IC youth center hit

An 11-year-old girl was listed in critical condition Tuesday night at the UI Hospitals and Clinics after she was hit by a car while riding her bicycle.

At 3:36 p.m., Mary Ann Prohaska, 124 Hilltop Trailer Court, rode into the path of a car driven by Darin Hirl of Solon, Iowa. The accident occurred at the intersection of Park Avenue and Keokuk Street.

Prohaska sustained head, neck and torso injuries and was in critical condition at press time.

The accident is under investigation, according to a police spokesman.

IC Public Library announces new hours

The Iowa City Public Library will now be open on Mondays through Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Fridays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The library will establish its Sunday hours of 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. the weekend after Labor Day and will remain open seven days a week until Memorial Day 1993.

The library also will resume the designing of displays and restore special programming, such as book discussions, for its patrons.

Tremors continue in Southern California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After-shocks of two major earthquakes rumbled across Southern California on Tuesday as damage estimates rose to $91 million. Scientists warned people to brace for more jolts, possibly including the dreaded "Big One."

Such a quake, measuring 7.5 to 8.3 in magnitude, could kill up to 14,000 people and injure 55,000 if it reached 8.3, according to a decade-old federal estimate.

Philippine president's term begins with problems

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Fidel Ramos began his presidency Tuesday with an overtone to rebels from the left and right. Communist rebels said they were willing to talk but not to lay down their arms.

Ramos, a 64-year-old West Point graduate and former defense secretary, took the presidential oath at noon. It was the first peaceful transfer of power since the late President Ferdinand Marcos was elected 26 years ago.

"I call on our dutiful soldiers and radical insurgents to give up their armed struggle," Ramos said in his inaugural address.

No more serenades in Mexico City suburb

MEXICO CITY, Mexico (AP) — Love will speak quietly in Huixquilucan — or else.

Officials in the Mexico City suburb decreed that lovers' serenades, a cherished Mexican custom, are punishable by up to 36 hours in the local jail, the daily El Universal reported Monday.

The ban was imposed after the local government received complaints that Huixquilucan's lovers were keeping their less romantic townfolk awake late at night with serenades, the newspaper reported.

Sarajevo finally receives aid

Terry Leonard
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — International moves to end carnage and hunger in Sarajevo gathered momentum Tuesday, as France and the United States signaled they were ready back up relief efforts with military muscle.

As four planes landed with food and medicine at Sarajevo airport, the United States said it was ready to put U.S. combat air patrols over Yugoslavia to protect the relief mission. France said it would dispatch 120 soldiers to reinforce U.N. troops at the airport.

After three months of Serb artillery pounding of Sarajevo, the announcements appeared to mark a major commitment by the West to lift the siege of the city and its 300,000 citizens.

After a dramatic visit to Sarajevo by French President Francois Mitterrand on Sunday, Serb irregulars pulled out of the airport Monday. The first relief flight arrived a few hours later after the United Nations flag was raised above the tarmac.

Three U.N. soldiers were slightly wounded Tuesday when a stray bullet, apparently fired from a Muslim position near the airport, pierced a seam in their armored vehicle. The wounds suffered by the Canadian, Swedish and Kenyan soldiers were described as superficial.

About 840 Canadian peacekeepers were on their way to Sarajevo to bolster the current 80-member force.

Bosnian officials say at least 7,440 people have been killed in fighting that broke out after the former Yugoslav republic's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence Feb. 29.

Bosnian Serbs boycotted the vote and with the help of the Serb-dominated Yugoslav army, have seized two-thirds of Bosnia.

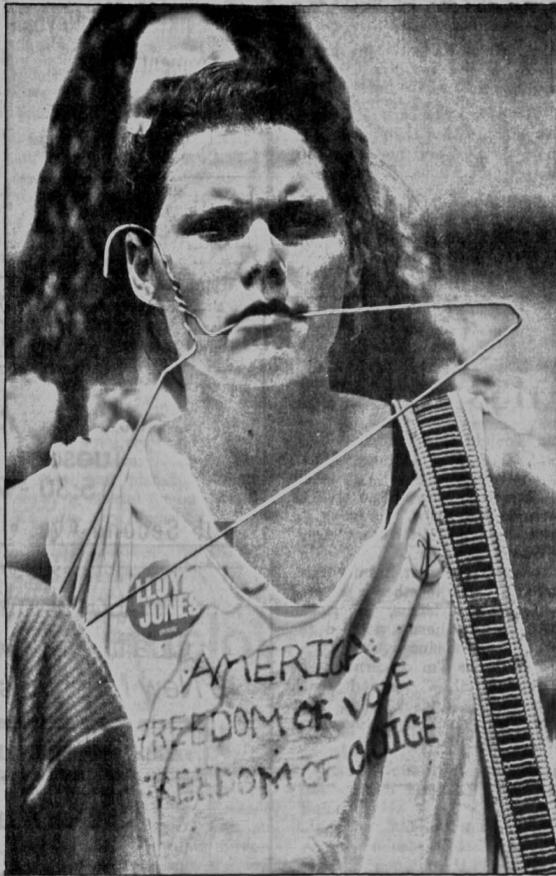

But the Serbs recently have had a string of defeats, particularly in the republic's western region. That and Serb perceptions of growing sentiment for foreign military involvement contributed to the fruition of U.N. efforts to take control of the airport.

Internal pressure also has been mounting on Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

Maj. Gen. Lewis Mackenzie does paperwork behind an armored personnel carrier on the tarmac of the Sarajevo airport last weekend.

Ruling affects young, poor

Abortion rights advocates fear the decision will drive women to seek illegal aid, while opponents call such claims 'overstated.'

James H. Rubin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's new abortion ruling could make it more expensive and time-consuming for women to end their pregnancies and could also make things tougher for teen-agers afraid to tell their parents.

Abortion rights activists said Tuesday that the ruling would thus penalize poor women and perhaps drive thousands of teen-agers away from clinics that provide legal and safe abortions. But abortion foes called such claims of financial and other barriers "completely overstated."

The justices voted 5-4 on Monday to uphold the right to abortion the court established in 1973 in its Roe vs. Wade decision. But they permitted states to restrict abortions in new ways.

They upheld Pennsylvania restrictions that impose a 24-hour waiting period for women; force most teen-agers to get parental consent or judicial permission for abortions and require doctors to keep detailed records on abortions they perform.

Also upheld was an informed-consent rule that a woman seeking an abortion must be told by a doctor about fetal development and alternatives to ending her pregnancy.

Supporters of abortion rights said that while the regulations may not seem severe, they could have a dramatic impact on many women's access to abortions.

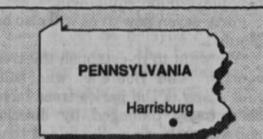

For example, clinics will have to pay more to doctors to comply with the waiting period and informed-consent measures, which require two visits to a doctor rather than one and perhaps more consultation time. Such costs will be passed on to the patients, many of whom find it hard now to afford abortions.

The average cost for an abortion at a clinic during the first three months of pregnancy was $245 in 1989, according to the latest figures provided by the Alan Guttmacher Institute, an affiliate of Planned Parenthood.

The institute also said most women who get abortions are unmarried, and that about one-fourth are teen-agers. About 1.5 million legal abortions are performed each year.

The 24-hour waiting period will mean women will have to make an extra trip to have an abortion. And "one day does make a difference," said Dr. Cathy Dratman, medical director of Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania.

Jane Johnson of Planned Parenthood said the waiting period could turn out to be a week's delay for some women at clinics that perform abortions only once or twice a week.

UPHELD

Supreme Court upheld the following provisions in the Pennsylvania law on abortion:

- Women must be told about fetal development and alternatives to ending pregnancies.
- Waiting period of 24 hours after receiving information.
- Doctors must keep records on each abortion performed, subject to public disclosure.
- Unmarried females under 18 need consent of one parent or permission of a state judge.

HEALTH-CARE FRAUD

FBI makes arrests in 50 cities

W. Dale Nelson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Law enforcement officers raided pharmacies and other businesses in more than 50 cities Tuesday in a crackdown on health-care fraud. The FBI said about 100 people were arrested and properties worth tens of millions of dollars were seized.

Among those arrested were 82 druggists and a physician, the bureau said.

FBI Director William Sessions said more than 1,000 FBI agents executed federal warrants to seize homes, financial accounts and other properties that allegedly were acquired with criminal gains.

"This represents the most significant step to date in our long-term commitment to target health-care fraud and those who are responsible for this epidemic of fraud and abuse," Sessions said.

He said the crimes involved illegal diversion of non-narcotic prescription drugs and fraudulent billing by pharmacies.

"Criminal charges have been brought against pharmacists, pharmacies, other business entities and individuals based on investigations conducted by 16 different FBI field offices," he said.

Justice Department spokesman Paul McNulty told reporters that the two-year operation was resulting in 109 arrests, 198 separate charges against individuals and firms, 110 search warrants in 16 federal court districts.

He said the work was centered in New York City, Chicago, Ill., and Atlanta, Ga.

The physician was Dr. Robert E. Sylvester, 45, of Fairfax, S.C., a specialist in osteopathy, who was charged with filing false Medicare statements and obtaining controlled substances by fraud. Sylvester's telephone was busy when a reporter tried to reach him.

Individuals are being charged with fraud and conspiracy offenses carrying prison terms of five to 15 years and fines of up to $250,000, Sessions said.

Grave of POW found

Associated Press

MOSCOW, Russia — The grave of an American prisoner of war has been found in southern Russia, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported Tuesday.

The man was identified as Francesco Luigi Di Bartolomeo and his body is in grave No. 22 of the Kirsanov Cemetery near Tambov, a city 260 miles south of Moscow, the agency said.

It was not immediately known which war he fought in or on what side, when he died or why he was taken to the Tambov region. ITAR-Tass said more than 23,000 POWs of various nationalities were kept in Soviet labor camps in that area over the years.

The search for American POWs intensified in Russia following a statement by President Boris Yeltsin that captured U.S. servicemen might still be alive on Russian soil.

But President Bush's special envoy on the question, Malcolm Toon, a former ambassador to the Soviet Union, said Tuesday that the search so far had come up empty.

SMOKING BAN

UI policy delayed to ensure campuswide notification

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

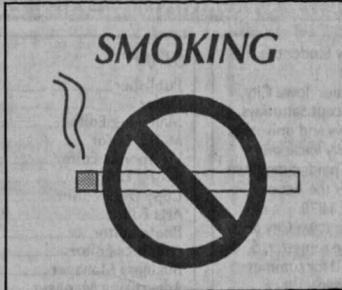

UI faculty and students have received an extension of their smoking privileges until the opening of fall classes on Aug. 24, when the campuswide ban on smoking, originally slated to begin on July 1, will officially go into effect.

"The ban was postponed so we'd have a chance to let everybody know about the ban and what it involves," said Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations.

The smoking ban is the result of the findings of a university task force of faculty and students formed by UI President Hunter Rawlings in early 1991.

The task force reviewed the existing university policies and their effectiveness, and found them too general.

In a report released in May 1991, it was revealed that designated smoking areas were not adequately ventilated to protect non-smokers. It also found that faculty and staff rules applying to smoking in private offices were inequitable and unenforced, and that the university had an obligation to promote good health within the campus community.

Rhodes said reactions have been "overwhelmingly in support" of the policy change, which will eliminate smoking in all UI buildings and offices, as well as in university-owned vehicles.

The only foreseeable resistance Rhodes anticipates may come from smokers with private offices. A committee will be formed before classes begin to consider requests for exceptions to the smoke-free policy.

Students living in dormitories, family housing, and university rental property will be exempt from the ban for the coming school year, because contracts have already been signed.

However, Director of UI Residence Services George Droll noted that only 3 percent of students applying for rooms in the residence halls were categorized as smokers.

Droll added that students will only be allowed to smoke in their rooms. All public areas, such as hallways and dining areas, will remain off limits to smokers.

University Librarian Sheila Creth sees the ban as a good idea which has been long desired by many library users.

"We've been asked every year by people to ban smoking in the library, but we didn't want to move ahead of the university," Creth said.

Creth added that smoke often gets out of the restricted smoking areas in the UI Main Library, which is irritating to non-smokers and harmful to valuable library materials.

In terms of enforcement, smokers shouldn't worry yet about being slapped with a fine every time they light a cigarette.

"We're relying on good faith and compliance," Rhodes said.

PROJECT GREEN

Volunteers to restore IC park to former glory

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan
This fall Iowa City will get a belated birthday present from Project Grow to Reach Environmental Excellence Now.

In September, Project GREEN plans to begin the renovation of College Green Park, the city's oldest park. The group volunteered to launch a fund-raising campaign in 1989 to honor the sesquicentennial of Iowa City.

"We identified the project as one we could do without public funding," said project coordinator Pat Boutelle, who added that the city had no plans to refurbish the 150-year-old park. "It's difficult for the city to do. If volunteer groups didn't do it, no one would."

Reducing the steep grades on the north and west sides of the park will be a major improvement, Boutelle said.

"Access to the park is kind of intimidating on those sides," she said. "You can't see if anyone's in there."

Other changes will include replacing the sidewalks, putting in new lighting fixtures, improving the basketball court, building a gazebo and installing a low, black, iron post-and-rail fence around the perimeter. A $17,500 gift from the Noon Optimist Club will purchase new playground equipment.

Forty-seven new trees will also be planted.

"We want to re-establish the tree canopy," said Boutelle, who said that many of the park's trees have been badly damaged by disease and strong storms. She added that there will still be an open area on

LEADER OF THE BAND

Retired Doc Severinsen doesn't miss a beat

The "Tonight Show" veteran plans to enjoy playing for longer than 15-second interludes.

David Germain
Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Doc Severinsen, guest conductor of the city orchestra, never complained during his 30-year run leading "The Tonight Show" band but said Tuesday he wouldn't have minded a little more playing time.

Playing brief interludes during commercial breaks wasn't always satisfying.

"If you're any kind of musician, you want people to hear more than 15 seconds of it," said Severinsen, who retired in May along with Johnny Carson. "A serious musician is going to say, 'Gee, I'd like to play a little more.'"

Severinsen, 64, was selected as principal pops conductor for the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra concert Tuesday night. He planned to play his trumpet during the show's first half and conduct the second half.

His repertoire for the show, at Lewiston's outdoor Artpark, includes Puccini arias, baroque cornet solos, music by Shostakovich and Andrew Lloyd Webber, and selections from John Williams' score from the movie "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial."

"The great thing about having Doc with us is that listeners will get to discover that, not only was he a great entertainer on 'The Tonight Show,' but that he always was an important musician," said Michael Tiknis, Buffalo orchestra director.

Severinsen remains in high demand and plans to tour with his old "Tonight Show" band. "I miss seeing the guys in the band every day," Severinsen said.

Next week, they appear on "The Arsenio Hall Show," the late-night talk show competitor to Jay Leno, Carson's successor.

Leno's band leader, Branford Marsalis, has put together a talented group of musicians, Severinsen said, but he hasn't watched the program much since retiring.

"As far as I'm concerned, 'The Tonight Show' ended with Johnny," Severinsen said. "They can call it 'The Tonight Show,' but it isn't, really."

MANHUNT

Clever convict continues to befuddle posse

Pila Martinez
Associated Press

GRAND CANYON VILLAGE, Ariz. — An escaped convict who has used survival tactics to stay free seven weeks kept a huge posse baffled Tuesday after stealing a car from picnickers in the state's biggest tourist attraction.

Federal and county officers searched cars leaving Grand Canyon National Park and mounted a ground and air search over hundreds of miles of forest and scrub south of the canyon for convicted robber Danny Ray Horning.

Horning has spent seven weeks in hiding in the northern Arizona wilderness, befuddling bloodhounds and taunting searchers with notes left in stolen cars and a burgled cabin.

Despite tips and rumors, there were no confirmed sightings of Horning on Tuesday, said Jim Tuck, spokesman for Grand Canyon National Park. A section of Kaibab National Forest south of the canyon was closed because of the search, he said.

Horning's mother, Dorothy, said he had been threatened in prison and was desperate.

"He doesn't want to go back because he's going to be killed there," Dorothy Horning said. "So it's either kill or be killed, is how I can see what he's thinking right now."

Horning, 33, had been serving four life terms for aggravated assault, kidnapping and armed robbery in a 1991 bank holdup in Winslow, where he lived as a youth. A warrant issued in Stockton, Calif., accuses him of a 1990 dismemberment slaying.

"He doesn't want to go back (to prison) because he's going to be killed there. So it's either kill or be killed, is how I can see what he's thinking right now."

Dorothy Horning, escaped convict's mother

He was last seen Monday night when he pointed a gun at an Oregon couple at the park's Buggeln picnic area and stole their 1978 station wagon, authorities said.

The few roads leading from the park were peppered with road-locks, and more than 200 searchers combed the rugged country from the canyon 70 miles south to Flagstaff.

Horning has employed an arsenal of tricks to baffle searchers since May 12, when he put on a medical lab coat and walked away from the state prison at Florence.

Dogs and helicopters failed to find him in the desert about the prison 50 miles southeast of Phoenix. Toting stolen pistols, he moved into the timber of the Mongollon Rim escarpment that marks the start of northern Arizona.

Trackers began to acknowledge grudging admiration for the "Rambo" tactics Horning learned during 11 months of Army reconnaissance work: backtracking in circles and figure-eights to confuse dogs, hiding in caves, traveling only in daylight to ensure he left no footprints.

Frustrated searchers trailed him through and around the mountain vacation towns of Payson and Pine, 70 miles northeast of Phoenix, sometimes clearing out campgrounds as a precaution.

Taunting notes that handwriting experts say were from Horning were found in a stolen pickup truck and a cabin.

Calling the truck owner, "Dear Bud," he wrote: "Thanks for the donation and the use of your truck."

FBI psychological experts popularized in the movie "Silence of the Lambs," are studying his record in hopes of guessing his next move, said James Ahearn, special agent in charge of the Phoenix office.

"Unfortunately, what we're waiting for is another incident," Ahearn acknowledged Monday.

Abandoning car and hostages, he fled into the woods, touching off a weekend manhunt that backed up traffic for hours and shut a prime scenic route overlooking the canyon, the eight-mile West Rim Drive.

News of the roadblock didn't keep tourists away.

ERA raises questions about bias

The amendment could equalize rates.

Eric Doderer
The Daily Iowan

Gender-biased insurance rates could be one of the things changed by this fall's vote on the Iowa Equal Rights Amendment, according to supporters and opponents. Exactly what effect the change will have, or if it will change anything has been a point of some debate.

According to Iowa legislator Minette Doderer, it is uncertain if the ERA would disallow gender-biased insurance rates in the state. "Sixteen states have the ERA," Doderer said. "Some of these states have gender-biased insurance and some of them do not."

Doderer said that the Supreme Court has already eliminated gender bias in employee-related insurance rates. She added that differences in rates by gender is still allowed in some areas.

Doderer said the difference must be a result of some factor other than just sex. An example would be that women demographically tend to have fewer automobile accidents and therefore have lower insurance rates.

"In some states it has been determined that there is a different percentage," Doderer said. "If there's a rational basis for this other than just sex then that's okay. But there must be a rational basis."

Currently in Iowa over 90 percent of insurance is not gender-biased. Students Opposed to ERA organizer Michael Clarke said gender-neutral insurance rates are going to be a disadvantage to women. He added insurance companies were just going to make women pay the same higher rate that men currently pay.

"Clearly the insurance companies are not going to lower the insurance rates to even things out," Clarke said. "This would just be a way to have women pay the same high rates as men. I know that women pay less on automotive, accident and life insurance."

Doderer said the insurance issue won't have much of an effect on anything, but the opposition to the ERA is just trying to associate it with other issues.

"It's all much ado about nothing," Doderer said. "They are trying to tie the ERA into everything in society."

Clarke said although insurance would not be a big issue, it was just another example of how the legal boundaries between men and women would be erased.

"I presently don't see it as a big issue," Clarke said of the insurance. "What they're trying to do is erase the line between the genders. They're very clear differences and erasing them legally is kind of contrived."

Court ruling draws fire from IC abortion rights advocates

Speakers called the decision a "devastating blow" for all women.

Nora Connell
The Daily Iowan

Nearly 250 concerned citizens marched from the Pentacrest to the Pedestrian Mall Tuesday at noon, to rally in protest of the recent Supreme Court decision upholding restrictions on abortion.

Demonstrators chanted, waved signs, and cheered as a succession of speakers stepped up to an open microphone on the Pedestrian Mall. Mary Manix, manager of the Iowa City Planned Parenthood Center, 2 S. Linn St., and Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., were among those who spoke.

"This is a devastating blow to women nationwide," said Manix. "Women in rural areas will travel hundreds of miles to a clinic only to be told to come back in 24 hours. Worse yet, young women may be forced to confront abusive parents with the issue of pregnancy," she said in reference to the court's approval of a 24-hour waiting period and parental consent as pre-conditions to abortion.

"Women should not be persecuted for their youth or their poverty," Manix said.

"(Women's) intelligences are being insulted by this ruling."

Gayle Sand

Sand was most concerned by the court's ruling on informed consent. Under the recently approved Pennsylvania law, she said, doctors are mandated to read a state document about fetal development and abortion alternatives to women patients seeking abortions.

"Women are not being trusted to make their own decisions. Their intelligences are being insulted by this ruling," Sand said. "It assumes women are making cavalier decisions about abortion. That is not the case. Women think long and hard about that decision."

Though a majority of the demonstrators were women, there was a wide range of ages evident in the crowd. Students, senior citizens and children participated in the rally.

"I have a granddaughter. I don't want to have to see or hear or think about her having to resort to the back alleys," said Arkela Revels of Detroit, Mich.

The court's decision came as no surprise to the campus group that organized the rally, Action For Abortion Rights. "We've been planning this event for about two months," said Margi Goldman, UI graduate student and chairwoman for AFAR.

Local floating-casino employees abandon sinking ships

Greg Smith
Associated Press

Employees on the Diamond Lady and Emerald Lady have decided to abandon ship and look for jobs elsewhere instead of staying on through Sunday, the last day the floating casinos will operate in Iowa waters.

The 600-passenger boats, which serve five Iowa communities along the Mississippi River, make up the fleet of Steamboat Development Corp., owned by Rock Island, Ill., native Bernard Goldstein. The Bettendorf company announced on May 27 it was moving its operations to Biloxi, Miss., and set July 5 as the final cruising day for the "Ladies" in Iowa.

"We're not planning on doing anything special for our last day. We are very understaffed right now," Steamboat spokeswoman Kim Merchant said Tuesday.

"Our employees have been finding jobs and we're glad of that. Those that are staying on until the end are working incredible hours right now," she said. "We have some employees working 60 to 80 hours a week."

The Diamond Lady, which services Bettendorf and Muscatine, employed about 400 people when it helped launch the nation's first riverboat gambling venture on April 1, 1991.

The Emerald Lady, which serves the southeast Iowa communities of Keokuk, Fort Madison and Burlington, employed about 311 people.

Merchant was not specific about how many employees have quit, saying only that "we're down considerably."

However, the reduced staffing "certainly isn't affecting our operation," she said.

"In fact, I took my family on a cruise Sunday... the operation is not affected at all. It's just people working more hours," Merchant said. "We still are serving our guests with the same hospitality and friendliness."

Meanwhile, an official of the Job Training Partnership Act said state officials are seeking an emergency grant to retrain people who worked for Steamboat. Dennis Hinkle, administrator of JTPA, said a grant totaling about $700,000 is being sought from the federal Department of Labor.

On Sunday, the Diamond Lady will be in Bettendorf and the Emerald Lady will be in Fort Madison. Each floating casino will offer three cruises beginning at 11:30 a.m., 3:30 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Steamboat has said the boats would leave for Mississippi on Monday, but Merchant said they could be delayed a day or so.

"We've got a lot of loading to do — desks, chairs, boxes, supplies that are in the offices — so I'm really not sure when exactly the boats will leave," she said.

The Emerald Lady's trip downriver could be delayed by a legal battle between the boat's owner and the city of Fort Madison. A federal judge has put the boat in the custody of the U.S. Marshal's Service pending a hearing Thursday on Fort Madison's claim that the city is owed $403,000 in dock fees.

Office staff that have jobs waiting for them in Biloxi will likely be leaving throughout next week, Merchant said.

Steamboat's departure leaves three Iowa boats plying the Mississippi River. They are the President in Davenport, owned by John Connelly of Pittsburgh, and the Dubuque Casino Belle and the Mississippi Belle II, both owned by Bob Kehl of Dubuque.

JOHNSON COUNTY

Unemployment rate low due to increased construction

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County's unemployment rate has continued to remain low this summer, as the local economy has been buoyed by increased hiring in the construction and service sectors, according to recently released data from the Iowa Department of Employment Services.

Construction added 300 new jobs in May to the Johnson County economy as that industry's seasonal expansion continued. While a portion of this increase is attributable to UI construction projects, some of it also comes from new home construction, according to local Job Service of Iowa Manager Tom Bullard.

"Around Iowa City the new home construction seems to be good," Bullard said.

Another 300 jobs were added in service industries and manufacturing of non-durable goods posted a small rise. Food stores and state government reported small decreases, but overall non-farm jobs increased by 500 in May.

The Johnson County unemployment rate was at 2.1 percent in May in comparison to a statewide figure of 5.1 percent and a nationwide rate of 7.5 percent. Johnson County's unemployment rate usually holds fairly constant

"You can kind of feel the sense that unemployment is low."

Marlo Higgins

around the 2 percent mark because of the area's generally strong and diversified economy.

The UI's large payroll and expenditures have served as a moderating cushion in the past to the ups and downs of the rest of the local economy.

"It does seem with Iowa City that whatever the university does seems to guide whatever retail and service does," Bullard said.

Bullard said he expects the unemployment situation will continue to improve in the coming months and into the fall as work on construction projects picks up with the approach of winter and students leave the economy to return to school, vacating positions for others.

"Usually August, September, and October are our best months as far as our job openings," he said.

Marlo Higgins, of Manpower Temporary Services' Iowa City office, agrees that an already strong local economy seems to be on a mild upswing.

"You can kind of feel the sense that unemployment is low," she said.

Higgins said she anticipates the fall will bring an increased demand for workers in the manufacturing sector as automakers begin to bring out their new models for the coming years.

"Our really big season is the fall," she said.

SUPREME COURT

Bring 'em home to the U.S.A.

In the movie "Patriot Games," there is a scene in which CIA commandos assault a base of the Irish Republican Army in the Libyan desert. The troops transported by helicopters, evidently undetected by enemy radars, quickly land and cause mayhem in the terrorist base, killing everyone in sight. Meanwhile, the CIA commanders watch the covert attack via spy satellite transmission. Fun to watch. Unless you are a member of the IRA, of course. And anyway, it's only a movie.

This scene could become a frightening reality, with much less violence, but quite legal. In a 6-3 ruling June 15, the Supreme Court said the U.S. government can kidnap people from a foreign country and prosecute them over that nation's objections, however strong those may be.

The danger of the decision lies not in the possibility that a kidnapping may happen, for that seems remote at this moment, but in the dangerous precedent it sets. Three of the Supreme Court justices dissented, calling the decision "monstrous." Just as Justice John Paul Stevens warned, the negative reaction of many countries could not have come any faster.

The ruling is related to the 1990 abduction from Mexico of Dr. Humberto Alvarez Machain, who used his medical skills to keep DEA agent Enrique Camarena alive while he was tortured in Mexico in 1985. Both Camarena and a DEA pilot were later killed.

The Supreme Court based its decision on analysis of the extradition treaty between the United States and Mexico. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had previously determined that the United States violated the treaty. Chief Justice William Rehnquist admitted that the kidnapping of Alvarez Machain may have violated international law principles, but as the treaty does not specify that extradition is the only way in which a country can gain custody of a citizen of the other nation, there was freedom to interpret the abduction of the Mexican physician as a "valid" solution.

When Secretary of State James Baker was interviewed on ABC two weeks ago, he assured that "foreign kidnapping" would not become a "routine procedure" and that the court had not passed on "international law." That may or not be true, but since the U.S. government wants to take action when a foreign court does not grant extradition or is simply slow to do it, how would it feel if a foreign nation kidnaps U.S. citizens? Is the American court system quick enough to grant extraditions of U.S. citizens to prevent other nations from following the Supreme Court's example?

The need to have custody of wanted foreign suspects is understandable, but, in the words of foreign legal experts, this new option means the legalization of state-sponsored terrorism.

POLICE BRUTALITY

Correct violence

Helen Anthony of Philadelphia had lived in her modest home for 23 years. When she returned from work on March 31, 1992, the house was surrounded by police officers and a demolition crew. They refused to let her enter. She watched, helpless, as her home was razed. Anthony is an innocent victim of a "drug-control" operation in which dozens of buildings suspected of being used for "drug-related activities" have been destroyed. Anthony is despondent: "Everything I owned was in that house. Pictures of my husband. All my memories. My furniture. My clothes. I don't know about the future. I don't have anything left from my past."

During an August evening in 1988, 88 Los Angeles police officers forcibly entered four apartments at the corner of 39th Street and Dalton Avenue in South Central L.A. They broke in looking for drugs and gang suspects. After punching holes in the walls, ripping up plumbing, smashing toilets and spray-painting the graffiti LAPD RULES, they left, having only found traces of marijuana and cocaine that belonged to two non-resident teens. Daryl Gates protected his officers: two resigned, and only 22 were suspended, none for longer than 22 days.

Mainstream politicians routinely denounce "violence," even as they use state violence to protect ruling-class interests. Bill Clinton condemned Sister Souljah for what she said after the L.A. rebellion. During the primaries, he presided over the execution of a mentally handicapped black prisoner. Ross Perot has proposed cordoning off poor neighborhoods in Dallas and conducting house-to-house searches. That idea is now being enacted in South Central Los Angeles. George Bush directed the politically correct orgy of mass killing known as "Desert Storm."

In the aftermath of the L.A. rebellion, police forces operating in this nation's inner cities can be likened to Hitler's Wehrmacht. They are hostile, occupying armies driven by racist ideology which exercise little restraint in conducting state terror. In Los Angeles, 17,000 people have been arrested. They are not "gang members" who saw the King verdict as an "excuse to loot." Many took food instead of going hungry, while others grabbed some of the material comforts many citizens take for granted.

The citizens of South Central Los Angeles briefly took control of the streets. They were venting years of accumulated rage produced by racist police brutality and systematic impoverishment. Unprincipled politicians such as Bush, Clinton and Perot conveniently overlook or deliberately formulate policies which turn this nation into a police state and condemn millions to lives of poverty. Their denunciations of "violence" ring hollow when crooks chase profits and baton-wielding racists mock due process. We must denounce such hypocrisy, and demand genuine, economic justice.

BYRON KENT WIKSTROM

Fetal tissue transplants now a lost hope

In my high school, there was a girl who couldn't stop her body from shaking. When she raised her hand to answer a question, her arms trembled, her head jerked about, her whole body rebelled uncontrollably. Some days the shaking wasn't quite that bad, but there were times when she could barely walk down the locker-lined halls as she struggled to reach her next class. And, of course, there were plenty of times when she simply never made it to school. Days would pass and people began to think that Judy wouldn't return. But she did, again and again.

Unfortunately, I never got to know Judy very well. Neither did most of the other kids. Even after we were told that Judy had Parkinson's disease — and that she would probably die from it — few of us made an effort to befriend her. It would be years before I could even imagine how difficult it must have been for her.

Parkinson's disease is a neurological disorder that causes muscular tremors and rigidity. In severe cases, it can result in the loss of all voluntary movement. Parkinson's is a horrible disease — especially for children. But there is hope. New treatments, which use fetal-tissue transplants, appear to offer great benefits to people like Judy. Unfortunately, few patients are offered the opportunity to participate in this extraordinary and potentially life-saving research, because the Bush administration refuses to lift a ban on federal funding for fetal-tissue transplant research.

When you consider the amount of suffering caused by this dreaded disease, it is shocking to realize that there are individuals who oppose fetal-tissue research. And it's not just Parkinson's patients who are being denied the benefits of this new treatment. Fetal-tissue transplants may provide hope for those suffering from juvenile diabetes, Alzheimer's disease, blindness, hearing loss, spinal-cord injuries, Hurler's syndrome and Huntington's disease. And the list doesn't end there. A number of other genetic diseases could be ameliorated or even cured using fetal-tissue transplants. In addition, research with fetal tissue may ultimately lead to the development of similar treatments using adult tissue.

So why would anyone stand in the way of this research? Why would the Bush administration work to ensure that valuable fetal tissue is being incinerated rather than being used or saved for research and transplant therapies?

The controversy surrounding the use of fetal tissue for transplants and the reason the government refuses to fund fetal-tissue research centers on a single facet of the debate: George Bush and the anti-abortion rights leaders believe that fetal-tissue research will encourage women to have abortions.

This sentiment is neatly summed up by Dr. John Wilkie, founder of the National Right to Life Committee, who was quoted in the June 29 edition of The New Republic: "(Women considering abortion) can't quite decide yes or no; this is good, this is bad. And then to have someone come to them and say, 'Well, my dear, we know this is a tragedy, but some good will come of it if you give us the tissues for someone else.' That suddenly pushes them over the edge."

It's a fairly disingenuous argument. Especially when it is presented by a president who has consistently waffled on the question of abortion rights. First of all, it is very unlikely that a woman would opt for an abortion simply because the aborted fetus might be used in some type of research. This prospect becomes even more unlikely because of regulations proposed by Congress in a bill that would overturn the moratorium on federal funds for fetal-tissue transplant research.

The bill includes provisions that would outlaw the sale of aborted fetal tissue. It would prohibit health-care professionals from requesting that a woman donate the tissue until after she has decided to have an abortion. And it would prohibit a woman from donating the aborted tissue to specific individuals.

Given all of these provisions and the horrible diseases that may be cured by fetal-tissue transplants, it is truly amazing that the Bush administration continues to ban federal funding for this research and that Congress will probably be unable to muster the two-thirds majority needed to overturn Bush's veto.

Anyone who has personally seen the effects of Parkinson's, Alzheimer's or diabetes must realize how important it is to find cures for these afflictions. My own experiences leave me indignant when I realize so many people will continue to suffer simply because of the imperatives of politics and because of the extreme views of a powerful and organized minority.

President Bush is trading life for four more years in the White House. If anyone deserves those four years, it's not President Bush, it's the thousands of people like Judy who suffer without hope because our government refuses to support the research that might someday lead to a cure.

MIKE ROYKO

Michael is grace, Mike's in your face

There's a TV commercial in which young people say they want to "be like Mike." They are referring to Michael Jordan.

The commercial has inspired some fans to draw signs with messages to Mike. I even heard a TV sports announcer refer to him as Mike Jordan. And he's been referred to as Mike in newspaper headlines.

All of this should be stopped. Jordan is a Michael, not a Mike. And there's a difference. Someone can be named Michael but that doesn't make him a Mike.

It has to do with personality, style, bearing, and one's approach to life and his fellow man.

Jordan is graceful, both on the basketball court and off. He is well-mannered, poised, charming. Definitely a Michael.

In the same city, we have another sports celebrity. Ditka.

On his birth certificate, the name might read Michael. But Ditka is definitely not a Michael. He is a 100 percent Mike.

Why? Look at Ditka's eyes. You could put them in the skull of a pit bull and it would win Best of Show.

As a player, Ditka liked to run over people, stomp them, whap them across the chops. A fan once ran onto the field and barged into a Bears huddle. Ditka flicked a forearm and the young man sailed to the turf. Ditka was mean, belligerent, rude and crude.

Of course, that was when he was a young man. Now that Ditka has reached the age when we mature and mellow, he's still mean and belligerent, but not quite as rude and crude. Maybe only 50 percent.

If Jordan slammed other players to the floor, growled at reporters and got in fights outside of bars at 2 a.m., he would be a Mike.

Instead, he glides, soars, twirls, has one of the world's most boyish smiles, and is nice to everybody. So he is a Michael.

Not that a Mike has to be antisocial.

Another noted athletic Mike is Singletary, of the Bears. He quotes the Bible, talks like a public administrator, and by all accounts is a gentleman.

Normally, that would make him a Michael.

But what he is best known for is the crazed look in his eyes before he slams his body into the guy with the ball. In college, he set a national record for the number of helmets he broke while banging his head against the heads of others.

So this violent approach to his trade makes him a Mike. Besides, you just can't call a guy with a stubby, 20-inch neck Michael.

I'm another exception. Because I'm widely known to be a sensitive, caring, considerate, painfully polite person, I should be a Michael.

But my first editor thought he could save a few pennies in typesetting costs by shrinking my byline to Mike, so there it was.

And to those who doubt that I am sensitive, caring, considerate and polite, I say that you can take a flying (deleted) because I don't give a (deleted) what the (deleted) you think, OK, hog breath, huh, huh?

Another famous Michael was Corleone. Because he killed a couple of people himself, and ordered the deaths of many more, it might be argued that he was a Mike.

But he was suave, controlled and conducted himself more like a corporate executive than a gangster, so he was a Michael.

However, his older brother, Sonny, as well as fat Clemenza, referred to him as Mikey.

That bothered me. A Mikey is in a special category.

I grew up with a Mikey and his mother was always telling him: "Mikey, wipe your lip, your nose is running."

And he would whine: "I don't wanna."

The last time I saw him, she was still saying it. "Mikey, wipe your lip, your nose is running."

As always, he said: "Ma, I don't wanna."

And she said: "You gotta wipe your lip, it's your wedding."

I don't mean to offend anyone, but a Mikey usually has a runny nose and pimples and is bumping into walls and forgetting to zip up when he comes out of the men's room.

That's something that parents should think about if they're naming a kid Michael. Don't call him Mikey. Even if he is a fine, broad-shouldered, keen-eyed, square-jawed little tyke, you call him Mikey often enough and one day you will look at him and see a gawking geek.

Is that what you want? Of course not. So call him Michael, if you must, although I think Joe is a better choice. For a couple of decades or more, Michael has been the most popular male name in the country. When I was a kid, hardly anyone was named Michael. The big name was Joe, a solid, all-purpose handle. But then it faded. More kids are named Kevin or Sean than Joe.

I guess modern couples didn't want the kid going through life being asked: "Hiya, Joe, what ya know?" Nobody asks Kevin or Sean or Michael what they know. Especially if the Michael is a true Mike, in which case he would say: "What I know is none of your (deleted) business."

Some scholars believe that people grow into their names. In other words, if Ditka had been called Michael, he would have turned out to be graceful, kind and gentle. And if Jordan had been tagged as Mike, he would be grunting and scowling and growling.

An interesting theory but I don't buy it. If it were true, Ditka would have turned out to be a basketball player.

No way. He would have never played a game in which he had to wear shorts pants and dribble.

A Mike doesn't dribble. He spits.

In a special meeting Wednesday evening the Coralville City Council adopted three resolutions related to the North End Area Public Improvement Project.

The first resolution approved petitions and waivers for the project. According to City Administrator

Kelly Hayworth,
Coralville city administrator

Kelly Hayworth, this means property owners are willing to be assessed for services such as sewer lines the city will eventually build on the properties.

The second resolution dealt with a complex series of procedural matters necessary for the project's advancement such as the approval of plans and the fixing of public hearing dates.

The resolutions are "shadowing" the actual annexation through a complicated maze of state requirements that are imposed on Coralville because Johnson County is considered a metropolitan statistical area, according to City Attorney Donald Diehl.

The third resolution approved a written application to annex a separate section of land into the city. This section will only be names the UI selected for the Oakdale campus area.

During a work session that followed the meeting, Hayworth reviewed progress on an agreement that would share several Coralville water and sewer supervisors with North Liberty, Iowa. Council members briefly discussed whether the length of the agreement should be three or four years.

According to council member Jim Fausett, the agreement will give the Coralville water and sewer employees opportunities for increased advancement and responsibilities while providing North Liberty with a valuable resource.

"We're going to provide leadership," he said. "They'll be working conjunctively with Coralville and North Liberty."

Hayworth also reviewed some specifics of the North End Public Improvement Project such as potential boundary problems. He noted that in the coming weeks a lot of work remains to be done on certain aspects of the project.

Addressing the council, Hayworth said, "That's what we're going to have to nail down quickly — the sizing of the area."

U.S.-RUSSIA

Bush hastens release of credits for products

Jennifer Dixon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—President Bush is accelerating the release of credits to Russia that will allow it to buy $300 million in U.S. farm products beginning Wednesday, an Agriculture Department official said today.

U.S. Department of Agriculture spokesman Roger Runningen said Bush would announce the plan later today in a speech before the Agricultural Communicators Congress.

Russia had been scheduled to receive $150 million in export credit guarantees on July 1 and another $150 million was to have been released Aug. 1.

But Bush decided to speed the release of the Aug. 1 credits after meeting with Russian President Boris Yeltsin earlier this month. The announcement comes less than a week before Bush and leaders of six of America's wealthy allies meet in Munich for their annual economic summit. Yeltsin has been invited to the summit on the last day and the talks are expected to be dominated by the Western response to Russia's crumbling economy.

Bush and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl announced in April a $24 billion package of Western aid for Russia this year. But only about $4 billion of that amount has been delivered so far despite Yeltsin's pleas that his country was in urgent need of assistance to make the reform process work.

The administration decision to speed up the farm credits followed an announcement last week that the International Monetary Fund would soon provide Russia with a $1 billion advance on an expected $4 billion aid package even though the IMF and Russia have yet to reach final agreement on a reform program.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady indicated to reporters today that the acceleration of the U.S. farm credits was likely to be the biggest U.S. benefit offered to Yeltsin next week. "That's a rather large credit," Brady told reporters at the White House. "I think that's the one that you can put your finger on as most important."

The $300 million is part of a $600 million Russian credit package announced by Bush on May 6. Russia has tapped the first $300 million and has used much of its loans to buy U.S. wheat and corn.

Ukraine and other republics in the Commonwealth of Independent States have been allocated another $500 million in credits. So far, however, only $110 million has been released to Ukraine. The former Soviet Union is the fifth largest export market for U.S. food and farm products, purchasing some $1.8 billion worth a year.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Transfer service fees may increase

The proposal would affect non-emergency ambulance services.

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County may see increases in ambulance user fees as soon as Aug. 1.

David Cole, director of the Johnson County Ambulance Service, proposed the increases to offset the recently approved pay raises for paramedics and the decreasing size of cardiopulmonary resuscitation classes during an informal meeting of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

Cole said the fees for the advance transfer service would go up from $136 to $150 and basic transfer service would increase from $100 to $110. Transfer service is for people who need a ride and who are not able to walk, which would include driving someone from a nursing home to a hospital.

Standby ambulance fees would go up as well as fees for CPR classes. But emergency service fees would remain the same, Cole said.

"People are finding other means of transportation."

David Cole

"The market has decreased — people are finding other means of transportation," Cole said. He added that "patients are not getting reimbursed because insurance companies are turning down non-emergency transport."

Cole said the overall increase in revenue would be 1.3 percent. The board agreed to put the item on Thursday's agenda.

Cole also submitted to the supervisors a written plan on how the ambulance service will deal with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's final ruling on exposure to bloodborne pathogens.

"We've been scrambling to meet OSHA's requirements. Employees must comply with standards that are quite high," said Cole, referring to the new federal law that requires all employees to be vaccinated and states that certain safety equipment must be present. "Unfortunately, this will be more costly," he said.

However, Cole said Johnson County has been doing a great job in this area and has been contacted by other services for guidelines.

EXXON KIDNAPPING

Woman to testify against husband

Joseph Neff
Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — With tears in her eyes, Irene J. Seale pleaded guilty Tuesday, admitting she and her husband kidnapped Exxon executive Sidney Reso and left him in a storage locker where he died.

As part of the bargain to plead guilty to federal extortion charges, Seale agreed to testify against her husband, whom her attorney accused of abusing and manipulating her.

Later, Arthur Seale appeared in the same federal courtroom and pleaded innocent to kidnapping and other charges. He is likely to be charged with felony murder in state court, prosecutors said.

As he was escorted out in handcuffs and leg shackles, Arthur Seale, 45, was asked about his wife's decision.

"Just tell her I love her," he said. "Tell her I love her."

Seale, also 45, signed the agreement with U.S. Attorney Michael Chertoff on Friday, one week after the couple's arrest. Saturday, she led authorities to a forest in southern New Jersey, where Reso was buried in a shallow grave.

Appearing in court with handcuffs, Seale gave clear affirmative answers as she was questioned by Chertoff and U.S. District Judge Garrett Brown.

Seale admitted she and her husband abducted Reso on April 29, that the Exxon Co. International president had been shot in the arm and that they tried to treat his wound.

They left Reso in a storage locker in Washington Township and he died there five days later, on May 3, she said.

"Did you know that what you were doing was wrong?" Chertoff asked.

"Yes," Seale said, tears welling in her eyes.

Her attorney, Sallyanne Floria, said Seale decided to plead guilty on June 19, the day she and her husband were arrested in Hackensettown.

"Her concern for the Reso family peace of mind and her desire to see Mr. Reso given a decent burial overshadowed her fear for herself," Floria said.

"Jackie Seale is a very nice person who has been abused and manipulated by her husband," Floria said. "But for the fact of his control, she would have never been involved in criminal activity."

Seale pleaded guilty to extortion and conspiracy to commit extortion, which carry a maximum combined sentence of 40 years in prison.

Seale also agreed to plead guilty to state kidnapping charges. Her sentence on state charges will not exceed the federal sentence and would be served concurrently, according to Morris County Prosecutor W. Michael Murphy.

Associated Press

Arthur Seale, center, leaves federal court in Trenton, N.J., after pleading innocent to kidnap, extortion, conspiracy and other federal charges.

Seale's testimony will be admissible in federal court, but not in state court, where New Jersey law forbids spouses from testifying against each other in criminal trials.

Derailed tank car in Minn. city forces 50,000 to flee

Pam Schmid
Associated Press

DULUTH, Minn. — A cloud of toxic vapor from a derailed tank car forced at least 50,000 people to flee homes and businesses Tuesday in Minnesota and Wisconsin, creating traffic jams and leaving downtown Duluth deserted.

"It's an absolute ghost town. It's eerie what's going on down there," Mayor Gary Doty said at an emergency command post outside the city.

At least 25 people were taken to hospitals in the two states, and about 260 National Guard and Army Reserve troops mobilized.

Authorities lifted the evacuation order at 3:30 p.m., except for an area within about a mile of the spill site in Superior, Wis. Rain helped clear the toxic vapor from the air, Doty said.

Estimates of the number of people evacuated varied widely. Duluth police put the figure at 30,000 in the city of 85,000, and Douglas County, Wis., authorities estimated 20,000 people in northwestern Wisconsin had fled. Other estimates ran as high as 80,000 in the two states.

Crews worked to contain the leak, which occurred after 14 cars of a Burlington Northern freight train derailed about 2:30 a.m. on a bridge over the Nemadji River in adjacent Superior, Wis.

A tank car containing a benzene-based chemical tumbled into the river and leaked.

Benzene is a flammable liquid used as a solvent and in making plastics, insecticides, detergents and paints. The vapor was not considered life-threatening, but people exposed to it complained of dizziness, headaches and burning eyes and skin.

Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson declared an emergency in Douglas County, which includes Superior. Thompson and Minnesota Gov. Arne Carlson headed to the area separately to assess the situation.

Roads into the two cities were closed, and outbound lanes were jammed with cars leaving the area. Precautionary evacuations were ordered as far as 20 miles west of Duluth as officials tried to guess where the vapor might spread.

"We're at the whim of the wind," said Kevin Burns, spokesman for the Minnesota Department of Public Safety.

Authorities in Superior began evacuating residents at dawn.

"They woke us up about 5:50 a.m. using the PAs in their police cars," said Louis Willie, a Douglas County official. "They said, 'Evacuate — there has been a chemical spill.'"

The river where the spill occurred flows into Superior Bay, which separates Duluth and Superior. The Coast Guard placed a boom across the bay to prevent the chemical from spreading on the water, but a low-hanging cloud spread just above the water's surface.

"It's like a fog or mist rolling over Park Point," said hotel manager Steve Scherer, who watched the cloud from an upper floor of the Radisson Duluth hotel. "It's just kind of going straight up the north shore."

The derailment also included at least two other tank cars, one containing liquified petroleum gas and the other containing butadiene, but it was not clear whether those cars leaked, authorities said. National Transportation Safety Board officials were sent to investigate, spokesman Michael Benson said.

Duluth residents fleeing the fumes went to emergency shelters set up in schools and a shopping mall.

LOS ANGELES

New chief vows to protect city

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Willie Williams received the badge of police chief Tuesday and promised to heal the wounds of a battered city while reforming a demoralized department criticized for racism and brutality.

The first black chief to head the 7,900-member police force told a crowd of 2,000 at a Police Academy change-of-command ceremony that he can do the job if given adequate resources.

"To the citizens of Los Angeles," Williams said, "as your police chief I will be your spokesperson as well as your protector."

But amid the pomp of the ceremony there was blunt talk about the vast problems of Los Angeles and the limits on resources Williams will have.

Mayor Tom Bradley flatly told the former Philadelphia, Pa., police commissioner: "Don't come asking for more money because it isn't there."

Williams' predecessor, 14-year chief Daryl Gates, was not present. He had said he thought he would distract attention from Williams.

Gates, who came under fire when officers were videotaped beating black motorist Rodney King and for his leadership during rioting that followed acquittals for four white officers.

Williams, the city's 50th police chief, called Los Angeles a "very diverse, very vibrant city," but warned that diversity has become a point of conflict.

"We cannot remove tensions if we back away, lock our doors and cars when we come upon anyone who is a stranger," he said.

At a news conference after the ceremony Williams, 48, stressed he would be open to talking with anyone who could help him do his job.

"I will meet and talk with anyone on any issue," he said. "I'll talk to anyone who is in a position of leadership, whether they are in a gang or across the street from my office downtown."

In his academy address, Williams urged those in power to stop rocking the ship and start steering it.

Williams promised to bring into the open questions about sexual attitudes and sexual harassment in the department as well as racism.

Lifting morale, he said, "requires a redoubling of our commitment to see that the pride in the Los Angeles Police Department shines brighter than ever."

Bill eases burden of student loans

Matt Yancey
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Students from middle-income families could find it much easier to pay for college with government grants and loans under a compromise reached Tuesday between Congress and the Bush administration.

The compromise involving a "direct loan" pilot program at 200 to 250 schools eliminating banks and other intermediaries removes the threat of veto by President Bush, the bill's sponsors said.

The pilot program was scaled back from 500 colleges and trade schools after Education Secretary Lamar Alexander said he would recommend a veto because the program would "create billions of dollars in new unlimited government debt."

Congressional auditors have estimated the government could save nearly $1 billion a year by replacing the current guaranteed student loan system and its middlemen banks and security markets with direct loans.

Despite the cutback in the pilot program, Sen. Dave Durenberger,

R-Minn., a key author of the idea, hailed the compromise as "a major step toward changing the way Americans pay for college."

"To be blunt about it, we can no longer afford to squander billions of dollars a year on red tape and unnecessary defaults," he said.

Under the pilot program, the government would lend the money for college or trade schools directly to students, rather than pay a subsidy to Sallie Mae and the banks to make the loans.

Sallie Mae is the Student Loan Marketing Association, a government-chartered but privately owned institution that markets government-guaranteed student loans through banks, securities brokers and other financial institutions.

CAMPAIGN '92

Bush marshals attack on Clinton

Rita Beamish
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush's re-election team is asking party leaders to step up attacks on Democratic presidential challenger Bill Clinton, whose standing improved as Bush squared off with billionaire rival Ross Perot.

Vice President Dan Quayle is leading the charge by traveling this Thursday to the Arkansas governor's home turf. Quayle plans to split Clinton's recently announced economic plan in a speech to the Little Rock Rotary Club.

"The purpose of the trip to Little Rock is to retrain our artillery," said David Beckwith, Quayle's press secretary.

The GOP also has assembled a new attack packet on Clinton's record, distributing it to party leaders nationwide.

The June 19 packet contained 14 pages of talking points — covering Clinton's stand on issues ranging from civil rights and the environment to statements he has made about loans to Israel and the Persian Gulf War.

The focus on Clinton follows recent political fixation on Perot, whose statements and background have drawn intensive media coverage as well as GOP attacks.

The campaign trained most of its firepower in the past few weeks on Perot, despite dissension from some strategists who believed Clinton should not have been disregarded, said one critical GOP official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

That gave Clinton a chance to improve his standing more than he might have during the period around the Democratic convention this month, when he would naturally expect to get a boost, the strategist said.

Campaign aides insist that the focus on Perot was of the media's making, and they never let Clinton off the hook.

"We fully expect Bill Clinton to be the primary opponent in November," said Bush campaign spokeswoman Torie Clarke. "We're trying to refocus energies and refocus artillery on him. We're going to make sure people know why Bill Clinton is not qualified to be president."

At the same time, Bush advisers sought to dispel any impression that they were concerned about an ABC-Washington Post poll this week that showed Clinton climbing as Perot's momentum stalled.

"We have always expected along this time Clinton would get a surge, a buildup to his convention," said Bush campaign adviser Charlie Black.

Even before the poll came out Monday showing the three candidates in a statistical dead heat, the GOP shipped its Clinton attack packet to Republican state chairmen and Republican National Committee members.

B.J. Cooper, communications director at the RNC, said the GOP officials nationwide are anxious for more information about Clinton because most of the media coverage recently has focused on Perot.

The talking points also selectively quote Clinton and accuse him of "slick equivocation" on the Gulf war.

RNC spokesman Gary Koops said Clinton's record and statements are "not something that have been written enough about. The state party leaders have read enough about Ross Perot in recent weeks."

Animal rights activists protest near the emergency room entrance to Presbyterian University Hospital in Pittsburgh, Pa., where surgeons performed the first liver baboon transplant to a human on Sunday.

Animal rights activists protest use of baboon's liver in surgery

Jim Strader
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The transplantation of a baboon's liver into a dying man has revived debate over the use of animals in medical research, sparking an angry exchange Tuesday outside the hospital where the operation took place.

About 15 protesters chanted "animals are not spare parts" outside Presbyterian University Hospital.

They were silenced by another man suffering from liver disease.

"I didn't ask for this, but I've got it and I'm fighting it just like that guy laying up there," Robert Winter shouted angrily at the animal rights activists. "You don't have a right to be standing here."

The protesters stopped chanting when Winter, 34, confronted them, repeatedly asking: "Do you know what it's like to have liver disease?"

At the hospital Sunday, a 35-year-old man, whose name was withheld at his request, underwent the world's first baboon-to-human liver transplant. He was suffering from recurring infections of Hepatitis B, which destroys the liver.

He was not a candidate for a human transplant because the virus probably would have damaged the new organ. Doctors believe baboon livers are not susceptible to the virus.

A 15-year-old male baboon from a Texas laboratory was killed in Pittsburgh to provide the liver. The anesthetized baboon wasn't revived after the liver was removed and "was never in any pain," said hospital spokeswoman Lisa Rossi.

The patient was listed in critical condition Tuesday, typical for transplant recipients. He was breathing on his own and sat up to watch noon television news featuring his operation.

Winter, of the Pittsburgh area, said he was diagnosed with Hepatitis C in 1985 and suffers from side effects of medication he receives three times a week.

The protesters held signs saying "Baboon And Human: Both Victims" and "Animals Are Not Ours To Experiment On."

DAVENPORT CRASH

Pilot dies without regaining consciousness

Associated Press
DAVENPORT — The pilot of a Marine jet fighter that crashed and burned as it took off from the Davenport Municipal Airport has died from severe head injuries, doctors said.
 Capt. Jeffrey J. Smith, 29, died Tuesday at Mercy Hospital, a Marine spokesman said. He had never regained consciousness after he ejected from the single-passenger jet that crashed into a field near the airport Monday. Smith's parents were watching the plane take off as it crashed. "Apparently the jet lost power as it was going down the runway," said Davenport Police Chief Steve Lynn. "He went off the runway, crashed and the jet fuel exploded. All I saw were burning twisted metal pieces and pieces of the jet scattered across the field."

 Ken Ferris of Blue Grass was standing near the pilot's parents when the plane crashed.

"There was a couple behind me that was just going hysterical and crying," Ferris said. "We were near to them and I heard her say, 'My God, that's my boy in the jet.'"
 Smith, a native of the eastern Iowa community of Coggon, enlisted in May 1987 and graduated from flight school in February 1990, according to his Marine Corps unit in Arizona. He died at 1:45 p.m. CDT.
 Smith is survived by his wife Dee and daughter Skylar, and parents

Ronald and Donna Smith of Coggon.
 Davenport Police Sgt. Allen Sylvia said there were no reports of injuries on the ground.
 The jet was one of two Marine Harriers that were on display during an air show over the weekend.
 The Harrier was making a normal takeoff when it crashed, the witness said. The Marines refused to release details pending an investigation.

But he said they were in the jurisdictions of FBI field offices in Washington, D.C.; New York and Albany, N.Y.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Columbia, S.C.; Atlanta, Ga.; Miami and Jacksonville, Fla.; San Juan, Puerto Rico; Cleveland, Ohio; Detroit, Mich.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Chicago, Ill.; San Francisco, Calif.; New Orleans, La.; and Portland, Ore.
 Manhattan U.S. Attorney Otto Obermaier said about 65 percent of the probe was in New York.
 At a news conference in New York, Assistant FBI Director James Fox said his agents were amazed at how organized the drug diversion network was, comparing it to Mafia or KGB operations.
 "There is probably some complicity on the part of many of the physicians," he said, adding that more arrests were expected. He said wiretaps recorded distributors "gloating over how easy this was, how profitable it was."
 Among the drugs seized were the AIDS drug AZT and medicine for blood pressure, heart conditions, arthritis and asthma, he said.
 Agents reported buying AZT from distributors for as little as $30 per 100 capsules. The wholesale price of the drug is $100 to $150 per 100.
 In addition to the FBI agents, Sessions said 120 law enforcement officers from other agencies made arrests and conducted searches and seizures.

 Sessions said the illegal diversion scheme worked this way:
 A person eligible to receive Medicaid obtains prescriptions for expensive drugs from a physician. In some cases, the physician recruited the patient. The physician bills Medicaid for the phony patient's visit. The patient gets the prescription filled, also at Medicaid's expense. The patient sells the medicine for about 10 percent of its value to another conspirator and it is later sold to the public, sometimes by a pharmacist, often after being repackaged.
 In the fraudulent billing, he said, prescriptions sometimes are filled with generic drugs but the insurance carrier is billed for the more expensive brand name product. For example, he said, a physician might write a prescription for the brand name drug Keflex, an antibiotic valued at about $76. The pharmacist fills the prescription with the generic equivalent, cephalexin, valued at approximately $16. Then the pharmacist might add another medication, such as the gastrointestinal drug Zantac, valued at about $88, to the insurance bill. This would add up to an insurance bill of $164 for a $16 item.
 Dr. David Kessler, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, who joined Sessions at a news conference, said the risk presented by mishandling of drugs by the offenders was small because the FBI and the FDA acted immediately to seize any drugs suspected of being misbranded, adulterated or expired.

 "If you are a patient with a prescription drug from one of those pharmacies that was shut down today, you should consult with the physician who prescribed that drug," Kessler said. "If the prescription you are taking did not come from one of those pharmacies, it is extremely unlikely the drug you have may be involved."
 He said the FDA had established a temporary hotline for patients unable to reach their doctor or pharmacist or local authorities. The number is 1-800-332-5568.
 He said the line would be staffed from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. EDT.

Sessions said the investigation was largely conducted by undercover agents, who used records available from state agencies to locate suspect doctor's offices or pharmacies.
 Seven of the arrests were in Florida, including five pharmacists, a former pharmaceutical company representative and a drug diverter who allegedly sold drug samples on the "gray market."
 In Puerto Rico, 16 people were arrested, including 12 pharmacy owners and three medicine distributors. Robert Opfer, special agent in charge for the FBI in San Juan, said the island was "the main recipient and distributor of prescription drugs derailed through fraud or robbery from the U.S. mainland."

 in Soviet prison camps after World War II. But it is unclear whether they were U.S. servicemen or Nazi sympathizers.
 Di Bartolomeo's grave was found by Valeri Cherkezov, head of the Iskatel regional charity center in Tambov, ITAR-Tass said. The charity searches for missing soldiers from World War II and has identified unknown Russian soldiers buried in the Tambov area.
 Cherkezov reportedly checked KGB archives to determine that Di Bartolomeo was born in the United States.
 Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov, Toon's counterpart on the POW commission, said in an interview published Tuesday by the newspaper Izvestia that the search for POWs and MIAs would continue "until there is no longer a specter of hope."

 moderate provisions."
 She said a mandate for giving women more information before their pregnancies are ended is a benefit, not something to be criticized as an unfair barrier.
 "Until yesterday, women did not have a constitutional right to be told what abortion is about," she said.
 Abortion rights groups say many teen-agers will seek illegal abortions rather than confront their parents about their pregnancies or ask for a judge's permission.
 But Franz said without requirements for such consent, "these kids are left vulnerable to a money-making industry."

MAJORS: Sanderson blanks Kansas City

An error by third baseman Jeff Kent made all nine Rangers runs unearned in the third inning.

Braves 4, Giants 3
 SAN FRANCISCO — Atlanta's John Smoltz has the rhythm that has given him added confidence. "When I get into my groove, that's when I feel like I'm tough to beat," Smoltz said after the Braves' 4-3 victory Tuesday over the San Francisco Giants.

Smoltz (9-5) pitched his third complete game this season and won his fourth-straight decision, allowing eight hits while striking out seven and walking none.

It was his second victory over the Giants in six days. He pitched a two-hitter last Wednesday to beat San Francisco 5-0 in Atlanta.

Otis Nixon and Terry Pendleton hit consecutive homers in the fifth behind Smoltz to help end Atlanta's three-game weekend losing streak at the hands of Cincinnati. The victory means the Braves finish out June with a 19-6 record.

Giants manager Roger Craig said Smoltz just "shut us down."

"Smoltz was throwing 93- to 95-mph fastballs and he was ahead of the batters and that's tough to beat."

Yankees 6, Royals 0
 NEW YORK — Scott Sanderson pitched a four-hitter and Don Mattingly got four hits, including a home run, to lead the New York Yankees past the Kansas City Royals.

Sanderson (7-5) walked none and struck out four in his first shutout since last July 11. He needed only 86 pitches, and threw first-pitch strikes to 19 of the first 24 hitters.

The Yankees hit four solo home runs, all coming on the first pitch. Mattingly hit his ninth home run and also doubled, Mel Hall connected for his 11th homer, Matt Nokes hit his ninth and Pat Kelly hit his third.

Meanwhile, Yankees outfielder Jesse Barfield underwent arthroscopic surgery on his left wrist Tuesday and will be lost to the club for at least a month.

General manager Gene Michael said that Barfield would have stitches removed next Monday and would then begin rehabilitation which would lead to his return "in four to eight weeks."

Expos 7, Phillies 2
 PHILADELPHIA — Ken Hill pitched seven strong innings, got two base hits and scored twice as the Montreal Expos beat the Phillies. Hill (8-4) won his third straight and seventh in his last nine decisions. He gave up four hits, struck out two and walked two before being replaced by Mel Rojas, who finished with two shutout innings.

Mike Williams (0-1) took the loss in his major-league debut, giving up six hits and four runs in 4 1/2 innings.

John Vander Wal drove in three runs for Montreal with a homer and a double, and Larry Walker had two RBIs with a homer and a sacrifice fly.

Pirates 2, Cardinals 0
 ST. LOUIS — Doug Drabek threw a three-hitter and struck out nine as Pittsburgh defeated St. Louis.

The Pirates, who lead the National League East, won for only the second time in six games. The Cardinals, who fell 5 1/2 games back, have scored two or fewer runs in 31 of their 75 games.

Drabek (6-6) struck out Brian Jordan four times and walked none in his second shutout and third complete game of the season. He gave up singles in the second and fourth to Felix Jose, who is 11 for 26 in his last six games, and a fifth-inning double to Craig Wilson.

Drabek raised his career record against St. Louis to 6-9 and improved his ERA against the Cards to 2.19.

Red Sox 8, Tigers 5
 BOSTON — Rookie Bob Zupcic hit his first major league grand slam, connecting in the ninth inning and capping Boston's comeback from an early five-run deficit as the Red Sox rallied past the Detroit Tigers.

Zupcic, whose .317 average is the highest on the AL's worst-hitting team, homered high over the left-field wall. Wade Boggs was on deck when Zupcic homered; Boggs was hitless in four at-bats, lengthening his slumps to 0 for 18 and 1 for 25.

Daryl Irvine (1-0), called up from Triple-A Pawtucket earlier in the day, pitched three scoreless innings for the victory.

Astros 5, Reds 1
 HOUSTON — Jimmy Jones held the Cincinnati Reds to three hits through five innings and Luis Gonzalez drove in a run and scored another, leading the Houston Astros.

Jones (4-1) gave up one run, walked three and struck out two before leaving in the sixth with a blister on his right index finger. Xavier Hernandez went the final 2 1/2 innings for his third save.

LINDROS: Bags packed for Philly effect."

Lindros was drafted by Quebec but refused to sign with the Nordiques, preferring instead a larger, English-speaking market and more successful franchise.

He spent last season playing international and junior hockey, forcing Quebec to trade his rights.

"It's been a long 15 months," said Lindros, who said in Toronto that his "bags are packed" for Philadelphia.

"I'm just happy to get out of there," Lindros said, adding he turned down a 10-year, $50 million offer from the Nordiques. "They lacked a winning spirit. I didn't want any part of it."

Snider said he would start negotiations as soon as possible. What would it take?

"We wouldn't have given up the players we have if we didn't think he was worth a substantial contract," Snider said. He predicted a record amount for a rookie.

Bertuzzi, who listened to testimony from all sides last week, said he wrestled with "a complicated set of circumstances" and rode an "emotional roller-coaster" before deciding over the weekend in the Flyers' favor.

"My decision," he quipped, "was in black and white and orange." Those are the Flyers' colors.

The Rangers issued a two-sentence statement from president and general manager Neil Smith, who was in Hilton Head, S.C., attending AHL meetings.

"The New York Rangers are naturally disappointed by the arbitrator's decision," Smith said.

"However, we have an exciting, young, winning team and will continue to pursue every opportunity to make it even better."

At least eight teams were interested in Lindros, but Aubut said he wouldn't let anyone call Lindros to see if the teen-ager was interested until a deal was struck, Bertuzzi said.

Bertuzzi read his decision to the three teams simultaneously on the phone. When he reached that part, Snider said, the

CALIFORNIA ANGELS

Russian infielders looking to land in major leagues

Ken Peters
Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — They're both 23-year-old infielders and they're headed for the California Angels' Arizona rookie league team, where they hope to hone their skills enough to make the major leagues. All very routine.

The twist: their names are Yevgeny Puchkof and Ilya Bogatyrev, and they're from Moscow.

The Angels, the first major league club to begin to tap into a market where baseball is a young, obscure sport, have signed third baseman Puchkof and shortstop Bogatyrev. Another player, left-handed pitcher Rudolf Razigaz, a 23-year-old from Siberia, will join the pair in Arizona in July.

None of the trio has been playing America's pastime for more than four years, and chances of any of the three making it to the major leagues would seem exceedingly slim.

But bringing them into pro ball in the United States is seen by the Angels as a sort of seeding program that might one day increase the popularity of baseball in the Commonwealth of Independent States and also provide players for the major leagues.

"The Commonwealth of Independent States is a new frontier for athletes and hopefully this will be a beginning stage for the development and growth of baseball in the region," Bob Fontaine, Angels director of scouting, said at a press conference Monday night.

Russian president Boris Yeltsin has urged Americans to invest in untapped Russian markets, and the Angels are doing just that, Fontaine said.

"There might not ever be a player from the Commonwealth to play in the major leagues," Fontaine said. "But there may be a lot of them someday."

Puchkof and Bogatyrev, who attended the press conference at Anaheim Stadium, and Razigaz will be allowed to go as far as they can in the Angels' organization.

DREAM TEAM

Stockton may not recover for Games

Bill Barnard
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — A crack in a bone in John Stockton's lower leg may have ended his chances for a golden summer at the Olympics.

Stockton was on Monday night's game against Canada just one minute in the first half before he collided with Team USA teammate Michael Jordan. Initially, the injury was diagnosed as a bruised right calf, but X-rays revealed an undisplaced fracture of the right fibula, the bone next to the shin in the lower leg.

"Michael was coming across and he kneed me," Stockton said before the fracture was discovered.

USA team physician Dr. David Fischer said the injury will keep Stockton out of the remainder of this week's Tournament of the Americas. But he held out hope Stockton could play in the Olympics, which start July 25.

"John's right leg will not be placed in a cast, and it is expected that he will be able to participate in a conditioning program," Fischer said.

Team rosters for the Olympics have to be finalized by July 15.

Before that deadline, a six-man committee must decide first if Stockton can recover for the Games. If not, the committee will pick a replacement.

The committee may have several decisions to make. In addition to Stockton, three other players — Patrick Ewing, Larry Bird and David Robinson — are dealing with injuries. Ewing missed one game with a dislocated thumb, Bird's aching back kept him out of Monday's game against Canada and Robinson is playing while recovering from ligament damage to his hand.

OAKLAND A'S

Oakland manager Tony La Russa congratulates relief ace Dennis Eckersley after the righthander set an all-time record with his 26th consecutive single-season save in Seattle late Monday night.

Eckersley perfectly relieved to have record behind him

Jim Cour
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Dennis Eckersley of the Oakland Athletics has been perfect this season. So what else is new?

He set a major league record by converting his 26th straight save chance Monday night as the A's beat the Seattle Mariners 5-4 in 11 innings.

"I'm glad that's over because I've been thinking about it," Eckersley said. "It's definitely been on my mind. The record is nice. You have to be very lucky. Good and lucky."

Terry Steinbach, whose solo home run in the sixth tied it at 3, singled home the go-ahead run in the 11th off Mike Schooler (0-5) and Willie Wilson added an RBI single.

"This was a game for the memory bank," A's manager Tony La Russa said. "You had Eckersley setting baseball history. This was a game to remember."

Oakland stopped a three-game losing streak and ended its seven-game skid at the Kingdome. Tino Martinez went 5 for 6 for the Mariners, including a run-scoring single in the 11th off Eckersley.

Eckersley had previously matched Tom Henke's record, set in 1991, by converting 25 consecutive save opportunities in one season. Eckersley extended his own record to 30 straight saves in two years.

Vince Horsman (2-0) pitched the 10th for the victory.

Steinbach said he hit a Schooler fastball for his tie-breaking single in the 11th.

"He threw me two fastballs inside and then he threw me a fastball that caught more of the plate," Steinbach said.

Dave Stewart lasted only 1 1/2 innings, allowing six hits and three runs. He was bidding for his fifth straight victory, but was lifted with two on and two out in the second after walking Ken Griffey Jr.

La Russa said he didn't know if Stewart would be able to make his scheduled start Saturday in Cleveland.

"His elbow was barking on him," La Russa said. "It just wasn't getting any better."

Eckersley said he talked to Stewart in the dressing room after he came out of the game.

"He told me his elbow was killing him," Eckersley said.

Oakland's Mark McGwire, leading the major leagues with 26 home runs, was ejected by plate umpire Derryl Cousins after striking out into a double play in the sixth. McGwire was called out on strikes and threw his bat and helmet.

La Russa said McGwire deserved to be thrown out "but he thought it was a bad call, and he virtually never argues with umpires."

Bowlsby responds to scholarship violations

Pursuant to recent questions about scholarship allocations, Iowa athletic director Bob Bowlsby had this comment about the financial aid equivalency audit:

"The university is involved in conference and NCAA discussions involving the allocation of financial aid to student-athletes. Despite rumors to the contrary, none of the coaches or staff members of the University of Iowa have been accused of inappropriate program management.

"University of Iowa personnel have adhered strictly to the policies of the Big Ten Conference and have allocated aid consistent with directives from conference office staff. Recent difficulties emanate from a disagreement between the Big Ten and the NCAA over how out-of-state equivalencies are computed and tabulated.

"The University of Iowa is cooperating fully with the Big Ten Conference Office and with the NCAA to facilitate a mutually agreeable resolution to the problem. Details regarding the extent of the over allocation of aid, the sports involved and the corrective measures to be employed will be available at a later date."

United States makes Panama next victim

Long-distance shooting by Mullin and Jordan, as well as a 16-0 first half run, make up for being behind and key 60-point blowout.

Bill Barnard
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore.—The battered U.S. basketball team still had plenty of punch Tuesday night.

Chris Mullin and Michael Jordan keyed a zone-busting barrage with four 3-pointers each in the first half as Team USA rolled to a 112-52 victory over Panama.

The Americans played without John Stockton, who broke his lower right leg Monday night, and Larry Bird, who rested a sore back for the second straight day.

But it hardly mattered as the Dream Team won its third blowout in the Olympic qualifying tournament. The average victory margin has been 61 points.

Despite falling behind for the first time in the tournament, the U.S. team took control with a 16-0 run in the first half. The lead changed hands seven times in the first eight minutes before the Americans gained momentum.

Mullin scored 19 points, Jordan 15, and David Robinson and Patrick Ewing 14 each for the United States, which made only one 3-pointer in the second half.

In other games in the Tournament of the Americas, Puerto Rico beat Venezuela 91-80 and Mexico downed Uruguay 98-89. Cuba plays Argentina in a late game Tuesday night.

A victory by Cuba would officially clinch an Olympic berth for the Americans. The U.S. team, 3-0 in Group A, plays Argentina Wednesday night.

The winners of two quarterfinal games Thursday between the second and third-place finishers in each group will advance to the semifinals against the two group winners.

All four semifinalists earn Olympic berths. Brazil clinched a semifinal spot on Tuesday night.

The 16-0 first-half run, capped by two 3-pointers by Mullin, gave the U.S. team a 29-15 lead.

Eddie Chavez, who hit four 3-pointers in the first half and sparked Panama's early success, broke the drought with a 3-pointer and Leroy Jackson followed with a jumper, closing the gap to 29-20.

But Mullin started a 35-10 U.S. flurry in the final 6:41 of the half with another 3-pointer and Jordan hit two more 3s as the Americans shot over the Panama zone.

Mullin and Jordan had four 3-pointers each and Clyde Drexler one in the first half. They combined for 9-for-14 shooting from 3-point range, which is 3 feet shorter than the NBA's 3-point distance.

Team USA started the second half with a 19-4 spurt behind 8 points from Ewing, who missed the opener with a dislocated thumb, and Charles Barkley, the Americans' leading scorer in the first two games. That put them in front 83-34 with 15 minutes left.

Panama was held to 22 points in the second half.

Puerto Rico 91, Venezuela 80
Puerto Rico (3-1) clinched a quarterfinal berth and second place in the Pool B. Mario Morales led Puerto Rico with 15 points, but it was the defense of Jose Ortiz on Carl Herrera — and some foul trouble — that made the difference.

Herrera, who plays for the Houston Rockets, was held to 13 points on 5-for-12 shooting by Ortiz, who played for the Utah Jazz. Herrera played just 27 minutes as he had three fouls with six minutes left in the first half and four with 15:28 to play in the game. He returned with 8:30 to play and Venezuela (1-2) trailing by six and it never got closer than four.

Mexico 98, Uruguay 89
Mexico (1-2) kept its quarterfinal chances alive, rallying from a 17-point second-half deficit. The winner of Wednesday night's Mexico-Venezuela game will advance to the quarterfinals. Mexico took the lead for good at 89-88 with 2:48 left and Uruguay (0-3) didn't score again, missing four of five free throws, three the front end of 1-and-1s. Jose Arroyos led Mexico with 23 points, while Horacio Lopez was just above his average with 33.

White Sox catcher Carlton Fisk blocks home plate and applies the tag on Cleveland's Carlos Martinez in the third inning Tuesday night at Cleveland Stadium. Martinez would enjoy the last laugh, however, driving in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth.

Ticket prices increase

The University of Iowa athletic board on Tuesday approved ticket prices for women's sporting events.

Prices for general admission season tickets for all sports, called Goal Cards, will increase $5, or from $25 to $30. There also will be a $5 increase for reserved seating Goal Cards, from $35 to $40.

About 1,800 people purchased Goal Cards last year, women's athletic director Christine Grant said.

Individual ticket prices will remain the same for basketball and volleyball, but ticket prices for non-students attending field hockey, gymnastics, softball and swimming events will increase $1, from $2 to $3.

Individual tickets for students and senior citizens also will increase $1, from $1 to $2.

Grant said the increase will bring Iowa up to par with what other universities are charging for athletic events.

Rockets sale denied

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets majority owner Charlie Thomas said Tuesday he has rejected an offer to sell the team for a reported $82 million and has not made a counter proposal.

Thomas' statement came two days after the Houston Chronicle reported a group that includes heavyweight boxing champion Evander Holyfield and rap star Hammer had made a bid to buy the Rockets.

NHL TRADE

Lindros to Flyers in big trade

Bill Stieg
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Flyers won the Lindros Cup. Can the Stanley Cup be far behind?

In a momentous ruling allowing a momentous trade, an arbitrator ruled Tuesday that a deal is a deal is a deal. The Flyers get Eric Lindros, the Quebec Nordiques get a passel of players and money. The New York Rangers are left without a deal, but still with a team that had the NHL's best record last year, if no championship.

Arbitrator Larry Bertuzzi ruled Nordiques president Marcel Aubut and Flyers president Jay Snider reached a binding agreement the morning of June 20 in a Montreal hotel room.

A deal Aubut subsequently made with the Rangers didn't count, he said.

So the Flyers sent to Quebec goaltender Ron Hextall, defenseman Steve Duchesne and Kerry Huffman, centers Mike Ricci and Peter Forsberg, a 1993 first-round draft pick, future considerations and $15 million.

Eric Lindros

In return, they got a 6-foot-5, 19-year-old junior hockey phenom who hasn't played a minute in the NHL but will be expected to take the team to the playoffs next season, fill a new arena in 1994 and bring to mind a hard-hitting version of Wayne Gretzky or Mario Lemieux.

Fans will expect a Stanley Cup eventually, as Gretzky brought to Edmonton and Lemieux to Pittsburgh. The Flyers claim no timetable.

"The player is 19 years old and we have a young team already," Flyers general manager Russ Farwell said. "So how quickly it comes together, I can't say."

He did say: "A dominant player is a key part to a successful team and successful year, and we expect Eric Lindros to come here and have that

WIMBLEDON

Seles grunts past Tauziat in two sets

Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Grunting, like snoring, is tough to stop. Just ask Monica Seles, who faces a player uprising over her shrill, two-tone braying on every shot.

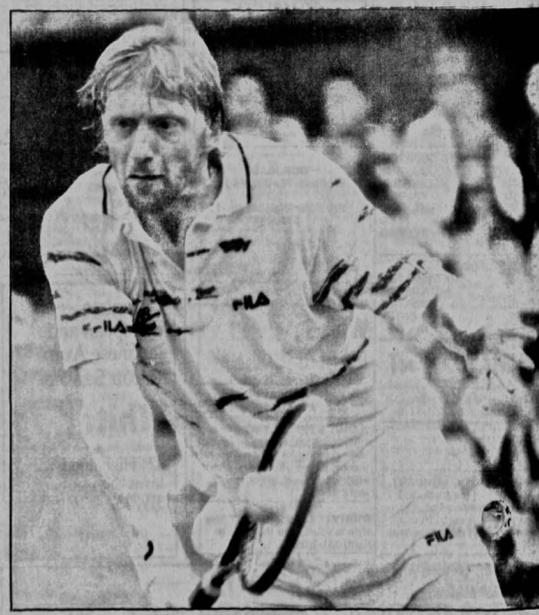

"Muzzle Monica" is the war cry at Wimbledon as she moves into the semifinals for the first time to meet nine-time champion Martina Navratilova.

Defending champion Steffi Graf also is in the semis, but she won't know her opponent until Wednesday. A stormy, rain-delayed day ended Tuesday with the crowd grumbling over the suspension of the Gabriela Sabatini-Jennifer Capriati match. Sabatini was about to serve for the match in the squinting dusk at 6-1, 3-6, 5-3.

If the women can't beat Seles, and so far nobody has in 40 straight Grand Slam matches over two years, the new strategy seems to be to silence her.

Nathalie Tauziat fired the first salvo on the grunt front Tuesday, lodging an official complaint with the umpire, and Navratilova also blasted Seles' yowls.

"As the match advanced, she screamed a lot, a lot, a lot," Tauziat said after losing 6-1, 6-3 in the quarterfinals. "It's very important for me to listen to the ball when she hit the ball, and I couldn't listen. That's why I asked the umpire, 'Can she scream less?'"

It was too late anyway." Tauziat didn't ask the umpire to try to muffle Seles until it was 5-3 in the second set, and Seles' groaning groundstrokes had been speeding past the Frenchwoman
