Woman sues The Fieldhouse for injuries

The Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St., is being sued by a Council Bluffs woman for damages she sustained when another patron shattered a glass beer pitcher against her face.

According to documents filed in Johnson County Court Monday, on Oct. 31, 1991, Wendy Watts was struck in the face with a pitcher when a fight broke out in the bar. Watts stated that she suffered severe and permanent injuries and has ongoing medical problems due to that incident.

She has filed for a judgment that is "fair and reasonable" under the circumstances and claims that The Fieldhouse was negligent in not keeping its premises safe.

Man in Brazil confesses to slaying 14, evokes comparison to Dahmer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Disclosures of a man who confessed to slaying 14 boys and drinking the blood of some victims has caused a national uproar and evoked comparisons to serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer.

Marcelo Costa de Andrade, 25, was arrested in Rio in December but police only disclosed the case last week after recovering the corpses of 12 boys.

De Andrade has admitted to killing and raping 14 boys ranging in age from six to 13. Several were decapitated, and de Andrade said he drank the blood of two victims.

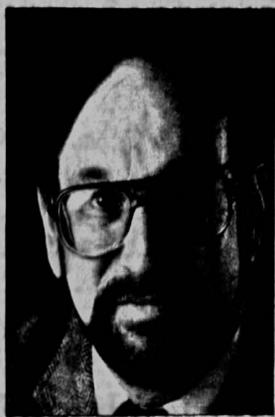

Honecker gives up sanctuary in Chilean Embassy to enter hospital

MOSCOW, Russia — Erich Honecker, the 79-year-old former East German leader, gave up his sanctuary in the Chilean Embassy on Monday and entered a hospital. Russian officials said they would not intervene unless he tried to leave the country.

Honecker is wanted in Germany on charges of manslaughter in the shooting of people who tried to flee East Germany during his 18 years as Communist chief.

Loewenberg to pursue teaching

Estela Villanueva
Daily Iowan

Gerhard Loewenberg will step down from his position as dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts to return to teaching in the Department of Political Science, following his resignation effective Sept. 1.

Loewenberg joined the UI faculty in 1970 as professor of political science and served as chairman of the department from 1982 to 1984. He was appointed dean of the College of Liberal Arts in 1984 and has remained in that position for eight years.

"I look forward to teaching again and to devoting more time to the Central and East European Parliamentary Project," he said. "That project will be expanded to include newly independent states in that part of the world, and I am eager to be more active in it than has been possible as dean."

As steering committee co-chairman of the East-West Parliamentary Practice Project, Loewenberg helps to achieve the project's goal of providing information to newly formed European parliaments about legislative experience in other democratic countries.

"While I very much regret Dean Loewenberg's decision, because he has provided the college with strong and effective leadership, he clearly deserves the opportunity to reinvest in the teaching and scholarship he does so very well," said Peter Nathan, vice president of academic affairs.

Nathan characterized Loewenberg as a superb dean and "a truly outstanding scholar, teacher and administrator. His leadership of the College of Liberal Arts over the past eight years has been extraordinary."

After discussing several options, Nathan and the Executive Committee of the UI decided that the best method to fill the position would be to organize an election of a search committee. The nine-member committee will be elected from the faculty ranks sometime in April to conduct a national search. Nathan hopes to name a permanent replacement by January 1993.

An interim dean will be appointed through a different approach. "I've asked the Executive Committee to bring to me some names of people that will serve the interim position

Huge loss will bring 21 GM plant closings

Frederick Standish
Associated Press

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. reported a record $4.5 billion 1991 loss Monday and identified some of the plants it must close to restore profits to the world's largest industrial corporation.

GM Chairman Robert Stempel announced the closings of two assembly plants — in Michigan and in New York — and cuts at 10 of GM's supplier factories, affecting 16,000 workers.

He also described a long-range plan to eliminate redundancies in nearly all areas of operations, including vehicle design and marketing, technical research and support operations.

"We must accelerate the fundamental changes," Stempel told reporters.

The details answered some of the questions left when the automaker announced a broad restructuring last December. The overall plan calls for 21 plant closings and 74,000 job cuts by the middle of the decade.

Analysts have said slow vehicle development, generous labor contracts and the recession have combined to force GM to shrink.

"I think this announcement is a beginning of a long series of restructurings," said John Casesa of Wertheim Schroder & Co. in New York. "Through the '90s, GM will be continuously restructuring to match its capabilities to the demands of the market."

GM stock lost 82½ cents to $37.75 in New York Stock Exchange trading in the aftermath of Monday's announcement.

Stempel said GM's Willow Run large-car assembly plant outside Ypsilanti, and its minivan plant in North Tarrytown, N.Y., would be closed. The Willow Run plant will cease production in the summer of 1993 and the North Tarrytown factory closes in the summer of 1995.

"We're all just in a state of shock right now," said Anthony Caparisi, president of the Ypsilanti Chamber of Commerce.

Associated Press

U.A.W. Local 435 officials watch a pre-recorded playback at the Union Hall on Monday of GM Chairman Robert Stempel's speech announcing the closing of two plants now and a total of 21 by the mid-1990s. This assembly plant in Wilmington, Del., was not included in the current cutback.

Other closings include operations in Ohio, Indiana, and Ontario, Canada.

GM's fourth-quarter loss included a $1.8 billion one-time charge to cover the costs of plant closings. It brought combined losses last year among GM, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. to $7.6 billion, the worst financial year in automotive history.

Stempel is importing to GM's struggling North American operations some of the structural changes it instituted in Europe. Overseas operations earned $2.1 billion last year, much of it in Europe, the company said.

POSTAL SERVICE

UI to use new mailing addresses

Wendy Alesch
Daily Iowan

The UI is looking to get "addressed for success."

On Monday, the U.S. Postal Service's automated mailing systems directory arrived in UI offices. The directory lists new addresses, which are numbers based on university buildings rather than city streets.

It also lists the four-digit endings that will convert the UI's zip code to the nine-digit system. This nine-digit system is called "Zip plus 4."

The standardized format for addressing envelopes includes: the department or college on the top line; on the next line, the building number; and on the last line, Iowa City IA — with no punctuation — and the "Zip plus 4" code. There will also be requirements for placement of the address within certain margins on the envelope.

If the requirements are followed and the envelope is typed, it will receive a bar code from a machine and will be sorted mechanically.

For example, a letter addressed to the office of The Daily Iowan would have 201 Communications Center on the middle line and then Iowa City IA and the "Zip plus 4" code of 52242-1591 on the bottom line of the envelope.

When the post office in Cedar Rapids receives this letter, it can automatically put it in the 1591 bag or The Daily Iowan bag and it won't have to be handled again. The bag will just be delivered to The Daily Iowan office.

"This reduces the number of times that mail is hand-read and handled," Carol Casey, the program's coordinator, said. "This could save enormous amounts of money."

"The U.S. Postal Service is offering cost incentives. For a No. 10 envelope, instead of a 29-cent stamp we could use a 25-cent stamp as long as the standardized format is used and a bar code was sprayed on the letter," she said.

Casey said that if the UI could eventually get a system where all its mail went to one place before being mailed and receiving the bar code, then the university could

Computer virus threatens IBM, compatible programs

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

March 6, the birthdate of the 18th-century sculptor and painter Michelangelo, will pass without incident for most people. For computers, however, that date marks an epidemic disease.

A new computer virus, which is set to strike on March 6, is scoping the country for weak computers. When triggered, the virus will destroy all the information saved on a computer's memory.

According to Roger Medsker, a computer consultant at Weeg Computing Center, the virus "will write over the hard disk with random information, essentially destroying the information on the hard disk."

The virus, which was discovered in Europe last April, has already infected more than 5 million computers and is spreading quite rapidly, Medsker said.

He said that of the approximately 1,000 known computer viruses, only a handful are common enough to spread as extensively as Michelangelo.

The virus is specific for IBM PCs and compatible computers that run DOS, the disk-operating system, including Leading Edge and Epson computers, Medsker said. Macintosh computers are not affected by the virus.

According to Medsker, a computer virus is a small program that copies itself into other programs and modifies any information stored there. An infected program spreads the virus over electronic bulletin boards and by contaminated floppy disks.

The only way to prevent infection, he said, is to scan for the virus and remove it with an anti-virus program such as F-PROT, which is available at Weeg.

"F-PROT works by looking through the computer for all of the several hundred viruses, including the Michelangelo," Medsker said. "It then reports anything it sees as being a virus and in most cases can remove it."

Although there are no guarantees, Medsker said the program should not ruin the hard disk. "It shouldn't damage anything on the computer," he said.

Dems prepare for S.D. primary

Karen Ball
Associated Press

SIoux FALLS, S.D. — Democratic candidates scrapped for votes Monday on the eve of their party's second primary — a South Dakota showdown for Farm Belt Sens. Bob Kerrey and Tom Harkin. Each needs a win to get back in the thick of the race with front-runners Paul Tsongas and Bill Clinton.

Kerrey, atop the South Dakota polls, claimed the race "wide open," saying, "This is not a campaign that has people really knowing all of us very well."

Campaigning at a day-care center in Sioux Falls, the Nebraska senator warned Democrats against trying "to rush to a front-runner without measuring that individual's capacity to take it to George Bush in the fall."

Tsongas and Harkin, too, were campaigning in South Dakota. During a speech at Augustana College, Tsongas criticized his opponents for engaging in "protectionist rhetoric" and Japan bashing that he said was designed to attract Eastern votes.

"If there's any state that's going to be increasingly dependent on foreign products, it's South Dakota," he said.

Iowa Sen. Harkin, meanwhile, told senior citizens at a stop in Mitchell that his congressional record would show "I've been on your side for 17 years" and predicted he'd bring Democrats who voted for Ronald Reagan back to the party.

The two Democratic leaders overall, Clinton and Tsongas, blitzed the local airwaves in hopes of getting a foothold in the state.

Clinton began airing a new ad Sunday that brands criticism by Tsongas and Kerrey of Clinton's middle-class tax cut and farm record as "misleading, negative attacks." The ad promotes Clinton's record of family farm support and rural development in Arkansas.

Kerrey responded to Harkin ads airing in South Dakota that criticize him for voting to give President Bush authority to negotiate a free-trade agreement with Mexico.

"I think the people of South Dakota understand that their economic future is linked to trade," Kerrey said. "It is just old-style

CAMPUS BRIEFS

A weekly summary of news at the nation's college campuses.

University of Toledo officer charged in student's death

A University of Toledo police officer was charged with aggravated murder in the shooting death on campus of a 19-year-old student.

Jeffrey T. Hodge, 22, of Toledo, was charged in the death of Melissa Ann Herstrum, 19.

Police said Hodge had responded to a car accident on campus several hours before the disappearance of Herstrum, who had stopped to offer help at the scene.

The police chief and captain said that Hodge was one of the search team officers who found the student's body.

Police said wrist marks indicating that the victim may have been handcuffed led them to consider whether a law enforcement officer had been involved in the slaying.

The police chief also said that telephone records showed a call about a phony taxicab robbery on the night of the slaying was placed from a campus phone, suggesting the killer may have wanted the victim discovered at that time and may have been part of the university community.

Herstrum's body was found lying face down in the snow on the university's Scott Park campus, about one mile south of the main campus. She had been shot 14 times in the head and the back.

No motive was determined in the slaying.

Hodge is also suspected of firing five shots from a semi-automatic weapon into a coed dormitory — one bullet just missing a sleeping student — and for nine fires that broke out in three university buildings during a 24-hour period, causing thousands of dollars in damages.

University of Florida student government candidate Gibby the cat wants change

Students at the University of Florida could elect a 3-year-old Himalayan cat named Gibby as UF's new student body president.

The cat said that UF's student government is out of touch with its constituents, and that as student body president she would change that. She talks through her owner and spokesman, Christopher Georgoff, a UF history graduate student.

Georgoff said that Gibby has been speaking to him since he got her nine months ago, and although neither Georgoff nor Gibby have student government experience, she is qualified as a ruler because, according to Georgoff, she was a second-century Roman emperor in a former life.

He said she used to be Emperor Marcus Aurelius in a previous incarnation.

Gibby also said that UF's school song is sexist and out-of-date and should be changed to a Beethoven symphony, Georgoff said.

Georgoff said that Gibby's other goals include supplying free beer to the student body and placing "politically correct, ecologically compatible soft toilet paper in all campus restrooms, regardless of gender."

Purdue and Indiana to compete in bungee jumping

Students from Purdue and Indiana Universities will jump off the top of a crane in hopes of becoming bungee jumping champions in the first IU-PU Bungee Jumping Competition.

The bungee jump works by having a chest harness and a waist harness strapped to the body. These harnesses are attached to bungee cords which are, in turn, attached to a crane, or other object to jump from.

Jerry Martin, co-owner of Leaps and Bounds and coordinator of the competition said that it is a 100-foot jump, with cords 43 feet long that elongate to 100 feet. He also said that it is very safe and that there have been no commercial deaths in the 30 years of the sport.

Dean says no more overnight guests at Ohio State University

Overnight guests of the opposite sex in Ohio State University dormitory rooms will face the consequences if the dean of Students at OSU decides to enforce the school's policy of having unregistered guests overnight.

In a recent article in The New York Times, Dean of Students Joel Rudy expressed his plan to enforce the policy. The move was made in response to numerous calls from parents and students complaining that some students are having overnight guests without the consent of their roommates and without registering these guests with the housing office.

Rudy said the decision was not a case of snooping and spying, but rather one of safety, privacy and security.

Many students questioned the ability of the university to enforce such a widely broken rule. In order to enforce the new policy, the housing staff must now distinguish between overnight guests and visitors. To add to the confusion, OSU continues to allow 24-hour visiting privileges to the registered students.

University of Pennsylvania may house same-sex couples

The University of Pennsylvania may adopt a policy that would allow gay and lesbian couples to live in married student housing.

The policy is under review by the Department of Residential Living and the vice provost for university life. It was proposed by the Professional Student Assembly and the Graduate Student Associations Council of the UP student government.

Officials do not know when a decision on the policy will be handed down.

Stanford University, Harvard University and the University of Wisconsin-Madison all have similar policies.

UI doctors listed in 'best of' book

Kelly Hassenstab
Daily Iowan

Thirty-nine physicians from Iowa, 38 of them from the UI, are listed among 3,850 physicians in a new book called "The Best Doctors in America."

The book, published by Woodward/White, Inc., of Aiken, S.C., lists the results of a national phone survey of more than 4,000 prominent specialists who nominated their colleagues, according to editor Steven Naifeh.

Physicians were asked, "If a friend or loved one came to you with a medical problem, and for some reason you couldn't handle the case, to whom would you send them?"

Naifeh said the poll, which listed "slightly more than 1 percent of the nation's practicing physicians," was not based on a random sample.

"We initially asked a carefully chosen group of people at major medical centers, like the Mayo Clinic and Sloan-Kettering, to whom would they send their family members.

"This gave us a list of about 80 very prominent doctors at major institutions, and we then went to them and kept calling until a consensus was reached," Naifeh said.

The vast majority of the doctors listed in the book are affiliated with large teaching hospitals, and most are located on the East and West Coasts. No general or family practitioners were named.

"There are probably some fairly famous doctors who didn't make the list," Naifeh said, "including some of the very first ones we talked to. We wanted to keep it a list of only practicing clinicians, and not just researchers."

Naifeh attributes the "geographical anomalies" to the fact that the list is restricted to specialists who only nominated other doctors in their field of expertise and to the fact that "good medical institutions attract major talent."

The UI Hospitals and Clinics was one of the top medical facilities named in the book, Naifeh said. The Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., had more than 100 doctors named.

The only Iowa doctor named who is not directly affiliated with UIHC is Des Moines dermatologist Roger Ceilly, but he also serves as a part-time instructor at the UI College of Medicine.

The book is primarily intended as a resource for doctors and patients who need referrals to specialists. "It's basically for anyone who feels the need to have the top talent in the country," Naifeh said. "It's a way to find the right connections."

UI pediatrics Professor Randell Alexander said that he was "flattered" to be included.

"It's very nice that some people must have been thinking about me," he said, "but now I'm probably going to get teased by my kids. 'If you're such a good doctor, then how come...?'"

Alexander also noted that the book was definitely not complete. "If there's an excellent doctor in a small town, he probably wouldn't get named," he said. "This listing seems to favor academic types."

BUDGET

Branstad pressures lawmakers

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Monday offered sympathy for legislators but also warned it's time to "step up to the plate" and make decisions on budget deficits.

"Until they realize there's a problem, until they realize we can't afford to go on with business as usual, I think I'm going to have to continue to be firm," Branstad said.

"I really like those people, I do," he said. "They're decent people. I just know they have tough decisions to make. I know the pressure they are under. Politicians love to say 'yes.' It's difficult to say 'no,' it's not fun to say 'no.'"

At his regular meeting with reporters, Branstad continued to pressure lawmakers to approve a spending plan he's sent them for this year and next.

Legislators are struggling with this year's spending plan, with the House and Senate approving different plans. Branstad said neither version has much future.

Before turning to next year's projected $300 million deficit, legislators must settle on spending cuts and tax increases to free $41 million and keep welfare programs running for the rest of this year.

"I'm still concerned the budget needs to be balanced," Branstad said. "There are still some major problems that need to be worked out. Neither one of them is in balance."

Relations between Republican Branstad and Democrats in the Legislature have grown increasingly tense over the past few weeks. Last week, Branstad said lawmakers "choked" when facing tough budget decisions and legislative leaders accused him of throwing a "temper tantrum."

Branstad struck a more conciliatory tone at the news conference but said he won't ease the pressure.

"I really do like those people and that's why I want to spend a lot of time with them," he said. "I need to hold their hand. There will be a plethora of special interest groups beating on them and demanding more. We don't have it."

Branstad said he's worried that time is running out.

"The next couple of months are critical," he said. "It's going to determine whether the Legislature is going to be part of the problem or part of the solution."

COMMUNITY SERVICE

Agency helps disabled people gain life skills

Services include educational improvement and discrimination assistance.

Betty Lin
Daily Iowan

A local agency is striving to make life easier for people with disabilities.

Independent Living Inc., which has been in operation since 1979, is a non-profit, non-residential program whose purpose is to empower people with disabilities to reach their full potential and to improve their quality of life.

The uniqueness of the program lies in the staff composition. The board of directors as well as some of the staff members are made up of people with disabilities.

The disabilities of the clients of Independent Living range from physical and emotional to mental retardation. All of the clients' disabilities fall under the category of the developmentally disabled.

A basic doctrine of the program is that regardless of ability or lack of skills, everybody has the right and the responsibility to make choices about their own lives and experience success as active participants in society.

Program coordinator Keith Ruff, a counselor as well as a person with a disability, explained that some of the clients do not need as much help as others.

"Some of us need help getting up in the morning and going to bed at night. Without this help, we cannot function properly in the community," he said.

Services of Independent Living include training in daily living skills such as finding housing and employment, improving educational opportunities. The agency also offers community resource information about social security benefits, food stamps and church-supported programs.

Private or group counseling is also provided to help clients understand and cope with their problems. A special parents group is also offered to allow parents of children with disabilities to come together to share common interests and experiences.

Independent Living also assists in problems of discrimination or unfair treatment in housing, employment and public accommodations. Assistance is also given to employers and businesses on human and civil rights issues for individuals with disabilities.

Most of the services are performed at the client's house. Transportation is not provided because of the tight budget Independent Living is on, but Ruff said that whenever possible, staff members try to help out with transportation.

Ruff explained that Independent Living's main emphasis is to give clients physical and emotional support whenever needed.

"The theory behind Independent Living is not to give people what they want but to help them find what they need," he said.

The staff includes two people in the office, three counselors and four job counselors who work with the individual in the beginning to see if the individual can handle the position without any difficulties.

The program is funded through grants and the Johnson County Department of Human Services. The United Way also contributes funds, but the funding has recently been lowered.

Despite the tight budget of the program, Ruff is still optimistic.

"I'm not complaining; I'm just telling it like it is," Ruff said. "We're trying to run the Independent Living Center with very little funding and very little help."

HAITI

A group of policemen stand amid angry demonstrators Monday in downtown Port-au-Prince, Haiti. The protesters denounced an agreement between lawmakers and ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, whose return is vehemently opposed by many soldiers and police in Haiti.

High court upholds repatriation decision

James Rowley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court refused Monday to halt the repatriation of Haitian refugees as Haiti's politicians reached an accord providing for the eventual return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

The high court's 8-1 ruling upholding the Bush administration's program to forcibly return Haitian refugees shifts the issue to Congress, which this week will debate emergency legislation to temporarily halt repatriations.

The political settlement reached late Sunday in Washington between Aristide and his rivals in Haiti's National Assembly would set up a "consensus government" before the president's return to power.

The deal, reached after three days of talks at the Organization of American States headquarters, set no date for Aristide's return.

It was unclear whether the accord would be honored by the Haitian military, which deposed Aristide in a Sept. 30 coup that brought down the first democratically elected government in the Caribbean nation's history.

"It's promising but very uncertain in that there are forces at play in Haiti that haven't come to terms in the agreement, including the army," Arthur Helton, who monitors Haitian affairs for the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights, said of the agreement. "It is not a crisis that has ended or likely will end for some time."

well. I hope to be able to name my choice for interim dean as soon as possible," Nathan said.

Also this year, Professor Robert Hering announced his retirement as senior dean in the College of Engineering, effective June 30.

Loewenberg's motivation came about from a specific opportunity that he couldn't resist as a political scientist, Nathan said.

Nathan added that neither of these resignations indicates that the deans were unhappy with their positions, and there will be no impact on the restructuring of the administration planned for 1993.

"There are 11 deans, and we expect this kind of turnover. I think it's a very tough job, and we have to expect that with the budget situation and a lot of other difficulties some people find it a burden," Nathan said.

save tens of thousands of dollars because of the volume of mail it sends out every day. The UI would have to purchase a bar code machine or hire a private firm to make the system work.

There will be numerous training sessions for UI employees this week. One will be held Wednesday and Thursday of this week and every day but Tuesday of next week. The training program is titled "Addressing For Success." Casey encourages at least one member of every university office to attend.

"The second week the classes will be held in rooms that hold over 200 people. We want two people from every office but if only one person attends they can train the other office employees," she said.

Casey said this change has "spurred" a look at the UI communications systems as a whole.

"We are taking a look at how we move information inside and outside the university," she said.

politics at the last minute trying to convince some voters that I'm somebody other than I am," Kerrey said.

Kerrey's ads suggest he would be the most respectable Democrat and portray him as a South Dakota neighbor who is "fighting to save the family farm."

Kerrey, angling to recover after his third-place showing in New Hampshire, has mostly targeted Tsongas and Clinton as he seeks to boost himself into the thick of the race.

A Kerrey win in South Dakota would further cloud the muddled Democratic race following Jerry Brown's startling draw with Tsongas in Maine on Sunday. A week earlier, Tsongas won in New Hampshire, while Harkin claimed prize in his home state Iowa on Feb. 10.

That leaves Clinton, who emerged as the early front-runner in the race, without a win to call his own. Kerrey and Harkin both need to win South Dakota to keep their campaigns alive and revitalize fund-raising. Asked about his finances Monday, Kerrey quipped, "We're not down to bake sales yet, but we're close."

Brown, buoyed by his showing in Maine, focused his attentions on Colorado, which holds its primary March 3.

"This is about taking back the country," he declared at a Denver news conference. "This campaign will go all the way to the convention."

Clinton returned to Little Rock for a special legislative session on the state's child welfare system. Unlike New Hampshire, unemployment is not much of an issue in South Dakota. Instead, the focus has been on keeping family farmers afloat, reversing the trend of low-paying jobs and helping rural residents find health care.

Kerrey said he feels no extra pressure in South Dakota, even though he's considered the front-runner here.

PEACE TALKS

Baker demands that Israel stop settlements or lose future loans

Ruth Sinai
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State James Baker said Monday he had given Israel a choice: stop settlements in occupied Arab land or forfeit $10 billion in loan guarantees. The ultimatum raised Arab hopes and Israeli nervousness as a fourth round of Mideast peace talks got under way.

Baker testified on Capitol Hill as separate sets of talks began across town at the State Department between Israel and a Palestinian-Jordanian team, Israel and Syria, and Israel and Lebanon.

The issue of the guarantees, which Israel needs so it can borrow money to absorb 350,000 Jewish immigrants from the former Soviet Union, has overshadowed the peace talks since they were launched last October under U.S. auspices.

Israel objects to links between the guarantees, which it regards as aiding a humanitarian cause, and Jewish settlements in the predominantly Arab West Bank and Gaza Strip. The United States, however, views the guarantees as leverage for stopping the settlements, which it deems harmful to prospects for an Arab-Israeli peace.

Hanan Ashrawi, Palestinian spokeswoman at the peace talks, said Baker's remarks constitute "a glimmer of hope" that the United States understands the severity of the continued Jewish settlements.

However, Israeli negotiator Yosef Ben-Aharon, a senior aide to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, said:

"We will not capitulate on the settlements and we will not write off the loan guarantees. We believe a compromise can be found."

Baker said he had offered up to $2 billion a year in guarantees over five years if Israel would halt settlement work in lands it occupied after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

"The choice, from our standpoint, is Israel's," Baker told a House subcommittee in his first detailed public comments about the closed-door negotiations with Israel.

Israel's response, given to Baker in private over the past few weeks, was loud and public Monday.

Housing Minister Ariel Sharon said Israel had begun 2,000 housing units this year and will soon start another 1,000. And Shamir told Jewish settlers he will defy Washington rather than stop settlement construction "even for a day," an Israeli newspaper reported.

Baker said the United States had offered to allow completion of housing units under construction on Jan. 1, 1992, but with a penalty reducing the guarantees by any amount spent on completing those units.

If it determines new settlement work is going on after the guarantees go forward, "the United States should have the right to end, terminate, suspend any provision for absorption assistance at that point," he said.

But the United States probably would not seek to reclaim money already loaned as a result of earlier guarantees, he added.

The Arabs, especially representatives of the 1.7 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip where more than 100,000 Jews have settled, have repeatedly pressed the administration to make the guarantees strictly conditional on a halt to settlements.

The Palestinians argue that if Israel keeps up its current settlement pace, there won't be any need for talks because the Israelis will have taken over all their land. The talks are designed to allow the Palestinians to rule the areas currently governed by the Israeli military.

Abdul Salam Majali, head of the Jordanian delegation to the peace talks, said Baker's position on settlements was "a very encouraging step" because moves into the occupied areas "really blast the whole efforts for peace."

Majali said the opening session between the Israelis and Jordanians was conducted in a "good, businesslike manner." He said the two sides "talked about visions of peace."

N. AZIZ GOKDEMIR

Sharper focus needed to fight rape

ELECTIONS

Apathy is the word

Just mark your choice. Then cast the ballot. It's that simple. Simpler than a multiple choice test. But very few are doing it.

The apathy among voters when Election Day comes around the corner is appalling. Last week the UISA elections attracted a predictable low number of voters. A little more than 1,700 students felt compelled to participate in the process. Almost a thousand less than last year. A shame.

Sure, the candidates were all well-intentioned and probably very capable, even though that is yet to be determined in the case of Dustin Wilcox and Maricar Tinio. But the election was decided on nine votes. Yes, just nine votes.

That isn't necessarily flattering to the other candidates or to the election process. It doesn't imply that the candidates were so good that nobody was able to make up his or her mind until the last minute. It simply means that nobody gave a damn about the whole thing. The result basically came down to which running ticket was able to bring in more friends — "voters" — from their fraternity, sorority, student organization or maybe the bars.

The result was determined by who could bring in more friends from their fraternity, sorority, student organization or maybe the bars.

"There is a general disinterest in student government," Joyce Kruse, representative of the Office of Campus Programs, said. No kidding. The question is: What have the previous student leaders done to deserve more attention? Well, Pepe Rojas-Cardona has gotten a lot of attention in the last few months, but not precisely for the achievements of his administration. And Matt Wise and Jennifer Kelly were just another irrelevant page in the history of UI student government.

If the blue-cap phone system for rape prevention is actually implemented, Dustin Wilcox's administration should receive all the glory for turning it into a reality, regardless of who came up with the idea, which for some seemed to be an important campaign issue.

Nationally the picture is even sadder. Most potential voters are closely watching the races for party nominations, scrutinizing the smallest details, scandals included. But when it comes to actual voting, a mere 40 percent voted in the last presidential election, and the Iowa caucuses look more like a bunch of friends getting together for pizza and beer than for choosing a candidate.

And voter apathy is hardly an exclusive American phenomenon. It is repeating itself in Western Europe. An exception can be found in the countries crying for democracy where high turnouts are the trend. Just take a look at Eastern Europe. The fad may not last long, though. In some Latin American countries, where democracy was regained not long ago, voters, particularly young voters, are totally uninterested in politics.

All the dirty campaigning and corruption charges in the government is turning voters away. And maybe that is what needs to be changed.

OBJECTIVE MORALITY

The transcendence of truth

At present it is fashionable to think that principles of morality are merely products of a particular culture. Worse still, they are said to reflect only the values of those in power in such cultures; for only they are able to establish and then impose these principles on others.

Because these principles vary from one civilization to the next, it has been decided that morality on the whole is relative; that is, these principles have no real or objective status.

This all amounts to a rejection of a transcendent truth which the human spirit aspires to know and observe. It provides, further, a sense of freedom: Since no objective right or wrong exists to govern us, we live as we please, forever comforted that moral behavior is just a matter of opinion. Differences are fine — as long as no one tries to impose a particular morality upon us.

The problem with this world vision is that it runs contrary to human experience. This alone should give us pause. It may even suggest that such a vision is incorrect.

Witness individuals of moral conviction: Those who work to prevent rape or to provide redress when it happens do so because they believe that this act is objectively and in reality wrong. This is not just a matter of opinion for them, nor do they accept that they must not impose this moral conviction on others. The independent, objective status of rape as wrong means that it is wrong for everyone, everywhere and at all times. No personal opinion about it.

And so it is with a myriad of other moral issues. Very few of us behave as if such matters are simply questions of subjective preference. If most truly believed this, there never would have been civil rights marches or protests against apartheid. Surely such rallies are classic instances of people standing up for their belief that certain discriminatory policies are in fact, and in reality, objectively wrong. Moreover, the call to eradicate these policies is a desire to "impose" these moral beliefs on others.

The situation at present is, then, rather odd. At every turn one finds individuals who state that moral views are "mere opinions" and should be confined to those who subscribe to them. They say, in essence, that morality is relative. But one finds that these same individuals behave in complete contradiction to such statements.

Perhaps they do not reject a transcendent truth after all.

Teresa Regan
Editorial Writer

•OPINIONS expressed on the Viewpoints page of The Daily Iowan are those of the signed authors. The Daily Iowan, as a non-profit corporation, does not express opinions on these matters.

I know. You're sick of this subject, aren't you? So am I and so is Fernando, my editor and pal. But when I detect some fuzziness in public attitudes, no matter how insignificant my worries over them may seem compared to the global nightmare of rape that wrecks havoc mainly on women, I am still worried and consequently compelled to write more.

Below is an excerpt from a Feb. 20 DI article titled, "Tyson verdict only a beginning in war against rape."

Diane Funk, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, said the Feb. 10 conviction of Tyson is "significant in the wake of Clarence Thomas' hearings and the William Kennedy-Smith trial."

Tyson's trial, which was often compared to that of Thomas and Kennedy-Smith's respective cases, was encouraging only because there was a conviction, Funk said.

"I think the conviction says to women that, sometimes, justice can prevail," she said.

... Although there was a "positive ending" to this trial, Funk said, the two rape cases and Thomas' hearing sent out a clear message to the American people that there still exists "the myth that the woman is partially to blame."

"We have seen so many cases where the rapists don't get convicted," she said. "Most people usually assume that the woman was at fault because either she should have known better or she probably deserved it."

Now even though I have a tremendous respect for Ms. Funk's organization and how much — understaffed and undermined as it is — it contributes to the improvement of life in this community, I must say I had a bit of a problem with her stand as expressed in the article.

It can be fairly assumed from the text that Ms. Funk believes Messrs. Tyson, Kennedy-Smith and Thomas are all guilty. So do I. The decision-making bodies in the cases, however, did not always agree with us: Mr. Tyson was found guilty, Mr. Kennedy-Smith and Mr. Thomas were not.

It doesn't really matter. Put me, Ms. Funk, and four more people like us on the jury, and we would have sent Mr. Kennedy-Smith to prison. But would that necessarily prove his guilt? History is rife with misjudgments. The French executed Georges-Jacques Danton for treason in 1794, now he is somewhat a national hero. Whereas I dare say the chances of Mr. Tyson achieving that status are less than zero, I can't be so sure about history's final verdict on somebody like Mark Curtis, who was charged with rape in 1988, and was convicted after a two-day trial — of attempted rape and burglary.

At the time, Mr. Curtis happened to be a political activist fighting for migrant workers' rights at a slaughterhouse in Des Moines. The day after his arrest, friends managed to gather the $30,000 required to bail him out, and photographed him in deplorable condition. It was this photograph of Curtis's face — resembling a hybrid between a mashed potato and a diced tomato — that helped people like Coretta Scott King and Ed Asner believe and support the claims that Mr. Curtis was framed, racially insulted and beaten up by the police, and the jury in his trial was barred from hearing crucial evidence showing he was not guilty.

I believe Mr. Curtis is not guilty, but I may be wrong. It is theoretically possible that his friends jumped Curtis after bailing him out, beat him to a pulp, then went on to use his case to push their political agenda. To complicate things further, Mr. Curtis was white and the victim black.

The question is, once he has been convicted, shall we afford Mr. Curtis the benefit of the doubt? Or shall we say, echoing another comment of Ms. Funk's which closed the article: "He was convicted of rape, it doesn't make any sense to give him any leniency."

This attitude would almost always work. Rape cases involving a frame-up or an unjust accusation are extremely rare, as rare as dust in the rain. For it would indeed have to be an oddity — given this sexist society of ours where there's an ugly stigma attached to having been raped — when a woman steps out into the light and falsely accuses someone. Rare as it is, however, it's happened before. And that's precisely why I'm disturbed by the views expressed in the article.

It seems to me that Ms. Funk believes every rape allegation to be well founded. Further down in the article, Pat Myers, director of the Domestic Violence Project (yet another very respectable local organization) seems to share this perspective:

Myers said it is easier to convict a black man than someone who is white. "Nevertheless, anyone who is convicted of rape, must be held accountable and must pay the consequences," she said.

Easier to convict a black man? Does this mean that it's only a matter of efficiency to be able to convict as many suspects as possible, and the system happens to give us better rates on blacks? Looking at it from that perspective, the system acts not as a balance that judges the truth, but merely as a transformer taking in an allegation as the input, and then churning out the conviction as the output. A "system failure" is disappointing, and every conviction is a means to the end, which in this case is an ultimate victory in the war against rape.

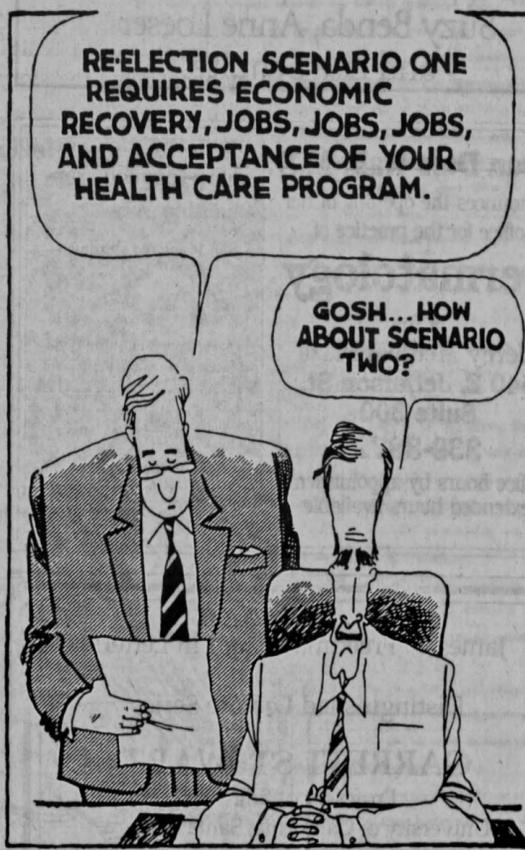

Surely a noble war, but the means is another story. If Ms. Funk has so much faith in the legal system as to endorse Mr. Tyson's conviction as valid, why won't she attach the same validity on the verdicts for the other two?

Rape will not end when we reach a 100 percent conviction rate in the courts, it will only end when we don't have rapists growing up in our midst. Prosecution cannot yield permanent results unless it is coupled by a gargantuan educational effort that forces us to rethink the way we look at family, football teams, fraternities, the Swedish bikini team, marriage and bringing up children — to name a few problem areas of our society of which rapists are a product.

You may reasonably counter-argue that in this grim battlefield turned as muddy as Passchendaele under the current hard rain, the prominent fighters cannot afford the luxury of worrying about a minuscule number of innocents in the crossfire. Fine. Just don't take that argument to Mr. Curtis if he is not guilty. Or to the 300,000 who drowned in the mudfields of Passchendaele in 1917 when the generals misread the map.

Shopper's complaint

To the Editor:
Buyers beware: The importance of customer satisfaction may no longer exist.

The event that produced this woe toward the retailer began at Christmas. My girlfriend bought me a $50 gift certificate to The Athlete's Foot in hopes that I might buy a much-needed new pair of tennis shoes. I had not shopped for tennis shoes for years, and I had never as much as tried on a pair of Air Jordans. The prospect of being able to get a pair of the much-hyped modern high-tech sport shoes thrilled me.

Those who have ever shopped for these kinds of shoes are probably shaking their heads; my gift certificate might buy, say, the laces for a pair of Air Jordans. The shoes which I wanted cost over $100 on sale, over twice the amount of my gift certificate.

So I decided that I would wait until I had an extra $75, then buy the shoes I wanted. This was a big mistake; about one month later I cleaned off the desk in my study and accidentally threw the gift certificate away. When I discovered my mistake, I was not worried; my girlfriend had kept the receipt (as the clerk at The Athlete's Foot had instructed her to do) and I called the store to see about replacing the certificate. Much to my surprise, the manager told me I was out of luck; gift certificates are just like cash, he said, so I basically threw away $50 in cash. Due to the fact that the certificate had no expiration date, anyone who found the certificate could use it at any Athlete's Foot across the country, so I could not replace it, and could not get a refund. End of a conversation.

I admit that throwing away the certificate was a dumb thing to do, but I thought receipts protected the buyer. But apparently due to the throng of people stampeding to the landfill to dig through the trash and find The Athlete's Foot gift certificates, I get screwed.

I even called the local comptroller to try to convince him that the chance of this certificate being found and redeemed was highly improbable, but again I was told that nothing could be done. That, of course, is a lie. If he wanted to do something about it, he could. No policy is so concrete that there are no exceptions. If I had lost the certificate in the Old Capitol Mall, I could see why they may not want to issue me another. But I threw it in the garbage, somewhere between the coffee grounds and the egg shells. The redeemability factor is pretty much zero.

The comptroller admitted that they have had several similar situations this year. This made me wonder why they haven't done something to change the policy, such as issue an expiration date, or check the ID of a person redeeming a certificate. Is The Athlete's Foot customer relations department listening?

The bottom line is that instead of having a happy customer who spent an extra $75 along with the $50 gift certificate for a new pair of shoes, they have a pissed-off EX-customer who will have nothing good to say about their store or their company. I hope it was worth $50 to them. And I hope they enjoy the $50 Christmas gift from my girlfriend.

Inquisitive

To the Editor:
I am an inquisitive person and I have a few questions for which I need answers. Could somebody please tell me:

Why someone who writes a bad check or shoplifts is sentenced to several years in prison but when an executive at a major corporation like Rockwell, for example, bilks the taxpayer out of millions of dollars and causes the loss or layoffs of thousands of jobs, they are conveniently forgotten about?

Why so many of our elected leaders and business leaders are so ethically bankrupt? Witness the insurance scams and the paper shuffling rip-offs in the form of lawsuits and junk bonds.

Why Gabe's Oasis is so arid of diversity? Why do they not only get the same bands, but the same kind of bands? If Davenport can get rap and house bands, why can't we?

Is there anyone who would like to invest in opening a new nightclub or restaurant? If so, I will trade my time and skills for capital.

How Kim Painter, a whining bore, and Locke Peterseim, a let-me-make-a-reference-to-an-obscure-person-you've-never-heard-of-so-I'll-look-cool anal retentive know-it-all, can continue to spew their ravings du jour in the newspaper?

Who makes those insipid beer and cola commercials? They're like watching 30-second segments of the Arsenio Hall show.

Why the Democrats don't sew up the presidential race by sashaying "Dan Quayle?"

Who's the next Saint Magic? If Earvin Johnson is such an advocate for AIDS, where was he prior to learning his test report?

Lebanese guerrillas disguised

Donna A. Nasr
Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Hundreds of Muslim guerrillas in southern Lebanon have put on civilian clothes and hidden their weapons in an apparent effort to remain close to Israel's self-proclaimed security zone, police said today.

In Beirut, a U.N. envoy arrived today for talks with officials on rising Arab-Israeli tensions and bloodshed, including last week's Israeli raid into southern Lebanon and Hezbollah rocket attacks on northern Israel.

U.N. Undersecretary-general Mar rack Goulding was to meet with President Elias Hrawi before heading to south Lebanon to visit U.N. peacekeepers.

Meanwhile, delegations from Israel, Syria, Lebanon and Jordan, and the Palestinians were in Washington today to resume Middle East peace talks.

About 1,000 guerrillas raced south last week to confront the Israeli incursion in the villages of Kafra and Yater to hunt for rocket launchers. Some 800 guerrillas appear to be making plans to stay in the area and blend in with the population, said police, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Some of the 10,000 villagers who fled the fighting have returned to the villages, which were heavily damaged by Israeli shells and gunfire.

Paper warns of resurgent attacks; claims hostage releases 'mistake'

Anwar Faruqi
Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — A hard-line Iranian newspaper said Monday that Israel's killing of a Shiite Muslim leader proved the release of Western hostages last year was a mistake, and raised the prospect of a renewed round of kidnapping.

The warning in the daily newspaper Salam — founded by a political leader of the U.S. Embassy hostage siege — highlighted the latest round of infighting between anti-Western radicals and pragmatists led by President Hashemi Rafsanjani.

It was difficult to assess how much of a threat it actually represented for the estimated 3,000 Americans and Europeans living in the Beirut area.

The Tehran Times, which reflects Rafsanjani's thinking, on Monday called the taking of hostages in Lebanon "undesirable," saying it would give the Israelis "justification for their crimes."

Yet on the domestic front, the radicals may have strengthened their hand by linking the release of the hostages to recent Israeli attacks on the Hezbollah group, which Iran founded and funds. The group publicly denies involvement with the kidnappers.

The radicals seized on Israel's Feb. 16 assassination of Sheik Abbas Musawi, leader of Hezbollah, to try to undermine Rafsanjani's efforts to seek rapprochement with the West.

Last year, Rafsanjani went against radicals' demands and played a key role in securing freedom for six Western hostages held by pro-Iranian zealots in Lebanon.

Salam, which reflects the thinking of the most anti-Western elements inside the Tehran hierarchy, in effect was saying that the hostages were effective human shields against Israeli or American attack.

"The release of the hostages was a mistake which in fact made Muslims vulnerable against their enemies," Salam said in an article carried by the Islamic Republic News Agency.

It said that Israel assassinated Musawi "as dictated by the United States," adding in a clear reference to hostage-taking that: "Muslims should once again demonstrate that such acts will not go unanswered, and perhaps the next response will be resorting to the successful tactics of the past."

In a separate dispatch, the state-run news agency IRNA said "the premature release of the hostages" had given "somewhat larger elbow room to the Zionists."

"Obviously both the Zionists as well as their supporters will soon have to suffer from the outcome of their plot against militant Muslims in Lebanon," it said without elaborating.

Presley commemorative stamp will be chosen by public vote

Robert Macy
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Will it be the teen-age idol or the aging legend? Enough time has passed to honor Elvis Presley with a stamp, but the Postal Service hasn't decided which visage is apt.

Young or old? The American public will be the final arbiter.

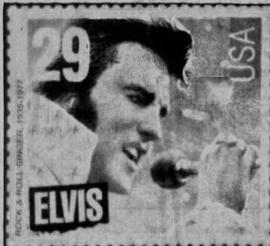

The Postal Service unveiled two stamp designs Monday, one showing the rock singer when he first hit it big, the other the more mature Elvis late in his career. Presley died in 1977 at age 42.

The two stamp finalists were selected from more than 50 pieces of artwork, said Postmaster General Anthony Frank. The winner will be the first in a series of American music giants expected to be printed over several years.

Five million ballot cards will be distributed to the public in early April, and voting will take place from April 4 to April 26, Frank said. The winning stamp, expected to be issued in 1993, will be announced in May, probably at the Presley's Graceland estate in Memphis, Tenn.

The ballot cards must be mailed with the appropriate postage, Frank said, adding, "This lets the American public become involved in a very unique way." Actor Milton Berle and actress Barbara Eden assisted Frank at the unveiling of the stamp designs at the Las Vegas Hilton. Berle gave Presley his television debut and Eden starred in many movies with him.

Frank said he has been considering a Presley stamp since he became postmaster general four years ago.

... or the aging legend?

Interest in an Elvis stamp has been enormous, Frank said, and he joked that continued reports of Elvis sightings and rumors that he is still alive have delayed the issuance of the stamp. A person must be dead 10 years before a stamp can be issued in his or her likeness, he said.

Presley was a natural to inaugurate the stamp series, which will start with rock 'n' roll and expand to other music, Frank said.

"He broke new ground," Frank said. "The American people have deep feelings for him."

Memorial services for O'Hara set

IOWA CITY — Memorial services for Iowa assistant football coach John O'Hara, who died of a heart attack Saturday, are scheduled for Wednesday at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Iowa City.

O'Hara, 48, died while on a pleasure cruise in the Caribbean with the rest of the football staff and fans. He had been the Hawkeyes' offensive line coach the past two years.

Services at St. Mary's are scheduled for 10 a.m. A mass also is scheduled at St. Mathew's Catholic Church in Elk City, Okla., at 10:30 a.m. on Friday, followed by burial at Calvary Cemetery.

The John B. O'Hara Memorial Fund has been established by the University of Iowa Foundation. The Offensive Linemen Meeting Room in the new football facility being planned will be named for O'Hara.

Falcons sign free agents

SUWANEE, Ga. — The Atlanta Falcons signed four free agents Monday, including Dave Zawatson, a former second-team all-American offensive lineman at California.

Zawatson played in four games for Chicago after the Bears made him a second-round draft pick in 1989. He signed with the New York Jets in 1990 and saw action in all 16 games. He was released by the Jets last summer, but was picked up by Miami and played there, before being released at season's end.

McMullen rented the stadium for the convention, scheduled for Aug. 17-20, but the necessary preparation time forced the Astros to be scheduled for an unprecedented 28-day, 26-game road trip.

"Looking back, I wish I had told them to go to hell," McMullen said. "Why not? All the agony I was put through — the adverse criticism, got arbitrated. I got criticized by everybody in the league, and it was all instigated by the press in Houston."

NCAA not dealing

STILLWATER, Okla. — A published report says the NCAA has rejected Oklahoma State's offer not to wrestle for team points at NCAA and Big Eight tournaments in return for leniency in the NCAA's investigation of its program.

An Oklahoma State athletic department spokesman, however, said Monday no decision has been made on the university's offer.

Lefebvre names three starters, other spots open

Associated Press

MESA, Ariz. — It wasn't difficult for Cubs manager Jim Lefebvre to come up with the first three-fifths of his starting rotation. It gets a little trickier with the fourth and fifth spots, though.

Lefebvre will start with right-hander Greg Maddux, left-hander Danny Jackson and righty Mike Morgan, who was acquired in the off-season as a free agent.

"I like Jackson second because I like having the lefty between Maddux and Morgan," Lefebvre said. "After that, the other two spots are open."

Lefebvre said Shawn Boskie has to be considered for a spot on the team and cannot be ruled out as a candidate for the rotation.

"We still need a fourth and fifth starter. Those spots are still open," Lefebvre said. "(Pitching coach) Billy Connors says Boskie may be the sleeper of the whole camp."

Frank Castillo is coming off a strong rookie performance and will get a long look, the manager said. Among the other candidates are rookie Turk Wendell and veterans Jamie Moyer and Jeff Robinson.

Clemens a no-show

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — The Boston Red Sox started spring training workouts Monday with pitching ace Roger Clemens a no-show and word that first baseman Carlos Quintana had broken his arm in an automobile accident in Venezuela.

With word only trickling in on Quintana, and the whereabouts of Clemens a mystery through much of the day, the Red Sox were loathe to discuss the baseball end of things.

"We just hope everybody's OK. That's my first concern," said new manager Butch Hobson.

Quintana, injured while rushing two brothers to a hospital after they were shot at a party, underwent surgery on his left arm for a broken humerus, the bone which extends from the shoulder to the elbow.

Wisconsin's Yoder to resign after season

Arthur L. Srb
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Steve Yoder, who has produced only one winning season in a decade as Wisconsin's basketball coach, said Monday he's quitting after this season because the school won't renew his contract.

Yoder has one year left on a contract that pays him a base of $89,500. The university, facing a budget deficit of $1.8 million, apparently will have to buy out the last year of the contract.

Yoder said he made his decision after athletic director Pat Richter told him he would not recommend extending the contract.

"I'm disappointed but it's his (Richter's) decision to make," a glassy-eyed Yoder said at a news conference.

"I submit my resignation now to facilitate the orderly transition of coaching staffs. He (Richter) told me he would like to change. I said I would cooperate in that transition."

Yoder, 52, will coach the Badgers for the final six games this season. His resignation is effective April 1. Wisconsin is 12-13, but only 3-9 in the Big Ten.

At Wisconsin, Yoder has a 127-160 record, including a 49-125 record against Big Ten teams since taking over in the 1982-83 season. Away from home, the Badgers are only 12-74 against league competition and seven of those road victories have come against Northwestern.

Under Yoder before this season, the Badgers had only one winning season and two at .500.

Steve Yoder

The Badgers did play in the National Invitation Tournament last season when they finished 15-15. They were also in the NIT after the 1988-89 season.

Hawks keep winning sans Wilkins

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Kevin Willis had 21 points and 12 rebounds before sitting out the fourth quarter as the Atlanta Hawks built an early 20-point lead and coasted to a 117-95 victory over the Denver Nuggets on Monday night.

The win put the Hawks one game over .500 for the first time since Jan. 2.

Atlanta took a 9-0 lead in the first three minutes as the Nuggets missed their first nine shots. The lead reached 39-19 less than a minute into the second period.

Denver made a 16-6 run that cut the lead to 66-55 early in the third quarter, but they came no closer. It was the fourth loss in a five-game road trip over the last 10 days for the Nuggets.

Marcus Liberty led the Nuggets with 21 points, including Denver's last nine in the game. Reggie Williams added 18, all in the first three quarters.

The Hawks led 91-64 at the end of three quarters and got their biggest lead of the night when Duane Ferrell converted a three-point play with 9:46 remaining for a 98-70 advantage.

Ferrell and Alexander Volkov each scored 17 points and Paul Graham had 13 points, four rebounds and career-highs of five steals and nine assists.

Willis' double-double was his 15th straight.

LA LECHERE, France — The spread-out Games are over. Let the compact Games begin.

The Albertville Olympics made it through 16 days without any of the logistical disasters that its far-flung venues had invited, but will anyone else want to tempt fate again?

The next two Winter Games — Lillehammer, Norway, in 1994, and Nagano, Japan, in 1998 — will be held over much smaller areas than the 650 square miles and 13 venues of Albertville.

International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch has raised the possibility of future Olympic Games where some events are held outside the host country.

Already, regions of Croatia, Austria and Italy are planning a joint bid for the 2002 Winter Games. But whether the IOC will ever agree to another Albertville-style Games remains a question mark.

"We can't say 'never again,'" said IOC spokeswoman Michele Verdier. "Everything depends on the type of candidate and the bids submitted to the IOC. If there is a team leading the bid at the level of competence we had for Albertville, I think yes it's possible."

Some competitors complained that there was no sense of Olympic camaraderie at the Albertville Games because the athletes were housed so far apart.

"We didn't have the impression of being in the Olympics," said skier Blanca Fernandez-Ochoa, who won a bronze medal for Spain in the women's slalom. "We missed the feeling of being in an Olympic village with athletes from all the margin in conference games. If it is a close game, Haskins likes his chances.

"The Gophers seem to find a way to win the close ballgames," he said.

Iowa is coming off a tough overtime loss to heated rival Illinois. Sophomore guard T.J. Wheeler scorched the nets for 22 points in the 77-72 win, hitting 6-9 from 3-point range.

Minnesota sends a youthful lineup onto the floor with freshman Voshon Leonard leading the team in both scoring and steals.

Davis said he hopes the young Gophers won't hurt the Hawkeyes' postseason chances.

"A year ago, we were told following the tournament selection thing that 8-10 was going to get Iowa in," Davis said. "How many Big Ten wins can we end up with is the big statistic we're looking at now."

"I think they talk about 'big wins,' you know, how many nationally-ranked teams have you beaten and then if you've beaten any of them on the road," Davis said of the NCAA selection committee.

Davis said the rash of losses by top ten teams shows the national balance between teams. He said his Hawkeyes would miss out if disciplines."

"It has not been easy to find the right Olympic feeling with a separated concept like this," said Arne Myhrvold, president of the Norwegian National Olympic Committee.

"I hope for a strong compact concept in Lillehammer and future Olympic Games. I think that's important for the Olympic movement."

Jean-Claude Killy, co-president of the Albertville organizing committee COJO, acknowledged the drawbacks of not having a single athletes' village.

"Yes, you lose a little bit in the togetherness of the Olympic spirit," he said.

Otherwise, the French organizers proclaimed the Games a resounding success and delighted in proving the skeptics wrong.

"I remember everything that I heard and read before these Games: endless traffic jams, chaos, canceled events," said Michel Barnier, the other COJO president. "But everything went well, and I am proud for our country."

The Games even exceeded the expectations of the IOC, which had sometimes wondered about the wisdom of its choice ever since selecting Albertville in 1986.

"Holding the Winter Olympics in the heart of the mountains, spread over 13 venues, was an enormous challenge," Samaranch said in his speech at Sunday's closing ceremonies. "It was not easy, but you succeeded. The Games will go down in the history of the Olympic movement as among the best ever."

Much of the success was due to the cooperation of the weather. Only one event, the women's Alpine super G, had to be put back one day due to snow.

Tarkanian and the NCAA

March 23, 1973 — Jerry Tarkanian becomes head coach at UNLV after five years at Long Beach State.

Aug. 25, 1977 — The NCAA announced a two-year probation for UNLV's basketball program for "questionable practices" from 1971-1975. The NCAA found instances of improper gifts to players, improper cash allowances and free airplane trips for players and family members. UNLV was prohibited from post-season competition and television during the 1977-78 and 1978-79 academic years. The NCAA also recommended that coach Jerry Tarkanian be severed from the athletic program during the probationary period.

Sept. 7, 1977 — UNLV president Dr. Donald Baepfer informed Tarkanian that he was suspended from his athletic duties.

Sept. 8, 1977 — Tarkanian filed a lawsuit against UNLV, Baepfer and the University of Nevada Board of Regents, and obtained a temporary restraining order prohibiting the university from imposing the suspension.

Sept. 26, 1977 — Clark County District Judge James Brennan issued a permanent injunction prohibiting UNLV from suspending Jerry Tarkanian.

1978 — The House of Representatives subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations conducted a series of hearings on the NCAA at the request of Nevada congressman James Santini.

May 17, 1979 — The Nevada Supreme Court reversed the decision by Judge Brennan.

July 12, 1979 — Tarkanian added the NCAA as defendant to the lawsuit.

June 11, 1984 — The trial began in the State Court of Nevada after a series of delays.

June 25, 1984 — Judge Paul Goldman ruled that the NCAA violated Tarkanian's due process rights in attempting to suspend him for two years.

June 26, 1984 — The NCAA appealed to the Nevada Supreme Court.

Jan. 14, 1985 — The NCAA and UNLV were ordered by Judge Brennan to pay $195,951 in attorney's fees that Tarkanian incurred in his eight-year battle.

Aug. 27, 1987 — The Nevada Supreme Court upheld Tarkanian.

Feb. 22, 1988 — The U.S. Supreme Court considered the NCAA's appeal.

Oct. 5, 1988 — Attorneys gave arguments before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Dec. 12, 1988 — The U.S. Supreme Court issued a ruling which upheld the NCAA's right to discipline its member schools, but also said the schools had to act with due process in any disciplinary proceedings. The ruling left intact Tarkanian's injunction against the suspension.

March 30, 1989 — Time magazine reports that convicted sports fixer Richard Perry gave $100 bills to UNLV players Moses Scurry and David Butler during a luncheon at Caesar's Palace. Scurry denies the report saying he only received $20.

July 20, 1990 — The NCAA banned UNLV from defending its national basketball championship.

Oct. 28, 1990 — UNLV offered the NCAA alternatives to its decision of July 20.

Nov. 29, 1990 — The NCAA and Tarkanian settled the battle with a compromise that allowed UNLV to defend its national basketball title. UNLV president Robert Maxson announced the university would accept a penalty offered by the NCAA that will ban the Runnin' Rebels from postseason play and live television in 1991-92.

Dec. 18, 1990 — The NCAA files a letter of inquiry alleging 22 infractions by the UNLV basketball program, many centering on the 1986 recruitment of Lloyd Daniels.

May 26, 1991 — The Las Vegas Review-Journal publishes photos of UNLV players David Butler, Anderson Hunt and Scurry playing basketball and lounging in a hot tub at the home of Richard Perry.

June 7, 1991 — Tarkanian announces that he will resign as basketball coach and assistant athletic director at the end of the 1991-92 season.

Feb. 23, 1992 — Tarkanian rescinds his resignation in the wake of continuing problems with his program. But school officials said the resignation is legal and binding, and will not be rescinded.

Tarkanian, UNLV disagree on future

Robert Mucy
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS—UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian, scarred by years of battling the NCAA, is now taking on his own administration as he enters his final week at the school he put on the college basketball map.

Tarkanian told a rally Sunday evening he was rescinding a resignation he submitted last June in the wake of continuing problems with his high-profile program.

But school officials said the resignation is legal and binding, and will not be rescinded.

UNLV president Robert Maxson, asked Monday if he might fire Tarkanian if the coach tried to stay, said that would not be necessary.

"There's no need to fire him," Maxson said. "There's not going to be any problem. Jerry made a commitment in good faith."

Asked if he thought Tarkanian would walk away after the final game of the season, against Utah State here March 3, Maxson replied, "Certainly."

Maxson said he had not talked with Tarkanian since Sunday's meeting.

"My position is that Jerry submitted a legally binding resignation and the university accepted it," Maxson said.

UNLV legal counsel Brad Booke produced a copy of a state personnel law which says that three days after an employee's resignation is accepted, the employee cannot revoke it without approval of the person accepting the resignation.

Don Klasic, legal counsel for the University of Nevada System, said Tarkanian "does not have a legal leg to stand on" in rescinding the resignation.

But attorneys for Tarkanian contend there was a side "civility" agreement that prevented either side from talking disparagingly about the other.

Tarkanian backers contend that agreement was breached by administration leaks about the coach's program.

Chuck Thompson, Tarkanian's longtime lawyer, said he was sending a letter to university officials notifying them the coach was rescinding the resignation.

"The agreement was obtained fraudulently and coercively, and since it has been obtained, it has been breached in many ways," Thompson said. "The university has nobody to blame but itself."

Tarkanian's wife, Lois, said Monday the rescinding of the resignation "was not meant to be a political power play."

"It was truly meant to prompt an effective evaluation of what really happened," Mrs. Tarkanian said. "He doesn't want this to turn into a political thing."

The flap over the resignation prompted Nevada regents Dr. Lonnie Hammargren and Shelley Berkley to suggest that the Board of Regents review the Tarkanian resignation and problems since that time.

Maxson said Monday he had received calls from some regents since the Tarkanian announcement.

"I know of no regent who sees anything that has changed," Maxson said.

Family members who accompanied Tarkanian to Sunday's meeting said they were unsure what his response on the resignation would be until he actually announced he was withdrawing it.

Tarkanian had been preparing to move out of his office at the 18,500-seat Thomas & Mack Center, which was built on the strength of his winning basketball program. Most trophies and plaques had been boxed up and many had been hauled off to storage when reports surfaced Feb. 13 that federal authorities were checking rumors of point shaving by his 1990-91 team.

The report incensed Tarkanian and he appeared near tears at a game that night between the Rebels and San Jose State.

Tarkanian and members of the team vehemently denied the reports.

Friends say that is when Tarkanian began seriously considering efforts by backers to get him to rescind the resignation.

He reportedly decided against rescinding the resignation, then reversed himself Sunday when reading reports of alleged efforts by the UNLV administration to leak damaging information on the coach to the media.

Jerry Tarkanian rescinded his resignation as men's basketball coach at UNLV but school officials say differently.

Tarkanian's announcement came at the end of a 2½-hour hand-clapping, hymn-singing rally at a church on the city's predominantly black west side. Most of this year's players and assistant coaches were in the audience.

Tarkanian, 61, is completing his 19th season with the Rebels, who are ranked No. 7 nationally with a 24-2 record.

"We got torn up from the inside," Tarkanian said, referring to rumors of a conspiracy by Maxson's administration to oust the coach. "We got dismantled from the inside. It's totally unbelievable."

"For me to coach next year is not the important issue. The important issue is to find out what happened."

Tarkanian said he wanted to find out why his program had been targeted by the school administration. The comment drew a sharp response from Maxson.

"I'm angry and I've had my fill of ridiculous charges against my administration by people who really don't care about this university and who will stoop to any level to avoid accepting responsibility for the messes made here which others are now trying to clean up," Maxson responded.

This year's team has been banned from television and postseason play as a final resolution of a 14-year battle between Tarkanian and the NCAA.

The school also faces 29 new NCAA infraction allegations.

In addition to the NCAA allegations, the school has been hammered with public relations problems including publication in May of a photograph showing three former Rebels with convicted sports fixer Richard Perry.

The 1990-91 squad was unbeaten and ranked No. 1 all season until losing to eventual national champion Duke 79-77 in the NCAA Tournament semifinals.

Tarkanian is the winningest coach in college basketball by percentage. His career record is 836-148, including 508-105 in 19 years at UNLV.

He has taken the Rebels to the Final Four four times, winning the national title in 1990.

Martinez brothers expected to pitch in big time for L.A.

Associated Press

VERO BEACH, Fla. — The Los Angeles Dodgers hope to put together their Martinez pitching combination Tuesday when right-hander Ramon Martinez takes part in his first spring workout.

Martinez, who won 17 games for the Dodgers in 1991, reported late to camp because of personal business in his native Dominican Republic.

He joins young brother Pedro, who won 18 games in the club's farm system last year, in camp after arriving in Florida late Monday.

Martinez, who turns 24 next month, was the top winner on the Dodger staff last season. Pedro, 20, is battling for a spot on the starting staff as well this season.

"It's a great thing to have both of them in camp," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said. "Pedro has been very impressive to me already. He's showed me some real good major-league equipment."

"Ramon has won 37 games for this ballclub the last two years. I'm looking for him to again be a key part of our pitching staff."

The elder Martinez, who is not eligible for salary arbitration, held out at the outset of spring training last season and wound up with a $480,000 salary.

He remains unsigned and the two sides are reportedly far apart on a contract for this season.

Former OU coach Switzer in hot water

Scott Rothschild
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Preliminary motions were heard Monday in a reporter's $30 million lawsuit against former Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer.

Jury selection in the trial before State District Judge Joe Hart is set to start Wednesday and take two days. The trial will last from three to six weeks.

Jack Taylor Jr., a former reporter for the Dallas Times Herald, has accused Switzer of libel, slander, and invasion of privacy stemming from accusations made by the former Sooners coach in his autobiography "Bootlegger's Boy."

Taylor, now a reporter with the Los Angeles Daily News, and his wife Myrna Lee Taylor, seek $5 million in damages, and a $25 million punitive award.

Other defendants in the case are Austin writer Edwin Allen "Bud" Shrake Jr., a co-author of the book, and book publisher William Morrow & Co. Inc.

In the book, Switzer links Taylor, who had written investigative stories on Switzer and the Sooners football team, with a scheme to plant drugs on an Oklahoma football player after the 1988 Orange Bowl.

Switzer links Taylor, who had written investigative stories on Switzer and the Sooners football team, with a scheme to plant drugs on an Oklahoma football player.

Taylor says the accusation is false, while Switzer's attorneys claim the facts are substantially true. They also say that Taylor is a public official, and therefore to prove he was libeled must show that Switzer knew the allegations were false but published them anyway.

The player, referred to as "Big Red" in the book, is Brad McBride, according to court documents. McBride was a reserve linebacker from Edmond on the Sooners from 1984 to 1987.

Attorneys on Monday argued whether McBride's mother, Donna Acree, should be allowed to testify after having failed to show up for appointments with both sides to give a sworn statement.

Hart said if Ms. Acree appears in Austin then attorneys for Taylor and Switzer must have a chance to question her before he would allow her to testify.

On another matter, Hart said he would tell the jury that an assistant U.S. attorney did not allow FBI agent Phil Shockey to answer questions concerning the allegation against Taylor.

Shockey said Taylor's name came up in the investigation of the alleged drug-planting scheme, according to Switzer.

And in another motion, Hart refused to make the book publisher say whether Switzer's brother, Don, who apparently wrote part of the book, was covered by the company's insurer.

Reporter Olson settles sexual harassment case

Ed Golden
Associated Press

BOSTON — Sportswriter Lisa Olson settled her sexual harassment lawsuit against the New England Patriots, team owner Victor Kiam and several current and former employees, her lawyer said Monday.

Olson had filed suit in April 1991, naming Kiam, former general manager Patrick Sullivan, former public relations director James Oldham, and three players — tight end Zeke Mowatt, wide receiver Michael Timpon and running back Robert Perryman.

Olson was not immediately available for comment about the settlement, terms of which were not divulged. But Michael Avery, her attorney, said the settlement was in the best interest of all parties.

Then a reporter with the Boston Herald, Olson alleged she was sexually harassed in a locker room at Foxboro Stadium on Sept. 17, 1990, as she waited to interview a player. She also claimed her civil rights were violated, and that the incident had caused emotional stress.

Olson, now working for an Australian newspaper operated by Herald owner Rupert Murdoch, had originally said she would not sue. But she changed her mind after Kiam told off-color jokes about her during a speaking engagement in Connecticut last January.

"We're delighted that the suit is settled," Avery said. "I know that Lisa is pleased to have the case settled."

"She never wanted to become the subject of a news story. So I'm sure she will want to get on with her career."

Avery said a trial "would have been lengthy, expensive, and would have required a painful reliving of the outrageous incident which gave rise to these claims."

MOVIE REVIEW

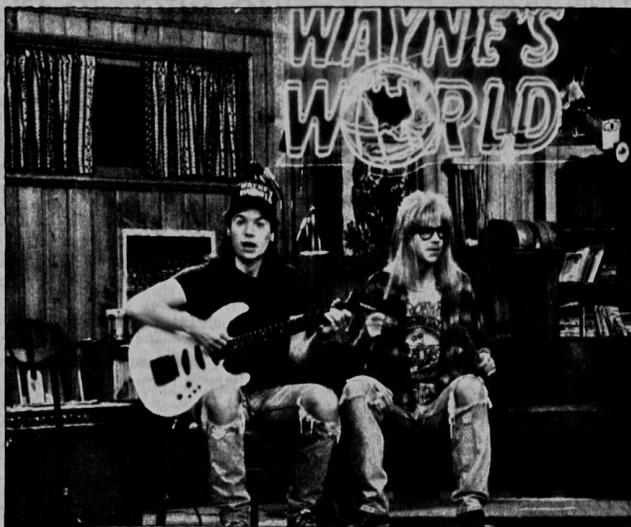

It's a wild, wild, wild new 'World'

Kevin Ruby
Daily Iowan

Serious, in-depth film analysis of "Wayne's World": A melee between Wayne and adversary Benjamin slowly develops as the two archetypes struggle over control of the newly revised program, as well as Cassandra's unbound devotion. Indeed, one can see in "Wayne's World" the social dialectic between rich and working class, as well as recurrent objectification of women's sexuality. A neat little thesis directed at the atrocities evident in so many other Hollywood films, "Wayne's World" serves as a call to arms for a new social order. Eisenstein would be proud.

NOT!!
Real review: It seems that our beloved cultural icons Wayne Campbell (Mike Myers) and his ever-neurotic sidekick Garth (Dana Carvey) have grown up on us while we weren't watching, and graduated from their "Saturday Night Live" frolic to mainstream American Cinema.

Like the "Bill and Ted" films (of which "Wayne's World" is a distant Great Lakes cousin), this film is not shooting for aesthetic brilliance or mass social awareness. Rather, it is a barrel of rib-jabbing catered specifically to the audience that the film itself satirizes. And we, as viewers, love it. We live in a Baturday of 10-second thrill-seekers, channel-flippers, bearers of simple wit and devotees of Alice Cooper. That's what makes "Wayne's World" atypical from most current film releases. It's all a big in-joke. Chew it up, spit it out, and go on to the next gob of media bubble gum.

Incidentally, the film has a plot. Wayne and Garth are, as usual, hosting their weekly show from Wayne's basement in Aurora, Ill. One day, their show is spotted by sleazy advertising executive Benjamin Oliver (Rob Lowe), who sees a way to make some easy dough off the show. Benjamin strikes a deal with the hapless metalheads, and before you know it — and much to their delight — Wayne and Garth find themselves in the middle of a babefest every weekend, and get paid for it as well.

Naturally, there is a love interest, or "central babe" that Wayne gets to drool over. Cassandra (Tina Carrere) fronts a band called the Crucial Taunt, wears lots and lots of spandex and lace, and basically gets to look like a rabbit in heat throughout the film. Naturally, Wayne is turned on.

I don't think it's possible to judge

"Wayne's World" beyond the simple goals that it sets for itself. Mike Myers and Dana Carvey are in top juvenile form. The film is a non-stop gagfest, throwing jabs at anything and everything. Parents, authority figures, and businesses are the typical bad guys, but there's also a lot of good-natured wit directed at the conglomeration of America, highlighted in a montage of subtle product placements.

A friend was surprised that I responded so favorably to "Wayne's World." Admittedly, it is not a high-caliber film. But, hey, in the last two weeks, I've seen films about Hitler's artistic ambitions, Andy Warhol, a Freudian love triangle, and a man attempting to cure cancer and save the rain forest at the same time. I needed a break. And I laughed out loud a lot. "Wayne's World" is a 90-minute vacation from responsibility. Party on, and pass the beer nuts.

RECORD REVIEWS

Two New York combos excel with hellish abandon

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

Unsane, Matador Records.
Cop Shoot Cop, White Noise, Big Cat Records.

Unsane and Cop Shoot Cop are among the best of a wave of new bands that puts noise and texture above melody and convention, and two of the few that get it right.

Both bands are pushing the envelope in their respective genres. Cop Shoot Cop is the best of the industrial movement and Unsane is head and shoulders above all other noise-rock bands.

Cop Shoot Cop is good enough, in fact, that it should not be lumped in with the general wretchedness that the "industrial" tag usually represents. Cop is leaps and bounds better than the entire Wax Trax! roster. Besides that, Cop actually plays instruments. It is industrial like Big Black and Ministry are industrial.

On the latest LP, White Noise, the standard line-up consists of two basses (low-end and high-end), sampling and drumming. An occasional guitar is thrown into the works, but it is rarely needed — the high-end bass almost always carries the melody. The drumming is as technically proficient as any drum machine, but spontaneous enough to transcend mechanical output. One is reminded of the drumming in the latter-day releases from Breaking Circus.

Lyrical, the band comes off like Orwell with a sarcastic sense of humor. "Corporate Prototop" is nothing more than a tongue-in-cheek radio spot lambasting consumer culture. Other standout tracks include the full-blown rock of "Feel Good" and the Wire-like rant, "Relief."

Unsane's self-titled LP is a masterpiece of noise rock. References are hard to draw and hardly do it justice, but a superficial judgment puts this somewhere along the Tar-Jesus Lizard-Big Black timeline. Actually, this sounds at times like all three going full blast simultaneously.

For a trio, these Bowery boys pack more punch than most, yet they always seem to bury one melody line deep under the layers of distorted guitars, telephone line vocals and manic drumming in each song.

It's not all noise, however. There are a few slower, more stripped-down offerings that exploit Unsane's musical prowess. "Cracked Up" is just such a song, focusing on drums and understated guitars — until it explodes in a wash of feedback and distortion at the end, that is.

Both of these releases have a future in films. A slasher flick could do wonders with either one. A guy could wander around cutting people up left and right, hearing only strains of Unsane in his head. Everyone else in the world, would be subjected to the Big Brother-with-an-attitude ranting of Cop Shoot Cop. "Escape from New York," indeed.

BANDS

Dana Tynan

Ribbit Rockers: Toad the Wet Sprocket will hop into Gabe's Oasis tonight with Marvin Etzioni.

'Toad' plagues Gabe's tonight

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

Their name doesn't exactly roll off of the tongue like, say, Winger, but Toad the Wet Sprocket isn't exactly your average rock band.

Their music can at the very least be called well-crafted, less so on Fear than on their best LP, Pale. They know when to throw something in and when to leave something out. They are part of the atmospheric janglefest branch of college rock, with all the pretension inherent in the title.

Pretension, from an alternative rock band? Yes, but what did you expect from a generation weaned on Michael Stipe and Bono — preening, crotch-grabbing glamour boys? Toad does occasionally take things to extremes. If Glen Phillips tried any harder to sound the unaffected vocalist, he would crumble into a pile of dust. Very thoughtful, introspective dust, but dust nonetheless.

"As people turn to gods of cruel design / is it that they fear the pain of death / or could it be they fear the joy of life?" Phillips sings in "Pray Your Gods." Come on. Why the soapbox speeches, Glen? Songs this well-constructed don't benefit from 'em — they only detract from the whole.

Luckily for Toad the songs are well-constructed, and at times downright beautiful. Sample "Walk on the Ocean," "Something to Say" or "All I Want" as proof that Toad is capable of writing wonderful pop songs.

Forgive them, they are young. In a few years they will be seasoned veterans in this music thing. For a glimpse of what they may be like in a few years, check out their opening act.

Marvin Etzioni is a veteran of country-spiced rockers Lone Justice. His recent solo outing, The Mandolin Man, is a stripped-down cousin of that band's work. Unlike Toad, Etzioni can get away with putting emphasis on the vocals and lyrics. He spins tales in which the music often plays a supporting role.

The music is an amalgamation of understated plucking and strumming, with a minimum of full-blown arrangements. Mandolins, of course, accordians, clarinets, cellos and violins all add texture and breadth to Etzioni's sparse songs.

Etzioni could be quite a name-dropper as well. Peter Case, Victoria Williams and Benmont Tench all lend a hand on the LP.

While Toad the Wet Sprocket will get the MTV generation hopping tonight, Marvin Etzioni has already seen that and moved to the next level. Go early and stay late for this one.

The hard-to-pronounce combination of Toad the Wet Sprocket and special guest Marvin Etzioni will be appearing tonight at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St.

A 'New Wave' of Destruction

Vladimir Jelisavcic
Daily Iowan

"Pierrot le fou" is Jean-Luc Godard's classic film about the chaotic odyssey of two lovers seeking freedom from bourgeois life in a frenzy of self-destruction. Godard is one of the French New Wave directors who redefined filmmaking in the early sixties by using literary themes and rapid changes of scenery. "Pierrot" runs today and tomorrow at the Bijou.

Jean Belmondo plays Ferdinand, a tormented writer who rejects his banal life as an advertising executive for an odyssey of self-destructive fulfillment. In a fit of rage he leaves a modish party where he can't stand the materialism of absurd conversations comparing the relative merits of Oldsmobiles to Alfa Romeos. He meets Marianne (played by the voluptuous Anna Karina), a wildly sensuous malcontent who, like Ferdinand, has cast aside her stifling middle-class life. Together they seek thrills in the underworld of gun-runners.

Reinventing love and the rules of life, Ferdinand and Marianne leave a trail of bodies and wrecked cars on their way to the Côte d'Azur. Marianne is the active force in the film. While Ferdinand is content to passively write about their life on the road, Marianne asserts her identity through violence. Godard's superimposition of Marianne's desire for liberation through destruction over Ferdinand's search for salvation through creative writing prevents this film from degenerating into just another version of Bonnie and Clyde.

Throughout the film, news reports of uprisings in Vietnam, Angola and the Congo disrupt the pastoral harmony of the Côte d'Azur. These constant references to Third World revolutions are a metaphor for Ferdinand and Marianne's own violent struggle for freedom.

"Pierrot le fou" is also a uniquely French blend of art and action. Marianne burns cars to the sound of Vivaldi. Ferdinand keeps a journal full of literary allusions to Balzac, Conrad and Faulkner. Even the gun-runners' apartment is stylish. Picasso postcards share the walls with posters of Third World revolutionaries like Idi Amin.

Godard's cinematography is like the abbreviated brush strokes of an impressionist painter. He uses both jump cuts and long takes to create a swirling mosaic of color and movement. This visual confusion resolves itself by leaving a distinct impression of excitement and desperation.

However, this is not a film for passive audiences. Godard presents only the bare outline of a plot. This makes the viewer go through the process of reconstructing a cohesive story from fragmentary images. His technique draws the audience into what is ultimately a satisfying and realistic film. The final scene attests to Godard's skill by powerfully implying a spectacular conclusion.

The real tragedy of "Pierrot" is existential. Ferdinand and Marianne were trapped from the beginning. They could not avoid destruction. Their only choice was either to perish in the ambivalent world of the repressed bourgeoisie, or to assert the experience of living for a brief moment, only to have it come to a violent end.

ART REVIEW

Fired up over clay at UI Art Museum

A blistering ceramics exhibition lights a fire under the University of Iowa Art Museum this month.

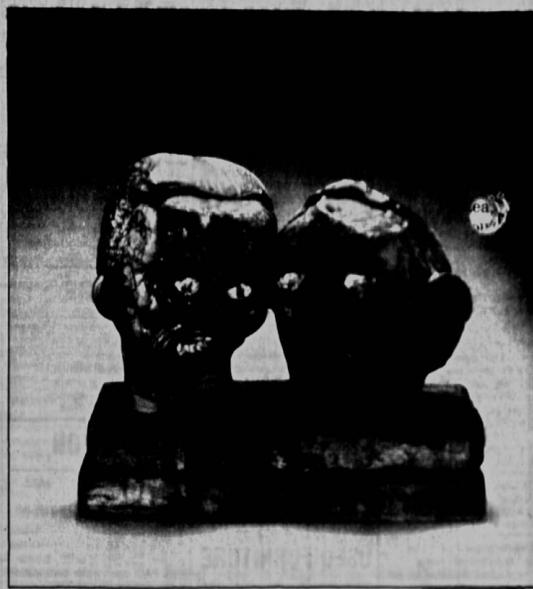

Andy Barber
Daily Iowan

"American Woodfire" explores the colorful heritage of clayware and the progress achieved in contemporary ceramics.

Currently on display at the UI Museum of Art, the exhibit offers a slice of the ceramic experience in North America.

An anterior room houses an interesting historical review of kiln construction and ceramic techniques. Though not essential in experiencing the works displayed, an exploration of method, past and present, benefits the viewer in appreciating these ceramic works born of fire and earth.

Influenced by the generous contributions of collector Joan Manheimer, the exhibit features conceptual American works which maintain the integrity of woodfiring. These beautiful, surreal pieces, at times disturbing yet always fascinating, share an incredible diversity attainable through the ceramic medium.

A delightful spectrum of warm tones and earthen colors achieved through organic glazes enhance many of the ceramics. With a subtle yet effective mood, there is a successful collaboration between the artist and clay.

As a flexible three-dimensional medium, form becomes a critical aspect of ceramics. The exhibit succeeds in exploring this characteristic, offering a tantalizing variety of form inscribed with the hand and spirit of the creator.

With 57 different American artists offering an equal number of works, there is a host of ceramics with something to offer all audiences.

Barbara Diduk's puzzling cylinders contrast the form and design of Mark Hewitt's giant vase inspired by the art of antiquity. Likewise, Rob Barnard's witty wets sets off the flip side to Jeff Schlanger's powerful, disruptive busts.

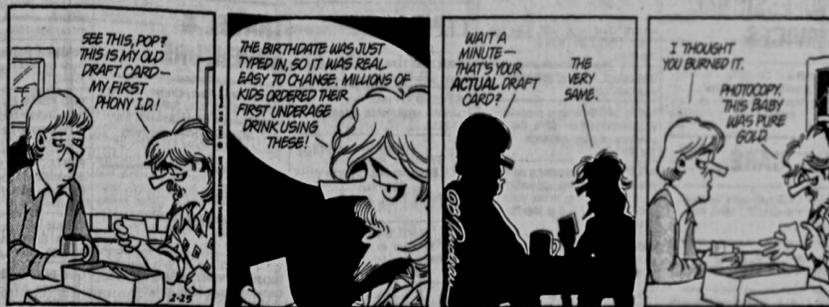

A melding of the ancient past and modern world is presented in this juried and invitational exhibition of contemporary woodfired ceramics. The UI Museum of Art will feature "American Woodfire '91" from charge through March 1. The museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.
