Court rules Kruse's ex-husband may keep custody of daughter

Johnson County District Court Judge Vern Robinson ruled Monday that Kitty Kruse's ex-husband shall keep sole custody of their daughter and receive $475 per month for child support.

The judge's ruling came after a five-day hearing in February.

In an ongoing court battle, Kruse had petitioned the court for a change in her marriage dissolution to regain custody of her daughter, whom she claims is sexually abused by the father.

Robinson noted in his ruling that the mother may cross state lines with the child and therefore supervision is needed in any visitation arrangements. Kruse has recourse to ask for visitation from the Juvenile Court, Robinson said.

Kruse, on the possibility of receiving visitation rights from the Juvenile Court, said, "In other words, I won't get any."

Pat Kamath, the ex-husband's attorney, described the ruling as "fair and appropriate."

Violence hits Croatia, Bosnia despite peace talks

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) -Two people were reported killed and seven wounded in renewed violence Tuesday in Croatia, where U.N. officers prepared for the deployment of a 14,000-member peacekeeping force.

Ethnic violence also left six people wounded in neighboring Bosnia-Hercegovina, as talks on the republic's future dragged on without agreement.

Serbian TV said "heavy shelling and firefights welcomed" the 350-member advance U.N. team in Croatia. The main force is scheduled to be in place by April

NewsBriefs MBA program among top 50 in nation

Jon Yates Daily Iowan

The UI's MBA program was ranked among the top 50 programs in the nation, according to a report released by U.S. News & World

Greer said that while he is flattered by the rating, he puts less weight on the U.S. News survey than the other two rankings because the rating does not take into account input from students. The other two surveys do.

"To us, it's more important to leave a good impression on our own alums than on the deans of other business schools," Greer said.

Two men are still missing after a fishing boat capsized Tuesday afternoon below the dam near the Iowa River Power Company restaurant. Another occupant of the boat made it to safety.

As Christopher Ellis, 23, of North Liberty, Iowa, Jeff Brogan, 23, of Hills, Iowa, and Justin Ramseyer, 18, of Iowa City, were fishing on the east side of the dam on the Iowa River, their fishing boat was sucked in by the undertow shortly after 4 p.m.

Ellis managed to jump out of the boat and was able to reach shore: Brogan and Ramseyer, who stayed with the capsized boat, had not been found as of last night.

A rescue effort by the Johnson County Sheriff's Department and area fire departments was continuing last night.

Rec Services to reconsider limiting programs, hours

Kim Dykshorn Daily lowan

At the UI, where approximately 90 percent of all students use some type of recreational service, budget constraints are forcing the division to once again consider dropping recreational programs, reducing facility hours and shelving plans for a new high-tech fitness facility.

Last week the UI Student Association approved the Class I Budget for fiscal year 1993, which allocates $1 per student per semester for Recreational Services. While most student groups received an increase in allocated funds, Rec Services received a 2.9 percent decrease. This, according to Harry Ostrander, director of Rec Services, may prove to be a deterrent for

"I'm very concerned that we're starting to operate a program that is based on the students' ability to pay, rather than have it be a part of their education," Ostrander

In February, Ostrander appealed to the UISA for a $1 increase in funds for Rec Services, which he said is "instrumental in helping the university meet its institutional goals."

In addition, Ostrander said, Rec Services is one of the UI's largest student employers with 350 parttime student workers.

As a result of last year's 20 percent reduction in appropriated allocations for 1991-1992, Rec Services was forced to increase a number of user fees, including swimming, locker and martial arts, and to close the service area. In addition, they eliminated 15 part-time student positions, one graduate assistant position and several intramural programs.

Do you receive a designated per student fee for support of your campus recreational sports program? If yes, how much?

According to Ostrander, "user fees have just about reached their limitation and an alternate source needs to be found.'

Plus $550,000 appropriated state funds

One option that Ostrander has discussed with the UISA is a mandatory student recreation fee similar to the computer and student health fees.

Unlike the computer and student health fees, which many students complain about, Ostrander believes that because most students use Rec Services, they would support a mandatory fee.

Vito's owners live out American dream

Kim Dykshorn Daily lowan

They seem typically American in their Levi's jeans and baseball caps, drinking Lite beer from Miller, and greeting customers in their restaurant where gourmet hamburgers and grilled chicken pizza are favorite choices among

But one word and the thick Algerian accents reveal the true heredity of Aziz Longou and Fatah Teghanemt, co-owners of Vito's Italian-American Restaurant in downtown Iowa City. For these two, who came to the United States more than 15 years ago, these typical American habits are part of the great American dream that they are living.

Longou and Teghanemt began their American lives in 1976 when they both received full scholarships to attend college in the United States. Not knowing each other at the time, Longou settled in Iowa City, while Teghanemt went to the University of San Francisco to learn the English language. After six months there, Teghanemt transferred to the UI where he met Longou.

They were both students in the school of engineering, an unusual beginning, they agree, for future restaurant owners. Although Teghanemt graduated in 1981 with a bachelor of science in electrical engineering, Longou lost interest in school and finally dropped out. He had other plans for his life.

"In the back of my mind, I was always hoping I would end up owning a little place," Longou recalled. "I was always thinking maybe I could save a little money to open my own place."

While Teghanemt studied, Longou began working as a busboy at The Best Steak House, which is now Pizza Hut in downtown Iowa City. After three years there he applied at Vanessa's, a steak and seafood restaurant located where Vito's currently stands.

"Yeh, I applied as a cook and they gave me a job as a dishwasher," he sighed.

"But," he remembered, "I used the same dishwasher that is still back there right now.'

After a short time, Longou was trained as a cook and from there he quickly moved up to kitchen manager. During this time, Teghanemt, who had just graduated, began working at Vanessa's as a bartender. Six months later, he became the bar manager.

Andy Scott/Daily Iowan

Teghanemt planned to save money for graduate school, but when the opportunity came along to buy the place, which by then was called Vito's, he knew he could not pass it "To be a manager here all my life, that wasn't what I was planning," he said. "But this was probably the greatest opportunity of my life."

The opportunity that Longou and Teghanemt literally jumped at came in 1988 when the former owner of Vito's, Jim Mondanaro, asked them if they wanted to buy him out. The answer was an ecsta-

"It was like a dream come true," Longou remembered. "Fatah and I were jumping up and down, I'm not kidding you. To own this restaurant, my favorite place — it was just unbelievable!"

"At first I did not believe it," Teghanemt agreed. "I thought he was joking. I was in shock. It was just too good to be true.'

It didn't take long for Longou and Teghanemt to come out of their dream and into the reality of owning a business. They began by changing the menu and the image

"We wanted to combine great food and a casual atmosphere," Longou said. "We wanted a fun place to eat and drink - a place where you could bring your family in jeans before a movie or something."

While Teghanemt takes care of the bar duties, Longou spends time in the kitchen creating new recipes to add to the menu. He said he wants to change the menu every six months. The latest version, which Longou said is the best menu he's ever made, is expected by the end of this month.

In addition to "out of the ordinary" pasta dishes, Longou said the new menu will feature Cajun chicken pizza, barbecue ribs and fiesta fajitas, so named for their colorful yellow, red and green pep-

"All of our recipes are created here by myself and our cooks," Longou explained. Although he has the final say about a dish, he encourages his cooks to experiment with new recipes and make creations of their own.

"They know I'm very demanding about the presentation, about the taste, everything," Longou said, "but I'm usually very satisfied with what they bring out."

Next to food, Vito's entertaining atmosphere is another thing that draws customers in, Longou said. This week, in honor of St. Patrick's Day, Vito's is decked from the front window to the kitchen in back with everything from green shamrock stickers and balloons to green beer and Irish stew.

"The atmosphere just puts people in a better mood," Longou said over the upbeat tune of an Irish polka. "The decorations are part of the entertainment of the place.

Both Longou and Teghanemt felt that they have succeeded in creating the restaurant they dreamed of. Much of that success they credit to their relationship.

"I'm good at what I do, and he's good at what he does," Longou explained. "We are a very good combination."

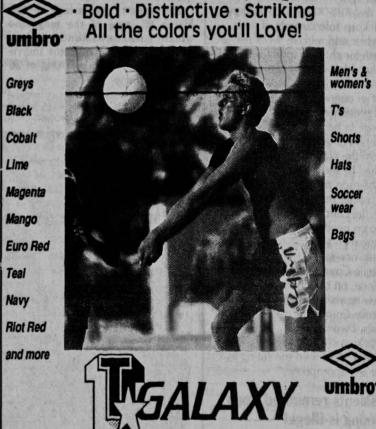

"We never let money take over and control our relationship," Teghanemt added. "We really care about each other and we'll do anything for each other. A business like this needs a combination of people like Aziz and I to make it work. So far it's been great."

SHAMBAUGH HOUSE

Researchers strive to place UI building on historical list

Susan Kreimer

Daily Iowan

For about 40 years, the Shambaugh House was the site for parties and social gatherings for distinguished visitors organized by its residents, Benjamin Franklin Shambaugh, the first head of the UI political science department, and his wife Bertha.

With Benjamin's death in 1940, the parties ended, but Bertha continued to live in the house until her death in 1953.

Almost 40 years after the last trace of the couple, the building, now known as the Shambaugh House Honors Center, may be placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Register encourages preservation of buildings across the country based on the significance of their inhabitants and unique architecture, said Mark Van Der Weide, Honors Program proctor.

"But we're striving to get it on the Register because of the significance of the Shambaughs," Van Der Weide said. "Benjamin was one of the leading lights at the UI during the first four decades of the 20th

"Bertha was kind of a recluse after the death of her husband. She was very, very attached to Benjamin. She idolized him and was pretty crushed when he died," he

Van Der Weide described Bertha as "one of the most accomplished women of her age." Bertha was a photographer, artist, naturalist and writer. She published two books on the history of the Amana Colonies which are "still regarded as one of the most widely respected histories of the colonies," he said.

A history major, Van Der Weide said he has researched the history of the Shambaughs since February last year, digging through old newspaper and magazine articles. Among those was an Iowa history magazine founded by Benjamin Shambaugh when he was one of the first directors of the State Historical Society of Iowa.

Van Der Weide has embarked on a joint effort with Mary Bennett, a photo archivist at the State Historical Society of Iowa. Bennett spent 15 years researching the Shambaughs. In the mid-1980s she started to work on getting the house on the Register.

The house has Greek ionic columns, dormer angles, leaded pane windows with diamond shapes and golden oak staircase. It was designed by local architect O.H. Carpenter.

Built by the Shambaughs in 1901, the house reflects the "vernacular and middle-class" qualities of its inhabitants, Bennett said.

"Because they were non-elitist people, they believed in equality and democracy and their house reflects that," Bennett said.

"They were meant to be sort of modest and unpretentious," she said. "The Shambaughs wanted to blend in with the neighborhood."

Van Der Weide submitted the application at the end of February. The Honors Program will be notified if the house has been accepted for the Register in about a year.

Placing on the National Register will encourage people to appreciate its unique legacy and architecture, Bennett said.

UI Dept. of Public Safety Director William Fuhrmeister said students should double check to see whether their doors are locked and they need to secure their valuables before they leave.

After a break-in of several rooms in Slater Residence Hall over the winter break, Fuhrmeister said students should make an extra effort "to place their valuables out of plain view."

In past years, there have been some reports of theft while the students were gone, but what happened at Slater was unprecedented, he said.

During the winter break, someone obtained the master key, entered the first four floors of Slater, and stole items including $25 in cash, an Apple computer, a Sony VCR and a Sony Discman.

AFAR plans trip to defend existence of Roe vs. Wade

John P. Waterhouse

Daily lowan

In an effort to keep Roe vs. Wade alive, the Iowa City activist group Action For Abortion Rights is organizing a busload of abortion rights supporters to attend the National Organization of Women's rally in Washington, D.C., on April 5.

AFAR media spokeswoman Dana Cloud said, "We're encouraging people to be outspoken." It is estimated, she said, that over 70 percent of the people across the nation believe in the right to choose.

With a conservative group of Supreme Court justices and an upcoming election, she said, "It is very important that these people voice their opinions and be heard."

NOW organizers anticipate more than 1 million people will attend the "March of a Million" in the nation's capital.

"To actively participate with tens of thousands of other people fighting for abortion rights ... is such an incredible rush," said Cloud.

The bus to Washington will leave Iowa City Saturday, April 4, at march is Friday.

9:30 a.m. and is scheduled to return in the evening on Monday, April 6. The cost of the trip is $90.

AFAR member Julia Daugherty said the Iowa divisions of the National Abortion Rights Action League and Planned Parenthood will join AFAR in Washington, D.C., as all three groups represent Iowa in the march.

According to Daugherty, "AFAR has always specifically addressed the accessibility issue." She said many poor women no longer cani. afford an abortion.

While in Washington, Cloud is going to fight to "keep Roe vs." Wade alive," and Daugherty wants to "urge Congress to pass the Freedom of Choice Act."

In 1973, a militant group of abortion supporters pressured the Supreme Court to legalize abortions, said Daugherty. "The same thing is needed April 5. We need to march on the streets and try to put some pressure on the courts."

Cloud said there are still 10 spaces available for the bus trip. The deadline for signing up for the FAIRFIELD, Iowa — A Fairfield psychiatrist testified Tuesday that Betty Frieberg suffers from a disorder that prevents her from remembering traumatic experiences.

Frieberg, 43, is charged with killing her husband, Harold, and cutting up his body last fall. His remains were found scattered on the couple's farm near Libertyville in early October.

Dr. Russell England testified Frieberg suffers from a dissociative England related Harold Frieberg's slaying to several incidents in Frieberg's life.

For example, Frieberg was raped as a child in a bathroom that was being remodeled, England said. He said there was a circular saw in the bathroom and this could be why Frieberg used a circular saw to dismember her husband.

Open hearing focuses on fate of dental hygiene program

Daily Iowan

College of Dentistry representatives focused on financial problems during an open hearing Monday in the Union concerning the fate of the UI dental hygiene program.

Athree-person independent panel was chosen by the Iowa state Board of Regents to review the program, after the UI presented them with a list of programs to be reduced or eliminated under the Strategic Plan last fall.

The UI has recommended dental hygiene be closed due to fewer students enrolling and the national trend of dental hygiene education moving from four-year schools to community colleges.

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for university relations, said the regents will note whether the panel makes the same recommendation as the UI.

Beth Pelton, associate professor of dental hygiene, said the consultants were interested in identifying new information from individuals who spoke both for and against the "The College of Dentistry proposed that dental hygiene needs to close in order to maintain dentistry programs, in spite of dental hygiene's strengths. ... All the speakers for dentistry were asked whether they thought it was a good program and they answered yes.

"The focus of anti-hygiene speakers was on the budget, not on quality or centrality," Pelton said.

Presentations made on behalf of the program, she said, were well

The panel included the president of the University of New England, the dental hygiene director at the University of Oregon and the dean of dentistry at the University of Connecticut.

The panel will finish its report in the early part of April and the regents will make a final decision on the dental hygiene program at their April 15 meeting.

UI journal tackles global issues

Estela Villanueva Daily Iowan

Global issues including the U.S. commitment to international law and the global food regime in the 1990s have been some of the issues addressed by Transnational Law and Contemporary Problems, a scholarly journal published twice a year by students in the UI College

The journal was established about two years ago by several ambitious law students with the help of Burns Weston, professor of law and chairman of the journal's faculty advisory board.

"The idea had been percolating around for many years. I kept discouraging students, saying that it had to be something unique and there had to be a critical mass of faculty and students who could support that kind of a journal from year to year and issue to issue," said Weston.

The result was a student / faculty law journal which first came out in spring 1991.

"We're trying to make this a world-class journal that looks at the law through the prism of the world," Weston said.

Authors of the articles are authorities and scholars from the United States, Europe and Africa and include academics, policy analysts and researchers. Guest editors help identify and attract professionals in the field worldwide, determine topics that need to be written about, and prepare short introductions for each volume.

Each issue includes a "Living History Interview," which in the last issue focused on Dr. Norman Borlaug, the 1970 recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize for his role in the Green Revolution. A feature in the fall issue will be a student prize essay, with essays being solicited worldwide.

"We try to be multidisciplinary in our approach by bringing in cultural, social and economic perspectives as well as legal perspectives to make the journal as well rounded as possible," said David Ladwig, editor-in-chief of the TLCP.

"We've been able to make a fairly significant impact even though we're fairly new," Ladwig said. Several organizations and professors have made requests for reprints of articles for classes. Subscribers include the U.S. Supreme Court, the International Court of Justice, and the U.S. Department of Justice.

Because the TLCP provides several perspectives on one issue with its series of articles, Jonathan

Carlson, a UI professor of law who specializes in agricultural trade and hunger and was guest editor of the last issue, said that the journal is developing a strong reputation.

"There is an effort made to solicit articles from people well known and established in the field. That enhances the reputation. In addition to having a student editorial board, guest editors who are faculty members or established professionals help to raise the reputation," said Carlson.

The most recent issue of Transnational Law and Contemporary Problems examines how increasingly interconnected global economies affect efforts to feed the world's population. Among issues discussed include the right to food as delineated by international human rights law, the role of women in addressing the world's hunger problems and agricultural reform in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Members of the student editorial board research and determine the focus topic from a list of 40 to 50 ideas. The global food issue was an obvious choice to Carlson.

"Despite the advancement of our civilization, we have not managed to deal with the problem of global hunger and starvation. There was a recognition that we don't lack the resources or food, but because the social institutions are capable, that seemed to us to include the global institution," Carlson said.

"Although hunger is a problem within countries, it is a problem between countries, and that suggests that there is something wrong in the global institution's structure," he said.

Global warming will be the topic of the next issue of TLCP. It will be guest-edited by Sir Geoffrey Palmer, former prime minister of New Zealand. He will join the UI faculty as the Mason Lad Distinguished Visitorship Professor of Law next

Symposium to address genetic engineering

Wendy Alesch Daily Iowan

The thought of genetic engineering may conjure up ideas of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde or Frankenstein. The UI College of Engineering is hoping to dispel these misconceptions and inform the public about the technology and role in society of therapeutic proteins, a product of genetic engineering.

On Thursday a symposium, "Cures From Within," will be held in the Triangle Ballroom of the Union from 2:30 to 5:40 p.m. The symposium, sponsored by engineering honors society Tau Beta Pi, will focus on the marketability of therapeutic proteins in the '90s.

Two speakers from the industry will discuss what is going on currently in the market and one speaker from the Food and Drug Administration will discuss regulations and restrictions on therapeutic proteins.

Therapeutic proteins are genes that have been manipulated, according to Craig Folkers, a UI engineering student and committee chairman for the symposium.

"An example that is easily understood would be manipulating the genes of cows to produce protein in milk used for medical applications," Folkers said.

"Another example is artificial hemoglobin used in hospital," he

Genetic engineering has advanced to the stage where direct alteration of the genetic makeup of living things is possible, according to UI engineering student Gloria Jennings, who will make this charge as a preface to the speakers on Thursday.

Jennings says that the concept of altering genes is very simple. Genes are cleaved and isolated from one organism and spliced into other organisms such as bacteria, which in turn produce recombinant proteins. These proteins can be used as therapeutic drugs for such things as human insulin, human growth hormone or hepatitis vac-

How long does it take for these drugs to reach the marketplace, how are they evaluated by the FDA, and how does the consumer know which ones are safe and effective? These questions will be addressed in the symposium.

The symposium is expected to draw between 300 and 450 people, mostly UI engineering students, Iowa City residents and UI faculty. The event is free and open to the Iowa was listed as fourth among 'up-and-coming" medical schools in the country. Steve Parrott, director of Health Science Relations, said that the survey "singled out schools based on promising curricular innovations.

Other schools in the up-andcoming top five are the University f Alabama-Birmingham, Emory University, the University of Pittsburgh, and the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

Iowa was also ranked second in rural medicine and fifth in community medicine. Dr. James Clifton, interim dean of the UI College of Medicine, said that the high rankings are an indication of the UI's commitment to family practice and other programs.

"The college's Statewide Family Practice Training Program retains 60 percent of its graduates for practice in Iowa, half of them going to practice in towns of under 10,000," Clifton said. "Our strength in rural and community medicine also lies in our programs

Other criteria included "objective statistical analysis" of student selectivity, faculty resources and research activity. According to Dr. Charles Driscoll, head of the Family Practice program, much of the UI's success is due to dedication of the faculty and to the application of knowledge outside the laboratory.

"Our faculty are experienced clinicians who have had or still have private practices," he said, "and their scholarly effort and activity are outstanding.

Driscoll said that the UI offers a "good model office. It's definitely a real-world kind of teaching. Many of the faculty, residents and interns also work out of Mercy Hospital and at many nursing

This is the third consecutive year the UI College of Medicine has been mentioned as one of the best in the country.

UI President Hunter Rawlings said, "We're always happy to have one of our colleges ranked among the best in the nation. Schools in the Midwest tend to have less visibility than schools on the coasts, so it's nice to see that others recognize the quality of education we provide.'

Welcome to Mexico City, where cord-breaking ozone levels on Monday sparked calls for stricter measures in what many say is the nost-polluted city in the world.

City officials ordered cutbacks in idustrial production and limited outo traffic to cut pollution at its source and closed most schools to rotect children.

Officials said new measures to cut one levels and other pollutants bould be announced in coming lays but did not elaborate. While ozone is invisible, the levels of other pollutants in the air rise Specialists at the National Autonomous University of Mexico say prolonged exposure to ozone retards lung development in infants, increases lead levels in blood and diminishes mental capacity. It also can lead to, or exacerbate, lung problems such as emphysema.

Some of the damage is irreversible. A pollution scale reading of 100, which Mexico City reaches most days, can cause mild irritation among more susceptible elements of the population. A reading of 300 can make otherwise-healthy people

Monday's reading in some parts of the city peaked at 398, the highest ever here and four times the World Health Organization limit of exposure for one hour, once a year.

The scale follows international standards with a few modifications and tops out at 500. A reading of .09 parts per million of ozone over one hour is considered unhealthy by California standards. The reading of 398 Monday equals about 0.47 parts per million.

CHECK SCANDAL

WASHINGTON - Three Cabinet members acknowledged Tuesday they had written dozens of bad checks while in Congress, the first Bush administration involvement in the rubber check scandal that previously had ensnared mostly House Democrats.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan and Labor Secretary Lynn Martin, all former Republican House members, said they had had overdrafts at the now-closed House bank.

Cheney, who said he'd never been given an indication of trouble with his checks, declared himself "angry and frustrated." Madigan called his situation "an embarrassment to me, my family and friends."

Martin said she was donating $425 to charity, representing the charges a commercial bank might have imposed, so "someone at least should benefit from this embarrassing episode."

Cheney told reporters he had written at least 21 "problem checks" and had been told by the ethics committee there had been four more. Madigan said he overdrew 49 checks. Martin disclosed she had 16.

Aides said Madigan's checks totaled about $30,000 and the 21 Cheney had identified added up to $10,069. Martin said his bad checks totaled $5,125.20.

The disclosures could blunt any effort to paint the House rubbercheck mess as a primarily Democratic scandal. However, Republicans still contended the epidemic of overdrafts resulted from decades of mismanagement by the Democrats.

President Bush, traveling in Fayetteville, Ark., said, "It's an institutional problem." And Vice President Dan Quayle, in San Diego, spoke of "the arrogance of power of an institution that's been controlled by one party without serious challenge for nearly 40 years." Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, countered that the acknowledgments by Bush officials "does take some of the edge off the highly partisan charges." He said, "Clearly, when three members of the president's Cabinet are involved in this, it is a bipartisan problem.'

Bush, asked about his own vulnerability, said he couldn't find his checks from 1967-1971 when he was in the House. "I'd like to be able to say I didn't do it, but I just don't know yet," he said.

The disclosures by the three Cabinet officials added a new dimension to the controversy that until now had focused on Capitol Hill. A probe by the House ethics committee showing that hundreds of lawmakers overdrew their accounts at the bank has been followed by an avalanche of public confessions. Lists of the 24 worst abusers and then 331 other current and former House members with overdrafts are due out in the next Cheney said his largest overdraft was for $1,945, to American Express; Madigan said his biggest settlement in the Washington area. Martin said in a statement that her overdrafts included a $1,350 check to a local savings and loan.

Three other Cabinet members -Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan. Housing Secretary Jack Kemp and Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward Derwinski - also served in the House during part of the 39-month period investigated by the ethics committee. All said in statements Tuesday that they did not overdraw their accounts at the House

Patricia Saiki, who heads the Small Business Administration and was a Republican lawmaker from Hawaii, said she was never overdrawn in her four years in the Quayle was a House member from Indiana from 1977 through 1981. His spokesman, David Beckwith, said Tuesday, "We've checked our records and there's no indications of any bounced checks.'

RACISTS IN DUBUQUE

Can the Klan!

On Saturday, March 14, activists from around the Midwest met in Dubuque to discuss strategies to stop racists from organizing there. The need is urgent, for we learned from each other how pervasive and ominous the threat is.

Dubuque activists are fed up with the passivity they have encountered from their city's news media, business and religious communities. The Dubuque Telegraph-Herald has consistently ignored racist incidents. A recent edition carried the headline "Klan membership soars" and made one Dubuquer wonder if that paper is promoting the Klan.

When the Klan was powerful during the 1920s, it had sympathizers in law enforcement. That pattern is repeating itself. When the neo-Nazis began their Jan. 18 march, a Dubuque County deputy loudly asserted "If I wasn't on duty, I would lead them." A neo-Nazi assaulted two women: Guess who the Dubuque police arrested? Guess who they arrested when a racist gang attacked two black students in a Dubuque high school? Dubuque police have staked out buildings where anti-racist activists have met, and followed blacks as they left the meetings.

Dubugue activists are fed up with the passivity they have encountered from their city's news media, business and religious communities.

Dubuque is typical. A minority couple has been harassed ever since moving into Rockford, Ill., four years ago. Despite the testimony of neighbors who have witnessed many incidents, Rockford police have done nothing except threaten to arrest the couple for filing "false" police reports. When Klan leader Thom Robb recently spoke in Janesville, Wis., he did so through a sound system provided by Rock County. His bodyguards were 100 local law enforcers.

There was unanimous consent on how to meet the fascist threat. We all agreed that the fascists must be confronted wherever they appear. The advice to ignore them has come from an establishment that is either indifferent to the danger, or in active collaboration with it.

Thom Robb will be returning to Dubuque in April, while the neo-Nazi Nationalist Movement will hold its convention there in June. If you are sick of cross-burners spewing racist nonsense, be ready to go to Dubuque in April and June. This is not a crisis Dubuque faces alone. We all have a stake in this fight. Contact the Iowa City Anti-Racist Network to get involved. Contact the Midwest Network to Stop the Klan in Chicago if racists are active

This is a test of strength we must and will win. United and strong, we can say "No!" to the fascists and stop them. You have a voice, and it will be heard, but you must act now. Join us!

GAY RIGHTS

Equality, not preferential treatment

Presidential candidate Paul Tsongas has called gay rights a "cutting edge" issue for the 1990s. If Democrats, liberals and the homosexual community do not pick their battlegrounds more carefully, however, they will succeed only in cutting away more support from their cause.

A good example of this has been New York City's St. Patrick's Day Parade. Last year the Irish Lesbian and Gay Organization was at first refused permission to march in the parade because it had not submitted an application to march by the parade deadline. After a furor of protest from the gay community, New York Mayor David Dinkins pressured the parade organizers to bend the rules and permit ILGO to march. This year, ILGO got their application in on time but were at the bottom of the waiting list. They went to court to demand that they should be vaulted over the others on the list and be allowed to march. Yesterday, a federal judge rejected their claim.

In both these cases, the homosexual community was not demanding equality, they were insisting on preferential treatment. While the parade sponsors, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, have publicly stated that they do not want gays and lesbians in their parade, these were not instances of discrimination. ILGO did not meet the qualifications every other group had to meet in order to be in the parade. Irish gays and lesbians have no more right to demand special treatment than Irish carpenters, Irish dog catchers or Irish pole-sitters. If ILGO gets their application in on time and are at the top of the waiting list, then they have a cause for legitimate protest. Until then, they have no more right to march in the parade than anyone else.

Homosexuals should learn a lesson from the black civil rights movement. The black leadership's reliance on affirmative action, racial preferences and set-aside programs have come under increasing attack because they demand that blacks receive special treatment. Moderate whites have felt that they are being taken advantage of and punished for things they have not done. Going to court to demand special treatment or disrupting events with militant action only alienate moderate heterosexuals and do nothing to help the homosexual cause.

Homosexuals need to make sure that when they protest, they are standing on the solid ground of clear-cut discrimination or else they will be sucked under by the quicksand of preference politics.

Party, party, party, party, party

Finally, spring break is here (at least for those of us who like to start the weekend on Wednesday). After nine weeks of diligent study, academic excellence and kissing up to your biology TA, it's time to party. But wait, this is no ordinary vacation; spring break should not be taken lightly.

Like many American recreational activities, spring break requires endurance and stamina. To really appreciate this uniquely college experience you've got to be willing to extend your body to its physical limits. After all, that's how college students are supposed to recreate and spring break is the ultimate recreational

But what's the best way to spend your nine (or twelve or fifteen) days of bliss? Studying is not an option, unless you're working on a M.D.-Ph.D. in intervascular-biomolecularcrosshybridizing-transplantation studies or you're an egghead.

Going home is out of the question. Who wants to spend their hard-earned vacation time in some vahoo little Iowa excuse for a town or in a pitiful-looking suburb of the windy (or is that dirty?) city. (It's hard to imagine which is worse: living in Chicago or wishing that you

And don't even think about staying in Iowa City unless you want to turn into a treehugging, dirt-sucking, socially-conscious druid who refuses to use more than four sheets of single-ply toilet paper per day.

No, it's time to put away those save-the-whale T-shirts and add a little organically grown, alcohol-induced organic waste to the salty shores of South Padre. After all, the world's record for projectile vomiting is only 188 feet 6 inches (non-wind aided). A few cans of Dubuque Star should take care of that.

But if you can't go home for break and staying in Iowa City is out of the question, then where does a serious spring-breaker go? Daytona seems to be the quintessential - or at least stereotypical - spring break hotspot. It's warm, sunny and fairly safe (unless Teddy or Willie decide to visit) and of course there's plenty of beer.

But don't expect your basic blow-three-daysand-be-back-to-class-by-Tuesday-party. If you don't leave Daytona naked, drunk, disoriented and on the verge of chunks (basically looking like George Bush in Japan), then there's definitely something wrong with you and you probably ought to consider transferring to Kirkwood Community College.

Still Florida is not your only option. Maybe the thought of Jimmy Buffet already makes you sick. In that case how about a little Rocky Mountain High — Colorado is only a day away and you can't get busted for DWI on a ski-lift.

Plus Aspen is beautiful this time of the year tree-lined slopes, incredible sunsets and majestic mountain peaks. And remember it doesn't matter whether you ever pull your Fin and Feather skis down off the rack of your MOM's Blazer; what really matters is how you look. So don't forget your wraparound, tri-colored, pho-sphorescent, non-skid sunglasses and a whole lot of Clearasil.

Not satisfied with the usual spring break destinations? Maybe you hate snow and you've already spent toooo many nights playing "Hi Bob" with shots of 151. Well, University Travel will bus you to Washington, D.C., "for three ... days and four nights of bone-rattling fun," pogo-sticking up and down the Washington Monument. But maybe you really can't leave low City. In that case you can always rent a couple of large-screen televisions and spend your vacation sitting around watching reruns of "the bawdy new STUDS" and flipping back and forth between Sally and Oprah in search of a cross-dressing, overweight, transsexual-withlower-back-pains. And being comforted by the fact that most of them live in Florida and are probably at that very moment asking your roommate for a light.

Or if you're still short a couple of P.E. credits, for only $52,634 Rec. Services, in conjunction with Dean Jones' office, offers two exciting nights of mud-wrestling with Kevin Taylor and Pepe Rojas-Cordona in the Johnson County Jail - vouchers not included.

But regardless of how you spend your spring break, make sure you have a good time. In a few years you'll end up spending all your vacation time cleaning out the garage, painting your house and plucking hairs out of that mole on the back of your neck.

Empowerment

To the Editor: Responding to Teresa Regan's "What's in a Word?" Well, what do words really mean? Being that human beings use spoken language to communicate to one another, a word would be best described as a sound that communicates meaning, Although it is well acknowledged by those concerned that meanings can often be relative, a word is sometimes all we have to relate particular emotions and feelings - and, in the case of abstract terms, meanings can become even more disconcerting. Indeed, the word "empowerment" can conjure up a few frightening sentiments to some, but to others the word "empowerment" can mean a difference between life and death. Although it is very true that the power structure has been used to keep women and minorities down for thousands and thousands of years, it is ridiculous to assume that women are trying to use this power structure for the same means. Most women simply want freedom, respect, and equality, and many women want to take the power that's been used against them to "empower" themselves. After all, the power structure has been used to utterly keep women down - immobile, inferior, terrified, shameful, subservient, etc. The word simply needs to be taken back, redefined. I would have to venture that the women using this term are considering very carefully the connotations in which it brings. Ms. Regan has deemed this way of thinking both "military and male." Unbelievable. I think she is failing to realize that her ideology is extremely male: "It is especially sad to see women employ this tactic," or "We (women), like today's unborn . . ." or "Activists (of abortion rights) thrive on power talk." The patriarchy has historically kept woman as gentle mother, passive caretaker, and forgivable child

(hinting at woman's inherent guilt),

so of course it's "sad" for some to see women in another light! Change can sometimes be hard. Ms. Regan says, "(Women) were once without power." Well, I doubt that's entirely true, and, if women lacked any visible power it is because it was kept down. Women have always had power, in fact, this is precisely why we have been so feared, and in turn, oppressed. There is absolutely nothing militant about a woman wanting "reproductive control," and "power over (her) own body." The grave offense came with the taking of our bodies. We are merely responding in an appropriate fashion - our "cries" are valid. As a woman, I find it both "sad" and odd that she should feel as she does.

Abortion rally

To the Editor:

I attended the pro-choice rally March 3rd on the Pentacrest. While impressed with the quality of information presented, especially by Ms. Sands of the Emma Goldman Clinic, I was extremely disturbed by an incident that occurred. A man who rudely interrupted Ms. Sands during her speech with the question "Why isn't abortion murder?" was immediately isolated from the platform and denied an opportunity to further engage in this public forum. I requested of a pro-choice representative from Madison that the man be allowed to express his opinion, a request which was denied. My thoughts on this are as follows:

When my hormonal urges do not make abstinence a bearable option, I engage in sex. And when I decide to make love with someone, my partner and I use enough methods of birth control as to make pregnancy a moot point. In this way, I have found the moral basis upon which I can engage in political activism to keep abortion legal and accessible for all women (especially those victims of rape or incest) and on the other hand, spare myself the agonizing choice of destroying a fertilized egg that would come out of my body nine months later with eyes like mine. Because I am an autonomous human being, I not only demand equal privileges in this society, but I passionately accept personal responsibilty for my actions and their consequences. When an individual is hustled away from a public forum, prevented from speaking by bullies who happen to be pro-choicers, they lose credibility in the eyes of people like me who demand a balance between public rights and private responsibilities. When pro-choicers prevent dissent, we become as those who do the same, thus betraying the democratic principles we claim to represent. When we allow our emotions and passion to overwhelm our willingness to engage in reasoned discussion, we only add more rotting apples to the already-overflowing basket of social decay. We endanger our access to abortion by alienating an influential segment of the population, not only for ourselves, but for our children, as well. The abortion debate has the potential to become a civil war. For God's sake, let's not become part of the problem. Engage with those with whom we disagree. Don't hate them for advocating protection of unformed specks that develop into human beings, for isn't the defense of the voiceless the most moral of all social actions? Do not an rail at them in rage, for they, too, are acting morally. Persuade them that women must have the ultimate decision about their bodies. Why? Because we are independent and autonomous human beings who happen to have uteruses. But do not abrogate that precious freedom of claiming personal responsibility. Effectively use birth control or don't have sex. Take yourself out of the complex abortion debate. Don't get pregnant in the first place.

Fear of the other

To the Editor:

Reading the letter from the members of the Women Against Racism Committee (DI, March 10), I was reminded of my brother's cats.

Many years ago my brother had two identical kittens. He named them This Cat and The Other Cat. It confused me. I looked at the two kittens and couldn't tell which was which. But he explained that this cat was This Cat and that one was The Other Cat.

On the other hand (sorry), there's a Grateful Dead record, es for Allah, which has one la howing the song titles for both sides. It lists the songs on "This side" and "The other side." The label on the other side has a picture. Which one is Side A or B doesn't come up. This side is the one you're looking at.

To get to the point: "Fear of the other" is certainly a powerful force in this society and must be overcome if we are to avoid destroying ourselves. But getting sidetracked by a word cannot help. The word is not the problem.

There's you and there're others. Why don't we try to get beyond the damn words for once?

WASHINGTON - New home construction surged unexpectedly in Pebruary and industrial producion rebounded from a four-month stall, the government said Tuesday reports hailed as unambiguous ridence of an economic recovery.

"The long recession is over," said conomist Lawrence Hunter of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. The eports "signal a clear turning joint for the economy," which tarted its decline in July 1990. Meanwhile, the Labor Department aid consumer prices rose a modrate 0.3 percent in February, ulled up by higher food and lothing costs. And the Commerce Department said the broadest meaure of the nation's trade deficit arrowed to $8.62 billion in 1991, smallest in nine years.

Housing starts increased a surrisingly vigorous 9.6 percent to 3 million units, the highest level nce March 1990. Every region of he country registered gains with the largest posted in the Midwest. The Commerce Department said it was the biggest increase in a year and followed a healthy 6.4 percent gain in January. Most economists had expected only a slight rise or a decline.

Associated Press

Economist Robert Brusca of Nikko Securities Co. Inc. said builders were responding to increased buyer demand brought on by mortgage rates hitting an 18-year low in January

"It looks to me like it's real demand. ... It looks like a real recovery," he said. "The thing that will make this recovery successful, if it is successful, is the consumer.

Most analysts forecast a victory for President F.W. de Klerk and his reforms, but exit polling was banned and the final results were not expected until Wednesday

De Klerk, who has abolished major apartheid laws, needs a win to push ahead with his last and most important reform: a new constitution extending full political rights to the 30 million black majority.

The president, smiling and looking confident, said he was sure of victory. "I'm optimistic. I'm full of

The heavy voter turnout was expected to favor de Klerk.

If he loses, de Klerk has promised to resign, clearing the way for a whites-only general election. Proapartheid parties would be favored to win an election if de Klerk is defeated.

Analysts said many white voters were undecided and were likely to decide the outcome. Political party workers taking private polls in advance reported many whites were refusing to say how they would vote, adding to the doubt.

Liberal whites, who have traditionally opposed the government, provided de Klerk with a key block of votes, though some were less than enthusiastic.

Violence in black townships has surged since de Klerk called the referendum, claiming almost 300 lives in the past month. But the townships were relatively calm Tuesday night and Wednesday, with four deaths reported. Long lines of whites formed at many urban polling stations as voting began shortly after dawn. A heavy voter turnout is expected to favor de Klerk.

"Any suggestion that we should return to those days (of old-style apartheid) will be resisted with all the power at our command," African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela said Monday in an appeal for "yes" votes.

Like many black leaders, he opposed a whites-only vote, but acknowledged that reforms would stop if whites failed to support de

Bid for housing loans reaches ultimatum stage

U.S.-ISRAEL

WASHINGTON - Israel's yearlong bid for help in securing $10 billion in housing loans appeared near collapse today. Sources said President Bush would tell congressional backers that only a halt to him to approve the guarantees. Israel's defense minister, Moshe Arens, made it clear in a speech Monday that Israel would not pay

Jewish settlements could persuade that price. "We will not beg, we will not crawl for help," he said.

Arens said the settlements keep Arab enemies at a distance from Israeli population centers and are in keeping with a centuries-old Jewish presence in Judea and Samaria. "We are a small people but a proud people," he said.

Israel sought the guarantees so it could borrow the $10 billion from commercial banks at favorable rates. The money would be used to help absorb 400,000 refugees from the former Soviet Union and Ethiopia and tens of thousands more expected to flee from the former Soviet nations.

Bush and Secretary of State James

Baker have denounced the settlements as an obstacle to peace between Israel and the Arabs. Some 110,000 Jews live among 1.7 million Arabs on land the Bush administration wants Israel to relinquish.

Baker initially offered Israel a compromise: no new housing starts but completion of those already under way - enough to settle some 30,000 Jews.

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate foreign appropriations subcommittee, promoted another approach: Any money Israel spent on settlements would be subtracted from the loan.

Amid apparently growing sentiment that Israel should have to pay some price for U.S. help, Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., one of Israel's most ardent supporters in Congress, went along with the Leahy plan.

But a round of intensive negotiations over the weekend involving Bush, Baker and senior members of Congress failed to win the White House over to the compromise, congressional sources said.

A last-gasp session was scheduled in late afternoon at the White House between Leahy and Bush.

The latest version of the Leahy-Kasten proposal would have subjected the loan guarantees to a series of strict conditions.

BIG W Perles bid for AD job rejected

EAST LANSING, Mich. - The eud between George Perles and Michigan State University adminitrators rekindled after the Spartans ootball coach received a form tter rejecting his bid to remain thletic director.

Perles, football coach for the ast nine seasons, was named nterim athletic director in July 990. President John DiBiaggio onsistently opposed the dual oles, but Perles received a positive evaluation from Provost David

After Scott's evaluation was ssued in July 1991, DiBiaggio said erles could apply for the athletic rector's job on condition that he sign as football coach and accept tbacks in contract length and salary. Perles applied but learned ast week that he wasn't among eight finalists.

Knight cancels banquet

"I really believe the main purpose of the banquet over the years, to honor the seniors, is now being done at the senior night we have at our last home

ame," Knight told the Herald-Times of Bloomington in Tuesday

"I'd like to see banquets served for a celebration when a eam really achieves something. When that happens, there'll always be time to put one together."

The Purdue loss was especially costly. Indiana lost a share of its third Big Ten title in four years.

Longhorns remind Davis of Buckeyes

Greg Smith

Associated Press IOWA CITY, Iowa - The Texas basketball team Iowa plays in a first-round NCAA tournament game reminds Hawkeye coach Tom Davis of Big Ten champion Ohio

"That's a good comparison because of the pressure defense, because of the willingness to get up and down the court, having outstanding guards as well as some talented inside people," Davis said in a

If that's the case, Thursday's East Regional game at Greensboro, N.C., should be up for grabs. Iowa (18-10) lost to Ohio State, the No. 1 seed in the Southeast Regional, 85-81 at Columbus before upsetting the Buckeyes 92-86 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

However, Davis said the Long-horns, coached by Tom Penders, seem to be on more of a roll than does Iowa. They have won 11 of their last 13 games despite losing the conference postseason title Sunday to Houston.

Iowa struggled in two games last week, outlasting last-place North-western 69-66 and losing 64-53 Sunday at Michigan State.

'We haven't been as sharp as Texas has. I think you'd give them the edge," Davis said. "We did not play as well in the last week as what we would have liked."

The Longhorns also are making their fourth straight NCAA tournament appearance. "Texas' accomplishment, I think, considerable," Davis said.

Iowa earned a tournament bid last year after failing to qualify the year before. The Hawkeyes defeated East Tennessee State in a first-round game and fell to Duke 85-70 in the second round. The Blue Devils, should they beat Campbell in a first-round game Thursday, will play the Iowa-Texas

WRESTLING

Tom Davis

Oklahoma State may stand in Iowa's way

Daily lowan

Imagine what it would be like to be a collegiate wrestler.

Now picture yourself as one of the best in the nation at what you do. Sound good?

OK, now that you have been wrestling for one to two years, trade in your shoes and headgear for a suit and tie, say goodbye to your coach, and get ready to give up your obsession indefinitely. You're going to court.

If this sounds to good to be true, it wasn't for nationally acclaimed grapplers Pat Smith and Alan Fried of Oklahoma State Univer-

Smith (right), 26-0-1 and the two-time defending national champat 158 pounds and Fried (below), national runner-up at 134, were just two Cowboy wrestlers who had to endure not just a compete, but also the riddance of head coach Joe Seay.

Last summer, the Oklahoma State program was found guilty of enough violations to bring about the suspension of Seay and several wrestlers, including Smith and Fried. After numerous court appearances, some Oklahoma State wrestlers were fortunate to have their eligibility restored.

Seay, however, was not so lucky after spearheading his athletes to lie to the NCAA during the investigation.

Consequently, the 1991-92 season has consisted of nothing but hardship for Smith and Fried off the mat. But on the mat, the difficult times have been suffered only by their opponents. Until their full-time reinstatement in mid-January, the pair were only able to wrestle sparingly. But heading into tomorrow through Saturday's NCAA Championships, Smith and Fried have as good a chance as anyone to win national

And they would like nothing better than to unseat the defending champion Iowa Hawkeyes in front of the hometown folks in Oklahoma City - even if their head coach won't be around to see them make

"I plan on wrestling at the NCAA tournament, our whole team plans on wrestling at the NCAA tournament, and we will be at the NCAA tournament," Smith said after winning the Midlands title last Dec. 29 in Evanston, Ill. "I can guarantee you that. We will be threatening Iowa for the NCAA championship and we plan on winning."

The Midlands was the fifth meet scheduled for the Cowboys this season, but due to all of OSU's allegations not being settled at the time, it was only the first sign of competition for Smith and Fried, the only Cowboys to make the trip to Northwestern.

But neither athlete showed signs of rust. Smith knocked off Iowa's Tom Ryan 9-4 in the finals, while Fried took the Outstanding Wrest ler and Art Kraft Champion of Champions Awards by pinning the two-time defending NCAA champ, Hawkeye Tom Brands.

"I was getting down because we were getting ready to wrestle at Vegas and we get put down," said Smith who, along with Fried, won Big Eight crowns March 7. "Here getting ready to wrestle Bakersfield, and we get put down. Then Portland St. Finally, me and Al decided to come here.'

"It's not like just because he beat me last year and now I pin him, that I'm going to pin him every time," Fried said after his 42-second fall ended Brands' 69-match winning streak. "It's going to be tight matches."

Little did Fried know how accurate a prognosticator he would be, as Brands avenged the defeat with a 15-9 win at the NWCA All-Star Classic Jan. 27. However, that was at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The nationals, where the two are expected to hook up again, are on Fried's home turf.

"I've got a tough one in Oklahoma City," Brands admits.

For Smith and Fried, who is currently ranked No. 2 behind Brands with a mark of 23-1, winning the prestigious Midlands in their first tournament of the season was no fluke. Afterwards, Smith divulged his secret, based on a little advice he received from his brother John, a Cowboy assistant and the only American wrestler to win five world titles.

"What John always reminds me is that he only wrestles twice a year and that's the World Championships and maybe a Goodwill Games or Pan Am Games," Smith says. "But all you have to do is practice every day and get good workouts

GENDER EQUITY

Survey indicates favoritism

Erica Weiland Daily lowan

Many people may have thought that college athletics strongly favors men, but results from a gender equity survey released by the NCAA last week proves it. And the numbers show that the situation is even worse than most people thought, Iowa women's athletic director Dr. Christine Grant

The study, which was separated into Divisions I overall, I-A, I-AA, I-AAA, II and III, was requested by the NCAA's Women Athletic Administrators and involved 646 univer-

Results from the 98 Division I-A universities show that men athletes outnumber women by more than 2 to 1, the average operating expenses for men's programs is almost four times that of women's programs and recruiting expenses for men's athletics is more than five times that of the women's programs.

"I'm delighted that the NCAA did the survey," Grant said. "That's a giant step forward. It's the most comprehensive survey that has been done so I commend them for that, but the overall data is extraordinarily depressing."

In 1991 there was an average of 322.85 participants per school in Division I-A men's sports, while women's athletics boasted an average of only 129.83.

Cutting football scholarships could promote equity in sports

The NCAA's gender equity survey may be just for study, but we shouldn't need to study any more to realize that drastic measures need to be taken to make college sports equitable.

Some say there isn't the money to create equal opportunities for women. It's true that college athletics are financially strapped right now, but that's not an excuse.

To try to save money, many schools are opting to drop sports, but maybe we should consider simply redistributing scholarships, especially some football scholarships.

What?! Cut football scholarships?

People are afraid to say that out loud, but it's a logical step. It's time to stop tap dancing around this issue: Football doesn't need 95 scholarships.

If only 85 football scholarships were awarded, that would save around $75,000. That's only 10 scholarships fewer than what is currently allowed, and I firmly believe that a college football team can survive with 85 players on scholarship. Even 75 would be a realistic number. Those scholarships could easily go to another sport like field hockey, which requires 11 players on the field at a time and is

"I think it's sort of been their underlying attitude this year; they would like to prove they're a better ball club right now than what they were a year ago," Davis said. "I don't think they want the season to end even though we know that it could end very abruptly for us."

Davis said his biggest worry is that Texas will exploit Iowa's per-

With the NCAA's recently released gender equity study, this is a perfect time to act. Now the discrepancies are out in the open for everyone to see so let's act on them.

Why is it inconceivable to give women more opportunities to participate in sports — do women get any less out of athletics than

One suggestion has been that women need to work harder to promote women's athletics in order to make them revenueproducing. Isn't that getting away from the real point of intercollegiate athletics? It was my belief that college sports were for educational benefit. In fact, former NCAA executive director Walter Byers has stated that the NCAA was established "to initiate, stimulate and improve intercollegiate athletic programs for student-athletes and to provide and develop educational leadership, physical fitness, sports participation as a recreational pursuit and athletic excellence.'

We either need to admit that college athletics is an entertainment business and start paying the athletes salaries or change the rules to allow college sports to be truly educational. That means equitable opportunities for men and women.

College football has long been the sacred cow. That has been justified in the past by pointing to how much money it brings to athletic programs and universities, but that can't be done any-

That is a far cry from the Title IX regulations, which say that the ratio of men to women participating in athletics at a university must be roughly equivalent to the ratio of men to women in the undergraduate student body of that school.

The depressing thing, Grant said, is that Title IX was passed 20

"I wept because it is 20 years since Congress guaranteed equal opportunities in educational institutions," Grant said, "and if educational institutions will not voluntarily comply with the letter and the spirit of the law, then who in the nation will?"

The survey also shows that Division I-A schools spend on average almost $1.3 million on men's scholarships but just over half a million dollars on women's. According to NCAA Executive Director Richard Schultz, the study is only for determining institutions progress toward achieving gender equity and is not designed to determine compliance with Title point specific schools but provide division averages.

Another big difference was in the average operating costs: just over $1 million for the men's programs and about $260,000 for the

IX. Survey results also don't pinwomen's sports. Schultz attributed much of the disparity between money spent on men's and women's sports to football programs and the lack of a comparable sport for women. Women don't have teams in football as well as ice hockey, water polo or wrestling, while men can't participate in field hockey. The disparity seen in the study is huge, but Grant said she fears the situation might be even worse than what has been described by the

"The saddest thing is that the data show the best possible side of what is going on," she said. "I'm sure that nobody painted the picture any bleaker than it is, and it may have been painted rosier than it actually is. Schultz said he plans to appoint a task force to recommend how the NCAA should proceed, but he also said that the schools must look for "new, innovative ways to expand programs and resources for women in an environment that is dictating Grant said she hopes that individual schools will use the results of the study as motivation to improve the existing situation. "I'm hoping the chief executive officers of universities will be shocked by the results and shocked enough to do something about it,' she said. "If I were in their shoes, I would appoint a faculty committee to really investigate what exactly is going on in the athletic program.

.. This is not an NCAA problem; it's an institutional problem," she said. "I put the blame squarely on the chief executive officers.'

NCAA TOURNEY

Syracuse readies for Princeton

Associated Press

Now it's Syracuse's turn to deal with the frustrations of playing Pete Caril and Princeton in the opening round of the NCAA tour-

The Ivy League champs are the team everybody else wanted to avoid after the Tigers threw huge scares into Georgetown, Arkansas and Villanova the last three years.

Syracuse (21-9), winner of the Big East tournament, drew the short straw and gets Princeton (22-5) in an East Regional game that is perhaps the most intriguing firstround pairing. It was almost as if the NCAA, already investigating the SU program, was imposing a preliminary sanction on the Orangemen.

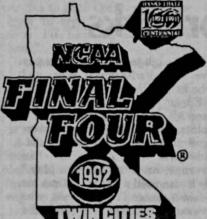

"It's a tough matchup and it's a challenge," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said. "But there are no easy games in the NCAA tourna-

Certainly not those against Princeton, which has lost its last three first-round games by a total of seven points. Caril's throwback basketball - a deliberate, goodshots-only, take-the-full-45-seconds-if-you-need-it game drives run-and-gun teams to dis-

The irony here is that Syracuse has discarded its traditional breakneck, racehorse style this season and become a perimeter team, an approach more suited to its current personnel. "They're not very big," Caril said. "That's one good thing."

Princeton, a winner of four straight Ivy crowns, is never very big. The Tigers have two 6-foot-8 players in Matt Eastwick and Rick Hielscher, along with 6-6 Chris Mooney, up front. Syracuse goes with a frontline of 6-10 Conrad McRae, 6-6 Mike Hopkins and 6-7 Dave Johnson.

Caril was full of compliments for the Orangemen. "They're a smart team and they're playing awfully well right now," he said. So were Georgetown, Arkansas and Villanova, who escaped with one-point, four-point and two-point victories respectively over Princeton in the last three opening rounds.

The tournament gets started Thursday with 16 games at four

In the East at Greensboro, N.C., Seton Hall (21-8) plays LaSalle (20-10), Missouri (20-8) faces West Virginia (20-11), defending national champion Duke (28-2) takes on Campbell (19-11) and Texas (23-11) plays Iowa (18-10).

In the Southeast at Cincinnati, North Carolina (21-9) meets Miami, Ohio (23-7), Alabama (25-8) faces Stanford (18-10), Ohio State (23-5) plays Mississippi Valley State (16-13) and Nebraska (19-9) plays Connecticut (19-19).

The Midwest Region opens Thursday at Milwaukee with Arkansas (25-7) facing Murray State (17-12), Memphis State (20-10) against Pepperdine (24-6), Georgia Tech (21-11) against Houston (25-5) and Southern California (23-5) against Northeast Louisiana (19-9).

In the West at Boise, Idaho, Georgetown (21-9) goes against South Florida (19-9), Florida State (20-9) plays Montana (27-3), Louisiana State (20-9) goes against Brigham Young (25-6) and Indiana (23-6) plays Eastern Illinois (17-13).

On Friday at Worcester, Princeton plays Syracuse after Massachusetts (28-4) faces Fordham (18-12). In the other half of the Worcester schedule, Kentucky (26-6) plays Old Dominion (15-14) and North Carolina-Charlotte (23-8) goes against Iowa State Friday's Southeast schedule at Atlanta has St. John's (19-10) against Tulane (21-8), Oklahoma State (26-7) against Georgia State (25-5), Michigan (20-8) plays Temple (17-12), and Arizona (24-6) plays East Tennessee State (23-6).

In the Midwest at Dayton, it will be Michigan State (21-7) vs. Southwest Missouri State (23-7), Cincinnati (25-4) against Delaware (27-3), Kansas (26-4) facing Howard (17-13) and Evansville (24-5) against Texas-El Paso (25-6).

In the West at Tempe, Ariz., DePaul (20-8) plays New Mexico State (23-7), Oklahoma (21-8) faces Southwestern Louisiana (20-10), Louisiville (18-10) goes against Wake Forest (17-11) and UCLA (25-4) takes on Robert Morris

Teams aren't thrilled about invitation

Associated Press

If they were playing football, Pitt and Penn State would attract a lot more attention than they will for Wednesday night's NIT opener.

And they'd probably be a lot happier about it, too. The NIT is a consolation prize in college basketball for teams that fall out of the NCAA tournament loop. Both the Panthers and Nittany Lions had higher ambitions and were unhappy about settling

Pitt's players voted to turn down the NIT bid after they lost to lowly Miami in the opening round of the Big East Tournament and dropped to 17-15 for the season. Coach Paul Evans overruled his team, though, so the Panthers are at State College, whether they want to be or Penn State is not thrilled with the prospect, either. The Lions thought their 21-7 record was NCAAworthy and weren't thrilled about having to accept second best. "I was disappointed, but not totally surprised," coach Bruce Parkhill said. "Way back when we found out we were going to be an independent, we knew it was going to be tough to get into the NCAAs."

The Pitt-Penn State college football rivalry is ending after 92 years and their NIT matchup is the first time the in-state rivals have met in basketball since 1981-82. Penn State leads the series 74-64.

In Wednesday's other first round NIT games, Alabama-Birmingham (20-8) is at Tennessee (18-14); Western Michigan (21-8) plays at Notre Dame (14-14); Virginia (15-13) visits Villanova (14-14); Western Kentucky (21-10) plays at Kansas State (15-13); and Minnesota (16-15) is at Washington State (21-10).

In Thursday's games, it will be Wisconsin-Green Bay (25-4) at Manhattan (23-8); Butler (21-9) at Purdue (16-14); Richmond (22-7) at Florida (16-12); Rhode Island (20-9) at Vanderbilt (15-14); Southern Illinois (22-7) at Boston College (16-13); Long Beach State (18-11) at Texas Christian (22-10); Louisiana Tech (23-7) at New Mexico (18-12); Ball State (24-8) at Utah (20-10); and Arizona State (18-13) at UC Santa Barbara (20-8).

On Friday, the first round concludes with James Madison (21-10) at Rutgers (15-14).

Pitt and Penn State aren't the only unhappy NIT teams.

Virginia and Villanova are less than thrilled as well after sharing a strange distinction - the first teams since the tournament went to 64 teams to finish at .500 or better in their conferences and still fail to get NCAA bids. The Cavaliers were 8-8 in the ACC and Villanova 11-7 in the Big East.

"There are always going to be some folks who are disappointed," Virginia coach Jeff Jones said. "Unfortunately, this year we're in the number."

Along with plenty of company.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. - There's more to Indiana basketball than Hoosiers, Hoosiers, Hoosiers. And Evansville is just the team to prove

The Aces (24-5) are getting little respect in the state, not to mention the country, as they prepare for their Midwest Regional matchup against Texas-El Paso (25-6) on Friday in Dayton, Ohio.

"We want to show the country there's more to Indiana basketball than the Hoosiers in Bloomington," said Casebier, the Midwestern Collegiate Conference player of the year.

Evansville, located on the southwestern tip of the state, has the numbers to back up its claim. The Aces, MCC regular-season and postseason champions, are seeded eighth in the West. They beat Notre he 74-56 and routed Butler 55-76 in the MCC title

Casebier, who averages 25.9 points per game, scored 39 against Butler an encore performance to his 41-point effort against the Fighting rish five days earlier. Against the Irish, he had seven 3-point shots before halftime, giving the Aces a taste of the attention that has been

o elusive for them. In its third NCAA tournament appearance, the Methodist school about 2,200 students has a chance for some prime time mage-building.

"It's always nice to prove someone wrong," said guard Reed Jackson. At the start of the season, nobody gave us much of a chance; nobody here in our own town, no other Coach Jim Crews, a protege of Indiana coach Bob Knight, hasn't had to shield his team of two freshmen, two sophomores and a junior from the intense media glare that comes with a national rank-

Sometimes, a team forgets why it's good, and our team's done a real good job of staying consistent, certainly up to last Saturday," said Crews, who is finishing his seventh season in Evansville. "We've had a team that's never looked too far ahead or too far behind."

It would have been easy for so young a team to fold after losing 86-57 at Oklahoma State in the season opener or coming within seven points of Arizona in the Fiesta Bowl Classic at Tempe,

Ariz., in December, Crews said. "I think one reason we've been winning is the players have always thought they're pretty good and haven't really cared too much about other people's opinions. They just love to play basketball," he

"Just to get exposure isn't a very good reason to play basketball," Crews added.

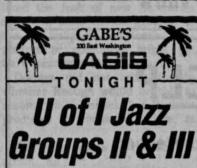

Casebier said he doesn't believe the bright lights will turn his teammates' heads now that they're seeded in the top half of the NCAA tournament's 64 teams.

We fear no team, but respect every team," Casebier said. "It really doesn't matter who we play. I mean, we're all pretty young and none of us have really thought about all of that."

Former assistant turns against Razorbacks

Rick Gano

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE - Sure, Scott Edgar learned the details of coaching college basketball during his 11 years as an assistant to Nolan Richardson. He learned how to

But there was more. Edgar developed a sense of responsibility and respect for those around him, things he was determined to carry over when he left Arkansas last year to become head coach at Murray State.

Now the program that taught him, one he helped build, will be the one he tries to defeat when his Racers (17-12) and Arkansas (25-7) meet Thursday in the first round of the NCAA Midwest Regional at the Bradley Center.

"I have mixed feelings about playing Arkansas because I build up a dislike for an opponent, and there's no one I dislike in Arkansas," Edgar said.

"We were basically family and it got to the point that, except for my own father, I don't respect any man more than Nolan Richardson.

"He brought me into Division 1. He trained me, he had patience with me. He took me when I was 24. As time went on he gave me more freedom here and there. Last year he made me the assistant head coach. I probably had a better relationship with him than any assistant in the country. I've tried to treat my assistants the same

Edgar spent five years with Richardson at Tulsa and then six more at Arkansas, helping recruit the current Razorback senior class that has already made one trip to the Final Four.

"All the coaches here are involved in recruiting, but Scott played a big part in my coming here," said Arkansas senior guard Lee Mayberry. "He's a great recruiter and a good coach."

For weeks, Richardson and Edgar had projected a first-round matchup in the tournament but when it was finally announced Sunday, Edgar said it was still a

The Razorbacks, regular-season points. champs of the Southeastern Conference, got in as an at-large team much for his resemblance to after losing in the semifinals of the SEC tournament while Murray State won 11 of its final 12 games to capture the Ohio Valley Confer-

"I don't know if the tournament committee intentionally makes matchups like that, but it's strange that out of all the teams in the country we'd be matched up with Murray State," Richardson said

"It's tough to play against a guy I've worked with for 12 years and who helped recruit this team.'

Edgar said his game plan is to keep Mayberry, who averaged 15.5 points, and Todd Day, who averaged 23.9, shooting from the outside and hope "they have an average or semi-average day."
He'll also need a big game from his 6-foot-8 center Popeye Jones, who averaged 21 points and 14 rebounds per game.

Edgar has attempted to implement some of the basketball he learned from Richardson.

"We try," he said. "But we look at them as going about 90 mph while we are still within the speed limit at about 55.'

In the other first-round games, Memphis State (20-10) meets Pepperdine (24-6); Georgia Tech (21-11) faces Houston (25-5); and Southern California (23-5) and All-America guard Harold Miner take on Northeast Louisiana (19-9).

Pepperdine, the West Coast Conference and tournament champions, brings a 12-game winning streak against Memphis State, which finished tied for third in the Great Midwest Conference before losing in the tournament finals to Cincinnati.

"When you're Pepperdine, you're not going to get to play a Campbell or Robert Morris," Waves coach Tom Asbury said. "We knew we were going to play a tough team. We've played some tough folks on the road. We've been in Pauley Pavilion and Lawrence, Kansas. I don't know how much that will help, but I hope it helps us from being intimidate.

Pepperdine is led by 6-6 guard Doug Christie, who averaged 19.4 points, and 6-8 forward Geoff Lear with 17 points a game.

Memphis State's first trip to the Bradley Center two weeks ago is one the Tigers would just as soon forget. A mediocre Marquette team beat them 82-67.

"We played well. I had one of my best games of the year. But Marquette was just on fire that day," said Memphis State star Anfernee Hardaway, who averaged 17

Southern Cal's Miner is known as Michael Jordan and his superstitious on-court antics as he is for his remarkable talent.

A 6-5 junior, Miner averaged 26.7 points and helped the Trojans beat UCLA twice and also beat Ohio

Smiley traded to-Twins

Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. - John Smiley, one of four 20-game winners in the major leagues last season, was traded Monday from the Pittsburgh Pirates to the Minnesota Twins for two minor leaguers.

Smiley, who agreed to a $3.44 million contract after filing for arbitration, is eligible for free agency after this season. Pittsburgh, which agreed to pay approximately $800,000 of Smiley's salary, received pitching prospect Denny Neagle and minor-league outfielder Midre Cummings in

"I'm surprised and shocked by it," said Smiley, a 27-year-old left-hander. "I had no idea this was coming. I had no desire to leave Pittsburgh. This is the only organization I've ever known. I'm very disappointed. I'm going to miss these guys."

Smiley, who tied Atlanta's Tom Glavine, Minnesota's Scott Erickson and Detroit's Bill Gullickson for the major-league lead in victories, had a 3.08 ERA last season and was third in voting for the NL Cy Young Award.

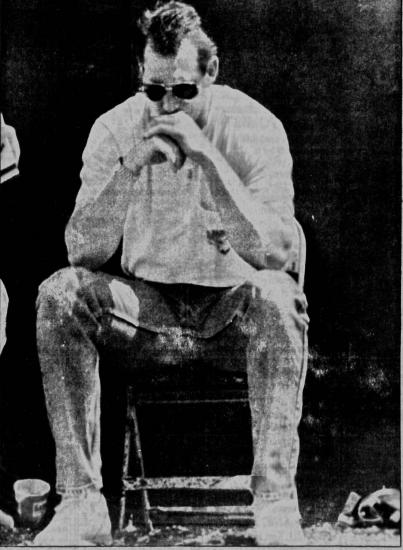

"I would have been willing to stay here for a fair price," Smiley said. I'm not a big money person.

"If they would have made me a easonable long-term offer, I would have gladly stayed. They didn't even make me an offer, though.

"Maybe they can get by with a $2 million payroll. Maybe that's what they want. I think they're breaking up a good thing here with this

Pittsburgh has two other top players' - Barry Bonds and Doug Drabek - who will be eligible for free agency after the season.

"We just didn't give Smiley away,"

Former Pirates pitcher John Smiley sits after taking off his Pittsburgh jersey for the last time. He was traded to Minnesota Tuesday.

Pirates general manager Ted Simmons said. "People in baseball know who these people are. People who follow the minor leagues fully understand what we got. These are the two guys I wanted, the two guys I had to have to part with Smiley."

Simmons claimed the move had nothing to do with Smiley's contract status or the team's payroll. "To get the two players we're getting, I would have given up Smiley regardless of his status," Simmons said. Minnesota was looking for a replacement for Jack Morris, who became a free agent and signed won 20 games doesn't come along very often," Twins general manager Andy MacPhail said. Neagle, a 23-year-old left-hander,

"A 27-year-old left-hander who was 9-4 with a 3.27 at Class AAA Portland last season and 0-1 with a 4.05 ERA in seven starts with Minnesota. The Pirates may use him as a reliever and move Vincente Palacios into the rotation.

Cummings, a 20-year-old outfielder who hit .322 for Class A Kenosha last season and won the Midwest League batting title, will report to the Pirates' major-league

ANGELS

Angels Keough remains in hospital

Ben Walker

Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — California Angels pitcher Matt Keough was upgraded from critical condition to serious after further brain tests showed improvement Tuesday, a day after he was hit in the head by Keough, who underwent emergency brain surgery Monday evening to relieve pressure from a blood clot, had another brain scan taken in the morning.

"At this point, Matt is awake and alert," Dr. Fred Dicke, the acting team physician, said. "He has movement in all extremities. Preliminary results of this morning's CT scan are encouraging and things are looking good.'

Keough, 36, will remain in intensive care for an undertermined period at Scottsdale Memorial Hos-

Meanwhile, across the street at Scottsdale Stadium, where Keough was hit in the right temple while sitting in the dugout, the safety of the new ballpark was called into question.

Last Saturday, Oakland reserve Scott Hemond was struck in the chest by a hard foul while watching in the same third-base dugout where Keough was hit. A few innings after Keough was tagged by a ball off the bat of Giants leadoff hitter John Patterson, Patterson lined another shot into the same dugout, scattering players and leaving a mark on the wall.

Dugouts and seats at spring training parks tend to be closer to the field than at regular major league parks, and the ones at San Francisco's first-year stadium might be the tighest of all.

"The dugouts are kind of low and long and vulnerable," Giants star Will Clark said. "A few adjustments have to be made, to the dugouts and because the homeplate screen is too low."

The Giants have discussed putting a screen in front of the dugouts, but no decision has been made. The club also is replacing the windows on the offices that overlook the field because three have been broken by fouls

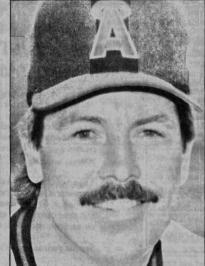

"It's a beautiful ballpark, but it's too close," Angels manager Buck Rodgers said.

Rodgers said he planned to visit Keough on Tuesday evening. Before the Angels-Oakland game in Phoenix, fans were asked to stand for a moment of silence to offer support for Keough.

"So far, so good," Rodgers said.
"He's not out of the woods yet, but he certainly took a giant step."

Keough's father, Marty, his mother and wife were at the hospital with the pitcher.

Marty Keough, a former major leaguer and now a scout for the St. Louis Cardinals, was at the California-San Francisco game when his son was hit. Last week, Marty Keough told friends that he liked the look of new Scottsdale Stadium, built on the grounds of the old ballpark, but feared that players or spectators might get hurt because of their proximity.

Matt Keough

Doctors did not speculate on whether Keough would be able to resume his comeback, but Rodgers predicted it would be awhile, at

"Maybe a couple of months, I'm afraid," he said.

He is 58-84 with a 4.17 ERA in seven-plus major league seasons.

CARDINALS

Worrell says he's ready.

R.B. Fallstrom Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Todd Worrell been out of baseball so long, he fraid the fans won't recognize him.

"You get out of this game for two years and you're a forgotten item," Worrell's statistics have been frozen since he blew out his elbow in September 1989. He's still one save shy of the St. Louis Cardinals' career mark of 127 held by Bruce

Finally, after several missteps and false optimism, he's ready to pitch again. Finally, the Cardinals can bring uniform No. 38 out of mothballs and they're sure the 32-year-old right-hander is ready. "He's never satisfied with himself, and that's fine," manager Joe Torre said. "But the other day he threw a 90-mph fastball and a 95-mph slider, and the day after he only had the normal stiffness."

In his first four appearances this spring, Worrell retired the first 13 batters he faced. He has not allowed a run in five innings and has six strikeouts and only one

And he's not just throwing fastballs. His changeup has been fooling hitters and he said his slider is better than the pre-injury days.

"I don't know why, but that pitch is just a tremendous pitch for me," Worrell said. "I'm putting it on the outside corner and no one's hitting it. Some guys are just barely getting their bat on it.

Still, that save record may have to wait a while longer. Worrell's return to active duty will be as the set-up man for Lee Smith, who led the major leagues with 47 saves Pitching coach Joe Coleman said durability was the only remaining question mark for Worrell.

On Monday, he threw two innings for the first time to see whether his surgically repaired elbow and shoulder would stiffen with time on the bench. They didn't, even though the Cardinals had a threerun inning.

Next, he'll throw every other day. In the third step, the Cardinals plan to use him in consecutive games sometime next week.

That's nothing like the old Worrell, who has 30 or more saves in three of his four full major-league seasons and who made 74, 75 and 68 appearances from 1987-89.

Now, he's happy if he can play catch the day after throwing. "The thing I look for is not so much how I feel but does my arm come back and respond the next day?" Worrell said.

Two former stars elected to Hall

Fred Goodall

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. - It took more than 30 years, but Hal Newhouser finally picked up his last victory in

Newhouser, one of the most dominant pitchers of the 1940s, and American League umpire Bill McGowan, were elected to the Hall of Fame on Tuesday by the veterans committee. Newhouser, who turns 71 next month, said the vote couldn't have come at a better time. He passed a physical at the doctor's office earlier in the day, celebrated his 50th wedding anniversary recently, and was able to break the news of his selection to his 95-year-old mother, down?' She said, 'yes. What's wrong Harold.' I said, how would you like to go to Cooperstown.' She began to cry. Then she said, 'I guess I'll have to buy a new dress."

Newhouser, the only major-league pitcher ever to win MVP awards in successive seasons, and McGowan, who died in 1954, will be inducted this summer along with Tom Seaver and Rollie Fingers.

A left-hander who won 80 games from 1944 to 1946, Newhouser played 15 seasons with the Detroit Tigers before finishing his career with the Cleveland Indians in 1954 and 1955 with an overall record of 207-150.

He was the AL's MVP in 1944 and 1945 when he posted records of 29-9 and 25-9, respectively, and McGowan, whose career spanned 30 seasons, has been described as the most colorful and perhaps the best umpire of his day. After joining the AL in 1925, he worked every inning of 2,500 consecutive games before neuritis forced him to miss his first assignement on Sept. 3, 1940.

"He was one of the sharpest guys with balls and strikes I think I ever saw," Williams said of McGowan, who worked eight World Series and four All-Star games. "I'd say he was probably 99.9 percent right."

Both Newhouser and McGowan ere selected on the first ballot taken during a four-hour meeting at a Tampa hotel. Results of the voting were not released, but election required support from 12 of the 16 committee members in

READING

Pass the Advil, please ... George Dergolis' "Anguish" is a fitting illustration for author David Morris' book "The Culture of Pain," which he will be reading from tonight at Prairie Lights Books.

David Morris initiates readers into wonderful world of 'Pain'

Tasha Robinson Daily Iowan

Award-winning author and former UI professor David B. Morris will read from his latest book, "The Culture of Pain," at 8 tonight at Prairie Lights Books. The program will be broadcast live on WSUI (AM 910) and WOI (AM 640).

"Culture of Pain" is a "dialogue among disciplines that normally do not speak to one another," namely biology, sociology and psychology. According to Morris, medical theories of pain in the 20th century claim that pain is purely a product of neural impulses, physical in nature. A "neglected encounter between pain and meaning" results from this disavowal of the cultural and sociological implications of pain and how pain is interpreted by the human

By joining the voices of Western writers - here the representatives of our culture and subjective existence - with the prosaic medical findings of doctors, Morris hopes to "restore the bridge between pain and meaning," and acknowledge the existence of pain outside purely neurological phenomena. In understanding pain, he claims, we can alleviate it.

While Morris' book should be of special interest to doctors and psychologists, and will hopefully provide a more useful context for those in the nedical field to understand their patients complaints, "Culture of Pain" is an interesting and entertainingly written historical and literary study, suitable for the layman.

The reading, sponsored by the Iowa Humanities Board and Prairie Lights Books, is free and open to the public.

MUSIC

UI Jazz Bands II & III blow out the bop in town tonight

Peter Coppock Daily Iowan

The UI School of Music's jazz department will be swingin' out with their Jazz Bands II and III at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., tonight beginning at 9:30. The gig is not an exam or competition for the bands, but just an opportunity to blow for the public.

Graduate students Jonathan Martin and Paul Altemhofen direct the 18-piece Jazz Bands II and III respectively. The big bands will hit the stand starting at 10:30 p.m., after a few sets by the UI jazz combos warm up the crowd.

Altemhofen says that the big jazz machines will offer a varied program that ranges from swing to bop, and from ballads to salsa. So whether you come to dance or just enjoy the music, for the small cover charge of two bucks you can find out for yourself why "It Don't Mean A Thing If It Ain't Got That Swing."

DANCE PREVIEW

Dancers bring a 'special delivery' to Space/Place

Daily Iowan

Dancers in Company, UI's Dance Department's touring repertory company, will take a break from its spring travels to present performances on its home turf at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, March 18 and 19, in the Space/Place Theatre at North Hall.

An 11-member troupe composed of graduate and undergraduate students, Dancers in Company performs a spectrum of dance styles including ballet, modern dance and jazz, reflecting the breadth of training in the UI Dance Department.

The performances will include works choreographed by faculty members Beth Corning, David Berkey and Francoise Martinet, and graduate student David Marchant, along with a special perfor-mance of "Nine-Person Precision Ball Passing," a crowd-pleaser by guest choreographer Charles Moul-

Corning, the artistic director of Dancers in Company, believes the ensemble performs the dual role of deepening the education of UI dance students and providing a rich cultural experience for Iowa communities.

"For our students the company provides a valuable performing experience," Corning said. "They learn what it's like to tour, where you must adapt to different stages and audiences, and what it's like to sustain a set repertory at a high level of performances.

"It's a busy schedule, a full-time effort, and a very professional experience for a group of young, talented dancers," Corning said.

Four of the works in the repertory were choreographed by Corning. "Count One" opens the show with the full company on stage, allowing all the dancers to introduce what they do best. "Special Delivery' pokes fun at love and marriage, "A Three-Word Improvisation" is a surprise for both the dancers and the audience, and Corning's new piece, "For Blue," is alive with modern dance movement, set to the music of Antonio Vivaldi.

Martinet, a veteran of the Joffrey Ballet, used a classic jazz recording of pianist Art Tatum as the background for "Tatum's Art," a humorous romantic encounter in a ballet studio.

Berkey studied at UCLA and has danced professionally with the Staatatheater in Kassel, Germany, and numerous west coast companies. His "Rumor, Rumor" is set to the music of South American composers Astor Piazzolla and Heitor Villa-Lobos.

Marchant's new work, "Of Love and Lust ... but mostly ..." is a spoof on relationships, set to the music of J.S. Bach.

Admission to the March 18 and 19 performances is $3 at the door.

Stamping out unwanted presents from the mail

Mandy Crane Daily Iowan

OK, you lilyivered coward. You might be safe now but I'll track you down. know you did this to me and you will pay.
I'm talking to the idiot who sent me a chain letter Monday. Cleverly disguised in an envelope with my name in block letters and the wrong ZIP code, Cedar Rapids postmark, Abbott and Costello stamp, this letter will NOT change my life. It will change the life of the moron who sent it.

Yes, I am superstitious, but only partially. I don't walk under ladders but that's because it's dangerous. I don't get near black cats but that's because I'm allergic. I don't break mirrors because I'd cut myself. My mother and I don't have unlucky Friday the 13ths, we have awful Thursday the 12ths.

I have a witness to my opening of this piece of havor — my dear roommate will attest to seeing me scream in disgust upon its falling into my hands and immediately throwing it into the trash. I tried to ignore it, but no, like a bad pimple, it never goes away.

I tried not to dwell on this becoming a sign of bad luck. I've ignored chain letters before and crashed into animals or broken up with boyfriends but I know it's fate, not bad luck. I will not die or get horrifically ill simply because I failed to chuck out $5.80 in postage to mail 20, yes, 20 silly little copies of a letter some jerk made up on his PC during his coffee break.

Monday night, however, 10 hours practically on the dot of my having received this fatal charm I managed to lose a $75 contact lens on my bathroom floor.

I have lost my lenses at night football games, on crowded dance floors and in Italian drainpipes, but I have always found them. The only time I lost a lens for good was when I dove into a pool with my eyes open, and even then I only lost one.

I searched for an hour, going through very disgusting bathroom trash, dismantling my drain and combing my clothes, shoes and bathroom floor with my hands to no avail.

The worst part about losing a contact lens is that you obviously can't see while you're looking for it. This only added to my frustration.

Also add the fact that I'm leaving for my first vacation in three years and my first ever spring break this Saturday, with very little hope of getting a replacement in time. Now you know just how mad I am at the anonymous twit who sent me this CHAIN LETTER FROM HELL.

This is not bad luck, however. I will not look at this as bad luck. I have a witness to my opening of this piece of havoc — my dear roommate will attest to seeing me scream in disgust upon its falling into my hands and immediately throwing it into the trash. I tried to ignore it, but no, like a bad pimple, it never goes away.

This is fate. I've had my left it's probably time to get a new one. In fact, the reason I lost this lens is expensive piece of gas-permeable ight blue to make me less of a match my driver's license.

My happiest days were when the post office kept making the news in the '70s saying that chain letters are illegal and people should stop sending them. Then they changed their minds and said they meant only letters asking for money.

No, this chain letter may break my bank account but not my spirits. I'll wear my glasses all week if I have to but I will not allow some idiotic letter originating in south Venezuela to drive me crazy. (Yes, I dug the dumb thing out of the Chain letters are stupid, expensive and a tremendous waste of time. Over the last 15 years I have done some really dumb things, but the dumbest has been to answer a couple of chain letters. I've lost dollar bills and fancy postcards and never received anything nice in return, nor has disaster ever completely rocked me or my family. I wrote obituaries for 11/2 years for a daily newspaper and none of the people ever died from ignoring a
