UI debaters sweep preliminary national competition

The UI debate team passed through the preliminary rounds of the National Debate Tournament in Ohio with flying colors this weekend, winning all of the possible votes — a feat that has occurred only once before in the history of the tournament.

Paul Slappey, debate team coach, said that UI senior Chuck Smith was also voted the top speaker at the tournament.

The team will continue into the "sweet 16" level of the competition today. All rounds are now sudden death elimination, and the final debate for the championship will be held some time tonight.

Life experiences led Forell to ethics

Lynn M. Tefft
Daily Iowan

When asked why he has devoted his life to the study, teaching, and application of ethics, George Forell is quick to answer, "My own biography is the key to my interest in ethics."

Forell, a Carver Distinguished Professor Emeritus in the religion department, lectured Friday night on "Ethics: An Autobiography," as part of the Geneva Lecture Series. He said many of his life experiences have challenged him ethically.

In an interview before the lecture, Forell talked about the challenges he has faced, and the ethical crisis he feels our society faces today.

Born in Germany shortly after World War I, Forell witnessed many of the events that led to World War II. His father was active in the attempt to stop Hitler's rise to power, and thus Forell involved himself in political ethics at an early age.

After moving to Vienna in 1934, Forell studied there until Hitler took power of Austria in 1938. Forell and his family moved to Sweden, then England, and finally France. The rapid changes in Europe that Forell witnessed sharpened his ethical views. He said he realized that he, unlike many of his peers, could not accept the concept of pacifism.

"I think people in my tradition have a certain basic tendency towards pacifism and in 1938 it became highly questionable whether it was really an ethically viable position when you're confronted with something like Hitler," Forell explained.

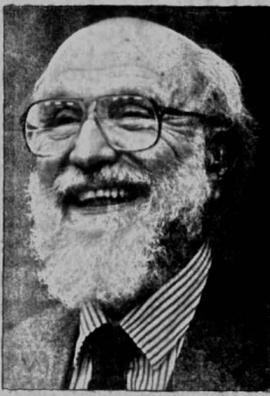

In 1939, Forell moved to Philadelphia to study theology. He became a strong supporter of President Franklin Roosevelt's policy supporting Britain in the fight against Nazism.

This somewhat aggressive attitude, Forell remembered, raised many questions from his pacifist, isolationist fellow Lutherans, but he didn't change his mind.

"Because of my experience," said Forell, "I considered it an ethical issue that one had to do something about the rise and possible triumph of Nazism."

Forell later became a student of American theologian Reinhold Niebuhr at Union Theological Seminary. See FORELL, Page 4A

ABORTION RIGHTS

500,000 advocates converge on capital

Richard L. Vernaci
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An estimated half-million abortion rights demonstrators marched on the nation's capital Sunday to show political muscle that they hoped would sway politicians and a conservative Supreme Court.

"The more we learned about the law at Harvard, the more we realize how fragile these rights are," said Julie Doyle, a Harvard Law School student.

"We're going to turn out of office people who don't support us," Patricia Ireland, president of the National Organization for Women, said at a morning rally.

It was the first abortion rights march on the capital in three years, and Ireland called it "the largest ever of any kind in this nation's capital."

U.S. Park Police estimated the size of the crowd at 500,000.

As it does with all major demonstrations on the Mall, park police photographed the crowd from a helicopter and then superimposed a grid over the composite photo to estimate the crowd. The estimate is made under a formula derived from calculating the number of people who would normally fit into a certain number of square feet.

NOW had said it expected between 300,000 and 700,000 people to take part.

"We do count and there are an awful lot of us and they should watch out," said Isabel Glass of New York.

Democratic presidential candidate Jerry Brown sat quietly for about an hour, but left without speaking to the main crowd. He did stand on a folding chair on the back of the main stage to address a small crowd with a bullhorn.

A NOW spokeswoman, who refused to be identified by name, said the group decided not to allow any presidential candidate to speak.

Bill Clinton, who like Brown took time out from campaigning for the New York Democratic primary to attend the assembly, marched in the rally surrounded by supporters who chanted, "pro-choice, pro-Clinton."

JOHNSON COUNTY COURT

Rojas-Cardona given 2 years probation

Lynn M. Tefft
Daily Iowan

"Pepe" Rojas-Cardona

Juan "Pepe" Rojas-Cardona, the former UI student senate president convicted of second-degree theft, appeared in the Johnson County Courthouse Friday for sentencing.

Judge Lynne Brady sentenced Rojas-Cardona, 24, to a suspended five-year prison term, and placed him on two years probation. Rojas-Cardona was also ordered to pay $3,000 restitution, court costs, and receive psychiatric evaluation and treatment.

A seven-man, five-woman jury found Rojas-Cardona guilty in February on the charge of second-degree theft. The charge states that Rojas-Cardona wrote a check for $3,000 to Shaugun Pan as payment for marketing and research Pan did for Rojas-Cardona's APAC-ROMEX telemarketing company. Police arrested Rojas-Cardona after the check was not paid and an investigation revealed it was written on a closed account.

Before the sentencing Friday, four witnesses testified on Rojas-Cardona's behalf. Two clergymen from West Liberty, where the Rojas-Cardona family resided before moving to Iowa City, a former national officer of the League of United Latin American Citizens and Rojas-Cardona's father all attested to Rojas-Cardona's integrity, generosity and hard-working attitude.

"Pepe has always been willing to help people and has never had bad intentions," Javier Rojas-Islas, Rojas-Cardona's father, testified.

Assistant County Attorney Kelly Raines recommended a five-year suspended prison term and three years probation, plus court costs and restitution.

Rojas-Cardona withdrew his application for a deferred judgment after learning that upon receiving deferred judgment, he would forfeit his right of appeal.

Brady, before delivering the sentence, explained to Rojas-Cardona that with a felony on his court records, he would be unable to achieve his career goal of becoming a lawyer. When asked if he would like to reconsider applying for deferred judgment, Rojas-Cardona refused.

"I believe in the end, justice will prevail," Rojas-Cardona answered.

Rojas-Cardona stated in court that he will appeal this case. In addition, he will stand trial beginning Aug. 10 on another count of second-degree theft and seven counts of forgery. He also faces a civil suit filed by a former employee of APAC-ROMEX telemarketing.

The Department of Immigration and Naturalization is reviewing Cardona's citizenship status. Since he is not a citizen of the United States but rather classified as a "permanent resident," he could face deportation to Mexico.

CAMPAIGN '92

Leaders face controversy; Tsongas may come back

John King
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bill Clinton and Jerry Brown sparred pointedly over abortion rights and Brown's flat tax proposal in a lively debate Sunday as each faced a fresh personal controversy two days before a crucial primary triple-header.

The debate was emblematic of the campaign itself — full of unusual twists and confounded by controversy. After spending the first half-hour on the attack, the Democratic presidential rivals turned gentlemanly, complimenting each other and taking a few shots at President Bush.

With voters in New York, Wisconsin and Kansas going to the polls Tuesday, Clinton, the Arkansas governor, was leading in New York and in a tight race against Brown in Wisconsin, according to polls. A wild card is former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, who suspended his candidacy two weeks ago but said Sunday he would consider re-entering the race, depending on how well he and Clinton did in New York. Tsongas is still on the ballot and a draft-Tsongas group is airing ads.

Clinton's new controversy had an old ring to it: more questions about his draft status at the time he promised to enter a ROTC program to avoid military service in Vietnam.

Clinton, who had said he had a high lottery number and was never called to serve, acknowledged this weekend he received a draft notice while he was at England's Oxford University in 1969, before he pledged to join ROTC — something he did not disclose when asked about his draft status earlier this year.

"I have never had anything to hide on this," Clinton said.

Earlier in the campaign, Clinton said he expected to be drafted that See CLINTON, Page 4A

YOUTH ISSUES

Poverty, death rates plague Iowa children

Lynn M. Tefft
Daily Iowan

A study of trends in Iowa children's well-being has revealed increases in such areas as single-parent families, child poverty rate and the teen violent death rate.

Iowa Kids Count, a nationally funded project to study characteristics of Iowa children, recently reported its findings in "World Class Futures," a publication of statistics and recommendations.

The report found that between 1980 and 1990, the number of single-parent families in Iowa increased 39.7 percent. In 1990, one in five families in Iowa were headed by a single parent.

Iowa's infant mortality rate fell from 11.8 deaths in every 1000 births to 8.3. This is the 10th lowest in the nation.

Although the infant mortality rate fell, it is still the problem that is most crucial, according to Herman Hein, a professor of pediatrics at UI Hospitals and Clinics. Hein is a member of the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality and served as a member of Leadership Collaborative for "Iowa Kids Count."

"The single biggest problem we have is unwanted pregnancy," Hein said.

Hein explained that many women do not take care of themselves to prepare for pregnancy, engaging in such habits as smoking and using alcohol and drugs.

Hein said that by not taking precautionary measures before and during pregnancy, a woman increases the chances of her baby having a low birth weight, dying at a young age, or having other problems.

Hein said that the "Iowa Kids Count" draws attention to the problems Iowa children face, and the next step is finding solutions to the problems.

Hein feels that young women need education to prepare to become mothers. She needs to understand her options when she does become pregnant, Hein said, and know how to prevent a pregnancy as well if that is what she wants.

A K-12 educational program is one part of a solid solution to the problem, Hein said. "It should teach courses that really prepare people to become responsible parents," he said.

Hein said that 11 states, including Iowa and the District of Columbia, require such education.

The next step, said Hein, is to "stop acting like policemen when a young woman becomes pregnant."

This involves making care available, according to Hein. "We must have a system of health care accessible to all people," he stressed.

Another help to new mothers, said Hein, is resource mothers. These women help an expecting woman with her pregnancy, delivery, and care of the baby, becoming a friend and source of information.

What makes resource mothers even more unique, Hein explained, is that they are of the same nationality and background as the women they are helping.

"It is important to train women in that part of society where problems arise," Hein said.

Hein said there is a bill in the Iowa Legislature that addresses the issue of training women to be resource mothers, referring to them as "home visitors."

Kids, parents, workers celebrate week

Lynn M. Tefft
Daily Iowan

Iowa City area children, their parents, and child-care workers are celebrating "The Week of the Young Child" this week as a part of a nationwide celebration sponsored by the National Association for the Education of the Young Child.

Donna Johnson, a member of the planning committee for the week, explained the significance of the event.

"It points out the importance of young children and of meeting their needs. Children are our future, but they tend to get lost in the shuffle," she said.

Johnson pointed out that while older kids are more easily seen in their Scout, sport, and other activities, younger children are not as easily noticed. She said a week like this focuses the attention on them.

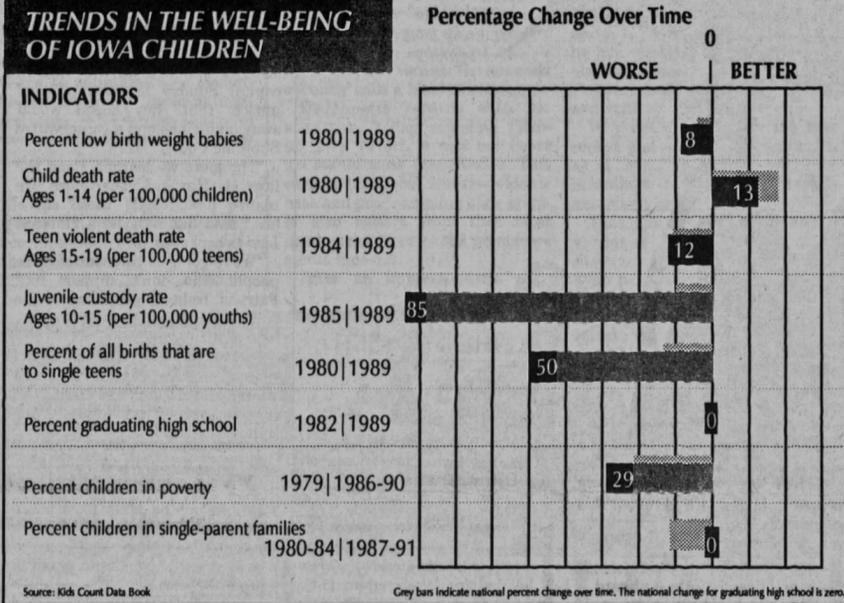

Another goal of the week, Johnson said, is recognizing those who work in the child-care profession.

"We can help people become aware of what early childhood caregivers do," Johnson said.

She explained that the early childhood years are very important, and that the care and love given during those years can make a difference throughout a child's life.

Johnson herself is a day-care worker, and feels the recognition that she and her colleagues get during the celebration is important.

"I feel our job is so essential," Johnson said. "But we often do not get national or community attention."

The celebration for children, their parents, and the community, is sponsored locally by Hills Bank. Johnson feels that having a corporate sponsor has contributed to the increased attention the celebration has gained in the last few years.

NAYEC, who helps sponsor the Iowa City celebration and ones like it around the country, is an association of early childhood professionals. The over 70,000 members are committed to improving the quality of services available to children from birth to age 8.

The local celebration's activities include a Children's Resource Fair, a Child Care Workers Appreciation Luncheon, workshops for parents, "sillies parades," open houses, and a tree planting fair.

"It's a special week for young children," Johnson said. "Iowa City is fortunate to have organizations and centers that participate and make families feel special."

Foundation seeks to change foster care

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

Working to help children in the U.S. foster care system, the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich., has announced a comprehensive, multi-year initiative to help find these children permanent homes.

The program, Families for Kids, is aimed at making a sustainable change in the systems that affect family preservation and child adoption, said Valora Washington, vice president of the program.

According to Washington, there are many myths about adoption, including the assumption that there are few children waiting for adoption in the United States.

"This is simply not true," Washington said in a release. "The children are waiting, but they are most likely to be minority infants and toddlers, older children, African-American males, youngsters with disabilities and siblings." Washington said these children are often ill-served by traditional child welfare systems, many of which are at best fragmented and localized both within and between states.

She said hundreds of thousands of children are drifting through the foster care maze without the resources and action needed to find them permanent homes.

The foundation is seeking written concept papers, up to 10 pages in length, for creative and innovative projects aimed at bringing about significant changes in the system and social policies that affect the adoption of children. A limited number of projects will be funded, with the first review of the papers beginning no later than May 15.

It is expected that applicants will include local, state and national adoption organizations; state agencies; professional disciplines; institutions; and community-based groups.

"Failure to intervene early and positively in the lives of these children is costly, both to the individuals and to society," Washington said. "Not only are there increased foster care expenses, but a disproportionately high number of youngsters find themselves living on the streets or confined to juvenile homes, jails or other institutions."

The initiative is divided into two parts: projects for comprehensive services funded in Michigan and child adoption projects outside of Michigan.

Projects in Michigan can involve a continuum of support services, ranging from efforts to keep families together to finding ways to improve adoption services.

Projects outside of Michigan are expected to focus on effective strategies that place waiting children in families permanently.

The W.K. Kellogg Foundation was established in 1930 to "help people help themselves." As a private

RENOVATION

Activities Center sees changes during break

Wendy Alesch
Daily Iowan

It seems like the UI is always under construction. Just as the laser center is being finished, construction on the new business school begins. The Union is no exception to the perpetual remodeling as just recently the Student Activity Center was totally revamped.

The Student Activity Center now houses 50 non-profit student organizations. Any recognized group on campus, other than political or religious groups, can apply for space in the large room in the basement of the Union.

The large room was just that up until spring break when remodeling efforts began. When students returned, the room that had been just tables, boxes, and mismatched chairs was transformed into something that resembles a corporate office. The construction made the space more efficient so it now houses 50 groups instead of 20, and there is room for more.

There are dividers that give each organization a separate cubicle. Each cubicle has a file cabinet, a separate phone and a desk, designed to organize materials belonging to each group. There are also meeting rooms within the cubicles and several conference tables spread throughout the room.

Other improvements made to the room include the addition of a monitor to answer questions and ensure the upkeep of the room.

Currently there are typewriters available for the organizations and soon the Student Activities Board hopes to provide computers that will be connected with Weeg and the university system.

Money for the project was appropriated through Dean of Students Phillip Jones' office to the Student Activities Association as a kind of surprise.

"No one expected it," Student Activities Director Todd Kramer said. "The first blueprint for the plan was brought up last year but nothing ever happened. Then Matt Wise and Jennifer Kelly brought it up again and they told us about it when the new semester started."

"There was some controversy at first because people didn't want to move while the remodeling was going on. People wanted to wait until summer vacation to start the work but I say you don't turn away a gift. They got it done in a week and now it looks great," Kramer said.

Other controversy over the project came from the fact that some groups were afraid they were not going to have as much room, and others were also upset with the lack of space compared to what they had when the room was less structured.

"We are going to have a meeting and let groups give their opinions and voice concerns," Kramer said. "We told everyone that they would have to cut down on stuff."

There are still spaces open for other organizations to move into the new area. Any recognized campus organization can submit an application. The Student Activities Board is also hoping to put on an open house during Riverfest so people can see the new facility and learn more about the nearly 500 campus organizations.

RESEARCH

UI students participate in storm experiments

Civil and environmental engineering students benefited from last winter's storms.

Molly Spann
Daily Iowan

When rising winds and dropping temperatures foretold the coming of winter storms during the past two months, 12 UI engineering students found it to be perfect weather.

UI civil and environmental engineering undergraduate and graduate students were participants in a winter storm experimental project for the National Center for Atmospheric Research titled "STORM - Fronts."

The experiment entailed launching weather balloons, gathering data from the balloons and then sending the data back to the NCAR for six weeks during February and March, according to Alex Guetter, a project leader and UI graduate student in civil and environmental engineering.

The students and the equipment were stationed in a trailer on the UI's Oakdale campus to observe the 10 storms covered over the six-week period.

Outside the trailer, a weather station was set up to measure temperature, humidity and climate variables. A computer and electrical equipment were inside, according to Guetter. During a storm, one to three people would work at the site for a 48-hour operation, each student doing six-hour intervals of continuous work.

Guetter said he gained much knowledge from working with the weather.

"I gained a better understanding of weather conditions during a winter storm — how temperature changes, how clouds evolve and real time measuring," Guetter said. "I gained a complete understanding of how they change from the surface to the troposphere."

When winter storm weather began to arise, the NCAR contacted the 100 experiment sites across the Midwest, giving them 12-hour notice to have people out on the sites ready to work for the next 48 hours, Guetter said. He said the entire operation was synchronized, with each site releasing the balloons and observing the weather at the same time.

The UI was chosen to participate in the experiment because of previous project work with the NCAR.

The purpose of the experimental project was to give better guidelines for weather predictions, according to Konstantine Georgakakos, UI associate professor of civil and environmental engineering and a research engineer with the Iowa Institute of Hydraulic Research, who served as the project's principal investigator at the UI.

"The information will be made available to scientists throughout the U.S.," Georgakakos said. "The scientists will try to understand the physical issues, then develop mathematical models to be able to predict storm development and movement. It is this that will improve weather forecasting."

Jeff McCollum, a UI senior and civil engineering major who participated in the project, said it was interesting to collect the weather data firsthand.

"You usually see other people's data," McCollum said. "This we were recording for ourselves."

All three said they thought the project went smoothly and regarded it as a success.

"We gathered information with good quality," said Guetter. "It's hard tracking winter storms through radio transmissions — one might have interference. But the equipment was set up so important information could be gathered with good quality. Everyone could get a good understanding of the behavior of the storm."

According to Georgakakos, the UI site for the winter storm experimental project has been regarded as one of the top two data collecting sites involved.

SUMMER OPPORTUNITIES

Mayor's employment program creates jobs for area youth

Anne Johnston
Daily Iowan

A $26,000 state grant has been awarded to Iowa City's Mayor's Youth Employment Program for a summer employment program to be run in conjunction with UI Recreational Services.

The joint effort, now in its sixth year, receives 65 percent of its funding from the Iowa Department of Economic Development, with the remaining portion being contributed by Rec Services.

"This has been a tremendous marriage, and it has allowed us to create significantly more jobs during the summer," said Peg McElroy Fraser, executive director of the Mayor's Youth Employment Program.

McElroy Fraser said approximately 13 part- and full-time summer jobs with the Young Adult Conservation Corps have been created for unemployed or underemployed individuals between the ages of 18 and 24.

"I like the concept that young people can remain here in this community throughout the summer and acquire greater skills,"

McElroy Fraser said.

Harry Ostrander, director of UI Recreational Services, said YACC workers have primarily been involved in projects at the 480-acre Machride Nature Recreation Area. "This has been a great program for us," Ostrander said.

 nary in New York. He completed a dissertation on the ethics of Martin Luther, and then started a career in ethics education, which included 35 years at the UI.

Vigorously supporting ethics education, Forell enjoys his part in it. "I feel very strongly that ethics is an issue that everybody has to confront," he said. "I hope that by teaching ethics I could help people make an informed decision, with a clear idea of the alternatives that are open to us in our choice of ethical decisions."

Still, Forell believes that when people make ethics decisions, they take the path of least resistance.

"People would like to have simple answers," Forell said. "The entire advertising business is based on the simple answer notion."

Forell argues that rather than accept the easy answers, people should survey the many possibilities. In a paper titled "The Ethical Crisis of Our Culture," he outlines the many ethical systems available, from the religiously based to those influenced by Marxism.

"We really can learn from a great many people. And if we think about it, the different approaches become a resource for wrestling with the problems that confront all of humanity," Forell said.

Forell feels that people's lackadaisical attitude toward ethics is partially a result of the emotional influence on decision-making.

"We are dealing with a depreciation of reason," said Forell. "Nobody wants to get at any of the problems in a rational fashion. And ethics is an attempt to bring reason to bear on the decision-making process we all have to engage in."

"Up to the 20th century, everybody believed that there was right and wrong. They disagreed on what was right and wrong, and they often didn't do what they considered right, but there has never been a time when people said there really isn't any right and wrong," Forell added.

Now, Forell said, that the ethical thinking in our society is in crisis. The ability and willingness of people to weigh the right and wrong in a situation is diminishing, he said.

"Because of certain developments in the 20th century, there are really many people who now don't believe that there is a right and wrong. And that's a crisis," Forell said.

Forell said that while all need not agree on one ethical system, since there are many, people should make ethically-based decisions. He said that even if everyone doesn't agree on one system, people can work together.

"Let's work together on the basis of hope and the earthly welfare of human beings," Forell said.

Forell also conducted a symposium titled "The Ethical Crisis of Our Culture" Friday for faculty and students.

 summer but never said he had actually received a draft notice and received permission to complete the term. "I would have been more than happy to tell you this if it ever occurred to me to bring it up," Clinton told reporters.

For Brown, a newspaper report suggesting that as governor he awarded judgeships to big financial backers was a jarring contrast to his campaign's central theme that political contributions have corrupted the system.

"It's false if there's any implication that I was influenced by any campaign contributions," Brown said of the Los Angeles Times story.

Both Brown and Clinton, in their Sunday morning debate, owned up to personal imperfections, an exchange that served as a reminder of growing worries within their party that its candidates might not be able to beat a vulnerable incumbent president.

"I'm a Roman Catholic and I believe in going to confession," Brown said after acknowledging he was once the Democratic Party's premier fund-raiser.

 scheduled to hear arguments April 22 on a Pennsylvania case that imposes restrictions on abortions.

People on both sides of the issue believe the court will use that case to undermine or even overturn Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 decision that made abortion legal.

As the march began, skies were clear, temperatures were brisk and strong winds swept Washington, which also was marking the start of its annual cherry blossom festivities.

Many of the marchers were clad in white and were from out of town, having spent the night or at least the early hours of the morning crammed into buses for the trip to Washington.

As they passed the White House, some demonstrators hurled onto the lawn tennis balls bearing the message "Are you ready to be a mother?" Uniformed Secret Service officers stood inside the iron fence impassively watching the bright green balls arc through the air.

President Bush, who has made telephone speeches to anti-abortion rallies, was at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md.

Anti-abortion demonstrators planned a peaceful rally at the West Front of the Capitol, just a couple of blocks from where the afternoon pro-choice event was being staged.

Dozens of politicians participated in the march and rally.

"We want to make sure that our right to choose remains in the families and out of politics," said Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md.

Said Geraldine Ferraro, the 1984 Democratic vice presidential candidate who's running for her party's nomination for the Senate from New York: "We're damn mad. For the record, this is a pro-choice nation."

The march also drew a number of big-name entertainers, including Peter, Paul and Mary.

"We hope to send a strong message to Congress, to the Supreme Court that women should decide whether or not to have children and that a government should not be in a position to intrude upon a woman's womb," actress Jane Fonda said in an interview. "This is an issue of freedom of choice."

"I'm scared that they're going to take my rights away from me," said actress Dana Delany,

NEW YORK PRIMARY

Start spreading the news

One of the more entertaining parts of the '92 campaign will end tomorrow when New York holds its primary. With the unhappy people and a vicious press corps, the New York primary is nothing if not exciting. With the campaigning almost over, it is a good time to reflect on what Bill Clinton and Jerry Brown have had to endure over the past couple of weeks, and why they will probably be the two happiest people in America tomorrow as they go off to the next primary state and leave New York behind.

New Yorkers, especially the citizens of New York City, are not exactly happy campers in 1992. (Be honest, if you lived in the same city as Donald Trump and Leona Helmsley, and had to endure the Yankees, would you be happy either?). In Gotham, crime is rampant, the city has no money, and kids bringing guns to school is an all-too-common occurrence. In Albany, the state leaders can't put together a budget. This is only the tip of the iceberg, but it's a small idea of life in New York today.

This is the bleak backdrop that the presidential candidates face when they arrive in New York. As politicians tend to do, they promise to make everybody's life better. New Yorkers, cynical lot they are, have heard these promises before from other politicians in other elections, and not much has improved. Therefore, a politician's promise plays about as well in New York as a brewery opening in Utah.

But, instead of just not believing the candidate, many New Yorkers do their best to damage political campaigns, thereby spreading the misery of their own lives to the lives of the candidates. For example, there are more hecklers at a New York political rally than at a bad comedian's concert. Also, in a city where intolerance and bigotry is high, candidates run the risk of getting support from an ethnic group that is disliked by other ethnic groups. The outbursts against the candidates sometimes make for great television, but in the end serve no purpose. To put it in another way, what New Yorkers basically say to the candidates can't be said in a family newspaper, but we all know it is anatomically impossible.

To exacerbate the situation, there is the presence of the tarantulas known as the New York media. They love to take an issue and blow it way out of proportion, in an effort to destroy a candidate, which they believe is their God-given right in the political process. Witness the flap about Clinton taking a couple of puffs of weed 20 years ago. The New York media has tried to make this the biggest issue since Watergate. It's hard to decide if it is funny or sad, that instead of discussing the real problems that afflict New York, the press spends so much time on an idiotic thing like this.

Clinton will probably win tomorrow, which will just about lock up the nomination for him. But, both he and Brown will be winners in one respect: they will be able to leave New York.

Abortion letter

To the Editor:

I have a few comments to make regarding Ms. Michon Ross's letter in the March 19 DI.

First: The woman in question's "constitutional right of choice" had been exercised when she chose to bring her baby into this world. No one violated any of her protest, even if the crime had not been one of such heinous proportions.

Second: Ms. Ross is totally incorrect in asserting that the poor infant in question was "not viable" to live "on its own." Any normal fetus past the gestational age of 36 weeks is viable. After 36 weeks the lungs are capable of functioning on their own. The murdered baby was living and breathing on his own when he was killed.

Third: Ms. Ross is obviously unaware of the customs and laws of the country / state in which she lives. She states "if only she had done exactly the same thing eight months, weeks or days sooner, things would be all right . . ." She is correct in saying that an eight-week (two-month) pregnancy may be terminated, but that is the only correct section of that statement. Here in Iowa City (as the rest of Iowa, I presume since Roe vs. Wade is still in effect), a normal pregnancy may be terminated up to 20 weeks. From 20 to 24 weeks, a detected abnormal pregnancy may be terminated. From 24 to 27 weeks a pregnancy may only be terminated after a special committee deems it necessary. After 27 weeks, nothing can be done to terminate.

As a personal note, I do not normally take seriously the statements of anyone as disturbed as Ms. Ross obviously is, but I felt that such blatant misconceptions should not go uncorrected. I will not argue her opinions; she has every right to those, but all her opinions in her letter were supported by bogus evidence. I found her letter to be extremely inaccurate and inappropriate. Not to mention in bad taste.

GUEST OPINION

Negro, black or African-American?

Let me say at the outset that I am an American male who happens to be black. I have a real problem with what seems to be the politically correct designation of race as set forth by the black political leadership of this nation.

Recently, I read an exam given in one of the courses in the College of Pharmacy. I noticed that one of the case study questions referred to an individual as an "African-American."

This brings me to the subject of this column. Our society has commonly used the term "black" as a racial designation for Negro members of the black race. Why is the term "African-American" now considered politically correct by blacks as well as an increasing number of whites? As a designation of race it is certainly less than accurate. For example, what would one be called who is a white male or female from South Africa and is also a naturalized U.S. citizen? Could it be "African-American"? Am I of the same race as that individual? I think not! What about those black or Negro individuals who are citizens of Great Britain whose ancestors were brought to England as a result of the African slave trade? They certainly are not "African-Americans."

I therefore pose the question: To what race do they belong? Do whites of German or French ancestry belong to a different race than those of Irish or Polish ancestry? Of course not! Should we for consistency's sake use, for example, Polish-American as a designation of race for a Caucasian individual whose ancestors are from what is today known as Poland. What sense would that make outside the limits of indicating one's national origin or ancestry. What's next? Will Caucasians from these regions be referred to racially as "Euro-Americans"? The term certainly is more specific than "white."

The "African-American" designation is not one indicating race, but simply indicates national origin or ancestry for most black Americans. It should be used only in that context. "African-American," as a racial designation, is almost as inane as the term "colored." Jesse Jackson, Benjamin Hooks and Bill Cosby, who were instrumental in the initiation of this trend, have decided that this will now be the politically correct designation of race for American Negroes. What makes these individuals authorities on this subject? These individuals don't speak for the entire black community. When are people going to stop listening to everything these guys say? Whites are seemingly afraid of offending Negroes if they use the term black instead of "African-American" in a public or official capacity. This is absurd.

Recently I tuned in to a radio talk show on a Cedar Rapids station. The subject was race relations between blacks and whites in the state of Iowa. The interviewer, who was white, stopped short just after using the term black in reference to race. She then asked her guest, a black male, as to the correct race designation. He proceeded to tell her, as a matter of fact, that the term "African-American" is now the preferred designation. Says who? I beg to differ and I differ strongly. Thurgood Marshall, the great former Supreme Court justice, perpetuated this notion even more. When asked by a white reporter if black people were better off today, as a result of his tenure on the Supreme Court, Justice Marshall sternly replied, "I am not a black people, I am an Afro-American." (Why he used "Afro-American" instead of the newer politically correct "African-American" designation is something I don't know. Maybe even Justice Marshall was confused.) The reporter sheepishly apologized. What did he do wrong? Marshall was offended by the term black that in years past has been perfectly acceptable as a term applied to American Negroes. How was the reporter to know?

I don't blame white folks for this confusion. They try their best. But when the black political establishment changes the politically correct designation every 15 years or so, it can be difficult to keep current. It's even hard for me to keep up!

Why does it seem that minority groups always seem to have some descriptive prefix attached to their "American" designation? I've heard all the arguments about how the term "African-American" gives blacks a sense of national heritage and origin. It will, according to proponents of its usage, provide a sense of pride and ancestry to young underprivileged blacks. Oh, come on, let's get serious. How is being called "African-American," instead of black, going to give the disproportionate number of blacks in poverty some kind of uplifting inspiration? The issues of crime, poor education, inadequate health care and ever-present discrimination are what is important to this forgotten segment of our population. Checking off the box on a government form labeled "African-American" is not going to give them the moment of "sky-rocketing" ethnic pride simply because they are reminded from whence they came.

The debate over politically correct terminology seems to focus an inordinate amount of undeserved attention on the differences among the races rather than on the unifying fact that we are all Americans who wish the best for our country and fellow man. There is certainly nothing wrong with recognizing and celebrating one's history, heritage and cultural diversity. In fact it is good. However, forcing some new politically correct phrase on the general public does not provide a constructive means to that end. It is trivial.

I have one final thought for all you confused white folks out there. Jesse, Benjamin, Thurgood and Bill, along with a few others, may call themselves "African-Americans," but you can still call me black — I won't be offended.

Peter Ramsey is a graduate student in the College of Pharmacy.

GUEST OPINION

Bush's foreign policy: China's MFN status

This June, the most-favored-nation status for China will expire. Already it has become an important campaign issue as Senate Democratic leaders revive the debate on the unpopular policy in an attempt to embarrass President Bush and undermine his foreign policy leadership. Earlier this year, the Senate voted 59-39 to require China to prove "substantial progress" in human rights, trade issues and weapons proliferation before renewal of the MFN treaty. President Bush promises to veto any bill which attaches conditions to the extension of China's MFN status.

Much of the rhetoric used to oppose China's MFN status is based on misunderstanding of the term. Although most-favored-nation status seems to indicate that a country receives special trade privileges, it actually means simply that the country is treated in a nondiscriminatory way. The countries agree not to treat each other less favorably than other nations with the same status. As most countries in the world have MFN status, revocation of MFN is normally used by the United States only as an extreme form of economic sanction.

Those who argue against the unconditioned extension of MFN to China claim that it serves to legitimate a dictatorial government and that harsher policies would force China to pursue more democratic policies. I would argue that it is for the benefit of both the United States and China to unconditionally extend the MFN treaty. The benefits for the United States are mainly economic. For China, however, the effect of the decision will have much more far-reaching consequences. For the United States, the most immediate effects would be economic. Tariffs on Chinese imports, especially consumer goods such as textiles, shoes, toys and electronic products, of which China is a major supplier, would rise tremendously. Tariffs on women's silk apparel, for example, would rise from the MFN rate of 6.9 percent to the full rate of 65 percent. A White House study estimated that imports would be subject to an average duty of about 60 percent and raise prices on these items by an average of 40 percent. The rise in prices would be felt disproportionately by low-income American consumers. As China is the largest volume exporter of U.S. textile and apparel imports, this would have a significant negative impact on the American economy and slow recovery from the recession.

More significant for Iowa would be the possibility of retaliatory measures by China if the United States revoked MFN status. Because most of the U.S. exports to China are agricultural, Iowa would lose more than other parts of the country if trade with China is restricted. In 1990, China was the largest market for U.S. fertilizers and the sixth largest market for cereals and cereal products. During this time, China spent $527 million on American food and live animals.

The adverse economic effect on China would also be substantial. It is estimated that the withdrawal of MFN status would result in a drop of between $3 billion and $6 billion in China's annual foreign exchange revenues. It would be most damaging to the reform-minded southern provinces of Fujian and Guangdong, where much of China's export products originate.

Yet success of capitalistic enterprises in these provinces encourages reform. Even party hard-liners have recently made public statements in support of reform. Chinese Prime Minister Li Peng stated that "China wants to speed up the policy of opening and reform." Deng Xiaoping warned conservatives in the party that "whoever does not reform will have to leave the stage" and promised the creation of several new "Hong Kongs" along the Chinese coast.

Although the Chinese regime supports only market freedoms and maintains a firm grip on political freedom, such economic reforms could slowly lead to democracy. The close link between capitalism and democracy is demonstrated by neighboring Asian countries. Once extremely authoritarian countries such as South Korea and Taiwan have loosened up politically now that the free market has brought about economic success.

The growth of capitalism in China may have the same effect. The free market gives power to independent individuals and groups unaligned with current political powers, especially in the export-oriented southern provinces. These provinces are already socially the most free areas in China. As their economic might improves, they may also demand increasing political power. The free struggle between independent market interests can provide the foundation of democracy.

China's MFN status is an important campaign issue. The final decision to extend or suspend China's MFN status should be decided neither by emotional rhetoric nor by domestic political considerations, but rather by a pragmatic understanding of the situation of China and the mutual benefits of the treaty. As President Bush was once ambassador to China, he is in one of the best positions to judge the validity of the treaty. It is in our best interests to follow his leadership on this issue.

Sam Walton

Wal-Mart's founder, billionaire Sam Walton, dead at 74

Dennis Byrd
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Sam Walton, the feisty business pioneer who never lost touch with his Arkansas roots as he built Wal-Mart into the nation's largest retail chain, died Sunday. He was 74.

He underwent treatment for leukemia in the early 1980s and was diagnosed with bone cancer in 1990. The cause of death wasn't immediately disclosed, said Wal-Mart spokeswoman Jane Arend.

Walton was a shrewd businessman who used high-tech management and lots of cheerleading to sell employees on a philosophy of efficiency and service to the customer.

That philosophy enabled Wal-Mart, which began with a single store in Rogers, Ark., in 1962, to ring up $43.89 billion in 1991 sales and dethrone Sears, Roebuck and Co. as the nation's largest retailer early in 1991.

It also made Samuel Moore Walton one of the richest people in the United States. In October 1991, Forbes magazine placed him and his four children as Nos. 3 to 7 on its list of the wealthiest Americans, with a net worth of $4.4 billion each.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, a Democratic presidential candidate, called Walton a charitable man.

"Hillary and I treasured Sam Walton's friendship and we will miss him very much," Clinton said. "He was ... one of the greatest citizens in the history of the state of Arkansas."

Walton died about 8 a.m. at the University of Arkansas Medical Sciences Hospital, where he had been more than a week, Wal-Mart officials said.

Born March 29, 1918, in Kingfisher, Okla., he attended the University of Missouri, receiving a bachelor's degree in economics in 1940. He went to work as a management trainee at J.C. Penney Co., then served in the Army from 1942 to 1945.

After the war, Walton opened a Ben Franklin variety store in Newport, Ark. He moved it to Bentonville, Ark., in 1950 and renamed it Walton's 5 & 10. Walton and his sometime partner, brother James L. "Bud" Walton, eventually operated 15 Ben Franklin stores.

Walton opened the first Wal-Mart Discount City store in 1962. By 1969, there were 18 stores, but the company began growing explosively in the 1980s, sometimes adding hundreds of new stores a year, most of them in small towns.

As of March 31, 1992, there were 1,735 Wal-Marts and 212 Sam's Wholesale Club warehouse stores.

"There was a lot more business in those towns than people ever thought," Walton once said.

The stores' reputation for low prices and good service stole business from rival retailers — including Kmart and Sears. Edward Brennan, chairman and chief executive officer of Sears, mourned his death.

"He was a great merchant, a great leader and a great competitor," Brennan said.

Last month, Walton received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor, from President Bush.

When Walton was diagnosed with multiple myeloma, a form of bone cancer, he sent a memo to all the company's stores, saying he didn't want employees — he called them "associates" — to hear it from someone else.

In 1988, Walton turned over day-to-day operations and the title of chief executive officer to Wal-Mart President David Glass. Walton remained chairman. "We have lost a friend," Glass said. "Only his family meant more to Sam Walton than his beloved associates."

Muslim nations reluctant to break sanctions

Walter Putnam
Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Despite Moammar Khadafy's appeal for Islamic unity against the West, there are no indications that Muslim nations would rush to Libya's aid by breaking U.N. sanctions.

However, it is clear that the standoff between Libya and the U.N. Security Council has heightened Islamic nations' resentment of the West and intensified suspicions that they are singled out for international rebuke.

On Sunday, the Organization of Islamic Conference, a political umbrella group for Muslim nations, criticized the sanctions decision for its "inexplicable precipitousness."

Khadafy on Saturday characterized the confrontation as "a new global conflict between Christianity and Islam."

The Security Council has approved sanctions against Libya for failing to turn over two intelligence agents alleged to have taken part in the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 and the 1988 bombing of a French airliner over Niger.

Khadafy said the sanctions are part of a plot by "the Crusader enemy" to convert the world to Christianity.

Iraq's Saddam Hussein similarly tried to couch the Persian Gulf War in religious terms and Iraq is urging other Islamic nations to rally behind Libya.

"It seems to people here that the West is trying to humiliate the Arab world and they see the sanctions as another example of that," said a Western diplomat in Morocco.

But most nations are taking a cautious approach. Even Iran, which seldom passes a chance to condemn the West, has been silent on the issue since the sanctions vote last week.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak indicated his country would comply. He reportedly said Thursday that "the Security Council resolution is binding on all member states of the United Nations."

Tunisia's official position is that it will heed the sanctions even though it opposes them. Sudan also condemned the action but has not specified a clear-cut position on compliance.

Morocco has not indicated whether it would comply but has mounted an unusual public relations campaign to make it clear that it abstained from the vote in the Security Council.

A Western U.N. diplomat and expert on the Middle East said defiance of sanctions on a major scale "has never happened before."

The Libyan sanctions resolution was adopted under Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter, which means force could be used to back it.

The diplomat said he didn't know if another resolution would be required to punish a violator, but at the least the offender would be summoned to the Security Council for a "cage-rattling session."

So far, Iraq has been the most vociferous supporter of Libya in the confrontation.

IRANIAN BOMBING

Air strike in Iraqi territory further strains relations

Ed Blanche

Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iranian warplanes bombed an Iranian rebel base near Baghdad on Sunday, the first air strike by Iran on Iraqi territory since a 1988 cease-fire halted their eight-year war.

Iraq claimed its forces shot down one of eight Iranian fighter-bombers and captured the two-man crew. State-run Baghdad radio, monitored in Cyprus, called the raid an act of "blatant and unjustified aggression" and warned Iran of "grave consequences."

Rebel supporters in Europe responded by attacking Iranian embassies in at least six countries.

The air raid marked a sharp deterioration in relations between Iran and Iraq, which have not signed a peace treaty to formally end their 1980-88 war and have been waging increasingly strident propaganda campaigns against each other.

Tehran said the air strike was in retaliation for a raid by guerrillas of Mujahedeen Khalq, or People's Holy Warriors, on two villages in western Iran on Saturday. It also blamed the Mujahedeen for recent attacks on Iranian diplomats in Baghdad.

But the raid may have been an attempt by Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani to shore up support five days before parliamentary elections, in which he is trying to crush opponents of moves to improve relations with the West.

The air attack was the most serious clash since March 1991, when units of Iran's Revolutionary Guards crossed the border during Kurdish and Shiite Muslim rebellions and clashed with Iraqi troops and their allies.

Mujahedeen Khalq, the largest exiled Iranian opposition force, said one of its fighters was killed and several others wounded when its base near Khalis, 30 miles inside Iraq and 40 miles from Baghdad, was showered with cluster bombs on Sunday morning. It denied attacking the Iranian villages.

Ali Reza Jafarazadeh, a Mujahedeen spokesman in Baghdad, said: "The real reason for today's attack was the tremendous political crisis facing the Tehran regime inside Iran over the parliamentary elections." He spoke by telephone with The Associated Press in Nicosia.

Iraq said eight U.S.-built F-4 Phantom jets "heavily pounded" the Iranian base and that Iraqi troops shot down one warplane and captured the two crewmen.

The rebels said 12 F-4s attacked in five waves and claimed they shot down the jet.

The official Iraqi News Agency said President Saddam Hussein met with his military commanders after the attack. It did not give details of the discussions.

Baghdad Radio said Iraq's Foreign Ministry sent a letter of protest to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali. His predecessor, Javier Perez de Cuellar, angered the Iraqis last year by blaming Iraq for the Iran-Iraq war.

Mujahedeen Khalq issued a statement in France saying its leader, Massoud Radjavi, sent a telegram to Boutros-Ghali asking that the U.N. Security Council condemn the attack and embargo oil and arms trade with Iran.

In Europe, dozens of Mujahedeen supporters hurled firebombs, bricks and rocks at Iranian diplomatic offices in Germany, Sweden, Britain, France, the Netherlands and Switzerland. Two buildings at the embassy in Sweden were badly burned and a consulate in Hamburg, Germany, also suffered fire damage.

The Iraqis are believed to have about 20 American-made F-4s in working condition.

U.S. GOVERNMENT

Drug control office goads Cabinet for funds

Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Office of National Drug Control Policy has waged intense, behind-the-scenes battles to force six recalcitrant Cabinet agencies to seek $115.3 million in additional funds for the war on drugs, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press.

The office's real power lies in its ability to expose agencies seeking what it believes is too little money to carry out the president's anti-drug strategy.

But revealing such problems required a breach of the administration's normal reluctance to tell outsiders — that is, Congress — about family squabbles.

Nevertheless, the drug control policy office threatened to do just that late last year after less drastic measures failed to persuade six departments to increase their anti-drug budget proposals for fiscal 1993.

After the warning, the six increased their total budget requests by $115.3 million, most of that for drug demand reduction programs, according to the documents sent to the Senate Judiciary and House Government Operations committees by the office of ONDCP Director Bob Martinez.

The Bush administration has asked Congress for $12.7 billion to pay for federal anti-drug efforts in fiscal 1993.

Thus far, the office has not used its ultimate weapon: sending letters signed by Martinez to a department head declaring the department's drug-war funding inadequate.

Instead, it has fired warning shots. "We've threatened by sending over drafts of unsigned letters that would decertify agencies, and that got an answer," Bruce Carnes, ONDCP's director of planning, budget and administration, told a Senate panel last week. "There we've got definite big-time power."

Because the congressional committees requested the drafts as well as Martinez's signed letters certifying every department's final budget request as adequate, the threats to expose the reluctant drug warriors to Congress became, unintentionally, reality.

The documents show the secretaries of Education, Health and Human Services, Treasury, Housing and Urban Development, Veterans Affairs and Labor received draft letters.

After receiving the letter, the Education Department boosted its proposal for Drug-Free Schools and Communities grants by $62.5 million.

Department representatives denied they were slackers in the war on drugs.

Doctor seeks revenge, fails with AIDS hoax

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — A doctor has been reprimanded by a state board for trying to get revenge on an ex-girlfriend by arranging for her to be told falsely that she had tested positive for the AIDS virus.

Dr. Thomas A. DiGiovanna, 35, a former emergency room physician at Johns Hopkins Hospital, put the name of his ex-girlfriend, a nurse at the hospital, on a blood sample from a person with AIDS.

The woman, whose name wasn't disclosed, was told that her blood had tested positive for the AIDS virus, but didn't believe it because she hadn't submitted a sample for testing, DiGiovanna's lawyer, Patricia Fettman, said Friday.

DiGiovanna didn't contest the charges and agreed last month to write a letter of apology to the woman. He also was ordered by the state Board of Physician Quality Assurance to perform 100 hours of service in an AIDS treatment facility.

DiGiovanna resigned from Johns Hopkins on Dec. 23, but retains his license to practice medicine.

Fettman called the 1991 hoax a very unfortunate incident "for which he is very embarrassed." She said DiGiovanna was suffering at the time from extreme stress and depression, and the effects of Dilantin, a drug he took for a seizure disorder.

J. Michael Compton, acting executive director of the board, said that didn't excuse the doctor's actions.

"Anytime that you falsify a record in the practice of medicine, it's a very, very serious offense," Compton said.

Women runners capture two relays

The Iowa women's track squad captured two sprint relays at the SE Motion Relays in Cape Girardeau, Mo., Saturday.

The 4 x 400 relay team of Marlene Poole, Yolanda Hobbs, Karen Layne and Sheri Vanderhart took first with a time of 3:37.34. The same runners won the 4 x 100 in 46.25, a season best for the Hawk-eyes, and Vanderhart finished third in the 100-meter dash at 12.06.

Nancy Tessmer tied for second in the high jump at 5 feet, 6 inches, while Denise Taylor grabbed third in the discus with a season-best 152' 4". Taylor also placed seventh in the shot put (44' 8 3/4") and eighth in the javelin (117' 1").

Lisa Van Steenwyk placed sixth in the discus (145' 11") and fourth in the shot put (49' 5 1/2") for Iowa, and Shari Renning threw a season-high 133' 5" good enough for third place.

Smith, Falls compete in Arizona

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Iowa men's track team sent two representatives to Arizona State this past weekend to compete in the Sun Angel Track Classic.

Darren Smith placed seventh in the long jump with a leap of 24 feet, 5 inches. In the 400-meter hurdles, Gary Falls earned fourth place, finishing in a time of 51.96 seconds.

Sabatini wins Family Circle Cup

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Gabriela Sabatini had a breeze and then a battle as she successfully defended her title in the Family Circle Magazine Cup by beating Conchita Martinez 6-1, 6-4 on Sunday.

Sabatini, ranked third in the world, won the first set in just 30 minutes, but struggled in the hour-long second as the eighth-ranked Martinez had her chances.

FOOTBALL

Dickerson trade plans denied

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Star reported Sunday that Eric Dickerson's agent, Marvin Demoff, was assured by the Indianapolis Colts that the running back would be traded this year.

The Star said it learned from unidentified league sources that the Colts hope to get a third-round pick and an established veteran for the league's third all-time leading rusher.

SPORTS IN COURTS

Brister faces charges

MONROE, La. — Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Bobby Brister faces a tentative June 4 trial date on charges stemming from a dispute outside a Monroe nightclub in March.

Brister has said the charges are unfounded.

NCAA

Men play more often than women

WASHINGTON — Men at most NCAA Division I universities are far more likely than women to participate in intercollegiate athletics, and their programs receive a far larger proportion of sports spending than women's programs, according to a new school-by-school study.

The analysis, completed by the Chronicle for Higher Education, follows a report on the same subject the NCAA released in March. However, the NCAA study offered only aggregate figures and did not include totals for individual schools.

The Chronicle's study found that at 130 Division I schools, male athletes outnumbered female athletes by at least two to one. And men received at least twice as much athletic scholarship money than women at 121 of the schools, the study found.

Cardinal romp to title, 78-62

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Stanford won its second NCAA title in three years Sunday with one veteran and one new, fresh face.

Junior center Val Whiting had 17 points and 13 rebounds and freshman forward Rachel Hemmer had 18 points and 15 rebounds as the Cardinal defeated Western Kentucky 78-62. The victory margin matched the largest ever in a women's NCAA championship game, achieved on three other occasions.

The Cardinal (30-3) beat the Lady Toppers (27-8), playing in their first-ever NCAA championship game, without hitting a basket in the final 9:59.

After the Cardinal took its biggest lead, 65-44, with 10:01 to play, Western Kentucky capitalized on turnovers and climbed back into the game with a 15-3 run, cutting the lead to nine on Kim Pehlke's fourth 3-pointer of the day and Trina Wilson's free throw with 2:23 left to play. The Cardinal made 13 of 17 free throws after hitting its last field goal.

Junior point guard Molly Goodenbour, a member of Stanford's 1990 championship team, was named the tournament's most outstanding player, with Whiting and Hemmer making the all-tourney team, along with Pehlke and Virginia's Dawn Staley.

Goodenbour had 28 points and 12 assists in the Final Four, hitting four key 3-pointers in the Cardinal's 66-65 victory over top-ranked Virginia in the semifinals.

Pehlke finished with 16 points, and Liesa Lang added 18 points and 12 rebounds.

Leading 37-27 at the half, Stanford quickly padded its lead, moving ahead 59-35 on three free throws by Christy Hedgpeth with 13:20 to play. She scored 10 points during the spurt and finished with 17.

The Lady Toppers, who beat Southwest Missouri State 84-72 in the semifinals, played in the 1985 and '86 Final Fours.

Stanford, which defeated Auburn to win the 1990 title, was beaten in the semis last year by eventual champion Tennessee.

FINAL FOUR

Veterans to battle freshmen for all the marbles

Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Success sometimes has a way of erasing the memories of how difficult it was to achieve.

For now, however, Duke is poised on the brink of college basketball history very much aware of what a battle it has been to get to the NCAA championship game.

Duke is 40 minutes from becoming the first team to repeat as national champion in 19 years. The trip to Monday night's title game against Michigan and its five starting freshmen was rough to say the least, especially for a team that ran the regular season as No. 1.

"We feel fortunate to be here," coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "Seton Hall, Kentucky and Indiana have been very tough games for us. Teams play at a high level against us and we expect the same from Michigan on Monday night."

Senior forward Brian Davis sprained his right ankle in Saturday's victory over Indiana and Krzyzewski called him very doubtful for the championship game.

"If we lose it won't be because Brian Davis is hurt," he said. "You play who you have and if they win, they win."

Duke (33-2) has won the last three games, albeit not in the style Blue Devil fans and detractors have come to expect.

Seton Hall had stopped national player of the year Christian Laettner in the second half and was within six points late in the game. Kentucky was next and if you need details of that one, you slept through 600 consecutive sports highlights shows. The Blue Devils' fifth straight Final Four appearance and a chance at defending came down to a miracle shot by Laettner as the overtime buzzer sounded.

Duke seemed so human again this weekend when Indiana took a 12-point lead late in the first half. An awesome defensive performance turned things into a comfortable 13-point lead that almost evaporated in a final-minute, 3-point barrage by the Hoosiers. Laettner again struggled from the field (he did sandwich a perfect 10-for-10 against Kentucky in there) and Bobby Hurley was the savior with 26 points, including a school record-tying six 3-pointers that gave him 11 in two games.

"The toughest game of those was Seton Hall because of the relationship between P.J. (Carlesimo) and myself and Bobby and Danny," Krzyzewski said, referring to the Hurley brothers who faced each other for the first time. "They've been a team that could have beaten us every year but we never played them because they lost."

Duke hasn't lost an NCAA game since the 1990 final, when UNLV beat the Blue Devils 103-73. That loss was avenged last year in the semifinals, when UNLV was denied a chance to repeat.

Now Duke can become the first team to repeat since UCLA ended a seven-year run in 1973.

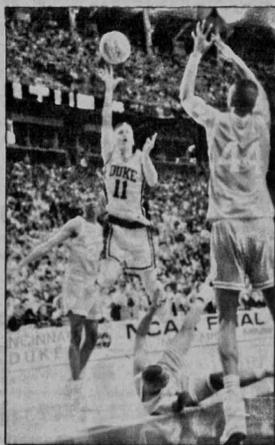

"I don't think players get caught up in repeating," Krzyzewski said.

Michigan coach Steve Fisher has a chance for a bit of history himself as he could win his second title in four years having led the Wolverines to the 1989 championship as an interim coach.

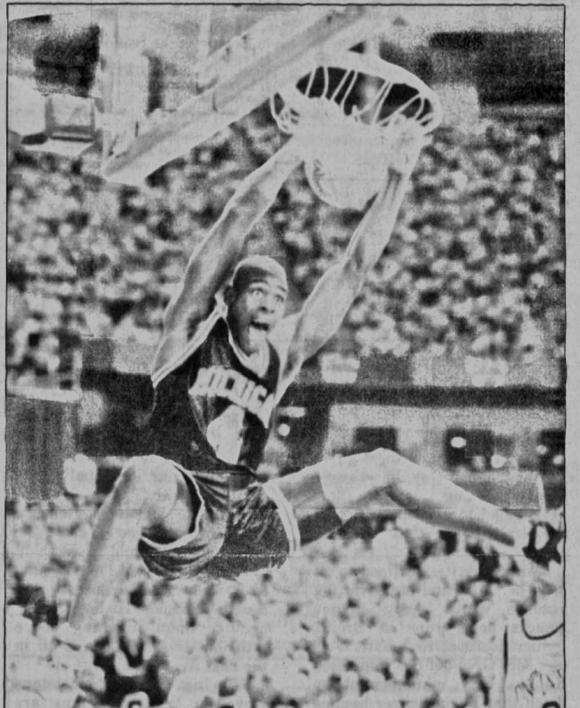

"We'll talk about that if we win Monday night," he said.

NCAA tournament MVP Molly Goodenbour is hoisted by her teammates in celebration of Stanford's second national title in three years. The Cardinal pounded Western Kentucky 78-62 in Los Angeles.

3-1 not enough for Hawks

Jay Nanda
Daily Iowan

Ask any softball team if it would be satisfied with a 3-1 conference weekend and most teams would probably take it.

Not the Iowa Hawkeyes. For Coach Gayle Blevins and her club, taking three of four from 13-18 Indiana in the first home-stand of the year was no consolation for what might have been.

"I told the team we should've been 4-0," Blevins said. "They shouldn't be happy with 3-1. I reminded them that we lost the conference last year by one. So that game can come back to haunt you."

"That game" was the first of Saturday's doubleheader, a contest Iowa seemingly had in control at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

For six innings, the Hawkeyes (11-13) sailed along with pitcher Karen Jackson holding a 2-0 lead.

But in the seventh, a single by third baseman Margaret Haensch and a walk to designated hitter Karen Kron gave the Hoosiers a jump on their comeback. After Kara Manley advanced the runners, catcher Heather Darrow's sacrifice fly cut the lead in half.

But more importantly, Iowa center fielder Kim Davis' unsuccessful attempt to nab pinch runner Lisa Kauchak at the plate allowed pinch runner Jenny Mitchell to move to third with the tying run. Leadoff hitter Amy Rogers, who was down to Indiana's last strike, then singled off Jackson's foot to make it a new ballgame at 2-2.

Iowa could not muster a hit the rest of the way and in the bottom of the ninth — the Hoosiers were

JAMES ARNOLD

AL West may be wild and woolly in 1992

The grass is a muddy brown and the trees are beginning to leave.

The crack of the bats are the sound of the season and muffled a double-play ball is a coach's pet peeve.

Baseball season is finally here. And the winners in 1991 will realize it fast.

In the AL West, it will come down to which team has finally powered up enough to out-talent the Oakland A's. Both Chicago and Texas have the horses and the stallions to win. Oakland always has trouble with consistency and the Royals may need the first half of the season to finish the player introductions.

1—White Sox: Despite the contract problems which could plague a budding superstar like Frank Thomas for most of his career, the White Sox are talented and could easily run away with the pennant.

Thomas, "sweet-swinging" Robin Ventura and Ozzie Guillen will be joined in the infield by Steve "alto" Sax — by far the best Chris Berman nickname ever. Without an outfield, this team can run, hit for power and score bunches of runs. That's exactly what they will have to do. They still don't have an outfield, even with DH-deluxe George Bell.

Pitching is the question, but Charlie Hough defies the odds every season and the odds are against Kirk McCaskill losing 19 games this season.

2—Rangers: Cubs fans don't have a clue what it is like to follow a successful team with talent. This Ranger bunch is the heartbreaker's deluxe of the American League and this season won't be any different.

"I firmly believe 1992 could be our year," Manager Bobby Valentine said.

He may be right, and I may be crazy, but it just may take a lunatic for the Rangers not to blow a late-July lead.

Batting champ Julio Franco and Rafael Palmeiro will set the table and Rubin Sierra, Juan Gonzalez and Dean Palmer will power them home. Even the bench on this club can hit. Kevin Reimer hit 20 homers last season and Brian Downing was near the league lead in hitting most of the season and cracked 17 dingers as well.

Pitching god Nolan Ryan heads a lifeless staff of near stars and near minor leaguers. If he stays with the team, Todd Burns could win a few games.

3—Athletics: People may not like the A's for many reasons: outlandish salaries, attitude, cockiness. But Tony La Russa seriously loves this team.

"We like the way the team has been put together," La Russa said earlier this year.

He will like it even more if the many head cases can stay healthy long enough to compete. Jose Canseco's back and Mark McGwire's bat were hurting last season and will have to make full recoveries this season.

Before the accusations about being overrated begin, remember, Carney Lansford missed the entire season last year, and Ricky Henderson and Dave Henderson patrol the outfield.

The pitching depends on Todd Van Poppel. Dave Stewart, Bob Welch and Mike Moore are always good, but the A's fourth and fifth arms couldn't have won

ARNOLD: History says Mariners will sink

 if they played alone.
4-Royals: Who are these guys? After trading away almost everyone and signing others, the Royals seemed to have given up on the 1991 team that finished 82-80 last season.
 George Brett is destined to sit back as a DH and break hitting records while Wally Joyner smacks home runs at Brett's former position, first base. Former Met Greg Jeffries impressed Kansas City management so much that Kevin Seitzer became excess baggage.
 This team has enough talent to win the West but will need the early-season games to get used to each other. A late-season surge after a disappointing couple months will make the Royals look towards 1993.
5-Mariners: This is a good team. With Kevin Mitchell they have power; with Ken Griffey Jr., they have speed and high-quality hitting; and with Randy Johnson, Eric Hanson and Brian Holman, they sport some good arms.
 In fact, I should pick them higher. I should but I'm not going to. The reason: They are still the Seattle Mariners. History is truly against them finishing above fifth, but they will win it all in the next five years. Trust me.
6-Twins: In order to understand why the World Champs are picked so low, one must remember how good the Twins' pitching was before Jack Morris. The 1992 season will be year one A.J. (After Jack).
 Morris solidified an inexperienced staff and held together as other Twins unravelled. Morris is now a Blue Jay and he flew off with the Twins' title hopes.
 The league caught up with Scott Erickson at the end of last season and once-bright prospect David West should consider buying rather than renting in Portland.
 Sure, the Twins can hit. Kirby Puckett, Chili Davis, Kent Hrbek and Shane Mack are great players, but not great enough to balance the second-worst pitching staff heading into 1992.
7-Angels: The Halos could join with the Twins and make a remarkable team. California has top-notch pitching but you can't win unless you score a run.
 Lance Parrish and Gary Gaetti are the leading power-hitters and both suffered through horrid springs. Parrish was hitting .125 after his first 10 games and Gaetti was hitting .167 after 12 games.
 It is hard to believe that Whitey Herzog has anything to do with this lineup. Other than the great pitching, this team is barely fieldable. It would take a miracle for the offense to score enough runs to win over 60 games, or even the 55 games Mark Langston, Jim Abbott and Chuck Finley won last season.
 Expect the White Rat to deal one of his stars for some much-needed offense.
 The other divisions will be covered over the next three days. The AL East on Tuesday, the NL West on Wednesday and the NL East on Thursday.

SOFTBALL: Three of four not so hot the home team Saturday — controversy made its way to the Complex.

 Following two quick outs, Indiana notched three straight singles with Rogers again dealing the telling blow. Manley tried to beat right-fielder Amy Hartsock's throw home but catcher Diane Pohl blocked the plate.
 However, the umpire ruled that Pohl obstructed Manley because the ball had not arrived nearly in time to retire the Hoosier, giving Indiana a 3-2 win.
 But the Hawkeyes said they knew the game should never have gone extra innings in the first place.
 "It's very disappointing to be in control and then to suddenly let a game slip away from you," said Blevins, whose ensuing protest was overruled by the umpires. "I look at that more than anything else. (Coming back) should have been such a monumental task for (Indiana) that there shouldn't have been any way they could've done it."
 "I've been taught ever since I was younger that if the ball's on the way, you have the right to block the plate," Pohl said. "Obviously, the rulebook didn't state it that way or else the protest would've been made. But the game should've been handled long before. That call didn't make the game."
 The Hawkeyes rebounded in the nightcap as senior Terri McFarland improved to 7-5 by blanking the Hoosiers 2-0. McFarland went the distance walking two, fanning eight and tossing a two-hitter while throwing 102 pitches. At one point, she retired 11 consecutive batters.
 All of McFarland's wins this season have come via shutouts.
 "Whether our team scores one or 10 runs, I don't want our defense to give up any," McFarland said. "I have to go for the shutout."
 This time, the Hoosiers didn't have a chance for a comeback, as McFarland appropriately recorded the last putout off the bat of Kron.

 "Everybody was like, 'C'mon, you remember how it was last game' and I said, 'Put that game out of your head. We know how to finish. Let's go,'" McFarland said.
 Pohl led Iowa with two hits in four trips to the plate, a pair of steals and a sacrifice. She also scored the Hawkeyes' first run in the third when Hartsock smacked a two-out, 0-2 offering over Martha Lebron's head in right for a triple.
 Stacey Harrison added a pinch RBI double in the fourth that scored Davis, who led off with a walk.
 Friday, the Hawkeyes swept the Hoosiers 2-0 and 3-1.
 In the opener, the big blow was delivered in the fourth by pinch hitter Dani Harringa who hit a two-out, two-run single scoring Christa Davis and Hartsock.
 "It really turned around for me. I hadn't had a hit in a long time," Harringa said.

McFarland picked up the win again while Hoosier Janelle Campbell suffered the loss, despite the fact that both Iowa runs were unearned.
 In the nightcap, a suicide squeeze by Christa Davis scored Pohl in the bottom of the first.
 After Indiana tied it with an unearned run in the third, Rogers led off the Hoosier sixth with a single to right but was gunned down by Hartsock while trying to stretch it into a two-bagger.
 "It gave momentum our way," Hartsock said of the play.
 Hartsock then provided the punch with her bat in the bottom of the inning, as her RBI single in the hole between third and short drove in Kim Davis for the game-winner. Sophomore Jenni Stotmeister added an RBI single as Jackson picked up her fourth win of the year (4-8).
 Iowa hosts Western Illinois for a 3 p.m. doubleheader Tuesday at the Complex.

 The Iowa baseball team went 2-2 against Indiana this past weekend in Bloomington, Ind.
 The Hawkeyes (12-11 overall, 5-3 in the Big Ten) won the opener Sunday 3-2 before losing 7-2 in the second game. On Saturday, Iowa took the first game 5-2 but dropped the nightcap 4-3 in nine innings.
 In Sunday's opener, Iowa junior Dave Weillbrenner went the distance, giving up five hits and two runs while walking four and striking out four for his second victory of the season.

The Hawkeyes were on the board first with two runs in the second inning. After Shane Simon walked, Cory Larsen singled and both scored on a two-out triple by Curtis Reed.
 The game-winning run came in the top of the fifth when Tim Killeen singled to score Bobby Morris.
 Indiana threatened, but the tying run was thrown out at the plate on a relay from Matt Johnson.
 In the nightcap, the Hawkeyes' first tally came in the top of the third when Johnson reached on an error and scored on a one-out single by Jay Polson.
 Iowa added another run in the sixth when Polson and Morris were passed and Polson scored as Steve Fishman hit into a double play.

 Simon was 2-for-2 with a double in that game, and Backlund finished the day 3-for-4 with a double.
 In the first contest Saturday, the Hawkeyes jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning when Polson and Morris hit consecutive singles and scored on a one-bagger by Backlund, who crossed the plate on a double by Killeen.
 In the top of the fifth, Larsen doubled, advanced on a sacrifice by Johnson and scored when Reed hit into a double play.
 The Hawkeyes added another run

MEN'S TENNIS

Houghton says Hawkeyes' victory not so dominating

Steve J. Collins
Daily Iowan

Iowa men's tennis coach Steve Houghton would be the first to admit that his team's 7-1 victory over Penn State Sunday at the Recreation Building wasn't as dominating as the score might indicate.

"If I were their coach, I would probably be thinking that the score was deceiving because they lost a couple of close matches," Houghton said.

No match was closer than No. 1 singles where Iowa's Klas Bergstrom downed Eduardo Abril (5-7, 7-5, 7-5). In No. 4 singles Hawkeye Eric Schulman also won after dropping the first set. "We played well when we had to," Houghton said. "Whenever there was a key point or game or whatever, we were good."

Iowa's recent success in doubles continued against the Nittany Lions.

The No. 2 doubles team of Carl Mannheim and Naouib Shahid beat Ivan Spinner and Brett Englesberg two sets to one. Todd Shale and Neil Denahan won in No. 3 doubles for Iowa. No. 1 doubles was not played.

Mannheim and Shahid, who are 3-1 since teaming up over spring break, dropped only one game in the first and third sets.

"It was just one bad set in the middle," Shahid said. "We played two very solid sets of doubles and it was kind of easy."

Mannheim said the fact a new set of tennis balls was used in the final set also helped.

"That was to our advantage because we served better than them throughout the whole match."

Both players agree that they make a good team.

"It's a pretty weird situation," Shahid said. "We're both easy-going guys and we don't get down on each other. If we both get on a roll, we can beat just about any team."

Iowa is scheduled to see action next on Saturday when it travels to Michigan State.

WOMEN'S GOLF

Hawks take 6th at Indiana

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team finished in sixth place at the Indiana Invitational Tournament in Bloomington, Ind., over the weekend.

Indiana won the 54-hole event with a 958 team total. Minnesota finished second (969) and Northern Illinois was third (982). Penn State came in fourth (988) and Ohio State was fifth (989).

The Hawkeyes shot rounds of 328-339-335 for a 1,002 team total in their first Big Ten meet of the spring season.

"I am very excited about the 328 (round),"

Coach Diane Thomason said.

Iowa finished ahead of several Big Ten schools at this tournament which Thomason also found very encouraging. The Hawkeyes had better scores than Michigan State (1,029), Wisconsin (1,036), Purdue (1,045) and Michigan (1,051).

Becky Fuglestad paced the Hawkeyes with rounds of 80-81-82 for a 243 total which was good enough for eighth lowest score at the tournament. Mary Jo Rollins came in with rounds of 80-87-85 for a 252. Judy Bornholdt fired a 83-86-85 (254). Stacy Boville shot 85-85-85 (255) while Jennifer McCullough had a 89-93-95 (277).

WEST LAFAYETTE, IND. — Iowa continued its exceptional start to the 1992 Spring Golf season by winning the prestigious Purdue Invitational held Saturday and Sunday.

The Hawkeyes fired a team score of 588, outdistancing second-place Texas Tech by two strokes. Iowa senior Brad Klapprott finished second in the meet with a score of 142. Klapprott's score of 67 on the final day was the best round of the tournament, but wasn't good enough to catch medalist Jordan Young of Eastern Michigan (141).

Junior Jon Frommelt finished third in the tourney (143) after shooting a 68 on Sunday, the second-best round of the tourney. Sean McCarty tied for tenth after shooting 77 and 72 for the tournament. Brian Wilson carded 79 and 75 to tie for 24th. David Sharp shot an 82 on Saturday but rebounded Sunday with a 75 to finish tied for 37th.

Iowa was in second place after shooting a round of 306 Saturday but came back Sunday to shoot 282 to Texas Tech's 286 to win the meet.

Iowa's competed in three spring meets, finishing third at the Ben Hogan/Fripp Island Invitational in South Carolina, second at the Plantation Inn Invitational in Crystal River, Fla., and now a first in the Purdue Invitational.

The Hawkeyes will host the Big Ten Meet May 15-17 in Iowa City.

Full-voiced 'Requiem' at Hancher

William Palik
Daily Iowan

Last Wednesday evening, an unusually large Hancher audience heard the UI Symphony Orchestra and combined chorus perform the massive, operatic "Requiem," completed in 1874 by Giuseppe Verdi. William Hatcher directed orchestra, chorus, and soloists with expert pacing and verve; with limited rehearsal, the UI forces brought off an often gripping rendition of this highly dramatic work.

The four soloists — whose voices make or break this work in their varied accompanied and unaccompanied combinations with each other and with the forces massed behind them — were adequate to the task. Only soprano Leslie Morgan displayed the vocal ease and amplitude to soar over Verdi's oceans of sound. Bass Stanley Irwin demonstrated a fine, rather monochromatic instrument, his voice always well placed but hardly shaking the rafters. Scott McCoy's tightly lyrical, intelligently and often exquisitely deployed tenor was occasionally pushed to the breaking point.

At least his part enabled him to be clearly heard, unlike Katherine Eberle's, whose pleasant mezzo-soprano was sorely taxed except in the "Agnus Dei," where her voice shone in the soprano part.

Verdi, a virulent atheist, never conceived of the "Requiem" as an ecclesiastical tract, but rather as an artistic appreciation of the human and dramatic qualities inherent in church ritual and in the facts of Christianity: crucifixion, ascension, damnation — how theatrical is that? During Wednesday evening's performance, one could almost hear the graves popping open — this was musical drama of the highest order, and entirely appropriate to the season. In the words of the Lacrimosa: Lacrimosa dies illa qua resurget ex favilla judicandus homo reus. I think we'd all agree with that.

Poet Lucien Stryk translates Zen philosophy into imagery

Eastern and Western inspirations combine in Lucien Stryk's Japanese-influenced poetry.

Dorren Robbins
Daily Iowan

It was because of his translations, with Takashi Ikemoto, of the extraordinary Zen poetry of Shinkichi Takahashi that I became aware of Lucien Stryk's work. To those poets interested in grounding their poetry in the international idiom that originated with Whitman's language of intimate and direct statement, as well as Rimbaud's language and imagery intimating "unknown harmonic intervals," the Ikemoto/Stryk translations are a stunning and precise mine of original thought and imagery.

But the bursts of wild logic or unusual images associated with Takahashi's poetry are not connected with Stryk's poetry, which is fine in its own right. The images are often remarkable enough: "Downhill, I pass snails opaling the way," or "Peaks/ emerge, drift off, I know/ that anything can happen/ where all distinctions end." Stryk's sensibility is devoted to connecting with the "great hidden unity" that Arthur Waley speaks of in his essay "Zen Buddhism and its Relation to Art," a sense of unity which is justified by his metaphor of the snail's jewellike journey, which is quoted above. But while Takahashi displays an ejection of images with rare links to the intangible and dreamlike, Stryk's poetry often conveys a sense of humility about the fundamental difficulties, even the waste of his days when they are unrinsed by that interiority

Zen Buddhists call zenki, the "spontaneous activity free of forms, flowing from a formless self."

Detached from the force that connects him to the "great hidden Unity," Stryk is attuned to a lower, and possibly deeper unity in the poem "Garden" from his collection Bells of Lombardy:

Villa gardeners trudge from terraces above, pour basketfuls of cuttings over the cliff-face, near my door. Two hundred feet below, the poem withering on my desk, petals cascade into a garden on the waves. Noon: they feast under the kumquat trees, bread, olive, cheese and wine spread on the checkered cloth. The gardeners raise their glasses as I pass. My morning's crop, beside their flower fall, ant droppings on the page.

The subtlety of Stryk's mind is displayed not solely within the carved, almost tactile pauses and enjambments of this poem, but in the continuing of the list without pause "under the kumquat trees." It is not the noun "feast" but the verb "under that" is the trope of entry for the meaning here: the progression of the poem moves downward; from the terraces to the poet's room "two hundred feet below," to the feast under the trees, to the "ant droppings."

Poet / translator Lucien Stryk.

Those droppings juxtaposed with "morning's crop" create a surprising but recognizable crop/crap pun, lively in its own "flower/fall," suggesting a parallel reading of Whitman's "This Compost" with its fertility-within-waste motif.

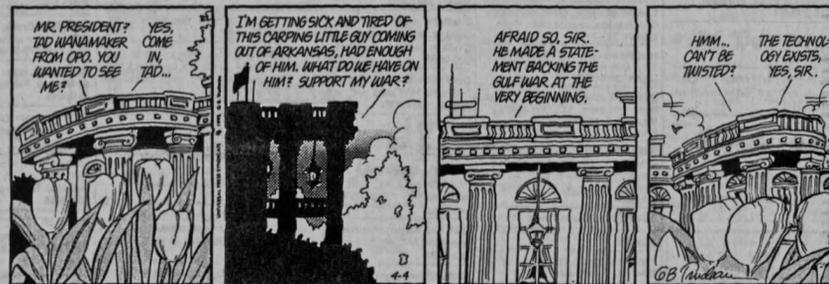

Stryk, who grew up in Chicago, received his MFA from Iowa in 1956. Winner of numerous awards, including NEA and Fulbright grants, he is the editor of two fine anthologies of Midwest poetry, Heartland and Heartland II. He is also, with co-translator Shinkichi Ikemoto, the editor of the "Penguin Book of Zen Poetry."

I felt that Stryk might be threatened with the unfortunate danger of being primarily recognized for the famous Takahashi translations. Though there is a difference in magnitude and style, I have had similar concerns over Clayton Eshleman being regarded foremost as the translator of Cesar Vallejo, and Kenneth Rexroth being remembered primarily for his Chinese and Japanese translations. It should not happen.

Lucien Stryk will be reading his work tonight in room 304 of the English-Philosophy Building.
