Lawler voted new Faculty Senate president

The UI Faculty Senate presidency passed from Jack Fix, physics and astronomy professor, to sociology Professor Edward Lawler Tuesday at the last senate meeting of the semester.

"I would like to see us make some special effort to promote the importance and centrality of the research and graduate education of our university mission without taking away anything from the undergraduate component," Lawler said.

"What I have in mind is that we think about how the teacher-scholar model (teaching, organizing and creating new knowledge) is important for undergraduate education," he said.

The new Faculty Senate vice president is Jerald Schnoor, civil engineering professor.

Thousands to participate in AIDS awareness walk

Thousands of people will take part in a walk to promote awareness of AIDS in Des Moines on Saturday.

Iowans from across the state will join together in the non-partisan, non-political event effort to address the problem of AIDS in Iowa. The walk will begin on the steps of the Statehouse.

The American Red Cross conservatively estimates that 2,500 Iowans are HIV-infected.

Mark Beinhoff, founder of the Iowa AIDS Walk, said the number of AIDS cases in Iowa is twice what it was last year.

Crowd of children struck by car at O'Hare

CHICAGO (AP) — A car plowed into a crowd of third-graders on a field trip to O'Hare International Airport on Thursday, killing a 10-year-old girl and injuring 88 children and adults, authorities said.

The children had just gotten off two school buses between airport terminals at midday when the car jumped the sidewalk where they were gathered, witnesses said.

"We had children hurt all over the sidewalk," said Fire Department Supervisor David Lozeau. "It was pure chaos."

Islamic government drives rivals from Kabul

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The new Islamic government consolidated its command over mujahedeen factions Thursday, trying to end looting and restore order in Kabul. It drove its rivals from the city and prepared to mop up.

The rival forces, under fundamentalist leader Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, still held pockets around the capital. But they were far outnumbered by various mujahedeen groups loyal to the new government.

IC protesters angered by acquittal

Jon Yates and Chris Pothoven
Daily Iowan

Over 200 people gathered on the Pentacrest Thursday afternoon to protest racism and police brutality in the wake of Wednesday night's acquittal of four Los Angeles, Calif., policemen captured on videotape using excessive force on motorist Rodney King.

Several speakers called for violence, all expressed outrage at the verdict. Some forecast a long, hot summer of protests and rebellion.

"I'm ready to hit somebody," said Anthony Molden, a UI freshman from Los Angeles. "I'm not going to, though. I'm safe in Iowa City. I'm a college student. But I grew up in L.A. What they did yesterday, that was like a last gasp of air. It's going to be a long, hot summer."

Molden said the verdict was an open admission of racism in society.

"It's like they're saying, 'we're screwing you over, and we're doing it outright now. We're not going to lie any more. We're not even going to hide it,'" he said.

Dennis Thomas, a student at Kirkwood Community College in Iowa City, told the crowd that it was time to change their mindset.

"We have lived on the model of Martin Luther King for far too long," he said. "I am now living under Malcolm X, 'By any means necessary.'"

Speaker Daniel Clayvon said blacks were not going to accept racism and violence and sacrifice their self-respect simply to reach a peaceful solution.

"I treat you as a human being, I want to be treated in the same way," he said. "But I have to respect myself too, respect my color. Because if I don't, who will?"

Several speakers supported Clayvon with personal accounts of police brutality.

"Unless you've been harassed by a cop like I have, you really have no idea," Molden said. "There's too much rage to hold back."

Larger problems of human rights in the society are responsible for the police actions and the not-quite verdict, many speakers said.

"People have no rights any more," said Mary Gravitt, a UI graduate student. "It's not a matter of race, it's a matter of human rights."

"My race is fucked up from this society. It's so fucked up we can't walk down the street and look at each other without feeling a whole range of emotions from the way we grew up," Molden said.

Brian Baron, who distributed fliers around campus Wednesday night to promote the last-minute protest, said he was pleased, but not surprised by the turnout.

"I saw the verdict at 6 p.m. last

Businesses burn near Normandie Avenue in South Central Los Angeles, Calif., Wednesday after rioters set fire to buildings in reaction to the Rodney King assault trial verdict.

21 dead as violence escalates in L.A.

LOS ANGELES — Riots, arson and looting raged in the Los Angeles area Thursday and the death toll rose to 21 as National Guard troops moved into neighborhoods torn by outrage over the Rodney King verdict.

Gunfire erupted after two dozen Guard soldiers arrived at a video arcade threatened by looters. The machine-gun-toting soldiers did not return fire.

Bands of people roamed the streets after a dusk-to-dawn curfew took effect. Police said there were no immediate arrests.

About 450 people had been injured and 300 arrested in the outburst of destruction that terrorized vast parts of the city for a second day, from downtown to the suburban San Fernando Valley.

At nightfall Thursday, violence had spread into San Bernardino, 60 miles to the east, where a gun battle between a security guard and a motorist that police said was riot-related left one dead. Santa Monica, to the west, closed its beaches, and vandals descended upon historic Hollywood Boulevard, setting fire to at least one business.

As many as 40 fires were burning as a citywide dusk-to-dawn curfew took effect. At least six new major blazes ringed downtown, enveloping the city's skyscrapers in thick smoke.

Arizona Gov. Fife Symington said California Gov. Pete Wilson had asked him for National Guard equipment and told him: "It's out of control." Wilson was flying to Los Angeles from the capital, Sacramento.

Much of the city shut down. Bus service was halted, professional sporting events were postponed, thousands of businesses and schools were closed, and some flights were rerouted around columns of smoke.

Shoppers stocked up on batteries and candles, fearing power outages as night approached.

BUDGET WOES

UI faces $14.2 million cut, may need to scrap projects

Heather Pitzel and Ann Riley
Daily Iowan

University administrators are calling the proposed $14.2 million cut to the UI budget "draconian," and Iowa state Sen. Richard Varn, D-Solon, has been inundated with phone calls from students asking for another solution.

"It does not look good right now. This cut would be devastating for us, on top of the eight cuts we have already had this year," UI President Hunter Rawlings said. "We don't know how to cope with reductions of this magnitude."

The Iowa Senate Democrats proposed a plan Wednesday to cut over $30 million from the three state universities as part of a massive statewide spending cut to battle Iowa's budget crunch.

Varn said the Senate's proposed cuts Wednesday helped the passage of a 1 cent sales tax increase in the House Thursday.

"Our actions helped still some opposition to the tax," Varn said, adding that he had been a proponent of the increased sales tax all along.

Varn said that although there are currently not enough senators who say they would vote for the tax, he thinks there is a 50-50 chance it will be passed and the higher education budget will be left alone.

Along with the cut in funding, the proposed cuts also include elimi-

DES MOINES — The House narrowly voted a $270 million increase in the state's sales tax in an effort to wipe out projected budget deficits.

"Tax and spend, it's in their blood," said Richard Vohs, a spokesman for Gov. Terry Branstad. "They haven't even come close to addressing the fundamental problems."

The plan would increase Iowa's 4 percent sales tax to 5 percent, beginning June 1.

"I think the people of Iowa want a solution to our budget problems," said House Speaker Bob Arnold, D-Davenport. "This is the first major step to closing down the session."

To ease worries from liberals that the tax would hit hardest at the poor, the measure earmarks nearly $39 million to lower income taxes for those at the bottom end.

"It is an acknowledgement of the size of the budget problem we face," said Rep. John Groninga, D-Mason City, main backer. "It is an acknowledgement of who is impacted by the sales tax."

The House approved the bill on a 52-46 vote Thursday, sending it to the Senate and an uncertain future. Senators have insisted they want to wipe out the state's budget problems by making deep spending cuts instead of raising taxes.

Senate Democrats gathered in a private meeting Thursday night to assess their next step.

"We're looking at it; we're working on it," said Senate President Michael Gronstal.

The House vote, however, was a surprise and adds a new dimension to the Statehouse budget debate. It was largely on party lines with

FIRE

Downtown Oxford gutted by blaze

Firefighters from 15 area departments assisted.

John P. Waterhouse

The Oxford Fire Department continued Thursday afternoon to extinguish the smoldering remains of three downtown buildings that were consumed in an early morning fire.

As curious Oxford, Iowa, residents looked on, firefighters from Tiffin assisted the Oxford Fire Department in controlling the fire, which broke out shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday in the Oxford Tap.

Three Oxford firefighters, Larry Jiras, Randy Campbell and Larry Skripsky suffered injuries from the fire. They were treated at the UI Hospitals and Clinics and released.

The Oxford Tap, formerly known as Bud's Tap, George L. Gay Funeral Home Oxford Chapel, the Masonic Lodge Kitchen and a storage building were destroyed by the fire.

Jeff Easley, owner of New World Woodwork, said the fire destroyed much of his equipment and lumber that was stored in a room adjacent to his woodworking business.

Although most of his finished products were stored at home, Easley said, brooms and carts, a $1,200 air compressor, ebony and "exotic woods" worth over $600, tools and a phone system that he kept in the storage room "were completely destroyed."

When Easley and his wife, Janeen, received a call shortly before 3 a.m., "we raced to the store and tried to haul as much as we could out into the street."

He said they managed to drag some machinery and a box full of hand tools out, "before the fire department told us to stay away."

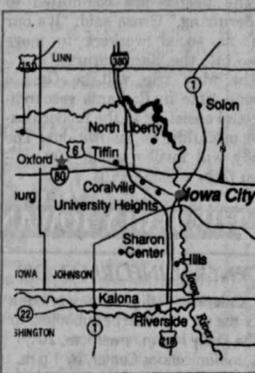

Once the fire engulfed the downtown area, a team of 99 firefighters from at least 15 fire departments were called in to help the volunteer firefighters from Oxford in fighting the blaze that destroyed three buildings on Augusta Avenue.

Holly Stopko, 19, who lives across the street from New World Woodwork, arrived on the scene with a friend minutes after the fire broke out.

For nearly 45 minutes after the fire started, Stopko said she and her friend watched the flames lick from the windows of the George L. Gay Funeral Home.

"Suddenly, we heard this loud explosion ... and before I could cover my face, shattered glass and bits of concrete were thrown all around us," she said.

"The strangest thing I saw," said Stopko, "was when my friend and I were standing across the street from the burning buildings and the explosion caused the funeral home doors to fly open."

As the flames licked out from the funeral home, she said, "I immediately thought to myself, 'If this isn't hell, what is?'"

Oxford Fire Chief Mort Vermaace said the cause of the fire has not yet been determined.

FARMERS' MARKET

Vendors offer fresh produce, baked goods

Molly Spann
Daily Iowan

The 20th season of the annual Iowa City Farmers' Market will begin Saturday, this time in a new location.

Farmers from Iowa City, Muscatine, Riverside, Iowa, and other surrounding areas will gather in the parking lot off Linn Street and adjacent to the Holiday Inn in downtown Iowa City to sell items they have produced.

According to Marilyn Kriz, the Farmers' Market supervisor from the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department, the market has moved to the new location due to construction in the area under the College Street bridge.

The Farmer's Market will remain open through Oct. 31, running on Wednesdays from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 7:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Kriz said between 20 and 25 vendors will be at the market the entire season. More vendors will sell their wares, but not for the whole season. Last year, around 100 vendors sold items at the market over the four-month period. "We have had some of our vendors for a long time," Kriz said. "They like it, so they continue to come here."

Kriz said the busiest time for the Farmers' Market is when sweet corn and tomatoes are sold. She said plants are also popular items during spring.

The prices of produce sold at the market are comparable to produce sold in supermarkets, according to Kriz, but the quality may be better. "These are picked fresh, while in a grocery store the items may have been sitting out for a while," she said.

In addition, items such as crafts, spices, and baked goods will be sold by the vendors.

"The items are being sold by the people who have produced them. If people have any questions about the items, they can ask the producers directly," Kriz said. "I think that's pretty nice."

Vendors must reserve a stall with the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department in order to sell items at the Farmer's Market.

MARINE CORPS

Hopefuls fly high in recruiting endeavor

Jon Yates
Daily Iowan

In a little yellow envelope under the seat of the twin-engine Seneca Piper plane, there was a folded white baggie, just in case.

The envelope read: "Motion Sickness Bag - For use during moments of stomach upset - If an upset stomach is anticipated, remove bag from this container and keep ready for use. Do not be embarrassed by this precaution, as even veteran travelers are subject to occasional motion sickness."

The military leaves nothing to chance.

"After you get a couple of people throwing up on you back here, you kind of appreciate those things," Capt. Sam Strotman told me as I looked at the envelope.

As we swooped down over the UI campus, the heat from the ground made the ride turbulent, and the heat from the sun made me ill. I thought about reaching for the bag. Pride kept my hands at my sides.

"That's when people get sick," Strotman explained, "when it gets hot."

The plane ride was part of a Marine recruitment drive, technically called the Marine Corps Flight Orientation Program. In military language, that's McFOP.

"As with anything in the military, we like to have a good acronym for it or we wouldn't know what to do," Strotman said.

What they do is take prospective officers up in the plane to show them what it's like to fly.

"We're not trying to get them to join the Marine Corps, we're trying to get them to go to Officer Training School," Strotman said as we climbed to 8,500 feet. "After OTS you can decide not to take your commission."

The rides are offered twice a year, once in the spring and once in the fall. The rides generally attract about 40 people and require six or seven trips a day.

As we climbed above the haze, Maj. Kim Harders, our pilot for the day, turned the controls over to Patrick Boone, a UI sophomore, who took the ride as a prospective recruit.

"The last major liked to get up and do some power stalls," Strotman said, watching Boone take over the controls. "Maj. Harders is pretty good about it."

As Boone piloted, Harders quizzed him about his interest in the corps. "A lot of things people hear about the Marines are inaccurate," Harders said. "They come out and talk to us and find out we're just your basic run-of-the-mill knuckleheads. We're just here serving our country."

Of the those who show up for the flights, the Marines will interview only about three or four. Of that number, usually only one will go through with the training.

"The program gives kids a chance to fly, to see if they like being up in an airplane," Strotman said. Then, looking at the expression on my face added, "Of course, it's not good when you make people sick."

None of the five of us on the ride got sick. As we pulled in for the landing back at the Iowa City Municipal Airport, Boone offered his own views on the ride.

"Man, it was a lot of fun," he said. "I'm ready for a Stealth bomber." I mulled the idea over in my head. Maybe a bigger envelope would be in order for that one.

ORPHANAGES

UI team to help Romanian children

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

UI social work Professor Victor Groze said it was "only natural" for him to take his interest in child advocacy to Romania.

His lifelong interest in social work with children comes from growing up with an adopted brother and a mother who spent four years in an orphanage. As for the Romanian part, his father's parents were Romanian.

Groze and a six-member team of UI graduate and professional students will be in Romania for three weeks in May to research the quality of life for institutionalized Romanian orphans and make recommendations on how to improve their situation.

"The people are committed to modernizing," Groze said. "It's our role as social workers to move them into the 20th century."

The May trip will be Groze's second time in Romania researching and assisting in the modernization of children's institutions. The study will involve about 100 children from ages 6 to 10.

"We want to see what range of abilities in daily living they're capable of," Groze said. "Then we can start to improve the quality of life."

The group will study the institutionalized children using a test that measures such wide-ranging categories as the ability to use a toilet without assistance and managing their own money.

Groze said he expects to find the children below normal height and weight and, based on the work from his first trip, lagging behind in language development and socialization.

"There are 10-year-olds just now learning to walk," he said. "It's a horrendous system by our terms."

Even if the children entered the institutional system "normal," Groze said years of neglect make developmental problems inescapable. The United States cannot criticize, he said.

"We in the United States have not always had the best record," he said. "We had animal rights before children's."

Groze said it is important to understand the effects of institutionalization on children. This is especially true, he said, considering the U.S. movement to re-establish orphanages and expand institutions because of the increasing number of babies exposed to drug addiction and HIV.

Groze said even the Romanian government is unsure how many children are institutionalized today. There are estimates of 1,000 institutions in the country, each with 100 to 150 children.

The institutionalized children were part of an attempt by the Ceausescu regime to increase the labor force in Romania by outlawing abortion, making birth control difficult to find and taxing people for not having children, Groze said.

Families who already had children but could not afford to have more and families whose children were born with defects and were unable to care for them would turn the children over to orphanages or just leave them at the hospital after birth.

"What was left to them with no access to abortions or birth control?" Groze asked.

At age 3, children in orphanages were either determined to be "trainable," in which case they were tracked for trade school, or "untrainable," and then institutionalized.

The lack of funds and resources affects the institutions as well as the families, Groze said, so any recommendations that the team makes must be cost free, such as putting children of like disabilities together.

Police investigating suicide case

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

Coralville police have identified a 17-year-old youth who took his life Wednesday on the lawn of a Coralville apartment complex.

The body of James Stuart McKenzie, of Ann Arbor, Mich., was found just west of Lakewood Hills apartments, 209 Holiday Road, Coralville, at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday.

As of Thursday afternoon, the sergeant at the Ann Arbor Police Department said that they had not yet been notified about the incident.

McKenzie is believed to have been traveling through the Coralville area on I-80 when it was reported that he had left a gas station without paying for fuel.

The Coralville police were dispatched at 8:40 p.m. Tuesday to investigate the reported theft in the 2000 block of Second Street. While en route, an officer saw a pickup truck that matched the description of the reported vehicle.

The police officer tried to stop the truck as it headed north on First Avenue. McKenzie reportedly never exceeded 45 miles per hour, but ran several red lights and ignored the officer's siren.

The pickup jumped the curb at Holiday Road and First Avenue, ending up in a ravine near the Windmill Pointe retirement complex. Officers and witnesses saw a white male run from the pickup, carrying what was thought to be a handgun.

Police searched the area for several hours but did not find the suspect.

Officers found numerous handguns, some of them loaded, in the pickup truck. The vehicle was from Michigan, but was not reported stolen. Police could not locate the registered owner in Michigan.

At about 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Coralville police received a call from a residence near Lakewood Hills, reporting a person and a gun on the ground.

The man was found dead at the scene. He had shot himself with one of two loaded guns he had with him, police said. Police estimated the time of death to be about 10:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Steinbeck novel kept on curriculum

Parents and teachers vow to communicate better in the future, and to decide the issue on a case-by-case basis.

Anne Johnston
Daily Iowan

The first chapter of John Steinbeck's classic novel, "Of Mice and Men," will continue to be included in Iowa City's seventh-grade curriculum, the district's Reconsideration Committee decided at a well-attended public meeting Thursday afternoon.

The eight-member committee voted unanimously to recommend to Superintendent Barb Grohe that the school district not limit use of the passage in question, but should remain sensitive to the concerns of parents and students regarding material they consider to be offensive.

The meeting was held due to a "request for reconsideration" regarding the book filed by parent Arlene Gibbon, whose daughter was presented with the material in a seventh-grade reading class at Northwest Junior High earlier this spring. Gibbon said that although she was not seeking to have "Of Mice and Men" removed from shelves, she was concerned about its appropriateness for the age level, and the specific course in which it was included.

Gibbon's concern stemmed from language used in the book by the character of George, a migrant worker who labors at ranches in southern California with his mentally handicapped companion, Lennie.

"I hope that when my daughter gets done with school, she will be able to express herself well and communicate with others and preserve her self-respect and not talk like a migrant worker," she said.

Gibbon said that she felt her daughter had been presented the material without proper warning, and had felt as though she had no choice but to remain in the classroom as it was read.

"I feel that my daughter was subjected to psychological and emotional abuse in this class based on her beliefs," Gibbon said.

Marjorie Hawtrey, the teacher of the reading class in which the chapter from "Of Mice and Men" was read, said that she chose to include it as part of a unit called "Conflict," and felt that reading the material aloud was important to the students' learning experience.

"I did not think that language spoken by one character in one chapter of a book was something that would psychologically harm my students," Hawtrey said. "I do not thoughtlessly put my curriculum together."

Committee member Bill Lyons, the language arts coordinator and a teacher at South East Junior High, agreed with Hawtrey.

"I am convinced that merely hearing someone talk in a way that one does not prefer is not a dangerous thing," Lyons said.

Lyons later made the motion to not limit use of the material, but to maintain a heightened awareness when dealing with concerns similar to Gibbon's that may arise in the future.

Hawtrey, who sends home lists of upcoming reading material with her students, said that if she is made aware of a student's special needs in advance, she is more than willing to accommodate that student.

UI MAINTENANCE

Repair project may end roof leaks

Estela Villanueva
Daily Iowan

Several current roof repair projects on campus may eliminate the visions of buckets, plastic tarps and rain-soaked ceiling tiles as the result of leaking roofs. This spring's rains haven't caused any major problems, but some leaking is inevitable, said Jim Howard, UI associate director of building operations and maintenance.

Roof repair projects have been funded throughout the year from a $2,798,050 state appropriation the UI received in June for deferred maintenance projects.

"The re-roofings are part of long-standing building renewal projects that have never been done," Howard said. "We have really gotten a lot accomplished as far as replacing roofs that should have been replaced years before."

One of the biggest repair projects involves the roof of the UI Main Library. Last fall, the library's roof was replaced using single-ply roof-

"We have really gotten a lot accomplished."

Jim Howard, UI maintenance of the roof will be completed by the end of the year.

Other roof repairs will be done over the summer, Howard said, to be completed by the end of the year. Buildings in the midst of repairs include Phillips Hall, the Hardin Library for the Health Sciences, the Bowen Science Building, the Dental Science Building and the Communication Studies Building.

"We'll probably be in the best shape we've been in the past 20 years in terms of roofs when we finish this group of re-roofing," Howard said.

Three roofing projects were completed last fall with the deferred maintenance funds. One was the roof over room 225 in the Chemistry-Botany building, which caused extensive flooding last summer. The roof of the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center and over the lecture rooms in Van Allen Hall were also replaced. The roof over Van Allen will be replaced next summer.

RIOTS

Police spokeswoman Sharon Michaelson said 19 deaths had been confirmed in Los Angeles from the rioting. That was in addition to the death in San Bernardino.

Most of the rioters were black, but whites, Asians and Hispanics took part in some of the violence. The dead included eight blacks and one white, all male, the coroner's office said. The ages and gender of the other victims were not immediately available.

Aronists torched hundreds of buildings — three fire calls a minute came in three hours early Thursday. In 18 hours ending at 6 p.m., firefighters responded to 1,281 structure fires. Officials said they were too busy to compile damage estimates.

Police arrested six youths in suburban Compton and said they may have been part of a youth gang that was trying to torch 10 buildings an hour. "To them, it's a free-for-all," said California Highway Patrol Lt. Bud Shields.

Two firefighters were wounded by gunfire.

Near downtown, a security guard was fatally shot in a gun battle with looters outside a store.

More than 100 Korean-owned stores were burned, looted or robbed. Racial tensions between blacks and Koreans have seethed for several years.

BUDGET

nating the recently awarded UI driving simulator project, the biocatalysis program and the tumor registry.

"The plan eliminates funding for all new projects. They cut everything the regents proposed," Rawlings said.

The president said he had been in contact with UI Director of State Relations Ted Yanecek, who spent Thursday in Des Moines lobbying at the Statehouse.

"He said the situation is pretty fluid right now. It's not sounding too good," Rawlings said.

UI Faculty Senate President Edward Lawler said he feels the proposed cuts are outrageous and intolerable, and would be felt by every student on campus if implemented.

"The faculty are extremely upset by this proposal," Lawler said. "Faculty feel they've worked very hard with the administration, the legislators and the Strategic Planning process to deal with difficult budget circumstances. But we can't use the Strategic Planning process to deal with this kind of budget reduction."

Lawler said he didn't think the UI could recover from this proposed cut for a decade or more.

night and I thought it was obscene," he said. "It's great that $3 worth of posters can get all these people. I think this is the way democracy is supposed to work."

Mike Ascroft, a UI junior who helped Baron organize the event, said the rally is just a small part of a larger sentiment that is felt across the entire United States.

"I figure there's little gatherings going on like this all over the place," Ascroft said. "This is a good resonator, it's just a spark."

William Harris, an assistant professor in the UI African-American World Studies Program, said he was not surprised by the verdict, and saw the rally as a good way for people to vent their anger over the situation.

Harris said that although the rally was in response to the King verdict, racism and police brutality occur daily.

"It's an ongoing process," he said. "You can pick up a newspaper any day and see a stimulus for a reaction like this."

Harris agreed that there could be more protests this summer, but said that the prospect for further violence such as the riots that occurred in Los Angeles Wednesday night will hinge on several factors.

"We'll have to wait and see," he said. "Any incident in an urban area in the next week could spark a reaction."

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Residents ask about expenses, taxes

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

Although about 40 people attended a public hearing to discuss the proposed Johnson County budget Thursday night, only four stood with questions for the supervisors. Their main concerns focused on county expenditures and the 17 percent increase in net property taxes.

County Auditor Tom Slockett presented a summary budget for fiscal year 1993, including the sources of county income, the services that are provided for by that income and a review of the impact on property taxes.

According to Slockett, property taxes will make up almost 45 percent of the new total budget, compared to 19.5 percent from federal, state and local governments, and 13 percent from interest, charges, licenses and permits.

The increase in property taxes, Slockett said, is a direct result of the 8.5 percent cut in income from federal, state and local governments.

Ann Bovbjerg, an Iowa City resident, asked the supervisors what effect inflation has had on the new budget.

"I think it would be helpful for taxpayers to know why they paid $700 last year and $750 this year," she said. "I think it would help with the emotions."

Supervisor Dick Myers replied that the county has not kept up with inflation.

Also questioned was the portion of the budget that goes for secondary roads, which includes maintenance and construction. Walter Plotz, who is running for county supervisor, asked why funds in this area were not spent in fiscal year 1992.

"It is not doing the taxpayer any good to have it sitting there," he said. "If you have the money there, spend it."

SALES TAX

only Democrats favoring the increase. Rep. Phil Brammer, D-Cedar Rapids, joined all 45 Republicans in opposing the increase.

There was virtually no debate on the measure, which was tacked onto another relatively minor bill.

The move is a high-stakes political bet by majority Democrats that voters are willing to pay higher taxes if lawmakers will solve nagging state budget deficits.

Branstad has said he will consider a tax increase but not until lawmakers approve a series of spending reforms. Aides on Thursday labeled the sales tax increase premature.

"We need to see some spending reforms first," said David Roederer, Branstad's chief of staff.

The bill would increase the 4 percent sales tax by 1 percent and cut income taxes for the poor.

It would increase the threshold below which low-income Iowans don't pay any income taxes. That's currently $5,000 for single filers and $7,500 for others.

Those levels would increase to $9,000 for single filers and $13,500 for others. Groninga said about 152,000 taxpayers — roughly 10 percent of the total — would be exempted from state income tax under that provision, at a cost of roughly $25 million.

"That is a very significant percentage of all filers," said Groninga.

In addition, the measure would earmark more than $13 million to add new tax credits for low-income renters and homeowners.

The increase in the sales tax would bring in roughly $273 million a year for the budget year which begins July 1, but the measure approved Thursday would put the higher tax on the books June 1. That brings in an extra $22 million for the current budget year.

In the Senate, lawmakers have been insisting they want to approve a 6.5 percent spending cut instead of higher taxes. A count last week of support for a sales tax increase in the 50-member Senate found only 17 willing to vote for it.

600 geologists to convene in IC for annual meeting

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

An estimated 600 geologists and educators representing 11 countries and 27 states are in Iowa City this week for the 26th annual meeting of the Geological Society of America-North Central section.

Hosted by the Iowa Department of Natural Resources' Geological Survey bureau and the UI Department of Geology, the event features addresses from a range of faculty members from West High School in Iowa City to Tokyo, Japan.

The meeting also features field trips to examine unique features of Iowa's geology and the work of 378 contributing authors from 130 institutions, including schools, universities, corporations, state and federal surveys, the Geological Survey of Canada and the Paleontological Institute in St. Petersburg, Russia.

According to UI geology Professor Holmes Semken, the field trips are beneficial to visiting geologists because they can actually go to a site and say, "This is what we've got and then we interpret it." It leaves room to argue because you can actually point to something and show your reasoning.

One of the field trips that took place Wednesday was to southeast Iowa to look at the geology of archaeological sites and the related location of the sites with respect to geology, Semken said.

Another trip involved a number of "strange lumps that look like fossil reefs that formed 300 million years ago," Semken said.

Semken said these trips are very important for geologists.

"Our story is in the rocks. Geologists deal with the outdoors rather than the books," he said.

Semken said the meeting was of special interest to Iowans because there are a fair number of sessions on ground water quality, water pollution and landforms.

Thursday afternoon Professor William Hammer of Augustana College in Illinois spoke at the Union on the find of a dinosaur skull discovered with other fossilized remains during a 1990-1991 expedition to Mt. Kirkpatrick, near the South Pole. The 80-pound skull will be on display at Trowbridge Hall.

From the Iowa DNR, geologist Brenda Nations will discuss pesticide presence in rainfall and its migration into surface water and ground water today at 8:20 a.m. in the Big Ten Room of the Union.

Another DNR geologist, Deborah Quade, will also detail water quality monitoring in 17 private wells in northern Iowa.

RODNEY KING ASSAULT TRIAL

Nationwide protests erupt after acquittal of officers

Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press

Protesters rallied nationwide Thursday to denounce the verdict in the Rodney King beating case, and blacks attacked whites in Atlanta. Black leaders demanded federal civil rights charges against the white Los Angeles officers who beat the black motorist.

"The anger is not only in Los Angeles. The anger is all over this nation," Rep. Floyd Flake of New York said at a news conference by black lawmakers at the U.S. Capitol. "When Rodney King was on the ground getting beat, we were all on the ground getting beat."

Demonstrations were held in Atlanta, Ga., Minneapolis, Minn., Denver, Colo., San Jose, Calif., Cleveland, Ohio, Baton Rouge, La., Kansas City, Mo., Topeka, Kan., Amherst, Mass., and Hartford, Conn., among other places.

Most of the demonstrations elsewhere were peaceful, in contrast to the scene in Los Angeles, where at least nine people died in rioting that followed the verdict.

But in Atlanta, young blacks left a peaceful demonstration at City Hall and attacked whites at a downtown subway station. Windows were smashed and passersby were beaten.

About 15 blacks beat a white newspaper photographer and a white woman who had driven past in her car. Another white woman was beaten and kicked on the steps of a state office building. About 100 young black protesters hurled rocks at buildings and cars. "All around here, storefronts have been bashed in. They're beating up white people. It's a very tense situation," said Love Skyers, a shopkeeper at the Five Points Flea Market.

Police in riot gear were called to the central transit station and the Capitol, where the violence started. The marchers, from several black colleges in Atlanta, had held a peaceful rally at Clark-Atlanta University before marching to the Capitol.

In San Jose, protesters smashed shop windows during an early morning march through downtown.

Two students were arrested for fighting during a demonstration at a high school in Odenton, Md., where about 75 students protested by refusing to go to class.

And in Madison, Wis., someone shattered the windshields of 34 police squad cars parked at a garage. A note at the scene said "Justice for King" and "All pigs must die."

Few court decisions have prompted such nationwide outpourings. Those denouncing Wednesday's verdict included black leaders, police chiefs, civil libertarians and ordinary citizens, all of whom said that what they saw on video did not square with the jury's decision to exonerate the white officers.

"This reminds me of the Dred Scott decision of 1857, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that black people have no rights that white people are bound to respect," said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Atlanta. "It represents permission to permit genocide against black males."

BUSH'S REACTION

President criticizes riots, promises further inquiry

James H. Rubin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush condemned "murder and destruction" by Los Angeles, Calif., rioters on Thursday but at the same time said the Justice Department would intensify its investigation of police conduct in the taped-beating case that ignited the violence.

Bush met at the White House with Attorney General William Barr, who raised the possibility that four officers acquitted of brutality charges in state court could face federal charges if his investigation shows they violated the civil rights of the motorist they beat.

The president also appealed for an end to the street violence that followed the acquittals on Wednesday and continued Thursday.

"The murder and destruction on the streets of Los Angeles must be stopped," Bush said. "Lootings, beatings and random violence... must be condemned."

Barr said the federal government will move "as expeditiously as possible" to determine whether there are grounds to charge the four white policemen with violating the civil rights of Rodney King, who is black.

Barr sent Associate Attorney General Wayne Budd, a black former U.S. attorney in Boston, Mass., to Los Angeles to meet with officials there. The attorney general said investigators will try to determine "whether there was intentional infliction of excessive force" against King by the officers who had stopped him for speeding.

"In the American conscience there is no room for bigotry and racism," Bush said in a brief statement at the White House.

Arson and looting erupted again Thursday in Los Angeles after nine people were killed overnight.

Neither Barr nor Bush would characterize the acquittal verdict by the California jury in the case. However, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush felt "the same frustration everyone else does. He saw the videotape and it's hard to compare that to the verdict and not wonder what happened."

When the videotaped beating of King was made public last year, Bush said, "What we're going to do is look into violations of the law and prosecute any people that are violating the federal law and speak out against police brutality, because what I saw made me sick."

He used similar terminology Thursday, but this time referring to the rioting: "It was outrageous what happened, and we were all sickened by what we saw."

He made that comment in Columbus, Ohio, where he flew after his White House remarks.

In Columbus, he also said the nation must condemn racism and violence alike.

"I make no apology for the rule of law or the requirement to live by it," he said. "And yes, in some places in America, there is regrettably a cycle of poverty and despair. But if the system perpetuates this cycle, then we've got to change the system. We simply cannot condone violence as a way of changing the system."

The federal civil rights investigation was put on hold pending the outcome of the state trial of the police officers.

Barr said federal investigators will review the trial transcript and, without elaborating, said there "may be some additional evidence" for them to study.

Justice Department officials made it clear that the investigation was not limited to the four officers. It will also include an examination of the conduct of other officers at the scene of King's beating.

Federal civil rights laws carry a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison for convicted violators.

FBI Director William Sessions joined Barr at a Justice Department news conference in which the attorney general said that since October 1988 his agency has filed charges against 123 law enforcement officers for police brutality, and won convictions against 75 percent of them.

In Congress, six black lawmakers urged a vigorous federal probe.

Some said the violence could spread. "The anger is not only in Los Angeles," said Rep. Floyd Flake, D-N.Y. "The anger is all over this nation."

Civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, prior to a meeting with Barr, said the verdict shows "there has been a breakdown in the justice system in the country. It is not working for black males in the country."

Jackson also said Bush, by "his kinship with Daryl Gates throughout all of this, shows his disregard for justice and fairness."

LAPD BEATING

Simply unbelievable

A year ago this country was stunned watching the videotape of Rodney King, a black motorist on parole for second-degree robbery, being physically abused by officers of the Los Angeles Police Department. Wednesday it was stunned once again by injustice.

The trial of the four officers had what many believed to be a foregone verdict. The officers had to be convicted. What could the defense even argue against the overwhelming proof of the videotape? Apparently, considering the officers' acquittal, quite a bit. The outrage is understandable because, despite all the reasons that may be given for the verdict, the scenes in the videotape speak for themselves.

Requesting anonymity, a juror said in an interview that the jury had determined that the police had not used excessive force in light of King's resistance prior to the arrest. It is true that the media have only shown 81 seconds of the videotape, 81 seconds that incriminated the officers in the minds of millions of Americans.

So let's give the officers the benefit of the doubt and consider that King had quite an extensive police record and was on parole, that he led the police cars on a high-speed chase and that he still resisted after being shocked by a paralyzing electric tazer.

After taking that into consideration, we then know the officers used their batons to subdue King and proceed to arrest him. But do you really need to club a man 56 times to subdue him? If the officers had a slight doubt that Rodney King would resist even further, that doubt certainly must have disappeared after twenty blows. But instead, in the most excessive bad judgment call in this case, they went on beating King mercilessly, in a rage that was totally unprovoked. Those 81 seconds of videotape clearly show four officers going way beyond the limits of sensible use of force. Deforming injuries to King's face and a broken leg are proof of this.

The violent reaction in Los Angeles cannot be condoned because in the end more will suffer. The riots have already claimed many lives. Moreover, it only mirrors the brutality of the LAPD officers.

The jury supposedly took all the facts into consideration, but after the verdict was released, it seemed as though jurors had seen a whole different case, or a different videotape. Perhaps a Mike Tyson fight?

INTERNATIONAL

Oh, Canada

Amid a maelstrom of issues and non-issues in this year's presidential and congressional elections, there has been talk of sending jobs on a fast track to Mexico, but no mention of our often forgotten northern neighbor, Canada. This year on Dominion Day, July 1, the 125th anniversary of Canadian independence will be celebrated, although the confederacy of provinces itself is threatened by Quebec's moves toward succession. This and other economic, social and political problems directly affecting the United States should be addressed.

Being English or French in Canada has never been a more mutually exclusive or purely political statement. Young anglophones are leaving Quebec in droves due to legal restrictions on language and open discrimination. Bill 178 is the provincial law that forbids English on most commercial signs. Since the Quiet Revolution of the 1960s, 300,000 more English speakers have left Quebec than have moved there and a new exodus is foreseen, with likely impact on the United States.

The histories of the United States and Canada have long been intertwined. From origins in French and English territorial expansion, the revolutionary period, cooperation in the Underground Railroad, and through the battles of The Great War that helped define Canada as a nation, the policies and actions of the one country have always affected the other. In the Vietnam era we clearly saw the impact of Canada's close proximity, relatively open border and legal codes when thousands of young men fled the draft. There is an obvious cultural, historical and economic affinity.

Presently, we are in trade competition over such issues as grain, pork, beer, lumber and fishing rights, needing also to come to terms on environmental policies and the role of NATO.

Although some would deem them frivolous, the major sports leagues straddling the border are also a major economic concern. Accounting for millions of dollars in revenue each year, they provide employment, entertainment and recreation for millions. Although a Canadian baseball team has yet to make it to the World Series, the Toronto Blue Jays may actually win it all this coming autumn. The National Hockey League had the first strike in its 75-year history this spring over pensions, contract length and the over $11 million in player association revenues from trading cards, an issue so important that it competed for citizen attention with the debates about the constitution and the perilous state of the Canadian economy.

At a time when all the presidential candidates speak of change, we must solidify our ties with Canada so that we can solidly position ourselves in the new order of economic spheres the world is seeing. Perhaps we can help alleviate the problems in Quebec, or at least learn from it for our own benefit. Certainly we can make trade agreements that will benefit the people of both nations. The Monroe Doctrine recognized the importance of American unity, north and south.

King verdict leaves many blanks unfilled

I am one of those silly people that believes in that great guardian trinity of the human spirit: the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Sometimes I think it's the flowery language, the way the "s"s are written as "f"s, and the antique pictures of wiggled men. That there is just some childish mysticism to it.

But other times I tell myself "No, it actually works." I think of how it has brought presidents down and held less powerful criminals up. Then I think it would be even better if those works were nothing but the propaganda of a bunch of 17th-century aristocrats who wanted to run the show for themselves. It would mean that it was all some grand lie in which America felt the need to believe. That, over the years, the people had breathed life into some tired old words because it just so happened to be what they wanted for themselves.

Because at best "All men are created equal" was not a guarantee, but a promise. A promise that didn't even start coming true for almost 100 years. And that the beginning of the truth, the Civil War, was made possible by the blood of men and women fighting for a cause, the freedom of slaves, in which many of them did not particularly believe. But I have said to myself the kind of freedom promised in those documents has never existed and, so what if another 200 or 300 years go by. It is not fair, but it is to be expected. I believed we had to be patient. And I still do.

I believed that Malcolm X was wrong. That "By any means necessary" reeked of a moral carte blanche below the movement's goals. I believed that his way would only bring two sides of the anger together, one black, one white. And once together the closed circuit of rage would go round and round, eye for eye. I held fast to Martin Luther King's philosophy of peaceful resistance, believing it awaited the victory, while the other awaited the war. And I still do.

I believed that police officers in this country are good people. That, if anything, they should be pitied, because they are human-garbage collectors, picking up the dead and living waste of our society and dumping it where it won't ugly the neighborhood. I believed that the police have the toughest job in the world. And I still do.

Because at best "All men are created equal" was not a guarantee, but a promise.

I believed that affirmative action (in the private sector) and a massive welfare state were not the answer to the problem. That the civil rights movement had accomplished a good deal of what it could do governmentally. I held that if you could not legislate morality in sexual matters, neither could you do it in racial matters. People would think what they want to think, good or bad. You could educate and you could for once actually enforce the laws already in existence, but there was little else for the government to do.

But something is terribly wrong. Last spring, Rodney King was beaten like a dog in a street. Worse, in fact, than you would ever beat a dog. Officers of the law struck Rodney King with 56 baton blows. And then they laughed in his face about it. The beating was on videotape and they got away with it. I wonder if they are laughing about it today.

They stood around and took turns. Other officers of the law stood around and watched, slightly embarrassed. Standing not with a deep sense of shame or regret, but with the awkwardness of someone who had not yet been properly introduced.

And 12 jurors were the handmaidens of this grand moral failure. I would just like them to fill in one blank for me. The reason it was acceptable to do that to Rodney King is -----

Because it saves us money? A big reason why the LAPD has the record it does is because L.A. is half the size of New York City, but has one-third its police force. You see, law enforcement is labor intensive. Protecting people is expensive. L.A. got around this to a certain degree by substituting an aggressive, almost paramilitary, style of police work for flatfoots in the neighborhoods. In effect, replacing preventions with retribution.

Because a dozen-odd armed police officers were afraid Rodney King was going to get out of the dirt and hurt them?

Because we are afraid of black people? There is no answer that makes this acceptable or morally tolerable. There is no way we can allow this to happen. And yet we have.

This country needs to ask itself some questions. Can we allow larger and larger sections of our nation and our people to become nothing and less than nothing? How much justice is enough? Exactly how long do we expect people to take this sort of treatment? And, finally, when is America going to fully live up to its own promises?

GUEST OPINION

May Day: The university is in danger

Today, UI students have the opportunity to make a difference. The UI Student Assembly and President Dustin Wilcox have called the university community to action. We are asking all members of the university community to stop their work for one hour and come to the Pentacrest today for a May Day rally at noon and show their support for the UI. State leaders are considering trimming an estimated $14.2 million dollars from next year's UI budget. This May Day rally has been called to bring the university community together and communicate clearly to state leaders that regents' universities have paid their fair share of cuts already and can pay no more.

We are asking the community to stop their "work," whatever it is, for one hour from 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. One year ago today students in the School of Art and Art History called a similar work stoppage action called Strike for the Arts. They cared enough about their work to stop it for an hour and draw attention to the decimation of the financial support for their school. Student leaders are calling upon all members of the university community to join in solidarity on the Pentacrest today in this May Day rally in similar fashion.

It is extremely important that all members of our community understand that their university is in real danger. The students, whose education is at stake, and the populace of the state of Iowa, which helps to pay for the quality land grant institutions, must understand that our regents' universities are beginning to lose the ability to deliver a first-class education to the children of Iowa. Iowans have always taken great pride in the quality of the education they provide their children.

It is extremely important that all members of our community understand that their university is in real danger. The students, whose education is at stake, and the populace of the state of Iowa, which helps to pay for the quality land grant institutions, must understand that our regents' universities are beginning to lose the ability to deliver a first-class education to the children of Iowa. Iowans have always taken great pride in the quality of the education they provide their children. With this May Day rally, student leaders are hoping to send a clear message to the decision makers that our needs should be considered, but more importantly, that the needs of the future students — the children of Iowa — cannot be ignored with short-term thinking and a lack of long-term vision.

As a native Iowan I was raised to believe that education was not only my own personal priority, but that of the state as well. We need to change the way we do business in Iowa and put education back at the top of our priorities list. If we fail to continue to invest in the education of our children, we are sacrificing their futures to an inability to compromise and work as a team to solve our problems. We need to send a message to Des Moines that we are not the silent minority, but rather the loud and informed majority, and our concerns must be addressed. Our state leaders also need to know that we believe they can work together to solve these problems, if they only try. You see, I believe in the innate resourcefulness of the Iowan. We Iowans can do anything we put our minds to, solve any problem with which we are confronted, if we only try.

Each and every one of us who has had difficulty getting a class, found access to our libraries restricted or lost a professor due to impending layoffs must act now. We must stand up and be counted. We can make a difference, if we only try. If we do not care enough about our own lives to take responsibility for them and participate in the process, we have no right to complain.

Come out to the Pentacrest today for the May Day rally. Greel's houses, I call upon you to come out in your letters. Art students who led the brilliant Strike for the Arts one year ago today, and were the catalyst for all of our events this year, come onto the Pentacrest with your signs and your voices. Faculty, staff, administrators and students, stand up with us at our May Day rally. Stand up for higher education, your peers and your students, and most of all for yourselves.

We can make a difference, if we only try. Stand up and be counted before it is too late. Nancy Anderson Mortensen is a graduate student in the School of Art and Art History and a member of the Graduate and Professional Student Senate.

NAVY

Inquiry uncovers ongoing sexual harassment

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The Navy's inspector general issued a scathing report Thursday that described in graphic detail the sexual molestation of 26 women at a 1991 convention of naval aviators, and charged top Navy admirals had "tacitly approved" of such activity for years.

occurred at a convention of Navy and Marine Corps aviators in Las Vegas.
In an interview, Undersecretary of the Navy Dan Howard said no disciplinary action against senior Navy officials was contemplated. The issue, he said, is "what we should do from this point on" to "teach our people... the difference between acceptable and unacceptable behavior."
Navy investigators interviewed women who complained of being subjected to a hotel hallway "gauntlet," a nightly event that involved up to 200 men. According to one witness, the gauntlet on one particular night involved 40 to 50 women and lasted two hours.

Investigators said 26 women were "sexually molested to varying degrees" and complained.
"The attacks ranged from being patted on the buttocks to having other portions of their anatomy groped and grabbed," said the report, which included more than 2,000 pages of testimony.
When one of the females pleaded for help from a fellow officer, he turned on her and grabbed her breasts, according to the testimony.
In one case, "an obviously extremely intoxicated female minor..."

apparently lost consciousness and was passed up the gauntlet where she was partially disrobed," the report stated.
The inspector general, Rear Adm. George Davis, said "closing ranks and obfuscation" on the part of the officers who supposedly had knowledge of the incidents has made it impossible to know the "nature, severity and number" of incidents that occurred.
Howard, in his interview with The Associated Press, said the senior Navy leadership was "disgusted, very frustrated that we did not receive the full cooperation of everyone in the investigation."

LEGISLATION

Bush approves order facilitating privatization

Rita Beamish
Associated Press
COLUMBUS, Ohio — President Bush today made it easier for state and local governments to sell public facilities such as airports, bridges and sewage-treatment plants.
Advocates of privatization hailed it as a major change in attitude. Others said it could lead to higher costs.

Bush signed an executive order this morning directing federal agencies that helped finance construction of local facilities to reverse their past practice of demanding a hefty share of profits from the sale of those facilities.
"Facilities now run by government that could be owned and operated by competitive enterprises can thus serve the public more fairly and more efficiently," Bush said in a speech to the Ohio Association of Broadcasters.
"It gives state and local government more freedom to sell or lease their infrastructure to the private sector," the president said.
It was Bush's second trip to the Midwestern industrial state in just over a week, as he focused attention on states expected to be battlegrounds with the Democratic presidential nominee in November.

The privatization change, part of Bush's focus on decreasing government regulation, is intended to help financially strapped local governments find new ways of getting revenue, officials said.
It could affect some $227 billion worth of bridges, roads, airports, electric utilities, water companies and other facilities, according to one private study.
That is the total estimated market value of the assets "that would be viable in the private sector" if the state and local governments chose to sell them, said Robert Poole, president of the Reason Foundation, an economic think tank in Los Angeles, Calif.

He said the foundation's study was based on an analysis of international marketplace prices involved in other countries that have embarked on privatization, such as Britain.
In cases where grants were awarded many years ago, the federal government probably would ask nothing from a sale, said John Giraudo, a Washington lawyer and lobbyist for defense contractors and other potential buyers of public facilities.

GORBACHEV

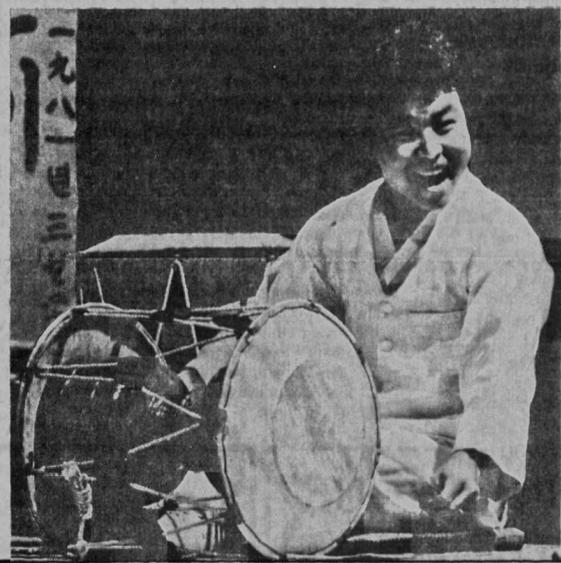

Former president criticizes U.S.

Bryan Brumley
Associated Press
MOSCOW, Russia — Mikhail Gorbachev, preparing for a U.S. tour, said Thursday the United States should give up being the world's "policeman" and focus on building democracies around the globe.
Gorbachev, interviewed by The Associated Press at the offices of the think tank he founded, also said Boris Yeltsin has pushed Russia too quickly toward reform and risks a social explosion.
The 61-year-old Gorbachev was relaxed, rested and energetic four months after he resigned as president of the Soviet Union, following the failed coup last August and the collapse of the central government in December.

He said he has no plans to return to politics, but sees his "duty in supporting reforms as an individual. Sometimes I may criticize."
Although he generally endorsed presidents Bush and Yeltsin, he chided both, Bush for acting too slowly to support reforms in the former Soviet republics, and Yeltsin for pushing domestic reforms too quickly.
Without mentioning Bush by name, Gorbachev said the U.S. government "has to be reproached." Billions of dollars were spent waging the gulf war, he said, but money has been harder to find "to support democratic changes which will create a new world for 100, 200 years ahead... It is narrow-minded thinking, and I cannot understand it."

Looking back on the collapse of the Soviet Union during his own seven-year tenure in the Kremlin, Gorbachev acknowledged he had not pushed reforms quickly enough.
"I think we should not have spent time trying to improve the system. The system, the Stalinist model, the command system, constrained the energy, the thinking of the society, its actions. It was holding the entire country back," he said.
"Political and economic reforms were not synchronized," he said, adding that he wished he had moved more quickly to allow private ownership.
He said if he had curbed ethnic violence, "we would have given no trump cards to the coup leaders, no chance to try their hand."

Sierra Leone's government ousted in military coup

1 ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Mutinous troops in Sierra Leone overthrew President Joseph Momoh and said Thursday that they had set up a new government. Momoh was reported to have fled to Guinea.

There were no reports of deaths, though reporters saw wounded soldiers. The coup leaders declared a dusk-to-dawn curfew and warned that violators would be shot.

"The patriotic officers and men of the Sierra Leone armed forces have overthrown the regime of President Momoh," the coup leaders were quoted as saying Thursday in a private radio broadcast.

Diplomats reported from Freetown later in the day that military officers had formed a National Provisional Defense Council.

The only council member identified, Lt. Col. Yahya Kanu, told the British Broadcasting Corp. that the soldiers favored a return to democracy in the former British colony.

Robbers terrorize tourists in the Sahara Desert

2 ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Embarking on a seven-month African safari this month, Sarah Spear and other tourists left from Morocco and crossed the forbidding Sahara Desert in Algeria. Then the nightmare began.

"We heard the gunshots just after we'd crossed into Mali. Suddenly we were surrounded by bandits in eight landcruisers, shooting at our trucks and into the air," said Spear, a 23-year-old marketing executive from London, England.

She described an eight-hour ordeal in which the bandits fought among themselves, attempted to rape one woman, body-searched the roughly 80 tourists and ransacked their trucks.

"They took over 100,000 pounds ($180,000) worth of cash and belongings as well as a truck, two cars and a Land Rover," she said.

Tourists have been attacked in a triangle of desert where Mali, Niger and Algeria share borders. The United States and other countries have advised their citizens not to travel there.

Diplomats in the Ivory Coast, Burkina Faso and Mali say the region is rife with bandits and Tuareg nomad rebels who work with border guards and are backed by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi.

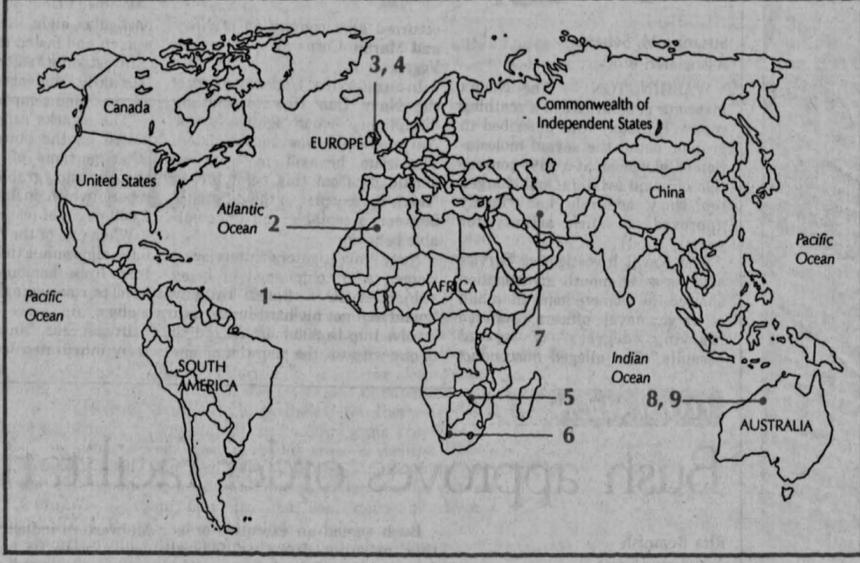

1st woman speaker of British House of Commons will break wig tradition

3 LONDON, England (AP) — The first woman speaker of the House of Commons says her election is not the only 700-year tradition that will be broken in the chamber. Betty Boothroyd says she won't wear a wig.

"I want to be comfortable in what I wear, and I don't think I'll be comfortable in a wig," the 62-year-old Labor Party lawmaker and former chorus girl said after her election Monday.

The Commons sat Monday for the first time since the Conservative Party won a fourth consecutive victory in national elections April 9.

Boothroyd is the first lawmaker from outside the governing party since World War II to hold the powerful post of speaker, which dates back to 1258.

Boothroyd, one of 60 women in the 651-member Commons, was deputy speaker in the previous Parliament.

Forty years ago, she was one of the Tiller Girls, a nationally famous lineup of high-kicking dancers at London's Palladium.

United Nations reports fast world population increase 4 LONDON, England (AP) — World population, rising faster than ever and headed for 6 billion, is a crucial factor in environmental destruction and must be considered at the Earth Summit, the U.N. Population Fund said Wednesday.

According to the fund's annual report, the "State of World Population 1992," the population will increase by about 97 million annually until the year 2000, the equivalent of a United States every 2½ years.

"If we carefully husband them, world resources are adequate for the sustained development of the planet," the report said.

The report came five weeks before the June summit in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, called the U.N. Conference on Environment and Development.

Poachers endanger Zimbabwe's rhinos

5 NYAMEPEI, Zimbabwe (AP) — Despite aggressive conservation measures, poachers are slaughtering rhinoceros at a rate that could wipe out one of the largest concentrations in Africa in two years, game officials say.

Zimbabwe has more than 1,000 rhinos, second only to South Africa, but poachers are killing about 10 rhinos a month in the wilderness near the Zambezi River in northern Zimbabwe.

"Time is running out for our rhinos. They don't get a chance to die of natural causes anymore," said Glen Tatham, head of Zimbabwe's paramilitary anti-poaching unit, which has authority to shoot poachers on sight.

South Africa's infant mortality rate five times higher for blacks

6 CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The infant mortality rate for blacks is almost five times higher than for whites, according to a national health report released this week.

Whites also live an average of 10 years longer than blacks, said the report by the Department of National Health.

It said the national infant mortality rate was 47 per 1,000 live births, with wide discrepancies in the racial breakdown.

The rate among whites was nine per 1,000 live births, compared to 35 for people of mixed race and 52 for blacks, the report said.

Intestinal infection was the main cause of death for black children under age 5, while drownings and transport accidents were the main causes for white children, it said.

Blacks and mixed race people had a life expectancy of 63 years, compared to 73 for whites, the report said.

Most blacks live in squalid townships near cities or in impoverished rural homelands with poor medical facilities.

The department said the life expectancy figure for blacks and mixed race people was similar to World Bank figures for developing countries and the infant mortality rates were lower.

Reports say Iran obtained two nuclear weapons from Kazakhstan

7 LONDON, England (AP) — Iran has obtained at least two nuclear warheads which had been reported missing from Kazakhstan, The European newspaper said today, quoting a secret report from the Russian Foreign Intelligence Agency.

In a front-page story, the weekly newspaper reported that several nuclear warheads vanished from the Semipalatinsk nuclear test site in Kazakhstan. The former Soviet republic's president, Nursultan Nazarbayev, closed the site in early 1992.

The European did not say how it had obtained its intelligence report.

Two of the nuclear weapons were smuggled across the border from Kazakhstan into Iran last year and are now under the control of Reza Amrollahi, head of the Iranian Organization for Atomic Energy, The European said.

The paper said the Russian report, which it said was recently sent to the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, disclosed that a third nuclear weapon which disappeared has not been traced but is believed to be in the Middle East.

In Vienna, Austria, spokesman Hans Friedrich Meyer said the International Atomic Energy Agency had no knowledge of such a transaction.

The United States and other governments had expressed concern that the chaos following the collapse of the Soviet Union would lead to the spread of nuclear weapons.

Bring your swimsuit, beware of the killer jellyfish!

8 DARWIN, Australia (AP) — This northern city is expecting up to 10,000 people for its annual beach party marking the end of the wet season, but swimmers beware: There's a killer in the water.

The threat is posed by the box jellyfish, which appears in large numbers in waters off Darwin most of the year. The jellyfish has one of the most potent venoms in the animal world, and its sting can prove fatal in two or three minutes.

Jellyfish expert Phil Alderslade said even wading is a risk. "These jellyfish love shallow water, and if it's calm they'll come right up into water that's less than knee-deep," he said.

Tom Miller, an organizer of Sunday's 20th annual celebration, worried about outsiders because, "Most Darwin people realize that when you go to the beach, it's to get a suntan and not to go for a swim."

Since the start of the year, 35 people have been hospitalized for jellyfish stings. Nine people have died from stings since 1978 — none since 1988.

Coral Sea Battle celebration encounters opposition

9 SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Prime Minister Paul Keating and U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney welcomed a flotilla of 11 warships in Sydney Harbor on Friday to start ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of the Battle of the Coral Sea.

About 60 anti-nuclear demonstrators paddled around the aircraft carrier USS Independence in kayaks and rubber boats Friday as the 1,047-foot ship maneuvered to dock.

Hawkeyes ousted

The Iowa men's tennis team made it past Purdue but fell to Illinois in the Big Ten mini tournament, which determines the final team for the conference tournament.

Iowa's No. 1-ranked Klas Bergstrom did his part by winning both of his singles matches — the first in straight sets.

Neil Denahan joined Bergstrom at 2-0 for the journey by knocking off Purdue's Ryan Maggett 7-5, 6-3 and Illinois' Dave Nasser 6-2, 7-6.

Iowa, which finished ninth in the Big Ten this season, found the ninth spot in the conference championship as well.

Women head to Nebraska

The Iowa women's track squad will send "about half" of the team to Nebraska to compete against the Cornhuskers, Kansas State and Kansas.

Coach Jerry Hassard said he will be resting some of the team's top performers because the outdoor season "has a lot of meets," and the athletes have to be prepared for the end of the season championships.

He said shot putters Lisa Van Steenwyk and Denese Taylor will join Tracy Dahl in traveling to Lincoln to try to better their provisional qualifying results.

"They're all good Big Eight teams," Hassard said. "Nebraska is the perennial champs in the league."

State champion grappler to wrestle for Gable

Humboldt wrestler Tony Ermland, a two-time state champion who won his final 69 matches, has signed with Iowa.

Iowa won a recruiting battle with Wisconsin for Ermland, the Class 2A champion at 171 pounds the last two years.

"I really like those two schools," Ermland said. "But I wanted to stay in state and of course, there is Iowa's reputation."

Ermland, who had a career record of 100-18 at Humboldt, is expected to wrestle at 177 for the Hawkeyes.

COLLEGE

Dye resigns AD post

AUBURN, Ala. — Auburn football coach Pat Dye decided to resign as athletic director before Eric Ramsey alleged possible NCAA violations, and he isn't worried if it appears otherwise.

"That doesn't bother me a bit," Dye said of suggestions his timing might appear to stem from the former player's charges of improper payments by Auburn boosters and assistant coaches. "People can speculate and say what they want to say."

No harm, no sixth foul

NEW YORK — The Big East Conference and two other leagues' three-year experiment with the six-foul rule in basketball is over.

"We'll give it a rest," Hank Nichols, the secretary-editor of the NCAA's basketball rules committee and the coordinator of men's basketball officials, said Thursday. "After getting the data from it, we saw no need to experiment with it any longer."

MINNEAPOLIS — Kirby Puckett and Minnesota will continue attempts to negotiate a contract extension, Twins general manager Andy MacPhail said Thursday.

Puckett's agent, Ron Shapiro, and MacPhail had agreed last month to stop negotiating if they couldn't come to terms by the end of April. But MacPhail said that enough progress was being made to convince both sides to keep working.

DETROIT — The Detroit Red Wings, behind the dramatic goaltending of Tim Cheveldae, became only the ninth team in NHL history to overcome a 3-1 deficit when they eliminated the Minnesota North Stars with a 5-2 victory in the seventh game of the Norris Division semifinals Thursday night.

Detroit will open a best-of-7 series against the Chicago Blackhawks on Saturday night at Joe Louis Arena for the division title.

It was the second time the Red Wings had overcome a 3-1 deficit to win a playoff series. They rallied to oust Toronto in the 1987 division finals.

Sergei Fedorov, Alan Kerr and Gerard Gallant each scored in the second period to take the Red Wings to a 3-0 lead. Bob Probert and Shawn Burr scored in the third period.

Brian Bellows stopped Cheveldae's string of scoreless playoff minutes, which included shutouts in Games 5 and 6, at 188:36 with a third-period power-play goal. Minnesota's Mike Craig closed out the scoring with 51 seconds left in the game.

Minnesota goalie Jon Casey, whose hot hand took the surprising North Stars all the way to the Stanley Cup finals a year ago, also played well. But he was no match for the determined Red Wings, who finished first in the division, 28 points ahead of the fourth-place North Stars.

Casey handled 31 shots, Cheveldae 31.

This was the 14th time in their history the Red Wings were playing a seventh game in a playoff series. They were 8-5 in the previous 13 attempts, but 7-2 at home.

Hawks plan on playing own game

Jay Nanda

Daily Iowan

When the Iowa softball team was mired in third place in the Big Ten and facing back-to-back series with second place Minnesota and frontrunning Michigan, the Hawkeyes agreed that merely "playing our own game" would give them a shot at the top of the standings.

It worked. So now that the first place Hawkeyes get set for the cellar-dwelling Spartans of Michigan State — that's the 4-26, 3-13 Spartans — how will they attempt to avoid even one embarrassing defeat?

"We need to play at our level. Our team has good intensity and we're going to keep the same approach," Coach Gayle Blevins said. "It doesn't matter who we play."

"Any team is going to be a tough team," Iowa first baseman Christa Davis said. "You just have to play your game and take one at a time."

Fishman waiting to leave pond

Coming out of high school, Steve Fishman had all the credentials to become a starting catcher on a college baseball team. But when he came to Iowa, one thing stood in his way: senior Tim Killeen.

"I was kind of expecting to play a little more," said Fishman, a freshman on the Iowa baseball team. "I came in and had a great shot, but Timmy's been on fire. And I'm happy for him because he helps me out so much."

Fishman was a first team all-conference and all-valley performer and team captain as a senior at Glendora (Calif.) High School.

In that season, he led the valley in three offensive categories, threw out 76 percent of potential base stealers and hit .455 with 32 RBIs and eight steals.

But Killeen, who transferred to Iowa from Yavapai (Ariz.) Junior College last year, has been among the top hitters for the Hawkeyes this season and currently leads Iowa with 12 home runs.

Fishman, who has started nine games, said that while he would like to play on a more regular basis, he appreciates the competition with his elder counterpart.

"We're really good for each other because we make each other play to the best of our abilities," Fishman said. "We know that if one screws up, the other one's in. Except in my case because I don't hit bombs 500 feet like he does. But he's helped me out a lot in really adjusting to college baseball. I'm grateful for that."

For the most part, Fishman said he feels he has made the most of his limited opportunities. The 5-foot-10, 173-pounder is batting .282 with five runs and 12 RBIs in 14 appearances.

According to him, the worst day he had was last Tuesday at Iowa State. Fishman started the nightcap and was 1-for-3 with one run and one RBI. He singled with two out in the sixth inning to score Iowa's fourth run and later crossed the plate to tie up the game. But he had one error on the day that proved to be costly for the Hawkeyes.

When the tying run attempted to steal third base in the seventh inning, Fishman overthrew the ball and Iowa eventually lost the contest 6-5.

"When I made those errors and I knew it cost us the game, it really pissed me off," Fishman said. "I'll make those plays nine out of 10 times. Sometimes you just clench up and throw it into the outfield, and it really hurts to see how it hurts the team. It's really disappointing that it was your fault."

Though there was a strong wind blowing in from right field, Fishman said he makes no excuses for his mistake.

MILWAUKEE — Kevin Seitzer snapped an 0-for-21 slump with an eighth-inning single to drive in the winning run Thursday night as the Milwaukee Brewers rallied for a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Brewers had managed only four hits off Toronto starter Juan Guzman, but got three runs in the eighth off reliever Duane Ward (1-1). Ward had saved four games in four attempts before Thursday.

Darryl Hamilton singled and stole second — the Brewers had a club-record seven steals in the game — Greg Vaughn then singled and, when right fielder Joe Carter bobbled the ball, Hamilton scored the tying run.

Hawks take to links to defend Big Ten title

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

The mission for the Iowa women's golf team is to repeat as champions when they take on the rest of the conference teams at the Big Ten Championships in Champaign, Ill. this week.

The linksters captured the first Big Ten title in school history a year ago when they held off three-time defending champion Indiana.

Coach Diane Thomason said that she still feels the thrill of last year's championship. She admits that the youth of this year's squad could make repeating as champions difficult, but stressed that the Hawkeyes will not hand over the championship trophy without a battle.

"We are young and inexperienced, but I am sure that the girls will give it their best shot," Thomason said.

Sophomore Mary Jo Rollins said she feels it works best for her if she forgets about being defending Big Ten champs and concentrates on the task at hand this year.

"We have to put that aside and just think about this year," Rollins said. "It's good (being champions) because it pushes us, but we need to put that in the back of our minds right now."

Rollins said that she can't let the fact that this is a conference championship tournament affect her play.

"I have to try and ease the pressure and just go out and play the game," she said.

The team is concentrating on accomplishing two goals at this tournament according to Thomason. The first goal is to play consistent early rounds as a team.

"We would like to go into the locker room 10 or 20 strokes ahead after the first two rounds," she said.

The second goal is to have the girls shoot moderate scores individually. "We can't have exceptionally large individual scores," Thomason added.

Indiana, Minnesota and Ohio State appear to be the teams to beat this weekend.

Rollins, Becky Fuglestad, Stacy Boville, Judy Bornholdt, Jennifer McCullough and Lynette Seaton will be making the trip to Champaign for the Hawkeyes. Only the four lowest scores of these six players will be counted toward tournament team totals.

Thomason said that Rollins, Fuglestad and Boville have the potential to have good tournaments individually.

"Mary Jo and Becky have a chance at finishing in the top ten," she said.

This will be Fuglestad's last Big Ten Championship Tournament.

"It feels weird to have this be my last tournament," she said.

Fuglestad also sees handling the pressure as the key to performing well in conference championships.

"I just have to play my game, be comfortable and trust myself," she said. "I don't want to get uptight about it."

The Big Ten Championships are the last tournament of the season for the Hawkeyes. Thomason said that she feels it will be good for next year's team to have a good showing at the Big Tens this year.

"It is always good to finish with a good tournament so that you go home with a positive memory, momentum, and get better," she said.

Dodger Stadium was a sea of tranquility

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The tranquil setting of Dodger Stadium, nestled in the hills above riot-torn Los Angeles, was for one terrifying night a diamond in the rough.

"I'd rather be here," Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Danny Cox said Wednesday night after this city's worst episode of wanton violence in 27 years spilled over only a few miles away.

"It seems like the safest place to be right now."

While the Dodgers and Phillies played a leisurely early-season baseball game, the city below was reliving the Watts riots of 1965 — with gunfire, mayhem and flaming buildings in the aftermath of a jury's unpopular decision in the Los Angeles police videotape beating case a few hours earlier.

"I was playing for the Angels and living out here when they had the Watts riots, which was a very scary situation," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said of the 1965 rioting that claimed 34 lives. "Hopefully, everybody uses some common sense, but it doesn't look like it's going to be realistic to think they are."

Players from both teams watched Wednesday's horror unfold on clubhouse television sets. John Candelaria sat motionless and expressionless by himself in the Dodgers' video room during batting practice. After the game, the Phillies' Mitch Williams sat cross-legged on the floor outside the visiting manager's office, mesmerized by the real-life drama.

"You usually don't watch riots and looting and stuff like that before the game," Cox said after he pitched the Phillies over the Dodgers 7-3. "A lot of innocent people are going to get hurt. And it's insane in this day and age that people can't sit down and look at it in a more adult manner."

The names of beating victim Rodney King — and trial defendants Sgt. Stacey Koon, officers Timothy Wind, Theodore Briseno and Lawrence Powell — have become more familiar with L.A. residents over the past months than the names of many Dodger players.

Dodger outfielder Eric Davis, who grew up in the L.A. area torn by rioting Wednesday night, spoke out before the game in the hope that the angry minority community would react peacefully.

But an hour later, the television in the press box showed a helicopter shot of a motorist being pulled out of his truck, beaten, kicked, robbed and left in a pool of blood by rioters.

"We've come so far as a race to have something like that deter you," Davis told reporters. "And for every step we take forward, we shouldn't take two or three steps backward. This (the innocent verdicts) is just another thing to make the people down there angry, but I just hope they keep a level head."

That didn't happen. As the sun rose, at least nine people had died, more than 130 were injured, some 50 people were arrested and about 300 fires had raged.

The black community's anger at the police, however, was directed at a small minority of the city's police officers, Davis said.

"It's not justifiable to say that the whole LAPD in general is like that, because they're not," Davis added. "But I think the LAPD is going to get a bad rap because of the way that all those guys got acquitted."

Braves try to continue streak

Tom Saladino
Associated Press

ATLANTA — It's up to Steve Avery to continue the Atlanta Braves' 33-inning shutout streak in Friday night's game against the New York Mets.

Is he feeling the pressure? Not from his coaches.

"Steve's challenge will be to beat the Mets. It will have nothing to do with keeping a scoreless streak," said Braves pitching coach Leo Mazzone.

"We're just going to let Avery be Avery. It don't have to be a shut-out, just a win."

But with a day off Thursday to think about it, Avery may be putting pressure on himself.

"No one wants to be the pitcher that ends the run we've got going," Avery told the Daily News of suburban Duluth.

John Smoltz pitched the Braves' third consecutive shutout, 8-0 Wednesday night over the Chicago Cubs, the fifth victory in a row for Atlanta. Tom Glavine shut out the Cubs 5-0 Monday, and Charlie Leibrandt and two relievers combined for a 1-0 shutout Tuesday.

"They have a great pitching staff. That's documented," said Cubs manager Jim Lefebvre.

In the three-game series, the Cubs managed only 12 hits.

The Braves' pitching staff has thrown four shutouts in the last five games and six this season — compared with seven in all of last year. Avery (1-2) is coming off a shutout of the Astros last Saturday.

The 33 consecutive scoreless innings, which date back to the final six innings of Sunday's 3-2 win over Houston, is a franchise record. The major league record for consecutive scoreless innings pitched is 56 set by the 1903 Pittsburgh Pirates.

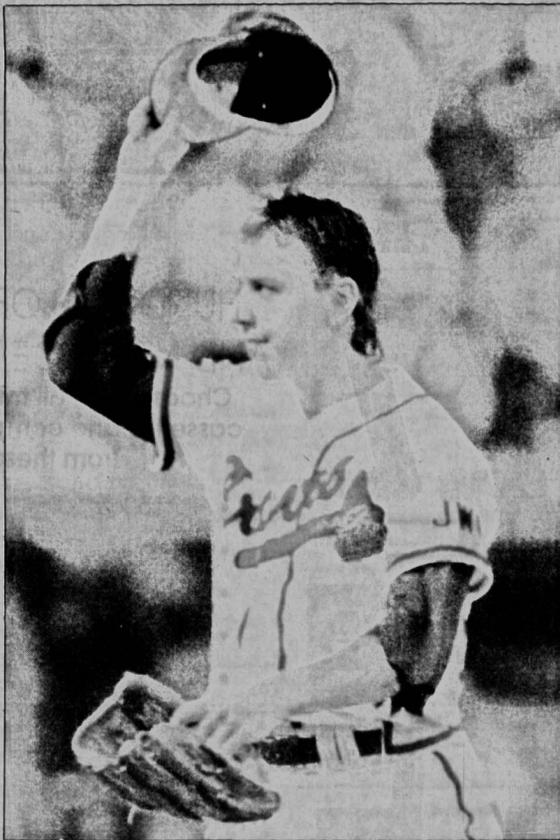

Braves manager Bobby Cox said he can't remember ever managing a club that had three shutouts in a row.

"But it's a pretty good feeling sitting in the dugout watching."

Mazzone said the pitchers "are a close-knit group. They feed off one another, competitively and emotionally."

Smoltz said there's an inner competition among the group.

"You see one guy go out and do it, you just want to try to duplicate it," he said after his victory Wednesday.

Associated Press

Atlanta's Steve Avery will take the mound Friday night trying to improve on the Braves' 33 innings of scoreless pitching.

He said the scoreless streak reminds him of a playoff situation. "In the playoffs and World Series, the adrenaline is flowing, which is often missing in the regular season for a routine game. But with a streak like this, it keeps you pumped up."

The streak has the Braves back at 500 — 11-11 and one game out of first place in the NL West — after a disappointing April road trip on which they won only two of 10 games and fell into last place.

"If nothing else, it puts a scare in some other teams that the pitching is coming around," Smoltz said. "Teams gotta come in here with a little fear, knowing they're facing five of the top pitchers in the league."

The hitting also has started to come around.

Terry Pendleton, with a 10-game hitting streak, is batting .306. Ron Gant is among the leaders in home runs with five, RBIs with 17 and stolen bases with seven. Deion Sanders, although slumping, is at .326, and Otis Nixon, who returned from a 60-day drug suspension six games ago, is hitting .375 with three stolen bases.

"We've been getting super pitching, great defense and timely hitting the last week," said Cox. "You're going to win some games when that happens."

HOCKEY

Super Mario's best may be yet to come in Game 7 vs. Capitals

Captain resurrecting Pens' hopes

Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — They've seen him win Stanley Cups, win scoring titles, win nearly every major award in hockey. No matter how much his fellow Pittsburgh Penguins see of Mario Lemieux, they still haven't seen it all.

Often, they see it, but don't believe "He was my hero when I was growing up," said linemate Kevin Stevens, who's actually six months older than Lemieux. "He's still my hero."

Just when even his biggest fans — like Stevens — think Lemieux's done it all, he does himself one better. Just like he did Wednesday in the Penguins' series-evening 6-4 playoff victory over the Washington Capitals. Lemieux scored two goals and set up three others to figure in nearly every Pittsburgh point, just as he has throughout the series. Of the Penguins' 20 goals, Lemieux has scored six and assisted on nine, even though he missed one game with a sore shoulder.

He was superhuman in Game 3, having a hand in each Pittsburgh goal as the Penguins got back in the series with a 6-4 victory. He was Super Mario again in the final 30 minutes of Game 6, setting up the tying goal before scoring the final two himself.

The game-winner late in the second period probably will make Lemieux's all-time Top 10 list. He skated in from the left circle to take Jaromir Jagr's pass, fought off Mike Ridley's check and switched the puck from his backhand to his forehand before somehow sliding it in the side of the net.

"What a goal!" said Stevens, a kid-like, gee-whiz grin on his face. "That was a scary goal, a scary goal. That was one of the greatest goals I've ever seen. Unbelievable."

To his legion of French-Canadian fans in his native Quebec, Mario is Le Magnifique. To the Capitals, who find themselves tied in a series they led 3-1, it was more like Les Miserables.

"It was just a great game by Mario," coach Scotty Bowman said. "Again."

Again. Just like last year's playoffs, when he scored 43 points in 22 games to lead one of the least-successful franchises in professional sports to its first Stanley Cup.

But the Washington series someday may be looked upon as one of his greatest, because it has exhibited all of Lemieux's talents in one compressed timespan. He's played in only five games, but has already tied his own team records for points (15) and assists (9) in a playoff series.

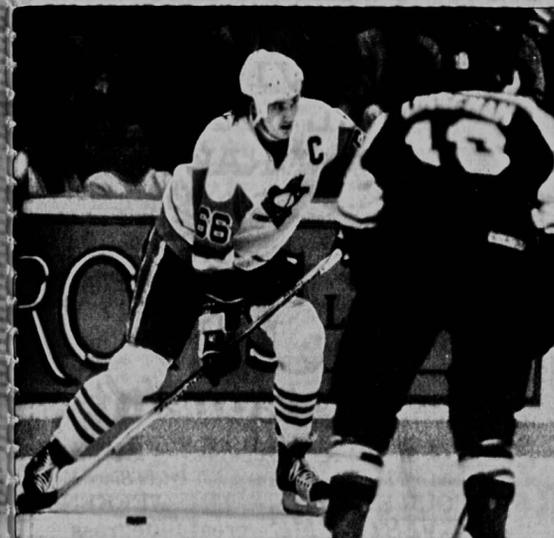

He resurrected the Penguins in Game 3, resuscitated them again in a 5-2 must-win victory in Game 5 by sacrificing offense to becoming a physical checker who befuddled the Capitals' dump-and-chase style.

"I just go out there and try to do my job every night," he said. "Some nights I'm able to do it maybe a little bit better than other nights."

Maybe a whole lot better. If Lemieux would somehow lead the Penguins to a victory in Game 7 on Friday in Landover, Md., he would complete one of hockey's greatest comebacks. Of the eight teams in Stanley Cup history to rally from a 3-1 deficit, only the 1975 and 1987 New York Islanders did it without benefit of the home-ice advantage.

The 1987 Islanders did it against — guess who? — the Capitals. "Mario loves the big games," Stevens said. "We're just so lucky to have him here, so we don't try to stop him. If you want anybody on your team for a Game 7, I think we've got him right here."

"It should be unbelievable. We can't wait."

Hawks sprint off to Pepsi Invitational

David Taylor
Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track and field team might have a couple of meets left before the outdoor conference championships, but the athletes aren't taking anything lightly.

The Hawkeyes will travel to Minneapolis this weekend to compete in the Pepsi Invitational where they will "continue to prepare for the Big Ten meet and the NCAA's" according to head coach Ted Wheeler.

"We are going to try and take as many people as possible this weekend," Wheeler said. "It should be a fine meet, and we'll concentrate on running people to sharpen up and minimize our problems."

Iowa is coming off an impressive performance in the Drake Relays last weekend where they captured the sprint medley relay championship. Wheeler said that the squad was "surprisingly successful" in some areas at the Relays and said it was one of the better showings for Iowa at Drake.

"We've had some good times and bad times this year, and we hope to bring out a blend of the best in order to give us a good finish," he said. "We'll try to accomplish that with these remaining meets."

"We look good right now and we'll continue to work towards a solid, strong finish," Wheeler added.

Trash trivia parlayed into academic career employment beyond the Ivory Tower.

So I've decided to kill two birds with one stone. Here is my handy, dandy "Guide to Taking the Master's English Comprehensive Tests."

You're an English grad student, or in my case, an English education grad student. You've got your comps coming up in about a month. You're panicking at the thought of eight hours worth of essay questions culled from a list of about 60 books that weren't covered in any of the literature classes that you took. Well, as any successful college student can tell you, higher education isn't about learning what they want you to know, it's about taking what you do know and making it look like what they want to know. In my case that would be a useless well of trivial film and television facts. Useless, that is, until now!

Possible Question — How does Sam Shepard's play "True West" compare or contrast thematically with Twain's "Huckleberry Finn?"

Possible Answer — Sam Shepard is a very good playwright, even if he hasn't written much since he moved in with Jessica Lange, but then who can really blame him, right? "True West" is one of his best and most famous plays. One production of it had Randy and Dennis Quaid playing brothers — whatta stretch, huh?

Dennis Quaid lives with Meg Ryan. Randy Quaid was on that really awful season of "Saturday Night Live" with Anthony Michael Hall and Robert Downey Jr. Dennis and Meg just had a kid. Susan Sarandon hasn't had her baby yet, even though it was due around the time of the Oscars last month. Maybe losing the Best Actress Oscar to Jodie Foster bunched her up or something. She lives with Tim Robbins and he's a pretty good actor, except that he got his start in "Howard the Duck," whereas Susan's first films were "Joe" with Peter Boyle and "Pretty Baby" with Brooke Shields. Now Susan goes to the Oscars each year and Brooke makes movies in Davenport.

Jessica Lange was also nominated for an Oscar, for "Frances," which just happens to be where she met Sam. Lange's first film was "King Kong." (Notice the smooth transition back to subject!) It wasn't a bad film — a lot better than "Howard the Duck," but then just about every film is better than "Howard." "King Kong" also starred Jeff Bridges and Charles Grodin. I still get Jeff mixed up with Kurt Russell — I can never remember which one made "Escape From New York" and which one made "Starman." However, if you remember that Jeff is Beau's brother and they made "The Fabulous Baker Boys" together, that helps a bit.

Beau isn't as famous or as talented as Jeff, but at least he's not Frank Stallone or Clint Howard. Clint's probably the most pathetic brother in Hollywood, but it is fun to watch for his cameos in his brother's movies. He did do some early films on his own and frankly "Evispeak" isn't bad and "Rock 'n Roll High School" is a work of genius. Ron Howard, however is a little more successful. He did "The Music Man" with Shirley Jones and of course was Opie Taylor (Notice the MASSIVE potential for knowledgeable "Partridge Family" and "Andy Griffith Show" discourse-padding at this point), and later he played the title role in the film version of "Huckleberry Finn" with Donny Most as Tom in sort of a "Happy Days" summer vacation project. (SCORE!! The judges go NUTS!!) "Huck" also starred Jack Elam, Merle Haggard and, of course, Clint Howard. So you see how the theme of brothers and brotherhood runs throughout both "True West" and "Huckleberry Finn."

However, unlike Sam Shepard, Sam Clemens never got in the sack with Jessica Lange.

Just mail me that master's degree now, thank you very much.

Another possible test question might be — Explain the significance of the title of Pope's "The Rape of the Lock."

My answer — I really don't think I want to talk about that.

Outstanding UI plays draw NYC directors

Tasha Robinson
Daily Iowan

At this time of year, everything else goes on hold. The entire UI theatre arts department suspends all other activities to concentrate on the culmination of the season: the Iowa Playwrights Festival.

Although the Festival always features guest professionals for workshops and critique sessions, this year marks the first occasion that guests have been invited to direct.

David Esbjornson, recently named artistic director of the Classic Stage Company Repertory in New York City, will be directing "In the Shadow of the Terminal Tower" by UI grad student Peter Ullian.

"I was able to read several plays," Esbjornson explained. "Tower" struck me as a play that had really fascinating ideas in it, and that I felt I could somehow offer my services as a director to its development."

Esbjornson's directing credits include work with Manhattan Theater Club, Second Stage, W.T.A. and EST, all in New York.

A second play, "War Boys," by UI grad student and Discovery Award-winner Naomi Wallace, will be directed by Bryna Wortman, also a New York professional director. Wortman's credits include "Little Victories" with Linda Hunt and Jimmy Smits, "Night, Mother," "Othello," "The Cherry Orchard," and many others.

Both directors have received NEA grants for theater work.

Why put a successful New York directing career on hold to work with college students in Iowa?

Esbjornson said that he's here because of the quality of the UI Playwrights Workshop. "When I got the scripts and I was able to read the choices of material I was absolutely amazed at the quality of the writing. Not just for students, but for anybody. The range was amazing; they were some of the best new plays I've read in a long time, and it would have been a privilege to work on any of them. When you're confronted with three or four of these and they're all coming from the same place, you know something good is going on," he said.

Wortman echoes his opinions. She said that her experience as a guest reader at last year's festival impressed her enough to make her want to return.

"I was struck by the quality of the students here, their commitment, their energy, the challenge of the program," Wortman said. "I think the faculty is very qualified, very warm and encouraging of the students. There's a burgeoning energy here that's very exciting."

The directors' visit, funded by a gift from UI theatre arts alumni Barry and Maggie Kemp, is being coordinated by Morgan Jenness, professional play doctor (and self-styled "theater meddler and opinion-monger"). Jenness is also teaching workshops and doing playwrighting critiques as part of the Playwrights Festival.

"It's a big chunk of time, six weeks out of a professional schedule," said Jenness. "But I do it because I think the writing program here is probably the best theatrical writing program in the country. And I know Yale and NYU. This is not just another school. I wouldn't go around to just any university; it's not my thing. There's something special happening here."

The Iowa Playwrights Festival runs May 4-9. All events are open to the public.

Hit 'Hotel' brings back Hollywood high times

Broadway baby Tommy Tune's award-winning musical "Grand Hotel" brings us back to the glamour and decadence of pre-World War II Berlin and the hijinks of the rich and infamous.

Robert Fuhrmann
Daily Iowan

Scandal, romance and intrigue arrive in Iowa City tonight in the form of Tommy Tune's "Grand Hotel." The award-winning Broadway hit will be performed at Hancher Auditorium tonight at 8 and Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Based on the 1929 best-selling novel by Vicki Baum and the 1932 MGM version starring Greta Garbo and the Barrymore boys, "Grand Hotel" is set in Berlin during the twilight of the Weimar Republic, in the elegant hotel where music and dancing never stop and nor does the dizzying dance of life. "People come and go," the narrator announces as the show sweeps into the lobby of the Grand Hotel, where lives converge, connect and collide. The constantly shifting and intertwining imagery of "Grand Hotel" introduces an aging ballerina, her star-struck confidante, a threadbare baron, a dying bookkeeper, a wheeler-dealer businessman, a drug-addicted doctor and the hotel staff — people whose stories unfold amid the swirl of tangos, fox trots, Charlestons and boleros. As fortunes are made, jewels are stolen, hearts are won and lives are lost, the music continues, the dance goes on and the revolving doors of the Grand Hotel spin and spin.

The silken glamour and torrid romance of an MGM musical sweeps onto the Hancher Auditorium stage this weekend when Tommy Tune's Broadway hit, "Grand Hotel," comes to Iowa City.

On Broadway, "Grand Hotel" garnered five Tony Awards, including recognition for Tommy Tune in the best direction and best choreography categories. Frank Rich wrote in The New York Times, "Tommy Tune may have the most extravagant imagination in the American musical theater right now, and there isn't a moment, or square inch of the stage space, that escapes its reach in 'Grand Hotel.'" Rex Reed called the show "one of the most haunting and mesmerizing two hours I've experienced in the theater in years. A work of impeccable timing and riveting self-assurance that explodes with life."

For choreographer Tommy Tune, "Grand Hotel" is merely one in a string of successes which have identified him as being among the most innovative on Broadway. Other hits have included "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," "Nine," "My One and Only," and "The Will Rogers Follies." Tune is the only person in the history of the Tony Awards to win in four different categories.

The international tour of "Grand Hotel" stars Liliane Montevecchi, who went from prima ballerina to MGM film star, appearing in "The Glass Slipper," with Fred Astaire in "Daddy Long Legs," with Marlon Brando in "The Young Lions," and with Elvis Presley in "King Creole." On Broadway, she won the Tony and the Drama Desk Award for "Nine" and was nominated for a Tony for her role in "Grand Hotel."

Additionally, the show features a wealth of award-winning artists, including playwright Luther Davis, songwriters Robert Wright, George Forrest and Maury Yeston, costume designer Santo Loquasto, and set designer Tony Walton.

Tickets for "Grand Hotel" are still available and range from $29 to $34, and UI students qualify for a 20 percent discount. For one lucky Hancher couple the ticket will also offer a getaway at the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island, Mich. The drawing after Sunday's 8 p.m. performance will select the recipient of the two-night stay in the luxurious hotel.

Dash's "Daughters" — Vanguard black female filmmaker Julie Dash's first feature film, "Daughters of the Dust," has been widely lauded as one of the first works to successfully bring the lives of strong and proud African-American women to the screen. "Daughters" revolves around the Peazants, a turn-of-the-century Gullah family from the Sea Islands off the South Carolina-Georgia coast. Dash paints the picture of their lives with an Afrocentric visual style, a non-linear narrative evocative of the West African storyteller, and an acute ear for the Geechee dialect. "Daughters" plays at the Bijou Saturday through Monday.

Gene Wolfe reads of rabbits tonight at Prairie Lights

Shayla M. Thiel
Daily Iowan

Award-winning author Gene Wolfe's fantastical potpourri of fiction, "Storeys From The Old Hotel," combines an eccentric mix of science fiction, humor and social criticism.

Wolfe's language is placidly charming throughout the collection of short stories. His prose flows gently and his vivid imagery makes his ridiculous jade rabbits and apparitions of professors seem not only possibilities, but concrete realities. An odd sense of humor, varying from cynicism to intellectual silliness, prevails in several stories; Wolfe even manages to mention his own name lest a reader forget the book's mastermind.

"Storeys" won the World Fantasy Award for Best Collection of the Year for 1991, and Wolfe has also been acclaimed for his four-volume masterpiece, "The Book of New Sun." Wolfe's latest eclectic assemblage is not only for fantasy and sci-fi lovers, but anyone looking for an occasional escape.

Gene Wolfe will read from "Storeys From The Old Hotel" tonight at 8 at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. The reading will be broadcast on "Live from Prairie Lights" on WSUI (AM 910) and WOI (AM 640).

THEATER

Nothing is hidden in IC's 'Best of Shame'

Tasha Robinson
Daily Iowan

Where else could you see a monologue on breasts, a takeoff of "Long Day's Journey Into Night," a yeti hunt, the incomparable Rich Kurshner, and an entire town worshipping a semi-sociopathic Wandering Man — all in one evening?

"The Best of No Shame," a selection of the most diverse, interesting and popular works to come out of the UI's late-night theater forum this semester, will be presented this Friday night at 11 in Mabie Theatre. Admission is $2.

"We're the only forum that I know of where the audience provides its own entertainment," explained Doug Dawson, No Shame's general manager. There is no regular No Shame cast; during the normal season anyone and everyone is invited to submit typed scripts at 10:30 p.m. — and perform at 11.

"Best Of" is always a popular event, as regular attendees get to see some of their favorite pieces reworked, people who haven't been attending get a glimpse of the best stuff they've missed, and virgins get an overview of what No Shame's about.

"Over the past seven years, No Shame has been in a constant state of evolution, and that's always reflected in the 'Best Of' performance," said Dawson. "There's a lot of comedy being done, and still a good balance of people who are challenging the theatrical realm, working on a personal level to find out exactly what the theater art is for them."

The money raised by No Shame and "Best Of" attendance fees goes toward a variety of causes, including rent for Theatre B, a donation to a faculty member who lost all possessions in a fire, and numerous contributions to local theater, such as this semester's sign language interpreters for the "Reckless" production.

Dawson explained: "People have been good to us for the last seven years, and now it's nice to have the resources to turn around and do something good for the community, especially with funding for the arts the way it is in America today. You want to pat yourself on the back when you're able to say we're here as artists, helping things grow — but this is all kind of heavy. Let's

Michael Williams/Daily Iowan

Carolyn Space Jacobson has a close encounter with Clint Corley's in-seam in John C. Luxton's "House of Mother" at No Shame last Friday. ("House" will not be featured in the "Best Of No Shame" program.)

not forget that No Shame had its beginnings in the back of a truck. No Shame did in fact start in 1986 in the back of Todd Ristau's pickup truck, lit by a motorcycle headlight. Ristau, now head of the Midwest Center for Developing Artists, considered No Shame a forum for original, innovative material that might not be presentable in more conventional theater forums.

Now held every Friday night in Theatre B of the Theatre Building, No Shame is still dedicated to unconventionality. There is no censoring of content; the only real rules are that pieces must be original work, should be three to five minutes long, and shouldn't destroy the stage. (Writers have been temporarily banned for pieces involving powdered sugar, cream pies, fluorescent paint, and other materials that damaged the space.)

Carolyn Space Jacobson, a regular performer probably best known for her long-running series of "Aggressive Women's Theater" monologues, has a piece featured in "Best Of" this semester.

"I'm an English major, and No Shame actually gave me an opportunity to stand up and get responses to things I wrote for class and never got responses to," Jacobson explained. "I had never performed in my life, but then I was able to get up and do something at No Shame."

"I just love the fact that I can come up with an idea for something, and even if it's not something I'd normally do, I can go in and try it out on the stage. As a writer, that gives you a great sense of freedom. And as an audience member, it's somewhere I can go and never know what to expect," she said.

BANDS

Hakkenkraks pack power-pop punch

John Kenyon
Daily Iowan

The Hakkenkraks are coming, but there is no cause for alarm.

No, it's not an invading force from some faraway land; it's a great new local band, and they are coming to Gabe's Oasis.

As for the obvious question, they took their name from the Dr. Seuss book Oh, The Places You'll Go. As for the music, think of some well-crafted Midwestern guitar-powered rock and you won't be too far off the mark.

The band is made up of Iowa City music veterans Marc Kisting and Alan Hennagir, both on guitar and vocals, Matt Nalbach on bass and Ken Sumka on drums. Their previous experience gives them a tighter and more focused sound than most new bands can offer.

They have played in and around

Iowa City, and hope to play as much as possible this summer.

"We would like to play more places, and maybe even headline sometime this summer," Sumka said.

The band has worked up about 15 originals, which range from full-out rockers in a Soul Asylum/Uncle Tupelo mold to pure power-pop. The diversity of styles and skilled playing keep them from being pigeonholed as just another college rock band.

"People say they have a hard time comparing us to any one band, and we take that as a compliment," Sumka said.

They will have a track on the upcoming Iowa Compilation IV called "Downtime," a melodic burst of power chords and earnest vocals that serves as a good introduction to the band's sound. Well, sort of.

No hacks here: Iowa City's The Hakkenkraks are going places — namely, Gabe's Oasis Saturday night, opening for Head Candy and The Luck of Eden Hall. (From left: Alan Hennagir, Ken Sumka, Marc Kisting and Matt Nalbach.)

"That song is as un-representative of our songs as any other," Sumka said. "We think that each one has a real distinct sound."

They are one of a handful of two-guitar bands that actually take advantage of the situation, hooking listeners with a great song base as well as inventive leads. The vocals go above and beyond as well, with great harmonies on the choruses.

The band is committed for the long haul, and is waiting to see how things go over the next few months.

"How people react to the band will determine the length of our stay," Sumka said. "But we are just happy to play around now and build up a good fan base."

The Hakkenkraks will be performing with Iowa City's Head Candy and Chicago's The Luck of Eden Hall Saturday at Gabe's Oasis, 33 E. Washington St. Doors open at 8 p.m.
