Panel says Bush not at Paris meeting

President George Bush did not attend the Youth Climate Summit on Parliament Hill this morning.

The president himself has made no public reply to the allegations, which have been vigorously denied by the White House and the Foreign Ministry. However, sources close to the Bush administration say that the president will make a statement later today.

The summit was held to discuss global warming and climate change, with representatives from over 100 countries attending.

Merchants concerned over loitering youths

Investigation: U.S. at fault in Iranian aircraft incident

Several prominent merchants, including those from the downtown Pedestrian Mall, said they were concerned about the increase in loitering youths.

The downtown Pedestrian Mall is a popular hangout for both local and out-of-town youths, causing some local merchants to be concerned.

The president himself has made no public reply to the allegations, which have been vigorously denied by the White House and the Foreign Ministry. However, sources close to the Bush administration say that the president will make a statement later today.

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City pet owners are more responsible than ever, thanks to a recent campaign by officers at the Coralville Animal Control. Pet owners have taken care of the problem of neglected animals in Coralville-Iowa City, the problem of the animal neglect in the area. In 1991, 1,141 animals were brought into the Animal Control, and 275 of them were destroyed. The problem has been reduced because of the campaign by Animal Control officers to explain the reasons for the neglect.

Beverly Horton, the director of the Animal Control, explained that the neglect of pets is not understood by the public. Pet owners have not taken responsibility for their pets, and this has led to the destruction of many animals. The Animal Control has been successful in taking the problem into their own hands to ensure public safety and proper veterinary care.

The Animal Control has provided education and awareness campaigns in order to take care of the problem. The Animal Control has also worked with the public to ensure that pets are treated properly.

In conclusion, the Animal Control has done a great job in taking care of the problem of neglected animals in Coralville-Iowa City. No smell detected in Village Green

Leidy Kennedy

The Daily Iowan

Residents of the Village Green housing area in southeast Iowa City have been wondering when their stinky neighbors would move out. Day by day, the water color and intense odor in the area has continued to increase, making it a never-ending nauseating smell.

"The smell is overwhelming," said Julie, a resident of Village Green. "It’s had to breathe sometimes."

The smell comes from a half-mile away from Village Green.

R.P. Smith Paper Co., United Technology Aerospace and the Press-Glasnik Co. have agreed to fund an independent air quality study, conducted by the U.S. Hygienics Laboratory, in an attempt to discover the source of the smell.

The study, directed by Keith Cherchik, the U.S. Hygienics Laboratory. The members of the Village Green neighborhood council of the study not to learn how to operate the air sensors.

"We would like to supply some help to air quality." said Smith. "We would like to advertise the monitors and who are to be responsible for the issues."

After the air samples were distributed, there has been a lot of complaints reported, but the smell disappeared when everyone could support, Smith said.

The U.S. Hygienics Laboratory was hired through Air Sciences.

"They’re really, should the environment worry them. That’s another thing we don’t know what the odor is or where it comes from.

According to Smith, R.P. Smith has made the changes to the production procedure.

"If something is occurring in the factory, they're doing something.

People involved have their air-quality help. We’re just waiting to see, she said.

220 youths prepare to strut their "Star Stuff"

The Daily Iowan

Under the direction of internacional dance educator Jacques d'Amboise, 220 students from 17 schools in the eastern Iowa region are going to take the stage at the Hancher Auditorium tonight for what Dance in America is claiming to be the first professional production of the dance form in recent memory.

The production, titled "Star Stuff," features the national dance eminence and his dance students of all ages, from the ages of 4 to 70. The group, under the direction of d'Amboise, will include performers of all skill levels, some of whom have never danced before.

"It's a joyful and touching celebration of art, and of an artist," says d'Amboise. "The message for the event will be produced by the University Symphony Orchestra, the Jazz Ensemble and the City High Singers.

The dancers, who range in age from 10 to 70, hail from 17 high schools in the area. They are participants in the Hancher program of workshops in the arts and dance, sponsored by the University's Arts Council. All the workshops were led by d'Amboise himself.

"Star Stuff" will be the result of the effort by d'Amboise and his students. The workshop participants have been working with d'Amboise the past few months at his workshops for the past two weekends in Coralville.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Hancher Auditorium. It will feature 220 performers, at least 80 of whom are students in grades K through 12.

The program will include music by George Gershwin, "Porgy and Bess," "An American in Paris." "Stars and Stripes Forever," "The Star Spangled Banner." It will also include the "national anthem" with music by Francis Scott Key and words by Robert W. Henry.

"Look at them," she said of the students.

Hancher said at first the dancers seemed excited about the idea of working with d'Amboise in the workshop, but then they got a little nervous because the idea of being on television was a little frightening to them. The idea of working with d'Amboise was not very appealing to them.

"I've been teaching workshops where the students have come from all over the country and from all walks of life," she said.

washington, d.c. - most americans could significantly cut their risk of cancer by adding a green salad to their daily diet, according to a study released here saturday.

the study of 127,000 women and 130,000 men found that those who reported eating three or more servings of fruits and vegetables a day had a 40 percent lower risk of cancer, compared to those who reported eating fewer than one serving a day.

the study, funded by the department of agriculture, is the largest study ever to look at the relationship between diet and cancer.

the findings suggest that the american public needs to eat more fruits and vegetables than it does now, according to the department of agriculture.

the department said that the findings are consistent with other studies and that they support the government's recommendation that americans eat a wide variety of fruits and vegetables daily.

the study also found that the risk of cancer is lower among those who eat a diet rich in fruits and vegetables, compared to those who eat a diet low in these nutrients.

the study, which was conducted by the department of agriculture and the federal trade commission, surveyed nearly 40,000 people in the 1980s and followed them for 10 years.

the researchers found that the risk of cancer is lower among those who eat a diet rich in fruits and vegetables, compared to those who eat a diet low in these nutrients.

U.S. Officially Makes It to Summer Games

NEW YORK (AP) - Moments before his final news conference, Jose Canseco turned his back on the cameras and announced his retirement from baseball. The All-Star slugger and six-time batting champion had been a constant fixture in the national spotlight for the past year, raising questions about his legal and personal life.

"It's a tough decision, but it's the right thing for me," Canseco said in a statement. "I have been through so much in my life, and I need to focus on the things that are important to me."

Canseco, who has been embroiled in a series of legal battles, including a paternity suit and a reported visit to a brothel, had announced his plans to retire earlier in the week.

The 35-year-old right fielder had been a key player for the Oakland A's for many years, but his recent controversies have cast a shadow over his legacy. Canseco is a former American League MVP and has played for four teams, including the San Diego Padres and the Tampa Bay Rays.

"His decision will certainly be felt in the game of baseball," said A's owner Lew Wolff. "Jose has been a tremendous player and a leader on and off the field. We wish him all the best in the future."

Canseco was a dominant force in the league for over a decade, hitting 462 home runs and driving in 1,601 runs during his career. He was a part of four World Series-winning teams and was named the Most Valuable Player in the 1999 World Series.

"Jose is one of the greatest players of his generation," said former teammate Frank Thomas. "He's one of the best players who ever lived."

Canseco's retirement comes after he was suspended for 20 games in 2018 for violating Major League Baseball's drug policy. He has also been involved in a paternity dispute, and his brokerage firm failed in 2017.

"Jose has had his ups and downs," said A's manager Bob Melvin. "But he's always been a class guy and a great teammate."

Canseco is expected to become a free agent and will likely pursue a career in broadcasting or coaching. He has expressed interest in joining the A's broadcast team.

"I've been close to the game for a long time," Canseco said. "I know this is the right move for me."

Canseco will be inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 2022. He's eligible for the Hall of Fame in 2021.

"Jose is a Hall of Famer," said Melvin. "There's no question about it."

Canseco's retirement leaves a void in the A's lineup, where he was the team's designated hitter in 2018. The team has been in negotiations with other batters to fill the gap, including former American League MVP Paul Goldschmidt.

"We'll need to find a replacement," said Melvin. "But we'll get through this. We have a lot of talent on this team."

Canseco's decision has sparked a debate about his legacy in baseball. Some have praised him for his accomplishments, while others have criticized his behavior.

"Jose was a great player," said former teammate Tim Raines. "But he had some issues in his personal life. It's a shame to see him leave the game.

"But he's a Hall of Famer," added Raines. "That's the important thing."

Benchwarmer Jordan revels in uncommon territory

Bob Raun

PORTLAND, Ore. — Michael Jordan is having so much fun playing on the U.S. Olympic team he doesn't even mind being a benchwarmer.

"There's no better 'scope," Magic Johnson said, pointing to Jordan, "the greatest backup point guard in the world." He was a suited spectator at the U.S. Olympic team's training camp in the San Alminion Mountains of Panama.

Jordan didn't start — the first time that's happened since he was on that first high school team in a segregated era. And he's sure he'll have any sympathy, Jordan said.

"When I was up to the method, I had an emergency," Jordan said. "When it was my turn to step up on the basketball court, I went out there and played." He said coach Chuck Daly has made it clear that everyone would take a backup role.

Furied to play backup guard after John Stockton broke his right hand Monday night, Jordan reviled in the role. He pretended to listen in on the Panamanian huddle, and had a laugh as guard Reginald Thurlow gagged in the rural half.

"We had a deal," Jordan said. "I'll borrow you one of the first half, I told him. 'If you want me to take all five on you, I'll take a very low wrist." Jordan went out and took to the bench and said: "That's not the way Tracy supposed to take it easy. It was basically fun. I had a great time talking to him.

Jordan played 12 balls of golf with those in the hotel. "I shot a 79 and 66. The 79 I was a little tired," Jordan said.

He didn't look tired in the first half against Panama, hitting all five of his field goal attempts, four of them from the 3-point range.

The new master-player of the world has taken a different approach to the tournament. "This is a relaxed attitude. I don't have to get up and shut," he said.

As for his new look, "My wife loves it," he said, "I could care less what you think."
Change of scenery the talk in 'City of Brotherly Love'

Ralph Bernstein

PHILADELPHIA — Eric Lindros in any form is great. His missed games, his baseline tests, even his latest move from the Flyers to the Rangers, have only underscored that.

The Flyers have been in the city since the '70s, so there's a lot of history to it. And the Rangers have been in the city since the '40s, so there's a lot of history there.

But the biggest story this year is the move of Eric Lindros from Philadelphia to New York. He's the tallest, broadest, strongest, and most talented hockey player in the NHL, and he's getting away from the Flyers.

ST. LOUIS CARDINALS

Tewksbury go-to guy for Cards

Tewksbury had a 1.94 ERA, the Cards' Bob Tewksbury would
All-time game just yet.

Although he is the National League's leading pitcher with a 1.94 ERA, the Cards' Bob Tewksbury would rather not talk about a possible invitation to the Indians back to that pinpoint control.
He's working on a string of 277 consecutive innings without a walk. Earlier in the season he had a streak of 26 straight innings without a walk.

"They're so inconsistent when he's abroad, the count of him being on the mound, he's getting an awful lot of regularly.
Tewksbury is known as a soft thrower who can't stay out of his hands. He's not so good in the old days, but Tewksbury had a reluctance to throw his fastball for strikes because he was worried about getting himself pitching. They're worried about the ball.

"Then he's not obnoxious to him, Tews. And it's about of course, a lot of his success

It's about his date until the last day after his start and although, Tews also rather than Tewksbury, and his doubt Druscher doesn't have much work left.
Minutes after sieving seven hits in a complete game 11 victory over the Pirates last Monday, Tewks-bury was losing 11 of a pair of seven hits.

Free agent Ainge prepared to sign with Phoenix

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Danny Ainge appears to have sealed his future by agreeing to sign a free agent contract with the Trail Blazers for $1.5 million over three years, a deal that was announced Wednesday. It was the second straight year Ainge was on the verge of leaving Portland, but this year he was able to make it official.

"They feel they have a need for me and were excited about getting Danny Ainge," said a Trail Blazers official, who asked not to be identified. "He did a lot of work this summer to improve his game and he's ready to take that next step." Ainge was in Philadelphia to sign the deal Wednesday afternoon, but Rudy Bukovsky, Portland's vice president for basketball operations, said he was at the airport getting ready to fly home.

Ainge's three-year deal will average $500,000 a year. In 1980, Ainge averaged 11.1 points per game and was sixth in the NBA in assists. In 1981, he averaged 14.0 points per game and signed a six-year contract with the Blazers worth a total of $1.5 million.

Ainge said he had to do his homework before making the decision to leave Portland. He said his team was interested in bringing him back, but he felt he had to leave to improve his game.

Ainge was one of the league's top players in 1980, when he averaged 17.9 points per game and was third in the NBA in steals.
