Professor John Simms dies of heart attack

John Simms, former head of the piano division at the UI School of Music, died Tuesday in Louisiana following a heart attack.

Funeral services will be held today in El Dorado, Ark. Memorial donations can be made to the Rita Benton Music Library in the UI School of Music.

Simms, 73, received his master's degree in piano from the UI in 1950. He joined the faculty as an assistant professor that same year, reaching full professor by 1959. He served as head of the piano area from 1959 to 1986 and retired in 1987.

Simms was best known for his chamber music performances and performed both locally and in major cities of the United States.

The flag will be flown at half-staff today in his memory.

Coralville couple sentenced on drug charges

A Coralville couple was sentenced to prison Wednesday in Des Moines for their part in a cocaine and marijuana distributing ring that operated in the Iowa City area from 1988 to 1991.

Andrew Vandenberg was sentenced to four years and seven months for conspiracy and money laundering and five years for possession of a firearm in connection with drug dealing.

Greta Vandenberg was given a total of seven years and five months in prison for her involvement.

Dvorsky to seek election to 4th term

State Rep. Robert Dvorsky, D-Coralville, announced Wednesday that he will seek election to a fourth term.

Dvorsky represents four Iowa City precincts, North Liberty, Penn and Newport townships and Coralville. He is the chairman of the House Local Government Committee, and serves on the Appropriations Standing Committee, the Energy and Environmental Protection Committee and the Agriculture and Natural Resources Appropriations subcommittee.

NATIONAL

Group sues for release of JFK autopsy photos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The private advocacy group Public Citizen sued the National Archives on Wednesday for the release of more than 250 autopsy photos and X-rays of assassinated President John F. Kennedy.

The group told reporters the material could help resolve lingering doubts over whether Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the gunshot slaying of Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas, Texas.

In the suit, Public Citizen charged the government with wrongfully withholding public documents by claiming they are the private property of the Kennedy family.

L.A. officers acquitted on all but 1 charge

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. — Four white Los Angeles police officers were acquitted of all but one assault charge Wednesday in the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King. A mistrial was declared on one count.

The verdicts, in the seventh day of deliberations, came after a year of political uproar sparked by the graphic videotape of a black man being beaten by white officers, denounced in many quarters as brutality. The backlash brought down the Los Angeles police chief.

"My client and I are just outraged," King's lawyer, Steve Lerman, said after the verdict. "It sends a bad message. It says it's OK to go ahead and beat somebody when they're down and kick the crap out of them."

Scattered violence erupted following the acquittals. Looters ravaged stores, four motorists were beaten and demonstrators rushed police headquarters.

In the worst outbreak, an intersection in predominantly black South Central Los Angeles was plunged into chaos, with looters running free and motorists pulled from cars and attacked. Police and paramedics were ordered to steer clear.

Several small fires were seen burning in the area.

Chief Daryl Gates, who was pressured to resign after the beating, declined to comment directly on the verdict at a news conference.

"I do not think there are any winners at all in this situation,"

Gates said. "I'm hopeful... that this department will go forward."

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley blasted the jury's decision.

"Today, the system failed us," he said.

"Today, this jury told the world what we all saw with our own eyes wasn't a crime. Today, that jury asked us to accept the senseless and brutal beating of a helpless man."

The national leader of the NAACP, Benjamin Hooks, also denounced the verdict as "outrageous, a mockery of justice," but he appealed to blacks that "the decision be met with calmness."

The jury acquitted the officers of the more serious assault charge and secondary charges, but deadlocked on one count of excessive force against Officer Laurence Powell.

A hearing was scheduled for May 15 to decide whether to prosecute Powell on the undecided count.

The jury said it cast four guilty votes and eight innocent votes in

RIVERFEST

Participants find course 'challenging'

The warm weather brought out many participants and onlookers at the Wheelchair Challenge Wednesday at Hubbard Park.

The Wheelchair Challenge, "A Hands-On Experience," was an opportunity sponsored by the UI Department of Physical Therapy and local merchants.

Students and local residents challenged themselves on an obstacle course composed of environmental obstructions that people with disabilities face daily. Obstructions included doors that opened in and out, sand, curbs and inclines.

Participants also had to shoot a basketball while sitting in the wheelchair and try to grocery shop with a basket in their lap. A four-person speed relay was also held throughout the day.

Amy Kachingwe, a master's student in physical therapy who chaired the event along with Shani Karns and Maria Sasek, was very pleased with the number of participants who attended the event.

UI President Hunter Rawlings expressed his appreciation for the event when he spoke shortly to participants and onlookers.

"I think it's a great use of university resources to offer this opportunity to publicize the needs that we have for those people who are confined to wheelchairs," he said.

DIVERSITY

Debate focuses on effects of curriculum on attitudes

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

Whether a diversity-conscious curriculum will change racist attitudes was the focus of a public debate Wednesday night titled "How Can Racial and Cultural Differences Be Taught More Effectively?"

The resolution stated that education on racial and ethnic differences should be more prominently featured in the college curriculum.

The debate took place in the Boyd Law Building, and was followed by comments from UI Director of Affirmative Action Susan Mask and questions from the audience.

Student speakers debating the resolution were Jon Brody and Iris Chambliss on the affirmative and Omar Guevara and Ernest Wagner taking the negative.

The negative team said the university should tell students "we're all the same," rather than stress the differences between people because it could cause racists to be more violent.

Guevara and Wagner also predicted that one required class will not change racist opinions that have been taught since childhood, referring to the recently instituted cultural diversity general education requirement.

Chambliss argued that a diverse curriculum would "not try to separate but to educate" and would "at least generate some tolerance and sensitivity toward other cultures." She asserted there is no reason that presenting minority works, which are traditionally underrepresented, in classes would cause a right-wing backlash.

"Cultural pluralism is a national resource rather than a problem."

"Cultural pluralism is a national resource rather than a problem," said Brody. "This is an educational institution. If we can't learn about cultural differences here — where can we?"

In her remarks to the audience, Mask said, "I can't say the aim of the university is to change minds but to expose people to a variety of thought patterns and experiences. One of the challenges as a student should be to open your mind. ... There's no delusion that diversity will happen overnight but it's important that we tackle it."

An audience member later said the negative team did not account for the fact there are few "die-hard" racists who beat people compared to the discrimination from people out of ignorance and lack of exposure to minorities.

The debate was designed to promote dialogue about race and diversity issues and was funded by a grant from the Ford Foundation, which is administered by Opportunity at Iowa.

UISA

Students to demonstrate against $31 million loss

Ann Riley
Daily Iowan

The UI Student Assembly will rally on the Pentacrest Friday in response to the $31 million cut to state universities proposed by the Iowa Senate Democrats Wednesday.

The proposed cuts, which would mean a $14.2 million loss for the UI, also include eliminating the recently awarded driving simulator project and trimming $1.6 million from the UI Hospitals and Clinics budget for indigent patient care.

UISA President Dustin Wilcox said the rally is not a class boycott, as was the Student Awakening Day last fall. Instead, student leaders called for a "work stop" for an hour Friday afternoon to show support for higher education.

"We know the rally will have no material effect," Wilcox said. "We are looking for an emotional response. We want to show the state legislators and the governor that we care enough to take an hour out."

Students from the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa will be converging on the capitol in Des Moines today to demonstrate their opposition to the additional cuts. The UI suffered from eight budget cuts during the 1991 fiscal year.

Wilcox said the rally had the support of the UI administration, and urged students to call their representatives in Iowa government to voice their disapproval.

Student leaders announced the rally from the Union Wednesday night. Phone numbers for the governor's office, the Senate and the House were plastered on the wall behind the podium, à la Jerry Brown.

"Students, you have the most to lose. Call your state senator, let your voice be heard," Wilcox said. "Come to the rally on the Pentacrest Friday and fight for your education."

ISU president, others attack legislators for education cuts

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES — As details of a proposed $200 million cut in state spending swept through the Statehouse on Wednesday, legislators braced for criticism.

They didn't have to wait long. Interest groups quickly geared up a public relations effort to forestall the cuts, focusing on more than $100 million in reduced education spending.

"This budget attacks the infrastructure of education in Iowa," Iowa State University President Martin Jischke said in a statement issued Wednesday.

Jischke and others attacked a Senate Democratic plan to slash $200 million from the proposed $3.3 billion state budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Included are cuts of $77 million to public schools and $31 million to state universities.

"I've never had so many calls," said Sen. Jack Kibbie, D-Emmetsburg. "They're getting the message."

Legislators said the cuts threaten several major federal projects that U.S. Rep. Neal Smith has garnered for Iowa State. The projects require matching state dollars.

Federal and state projects are also in jeopardy at the UI, including a new driving simulator, the center for biocatalysis and the statewide tumor registry.

The UI would lose $14.2 million under the plan.

"These are the kinds of things that happen in state government normally only during times of depression or war," said Sen. Richard Varn, D-Solon.

GAY RIGHTS

Community shows support at rally

Anne Johnston
Daily Iowan

Speakers urged approximately 120 people gathered on the Pentacrest Wednesday afternoon to unite with other interest groups and step up their commitment to the struggle for gay, lesbian and bisexual rights.

"It's time for all of us to start working together to conquer homophobia and heterosexism in this society," said Christopher Rosebrook, moderator of a new student organization called Spectrum: The Heterosexual-Lesbigay Alliance.

The rally, sponsored by a broad coalition of student groups, was partially in response to the defeat of a gay rights bill in the Iowa House of Representatives April 15.

The bill, which had passed the state Senate by a vote of 28-21 on March 26, would have banned discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in the areas of employment, housing, education, insurance and credit practices.

Rosebrook blamed the bill's defeat in the House, by a vote of 55-44, on 11 representatives who voted against the bill after having supported it last year, when it was passed by the House and defeated by the senate. Rosebrook named each of the representatives and charged that the reversal of their positions was politically motivated.

"This is cowardice at its absolute worst," Rosebrook said.

Mona Shaw, a spokesperson for the UI Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Staff and Faculty Association, said the failed bill would have meant more than civil rights for lesbian, gay and bisexual people.

"It also meant that it would deplete the velocity of the maelstrom of all oppression in our society," Shaw said.

Shaw said it was important for gay rights activists to band together with other interest groups, including women, blacks, the poor and the physically challenged.

UI COMPUTERS

Panda network offers course guide

Brad Hahn
Daily Iowan

Beginning this semester students may read the UI Liberal Arts Guide to Courses using the Panda computer network.

Panda, for Pan-campus Data Access network, has been in development since October and has been in production since January, project coordinator Lee Brintle said.

As the registrar's office has run out of copies of the Guide to Courses, Panda is now the only way for students to access the information.

University Registrar Jerald Dallam said the UI has had to periodically alter the number of copies it can offer.

"When we first started, we produced 15,000 copies. Then due to the budget cuts, we had to cut back to 7,000. We've increased to 10,000, but now we're all out," Dallam said. "It's a popular publication that students like to use."

Brintle said Panda uses the exact same text as the printed copies, and the system is easy to use.

"The lab monitors know how to connect the system, and once you're there, it's easy to use," Brintle said. "I find it easier to use than the paper version."

To make the computer version even easier, classes are broken down by departments. Also, if students get confused while using the program, there are two mechanisms in the program from which they can get help.

Brintle said anyone can log onto the system from any of the ITCs or any personal computer. He said that offering the guide on Panda may save the university money.

"They'll always have to print out some copies because there will always be people without access to computers and people who don't like computers," Brintle said. "But we hope to print out less because people can use it on-line. That will save paper and save the registrar money."

In addition to the guide, Brintle also plans to add the "UI Code of Student Life," a calendar of events at the Union and possibly the Associated Press newswire. He also said that as of today, a list of RiverFest events and access to the UI ISIS system should be available through Panda.

Panda is also available for hookup with 57 other universities that have similar systems, Brintle said. This allows students to find out what's happening at other universities and to do things such as find phone numbers for individuals at other universities.

The combination of these things make Brintle hopeful that the system will receive more student use. During the one month in which the number of local users was recorded, 26,000 users were counted.

"Considering that there was almost no publicity of the service, that's pretty good," Brintle said. "We expect 100,000 to 200,000 per month as we add more services."

UI, University of Ibadan begin exchange program

John P. Waterhouse
Daily Iowan

The UI and the University of Ibadan will begin an exchange program to allow UI students an opportunity to experience a foreign culture, and to give students at the University of Ibadan access to UI facilities.

The UI-University of Ibadan Exchange program will start sending UI undergraduates to Ibadan, Nigeria, in January 1993, fulfilling the UI Study Abroad center's plan of initiating a program which focuses on African studies and development issues in the Third World.

While both universities have exchanged faculty members for years, the student exchange program won't start until next year. In the fall, a University of Ibadan graduate student will begin studying at the UI under the new program.

Rex Honey, a UI associate professor in the geography department, said he expects the exchange program "to be mutually beneficial" for both universities.

According to Honey, the UI Study Abroad Center has begun accepting interested UI students' applications to study at the University of Ibadan.

"By studying in Ibadan, those students will learn of another culture that they just can't gain here," he said. "For the University of Ibadan students who come here, they will have the opportunity to use laboratories and libraries that they don't have in Nigeria."

It was with this same idea that former UI president James O. Freedman initiated the Southern African Scholarship Program.

According to Gary Althen, assistant director of the Foreign Student and Scholar Program at the UI Office of International Education and Services, it was the intention of SASP to assist people in Southern Africa in obtaining a higher education which was denied to them in their own country.

Since it was created in 1983, SASP has sponsored 50 students.

Due to lack of funding, Althen said SASP will no longer be able to help students from southern Africa pursue an education at the UI.

"It is sad to see SASP come to an end," said Althen, "because it helped a great many students."

Honey said he would like to see the Ibadan exchange program continue because it is "a valuable experience" to see how other people live.

After teaching at the University of Ibadan since November on a Fulbright Lectureship, Honey said he is more "attuned" to other people's differences, as well as his own.

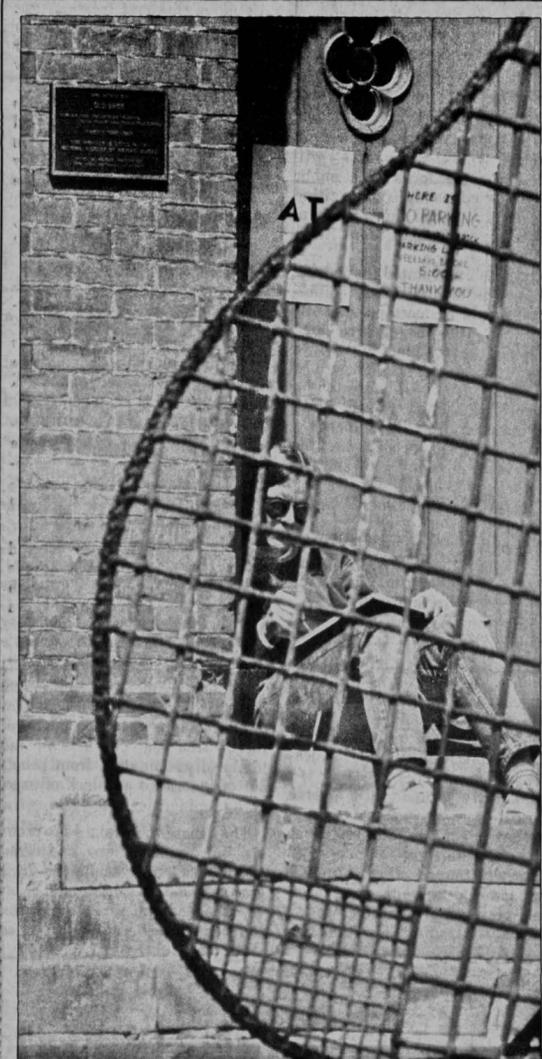

He said when African-American students at the UI would tell him how difficult it was to find a place in Iowa City to get their hair cut, "I couldn't relate to them."

"But after living in Ibadan, I know what it feels like to be in the minority," he said. "I too, had an extremely difficult time in Nigeria finding a place to get a haircut."

As a political geographer, Honey has worked in the Middle East, in Europe and in the South Pacific. "Yet it is only in Nigeria that I truly feel like a minority."

Honey, who will teach at the University of Ibadan until July, will resume teaching at the UI in the fall.

He said although the people of Ibadan stare curiously at his family as they walk down the street, "the people there are very friendly and always appreciative."

QUANTUM LOVING

Seminars aim to build better relationships

Jon Yates
Daily Iowan

Tired of your relationship? Ready to take an ice pick to your lover's throat? Stop — help is on the way, and it's called Quantum Loving.

This Friday and Saturday, the Starfire Institute will bring its Quantum Loving seminars to Iowa City. According to Patti Streurer, who will be teaching the seminar, the goal is simple.

"What we want to do is have a perception shift," she said. "We teach that we can be allies in our evolution rather than adversaries."

The seminars are set up to help couples who are having problems in their relationships, and are based on the book "Conscious Loving: The Journey To Co-Commitment" by Gay and Kathryn Hendricks.

Streurer said that the seminars try to stress the importance of telling the truth in a relationship.

"Telling the truth is the greatest aphrodisiac couples have in a relationship," she said. "Most of us got in trouble for telling the truth in the past, so it's hard for people to believe, but it's true."

Other ideas explored in the seminars are that arguments are caused mainly by each person trying to be a bigger victim than the other and that in relationships you are never upset for the reason you think you are.

David Fuerstenau, Steurer's husband and co-teacher of the seminars, said that he likes to tell people that the subtitle of the seminars is "Everything You Need to Learn to be an Effective Human Being But Were Never Taught."

Streurer and Fuerstenau said they have done the seminars for a combined 17 years. They said they do the seminars because they want to help people build better relationships.

"We do them because we're very passionate about supporting people in their relationships," Steurer said. "We realize that people are dissatisfied with their relationships. Rather than wondering if there might be something better, we know it's possible and we've experienced it ourselves."

Fuerstenau said that seminars consist of a combination of a presentation of the Quantum Loving concept and a series of "movement activities," including inquiries into participants' past.

"We create experience activities so they can discover what their old, limiting patterns are," Fuerstenau said. "Then we give lots of tools for clearing these old patterns so we can be 100 percent in the present." And without an ice pick.

GREYHOUND

IC man claims bus driver 'erratic'

Jude Sunderbruch
Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man claims that during a recent bus trip to Ames the driver of the Greyhound bus he was riding in began to fall asleep and eventually drove into the opposing traffic lane.

Larry Meisgeier said the incident took place during a bus trip he took from Iowa City to Ames on April 13. He said while the bus was traveling west on Highway 30 near Tama, Iowa, the driver began to bump off the right shoulder of the road.

"I began to pay more attention," he said, adding that other passengers on the bus noticed the erratic driving and became concerned as well. When the bus ended up in the other lane Meisgeier said he told the driver, "Hey man, wake up!" and suggested that the driver pull the bus over and take a nap.

"It was kind of frightening because the whole drifting over stuff took place over a period of 10 minutes," he said.

Meisgeier said there were no more problems with the driving after the bus had stopped at a rest stop later in the journey.

The next day Meisgeier said he called the Iowa State Patrol office in Cedar Rapids about the incident.

However, officials at the State Patrol office said they do not have any record of Meisgeier's call.

"We didn't come up with a thing on it," said Sgt. Bill Hampton.

Hampton said it was possible that the State Patrol might have put out a local bulletin after Meisgeier's call warning officers to be on the lookout for buses displaying erratic behavior, but he could not be sure.

"If he did in fact call that would probably be the case," he said.

Meisgeier said he was not surprised that the State Patrol had not taken the matter seriously.

"Here's a serious safety problem and I'd think they'd at least take some initiative," Meisgeier said. "I just wanted an investigation. I assume they're interested in highway safety."

Hampton added that the department could take no more action unless Meisgeier was willing to file charges against the driver of the bus.

"All he would have to do is go to the county attorney's office in that county and file charges against that driver," Hampton said.

Meisgeier said that when he called the State Patrol office he was not told anything about the process of filing charges.

Greyhound officials said they had not been informed of the incident.

"If Mr. Meisgeier will inform someone from Greyhound we'll conduct a full investigation," said Elizabeth Dunn, of the public relations department of Greyhound's headquarters in Dallas, Texas.

After learning of Greyhound's position Meisgeier said he had not decided if he would pursue the matter any further.

Conference lets Iowans discuss MS

Kelly Hassenstab
Daily Iowan

Iowans suffering from multiple sclerosis and their families will have a chance to participate in a national teleconference Saturday from a site at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

According to Abbie Holmes, service director of the Iowa chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, the annual teleconference discusses various topics concerning MS. "MS: Understanding Your Mind and Emotions" is the theme of this year's conference.

"This type of conference gives people with MS and their families a chance to learn more about their situation and voice their questions to nationally known experts in the field," Holmes said.

Speakers this year include clinic psychologist Dr. Nicholas LaRocca and chronic illness social worker Dr. Jaclynn Faffer, both from New York.

LaRocca and Faffer will discuss the emotional, psychological and intellectual changes MS patients go through and the role of family and society in dealing with the disease.

Holmes said the NMSS hoped to connect up to 10,000 people at 300 sites across the country.

"People participating in the conference will also have an opportunity to ask the presenters questions," she said. "Usually, there is one phone question taken from each site that is heard at all locations."

The UIHC is hosting a teleconference site in room 283 of the Eckstein Medical Research Building on Hawkins Drive. The conference is scheduled from 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

The program will cost $2 and pre-registration is required. People interested in registering or with questions can call the NMSS Iowa chapter at 1-800-798-6677.

Younkers suffers $3.6 million loss

Jude Sunderbruch
Daily Iowan

Less than a week after Younkers department stores went public with an offering of over 6 million shares of stock the company reported a loss of $3.6 million for the first three months of 1992.

The loss was a 13 percent improvement for the company, compared to a loss of $4.1 million in the same period last year. Younkers' total sales were $60.9 million in 1992, a $1.4 million drop from the 1991 figures that the company attributed to the exiting of their furniture line.

On April 23 Younkers Inc. and its parent corporation at the time, Equitable of Iowa Companies, announced that the registration statement filed by Younkers with the Securities and Exchange Commission relating to the offering of the stock was declared effective.

The corporation announced Wednesday that the public offering of stock had been completed. Of the shares sold, 1,466,445 were sold by Younkers and 4,703,555 were sold by Equitable of Iowa Companies.

Younkers is a fashion department store chain with 29 stores in Iowa, Nebraska, Illinois, Minnesota and South Dakota.

Equitable of Iowa is a holding company based in Des Moines whose principal subsidiaries, Equitable Life Insurance Company of Iowa and USG Annuity and Life Company, sell life insurance and annuities throughout the United States.

Since an initial offering price of $12.50 the stock has fallen to $11.50, according to Gene Brawner, resident manager of Dain Bosworth Inc., 116 S. Dubuque St. Despite this, he said the prospects for Younkers' future look bright.

"I think it will affect them positively," he said. "They're in a very strong financial situation."

Brawner noted that the firm would be employee-owned and said that firms in the retail market that Younkers compete in often do better if they are employee-owned.

John Curti, vice-president of research at Securities Corp. of Iowa, said that leaving Equitable will be a positive move for Younkers because the company will be able to gain access to credit markets and with that the potential to expand.

Curti noted that during Equitable's expansion in recent years in the insurance sector, the company invested capital in that portion of its business and not Younkers.

U.S. POLITICS

Bias prompts Pa. woman's career

Michael Blood
 Associated Press
 PHILADELPHIA — Lynn Yeakel parlayed outrage over the Clarence Thomas hearings into a powerful political weapon in the Pennsylvania Senate primary. But it was anger over job discrimination in her own career that set her on the track to the nomination.
 In the mid-1960s, Yeakel was a young newlywed in Philadelphia looking for work in the advertising industry when she was turned down for a job because the all-male executive board, she was told, was "not ready for a woman."
 "I was discriminated against. . .

That made me very angry, to put it mildly. That was something significant," Yeakel said Wednesday, recounting the incident for reporters after her surprise victory in state's Democratic primary over Lt. Gov. Mark Singel.
 Recently, she crossed paths with the man who conveyed that decision to her 27 years ago. "I thanked him for setting me on my career path," she said.
 That path has now led to a November showdown with incumbent Republican Arlen Specter, whose delving interrogation of Anita Hill during the Thomas hearings infuriated Yeakel to the point that she entered her first political race.
 "The voters clearly are looking for people with a different kind of experience and a different kind of leadership," she said, describing Specter's performance at the hearing as "humiliating and embarrassing to me."

 Specter has tried to portray her as a one-issue candidate, but she insists that is not the case.
 "Child care, jobs, education, health care — those are all women's issues that affect our children, that affect our families, and I'd like to make the case for really putting those issues at the center of our domestic agenda," she said.
 Yeakel campaigned as a reformist outsider.

BLACK WOMEN

A chance to evaluate issues

As a large university, the UI is the site of many conferences and institutes. But starting on Friday, the UI will be host to a rare conference when the Afro-American Cultural Center and the Boyd Law Building will be the site of the first annual conference titled, "Black Womyn in Transition: Defining Our Own." The conference is an attempt by black women to come together and address the particular needs and issues confronting black women. Conceived and organized by black women, the conference is a unique opportunity for the UI community to explore black women's issues.

The intersection of race and sex has always been one of the most explosive areas of discussion in the United States. It has also been one of the least discussed areas in American society. As a result, black women, the forgotten segment of the American population, have had to endure the twin evils of sexism and racism alone. They have not, however, suffered in silence, and have long organized themselves in order to deal with their particular problems. But America, including black men, has long been silent about the treatment of black women.

While black women like Fannie Lou Hamer and Rosa Parks embodied the spirit of the Civil Rights Movement, black women were still relegated to the rear of the movement, and the issue of sexism was rarely discussed. It seems that many black males in the movement felt that women could work for the movement, but could not lead it. Even today the issue of sexism is rarely dealt with in the black community, if at all.

The traditional feminist establishment has chosen to largely ignore black women's issues. Whether it is because traditional feminism is not equipped as an ideology or practice to deal with black women's issues is not clear, but one thing is: while organizations such as NOW have purported to represent all women, black women have gone largely ignored. (The notable exception was the feminist reaction to the treatment of Anita Hill, but even that is an historic aberration).

The bottom line is that Americans must become more sensitive to the plight of black women in the United States. But if black men and white women, two groups who should know better, won't deal with their own sexism and racism, who are they to blame anyone else for oppressive behavior?

GULF WAR-CIVILIAN DEATHS

X marks the truth

While the Persian Gulf War has been over for more than a year, accurate civilian death estimates are just now coming to light. The Pentagon and Capitol Hill have been spoon-feeding the American public bits and pieces of sanguine information about how the war impacted the common Iraqi no more than it affected Joe Public over here, even though it is common knowledge that the air war nearly knocked all of Iraq back into the Middle Ages and the ground war virtually paralyzed any hope of evicting Saddam Hussein from Baghdad. The Department of Defense is still attempting its own version of newspeak with its highly contestable and almost fabricated account of Bush's military frolic.

The Census Bureau's Center for International Research, which had the task of updating Iraq's post-war population numbers for Capitol Hill, has also tried its hand at creative history writing — and almost got away with it. In March Beth Osborne Daponte, a demographer at the bureau, decided she ought to take the impact of the war into consideration when updating the population estimates of Iraq. Daponte, like most of us, thought our government was up-front and honest with its citizens even when it comes to such emotional and sensitive topics as war. Unfortunately she was wrong and soon found herself fighting for her job and for freedom of information. After her superiors said her reports included "false information" and showed "untrustworthiness and unreliability," she was taken off the project. Her reports were soon pockmarked with crosses and Xs taking out all the "unsupported facts."

In her report, Daponte estimated military mortality between 30,000 and 115,000. Civilian casualties, including those of what she called "post-war excess" (deaths due to violent uprisings and the U.N. embargo), ranged from 22,000 to 246,000.

These are frightening numbers when you consider the previous number of civilian deaths according to Washington was no more than 10,000. But there is a bigger picture that we must look at; our elected government has been lying to us.

This is not something new, however, and it doesn't matter if you supported the war or not; the fact is that we have been taken advantage of and not many people seem to really give a damn. We are kept at arm's length from our own government and from information we have a legal right to know. We have been ostracized from Washington because of their insincerity and fickleness.

The line between the public's right to know and national security has always been hazy at best and there are certain facts a government cannot indulge to its citizens. But when taxpayers foot the bill for a war halfway around the world and we are in the midst of choosing a leader for the next four years, we deserve to know the true facts, not some watered down, rosy, happy-go-lucky, overprocessed numbers game.

JIM ROGERS

Buchanan's candidacy: 1992 or 1996?

Pat Buchanan polled 37 percent of New Hampshire primary voters, and it was downhill from there. Conventional wisdom has it that Buchanan now is just trying to position himself for the 1996 campaign.

Buchanan seems prone to the same conceit affecting Jerry Brown: The belief that voters view him as the leader of a grassroots movement and not simply as another politician who presents a convenient opportunity through whom to cast a protest vote.

The idea that because Buchanan polled in the 30s in a couple of contests that he now has a sizable electoral base for the 1996 race is nonsense. The Republican anti-Bush vote hovered around 30 percent. When Buchanan scored about that, the margin was his own support. But Buchanan's negatives pushed his electoral support below that line in 11 states to date.

Much is made of the fact that Buchanan mobilized many young activist conservatives for his race. But, again, it would be a mistake to hold that this cadre of young, enthusiastic support in any way comprises a "Buchanan brigade" that will translate over to 1996.

Young conservatives have not had a presidential race in which they could really sink their teeth since 1984. And they are spoiling for another knockdown, drag-out fight with America's wounded yet still potent liberal New Class elite.

While in his campaign against Dukakis President Bush pretended he was willing to take the battle into liberal citadels, conservatives suspected that Bush's preference was more for tepid compromise than principled battle. Bush's first administration has proven the conservatives right.

Buchanan's tepidity left young conservatives cold. To be sure, there would still be 1996, but when you're young four years can seem an eternity.

Buchanan stepped into this gap. He is pugnacious and plain-talking. It is a striking contrast to Bush tepidity and Bush-speak.

But Buchanan's candidacy also put most movement conservatives into a bind. While few of them approved of George Bush's unwillingness to fight for respect — to fight for anything — although most bore at least a grudging respect for the president's handling of the gulf war, Pat Buchanan represents a tone and a theme with which few conservatives identify, let alone wish to embrace.

Aside from a few paleo-conservatives associated with the magazine Chronicles, or with the John Randolph Club, comprised of conservative isolationists, conservatives do not identify with Buchanan's isolationism and nativism, and are disturbed by his penchant for identifying with anti-Semitic symbols and phrases even if he isn't anti-Semitic himself.

One of the real stories in Buchanan's race isn't that he manned his campaign with young conservatives spoiling for a good electoral fight before they have to grow up, rather it's that he received so little aid and comfort from a conservative establishment that can hardly stand George Bush.

These conservatives would have eagerly supported almost any insurgent conservative effort against Bush. Almost. That they didn't is the big story for Buchanan's chances in 1996.

After publishing a piece earlier this year in which William F. Buckley amounted the evidence that Buchanan had written anti-Semitic statements, although was probably not an anti-Semite himself (a very fine line if ever there were one), the best National Review could do is support a tactical vote for Buchanan in New Hampshire in order to throw a little bit of scare into Bush and move him to the right.

Almost as soon as the New Hampshire election was over, the magazine's editor, John O'Sullivan, was on the airwaves saying that the effort had succeeded and that it was time for Buchanan to pull out of the race. The American Spectator didn't even wait that long to oppose Buchanan.

There is, of course, a fault line in American conservatism. The barely muted demarcation between the neo-cons and the paleocons has broken out into open warfare. Norman Podhoretz, the editor of the leading neo-con magazine Commentary writes in the May issue that "There is plenty of bad news about Patrick J. Buchanan's campaign for the Republican nomination for president in 1992, but the good news is that it has gone so badly with the voters."

Buchanan, for his part, wrote some time back that neo-cons, "Like the fleas who conclude they are steering the dog, their relationship to the movement has always been parasitical."

None of this bodes well for Buchanan's chances in 1996. For that race there are conservatives willing to run who don't need to carry the baggage that Buchanan does. William Bennett, Dick Cheney and Jack Kemp, to name a few.

Pat Buchanan sells anger and resentment, these men actually have ideas. Buchanan had to run this year in order to have any shot in 1996: Amid these other people, a TV personality whose only claim to fame is that he can make people mad by what he says is way out of his league.

Jim Rogers' column appears Thursdays on the Viewpoints page.

Public schools: back to 'separate but equal'

In its landmark 1954 decision, Brown vs. Board of Education, the Supreme Court — relying, in part, on research conducted by New York City College psychology Professor Dr. Kenneth Clark — emphasized that segregation in public schools generates in black children "a feeling of inferiority that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone."

Clark was elated at the unanimous decision declaring public school segregation unconstitutional. I spoke to him the day after the present Supreme Court ruled unanimously in Freeman vs. Pitts — with a scattering of worried concurring views — that the more than 500 schools systems under federal desegregation orders can now be gradually released from this supervision as they meet goals from time to time. With regard to the remaining obligation of the school boards, lower federal courts would judge the school boards on the "good faith" efforts.

Nonetheless, despite such "good faith" efforts, said the court, if schools still remain racially unbalanced because of demographics, well, school districts are "under no duty to remedy imbalance that is caused by demographic factors." The 11th Circuit, which the Supreme Court overruled in this case, had said, however, that school boards should find ways to cope "with any intervening demographic changes" until the system was desegregated.

"We are now not only whittling down Brown vs. Board of Education," Clark said in reaction, "we are moving back to the 'separate but equal' doctrine in Plessy vs. Ferguson." (Plessy is the 1896 Supreme Court ruling that purportedly became obsolete once Brown vs. Board of Education said that "any added that 68 percent of Hispanic students — largely ignored by the courts — are in non-white schools.

Since it could be difficult to prove that desegregation is due to other than demographic factors, there is — according to Justice Anthony Kennedy, who wrote the majority opinion — no constitutional problem about vast sectors of apartheid in the public schools. Nor would Kennedy be likely to be concerned that if the "good faith" of certain school districts were raised in court, more a future "in which they will not have to spend so much valuable energy apologizing for injustices which they did not invent but for which they must share the responsibility." And young blacks, freed of the stigma of segregation, "may now be proud of the fact that they are Americans." There was only one thing about Freeman vs. Pitts — which came 38 years later from DeKalb County, Ga. — that heartened Clark. "Watching television," he told me, "I saw this white kid — he was around 11 or 12 — saying, 'Look, this segregation is increasing bigotry.'"

"The Supreme Court decision," says Orfield, "gives no sense of building interracial institutions, transcending racial divisions and training new generations to become interracial."

In a conversation with Sally Terkel in the newly published Voices (The New Press), Clark notes: "I am not that sanguine about an kind of solid decency and justice in the area of race in America. The best we can settle for is appearance."

And less and less of that. In his concurring opinion, Justice Harry Blackmun, unsuccessfully trying to narrow the impact of the majority decision, emphasizes that it is almost 38 years since the court decided Brown vs. Board of Education. "In those 38 years... the majority of black students (in DeKalb County) have never attended a school that was not disproportionately black." And that is still the case.

Nat Hentoff is a staff writer for The Village Voice.

 The excessive-force count against Powell after three days of deliberation on that count alone.
 The officers could have faced four to 7½ years in prison if convicted on all charges.
 Besides Powell, 29, those acquitted were Sgt. Stacey Koon, 41, and officers Timothy Wind, 32, and Theodore Briseno, 39.
 After the verdict, the defendants hugged relatives, shook hands with attorneys and slapped each other on the back.
 "Very happy," Powell told reporters. "It's hard to be surprised when you get that way... I know I'm innocent and that was the verdict."
 Wind was overcome with emotion, saying he had "too many feelings - I can't express them." Koon told reporters "you can read about it in the book" and left. Briseno did not talk to reporters.

 "I was shocked and disappointed," said the prosecutor, Deputy District Attorney Terry White, adding, "That's the way the system works."
 The jury - which included an Asian, a Hispanic and no blacks - left in a sheriff's bus without talking to reporters. "This experience has been a very difficult and stressful one, one which we have agonized over a great deal. We feel we have done the best job we could have possibly done," the jury said in a statement.
 The trial lasted nearly three months in a case that strained race relations in Los Angeles and forced the resignation announcement of Gates.

All four had been charged with assault with a deadly weapon and excessive force by an officer under color of authority. Koon and Powell also were charged with filing a false police report, and Koon with being an accessory after the fact.
 Wind, a probationary officer, was fired. The others were suspended.
 The acquittals raised fears of unrest in the wake of the verdicts. Police had earmarked $1 million in overtime in case acquittals sparked riots.
 The jury heard from 54 witnesses whose recollections of the violent night of March 3, 1991, often conflicted.
 Most of the testimony came from police officers and police employees, with three of the defendants testifying.

 In their ongoing fight against discrimination, Shaw also urged the crowd to listen to what those with other viewpoints have to say, rather than alienating them.
 "I'm going to ask us and I'm going to ask myself that we stop clobbering people with our political righteousness and we start reaching out to people with our hearts," Shaw said.
 Before singing a song with a chorus of "Glory, glory, I'm a lesbian; Glory, glory, I'm a gay man; Glory, glory I am queer and proud; I am truth marching on," UI student Tess Catalano urged the crowd to empower themselves from within.

"There is no legislature in your heart - no one gives you rights. You have them right now," Catalano said. "We are always free inside."
 Also speaking at Wednesday's rally was Maricar Tinio, vice president of the UI Student Assembly. Tinio told the crowd of a UISA resolution in support of the gay rights bill that was passed at a meeting the night before the bill's defeat in the House.
 Although the UISA is a politically diverse group, Tinio said the resolution was favored by all but one senator.
 "I think this type of action shows that we all realize that this is a human rights issue," Tinio said, encouraging students to approach the UISA with their concerns. "It's time that gay, lesbian and straight students collaborate with each other to overcome heterosexism on this campus."

 Co-sponsors for the rally were UILGBSFA, Gay People's Union, Spectrum, the Iowa International Socialist Organization, Women's Resource and Action Center, Central American Solidarity Committee and New Wave.
 Leighton Christiansen of the IISO closed the rally by leading the crowd in a chant that echoed other speakers' calls to work together in the fight against discrimination: "Gay, straight, black, white - Same struggle, same fight."

 Rawlings had hoped to try the obstacle course, but due to his busy schedule had to return to his office. He did have time to shoot a few hoops with staffers of the event before leaving.
 "I think that this is a wonderful event for a very worthy cause," Rawlings said. "I am very appreciative of the sponsors who made this a successful event. I think that it's a great event for Riverweek."
 Rex Muston, a UI graduate student in English education, said he really didn't know what to expect before he tried the course. After he completed it, he thought differently about the situation.
 "It's difficult keeping your traction when you hit the sand and it takes a lot of effort to get uphill and to open doors. It helps me to realize that more buildings should be wheelchair accessible and the slopes of the inclines are very important," Muston said.

 Mike Horsfield, a first-year master's student in physical therapy, thought differently about opening doors after he tried the obstacle course.
 "It makes me realize that opening a door towards you is the most difficult. You have to get through the door and then you can't reach back and it's harder to close the door than open it," he said.
 Casey Hayse was at the event to raise awareness about the Iowa Program for Assistive Technology, a program which works with Iowans with disabilities to make assistive technology, devices and services more accessible, affordable and effective.

 Hayse, who has cerebral palsy, felt that the event was a good opportunity to let people without disabilities experience what it's like to be in a wheelchair.
 "I think that it is representative of what you go through everyday," she said.
 Hayse spoke of computers, different types of word boards and telecommunication devices that people with disabilities can use.
 "Wheelchairs are not the only tools people with disabilities use. Just because you have a disability doesn't mean that you can't be productive," said Hayse.

ACCIDENT

Collision with truck derails Amtrak train

Joe Taylor
Associated Press

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. — An Amtrak train derailed Wednesday morning after colliding with a truck at a right of way, killing the truck driver and injuring 53 of the roughly 96 people aboard, authorities said.

The Colonial, bound for New York, slammed into a dump truck loaded with sand 10 minutes after leaving the Newport News station. The crash occurred at an intersection that was marked with warning signs but no gates, bells or flashing lights.

"It was a big chug like, and the train started screeching," said passenger Marcelina Morales of New York, who suffered minor injuries. "Then all of a sudden it started turning over, turning over. We thought it would never stop." Several cars on the train overturned, but it appeared that they only turned once onto their side and did not continue to roll.

Fire Investigator M.F. Champ said the truck driver was killed and 53 people on the train were injured. Five hospitals reported treating 49 people, most for minor injuries.

Police Lt. Carl Burt identified the truck driver as Sam L. Chandler, 61, of Gloucester. He worked for the Sears Concrete Corp. of Gloucester, Burt said.

Amtrak spokesman Cliff Black said ticket listing showed the train was carrying 92 passengers, but the actual number could have been a few more or less. There were four crew members.

Burt said speed recorders on the locomotive showed that the train was traveling at its authorized speed of 79 mph.

The train consisted of an engine and five passenger cars, all of which derailed. Three cars were on their sides, two were upright and the engine was in a ravine.

The impact sheared the truck in half, Burt said.

"It was just a quick, sharp bang," said Kevin Hayes, who was on one of the cars that flipped on its side.

"Everybody tumbled over."

"I felt a jolt and then we just started rocking," said Percy Black of New York, who also wasn't injured.

Danny Terry of Newport News said he was on his way to a mall to get his glasses repaired and passed by soon after the accident.

BUFFALO PROTESTS

Operation Rescue announces temporary halt of blockades

Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Operation Rescue said Wednesday it had indefinitely suspended its campaign to disrupt the Buffalo area's four abortion clinics, but a spokeswoman said she expected protests to resume soon.

Abortion rights advocates lined the streets outside the clinics, as they have each morning since the protests began, and said they would not let down their guard.

"This is not over," said Liz Silverberg of Buffalo United for Choice. "Until these people get in their buses and go home, we will continue to defend our clinics."

Police have made about 420 arrests of abortion opponents and 11 of abortion rights activists since Operation Rescue's demonstrations began April 20. Many of the abortion opponents remained jailed in an army because they refused to post bail.

The group originally said it intended to protest for two to four weeks, similar to last summer's siege in Wichita, Kan. Those protests lasted 46 days and resulted in 2,600 arrests.

But Operation Rescue leaders scaled back their comments as the Buffalo protests went on and appeared at times to be having difficulty finding volunteers to be arrested.

Unlike in Wichita, abortion rights groups mounted vigorous counter-demonstrations that helped keep the clinics open. Police enforcing a federal court order kept strict control over the confrontations.

Karen Swallow Prior, a local spokeswoman for Operation Rescue, said the suspension was not the end to the anti-abortion group's protests in Buffalo.

BASEBALL

Dwight Smith sent to Des Moines, Strange recalled

ATLANTA — The Chicago Cubs on Wednesday recalled infielder Don Strange from their Iowa Triple A farm club and sent outfielder Dwight Smith to the same club.

Strange was hitting .358 at Iowa with one home run and eight RBIs in 14 games. He started at third base in Wednesday's game against the Atlanta Braves.

Smith was batting .216 with three RBIs in 16 games with the Cubs.

NFL

Worley missed tests, suspended for violation

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh Steelers running back Tim Worley's trip to the NBA All-Star game in Orlando in February has cost him at least a year's suspension under the NFL's substance-abuse policy.

Worley admitted skipping two mandatory drug tests while attending the game. Worley was suspended for six games last season after twice testing positive for cocaine and a third violation of the league's policy automatically warrants a suspension.

Under league policy, Worley can petition for reinstatement next spring.

Namath undergoes surgery

NEW YORK — Hall of Fame quarterback Joe Namath had both knees replaced by surgical procedure Wednesday.

Namath, who has arthritis, underwent bilateral knee replacement surgery at The Hospital for Special Surgery in New York. The surgery was performed by Dr. Chitranjan Ranawat, an internationally recognized leader in joint replacement surgery.

The operation was necessitated by advanced arthritis compounded by the strenuous activity of pro football. The surgery took four hours.

Namath, 48, will be hospitalized for 10 days and then will need crutches for at least a month.

NBA

General of Defense?

SAN ANTONIO — If statistics count, then David Robinson of the San Antonio Spurs was hardly a surprise winner Wednesday of the NBA's Defensive Player of the Year Award.

Robinson was the only player in the league to finish among the top 10 in both blocked shots — he led the NBA with 4.48 per game — and steals — he was fifth with 2.30 per game.

That earned the San Antonio center 46 of a possible 96 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Detroit's Dennis Rodman, who won the award each of the past two years, finished second with 39 votes. Rodman led the league in rebounding with 18.7, the highest total since Wilt Chamberlain's 19.2 in 1972.

Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen of Chicago had three votes each, Joe Dumars of Detroit got two and Utah's Karl Malone, Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon and Portland's Buck Williams received one each.

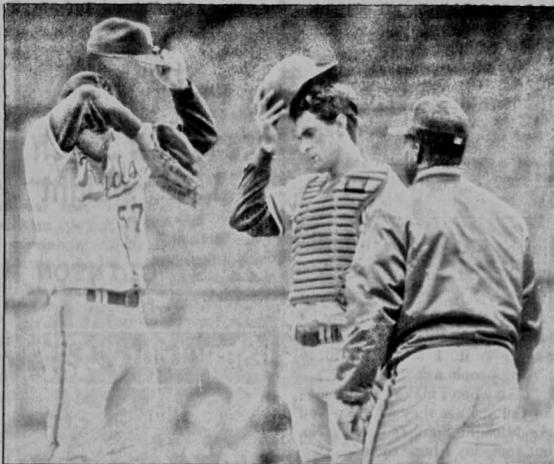

Robinson helped the Spurs' defense lead the league by limiting opponents to a .452 field goal percentage.

NHL

Ziegler forbids Soviets to return home

DETROIT — NHL President John Ziegler said Wednesday he has forbidden Russian players to join their homeland's national team while the former Soviet Army team is suing the Detroit Red Wings.

Ziegler testified for nearly six hours in the U.S. District Court case in which Russian officials are trying to get Viacheslav Kozlov's contract with Detroit ruled invalid to have him returned to the Central Sports Club.

IOWA BASEBALL

Bam Bam leads Hawks to win

Erica Weiland
Daily Iowan

For some reason, Iowa catcher Steve Fishman refers to Tim Killeen as Barney Rubble. Maybe it has something to do with the way Killeen hits the ball.

"Every time he hits a homer, we just say, 'Bam, bam, bam,'" said Fishman, a freshman and Killeen's backup. "Actually, I just say, 'Oh shit,' because that means he'll be playing all the time."

Killeen hit his second home run in two days and his 12th on the season Wednesday as the Hawkeyes (25-19) defeated Grand View (33-17) 12-2. Iowa also took the first game of the doubleheader 11-6.

The 6-foot-0 195-pound left-handed batter, known for pulling the ball on home runs, went the opposite direction Tuesday at Iowa State for a round-tripper with the wind. Wednesday he did the same, sending the ball over the left-center field fence, but this time against the wind.

"It was a curve ball away, and I just went with the pitch," Killeen said. "I was pretty lucky to get it out against the wind."

The Hawkeyes rebounded quickly from two losses to the Cyclones Tuesday in Ames. They jumped on Grand View right away, scoring five runs in the first inning of the opener and adding five more in the fourth.

"We did better today than yesterday," Iowa coach Duane Banks said. "We got big hits when we needed them, and that's something we haven't been doing. We swung the bats pretty good at times, the pitchers did a good job, and our defense was outstanding."

"We got hits with men in scoring position, and it's an easy game when you do that."

Sophomore third baseman Bobby Morris said the team was partially motivated by Tuesday's performance.

"Coach gave us a long talk yesterday when we got back, and I think that changed a lot of people's attitudes," Morris said. "I think the team came out with more intensity. Everyone pushed it up a notch. We wanted to show we could still play."

In the Hawkeyes' first at-bat of the day, Curtis Reed led off with a double, and with one out, Morris hit an inside-the-park home run as center fielder David Overton ran into the fence trying to field the ball.

With two outs, Killeen walked and Danan Hughes got aboard when the ball rolled between the legs of shortstop Shane Burmeister, followed by consecutive singles by Kevin Minch, Cory Larsen and Matt Johnson. The latter two were stranded when Reed grounded out to first, but Iowa already had five runs on the board.

Grand View retaliated with four runs in the top of the third off a double and four singles. But David Boles was caught stealing, the Hawkeyes turned their first of four double plays on the day and Matthew Paulsen grounded out to third to end the threat.

Iowa added insurance in the form of five more runs off just two hits — a solo homer by Minch and a two-run triple by Hughes — in the bottom of the fourth.

In the nightcap, Grand View opened the game with two runs in the first inning. But the Hawkeyes scored three of their own in the bottom of the first — including Killeen's homer — and added two more in the second.

Things were pretty quiet until the bottom of the sixth when Iowa exploded for seven runs off six walks, three singles and two sacrifices.

"Our bats came around better today, but we still have to become more consistent and drive in more runs during the clutch times," Killeen said. "We've been in a team funk, especially in driving in runs. This helped in getting at-bats for guys, and we got some good

MILWAUKEE — Ricky Bones combined with four relievers on a five-hitter for his first American League victory as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Kansas City Royals 5-3 Wednesday.

Bones (1-0) allowed two runs and four hits in 6 1/2 innings. He left after spraining the middle finger of his pitching hand in a collision with runner Jim Eisenreich while covering first base.

Greg Vaughn hit his fourth home run.

Kevin McReynolds hit his third homer.

Cardinals 2, Giants 1
SAN FRANCISCO — Rex Hudler scored from second base on Dave Righetti's wild pitch and a throwing error by catcher Kirt Manwaring in the 12th inning.

Hudler opened the 12th with an infield single off Righetti (0-2) and took second on Tim Jones' sacrifice. Hudler advanced to third on Righetti's wild pitch and raced home when Manwaring's throw got past Matt Williams at third base and bounced into foul territory.

Lee Smith pitched the 12th for his seventh save.

Braves 8, Cubs 0
ATLANTA — John Smoltz just wanted to keep up with Atlanta's other starting pitchers.

So he went out and threw Atlanta's third straight shutout at the Chicago Cubs on Wednesday, scattering seven hits in an 8-0 victory that extended the Braves' winning streak to five games.

Smoltz (2-2) struck out nine and walked three in registering his first complete game of the season. "We have an inner competition," Smoltz said. "You can't do any better than throw a shutout so I was just trying to duplicate what they had done."

The Cubs, who have now lost six of their last seven games, managed only 12 hits in the 27 innings.

"I don't know if I've ever managed three successive shutouts," said Atlanta skipper Bobby Cox. "All I know is that it's a pretty good feeling sitting in the dugout."

MINNEAPOLIS — Randy Milligan, returning from a six-game layoff that followed a collision with a teammate, singled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning Wednesday as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Minnesota Twins 5-4.

Harrelson, Snipes jump off screen

In the comedy "White Men Can't Jump," writer-director Ron Shelton teases us with the possibility of a realistic movie about basketball and race (finally!), but he doesn't deliver.

If Shelton fears getting too far inside the game, he does, however, get behind it far enough to explain why some people might want to toss a round ball through a hoop.

Shelton's previous sports movie, "Bull Durham," was an entertaining fantasy about minor league baseball. It purported to give insider info about the bush leagues, but Shelton polished up the dirty details.

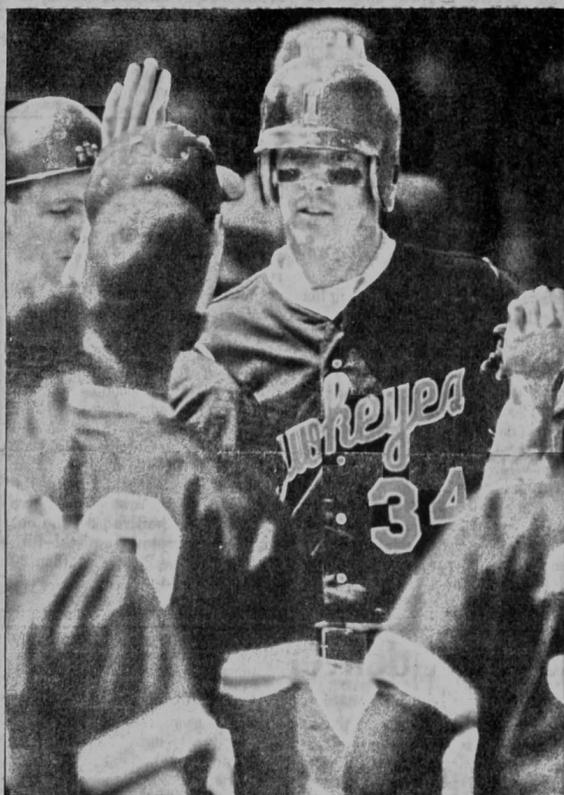

Which makes it like "White Men Can't Jump."

This movie has gotten a lot of praise for its realistic basketball scenes. But when the Siskels and Eberts start talking about this movie's streetwise authenticity, you know they haven't set their watches ahead. Believe not the hype.

Shelton's ballplayers are absurdly flashy — in both speech and action. To be sure, basketball at any level these days features lots of gab on the court. But these characters' tongues are a little too silver.

The trash that real ballplayers talk sounds less like Shakespeare and more like, "Get some of that." Most ballplayers don't have scriptwriters.

And, while the basketball moves are real — look ma no cuts — you're set up to watch the actors play ball. That Woody Harrelson is pretty good, Shelton wants you to say and wow, Wesley Snipes (though spastic) can really dunk. It's all well-staged and well-choreographed — and that's the problem. Basketball ain't the Bol- See WEBB, Page 2B

"We'll be ready," Banks said. "The kids know what they have to do. We have to play aggressive baseball all the time. When they go into lapses and go to sleep is what bothers me. There's no time for that now. We just need to stay aggressive."

Spinks off to rocky beginning

James Arnold
Daily Iowan

If you are Michael Spinks, it has to be easy to succeed in the boxing world. Not if you're only cousin Michael.

Former Hawkeye baseball player and current 23 year-old Iowa senior Mike Spinks is taking up the sport which made both Leon and Michael Spinks famous.

Life in the ring hasn't gone as planned so far. Spinks wanted to take cousin Leon's route and make it to the 1992 Summer Olympics. Unfortunately for Spinks, he lasted only into the second match before losing.

Spinks has other routes to follow into the pros, but he doesn't know if it's in the cards.

"Hopefully, a promoter or anybody can see the name Michael Spinks, come watch me fight and put me on the circuit," Spinks said. "A little luck... you never

The Galesburg, Ill., native said he has been fighting for nine years, but took a break from the sport during college to play baseball.

After bouncing out of the baseball lineup because of a broken collarbone and bouncing out of Iowa to attend North Carolina, he has returned.

Jordan's 56 eliminate Heat

MIAMI — The Miami Heat took an 18-point lead. Then Michael Jordan took over.

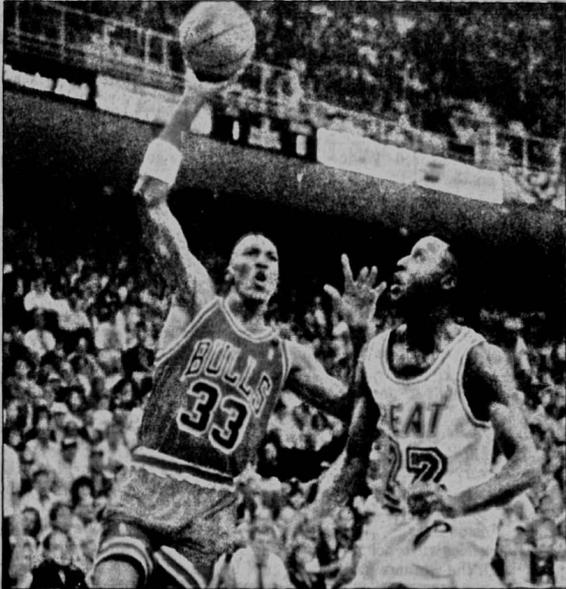

Jordan scored no points in the first 10 minutes and 56 after that Wednesday night to help the Chicago Bulls beat the Heat 119-114 and complete a sweep of their first-round playoff series.

Jordan's point total tied the third highest in playoff history. He holds the record of 63, set in a double overtime game against Boston in 1986. Jordan scored 55 points in a regulation playoff game against Cleveland in 1988.

The defending NBA champions advanced to a second-round matchup against the winner of the New York-Detroit series. The Knicks lead 2-1 going into Game 4 Friday night at Detroit.

Miami, outscored by 49 points in the first two games, roared to a 33-15 lead in the first-ever playoff game in Florida. The Bulls pulled even in the second quarter but could never pull away.

WEBB: Shelton doesn't deliver

 shoi ballet.
 This movie needs more of a documentary feel in the game scenes — a sense of the roughness and difficulty of basketball. (There's hardly a missed shot in the film.) Shelton trades grit and authenticity for the small pleasure of seeing familiar actors make nice moves and clever insults.
 Still, despite this central weakness, "White Men Can't Jump" is worth seeing for the points it scores off the court.
 In the first place, it touches — very lightly — on thorny issues of race. Shelton suggests that blacks have a basketball ethic that puts aesthetics ahead of results, and whites the other way around.
 Race in sports is an issue that both blacks and whites try to cut both ways, to their advantage as the situation warrants. But it's also a very sensitive point that no one wants to talk about, and that's probably why Shelton doesn't press it much beyond the ironic title.

 In fact, Shelton's points are obscured by the fact that Woody's game is as flashy as Wesley's, and by the bizarre, out-of-touch claim that only blacks can "hear" Jimi Hendrix.
 More successfully, Shelton dramatizes Woody's addiction to basketball. Woody can't stop playing, even at the expense of his girlfriend, the great Rosie Perez.
 Basketball is an impossible game to conquer, but it offers constant rewards; you miss half of your shots, but you also make half.

 Woody, like most of us who play, is looking for the next made shot, the next perfect moment, the next winning play. For Woody, that and the simple camaraderie of the court are more rewarding than his complicated home life.
 Even more striking are the vocations Shelton gives his characters. Not one of them earns money the old-fashioned way: in a "real job."
 Harrelson hustles hoops; Perez is an aspiring actor who meanwhile wins on "Jeopardy"; and Snipes is a black-market contractor and b-ball hustler who won't let his wife get a job.
 Is get-cash-quick the new American dream? Is it a response to America 1992?
 These twentysomething characters have come of age in a day of savings and loans fiascos and general pessimism. Meanwhile, they've been flooded through the mass media with visions of great fortune (in both senses).

 Their cynical response to all this is quite sensible. Drab, traditional lifestyles have little luster and hold no promises for them. So, Wesley, Woody and Rosie prefer to take a shot at hitting it big (which makes them just like millions of kids who put everything on the fantasy that they can play professional sports).
 With its surface authenticity, "White Men Can't Jump" comes on like an exposition of streetball. But it works because it captures the illusions and desperation that so many of our generation live on day-to-day.

NHL

Wales division semis headed for Game seven

Associated Press
 There will be a Game 7 in all four Wales Conference playoff series.
 That was assured Wednesday night when the Hartford Whalers, New Jersey Devils, Buffalo Sabres and the defending Stanley Cup champion Pittsburgh Penguins won on home ice.
 The Whalers did in the most dramatic fashion, beating Montreal 2-1 on Yvon Corrivreau's goal 24 seconds into overtime. The Penguins did it impressively, riding the magnificence of Mario Lemieux to a 6-4 comeback decision over Washington.
 The Devils took their local rivals, the New York Rangers, 5-3, as Chris Terreri made a superb turnaround in goal. And Buffalo set a franchise playoff record for goals in routing Boston 9-3.
 All four series will conclude Friday night, with the winners meeting in the next round.
 On Thursday night, Winnipeg is at Vancouver and Minnesota is at Detroit in seventh games in the Campbell Conference. The Edmonton Oilers and Chicago Blackhawks already have advanced.

Penguins 6, Capitals 4
 Lemieux scored twice and figured in all but one goal as the Penguins rallied after allowing four straight goals.
 Pittsburgh can become the ninth team in NHL history to win a series after trailing 3-1 by winning Game 7 on Friday in Landover, Md. Four teams in this year's playoffs — Buffalo, Detroit, Vancouver and Pittsburgh — have deadlocked series after trailing 3-1. The Penguins never have rallied from a 3-1 playoff deficit in the franchise's 25-year history.
 The Penguins, who trailed 4-2 after leading 2-0, stormed back behind Lemieux's playmaking and scoring for the game's final four goals.
Whalers 2, Canadiens 1 (OT)
 Frank Pietrangolo kept the Whalers breathing with 42 saves, then Corrivreau lifted them into Game 7. Hartford's Murray Craven hounded Montreal defenseman Kevin Haller behind the Canadiens' net early in overtime. Haller tried to dump the puck back in the corner, but it bounced right to Andrew Cassels.

 Cassels found Corrivreau in front, and Corrivreau scored his third playoff goal by beating Patrick Roy with a wrist shot.
 An announced crowd of only 8,262 was on hand to see the Whalers force a Game 7 Friday night at Montreal. The only other Whalers playoff crowd that was smaller was the 5,602 at Game 3.
 The Whalers are 0-2 in seventh games. The Canadiens, who have made it past the first round each season since 1983, are 8-7 in seventh games.
Devils 5, Rangers 3
 Rebounding from a poor performance in Game 5, Terreri, the Devils' acrobatic goaltender, shut down the Rangers with 27 saves. Terreri was driven from Monday's game after giving up five goals in 15 shots.
 New York's Brian Leetch tied the game 3-3 at 15:03 of the second period, but 40 seconds later, Zdeno Ciger connected for New Jersey. Peter Stastny clinched it with his second goal of the game with 6:28 to go.

 History will be on the Devils' side when they play Game 7 at Madison Square Garden on Friday night: The Rangers are winless in their four previous seventh games in the playoffs.
Sabres 9, Bruins 3
 Pat LaFontaine scored two second-period goals, his sixth and seventh of the playoffs.
 Buffalo jumped to a 5-0 lead before the second period was halfway over, chasing starting goalie Andy Moog.
 Up 2-0 after the first period, the Sabres struck for three goals in a span of 3:40. LaFontaine made it 3-0 at 3:39 of the second period after a Boston giveaway at center ice gave him a breakaway. Rookie Brad May made it 4-0 with his first of the series, and Colin Patterson scored at 7:19 when the Bruins' Ray Bourque made a blind, backhand pass in his own end. Patterson picked up the giveaway and dribbled a short shot through Moog's pads.

Hawks down to last chance

Steve J. Collins

For the second time in five days, Iowa and Purdue will meet today in men's tennis as the Hawkeyes look to turn their season around.

The two teams are set to meet at 8 a.m. today in the first round of the Big Ten mini-tournament in Madison, Wis. The other first round game pits Illinois against Purdue.

The mini-tournament winner must face regular season champion Minnesota in the first round of the main draw on Friday.

For an Iowa team that has been plagued by injuries and struggled to a 2-8 conference record, the tournament offers a glimmer of hope.

"I've been telling our guys, here's your second season, obviously the deck is stacked against you but it's a chance for redemption," Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said.

Houghton said Iowa's chances of advancing to the main draw are good.

Iowa's two conference wins came over Penn State (7-1) April 5 and Purdue (6-0) last Saturday. The Illini edged Iowa 5-4 Friday in Iowa City.

"I don't think it would take all that much to beat Illinois," Houghton said.

"After having played them, I'm more confident about meeting them in the Big Ten tournament than I was before," he said.

The return of Neil Denahan to the lineup may be what Iowa needs to beat Illinois. The sophomore missed last weekend's matches with an eye injury.

"Denahan will presumably be in the lineup and that could make the difference," Houghton said.

One player who may not be in the lineup is No. 2 singles player Bryan Crowley. The sophomore has been bothered much of the season by a bad back. Houghton said his status is still questionable.

After shutting out the Boilermakers on Saturday the Hawkeyes are confident of advancing.

"I don't think it should be a problem beating them Thursday," Klas Bergstrom said.

However, Houghton said the Boilermakers will put up more of a fight today than they did Saturday. He said the fact that finals week at Purdue started last Sunday may have been a distraction for the Boilermakers.

"I just told our guys over and over that Purdue is going to be a lot better than they were that day," Houghton said.

Houghton said that if Iowa can advance to the main draw the field is wide open.

"Anything can happen once you're in the tournament," Houghton said. "In the past we've done well in the dual meets and then been upset in the tournament. We're hoping we can turn that around this year," Houghton said.

"I guarantee Minnesota is hoping we're not the team that comes out of that first day," Houghton said. "For whatever reason we always seem to play well against them."

Iowa downed Minnesota 5-4 last year and lost 5-3 when the teams met in March.

Due to inclement weather the Hawkeyes didn't play a single Big Ten match outdoors this season; that could change in Madison.

"I'm a little concerned about adjusting to playing outdoors again," Houghton said.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Herk Robinson upset by Royal futility

Associated Press

Wally Joyner does his part to curb the Royals' anxiety over a poor start by slamming an 11th-inning HR Tuesday in the Royals 3-2 win over the Brewers.

Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — General manager Herk Robinson won't call Kansas City's 1-16 getaway a bad start. He won't even call it an embarrassment.

"This goes well beyond bad. It goes well beyond embarrassment," he said. "I'm not sure what you would call it."

Until consecutive victories at Toronto and Milwaukee this week brought the headlong plunge to a halt, history was calling it one of the worst starts ever. Unflattering comparisons with the 0-21 Orioles of 1988 were flowing in.

Not one aspect of the team, which Robinson rebuilt and retooled over the winter and declared fit for a pennant chase, was playing good or even decent baseball. At the end of a franchise-worst 1-8 homestand last week, No. 9 hitters — supposedly the opposition's weakest batters — carried a collective .364 average against Royals pitchers.

It's a frightful way to begin a new career as a general manager. But unlike his team, Robinson's feelings of self worth remain undefeated.

"We will remain strong through this. We will come out of it, and we'll be a good ballclub when this is all said and done," he said. "We have confidence in the club. We have confidence in the people."

Compounding the Royals' public image problems during this terrible April has been the fact their manager, as well as their general manager, is new to the job. Robinson spent 17 years as the Royals' business manager before replacing John Schuerholz as head of baseball operations prior to last season.

Hal McRae, whom Robinson hired after firing John Wathan last May, is beginning his first full year as a manager. Predictably, there have been calls for his scalp as well as Robinson's.

"We've got 25 players on the club, six coaches, a front office, a ton of scouts, who have been involved in decisions," Robinson said. "I don't feel at this point the manager deserves any more blame than the rest of us."

"If people are looking for blame, blame me, the 25 players, the scouts, five or six of whom were involved in decisions putting the club together. It's everybody. It's not one person or one player."

One theory for the collective slump of almost every member of the team has to do with everybody's unfamiliarity with their teammates and their league. Kevin McReynolds, Keith Miller, Gregg Jefferies and Chris Gwynn are new to the Royals — not to mention the American League. First baseman Wally Joyner also is new to the Royals.

All were new to each other and their new park. In the game plan scrapped last week, several Royals were starting at unfamiliar positions. Robinson didn't believe all that would pose any problems in the beginning.

McGwire stroking it again

Chuck Melvin
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Mark McGwire and Doug Rader got together in Arizona to talk hitting. But they're keeping the specifics of the discussions confidential — as if they plan to apply for a patent.

Going into Wednesday night's game at Cleveland, McGwire had nine home runs, two shy of the major-league record for the month of April. His fast start suggests he's put last year's slump-ridden season behind him, and the Oakland Athletics, along for the ride, are back on top in the AL West.

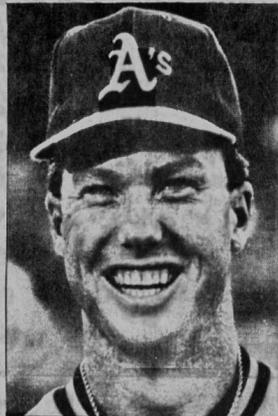

"It's amazing to think that we won our division three years in a row," McGwire said Tuesday night. "The Western division used to be one of the weakest in baseball, and now it's maybe the best."

"Everybody in the division worked to catch up to us, so every game was like a championship game. That's tough."

The pressure, along with a series of injuries, finally caught up with the A's last year, when they dropped to fourth in the division after winning pennants the previous three years. McGwire, who had hit 32 or more home runs and driven in 95 or more runs each of the previous four seasons, slumped to 22 homers, 75 RBIs and a sickly .201 batting average.

"I was trying to do things I wasn't capable of," he said. "I was thinking too much at the plate."

The A's hired Rader, formerly a manager with California, Texas and the Chicago White Sox, as their hitting coach. He worked to help McGwire regain his old form. But neither will say exactly what transpired during those pre-spring training sessions in January.

"The why should remain confidential, understated," Rader said. "I can't violate that confidence with a player."

McGwire's 22 home runs in 1991 were not bad for an ordinary power hitter. But he and Rader knew he was capable of much more.

"If you've set a standard for yourself, no matter how good your year might have been for someone else, it might not meet your own standards," Rader said. "It wasn't what he was hoping to do. But it really doesn't matter what he did last year."

A Cleveland scout who watched McGwire hit three home runs last weekend noted that he's hitting the ball to all fields now, not trying to jerk everything to left.

"I don't talk about the mechanics of my hitting," McGwire said. "I don't really think about it. You just react to pitches and see what happens."

"If it goes to right field, fine. If it goes to center, fine. If it goes to left, fine. I don't worry about that."

Krueger lives and it's a nightmare for hitters

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — While 20-game winners Scott Erickson and John Smiley are losing in bunches, Bill Krueger — Bill Who? — is carrying the Minnesota Twins through a rocky April.

Erickson and Smiley are a combined 0-5. Kevin Tapani, the most consistent pitcher during Minnesota's 1991 championship season, is 1-2.

Meanwhile, non-roster invitee Krueger (4-0) and 21-year-old rookie Pat Mahomes (2-0) have let the Twins escape April with a 9-12 record.

"Two guys are 6-0, but you know you can't count on that kind of performance for an entire season," general manager Andy MacPhail said. "At the same time, you know the other guys are going to come around."

"It's encouraging that while we haven't pitched that well, one guy (Krueger) has been dominant and has kept us afloat."

He has yet to allow more than one run in any start. In 32 innings, he has allowed only 18 hits and four walks while striking out 16. Opponents are batting .165 against Krueger.

All this from a 34-year-old left-hander whose career year was last season's 11-8 performance. After turning down Seattle's contract offer, Krueger found no takers in the free-agent market and ended up signing a minor-league "make-good" contract with the Twins.

He has made very, very good.

"I knew I'd be better. I knew I hadn't peaked. I knew it," Krueger said. "I worked hard over the winter. I threw a lot. And in spring training, I was used as a starter and built up my arm strength. I feel strong and I'm confident that I can throw strikes with all my pitches."

But 4-0? An 0.84 ERA? Ace of a staff with two 20-game winners?

"I don't know how long it'll last," he said. "But this is great."

ART REVIEW

Longtime companions eyed with acceptance

Kristen Carr
Daily Iowan

Michael Williams' photography exhibit "Just One Couple" has brought a out-of-the-closet lifestyle of a gay couple into the everyday realm of the living room and the kitchen.

The exhibit, which will be running through May 8 at Trinity Place, 320 E. College St., is aimed at expanding small-town awareness of non-heterosexual relationships.

There isn't much that's unrecognizable about the relationship chronicled in "Just One Couple." Williams spent 2½ months in chronicling the 3½-year-old relationship between Bob Brooks, a director at the UI Physical Plant, and Mark Rugeberg — their trips to the store, a birthday party for a niece, a night out with the boys. The resulting photographs are filled with the small intimacies and mirrored gestures arising from a day-in and day-out existence with another person.

Viewers expecting "Iowa City is Burning" should re-route their expectations toward "Field of Dreams." Williams' good intentions of normalizing what is to all too many an abnormal existence are fully realized — and in some ways, idealized.

Obviously, this is one happy couple; they have the kind of comfort with each other that only can be described in clichés involving sweatpants and old bathrobes and easy chairs — note the shot Williams chose for his flier, in which Rugeberg and Brooks are shown only from the waist down, cooking in front of their stove.

Each picture is a facet of their sheer rightness for one another. Perhaps Williams' intentions and his subjects were too good: they invite the use of a warm fuzzy focus. In choosing to show the couple's happiest moments, Williams decreases the reality quotient that's figured into every relationship, hetero or homo. Williams tries to destigmatize his couple through domestication, not confrontation. But in addition to cooking and cleaning, couples of either orientation have been known to kiss, fight, sleep in the same bed, work out, whatever. Maybe a return trip to the Brooks-Rugeberg homestead is in order.

The birthday party shots are saved from being sweeter than cake frosting by the beyond-her-years wisdom on the little girl's face as she stares into the camera while being embraced by her uncles: it's as though she was saying, "If I can accept this, why can't you?" Williams freeze-frames another equally subtle but less accepting expression on the face of a Hy-Vee clerk eyeing the couple eyeing a selection of chicken breasts.

The crux of their relationship, and perhaps the crux of the exhibit, is summarized by two side-by-side shots showing the pair sharing a restaurant booth. The first shot has them beaming big, happy smiles into each other's faces. The second reveals a less distracting compatibility: They face opposite directions and are engaged in different conversations, but their body positions and facial expressions show that they're speaking the same language.

On the whole, it's a compliment to Williams that one wishes this project had been pushed a little harder. It should be interesting to see what he, and his audience, will be ready for next.

Student artists fill annual show with variety of thrilling works

Shayla M. Thiel
Daily Iowan

The 10th annual Student Art Exhibit proved a much grander and more interesting affair than I expected, with more than 63 exhibits awesomely displayed at Old Brick.

Although some of the traditional oils are worthy of mention (i.e., Buddy Plumlee's "State of the Union" with deep, bold hues and a deep, bold statement, and the grotesque serenity of Tilden Bronsen's "Sense of Touch"), the variation and quality of sculpture and utter creativity of the photography exhibits not only added to, but made the exhibit.

Upon entering the gallery, an enormous mass of black-and-white images devoured my attention. The intriguing piece's title pretty much said it all: "Photocopies I Wanna FAX From Video Stills From 23 Video Tapes." Melissa Lockwood's elusive photocopies piqued, not only my interest, but also that of juror Charles Haxhausen of the University of Minnesota, who awarded her piece "Best of Show."

Other photography certainly worthy of mention was LeAnn Erickson's "Monument II," which was hauntingly powerful, and Laurie Hull's shocking "Being Self-Employed" — a spiritually-liberating piece.

The abundance of sculpture somewhat overwhelmed the other media, but proved worthy of the space devoted to it. John Coyne's blatantly frightening sculpture titled "Censorship" was rather obvious, but nonetheless intelligently noteworthy. Joyce Schutter's sculpture "Stories" conjured up deeper emotions and intrigued the imagination. "Stories," a combination of three heads in different stages of the aging process with actual "rooms" within each head, captured the human soul with classic grace.

The annual art exhibit runs through Friday, May 1, at Old Brick, on the corner of Clinton and Market streets.

BANDS

Peg McCarthy

Iowa City's Blue Meanies will get Gabe's Oasis jukin' and jumpin' with shows that will fit into everyone's schedule. (From left: Donnie Rife, Geoff Henderson, Shawn Haigwood and Ben Anderson).

The Blue Meanies' funk-rock invasion

Kimberly Chun
Daily Iowan

Think of the band Blue Meanies; the handle not only conjures up "The Yellow Submarine" and the nostalgic, warm and cuddly feelings of the psychedelic '60s, but satisfies the unspoken requirement that IC bands include the word "blue" in their name.

The Blue Meanies, however, don't want to fade away into a wild blue yonder of samey monikers. The band will be dropping the "blue" after this weekend's multiple shows in Iowa City and Davenport. Meanie drummer/vocalist Donnie Rife sighs: "So many bands in IC, and everywhere, have 'blue' in their name. And we don't want to get sued by Yoko Ono."

So if you see a car going down the street, with four cats going crazy in the back, that's us.

Donnie Rife, The Blue Meanies

tarist) Shawn Haigwood has another who is in heat, and (vocalist/guitarist) Geoff Henderson has yet another cat in heat. We're taking them down to the humane society to get them fixed all at once, so if you see a car going down the street, with four cats going crazy in the back, that's us."

The combo, rounded out with bassist Ben Anderson, continues to drive the club cats crazy at their many shows around town. "This is for the hippies in the house who want to groove," growled Henderson as the Meanies launched into hard funk and slower grooves of "Train Wreck" last Saturday at the Battle of the Bands.

"Freedom — we don't want it. We don't need it. . . NOT!" "Train Wreck" is about all those people who complain about things but never do anything about it," explains Rife. "So it's about almost everybody, including us."

The band has, however, managed to mold themselves into a tight, forceful unit since their inception last August, and establish themselves as a visible part of the Iowa City music scene. The Meanies will have a track on the next Iowa Compilation, a 4-song tape titled Time to be released in late May, and will tour soon with Cedar Rapids' Sludgeplow through Illinois and Florida.

The Blue Meanies will be at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., tonight and Friday. Tonight's rockathon features Cedar Rapids' noise minions Sludgeplow, Davenport's The Halo and Iowa City's own Rush-loving prog-rockers No Pain. The Blue Meanies will take the stage at 6:30 p.m. Friday as a part of the all-day LiverFest — an event that will offer a bevy of other bodacious bands, such as Divin' Duck, Funk Farm, Big Sister, Box 10 and Captain Barney. And those still hell-bent for rock can catch the Meanies — after the RiverFest mainstage show of Material Issue, Wild Kingdom . . . These Days and Los Marauders — at Uncle Roscoe's in Davenport.

READING

Critically acclaimed author Robert Stone reads from his latest best-selling novel "Outerbridge Reach" tonight in Shambaugh Auditorium.

Robert Stone extends 'Reach' to Shambaugh with reading

Robert Fuhrmann
Daily Iowan

Celebrated novelist Robert Stone will read from his latest novel, "Outerbridge Reach," tonight at 8 in Shambaugh Auditorium. The reading is sponsored by the Writers' Workshop and is free and open to the public.

"Outerbridge Reach" revolves around three characters: Owen Browne, a sailboat salesman from Connecticut who finds himself in a big adventure when his millionaire boss who was supposed to make the trip suddenly and mysteriously disappears; Ron Strickland, a documentary filmmaker hired by a playboy-entrepreneur type to make a film about the sailing race; and Anne, Owen's alcoholic wife who is a magazine writer. As the book opens, Owen is in what might be called a midlife crisis. A graduate of Annapolis and a Vietnam veteran, he seems, according to Bruce Weber writing in The New York Times Magazine, "haunted by the values he has taken on as a postwar American. The source of his discomfort has much to do with what Stone sees as a national malaise that dates back to the war, the sense that for Americans, the idea of America is no longer consistent with virtue. And though this notion is not new in Stone's work, this is his first effort to explore it from the point of view of a man who is more sad than cynical about his disillusionment."

Stone is the author of "Hall of Mirrors," which won the Faulkner Award for a first novel in 1967; "Dog Soldiers," which received a National Book Award in 1975; and a "A Flag for Sunrise," which won the Los Angeles Times Book Prize and the PEN/Faulkner Award in 1981.

Newsweek called Stone "the strongest novelist of the post-Vietnam era," and The New York Times Book Review wrote that Stone's work is "a dark descendant of Conrad's and Hemingway's adventure stories."

Stone has pursued his writing in London, Hollywood, and Vietnam as well as in New York. He has been on the faculty of several universities including Princeton, Harvard, Stanford and the University of California.

MOVIE REVIEW

Not a copycat 'Wolves': 'Thunderheart'

Tasha Robinson
Daily Iowan

If anything is inevitable in Hollywood, it's that success breeds copycats. A movie that makes money and wins awards is bound to be followed by a half-dozen cheaper films on a similar subject. Screenplays that have been circulated for years suddenly get picked up; films that have been sitting in the can waiting for publicity money are pulled out. Generally the spate of follow-ups does horribly, and by the time they disappear from the screen, a new fad is launching new hopeful imitations.

"Thunderheart" is already being billed as the next "Dances With Wolves." The comparison is inevitable, but is somewhat unfair; "Thunderheart," a brutal and complex film, deserves better. Michael Apted, director of "Coal Miner's Daughter," "Gorillas in the Mist," and the critically acclaimed "35 Up" documentary series, deals unabashedly with the cruelty of white men toward American Indians — both in the past and the present — with this dark drama.

It begins when FBI operative Ray LeVoi (Val Kilmer of "The Doors," "Real Genius," and "Top Gun") is selected to deal with a murder and an uprising on a South Dakota Indian reservation. Another crack agent, "Kooch" (Sam Shepard of "Steel Magnolias" and "The Right Stuff") has had no luck defusing the situation, which centers around the conflict between ARM, a traditionalist/radical terrorist Indian group, and the local vigilante modernists who want no part of it. ARM (Aboriginal Rights Movement, a thinly-veiled allegory for NAM, the Native American Movement) has nearly been wiped out, but one of its remaining leaders is suspected of the murder. The situation is volatile, and Kilmer is shoved into it as a sop to the Indians because his father, who died when he was a child, was half-Sioux.

Despite his obvious contempt for both his father and the occupants of the reservation, he passes himself off as "the Indian FBI agent," and trades on his tentative blood ties to get to the bottom of the mystery. Kooch is only nominally interested in anything that doesn't directly relate to bringing in his own suspect, but Kilmer rapidly gains access to information that the taciturn locals won't tell white men.

The casual cruelty, even viciousness, displayed by nearly all the characters in the movie — people who, regardless of which side they're on, know they're in the right and don't feel a need to answer to anybody — is chillingly realistic. The plot unwinds at a fast clip, becoming deeper — and more confusing — by the moment. Kilmer tries to deal with the discrepancies between what he considers reality and the things happening around him. "I flew in here from a place called the 20th century," he yells at local policeman Walter Crow Horse (Graham Greene, one of the "Dances With Wolves" stars). But his blood has opened him up to more than the right to speak to the reservation inhabitants.

"Thunderheart" is at times difficult to follow. The ending, while suitably triumphant, leaves a lot of connections hazy, making it difficult to know who knew what and what can actually be done about the final situation. But the top-notch acting and the often-impressive cinematography (especially the opening silhouettes and the beautifully harsh Dakota Hills vistas) round out the complexity of the plot, producing a stark, painful image of reservation life and of the distinct, hateful cruelty inherent in the history of the treatment of American Indians.

It may or may not be better than "Dances With Wolves"; feel free to make the call for yourself. But it certainly deserves to be judged on its own unique merits.

Thousands in AIDS aw

Thousands of people participated in a walk for AIDS awareness Saturday.

Iowans from across the state joined together for a non-political walk to raise awareness of the problem of AIDS. The walk will begin at the Statehouse.

The American Red Cross is currently estimating that there are 100,000 HIV-infected people in Iowa. Mark Beinhorn, executive director of Iowa AIDS Walk, said that the number of AIDS cases is rising.

CHICAGO — A crowd of 100,000 people gathered for a field trip to O'Hare Airport on Thursday. The 10-year-old grounds were dedicated to children and said.

The children of two school bus accidents at terminals at night jumped the side of the road where they were gathered. "We had a lot of people on the sidewalk, and the police were supervising. It was pure chaos."
