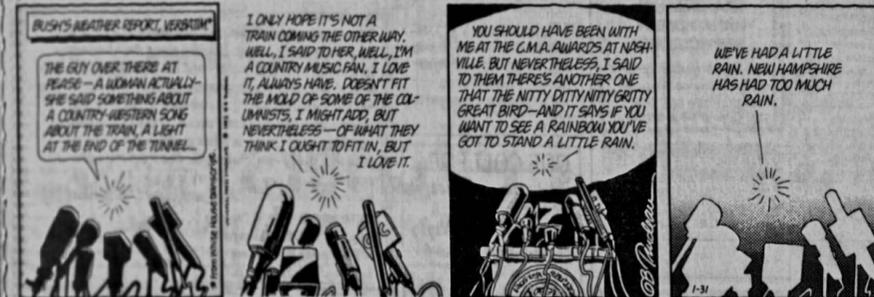

Schipper admits he attends many other artists' shows, which brings him some of his inspiration. Although his own work is powerful, he says he does not begin with any intentional messages for viewers.

"Unless it's a still life, I never really have anything in mind when I start," Schipper says. "I take it as it goes and keep building off what I create."

His spontaneity works. Schipper's rather "scatterbrained" approach has proven both intriguing and thought-provoking—and never neglects the art viewer's need for inner enlightenment.

IN THE ZONE

Seventies' superstars eighty-sixed

Locke Peterseim
Daily Iowan

Let's get right to it, shall we? How could anyone walking out of "Bugsy" feel like they'd seen anything more than a two-hour pile of Hollywood's worst self-absorbed puke? This film is the sort of artistic train wreck you get when the recent reinfatuation with the infantile gangster myth suddenly smacks head-on with the inexplicable Warren Beatty revival.

Everyone loves to make vicious shoot-'em-ups with guys in trench coats and fedoras, each bloodier than the last. But what are these films really about? Hollywood producers, writers, directors and stars wallowing in their arrested adolescent wet dreams of wild sex and Tommy-gun climaxes. (The same is true for "Goodfellas" and "Miller's Crossing," except that they were works of true genius — every rant is allowed a couple exceptions based solely on personal taste.)

"Bugsy" is nothing more than James Toback and Warren Beatty's high-profile attempt to rationalize their lives of pitiful womanizing excess, passing such characteristics off as hallmarks of artistic genius. See, Bugsy Siegel screwed a lot and killed a lot and was crazy as a bedbug, but in the end HE BUILT A CASINO IN THE DESERT! So he's really cool! And therefore, so are we!

Any film that uses Las Vegas as some sort of moral saving grace is pretty well fucked from the get-go. Sure, "Bugsy" is pretty, with pretty actors and pretty clothes and pretty sets, but so what? You can pick up the latest GQ or Cosmo and get the same effect — plus the magazines smell better. And please, may we drop this 25-year obsession with Warren Beatty as some sort of Great Actor? The man's a clod. He's the Chauncey Gardner of Hollywood; a nice-looking moron who's managed to power-broker his way into the industry's upper echelons by passing off his utter befuddlement as some sort of deep, silent genius. (Plus his Lothario reputation makes him a hero to all the small... um, minded invertebrates that call the shots in Lotusland.) Beatty can't act. He can't direct. He can't write. And his sole claim to political savvy was talking Gary Hart back into the '88 race.

But hey! Let's not waste all this venom on just little ol' "Bugsy." There were films out there this Christmas just as offensive. Say you're not of the ilk to get your rocks off on tired gangster clichés? Say, perhaps, you want something a little more sensitive? More healing? Try "Prince of Tides" — where Barbra Streisand does everything except lay hands on lepers. If Beatty's marriage to gangster films was a match made in Hell, Barbra, Pat Conroy and psychiatry are waiting for blood tests in Purgatory.

Say you're not of the ilk to get your rocks off on tired gangster clichés? Say, perhaps, you want something a little more sensitive? More healing?

If there's one thing sicker than Hollywood's gangster obsession, it's the town's desperate clinging to every child-within, Jon Bradshaw, self-help hoax of the moment. After all, who needs more help with finding their smiles than filthy-rich movie stars who can't leave the living room without accompanying fill lighting? And God help us when the thespian EST-heads get their hands on a piece of popular literature that doesn't feature giant subs, sharks or cross-dressing psychopaths. Suddenly a supermarket pot-boiler becomes the "most acclaimed novel of our time."

I don't care if egomaniacs like Streisand and Beatty want to produce, direct and star in overblown, empty puff pieces that do little more than demonstrate the best way to photograph over-40 idols who aren't quite as unwrinkly as they used to be, but why do we have to have them thrust onto our public consciousness? Why can't they just show their vanity fairs to a small group of friends and then burn 'em? What happened to the days when aging beauty queens and kings simply faded away into their Beverly Hills mansions, emerging only to greet tourist buses, pick up honorary awards, and fish dead writers out of their swimming pools?

The obvious response to this little vent of spleen is "Hey, jerk, if you don't like 'em you don't have to go see 'em." Well, I did like one of 'em.

Contrary to every negative expectation I had for it, "Hook" managed to move me in simple ways not one of the more "serious" or "important" movies came close to. Yeah, Spielberg's a commercial whore. Yeah, there were too many long scenes with the multiethnic Lost Boys that would have seemed more at home in a cereal commercial. Yeah, we don't need to see millionaire directors whining about their lost childhoods. And yeah, the entire film was exactly the sort of bloated, hyped, hyper bag of excess I've just spent so much space and bile screaming about.

But there were moments in "Hook" that made it all worthwhile. Not just Dustin Hoffman's delightful villainy. And not just the flying scenes, which touch a pleasure chord so primal in any human that Tony Scott could have directed them and they'd still be glorious. But specifically those two bookend scenes between Robin Williams and Maggie Smith when the grande dame looks him in the eye and says "Hello, boy."

For those few seconds, amid so many hours of holiday movie glut-tony, the screen sparkles with something so much more magical than anything Beatty, Barbra and all their sycophantic cronies can manage. No gunplay, no sex, no special effects or psychotherapy; just the creation of pure joy through subtle acting.

That's why I keep going back for more.

DANCE

Intriguing offerings by dance students

Merrie Snell
Daily Iowan

Undergraduate dance students Clifton Brown and Jeff Curtis will present an evening of their work as choreographers, directors, dancers, and concert organizers in a collaborative effort Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Space/Place Theatre in North Hall. "Vacillations," suggesting not only the opposing styles of Curtis and Brown — "a small-town kid and city boy" respectively — but also a widely varied program of music and dance styles, will be the UI's first full-evening dance concert produced solely by undergraduates.

Throughout the eight original works included in "Vacillations," Curtis and Brown will attempt to explore highly personal issues of self-doubt, conformity, sex and fear. Dance titles such as "Echoes of a Lump in the Back of the Throat," "On Display/Emotion," and "The Mating Ritual of Mr. Moose" reflect a mixture of humor and serious intent that the two hope to create by combining elements of modern dance, jazz and ballet.

Brown describes his ensemble piece, "On Display/Mannequin," as "bar dancing on pointe." Along with performances by Curtis, Brown and their colleagues from the dance department, Brown has also choreographed a dance specifically for his 10- to 14-year-old students of the UI Dance Forum.

"I've taken them under my wing," Brown says of his protégés who will perform a dance called "Puppets."

"They're going through the whole process," says Alicia Brown, chairman of the dance department, "testing their abilities as choreographers, promoting the concert, finding and rehearsing their performers, making all design and lighting decisions. . . . It's commendable."

She adds that the department gave them "free rein," but did everything they could to try to facilitate the project.

"It's their own. It's their concert," she says with a smile that looks both proud and cautious, aware of the magnitude of such an effort. "They're pretty gutsy guys." Brown went on to explain the difficulties they would encounter organizing a concert in the "real world" — paying for studio space, employing dancers and technicians, renting a suitable performance space, etc.

"It's why they're here," she says. "The dance department should be their experimental studio." She hopes to see more undergraduate endeavors of this scale in the future.

Tickets for "Vacillations" are $2 and may be purchased at the door.

It can't do laundry or find you a date, but it can help you find more time for both.

The new Apple® Macintosh® Classic® II computer makes it easier for you to juggle classes, activities, projects, and term papers—and still find time for what makes college life real life.

It's a complete and affordable Macintosh Classic system that's ready to help you get your work finished fast. It's a snap to set up and use. It has a powerful 68030 microprocessor, which means you can run even the most sophisticated applications with ease. And its internal Apple SuperDrive™ disk drive reads from and writes to Macintosh and MS-DOS formatted disks—allowing you to exchange information easily with almost any other kind of computer.

In addition to its built-in capabilities, the Macintosh Classic II can be equipped with up to 10 megabytes of RAM, so you'll be able to run several applications at once and work with large amounts of data.

If you already own a Macintosh Classic, and want the speed and flexibility of a Macintosh Classic II, ask us about an upgrade.

To put more time on your side, consider putting a Macintosh Classic II on your desk. See us for a demonstration today, and while you're in, be sure to ask us for details about the Apple Computer Loan. It'll be time well spent.
