Sales tax decision expected soon

Mike Glover / Daily Iowan

DES MOINES — Consumers won't know until Friday whether they will have to pay an extra 1 percent state sales tax in Iowa.

Though the Terry Branstad says he wants to take the issue to a vote of the people, it is not clear whether the governor will make a decision in the next few days.

According to the Iowa Finance Authority, sales tax would increase the state's budget by about $2 billion over the next five years.

The bill would increase the tax as the state's economy grows, said Branstad. The new tax would be needed to fund a "smooth transition."

"I think it's not viewed in the same light as for all UI students. Many times students don't see their actions as cheating, whereas other students do. It depends on how strict the instructor is," said Laban.

"I think most people would agree, especially with things like cheatin', cheating. They don't think that things like that are forms of cheating," she added.

Another problem associated with cheating issues when a student witness witnessing cheating, but not reporting the behavior to the instructor. The supervisor's report said that the "suspect" who was found cheating was not identified by the suspect.

"I think when someone else is caught cheating, they don't want to do anything to get themselves in trouble," said Laban.

"If you see someone cheating, you don't want to report it to the instructor. They're afraid of not getting caught," she said.

"I don't think that's true," said Laban. "I think it's pretty easy to cheat. And if you think about it, how the instructor's going to know if you cheated or didn't, if you're cheating, it's not a problem."

Estonian psychologist speaks about freedom

Susan Kreimer

July 10

After gaining independence from the former Soviet Union in 1991, 7 million Estonians are free to make their own choices. Freedom from authoritarian rule has meant a new social contract among citizens, with new organizations, and a new sense of personal power to create new visions. In an essay in The Atlantic, Kathleen Kelly Jones has said that the 74-year-old Yelena Golubenko at the Tallinn University in Tallinn, Estonia, who has spent the last 15 years studying the question of freedom.

LOCAL RACISM

A single incident often symbolizes deeper social ill. Such an incident was the Rodney King beating by the Los Angeles Police force on March 3, 1991. The beating, caught on videotape by a passer-by, was seen as a symbol of the racism that is still prevalent in America.

Assumptions of racism

Now that everyone has had his sensitivity opinions over the Rodney King trial verdict, let us try to look at what happened and what it means. There have been three major incidents to consider. One is the judge, believed that the cops were not excessively violent. The jury did what it was supposed to do. It looked at all the evidence and made a decision. It could not find the cops guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. The verdict was unjust but our justice system is not a popularity contest. The jury did what it thought was right.

evidence and made a decision. It could not find the cops guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. The verdict was unjust but our justice system is not a popularity contest.

In my judgment, Weins called it Weins. I don't know.
There has been absolutely no evidence presented that any of those jurors harbored any racist feelings at all. For all we know, it is possible that jurors were biased in some manner that was not black and white.

There is a great deal of racism in American society. But when we base our judgment on the words of one man or one juror, we are making a mistake. The jury was supposed to hear all the evidence and make a decision.

Younger women do not benefit from mammograms clearly save lives after age 50. But below that age, the evidence is murky. In fact, lack might actually do more harm than good, according to a controversial study that assessed the impact of screening mammography on breast cancer deaths. The Canadian study, which has been the subject of much scrutiny, highlighted the uncertainty over age 50, where women are expected to start getting mammograms to detect breast cancer.

"If you're under 50, you don't benefit," said Dr. Gerald F. Feldman, the study's lead author and a professor at the University of Texas in Dallas. BLOOMFIELD, N.J. — Chad Daly was in no mood to discuss the possibility of leaving the Nets, and his exit was no more talked about than the news conference he attended Monday that meeting his new boss.

Daly, at a news conference this afternoon, seemed more interested in the words of his boss than in words of his own.

"I'm not going to talk about that," Daly said.

"I'm going to talk about what I'm going to do, not what I'm not going to do," Daly added.

Daly, who has been a part of the Nets since 1987, said Monday that he had decided to move to the Nets for a variety of reasons.

"I've been here for a long time," Daly said.

"And I've never been happy with the way things have gone." Daly said he was going to try his hand at another job, as a general manager for a minor league team.

5 p.m. “Trapped Daylight” by Sharon Senior

“Trapped Daylight” is a memory, a memory preserved over years. A memory of a lost child, a memory of a lost girl who was taken away from her parents. It is a memory that haunts her past, something that she has never been able to forget. It is a memory that has left a deep scar on her heart and soul.

“Trapped Daylight” is different in that it is a play about memory, about the way memories can shape our lives and our actions. It is a play that explores the power of memory and how it can affect our decisions and our relationships.

What should people come out of the play with?

“It’s part photo story, part psychological, and it shows the fragility of the protagonist’s mind,” Prell explained.

“I created one of Sharma’s plays in the 1920s, and this work is in many ways a response to that play,” he said. “This play is a response to the idea of memory and the way it is used to create stories. It is a story about the power of memory to shape our lives and our actions.”

The play opens at 8 p.m. and continues nightly until May 18.

Days of stress, dreams of an ideal companion

Mandy Crane

Oh, there you are. I thought you were just a dream. Who do you feel so good about? You look so... well, you look wonderful. Final words of this... How are your precautions coming along? That had, huh? You know, there's often six dogs and let me tell you, you're a very wonderful man. Now, come on, it's time to... I won't delay that paper any more than you already are.

Mandy, I'm sorry. I didn't want to make you more upset. Now sit down in the good chair. You're working much harder than I thought. Take a deep breath.

Oh, no where do I do. Take a deep breath, just breathe. I breathe in air that the sky is full of beauty. I breathe out the absurdity of this world. Happy. I live in the free, open world. I feel so good.

I make you these. Can I have them? They sit good for you.

You look 10 years better than you've ever been. Do you feel better? Glad, I knew you'd have a good day. OK? You're looking so healthy. That's really great.

It's going to be hard to live, but... I'm doing just fine. I'll get you a new one.
