Woman sues state of Iowa for husband's death

An Illinois woman is suing the state of Iowa, claiming her husband's death was due to negligence on the part of two UI Hospitals and Clinics doctors.

Julie M. McCammond of Rockford, Ill., as executor of Joseph M. McCammond's estate, filed the suit Thursday in Johnson County District Court.

Joseph McCammond died Oct. 5, 1991, following radical radiation treatment for a brain tumor that was found to be benign after the treatment was rendered. The suit claims that Joseph McCammond died as a result of the treatment.

The suit claims that Drs. Gary L. Baumbach and Eric L. Reimund, as agents of the state, were negligent in diagnosing the tumor as malignant and in administering the treatment.

United Way president resigns, apologizes for 'lack of sensitivity'

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — William Aramony resigned Thursday as president of United Way of America and apologized for a "lack of sensitivity" that led to complaints of extravagant spending and demands by local units for his removal.

Aramony, who headed the nation's largest charity for 22 years, announced his decision in a teleconference with local leaders of United Way campaigns across the country. Officials said he had submitted his resignation Wednesday but was asked to stay while a successor is sought.

Aramony, 64, was due to retire in July 1993.

Rawlings addresses state of UI research

Estela Villanueva
Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings met with the UI Research Council Thursday to share ideas and concerns regarding the UI research enterprise, such as the perception of research at the state and federal level and bridge funding.

Rawlings said Thursday's meeting was very timely since he will be traveling to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology today to discuss the future of research institutions with eight other university presidents and the president of the National Science Foundation.

The forum will develop a national agenda, with main issues including science fraud, indirect cost, private college price fixing and budget cuts.

Rawlings told the council that at the national level, universities have been put on the defensive as part of a negative public agenda.

"The news in the last 18 months has not been that good. I feel that now is precisely the time to try to turn that around and talk a great deal more about the positive rather than the negative," he said, adding that researchers should continue to show the government what they can do for it rather than always requesting funds.

Educating the public on the mission of a research university is the best means to counteract public misconception, Rawlings said.

"On the state level, I think research understanding is extremely limited," he said. "Some people think that the time spent on research is time not spent with students."

The public needs to realize that research has an immediate spin-off in terms of improving instructors and providing opportunities for students, Rawlings said.

Speaking in terms of economic development that helps the state of Iowa is one way to help advance a public understanding, he said.

"Since economic development has dominated the political agenda in this state and others for the last five years, that's been an effective argument. But I don't like it when that's the only argument," Rawlings said. "When the only value of research is its immediate implications to the state, then I think you're missing a large part of why you're doing research."

He pointed out that some research is not funded by grants, and such research doesn't advance the economy.

Overall, Rawlings felt positive about the UI's research record. "We have a strong research culture

DRUG SUMMIT

Presidents renew vow to combat trafficking

Rita Beamish
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — President Bush and six Latin American leaders concluded a drug summit Thursday with renewed pledges to combat narcotics, but Bush cautioned that "at a time of rather sparse resources" the United States could not give its neighbors all the help they requested.

"These are not easy times for the United States," Bush said at a news conference at the close of the one-day meeting.

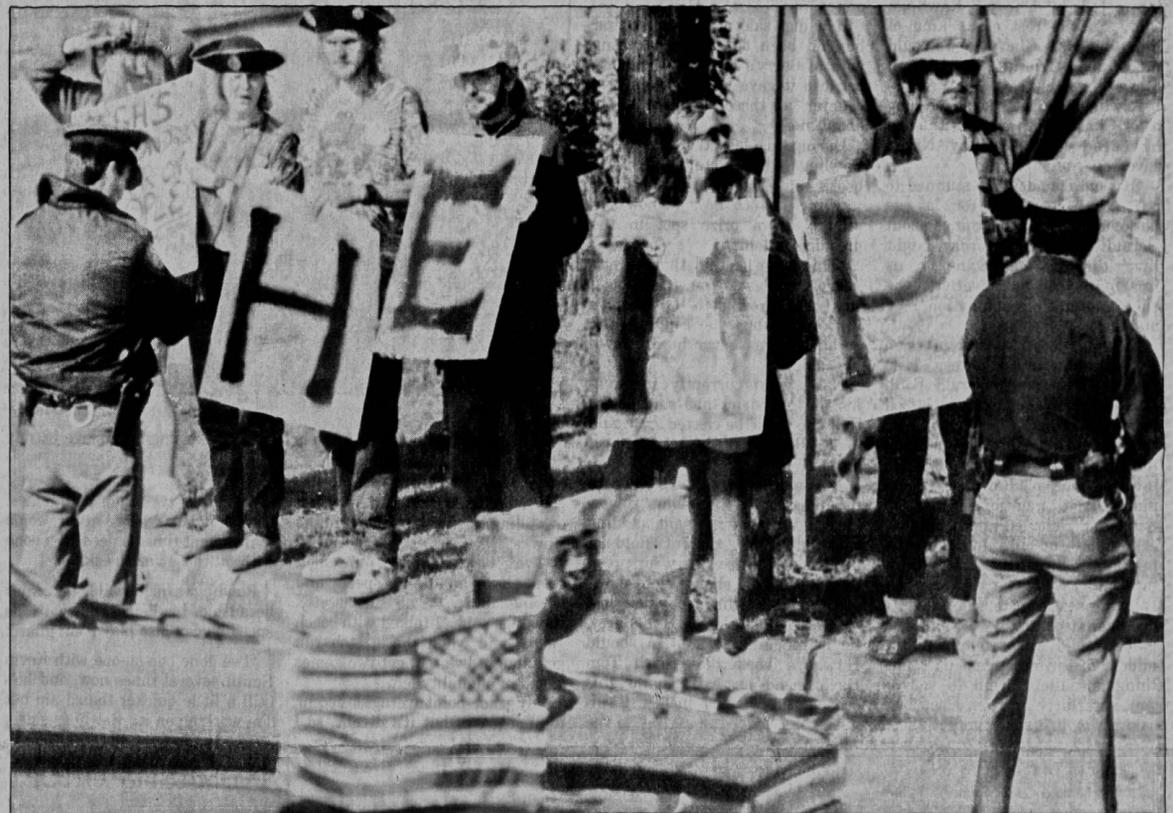

Bush called drug trafficking "a new kind of transnational enemy."

"Make no mistake," the president said. "Defeat the traffickers, we will."

He said there had been significant progress during the past two years, saying drug use among young people in the United States was down by 60 percent.

Bush said he and the other leaders had discussed improving efforts to halt shipments of drugs from Latin America to the United States and development of alternative crops to give coca growers an economic basis for moving away from drugs.

"Farmers who once grew coca in Bolivia are exporting pineapples and bananas," said Bush. "Peru's economy is beginning to grow again. And the Andean states will expand trade with the United States under this new Andean Trade Preference Initiative that I signed into law last December."

But when a reporter from Latin America asked the U.S. president if he was prepared to increase assistance, Bush replied, "The responsibility of the president of the United States is first to the people of the United States."

Bush was joined at the summit by Presidents Cesar Gaviria of Colombia, Alberto Fujimori of Peru, Jaime Paz Zamora of Bolivia, Carlos Salinas de Gortari of Mexico, Rodrigo Borja of Ecuador and Foreign Minister Armando Duran of Venezuela.

Bush said he had "a very frank discussion" with Fujimori about his request for more U.S. aid.

Rodolpho-Sioson gains strength in upper arms

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

Approximately four months after the Nov. 1 shootings that left UI student Miya Rodolpho-Sioson paralyzed, she has gained a little movement in her upper arms and shoulders and is continuing to work on strengthening her muscles.

Currently a wheelchair is being made for her that she can operate by breathing in and out of a tube, and she is also taking a class called "Community Re-entry."

"We've been calling the airports and restaurants to see what kind of access they have for wheelchairs," Rodolpho-Sioson said. "There are a lot of places that say they are chair accessible, but we find out that there is a step, or the entry is too narrow, or the bathroom is too small."

Rodolpho-Sioson is going through physical and occupational therapy.

"In physical therapy I'm working on my range of motion. I work on stretching my arms and legs and strengthening my muscles," she said. "For occupational therapy I'm dealing with adaptive equipment. Since I can't use my arms I use mouth sticks to turn a page or do some writing or to use a typewriter. There's a lot of overlap between the two therapies."

Rodolpho-Sioson will be released from the rehabilitation institute next month and will return to Iowa City.

"I'm now looking for an accessible apartment and I will work on getting a job," she said. "I need to go through more school to be able to do something that I'll really enjoy, but right now I'm looking for something to tide me over.

"The main reason I'm coming back to Iowa City is because of the great amount of community support that

IC attorneys late in asking legislators for law review

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

Two Iowa City lawyers involved in the controversy in the last several weeks surrounding the Iowa City Domestic Violence Intervention Project asked state lawmakers to review child abduction laws, but were too late in making their request.

Lawyers Daniel Bray and Lori Klockau wrote a letter dated Feb. 24 to area legislatures asking for changes in the law, including mandatory reporting of suspicion of an abducted child, state licensing of domestic violence shelters and making it illegal to assist an individual in child abduction where there is a court custody order or pending criminal charge.

It is too late in this year's legislative session to introduce new bills.

The deadline for personally sponsored bills was two weeks ago and committee bills must be written already.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said she would be willing to hear more about the issue but she did not think the one incident requires a "massive change" at this time.

"We need to see other cases and what's happening in other cities," she said. "Because one woman has been accused of something, we wouldn't change our laws for that."

Rep. Mary Neuhauser, D-Iowa City, said although it is too late to enact legislation she would welcome further study of both sides of the issue.

"If children are being abducted, we must find a solution," she said. "But we have to be careful. The

More funding requested for simulator facility

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

The completion date for the UI driving simulator has been set back from 1996 to 1997, but funding for the $32 million facility is proceeding through the Legislature.

At the February meeting of the Iowa state Board of Regents, the board approved a request for $300,000 to improve technology transfer by taking simulator technology into the marketplace and provide for opportunities with local and national businesses.

The $300,000 is a request in addition to $272,000 slated for the simulator in Gov. Terry Branstad's January budget proposal. The $272,000 would be used to get the project started.

Branstad's spokesman Richard Vohs said the regents' staff has been informed that the Legislature will work with them as the appropriations process continues to try to achieve the $300,000 additional funding.

"I think the program has broad support. However, additional funding in any area is difficult this year," he said. "But we'll try to work on this request as it advances in the Legislature."

The final decision on funding for the simulator should be made at the end of the legislative session in April. Vohs said it is unlikely that decisions regarding appropriations will be made before then.

Rep. Mary Neuhauser, D-Iowa City, said she thought the funding was a good idea.

"We can throw money away on economic development that doesn't really benefit the state," she said. "We need to look less at quick-fix jobs that pay minimum wage and look at the long-range, real economic development."

Neuhauser said that development is best done by the "home-grown industry" created by technology transfer, which is what the $300,000 would be used for.

"The simulator means tremendous economic benefit," she said. "Money spent on it is money well invested."

However, Neuhauser said with the budget so tight, no more money than is "absolutely necessary" will be available.

UI President Hunter Rawlings also acknowledged it will be difficult to get the $300,000 passed by the Legislature and the governor since the budget process is already well along and the budget itself is

COLLEGE DAYS

He knew them when ... Rawlings shares memories

Ann Riley
Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings would have to have a few beers before he could tell you stories of what it was like to live next door to Chevy Chase in college.

Rawlings, who attended Haverford College in Pennsylvania, lived next door to Chase his freshman year.

"He was an absolute riot—a thrill a minute. He never stood still," Rawlings said of Chase. "He left after one year. I don't think the school was exciting enough for him. So it wasn't his fault, it was clearly Haverford's fault."

Chase was a barrel of laughs, Rawlings said, but that wasn't all.

"Besides being extremely funny, he was very appealing, and so Bryn Mawr women tended to be very interested in Chevy," Rawlings said. "So the rest of us kind of hung out with Chevy so we could meet good friends from Bryn Mawr."

Rawlings said it wasn't too long after Chase left Haverford that he appeared on "Saturday Night Live."

"His old friends were stunned to see Chevy Chase in front of the nation doing the same things about Gerald Ford on 'Saturday Night Live' that he was doing on us freshman year at Haverford," he said, "and in front of a national TV audience."

Rawlings does a Chase impression — "but only under duress. I do Chevy Chase doing Gerald Ford. The thumb up the mouth with food going everywhere."

Chase did a couple of skits making fun of Haverford — one of which involved one of Rawlings' roommates. "He mentioned him by name and ridiculed him in front of a national audience and generally had a good time with that," Rawlings said.

Living next door to Chase had its disadvantages, too.

"He would wake you up in the middle of the night and do something absolutely awful to you as you were lurching from sleep," he said. "You just never forget those moments in life."

Rawlings, a classics scholar and author, said his kids think "that the most important credential by far is that I knew Chevy Chase." But living next door to Chase is not his only claim to fame. Rawlings also attended school with Miami Herald columnist Dave Barry.

In his last visit to the UI campus, Barry reminded Rawlings of a very painful memory from his school days.

"He recalled for me that in a major battle for intramural football supremacy, our senior team, which I quarterbacked, was upset by his sophomore team," Rawlings said. "It was our only defeat that year. I had long since repressed that memory. And that jerk Dave Barry recalled the embarrassing moment of losing to a bunch of sophomores."

Rawlings said he was upset that he had been out of town during both of Barry's visits to Iowa City because it gave him no chance to counter "all these lies he is telling about me."

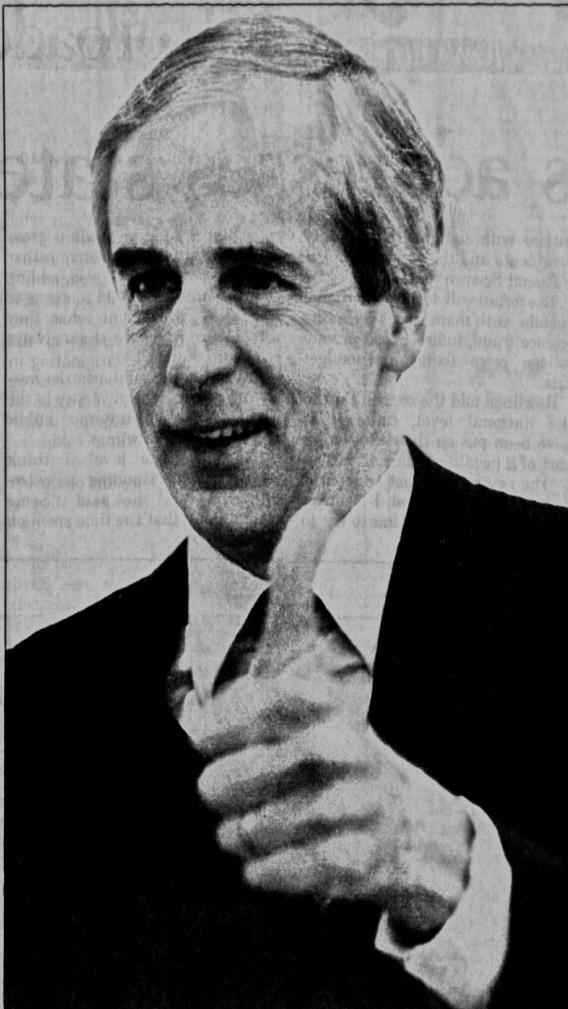

During his last trip Barry left Rawlings a little note in one of the books that Barry autographed for Rawlings, which he said now sits proudly in a prize spot in the president's home.

"This time he said that he had heard that I was the president of this very prestigious Midwestern university, but he couldn't tell because I was never here," Rawlings said.

Barry, who is currently campaigning for president, has said before that should he be elected, he would make Rawlings his secretary of state.

"I would just say that I would be proud to serve with a fellow Haverfordian," Rawlings said, adding that with the current field of candidates, "Dave Barry for president has a good chance right now."

Although Rawlings may have lost the football battle to Dave Barry, he is prepared to step in should Hawkeye basketball coach Tom Davis need an extra hand this season. At 6 feet 7 inches, Rawlings was a four-year starter on the Haverford team, and said he would be willing to offer his talents to the Hawks.

"I've got a great 30-foot jump shot, great ball handling, speed and leaping ability — all the assets," Rawlings said. "I talked with coach Davis, and when the stretch run gets tough, I've still got two games worth of eligibility left."

"My grade-point average is decent, it's not great, but it's decent, so I can eke out two more ball games. He has me on reserve in case some tournament time he needs someone with all those various skills."

Rawlings said he could play center because of his height, but with his speed he can also play point guard.

"I've gone one-on-one with Kevin Smith several times now, and he's still a little quicker than I am but I'm working on it," Rawlings said.

Russians offer Iowa farmers agribusiness

DES MOINES—Four members of the Russian parliament said Thursday they are not looking for charity during their trip to Iowa but are offering Iowans a chance to share in their economy's growth.

"We're not here to beg, not to ask for some temporary help or relief," said Valentin Agafonov of the Peoples Deputies of the Supreme Soviet of the Russian Federation.

Agafonov is chairman of the federation's committee on rural economic development, agriculture and food. He and three other federation members visited Iowa legislators at the Capitol on Thursday. They were scheduled to tour farm industries Friday.

"We are looking forward to understanding from your company representatives, starting with the president and ending up with any worker who is contributing to production," Agafonov told reporters through an interpreter at a news conference.

He said Russia wants to adopt features of the Iowa farm economy, including a delivery system to allow small farms to be profitable.

"Russia has every chance to become the country we are dreaming about," Agafonov said. "We don't make it any secret that we are facing tremendous difficulties at the moment."

State legislators said the visit can lay the groundwork for Iowa companies to sell seed, livestock and farm machinery to the Russians.

Greeks find splashy way to raise funds

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

Sitting in a hot tub isn't the most unpleasant way to raise money for a worthy cause, but it is a great way to reach out to the community and raise support.

When UI Phi Delta Theta member Greg Holliday was diagnosed with leukemia in the fall of 1989, his fraternity brothers began a philanthropy for him while he was in the hospital.

Leukemia occurs when white blood cells mutate and are over-produced, Holliday explained. Normal people have from 4,000 to 10,000 white blood cells and Holliday said he had over 30,000 when he was diagnosed.

He went into remission fairly quickly, he said, but the philanthropy is continuing in his honor.

The "Hot Tub-A-Thon" has raised about $7,700 in the past two years for the Leukemia Society of America. Holliday said the joint philanthropy with the Pi Beta Phi sorority started off well Wednesday and this year's donations are quickly adding up.

The hot-tubbing goes on for 72 hours, 24 hours a day, Holliday said. Members take hour or half-hour shifts so that there is a representative in the tub at all times.

To make donating easier, a cellular phone line is being used by people in the tub to take pledges. Holliday said the average donation has been $5 or $10 this year. If you want to make a pledge, call 330-0007. The philanthropy ends at noon on Saturday.

UI broadcasts another forum

Chris Pothoven
Daily Iowan

The UI will be one of over 100 nationwide downlink sites Sunday night for the second in a series of four teleconferences about the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, also known as the Earth Summit.

"Preparing for PrepCom IV" will be televised from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Levitt Auditorium of the Boyd Law Building. Originating in New York City, it will focus on specific issues to be addressed at the environmental summit, which will be held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, June 1-12.

The teleconference airs on the eve of Preparatory Committee Meeting IV, a monthlong session which begins March 2 in New York.

PrepCom IV is considered to be just as important as the Earth Summit itself. Approximately 1,500 government delegates and as many as 1,200 observers will attend the negotiation sessions, from which all agreements to be signed at the summit will originate.

"This could be the single most important gathering of people in history," said Maureen Morgan, a member of the Iowa Division of the United Nations Association, one of the groups sponsoring the teleconferences. "It could very well determine the viability of life on earth."

"Preparing for PrepCom IV" will focus on issues such as global warming negotiations, a critique of U.S. environmental policy and grassroots organizing. Speakers for the interactive forum include former President Jimmy Carter; Bella Abzug, co-chairwoman of the Women's Environmental and Development Organization; Roy Thompson, a non-governmental adviser to UNCED; Sam Harris, executive director of RESULTS; and Barbara Bramble, from the National Wildlife Federation.

Barbara Pyle, vice president of environmental policy for the Turner Broadcasting System, will moderate the event.

More than 15,000 people viewed the first teleconference, hosted by the UI, and organizers are expecting even more success with the second.

"The first teleconference gave the public the opportunity to come together and begin discussion on these issues," said Victor Arango, global education director at Iowa Division, United Nations Association headquarters in Iowa City. "This teleconference will focus on specific issues to be addressed at the summit."

He added that all the televised forums are attempts to empower the public, particularly young people, with a politically conscious voice that will guarantee environmental sustainability.

"Young people helped bring an end to the Vietnam War," said Arango. "They must now help end the war on the environment."

The other teleconferences are planned for April 26 and June 7.

Loewenberg will devote time to European politics

Susan Kreimer

In stepping down as dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, Gerhard Loewenberg plans to devote more time to the Central and Eastern European Parliamentary Project, which aims to assist newly established parliaments in the Baltic republics, Russia and Ukraine.

Loewenberg is the co-chairman of the project's 11-member international steering committee, which exercises budgetary and financial control over the program and shapes its elements.

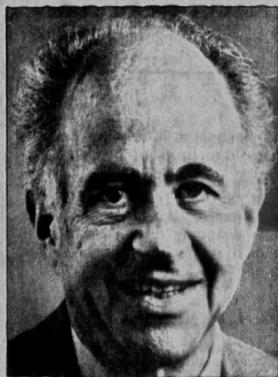

The project, which was established in July 1990, will be expanded this summer in both geographic scope and in the range of topics covered.

Steering committee members will organize seminars and workshops for members of parliaments in the Baltic republics, Russia and Ukraine, Loewenberg said.

"In the first phase of the project, we concentrated on questions of parliamentary procedure and organization. In the second phase, we will also cover substantive issues of public policy.

"Workshops will focus on how parliaments can deal with questions of economic, social and foreign policy that are on the political agendas of these countries," he said.

Loewenberg said he plans to participate in some seminars and workshops in the next two years and become more involved with overall planning for the project.

Funding for the project has been provided by a number of U.S. and European foundations, including the Ford Foundation, European Cultural Foundation and the Rockefeller Brothers Fund.

Legislators, voters share ideas

William Pepper
Daily Iowan

The Johnson County League of Women Voters will provide an opportunity for citizens to exchange concerns and ideas with legislators from the area in a question-and-answer forum on Saturday.

Senators Jean Lloyd-Jones and Richard Varn, and Representatives Minnette Doderer, Robert Dvorsky and Mary Neuhauser will be on hand to talk with community members in the second of three forums to be held this spring.

According to League member Suzanne Richerson, the first of this type of forum was held in January and a third will be held later in the spring as "an opportunity for the voters and legislators to get together."

Richerson said the League holds these forums several times each year while Congress is in session.

"This is one of the most important events the League sponsors," she said.

Richerson said the legislators feel the meeting is important because it "works both ways" in terms of letting the public share concerns with them, and allowing the legislators to hear the comments from the public.

She said the forum also gives the legislators a chance to explain why the state Legislature has or has not dealt with an issue, or how it is handling current problems being debated by the Legislature.

Richerson commented, however, that it is difficult for many of the invited legislators to guarantee they will always be able to participate, but that "they're always very good about coming."

"As a rule they're always invited, so unless something comes up, they do show up," she said.

The forum will be held from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. in the Iowa City Community School District Board Room, 509 South Dubuque St., and is free and open to the public. The forum will also be aired locally on public access television.

New teen labor bill seeks to restrict hours

Jon Yates
Daily Iowan

A bill currently being discussed in the Iowa Senate could limit the number of hours worked during the week by high-school students. The bill, which recently passed the Senate Education Committee, will go to a full Senate vote in a couple of weeks.

Jean Lloyd-Jones, state senator from Iowa City, said she will support the bill when it comes to a vote.

"I've wanted this to happen for quite some time," she said. "I've had a lot of friends who are teachers telling me that their students are sleepy or falling asleep in class because they worked late the night before."

The bill would require that students age 14-15 work no later than 7 p.m. and students age 16-17 no later than 9 p.m. In addition, the bill would restrict the number of hours that 14- and 15-year-old students work to 15 hours a week, and students age 16-17 could not work more than 20 hours a week.

Lloyd-Jones, who said she would be in favor of even stricter measures, said that she sees work by high-school students as largely unnecessary.

"Why do they need to work? To get a car," she said. "And why do they need a car? To get to work."

"High school should be a time for learning, not working. There will be plenty of time to work after they get through school."

Lloyd Jones said that her support for the bill is in part due to a study conducted by Iowa City West High School teacher Brooke Workman, which found that students who work more than 20 hours a week show a decline in the quality of their school work.

"I've talked to Brooke and I think what he's found has some validity," she said.

Sue Shepard, director of curriculum for the Iowa City School District, agreed that the bill would benefit students, but also said that there should be some exceptions to the bill.

"I think it's an excellent bill," she said. "There are a lot of youngsters who are over-extended and it affects them academically."

"The only possible problem I can see in the bill is that there are students who have to work for economic reasons. But if you start making exceptions it's hard to know where to draw the line."

At least one local employer also sees some shortcomings in the bill. Don Canfield, manager of the Hy-Vee store on First and Rochester avenues, said that while he agrees with the basic premise of the bill, he thinks it may be going too far.

"My only disagreement with the bill is that it makes no distinction between weekdays and weekends, school days and holidays," he said. "I think students should be able to work later on nights that they do not have school after."

Canfield, who employs over 60 high-school students, said that Hy-Vee already has a policy of not scheduling high-school students more than 25 hours a week while school is in session. In addition, Hy-Vee policy states that students must be off by 10 p.m. on weekdays when school is in session.

"I would hope that school work comes first for students who have jobs," Canfield said. "I think our policy is a good one."

Canfield also expressed some concern over the fact that the bill may unduly limit the number of hours students who need income for various reasons can work.

"I'm not altogether sure the bill will work to the benefit of everyone involved."

House passes tax-cut bill; Bush proposal defeated

Jim Luther
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House on Thursday approved a temporary election-year tax cut for 90 million wage earners that would be financed by permanently raising taxes on the richest 1 percent of Americans.

The final vote on the bill, written by Democratic and strongly opposed by President Bush, was 221-209. Bush's own plan, aimed at stimulating the economy and featuring a broad reduction in capital-gains taxes, was rejected on a near party-line vote of 264-166.

"The middle class has been waiting for Republican promises to trickle down for the last 10 years, while the rich got richer, the poor got poorer and the middle class just got squeezed," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

But Rep. Mickey Edwards of Oklahoma, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, countered that the Democratic bill was designed not to benefit the economy but to "tax the rich, bust the budget, raise the deficit and beat the president."

Bush, in San Antonio, Texas, for a hemispheric drug summit, called the House action "terrible . . . political." He added, "I think the Senate will turn it around."

The Democratic substitute for the Bush bill was accepted on a 221-210 vote before the final roll call was taken. Forty-six Democrats voted with the Republicans in both cases.

The legislation now goes to the Senate Finance Committee, which next week begins writing what likely will be a similar version — including a tax increase on the well-to-do. As a result, Republicans insist, there is no chance it will become law because Bush will veto it.

"The Democratic leaders know there is not a prayer — none — of their bill being signed into law," said Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the Republican whip.

He and other opponents ridiculed the maximum $400-a-year tax cut that wage earners would collect from the bill this year and next. But Rep. Steny Hoyer of Maryland, the Democratic caucus chairman, said that represented a 10 percent tax reduction for a $30,000-a-year family.

"Are we so into being rich that 10 percent of a person's taxes is something to sneeze at?" he asked.

The centerpiece of the Democratic bill is a 20 percent credit for Social Security and Medicare taxes paid this year and next. About 80 percent of all workers would get the maximum credit of $200, or $400 for a couple.

What raised Republican ire was the method of paying for that cut. The bill would boost the 31 percent maximum tax rate to 35 percent, which would affect the estimated 1 million people with incomes above $105,000 for singles and $185,000 for couples. In addition, about 60,000 people with incomes over $1 million a year would face a new surtax of up to 10 percent.

The Democratic bill includes a capital-gains reduction targeted on investors in small business and a provision designed to prevent taxation of gains attributed solely to inflation. But the changes fall considerably short of Bush's proposal, which would exempt from taxation 45 percent of profit from the sale of investments held for more than three years.

The House-passed bill also offers incentives for businesses to step up investment and provides specific tax relief for real estate. It would permit penalty-free withdrawals from Individual Retirement Accounts to help pay medical or education expenses or to buy a home. But it contains nothing like the $5,000 credit that Bush proposed for some home buyers.

The bill would cut taxes by $85.4 billion through 1997 and raise other taxes by $93.5 billion. The extra money would be used to cut the budget deficit.

However, Republicans pointed out that the bill sets a trap for late 1993, when the wage-earner credit will be about to expire. If Congress decides to keep it alive, lawmakers will have to look for other tax increases or spending cuts to continue it.

CAMPAIGN '92

Democrats start sharpening claws in anticipation of future contests

David Espo
Associated Press

Bill Clinton, Bob Kerrey and Paul Tsongas vied to attack one another Thursday in a Democratic presidential race growing testier by the day. The Bush campaign complained that Patrick Buchanan's television commercials were "disgusting lies."

"This isn't a love fest," said Kerrey. And with seven contests and 783 delegates on next Tuesday's Democratic ballots, there was no room for disagreement.

After weeks of an unusually mannerly campaign that did little to establish a front-runner, Kerrey derided Clinton's reasons for not serving in Vietnam as "baloney." Clinton said Tsongas's opposition to a middle-class tax cut was "cold-blooded."

And Tsongas went after both his rivals, noting they raised the gas taxes in their states but now were criticizing his call for a similar increase.

Clinton, looking for his first win of the primary season, also mended fences with Jesse Jackson after bitterly accusing him of "backstabbing" when he was told erroneously that Jackson had decided to back a Democratic rival. Clinton's comments were picked up by an open microphone and recorded without his knowledge.

The verbal fisticuffs — supplemented by increasingly sharp television ads — came as the five major Democrats girded for next week's primaries in Maryland, Georgia, Colorado and Utah, and caucuses in three other states.

The 783 delegates at stake next week and another 1,287 on March 10 are more than enough to propel one candidate along the path to nomination and doom others to oblivion.

Buchanan, looking to upset Bush in next week's Georgia primary, began airing commercials critical of an IRS ruling that he says would track donations to churches. Another commercial accuses the National Endowment for the Arts of funding "pornographic and blasphemous art too shocking to show," and said "Bush continued to fund" it after people objected.

Bush campaign spokeswoman Torie Clark termed the commercials "disgusting lies. . . . President Bush never has and never will interfere with religious freedom and the pornography one is garbage as well."

But Buchanan, mounting an unexpectedly strong conservative challenge, defended the commercials in a full day of campaigning in Georgia. "Mr. Bush's campaign started the hard ball on me," he said, referring to a commercial featuring retired Marine Corps commandant P.X. Kelley criticizing Buchanan's initial opposition to the war against Iraq.

Kerrey poked at Clinton's non-service in Vietnam for a second straight day and said the Arkansas governor couldn't win an election against the Republicans.

"Had he wanted to go and serve his country, he could have," said Kerrey, who lost part of his leg in Vietnam. He made his comments in Florida, site of a March 10 primary, but his remarks were also aimed at next-door Georgia — where Clinton leads in the polls — and the rest of the southern states voting over the next two weeks.

Clinton received a draft deferment while in college and agreed to join an officer's program. But he later changed his mind about ROTC and received a high lottery number that was never called for the draft.

Clinton had Tsongas in his sights as he sought support for next week's primary in Colorado, where polls show him narrowly trailing his rival. He called the former Massachusetts senator "a candidate of Wall Street" for his pro-business economic policies, noting that Tsongas earned $200,000 in corporate board fees last year and is a registered lobbyist in Washington.

"I am tired of what is cold-blooded being passed off as courage," Clinton said, referring to his rival's opposition to a middle-class tax cut.

Tsongas retorted with what seemed like a reference to the draft controversy: "Is Bill Clinton now our resident expert on courage?"

ACCIDENT

Investigators inspect damage to the lead engine on an Amtrak passenger train after it collided with a gasoline tanker truck Thursday morning 12 miles northeast of Denver.

Amtrak train, gas tanker collide

Associated Press

COMMERCE CITY, Colo. — An Amtrak train struck a gasoline tanker truck at a highway crossing this morning, igniting the nearly empty truck's remaining cargo and dragging it half a mile, officials said.

The truck driver was killed, and the engineer injured his back when he jumped from the train, but no one else was hurt, Adams County Fire District officials at the scene said.

The lead train engine was damaged by the collision and fire, but the train did not derail. Debris was scattered along the track.

Amtrak reported there were 310 passengers and a crew of 10 or 15 aboard the westbound train, which originated in Chicago. It was to be split up into three Amtrak trains once it reached Denver — the California Zephyr to Oakland, Calif., the Desert Wind to Los Angeles, and the Pioneer to Seattle.

The accident occurred around 8 a.m. near the Rocky Mountain Arsenal northwest of Denver.

The tanker truck, owned by R & R Oil Co. of Gillette, Wyo., reached the intersection at the same time as the Amtrak train, and the tanker exploded into a fireball upon collision, witnesses and authorities said. By an hour or so later, the fire was out.

The truck cab and tanker were crushed and scorched, and a trailer was separated from the rest of the rig by the force of the crash, witnesses said.

Amtrak spokesman Howard Robertson in Washington, said passengers would be kept on the train at the scene until debris was removed from the lead engine, which was scorched by the fire, and until investigators finished looking over the train.

Fire officials at the scene said the tanker had just completed a delivery and was nearly empty when the collision occurred, but the crash impact ignited fuel remaining in the tanks and gasoline it was carrying in its saddle tanks.

"The horn was blowing and the headlight was bright — we blow the horn on all grade crossings," Robertson said.

THE VATICAN

Holy solidarity

Many political observers chuckled when President Bush stated that the collapse of the Berlin Wall, the disintegration of the Eastern bloc and the more recent dissolution of the Soviet Union were a consequence of American foreign policy.

Sure, the strong military buildup begun by the Reagan administration truly hurt the Soviets' economy in their attempt to keep up with the fast pace of the arms race. But the disappearance of the Soviet Union seems to be more the outcome of internal conflicts (political, economic and social) that undermined the stability of the communist system.

The recent announcement that the Vatican and Washington "conspired" to keep the Solidarity union alive after martial law was declared in Poland in 1981 came as a surprise, though, mainly because of the image of sanctity the Vatican has long enjoyed. The Vatican is the home of the leader of the Roman Catholic Church, not some kind of think tank for espionage activities. Moreover, the Vatican ceased being a European military power after the unification of the Italian republics between 1860 and 1870.

But what many forget is that the Vatican is, after all, an independent state that has diplomatic representation in foreign capitals. John Paul II has also been the most influential pope since John XXIII. While other popes in the 20th century had just been moral authorities, more concerned with modernizing Catholicism, John Paul II has taken a major role as a world political figure, something unseen in the Vatican since Pius XII during World War II.

While becoming the holy father that has traveled the most in the history of the Vatican, he has consolidated the influence of the Roman Catholic Church all over the world, including unlikely places like China and Africa. Latin America seems to be the region where, in spite of the separation of church and state implemented by some nations, the Roman Catholic Church maintains its enormous power. The church remained a major catalyst during the civil war in El Salvador and it was the Vatican that mediated between Chile and Argentina in 1978, preventing a war over border disputes by a matter of hours.

That is why the Washington-Vatican connection to help the Polish solidarity movement must not be taken as a surprise. Quite the opposite, it was an entirely logical move on the Vatican's part. The Pope is Polish, after all, and he knew of the constant struggle between the mighty Polish Catholic Church and the Communist rulers in Warsaw, who merely obeyed orders from Moscow.

The Catholic Church has a greater intelligence capability than any other government. They may not have the American and Soviet satellite technology, but they profit from the advantage of having permanent access to the people, without causing suspicion. And it is this capacity which they used to keep Solidarity alive, even after martial law cut Polish communications with the outside world, after the union was banned and after 6,000 of its leaders were detained.

We all know the result of this alleged "conspiracy" to oust the Soviets from Poland. What is yet to be known is where else the arms of the Vatican have been reaching in its long battle with communism.

Tuition

To the Editor:

Christopher Bolt's editorial on Monday calling for a 50-100% tuition increase reflects the misinformation that has been spread throughout the state by politicians who are indifferent to the needs of university students and their families. The refusal of the state to continue its support of higher education has resulted in larger class sizes, fewer class sections and higher tuition. Students stop in the Student Association office every day to express their concerns about the rising costs of education. Many currently hold one or more jobs and some will not be able to attend the university next semester because their expenses cannot be covered by financial aid. While a small minority of the students on this campus could afford to pay (or have parents who could pay) a 50% or 100% tuition increase, most of the students cannot.

The reality of the situation is that students and their families are already paying for more than their share. Since 1981, tuition and fees have increased at more than twice the rate of state appropriations. Nationally, tuition rates at public universities are roughly one-quarter the cost of instruction. Iowa's tuition, taken as a percentage of tuition plus state appropriations, is 30% above the national average. When tuition at Iowa's public universities is taken as a percentage of the state's per capita income, Iowa universities rank 42 in tuition affordability. In other words, 41 states are able to keep their tuitions at a more affordable level than can schools in Iowa.

The UIA and United Students of Iowa are working to increase state appropriations and to hold down tuition. We, too, are very concerned about the quality of our education, but quality is not achieved at the expense of accessibility. Part of a university's mission is reaching out to first generation college students and the traditionally disenfranchised who otherwise would not have access to higher education.

Short Plays Festival

To the Editor:

I am writing to warn our community about the so-called "Iowa Festival of Short Plays" showing this Saturday at the Riverside Theatre. Citizens should be advised that the works being presented are written by students who often participate in other unregulated, late-night events such as "No Shame." We can assume, therefore, that the plays presented will be of a pornographic and possibly homoerotic nature. The posters and advertisements I have seen around town do not reflect this, but rather give an unwarranted impression of respectability. Clearly the participants are attempting to pull the wool over our eyes, as they have over the eyes of the Riverside Theatre and the Midwest Center for Developing Artists. Both of these are fine, worthy organizations, and I am surprised they have involved themselves in this morally deficient endeavor.

Spend Saturday night home, and give the $3 to charity.

Martin: Hair apparent to front-runner status

Dateline America—Close friends of Mitch Martin said privately today that while he has lost the last hair on the front of his head, most predicted it would happen sooner, and therefore it was a moral victory for the columnist.

In an emotional speech given right after having to clean out the shower drain trap for the third time this week, Martin spoke to the individual strands that are the front-line of any campaign.

"Guys, I know we're all feeling little down right now, but I hope none of us lose the capacity to believe. I know I won't."

Aides have said all along that Martin had conceded the front part of his head. Since he exceeded even his own expectations, a new sense of momentum has surged into the campaign.

"Mitch did better than expected," said Bob the Barber, chairman of Patriots for the Preservation of the American Follicle.

"The guy was born with a widow's peak. That's why we've always looked to the top part of his head and, even more so, to the sides and back as to where he's going to show his real strength," Fred Barnes said on "The McLaughlin Group" Sunday.

Indeed, pundits and analysts have noticed that school pictures and home movies reveal what Washington insiders call a "high forehead."

However, other experts have noticed that if you catch him on days he hasn't taken a shower yet, support in the top part is already noticeably thinning. Some, therefore, have publicly questioned whether a strong showing in the front can be translated into victory on top. Martin spent last weekend sequestered in his campaign headquarters with his inner circle of advisers. According to sources present at the meetings, speaking on condition of anonymity, they were there to map out a complex strategy of damage control in an attempt to hold onto forehead momentum.

Coming out of the meeting were the following decisions, which are likely to dominate the campaign in the crucial months ahead.

■ Hats: The Martin campaign has already acquired a small but growing stockpile of baseball caps. Staffers have asked him to wear them frequently, but be sure to do so "jauntily" to guard against the vitality issue.

■ Combing it over: This strategy was rejected as potentially damaging to the honesty issue. Martin's campaign is just recovering from damage incurred when a cheap market tabloid paid a Louisiana night club singer named "Lola" to publish her story. Lola told sordid tales of a 10-year liaison in cheap delta hotels where bottles of Helsinki formula flowed freely. Martin appeared on the show "Now It Can Be Told" to deny the charges, teary-eyed.

Despite the risks many aides pushed for the ploy anyway. The argument went that Martin could start combing it over slightly before he really had to. Then if he were caught, he could start uncombing it over, revealing that there was still some hair left. He would therefore be doing better than expected.

■ Shaving it all off: The Michael Jordan approach was also discussed and finally rejected. A corollary to this was to shave it all off except for a small parcel of hair the shape of South Dakota in the back of his head. The idea was the campaign would concede every area except a small insignificant spot, thus leaving the candidate "no track record of losing." The aim was to give the appearance of being able to win as soon as he felt like it. Martin himself remarked that the haircut would look "fresh," unfortunately the strategem had already been put in place by Bob Kerrey.

■ Bozo: Political veterans have warned the campaign to guard against a sense of desperation that often creeps in at this time. The perception is that Martin must win on top to remain viable. The campaign has tried to downplay this. "He doesn't need to be lush on top, he just needs to have a strong presence," Barber Bob said.

Indeed, the campaign staff has taken the highly unusual step of actually trimming their own numbers in the back and on the sides. This is to avoid the impression that the candidate was too much of a regional player, otherwise known as the Bozo the Clown effect.

Martin, struggling to keep his head viable, has even resorted to talking about the issue with actual words, saying his hair will not continue falling out. At VFW post 321 in Ann Arbor, Mich., he was defiant:

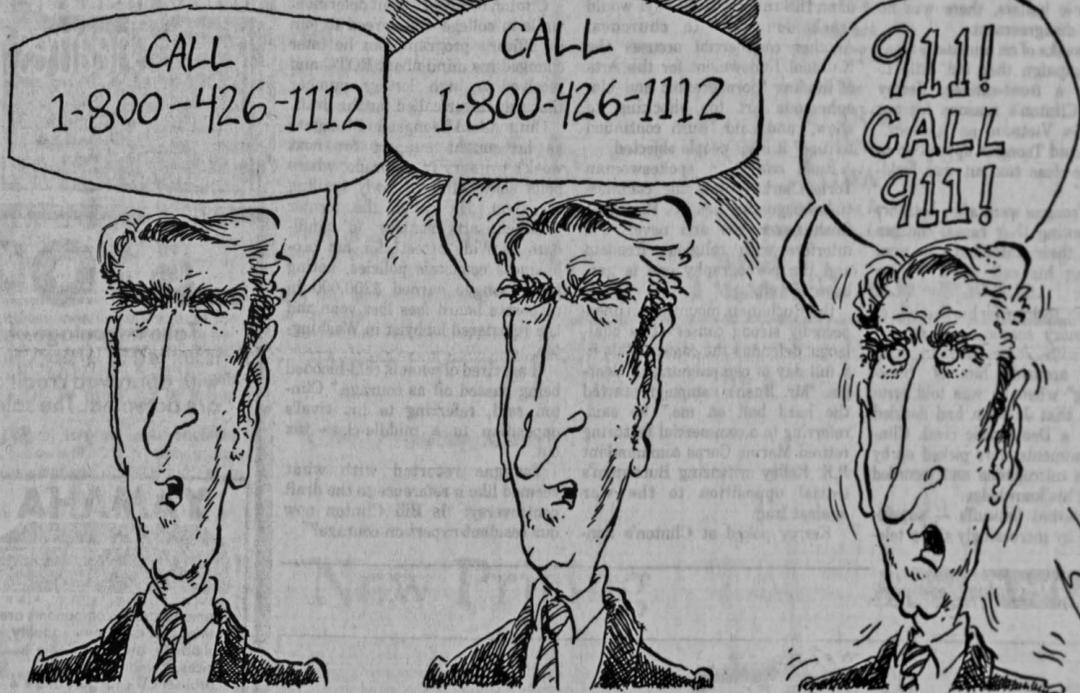

"People have said Mitch Martin is going to lose it all. Well, I learned one thing growing up the son of a coal-mining mother who immigrated to a poor but proud father, and that is George Herbert Walker Bush may have more than I do now, but that doesn't mean I'm not the guy who has the best chance to beat him in November."

Rumors, nonetheless, persist that Martin has already given up in 1992 and is already preparing for 1996 when he will start a new, more plausible campaign. Whether or not he will be able to grow a beard remains to be seen.

Mitch Martin's column appears Fridays on the Viewpoints page through no fault of our own.

GUEST OPINION

The economy, politics and the environment

This year's presidential race has largely ignored environmental issues, despite the immediate need for leadership and action. It was not until democratic presidential candidates strongly criticized Paul Tsongas' pro-nuclear stance on a recently televised debate that an environmental issue was even touched upon. Does this lack of attention imply that environmental issues are no longer important and thus can be ignored by us and our elected leaders? The answer is an unequivocal no. Although there is a growing belief that environmental issues are overhyped and are concocted by some "environmental," these realities indicate otherwise:

The protective ozone shield in heavily populated latitudes of the Northern Hemisphere is thinning twice as fast as scientists thought just a few years ago.

A minimum of 140 plant and animal species are condemned to extinction each day, many that could provide a cure for diseases.

Increasing atmospheric levels of heat-trapping carbon dioxide are now 26 percent higher than the preindustrial concentration.

The earth's surface was warmer in 1990 than in any year since record-keeping began in the mid-nineteenth century; six of the seven warmest years on record have occurred since 1980.

Forests are vanishing at a rate of some 17 million hectares per year, an area about half the size of Finland.

These are just a few of the social, environmental and human challenges stated in the 1992 Worldwatch Institute's "State of the World" annual report. Some might claim the Worldwatch Institute is a left-wing, anti-development, narrow environmentalist organization out to destroy the world. In reality however, not only has the "State of the World" been translated into 23 languages, but, in addition, it is now accorded semi-official status by national governments, U.N. agencies, and the international development community. An even stronger testimonial of the legitimacy accorded to "State of the World" is that over 1,300 U.S. university courses, including the UI, use the volume.

What is important is not to debate with individuals who have a myopic understanding of the human and environmental challenges we face, but instead to focus on the larger question: Why, despite the overwhelming need for immediate attention and action, have these issues been largely ignored by the media and politicians, especially during an election year?

While the media have given some attention to environmental issues, it has been sporadic, inconsistent and often superficial. What has been especially alarming is the lack of media focus this past year despite the increasing severity and amount of issues at hand. A recent example is the scanty news coverage of new findings about the ozone depletion over the Northern Hemisphere. Previous data had indicated only a 4 percent to 8 percent decrease in atmospheric ozone over the northern hemisphere in the past decade.

However, new research strongly implied that the ozone layer could decrease as much as 40 percent. Despite this powerful testimonial, the recent findings barely made it to the front pages of major papers, it was mentioned for only several seconds on national television, and only Time covered it in detail.

Despite the recent environmental news, the presidential candidates have failed to make an issue of it, but not because there has been a shortage of environmental issues. Here is a partial list of "national" environmental concerns: an immediate end of CFC production, the limiting of greenhouse gases, a sensible energy policy, protection of ecologically sensitive lands and the renewal of the Endangered Species and Clean Water Act. Yet these issues have not been adequately discussed. Why? The reason is quite simple and obvious: the economy. Whether it is college grads trying to find a job, an unemployed worker, or one that fears future layoffs, the economy is justifiably the No. 1 concern for most Americans. Consequently, the media, politicians, presidential candidates, and society have to a large degree focused primarily on "Jobs, Jobs, Jobs." Meanwhile, in the minds of many, saving the environment equates to the loss of jobs.

While many corporations have a facade of being environmentally friendly, they have worked quietly behind the scenes with labor unions, government officials (Quayle's Competitiveness Council), and other groups to convince them that further environmental regulation will cost them their jobs and that the environmental movement overall threatens their lifestyle. Consequently, even though Bush is highly vulnerable to criticism for his environmental record, other presidential hopefuls have chosen not to criticize his record because of the fallacy that saving the environment will cost even more jobs and further degrade the economy.

But if this were true, then how do we explain the economic success of Japan and many Western European countries that possess many of the same type of environmental regulations as the United States? Furthermore, countries that have extremely lax environmental standards, such as Brazil and Mexico, are not enjoying real economic prosperity that many American corporations and government officials wistfully believe that will happen again in the United States if we could somehow get rid of all those "pesky" environmental regulations.

While there is much more to this argument, it should suffice to say that saving the environment, and hence the human species, does not translate into a loss of jobs, economic downturn or a decrease in our lifestyle. We have already tried to blame the Japanese for our economic troubles. Let us not buy into the additional argument that saving the Earth is also responsible for our economic woes. If anything, continuing to ignore these ecological issues, we will only serve to exacerbate our economic condition in the long run. The sooner we realize and adopt a new definition of economic well-being based on the "radical" ideal that all human activity, including economic, is dependent and inexorably linked with a healthy environment, the quicker we will move toward a "healthier" and "sustainable" economy.

HOMELESS

New York mayoral committee favors treatment over shelters

Beth J. Harpaz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It was not for lack of trying, but after 10 years and $2 billion, New York City's efforts to help the homeless have been termed an utter failure.

The conclusion is no surprise to New Yorkers who encounter ragged people sleeping, panhandling, malingering and shivering in doorways, subways and cardboard-box shanties all over town. An estimated 50,000 people sleep on the streets.

The pronouncement of failure comes not from advocates for the homeless or fiscal critics, but from a commission appointed by Mayor David Dinkins himself.

"The current system must be seen as the failure it is and be restructured," declared the New York City Commission on the Homeless in an inch-thick report released last week.

The commission, headed by Andrew Cuomo, son of Gov. Mario Cuomo, told the city to get out of the shelter business and turn the task of helping homeless people over to private organizations that can do it better and cheaper. Andrew Cuomo heads HELP, a non-profit foundation to build temporary housing for the homeless.

After a 1981 court case forced the city to provide beds for all who asked, New York has housed thousands — right now about 23,000 each night.

Despite an annual cost of $18,000 per person, many get little more than a cot and a blanket in armories where drug abuse and violence are rampant. So an estimated 50,000 others prefer sleeping on the street, according to the Coalition for the Homeless.

The city also had built 26,700 units of permanent housing for the homeless since 1984

Teachers disgusted by new toys

Terry Kinney
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — A new line of toys with names such as Puke Shooter, Butt Kickers, Projectile Vomit and Chunk Blower has found a place in the schoolyard, but the alien creatures on wheels have a group of teachers up in arms.

"They're not just selling a toy, they're selling an attitude," said

Margaret Secker, a music teacher who with colleagues at Mann Elementary School in suburban Loveland are protesting Kenner Products' new "Savage Mondo Blit-zers" line of toy figures.

"I think it's outrageous. Everyone in America should be on the picket line."

Lighten up, says Kenner.

"These aren't human figures. We're not trying to influence kids to be violent," said Krickett Neumann, manager of public relations and promotion services for Cincinnati-based Kenner. "These are alien, fantasy characters ... just crazy, wacky figures on wheels."

She said Thursday the toys, which do not do what their names suggest, had generated about 20 complaints, most from Loveland teachers.

which has asserted itself on campus and has contributed to significant growth," he said.

This has been reflected in a strong growth curve which includes a large number of publications, grants and contracts, and high rankings of departments and professional schools at the UI.

Rawlings also discussed establishing more bridge funding that would aid researchers in tight financial times, as well as benefit young researchers.

"I think we have some of that here, but I don't think we have enough, and it's partly a function of the budget," he said. "I think we need to start making those funds available on a competitive basis."

Rawlings said he disagrees with the notions of a crisis in science research and a lack of funds coming from the federal government.

Compared to other institutions worldwide, the UI is in good shape, he said.

"I don't think it helps our cause to talk about crisis when in fact things are really pretty good. What we do have is a very competitive situation with more people applying for funding. This means the cutoffs are much higher and it is more difficult to get funding," Rawlings said.

"impossibly tight" this year.

"However, there is so much excitement surrounding that project that I think we do have a chance of having it funded," Rawlings said. "This is not crucial to starting the project, it's crucial to starting the project into the transfer arena."

Rawlings said he is meeting with representatives from the governor's office and the general assembly in the next week or so.

"I think there is a fair chance we will get it," he said. "It's very important to us — we want to get off to a fast start."

Edward Haug, director of the National Advanced Driving Simulator, said the UI proposed to provide $2 million in university-owned software and $3.25 million from the state toward building costs.

The UI is also negotiating a cooperative agreement with the federal government which should be completed in a month or two.

Several sponsors are already involved with the project, Haug said, but the UI wants to attract more.

"We've got a window of opportunity," he said. "We have the only research environment for ground driving simulation, and we have a window of opportunity to see simulation industry in Iowa, but if we wait too long, that industry will go elsewhere."

LEGISLATION

shelter has done good things and helped a lot of women. In any action we take, we have to preserve that."

Neuhauser said public hearings and analysis of the laws and experiences of other states regarding child abduction during the time until the next legislative session would be useful.

"It's an emotional subject," she said. "The issues raised are significant and nothing should be done hastily."

Klockau and Bray became involved in this issue through their representation of Barb Larpen, a former DVIP volunteer and client who wrote an affidavit saying the shelter knowingly harbored a woman wanted by federal authorities.

Klockau said although the primary goal was the safety of Larpen, who felt threatened by her involvement in the situation, another goal in the past weeks has been to address the issue of children abducted and hidden in the community.

"We need to separate women's issues and children's issues," she said. "I know they overlap and it's difficult. But we want to focus on the children's issue."

MOBILITY

I have received. People have visited me and sent me letters, the support has just been overwhelming. I also want to work more on the Central American Solidarity Committee," she said.

The community support for Rodolpho-Sioson has raised $117,452.20 through private donations, fund-raisers and benefits. The most recent fund-raiser was the Holiday Donation Can Drive in which 70 businesses participated, raising a total of $11,320.05.

Thursday morning the top five businesses that raised the most money were recognized by members of the Miya Rodolpho-Sioson General Assistance Fund.

The Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., raised the most money with a total of $1,087.15. Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., was second, raising $593.93; Shakey's Pizza and Buffet, Highway 6 and 218, was third, raising $510.85; Hardee's Restaurants were fourth, raising $434.94; and econofoods, 1987 Broadway St., was fifth, raising $423.76.

Jim and Holly Bell, owners of the Deadwood, were pleased with the amount their business raised for Rodolpho-Sioson.

"A lot of the donations were what would have been tips, but the employees didn't mind. The employees were very supportive, as well as Holly and I," Jim Bell said.

Brian Smith, manager of the downtown Hardee's, was also proud of the amount raised.

"We'll put this award up by the counter so that everyone can see how they helped out," he said.

In addition to the can drive, three other recently completed benefits for Rodolpho-Sioson took place.

A benefit concert, held Feb. 14 at the Union featuring Trip Shakespear with opening act Captain Barney, raised approximately $6,000.

"The Heritage Play," written and directed by Cary Rounds, was performed at Iowa City West High School Feb. 22, raising $80.56.

Thursday night a benefit performance organized and performed by the Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz, was held at Gabe's Oasis.

330 E. Washington St., with proceeds going to the Rodolpho-Sioson fund.

Upcoming events include a raffle scheduled to begin March 9. Businesses who would like to contribute prizes may call Consuelo Garcia at the Women's Resource and Action Center at 335-1486.

Garcia also said that she will be meeting with UI alumni to organize another fund-raiser.

Later in March, Rodolpho-Sioson will hold a brown bag lunch at the Women's Resource and Action Center with her friend Jackie Gharib, who recently returned from El Salvador.

"We're really looking forward to seeing Miya back in Iowa City," Garcia said.

The Central Committee for the Miya Rodolpho-Sioson General Assistance Fund will continue to work toward its goal of $500,000. Donations can be made to the Miya Rodolpho-Sioson General Assistance Fund at the Iowa State Bank, P.O. Box 1700, Iowa City, IA 52244.

Venezuela is new home for drug cartels

1 CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Lux money-laundering laws and a strategic location have made Venezuela a paradise for Sicilian and Colombian drug cartels.

More than 60 percent of the coca leaf used to make cocaine grows in Peru, half of it in the Upper Huallaga Valley — where the military controls seven airports and landing strips used for regular drug shipments.

Despite a crackdown in Colombia, its powerful Medellin and Cali drug cartels continue to supply most of the cocaine consumed in the United States, Europe and Japan. The cartels have diversified into the more profitable heroin trade, anti-narcotics officials say.

More than 500 tons of illicit drugs from Colombia pass through Venezuela annually, U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency officials say. Hundreds of millions of dollars in drug money are laundered each year by Sicilian organized crime bosses using Venezuela as a base.

French city bans cars from downtown

2 STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Strasbourg on Monday becomes the first major French city to ban automobiles from its central business district.

City officials hope the measure will reduce congestion and air pollution. But the local merchants' association, which opposed the ban, has predicted a 10-percent drop in sales.

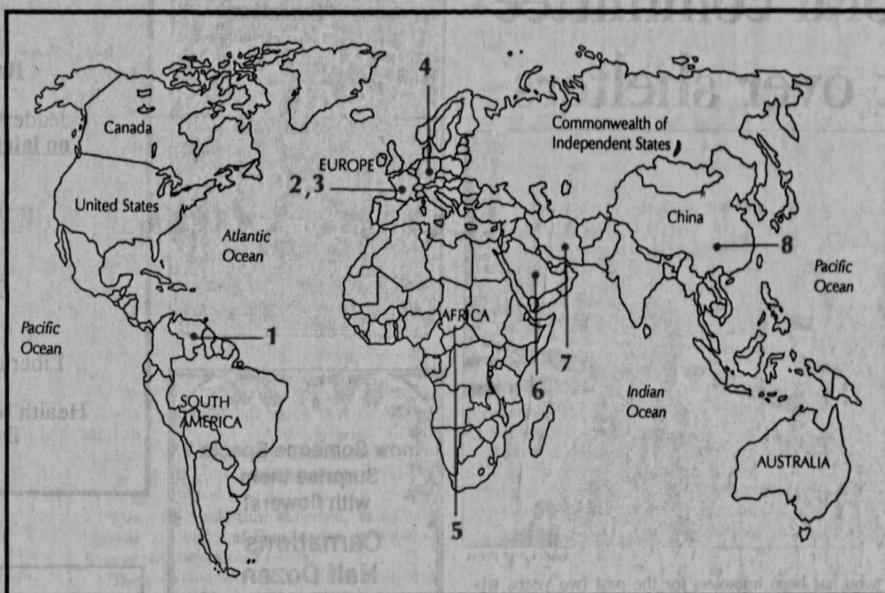

Motorists without special permits will be required to park their cars at the edge of the downtown area. Free shuttle-bus service will be provided into the city center, where streets will be open to pedestrians and bicyclists.

The city also plans to expand its public transport network, adding a tramway system within the next two or three years.

France lifts ban on night industrial work for women

3 PARIS (AP) — The French government has agreed to lift a nearly 4-decade-old ban on women working industrial jobs at night.

The government announcement on Wednesday was in line with a request from the International Labor Organization, which asked in 1990 that the ban be relaxed. The labor organization, which draws up conventions on labor standards, had adopted the ban in a 1948 convention that was ratified by France in 1954.

In July, the European Court of Justice said the ban conflicted with the principle of equal rights for both sexes.

According to labor union statistics, out of roughly 1-million nighttime workers classified as industrial laborers — mainly factory workers — only 28,000 are women. They obtained exemptions from the ban.

Car thieves: new threat from the East

4 BONN, Germany (AP) — Hey, wanna buy a Porsche? Low mileage. A real road-burner. Just the ticket for an East European entrepreneur in need of a Western status symbol.

Many eastern Europeans are eager to buy pricey cars, and they're getting their pick of tens of thousands — stolen from the streets of Germany. The vast criminal enterprise has sprung up with the fall of the Iron Curtain.

A record 39,000 unsolved missing-car cases are on Germany's 1991 police books, a staggering 66.7 percent increase over 1990. At least a third of the cars are believed to have disappeared to the East, mostly to neighboring Poland.

Rudolf Seiters, Germany's federal interior minister, says mobsters in Poland and Russia are the leaders of many car-theft rings.

African armies allegedly involved in elephant poaching

5 LONDON, England (AP) — The armies of South Africa and Zimbabwe are involved in the illegal smuggling of ivory and the poaching of endangered elephants, a conservation group charged Sunday.

The Environmental Investigation Agency, a private London-based organization, accused the governments of both countries of ignoring the military's involvement in the slaughter of elephants.

It expressed hope that the report would undermine attempts by South Africa and Zimbabwe to overturn the worldwide ban on ivory trading at a meeting in Japan on March 2.

Saudi Arabians want political changes

6 RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — For most Saudis, last year's gulf war was a distant rumble that few experienced directly.

But many now compare it to an earthquake that left the surface of this closed society intact, yet caused shock waves that still ripple across the kingdom.

Overall, long-placid Saudis are now willing to question the established order as never before. And the battle lines between ultraconservative religious groups and a more outward-looking technocrat class have sharpened dramatically.

Many attribute the shift to wartime press coverage. Everything that had been taboo — such as Saudi traditions or the military — was discussed freely for the first time.

The arrival of hundreds of thousands of non-Muslim troops galvanized the religious groups. And an unprecedented protest by 47 women who drove through Riyadh in November 1990 despite an Islamic-inspired ban on women driving raised further ire.

Iranian paper predicts renewed hostage-taking

7 NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The hard-line Iranian newspaper Salam today claimed the United States ordered Israel to kill Hezbollah leader Abbas Musawi, and said his assassination could lead to renewed kidnappings in Lebanon.

However, The Tehran Times, an Iranian newspaper believed to reflect the thinking of President Hashemi Rafsanjani of Iran, discouraged any return to the practice of seizing Western hostages.

Iran's official news agency, meanwhile, said the release of the last American and British hostages in Lebanon gave the Israelis more leeway to attack southern Lebanon.

Hezbollah was believed to be the umbrella group for Lebanese factions that took scores of foreign hostages beginning in 1984. The last American hostage, Terry Anderson, was freed in December, but two Germans are still held.

China will export former endangered species

8 BEIJING, China (AP) — China wants to export Manchurian tigers and Chinese alligators because they are no longer considered endangered species, according to news reports Tuesday.

At a meeting next month of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, China plans to ask that it be allowed to export the animals, the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

China's breeding of the tigers and alligators has been so successful that they "have virtually been written off the list of China's endangered species," the news agency said.

Xinhua said both animals are highly valued for use in medicine and paleontology research.

Women travel to Big Tens

The women's track team traveled to Columbus, Ohio Thursday. Competition begins today in French Field House starting at 8 a.m.
The Hawkeyes finished sixth last season and return a handful of letterwinners for this year. Jennifer Brower and Tracy Dahl have qualified provisionally in the 5000- and 3000-meter runs, respectively.
Tina Stec has qualified in the one-mile run. The 4 x 400 relay team broke the indoor school record earlier this season with a qualifying time of 4:46.2. Iowa also sports a strong shot put group.

Wilt hospitalized

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Wilt Chamberlain remained hospitalized today after complaining that his heart was racing just before a game between the New York Knicks and Los Angeles Lakers.
Chamberlain, 55, left the Forum about 7 p.m. PST, 30 minutes before the game started. An intern for Lakers' publicist John Black drove Chamberlain to the hospital.

Tarpley can play in CBA

DENVER — Former Dallas Mavericks Roy Tarpley and Richard Dumas, a draft choice of the Phoenix Suns, were approved Thursday to play in the Continental Basketball Association after completing drug programs at the John Lucas Treatment and Recovery Center in Houston.
Tarpley, banned from the NBA for at least two seasons under the league's anti-drug program, and Dumas, who was in training camp with the Suns, are eligible to play in the CBA immediately.

Long works out with Steelers, NY teams

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers, still uncertain over Bubba Brister's status, worked out Plan B free agent quarterback Chuck Long, who spent part of last season with the Detroit Lions.
Brister recently underwent reconstructive knee surgery and is unsigned for the 1992 season. If he were to make a slow recovery from surgery, the Steelers might be left only with Neil O'Donnell at quarterback at the start of the season.
Long also has worked out for the New York Giants and New York Jets.

"I'll go where I feel I can compete," he said. "I'm always looking to win the (starting) job. If a team gets interested in me, that's the first team I'll consider."

Badgers looking at Chaney

MADISON, Wis. — Don Chaney, who was the NBA coach of the year last season with the Houston Rockets, says he would be interested in replacing Steve Yoder as coach of the Wisconsin Badgers.
Yoder announced Monday he was resigning at the end of the season because the school will not extend a contract which has a year.
Chaney led the Rockets to a franchise-best 52-30 record last season but then was fired 10 days ago after Houston broke even in its first 52 games.
"I could envision coaching at the college level one day," Chaney told the Milwaukee Sentinel, adding that his first preference was to stay in the NBA.
"I'd like to stay in the pros as long as I can stay in them. But if there isn't any action in the pros, I'd look elsewhere because I want to coach," he said.

Machado expected in camp despite murder

New Met Bobby Bonilla picks the Mets over his former club, the Pirates, to win the NL East.

Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela — Attorneys representing the family of a woman allegedly killed by Julio Machado said Thursday they will press for the maximum 17-year murder sentence for the Milwaukee Brewers reliever.

But Machado still is expected to be allowed to leave prison — and the country — as early as next week to play for the Brewers while his case is pending, newspapers reported.

Machado is accused in the Dec. 8 shooting death of a Venezuelan woman, Edicta Vasquez, in the western city of Barquisimeto.

Machado got in an accident with a car in which Vasquez was a passenger. Following a short dispute with the driver of the other car, Machado pulled a 9 mm gun and fired two shots.

One of the shots allegedly struck Vasquez, killing her.

Machado has admitted to firing shots, but says he did it in self-defense, and did not mean to hurt anyone.

Ozzie wants respect

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — His current contract carries him only through 1992, but Ozzie Smith's not ready to pack it up.

The 37-year-old Smith, although coming off a record 1991 season during which he committed only eight errors in 150 games, will be playing out the option of a contract paying him in the neighborhood of a relatively modest $2 million for St. Louis.

He makes it plain he thinks he deserves better.

"I don't know what else I have to prove. The track record is there," Smith said. "Business is business; that's the way I have to approach it. I could understand it if I didn't play as well as I did last year.

"People are assuming that as you get older you lose it," he said. "God gave me this talent, and he'll take it away. That time is not here. I'll be the first to know."

The war is on for Hawks

James Arnold
Daily Iowan

The fact that the Purdue Boilermakers are led by the Big Ten's leading scorer doesn't scare C. Vivian Stringer.

The fact that they are the top scoring team in the conference doesn't seem to bother the Iowa coach either.

What upsets Stringer is that the No. 14 Boilers (16-6, 8-4 in conference) are coming off two tough losses and are hungry for a win.

No. 6 Iowa battles Purdue tonight at 6:30 in West Lafayette, Ind., and then faces Illinois on Sunday at 3 p.m. The Iowa-Purdue matchup will be shown tape-delayed on ESPN Monday at 12:30 p.m.

Purdue lost to the second-place Wisconsin Badgers 80-69 last Friday, then came back to lose to a sixth-place Northwestern team 72-70 on Sunday.

"It would be tough enough playing them with Big Ten implications, national ranking implications and the fact that we beat them here," said Stringer, whose team is 21-2, 12-1 in the conference. "In that they've lost two games... I know how I'd feel. I believe they are preparing for a serious war."

A war might be exactly what the Hawkeyes need. They have had so many cakewalks this season the frosting is sticking to their shoes.

Last Friday, the Hawkeyes slammed 'Swat' Andrew and company in a 81-45 stomping of Michigan and came back on Sunday to crush Michigan State 71-64. Crushing teams has been part of Big Ten life this season with Iowa averaging a 12.4 scoring margin.

"I think the opportunity for us to play against a great, highly-motivated team, at their place, in front of a national audience is something that you've got to welcome."

Coach C. Vivian Stringer is worried about tonight's contest with Purdue. The Boilers are coming off of two tough losses and are aching for a win. A loss would bump Iowa into a tie for the Big Ten lead.

Hornets sting 76ers, Barkley scores seven

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charles Barkley and three other players were ejected as Charlotte routed Philadelphia 136-84 Thursday night in a game that featured a bench-clearing brawl.

The 136 points were the most by the Hornets in their four-year history.

Dell Curry was 6-for-6 from the field in the first half and finished with 22 points to lead the Hornets. Anthony Frederick added 20 points and Larry Johnson 19 for Charlotte.

Charlotte led 35-22 after one quarter, 69-40 at halftime and 102-63 after three quarters.

The Hornets were leading 82-47 with 7:03 left in the third quarter when tempers began to flare.

Barkley was called for a flagrant foul after pushing Tyrone Bogues as the Charlotte guard drove for a layup. Philadelphia's Johnny Dawkins then argued with officials, getting two technical fouls and an automatic ejection.

With 4:28 left in the third quarter and Charlotte leading 90-51, Barkley was called for an offensive foul after colliding with J.R. Reid.

Reid and Barkley exchanged words, Barkley threw the ball at the Charlotte forward and both benches cleared. The fight spilled into the stands under Philadelphia's basket and resulted in a pile of players, coaches, officials, security guards and even a few fans.

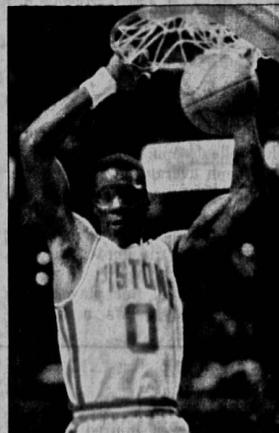

When calm was restored, Barkley, Reid and Sixers' forward Jayson Williams were ejected.

Kenny Payne led Philadelphia with 24 points. Barkley left with 10 points and seven rebounds.

Charlotte forward Johnny Newman fractured a bone in his right hand midway through the second quarter and will be out four to six weeks.

Pistons 104, Bucks 97

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars had 26 points to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 104-97 victory over Milwaukee on Thursday, extending the Bucks' road losing streak to 13 games.

Piston Orlando Woolridge

John Salley and Orlando Woolridge each added 18 points for Detroit and Dennis Rodman had 16 points and 22 rebounds.

Frank Brickowski led Milwaukee with 16 points and Steve Henson added 14 as the Bucks continued to struggle offensively. Milwaukee has averaged just 88.7 points in its last three road losses. Overall, the Bucks have lost four in a row and three straight during a six-game stretch of games against Central

PETE ROSE

Hits leader lobbying for Hall of Fame spot

Rick Warner

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Although he isn't in the Hall of Fame, Pete Rose thinks he deserves a spot on baseball's all-time greatest team.

"I'd be the utility man because I could play five positions," he said.
Rose, baseball's career hits leader, was always a serious student of the game. So who does he consider the greatest player in history?

"Babe Ruth," he said. "Babe Ruth saved baseball. If Babe Ruth had been a soccer player, soccer would be our national sport."

Rose was banned from baseball in August 1989 by then-commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti, who said the former Cincinnati Reds star and manager bet on games. Rose, who still denies that he bet on baseball, says he may apply for reinstatement this year.

"It's possible," he said after taping an interview with NBC's Bob Costas. "The longer I wait, the better my chances (of getting reinstated). But I'm sure I'll apply in the next few years."

Rose can't be elected to the Hall of Fame until he is removed from the permanently ineligible list — a decision that's up to current commissioner Fay Vincent, who took over after Giamatti died.

None of the previous 14 people banned from baseball were allowed back in, but Rose said none ever applied for reinstatement. Rose said he deserves to be in the Hall of Fame because of his accomplishments on the field and his contributions to the game.

"I don't think anybody ever had more integrity or character about the game of baseball than I did," he told Costas. "Not only did I play the game as hard as anybody who ever played... I think I'm baseball's best salesman. I always talk positive about baseball. I never say anything negative about the game."

The two-part interview will be broadcast next Tuesday and Wednesday nights on "Later With Bob Costas."

CYCLONES

ISU coach Orr isn't panicking

Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — Once the talk of the state because of its precocious youth, the Iowa State basketball team has hit a slump that could keep the Cyclones out of the NCAA tournament.

But coach Johnny Orr isn't panicking. Not yet.

A 75-71 loss to No. 6 Missouri on Wednesday night was Iowa State's third straight defeat, the fourth in the Cyclones' last five games. However, Orr was encouraged that his team was much sharper than in its losses to Kansas State and Nebraska last week.

The Cyclones will need to stay that way because their next game is at Oklahoma on Saturday.

"We're a good team," Orr said. "We just had a bad week a little bit and now we're back in form. Hopefully we'll play well at Oklahoma."

Iowa State is now 18-9 overall and 4-7 in the Big Eight, and its chances of getting into the NCAA tournament aren't good.

Roy Kramer, chairman of the NCAA selection committee, said earlier in the week a team would have to finish at least .500 in its league to be considered. That means Iowa State would have to win its final three games, which might be asking too much.

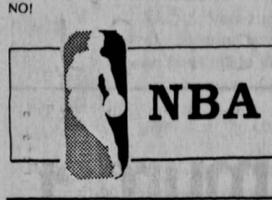

After visiting Oklahoma, the Cyclones play host to No. 3 Kansas, then conclude the regular season at Colorado.

"We don't know anything about the tournament," Orr said. "You hear other guys all the time. (Dick) Vitale says we should be in the tournament. Roy Kramer says no team with a losing record in conference should be in the tournament."

"He's the chairman of the tournament committee, so I'd say what he says is pretty much to go. He's the guy that's going to decide who

Nets 98, Blazers 96 EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Terry Mills, getting a rare start, had 16 points and a career-high 19 rebounds as the New Jersey Nets beat Portland 98-96 Thursday night, their first win over the Trail Blazers since 1985. The loss ended Portland's 11-game winning streak against New Jersey.

Trailing 93-83 with 1:56 remaining, the Blazers pulled to 97-96 on a 3-pointer by Clyde Drexler with 43 seconds left. After Chris Morris missed a shot, Portland had a chance to win when Drexler got the ball. He drove the left side around Morris and arched his shot toward the rim, but Mills blocked it on a play that was close to goaltending. The Warriors, who had shot over 60 percent from the field on the first three games of their road trip, finished at 46 percent. Chris Mullin led Golden State with 28 points, while Billy Owens had 20. The Warriors played without guard Sarunas Marciulionis, who bruised his right thigh against Houston on Wednesday. He had averaged 21 points in three games against San Antonio this season.

Spurs 124, Warriors 103 SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson scored 37 points and matched his career high with 24 rebounds as San Antonio beat Golden State 124-103 Thursday night. It was only the Warriors' second loss since the All-Star break. Terry Cummings added 23 points and Donald Royal had a season-high 16 for San Antonio. 'CLONES: Hoping for big stretch drive

Continued from Page 1B goes. One explanation for Iowa State's slump is that the Cyclones are playing strong teams night after night. Another is that their newcomers who had played so well earlier might be tiring, especially freshmen Fred Hoiberg and Julius Michalik. Michalik has scored only 11 points in the past two games and Hoiberg just 10. Both are averaging better than 13 a game. Michalik, however, did lead Iowa State with five rebounds Wednesday night and blocked three shots. "He's just not playing well right now," Orr said. "But he got some big rebounds and a couple of key baskets for us down the stretch. It's always a good way to get your confidence back."

For the most part, the Cyclones looked confident throughout the game against Missouri. They shot 70 percent in the first half and came up with 13 steals in the contest, six by Justus Thigpen. Iowa State cooled off the second half and made just 12 of 33 shots but still trailed only 71-70 after Thigpen's basket with 29 seconds left. Missouri's Anthony Peeler then made four straight free throws to secure the victory. "I'm not concerned about them," Orr said. "I know we're going to play pretty good. I know we're going to play hard. We're ready to play now. We're going to play all the games the rest of the season hard."

STRINGER: Purdue challenge good for Iowa

Continued from Page 1B come," Stringer said. "We know that that's going to be a barn burner. It will do wonders for us if we meet that call." Another worry for Stringer is her team's mentality entering a game which could cost them the conference lead.

She said the team seems to be strangely loose before a game of such importance. "You want them to be loose. They just seem to be real happy-go-lucky," Stringer said. "I would like to think that we're just extremely confident and not over-confident." The Hawkeyes edged Purdue February 2 in Iowa City, 65-64, and held their leading scorer Michelle Joseph to only 17 points. Joseph averages 22.8 points per game to lead the conference and scored 34 in the losing effort against Wisconsin. But her scoring average isn't the impressive item, according to Stringer. "She's a real fine player; she's smart, heady, she's a winner," Stringer said. "I appreciate her great competitiveness." Sunday, the Hawkeyes travel to Champaign, Ill., to play the 6-16 Illini. The game should provide the final icing on the cakewalk season because Iowa has to face a tough Northwestern team next Friday, and then host the rematch with second-place Wisconsin.

If Doc is back and healthy then this staff has four pitchers that could be No. 1 starters on a lot of teams. It's going to be nice not facing them anymore." Bonilla reported to camp on Thursday, a day after the rest of the Mets arrived here. The right fielder was absent for a day to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law in New York. He currently holds the title of highest-paid player after signing a five-year, $29 million contract. Last season, Bonilla hit .302 with 18 homers and 100 RBIs. Gubicza recovered HAINES CITY, Fla. — Kansas City pitcher Mark Gubicza appears completely recovered from the rotator cuff injury he suffered nearly two years ago. "All the difference in the world from last spring," Royals pitching coach Guy Hansen said Thursday. "We've got him working from a full windup."

Gubicza was injured June 29, 1990, and had surgery to repair a partial tear of the rotator cuff. He pitched last year at less than full strength and finished with a 9-12 record. "Last year was a disaster, something I consider a rehab year," Gubicza said. "So far everything is going great." He plans to appeal the suspension at a hearing in March. "I want to show them that I've changed, that I'm not the same guy," said Reyes, who visited schools in the Dominican Republic to advise students against drugs. WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Women, DARE join together to host Ill.

Yohlunda Mosley
Daily Iowan

The Iowa women will battle Illinois tonight at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, in what Iowa coach Diane DeMarco promises will be an exciting competition to watch.

The evening will also be Drug Abuse Resistance Education Night III, as community schools and the Hawkeyes deliver a drug-free message to the community.

The Hawkeyes have been working hard on their mental approach to achieve a peak performance for Friday's competition against the Illini.

"We've had very productive practices," DeMarco said. "Our team is very much geared up for this meet, and we're especially excited because we'll have the DARE students as our guests."

Coach DeMarco expects some very exciting performances from her squad, which has been looking strong in its execution on the bars, beam and floor exercises. Iowa's performances on the balance beam have earned Jane Powers, Wei Jiang, and Lori Cole, top ten rankings in Big Ten competition.

"We're real excited with the way our team is looking," DeMarco said. "We've had great practices this week and we feel real confident in "Other athletes don't look at the whole picture. Being a champion athlete is a 24-hour commitment."

Diane DeMarco

our ability to go out Friday night and get the job done."

This is the third year that the Iowa women gymnastics squad and DARE have teamed up to deliver a drug-free message. The cause is something that DeMarco said she feels very strongly about.

"I feel that athletes are looked up to and can serve as very strong and positive role models for young people," she said. "We strive to bring into our program gymnasts that take this responsibility seriously. I think that our athletes have the opportunity to make a positive difference in these youngsters' lives."

DeMarco's strong position against drug and alcohol use has been criticized by other teams and other sports. But, DeMarco doesn't plan to change her views.

"Other athletes don't look at the whole picture, being a champion athlete is a 24 hour commitment," she said. "Gymnastics, above all other sports, has the most high risk facets associated with it. You have to have split-second timing, concentration, and balance; all of the elements are critical factors in participating safely."

The DARE program was complimentary to the gymnastics squad because their policy shared many of those promoted by DARE.

"We recruit with the knowledge that in our training program, drugs and alcohol are not part of our training regimen," she said. "I have a lot of respect for our gymnasts because there is a lot of peer pressure out there and they have to be strong not to succumb to it."

MEN'S GYMNASTICS

Hawkeye men travel to MSU

Team faces difficult test in No. 5 Spartans and Air Force

Yohlunda Mosley
Daily Iowan

This weekend, the 10th-ranked Iowa men's gymnastics team will travel to Spartan country to take on 5th-ranked Michigan State and Air Force, in one of the Hawkeyes' toughest competitions of the Big Ten season.

Iowa coach Tom Dunn said he feels his squad can come out with a victory this weekend. Last year the Hawkeyes lost a close meet to the Spartans at home; this year Iowa's main priority will be to beat the Spartans at home.

"They beat us last year and that was an upset because they weren't as good a team as we were," Dunn said. "It's going to be hard to win up there, they have a better team than last year, but I still think that we're better."

The Spartans and the Hawkeyes met earlier in the season at the Windy City Invitational. Iowa took third in that contest, while Michigan State finished fifth.

Dunn doesn't expect too much competition from Air Force, who was recently beaten by Iowa State. Instead, Dunn sees this weekend's competition basically as a battle between Iowa and Michigan State.

The undefeated Hawkeyes will put their strongest squad in competition on Saturday. Though some gymnasts are questionable as they recover from injuries, Dunn isn't worried about the depth of the team.

"We have some good people on the bench, but that's the mark of a good squad," said Dunn.

Iowa was use this competition as a turning point in the season as they look toward the upcoming Big Ten Championships. There will be less emphasis on experimenting with new routines and more focus on consistency and execution.

The next three weeks of competition will be a big test for Iowa as the meet Minnesota and Penn State, who are also ranked in the top 10.

"We have a good team, but we haven't met anyone tough," said Dunn. "We'll find out how good we are in the next three weeks."

Though the odds are in favor of Michigan State, Dunn remains optimistic about Saturday's competition.

"They are going to be tough to beat: They're at home, they have scored higher than us, they have more depth, and they are ranked higher than us," Dunn said. "But I can't accept that they are a better team this year. If they stomp on us then I will believe it."

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Iowa looks to net winless Penn State

David Taylor
Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team gets their first look at Big Ten newcomer Penn State this weekend, as they travel to University Park, Pa. to battle the Nittany Lions.

The Hawkeyes are coming off an impressive showing against Illinois and Purdue on the road last week, where they throttled the Boiler-makers 8-1 and nearly upset favored Illinois before falling 5-4.

"I don't really know too much about Penn State, other than they have lost to Northwestern and Indiana this year," Iowa coach Micki Schillig said. "I definitely think they are beatable, but I wouldn't want us to get overconfident."

Iowa has already experienced the results of overconfidence in losing to a weaker Minnesota team several weeks ago. But since that contest the Hawkeyes have picked it up a notch and are 2-1 in dual matches since.

"If we continue to play with the same intensity that we have shown the past few matches, we should usually come out on top," Schillig said. "I know Penn State is not one of the top teams in the conference, but Minnesota is a reminder that we need to always play hard."

"Our improvement can be traced back to that match, because we thought we should have won it, but we didn't play like we are capable of." Penn State brings a 0-3 record into the match, while Iowa is an even 2-2 overall and 1-2 in the Big Ten.

For Iowa, the prospect of playing Penn State is not all that enticing. Schillig said that now that the Lions are official members of the conference, difficulties in travel time and scheduling will pose problems for the Hawkeyes.

"The addition of Penn State is hard for tennis and some of the other sports are hurt by it too," Schillig said. "It is such a long, roundabout trip, and the round robin schedule that we play is affected too."

"They don't have a travel partner and it also takes a lot out of our budget to go play them at home."

MEN'S TRACK

Track team heads for Big Ten meet

David Taylor
Daily Iowan

If the Iowa men's track team ever had their work cut out for them, it would be this weekend.

The Hawkeyes will compete in the Big Ten Championships today and tomorrow against a field that head coach Ted Wheeler called "the toughest ever." Iowa will send 17 athletes to the meet in East Lansing, Mich.

Wheeler said that Ohio State and Indiana would be the top teams and that the other eight schools would be relatively equal.

"There will be no weak teams at this meet," Wheeler said. "We used to count on that, but not any more, because although we have some big guns, everybody else does too."

Included in the Hawkeye arsenal is Iowa record-holder Anthuan Maybank. Maybank, a junior from Georgetown, S.C., set an indoor record of 26 feet, 1 3/4 inches in the long jump earlier this season, and will team with Darren Smith to form "the best tandem in the Big Ten" according to Wheeler.

"Those two will give us one of the toughest duos in the conference, but they'll be up against the defending champion from Indiana," Wheeler said.

Maybank will also run in the 200-meter race with teammate Baylor Goode.

"That will also be a tough event, but we have some excellent people running and the best competitor of the day will win it," Wheeler said.

In the 55-meter race, Iowa will send Goode and Jerry Fisher against a couple of familiar faces to football fans. Ohio State running back Butler By'not'e and former running back Robert Smith will run in that event, and also the hurdles (By'not'e) and 200-meters (Smith). In all, the Buckeyes will send four football players.

"The Ohio State football players are better than most whole teams," Wheeler said. "It is actually quite unusual that they have that many football players though."

Other Hawkeyes competing include Rajeev Balkrishnan (hurdles and 55), Paul Buska (800), Kevin Herd and Matt Gerhard (3000), Matt Hager and Audwin Patterson (400), Scott Hudek and David Mohr (high jump), and D'Juan Strozier, Gary Falls and Brian Thomas (600).

For the Iowa relay teams, Herd, Buska, Garry Roseman and Strozier will participate in the 4 x 800.
