Bush expresses hope for city's restoration

Rita Rehrig
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Bush walked the streets of Los Angeles (see Thursday, expressing hope at the dedication of a housing project and assurances of a bright future for the city. But he declared, in a voice shaky and broken, that the violence was "not going to recover. This is a great test of this city."

Bush said video images of the violence that raged Thursday night will be published. But the president also offered hope. In a speech to an interdenominational congregation in Los Angeles, he praised the city's 'healing has begun' and said it would serve as a model for the rest of the country. "We are endeavored by [the president's] presence," he said, "to present us with a chance to work together and to make this great city work for this great country..."

Los Angeles comes back to life, Bush said, "a community that was going to recover. And this is a city."

Female feminist author speaks at UC in debates

Joyce Bayles

BROOKLYN, N.Y. (AP) — A female feminist and cultural critic came to Brooklyn College to challenge the concept of "the man" and to propose a new system of power relationships. "We need new social arrangements to bring people together and to create a new consciousness of power," said Joyce Bayles, a professor at Brooklyn College. "We need a new system of power relationships based on mutual respect and equality."

Bayles spoke to a packed auditorium and discussed the idea of "the man" as a concept that has been used to deny women their rights and to perpetuate inequalities. "We need to abandon the idea of 'the man' and replace it with a new system of power relationships that is based on mutual respect and equality," she said.

Researchers say they can now administer drugs that act on dopamine-secreting neurons in the brain to treat Parkinson's disease. The team, led by Dr. John Shire at the University of Massachusetts Medical School, has found that the drugs can stimulate the human brain to repair damaged neurons and that this could lead to new treatments for the disease.

Former Nixon aide disputes Perot's 'outsider' status

John Solomon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Nixon White House orderly Howard Perot remembers times when he did not know from day to day whether he would be continuing to work at the White House.

"I was a political outsider," Perot said.

The documents that detail Perot's interactions with the Nixon White House are now available for scrutiny at the National Archives. The documents show that Perot was a political outsider, with a way to move in and out of the White House as he pleased.

"He never paid much attention to the New York Times, but he knew how to play every instrument at that desk." - Colson Colson, a Nixon White House aide who later became a White House adviser, says the image of Perot as an outsider is "nonsense." He continues that he was the ultimate insider.

Perot eventually left the Nixon White House to start his own business.

"We must pay for the things we want," - Perot

Perot, who founded computer giant Electronic Data Systems Corp., parlayed that offer into access, influence and sometimes had contact with the White House.

"I don't know why I was so successful," Perot said.

"I sometimes intervened with government officials," Perot said, "but I didn't know what people said or did."

Mexican hospital releases birth of world's 1st test-tube baby

MEXICO CITY (AP) - A hospital in Mexico City delivered the world's 1st test-tube baby Monday, according to a newspaper reported Thursday.

The baby was born at the Iztacalco Maternal Hospital in Mexico City to 27-year-old Maria de los Angeles Chavez. But her baby is not the only one in the world to be born from in-vitro fertilization.

Poland stops abortions under new medical ethics code

WARSZAWA, Poland (AP) - Some hospitals and clinics stopped performing abortions Monday under a new medical ethics code that gives church leaders a say in determining when abortions are legal.

Although abortion is still legal, doctors who perform the procedure risk being deprived of their licenses, The Congress of Physicians, representing Poland's 80,000 doctors, announced its approval of a code to forbid abortion except to save a woman's life or when the pregnancy resulted from rape.

Doctors violating the code can be brought before a professional panel and deprived of the right to practice medicine.

The new code contains Poland's 1956 law that permits abortion on demand. Up to 50,000 women a year have used this law to end pregnancies.

Justice has words for defense-poor Lemke after loss

Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves' Mike Lemke was anything but complimentary to the Pirates defense after losing to the Pittsburgh Pirates, 9-7, Tuesday night.

"It's his ball until the outfielder catches it," Justice said. "I thought he was going to make Ken Griffey Jr. look like a slugger.

Justice froze. The ball fell. The Pirates never gave much chase. "The world that ball would fall right there ," Justice said. "Don't think they were going to chase it for the life of me."

Justice didn't want to talk about it anymore and dropped his argument. But the Braves weren't done dropping for balls.

Justice was still talking when the first fisted ball went by wasn't an easy. Lemke dropped another in the 15th, but that error didn't beat the Braves.

Kevin Mitchell, who enjoyed as a defensive replacement in the seventh, backed up on the ball, right fielder Dave Justice tented in for it. Either could have caught it. Neither did.

"That's the break," Pirates' manager Bobby Cox said. "Don't think that was the first time in the world that ball would fall in there, I know he got a 47 home run single he won't soon forget.

Between innings, an angry Justice trudged through the Pirate dugout and walked away, refusing to comment on the Pirates defense.

"I'll take the loss," Lemke said. "Blame me.

"I've been having a tough time here. I've heard him, too."

People to give up on. I'm all season - and the Mariners',

Seattle lost Wednesday night's game, 4-3. at Candlestick Park, now with Toronto, offered Mitchell advice.

"Keep it up on yourself," Mal-

dindo said.

Mitchell's frustration finally ended Wednesday night when he hit his first American League home run -- 21 runs and 91 hits into his first season in Seattle.

After hitting of the fourth inning with a run aboard, Mitchell roped over the right-field stops the ball to the Braves' Jimmy Key. Mitchell missed a standing ovation from the crowd of 12,771.

"Keep it up on yourself," Mal-
dindo said.

Mitchell has been having a tough time. He's heard all the time and stuff. I just don't want people to give up on me," Mitchell said.

Kevin Mitchell is expected to start at right field over the Braves' Bill Swift. Mike Jackson and Dave Burns, it was repeated. Maybe he was expected to be a leadoff batter for the Mariners.

Instead, because Swift is 6-0 with a 2.94 ERA and Mitchell has struggled at the plate for Seattle, the Gorman hasn't been played.

Mitchell wishes he could make up, but he hopes to turn around.

Saturday’s schedule of Iowa Playwrights Festival is packed tight. At 1 p.m., Cawas Reading Ellen Goodman’s “Mind Reader.” The festival offers workshops by local playwrights, along with readings of plays in progress.

Afternoon programming includes a reading of “House of Wonders” by Kai Aspergins. Aspergins, a native of Alaska, will start recording what became “Cute Drummer Alert,” a song about her great-grandmother’s house in Alaska. The song was influenced by a Native American woman who was a “house of wonders” in the heart of the community.

The reading will be followed by a discussion of the play’s themes and its impact on the local community. The discussion will be moderated by a local playwright, and will feature panelists from the Iowa Playwrights Festival and local community leaders.

Tuesday, April 26, 2022

The Iowa Playwrights Festival is a multi-day event that brings together playwrights, actors, directors, and audiences from around the state. The festival features readings, workshops, and panel discussions on a variety of topics related to playwriting. The festival is held annually in Iowa City, and is organized by the Iowa City Public Library and the Iowa Arts Council.

The 2022 festival will feature a diverse range of works from local and national playwrights, including plays that explore themes of identity, race, gender, and social justice. The festival will also feature a special reading of “House of Wonders,” a play by Kai Aspergins that explores the history and legacy of the Alaskan home.

Tickets are available for purchase in advance, and will be available at the door on the day of the event. For more information, visit the Iowa Playwrights Festival website or call 319-353-1800.

So just what goes on in the secret universe of The Daily Iowan, newest and most important student newspaper on the Iowa City campus? This past semester, a dedicated staff struggled to bring to you the most important stories, so let's take a peek behind the inner sanctum!

NOON—Staff and editors wake up and post the front page of the paper to the wall. Their goal is to produce a newspaper that is informative, insightful and entertaining. As the clock ticks, staff members work together to ensure that each article is well-written, researched and fact-checked.

1 p.m.—Break for lunch. The staff is determined to be professional, and they dress accordingly. After lunch, they return to the newsroom, where they compile and edit stories for the upcoming edition.

3 p.m.—Call SCOPE—The Daily Iowan's new 24-hour hotline for news tips. Most of the time, the hotline is used for emergency news, such as accidents or crime scenes. The hotline is open from 2 to 7 p.m. on weekdays.

5 p.m.—Call SCOPE again. This is the time when the staff begins to think about the next day's newspaper. They brainstorm ideas, organize stories and plan the layout.

8 p.m.—The staff meets in the newsroom to discuss the day's events and plan the next day's newspaper.

9 p.m.—The staff goes home and dreams about the next day's newspaper.
