University Libraries ranked 43rd

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

The UI may aspire to being one of the top 10 public research institutions in the country, but a recent ranking of university research libraries shows the University Libraries at the very bottom of the Big Ten.

The ranking, which appeared in the May 6 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education, ranked the University Libraries 43rd in the nation, and tenth in the Big Ten.

The ranking, which were compiled by the Association of Research Libraries, was based on size of collection and total expenditures, not on the quality of the library material.

The University Libraries were shown to contain 3,174,269 volumes. Harvard University's libraries, which were ranked first, were listed as holding 12,169,064 volumes.

"We are really beginning to fall short of what we should have available," said University Librarian Sheila Creth. "It's discouraging. We just have less of what we should to comprise a quality research library."

The University Libraries, which were once ranked 23rd by the ARL, have seen a steady erosion during the past few years in the number of volumes they hold.

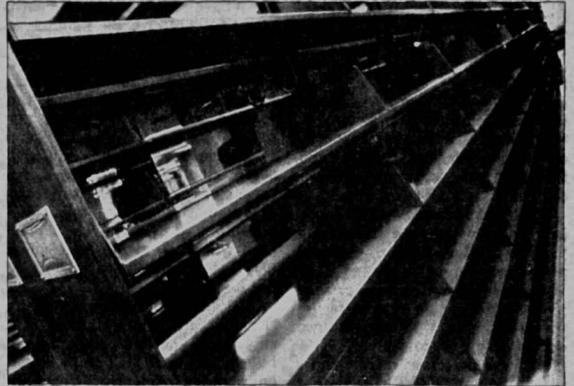

According to Creth, the reasons for the erosion include a limited budget, the rising cost of scientific and technological materials, and the lower purchasing power of the dollar in Europe, where the University Libraries purchase many of their materials.

Last year, Creth said, the University Libraries received no increase in budget while there was a 30 percent increase in the cost of materials. The result was a reduction of 10 percent of the libraries' serials, or about 15,000 titles.

Another year without an increase in the libraries' budget could result in the cancellation of another 15 percent of the libraries' serials collection.

"For us, it would be pretty devastating to have to cut more titles," Creth said. "The entire focus of a research institution is on ideas, access to ideas, information, discovering — that's what we're all here for."

Bone marrow donor drive to be held Wednesday

A one-day, large scale donor drive has been organized for Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Iowa Room of the Union for Wen-Ling Wen, a Taiwanese UI doctoral candidate in need of a bone marrow transplant.

More than 100 potential donors are expected to give a small amount of blood, which will then be tissue typed and compared with the typing of Wen and other patients searching for a donor.

The odds of finding a tissue match at the drive will be slim, ranging from one in 20,000 to one in a million. Wen's prospects for a match are greatest among people of Chinese descent.

Gov. Terry Branstad to honor Iowa's top students

Gov. Terry Branstad will welcome 80 of Iowa's top students to the Fifth Annual Iowa Governor's Summer Institute for Gifted and Talented today at the UI.

Branstad will deliver his welcoming address and take questions from participating Iowa students from 2-3:30 p.m. in the Senate Chambers of the Old Capitol building on the UI campus.

The UI's Connie Belin National Center for Gifted Education will host this summer's institute which runs from July 5-25.

Earlier this year, the Iowa Legislature appropriated $67,725 to the Iowa Department of Education to support the institute, which provides an educational experience for talented Iowa students, ages 13 to 15 from public and approved private schools.

That was the reason!

MIAMI (AP) — A man who popped his hood when his car wouldn't steer right found a stubborn 6-foot Asian water monitor lizard wrapped around the engine.

The animal had somehow knocked off the car's alternator belt and was blocking the steering column. A specialist had to be called to remove the stubborn lizard.

"We squirted it with Joy detergent to make it slippery, then sedated it," the specialist said. "Then we had to take the engine apart."

Police cleared in Boipatong massacre

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An interracial, government-appointed commission said Monday it had found no evidence of involvement by senior officials in the Boipatong June 17 massacre or other black township fighting.

But the panel charged that President F.W. de Klerk's administration had ignored previous commission proposals on halting the violence, which has claimed thousands of lives.

Police said at least 24 people died in weekend violence that was believed to be politically motivated.

The report by the judicial commission, led by Judge Richard Goldstone, followed a preliminary hearing on the massacre June 17 of at least 42 blacks in the Boipatong black township.

New VP for research selected

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

UI officials announced Monday that they have selected UI Professor of Internal Medicine David Skorton to serve as vice president for research, effective Aug. 1.

Skorton, who has worked at the UI for the past 12 years, was selected from a pool of about 150 applicants.

"I'm honored to be chosen," Skorton said. "Whatever success I've had at the UI is due to the nurturing effect of the university community."

Skorton said he hopes to repay the UI community by continuing to make the UI a productive atmosphere for scholarship.

Defining what constitutes research, he said, is a major part of creating such an atmosphere.

"I'm thinking of research as representing creative scholarship, not just in the sciences, but in the arts and in the humanities as well," he said. "I want to continue fostering a creative atmosphere at the UI."

Skorton, who will continue teaching and doing research at the UI along with serving as co-director of the Cardiovascular Research Center's Specialized Center for Research in Coronary and Vascular Diseases, said he hopes his experience at the UI will help him build a consensus among the whole UI community in setting the UI's research goals.

"I want to be as broadly based as possible," he said. "I'm going to be formally and informally talking to students, faculty and staff to set See RESEARCH, Page 6

Summit leaders prepare to endorse $24 billion aid package for Russia

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

MUNICH, Germany — Russia's economic troubles and possible U.N. military action to speed relief to Yugoslavia seized the spotlight Monday as Western leaders opened their 18th annual economic summit.

While it was unlikely that President Bush and the leaders of Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy would come up with any novel approaches to boost global growth or to resolve contentious differences on trade, a consensus seemed to be forming on other issues.

The United States endorsed the opening of a land corridor to supply Bosnia with food and medicine and raised the specter that it would be prepared to use naval and air power to prevent Serbian militia from interfering with the humanitarian effort.

"This group is indeed working on communique language that will commit them to significant support for whatever is necessary" to provide relief in shattered Yugoslavia, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

To help Russia, the leaders were preparing to formally endorse a $24 billion aid package unveiled two months ago by Bush and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the host for this year's summit.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said Russia would receive the first $1 billion from the International Monetary Fund on Aug. 7.

Yeltsin also was expected to win acceptance of his demand for a two-year moratorium on debt payments, and the West appeared ready to provide emergency aid to repair Chernobyl-type nuclear power reactors still operating in the former Soviet bloc.

The summit began with the usual high quotient of pomp and pageantry as German officials went all out to promote the chief tourist sites in this 800-year-old Bavarian city famed for its annual Oktoberfest.

The leaders were received by Kohl in a giant square next to the Residenz, the 130-room former royal palace where they repaired for talks.

Watching the arrivals were hundreds of specially invited Bavarians dressed in traditional attire — men in dark hats, gray jackets and lederhosen and women and girls in dirndls and aprons.

Police arrested more than 450 protesters, some after they had broken through police barricades. In another incident, protesters firebombed a branch of the country's biggest bank, Deutsche Bank.

SARAJEVO

Separate Croatian state 'treasonous' to Bosnia

Terry Leonard
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The declaration of an independent Croatian state within Bosnia was termed treasonous Monday by the Muslim-led Bosnian leadership.

The ethnic mosaic of newly independent Bosnia was fractured further with the proclamation of "Herzeg-Bosnia," a Croatian enclave covering more than 20 percent of the former Yugoslav republic.

Bosnia, with a combustible mix of Muslims, Serbs and Croats, was already carved up by the April proclamation of a Serbian state from nearly two-thirds of the republic at the start of the bloody civil war.

If the Croatian declaration becomes a reality, that would leave the Bosnian government in control of only the capital city of Sarajevo and a few provincial towns.

Although the political solution is deteriorating and the neighborhoods around the airport are still battlegrounds, the international airlift to Sarajevo is "a small miracle" going better than expected, said U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard.

In what is potentially among the most dramatic relief efforts in postwar Europe, 15 flights were expected Monday after 28 arrived over the weekend. That was well above U.N. projections of eight a day when the airport was opened June 29.

The United States on Monday endorsed a German proposal to pry open a land corridor from Croatia to Sarajevo while leaders of the world's seven richest countries meeting in Munich, Germany, considered providing military protection for the relief effort.

At the same time, the French revived a proposal to hold an international conference on Yugoslavia that would be attended by the 15 members of the U.N. Security Council and some of Yugoslavia's neighbors, Italian Foreign Minister Vincenzo Scotti said.

About 465 tons of aid has reached the capital, but relief workers are having trouble getting rations to neighborhoods where supply stocks are down to bread and beans.

Only 42 of the 102 communities in the greater Sarajevo area had received shipments by Monday, U.N. officials said.

The state of Herzeg-Bosnia, with a capital in the war-battered town of Mostar, was outlined Saturday by Mate Boban, a Croat leader with a force of about 30,000 soldiers controlling southwestern Bosnia.

State Department spokesman

"The war in Croatia is definitely over."

Franjo Tudjman, Croatian president

Margaret Tutweiler said Monday that the United States "has consistently opposed any forcible changes in borders. . . . We repeat our basic policy: It is for the people of the area to resolve questions about their future peacefully and through negotiations."

The creation of Herzeg-Bosnia appears to further jeopardize any hope of creating an independent multi-ethnic Bosnia from the former Yugoslav republic of 4.3 million people, where 44 percent are Muslim, three in 10 are Serb and 17 percent Croat.

In a letter to Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, Tudjman said the Croats had to organize against "Serbian aggression" and certain "tendencies" of the Muslim leadership of Bosnia.

Tudjman also declared, "The war in Croatia is definitely over." U.N. peacekeepers had assumed control of four disputed regions and Yugoslav army troops and Serb irregulars were withdrawing, he said.

Associated Press

Riot policemen stand opposite a group of demonstrators near the site of the world economic summit in Munich, Germany, Monday.

The crisis in Yugoslavia took center stage as the leaders opened three days of meetings.

The United States threw its support behind a German proposal to open a land corridor from Croatia to expand relief shipments. The move would risk intervention by the Serbian militia, compelling peacekeepers to respond with force.

Officials said the bloody conflict in Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina, was a main topic in the opening discussions between Bush and the other summit leaders and separate talks involving Secretary of State James Baker and the six other foreign ministers.

PHONE COMPANIES

Rivalry for most customers continues

AT&T, MCI and U.S. Sprint all run no-holds-barred ad campaigns in order to best one another.

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

Since the court-ordered breakup of AT&T nearly a decade ago, the competition for customers among the three main carriers, MCI, U.S. Sprint and AT&T, remains fierce, offering consumers savings and flexibility at the cost of greater confusion.

The breakup dramatically altered how telephone service is provided in the United States. Regional phone companies, such as U.S. West in the Iowa City area, provide local service, while customers are free to choose the long-distance carrier they wish to use.

MCI was one of the first companies to challenge AT&T's complete dominance of the long-distance market, and its aggressive telemarketing department and lower rates have lured many customers away from Ma Bell. According to MCI's David Lauterbach, MCI is now second in market share, behind only AT&T and ahead of archrival U.S. Sprint.

Lauterbach said MCI's base rates are 10 percent lower than AT&T's.

In addition to its often lower base rates, MCI also offers several special savings plans to compete with those offered by AT&T and Sprint. MCI's "Prime Time" plan is typical of many offered in the industry. For a fixed rate of $7.95 per month, consumers receive 60 minutes of interstate phone service when they call during designated evening and weekend periods. Additional minutes are purchased at the reduced rate of 10.5 cents per minute.

This basic plan can be modified to better meet individual needs if a consumer calls at different times or makes mostly in-state calls. MCI also offers an "Around The World" plan for $3 a month that offers discounted rates to a variety of countries.

MCI has recently been touting its "Friends and Family" offer that cuts rates between callers who both subscribe to MCI and who call one another frequently. The service is free.

Under the plan, MCI asks subscribers for a list of 20 frequently called numbers. For 90 days, the subscriber can call those numbers and receive a 20 percent discount. If the people on the list are found to be MCI subscribers already, the discount continues after the 90 days, and if not, MCI tries to sign up the other households.

AT&T has attacked the plan in recent television ads as an invasion of consumers' privacy because participation requires consumers to turn over the names and numbers of their family and friends.

In recent years AT&T has tried to promote itself as the dependable, reliable carrier with the strongest, most helpful customer service. However, recent crashes in AT&T's vast network have caused many to lose faith and switch carriers.

Apparently in recognition of this, AT&T has strengthened and altered many of its established savings plans, and has also offered a free switch to AT&T for anyone who currently uses another carrier. U.S. Sprint has taken a slightly different approach in its quest for customers by offering many different calling plans while claiming to have better sound quality than its competitors.

According to Sprint's Kevin Rew, Sprint is the only carrier with a completely fiber optic network. Fiber optic technology converts sound into light signals for transmission.

"Sprint has a hundred or so plans for different calling patterns," Rew said.

By asking new and old customers questions about their calling patterns, Sprint's computers can determine which plan would save them the most money, he said.

"Sprint has the cheapest base rates," Rew added, although he noted, "we're all pretty much the same."

For college students, the cheapest rates are usually to be had by those who live in the dorms.

According to William Cleveland, manager of the UI Office of Telecommunications, students there are billed at AT&T rates for long-distance service minus a time of day discount and minus an additional 10 percent on top of that. The UI can offer such low rates because it buys its long-distance phone service in bulk.

"In essence we buy our phone service at wholesale rates," Cleveland said.

Report: Handgun health, not political, issue

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Instead of recommending a ban on handgun sales, a report released Monday by the UI Injury Prevention Research Center suggests a public health approach to help curb the growing number of deaths and injuries due to firearms.

James Merchant, director of the UI Injury Prevention Research Center, said that firearms need to be looked at as a major health problem, and not necessarily as a political issue.

Statistics in the report state that gun injuries are the leading cause of death among young black males and the eighth most common cause of death in this country. It also notes that there are more than twice as many firearms in private hands now as in 1969 — nearly 200 million.

"At the present time, the reporting of injuries caused by firearms is not adequate," Merchant said. "In order to address the problem, we need a system by which such injuries are reported so we can learn how, when and how often they occur."

The report also suggested an examination of the distribution and causes of firearm deaths and injuries in order to find out the risks associated with firearm ownership. Intervention strategies, which would combine legislative policies and public education, would address those risks.

"The unique aspect of this approach is its focus on public health by doctors and public health officials. Much of the time these issues get characterized in political, constitutional or economic terms," said Nicolas Johnson, co-director of the UI Institute for Health, Behavior and the Environmental Policy, the other sponsor of the report.

"Deaths and injuries from gunfire are not confined to television and the movies. They are a very real problem with very real costs," he said. The report urges the repeal of the Iowa pre-emption law, which prohibits local governments from regulating firearms. The report also calls for all firearms to be child-resistant and for ultra-hazardous ammunition and weapons to be outlawed.

The report, "Handgun Injuries: A Public Health Approach," is a result of a symposium held last January in the wake of the shootings on the UI campus last November.

The symposium was co-sponsored by the UI, the UI Lecture Committee and the November First Coalition.

UNDERAGE SMOKING

Police say enforcement of law not top priority

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Teen-agers grow up amazingly fast when Sgt. Clet Keating strolls up for a chat. So they say, anyway.

Keating works in Iowa City and has occasion to visit a second-chance high school there. Logic tells the policeman that some of the students will be under age 18. Therefore, when they gather in the alley for a smoke break, chances are some of them are breaking Iowa's year-old law that makes teen-age smoking a crime.

But, Keating says, all the kids suddenly get older when he steps up.

"Everybody suddenly turns of age — I'm old enough, I'm old enough," he said.

Keating isn't about to make a federal case out of it. He could check IDs and march a few kids

"I don't think we have a lot of enforcement on that law."

Sgt. Clet Keating

down to the station, but the smoking law isn't exactly a high priority among Iowa police departments.

Des Moines Police Sgt. Gail Dunn said smoking enforcement isn't a top priority.

"If you told me, 'Well, in between trips here, would you mind stopping this kid for smoking?' I'd say, 'Right, yeah. Get a life,'" Dunn said.

But it's still a law, whether it's enforced or not.

The law apparently remains the only one of its kind, according to Carol Siple, director of programs for the American Lung Association in Des Moines.

Anyone under 18 caught smoking, chewing or even possessing tobacco in Iowa is subject to fines of up to $100 or a spell of community service.

"I think we're well aware of the law, but it falls in the lines of a warning," said Keating. "I don't think we have a lot of enforcement on that law."

Which, Siple says, is too bad. "We know it's not their priority," she said. "The law could be enforced. We see police setting up stings on purchases of liquor, they could do the same thing with tobacco products."

She said smoking claims more lives than crime, but that the public's attention is drawn to the dramatic.

"A drive-by shooting gets more media than the 50 or 60 who die every week from tobacco-related illnesses," she said. "If you smoke a pack today, it won't make all that much difference. It's 10, 20, 30 years down the road that it matters."

Nobody keeps track of how many arrests have been made since the law went into effect July 1, 1991. But there haven't been many. Siple said there were a "handful" in the first months and none since then. "I would have to say it hasn't been tested."

Even so, she said she supports the law as a soldier in the army against smoking.

"Our priority is to prevent kids from starting to smoke. It's much easier to not start than it is to stop," she said. She said about one in four American adults smoke; about half the rate of a generation ago.

Keating said he doesn't mind the law, even though its enforcement is spotty.

"It's the wave of the future that smoking is unacceptable," he said.

DUBUQUE KKK RALLY

TV station KDUB will appeal videotape decision

Associated Press

DUBUQUE — Dubuque television station KDUB will appeal a judge's order to give prosecutors unaired videotape of an assault following a Ku Klux Klan rally May 29.

Prosecutors demanded the tape, saying there was no other way of obtaining evidence on the beating of Klan supporter Carl Schlie. The station maintained the tape was privileged material under the First Amendment.

The Iowa Supreme Court first blocked attempts by prosecutors to obtain the tapes, saying they had to show a "compelling need" to see them and for a judge to agree after seeing the tape in private.

Dubuque District Court Judge Alan Pearson viewed the tape last week and ordered the station to turn it over.

KDUB attorney Richard Whitley said Monday the station would appeal, saying the station should not have to comply until the Supreme Court reviews the case.

Prosecutors Monday formally asked for the Supreme Court to force the station to turn over the tapes. The station has two weeks to file its appeal.

CITY COUNCIL

Members, local residents discuss street alterations

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

The proposed widening of Kirkwood Avenue and the proposed closing of Old Dubuque Road were topics of lively debate at a work session of the Iowa City City Council Monday night.

The proposed widening of Kirkwood Avenue would widen the street at various points, allowing for more traffic flow and longer left-turn lanes.

Councilor Randy Larson opened the discussion by asking, "Is there anybody who wants to widen Kirkwood from what it is now?"

Discussion followed regarding the need for widening at the north end of Kirkwood Avenue at its intersection with Gilbert Street.

While most council members agreed that widening the Gilbert Street intersection is necessary to allow for more left-turn lane space, there was some question as to the fate of parking places along the street.

Metered parallel parking was suggested as an option, as was developing sharing agreements with businesses which currently own parking lots.

Also discussed were proposed alterations to the curve where Kirkwood Avenue becomes Lower Muscatine Road, but the council decided to discard that proposal after agreeing that the curve is not more dangerous than others like it in Iowa City.

"That curve is not as tight as the one on Park Road or the one on River Street," Councilor Naomi Novick said. "People slow down if it's tight."

The council agreed to change the Kirkwood Avenue resolution on the agenda of tonight's council meeting to include only a proposed widening of the street near the Gilbert Street intersection.

The ACT Development agreement, which would allow for the closing of Old Dubuque Road where it crosses American College Testing program property, brought discussion from councilors, ACT representatives and concerned area residents.

Larson said he questioned the closing of Old Dubuque Road when plans for extending First Avenue had not yet begun, arguing that it will add significant traffic flow to Dodge and Governor streets in Iowa City.

After further discussion the councilors decided that the closing was warranted and increased traffic flow would not be unmanageable.

Residents voiced their opposition to the closing, arguing that it will hurt the business of area farmers and leave them with limited access to their land.

Resident Don Gaines said he is upset over ACT's lack of communication with residents and feels that closing the road will be extremely detrimental to the farmers.

"If you make a decision with ACT tomorrow, it will be the biggest injustice Iowa City has seen," he told the council.

Other matters discussed at the work meeting included the proposed addition of a grain milling factory in the I-1 zone of Iowa City and the proposed county contributions to the Iowa City Public Library budget, which the Johnson County Board of Supervisors is expected to vote on at its meeting today.

The question of advertising in schools has raised much legal controversy in several states. Northwest Junior High School in Iowa City will soon have a part in that controversy.

The school is planning to run Channel One, a news broadcast containing 10 minutes of news and two minutes of commercials, in its classrooms beginning next February.

Northwest Junior High Principal Bryce Hansen said the school decided to pilot Channel One because the faculty was concerned that students aren't as aware of current events as they should be.

The school will receive hardware for subscribing to the program at no cost to the school.

For every 23 students, the school receives a monitor for a classroom. Northwest will also receive a satellite dish to pick up the programming along with two additional channels, including The Classroom Channel, which shows some of the same programming as PBS, and The Educator's Channel, which is a service for teachers.

"They provide the equipment, and if at any point we decide to pull out, they take it back," Hansen said.

Hansen said the equipment can also be used for school purposes such as assemblies and morning announcements.

Northwest High is the only school in the district that wanted to run Channel One, Superintendent of Schools Barbara Grohe said at a recent Iowa City Community School District School Board meeting.

Hansen said, "Some schools were concerned about taking time out of the school day. To remedy that we're going to make the school day longer by reducing some of the socializing time before school."

He said other schools are just not ready to try new things. "The faculty here wanted to at least give it a try," he said.

But the biggest concern seen recently throughout the country is the use of commercials in the broadcast. Several states including California, New York and North Carolina are bringing legal action against the company, which is operated by Christopher Whittle.

However, Hansen feels the tradeoff of two minutes of commercials is worth it.

"People are becoming too involved with those two minutes. It isn't as if kids don't see these advertisements at home. If the advertising is the big concern, then we might as well take the magazines out of the library because they have ads in them too," he said.

Hansen said the advertising offers some educational opportunities for the students.

"It lets kids analyze what's taking place. It allows critical views of the broadcast media. I think it can be used in a very positive way," he said.

Many educators disagree with Hansen.

"The whole thing is still being paid for by selling kids to advertisers. The Trojan horse now has a golden harness," Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, said in an issue of Time magazine.

California Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig is calling for a ban on Channel One in that state.

RIVERBOATS

Employees ready casinos for trip

Greg Smith
Associated Press

FORT MADISON, Iowa — Employees of the two floating casinos that plan to leave Iowa for Biloxi, Miss., prepared the vessels Monday for the journey, loading office furniture but leaving behind gift shop items and liquor.

The Diamond Lady in Bettendorf was expected to depart on Tuesday, spokeswoman Kim Merchant said, while the Emerald Lady remained docked in Fort Madison pending resolution of a legal dispute with the city.

The Diamond Lady is operated by Steamboat Development Corp. and the Emerald Lady is operated by Steamboat Southeast Inc. Both companies are owned by Bernard Goldstein, who announced on May 27 he could not make money in Iowa and was moving the vessels to Biloxi. Sunday was the boats' last day of business in Iowa.

The Emerald Lady is awaiting a federal judge's ruling on whether it owes any money to Fort Madison. U.S. District Court Judge Harold Vietor has put the vessel under "house arrest," preventing it from leaving the state prior to his decision.

The Emerald Lady was embroiled in a lawsuit last week when Fort Madison officials claimed the boat owners had to honor a seven-year contract before leaving town. The contract requires the boat to pay docking fees of $55,000 a year. Boat owners maintain they don't owe any debts.

from office and dock sites.

The Diamond Lady is expected to weigh anchor at about 1 p.m. Tuesday and will push the pavilion down the Mississippi River to Biloxi in time for gambling operations early next month, she said.

While they helped ready the boats, some employees said they were excited to be going along. Steamboat has offered workers the chance to retain their positions if they move south, and it is offering them $750 in moving expenses.

"I think it's going to be fun," said Nancy Merrill of Wilton.

She and her husband, Brian, both live in Wilton and work as dealers aboard the Diamond Lady. With no children and no mortgage, they decided to take Steamboat up on its offer.

"We're happy with the company. We'll stand up for Steamboat. We're looking forward to moving down there," Brian Merrill said.

Kumar Wickramasingha is from Sri Lanka and lived in Fort Madison while working as the head chef on the Emerald Lady. He's going to Biloxi, too.

"Everybody complains about Steamboat leaving, but gosh, they took care of us. They're taking care of us now," he said.

In Bettendorf on Monday, workers moved furniture and file cabinets from company headquarters to the boat and a pavilion that will be detached by crane from the dock site Tuesday, Merchant said.

Vendors at both Bettendorf and Fort Madison also were busy collecting candy and pop machines

JOHNSON COUNTY

Courthouse to beef up security

Anne Johnston
The Daily Iowan

In the wake of a number of courtroom shootings across the country, the Johnson County Sheriff's Department is beefing up security at the county courthouse in hopes of preventing a similar incident here.

In the most recent courtroom shooting, two attorneys were killed and two judges seriously wounded when a gunman suddenly opened fire at the Tarrant County Courthouse in Fort Worth, Texas, Wednesday afternoon.

"Those incidents are things that have been brought to our attention and we're trying to do what we can," Sheriff Bob Carpenter said. "I think there's probably never enough that can be done."

Carpenter said his department is preparing to install approximately $6,000 to $7,000 worth of equipment in the courthouse, including both walk-through and hand-held metal detectors. The equipment, which is being funded by monies from Sheriff Department's budget, just arrived last week.

Additional measures are also being taken, Carpenter said, including locking doors that had previously been left unlocked and training courthouse employees how to react in a crisis situation.

The stepped-up security measures stem from an appearance in May before the county Board of Supervisors by Judge August Honsell, chief judge of the 6th Judicial District.

At Honsell's request, a panel was formed to look into the state of security at the courthouse and make improvements where needed, Carpenter said.

Carpenter, who serves on the panel, said they are aiming to improve security without inconveniencing courthouse employees and others who use the building on a daily basis.

"We don't want to make it difficult for the average person to get in and out of the courthouse," he said. "We just want to detect the problem if we have to."

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White, whose office is located in the courthouse, said the possibility of violence occurring there has crossed his mind.

"I think you always have the potential for people who are misguided to do things that are illegal. Certainly we had a pretty vivid experience with that locally ourselves Nov. 1," White said.

White said society may need to go beyond improving security at courthouses and other buildings in the effort to prevent such incidents by rethinking the use of violence to address grievances.

"There are just too many people resorting to guns as a means to send messages," White said.

HEALTH CARE IN IOWA

Rural physicians' fees could double

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Roughly half the state will be eligible for special incentives to lure doctors after Gov. Terry Branstad gave 50 counties a "health professional shortage" designation Monday.

The governor's designation for 50 of the state's 99 counties is a move which allows doctors to collect higher payments for Medicaid and Medicare patients.

In some cases, the rate doctors will be able to collect for those patients will nearly double.

"It's a new option that's available," Branstad said at his regular meeting with reporters. "We think it's going to make a significant difference."

Under the federal health programs, urban hospitals and physicians are allowed to collect higher payments than rural practitioners, to reflect higher costs in the cities.

By listing the 50 counties as shortage areas, practitioners will be able to collect the higher rates. To become eligible, they would have to meet a series of guidelines on the types of care that must be offered.

Aides said they expect as many as 10 rural clinics to be established in the program's first year.

The financial incentives are significant, Branstad said. For instance, a doctor in a rural setting is now allowed to collect $25 for a standard examination. That would rise to $51.

"This is especially important to Iowans living in smaller communities, and to rural hospitals and to the retention and attraction of additional physicians to rural Iowa," said Branstad.

The certification would include both rural hospitals and physician practices. It generally applies to care provided on an outpatient basis.

"We're talking about routine care that doesn't require hospitalization," said Branstad.

The issue of rural health care is important to the state, largely because of its demographics. Iowa has one of the oldest populations in the nation, and a high percentage of the elderly live in rural settings where fewer and fewer doctors are practicing.

"Many of these people live in small towns and it's difficult for them to get many miles," said the governor.

Craig Thompson, a physician practicing in Strawberry Point, appeared with Branstad Monday to unveil the effort, pointing to "a general graying of the countryside" that makes it needed.

"The lower pay than your metropolitan colleagues seems to rub salt in the wounds," he said.

POLL

54% say Bush needs new vice president

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Most Iowans say they believe President Bush should select a new running mate, according to a new poll.

The survey said 54 percent of the Iowans questioned last month said Bush should drop Dan Quayle, while 37 percent said the vice president should remain on the GOP ticket and 9 percent were uncertain.

Just over one-third of the Iowa Republicans questioned — 35 percent — said Bush should replace Quayle on the ticket. The poll also said 66 percent of Democrats and 60 percent of political independdents said Bush should drop Quayle.

Asked to grade Quayle's performance, 36 percent approved, 58 percent disapproved and 6 percent were uncertain, according to the results from the copyright poll published Monday by the Des Moines Register. In response to the same question in October 1991, 37 percent approved of Quayle's performance, 52 percent disapproved and 9 percent were unsure.

The telephone poll of 810 adult Iowans was conducted from June 14-23 and had a margin of error of plus or minus 3.4 percentage points.

CHATTERBOX

Hair coloring, cancer link rings untrue

Mandy Crane
The Daily Iowan

"Did you read this morning's DI?"
No. I decided to watch CNN and get some real news.
"There's an article in there about dying your hair and how it can cause cancer."

What? Gee. Great. Thanks for the news.
"Well, I just figured you'd want to know since you're so healthy about everything else."

That's from a phone call I received after an Associated Press article on cancerous substances was released to newspapers nationwide Thursday.

Correct me if I'm wrong (and most of you do — just ask Alan Brink, a man and his trailer), but why is it scientists always find things that usually are higher in health risks for WOMEN?

Colon cancer aside, everything else seems to be hazardous to women in particular.

There are the obvious things like birth control pills, saccharine and men but people have been saying for years that caffeine is worse when digested by women. It does something like make our breasts fibrous and intensifies cramps — not like I would know.

Everything that's supposed to make us feel better (and thus more attractive to men) keeps coming up in the cancer zone. Remember Red Dye No. 2? It was in lipstick. What about Rely tampons and toxic shock syndrome? And now they're picking on hair dye? I'm surprised they didn't think of that one sooner.

The AP article states that the National Cancer Institute found that "women who colored their hair appear to have a 50 percent higher risk of developing the non-Hodgkins lymphoma (a cancer of the immune system) when compared to women who never dye their hair."

Show me a woman who has never dyed her hair and I'll show you an efficiency apartment in Iowa City with a frost-free refrigerator. They're around, it just takes a long time to find them.

If the study is indeed accurate, I'm a prime candidate for cancer of the what-sis by autumn 1994. My hair has been in its natural state only once since 1981 when I first started experimenting with Sun-In in high school.

Since then it has been orange, blonde, white, brown, purple, yellow, reddish, grayish, two-toned, triple-processed, permed, tinted, highlighted, frosted, bleached, fried and dyed on a regular basis.

I and my hair are still here. The most popular questions people ask me once they really think they are getting to know me are:
1. Does anyone ever sing that Barry Manilow song to you? and
2. What's your REAL hair color?

Well, for all the curious: 1. Yes, I hear "Copacabana" all the time.
2. According to one of my hairdressers (I have several), it's "dirty blonde."

What my concerned friend failed to realize when he called the other day is that women bleached far more than I have managed to live long, healthy lives and are better candidates for immune disorders than this young cookie.

Lucille Ball hung around for a long time and it was more the cigarettes than the weekly touch-ups that eventually did her in. Madonna is still alive and kicking and has been through more hair changes than I will ever attain.

Well, I called the toll-free consumer hotline for Clairol Monday and got the poop. It seems some very prominent scientists followed up this report and found that the conclusions drawn up by researchers in the Nebraska Lymphoma Study Group were WRONG.

As my friendly operator, Carol Clairol, said, "Hair coloring has been used safely by men and women for years."

She said colorings and dyes are repeatedly tested by the FDA and other organizations and there really is nothing to worry about. Of course, we'll never read about this in the papers.

All this talk is enough to make your hair fall out.

In any case, as long as I have roots, there will be a tube of Redken 9V somewhere with my name on it.

IOWA SUMMER REP

'Coastal Disturbances' slows pace of Summer Rep

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

You never know what'll wash up on the Atlantic shore: shells, seaweed, horseshoe crabs, HIV-infected needles. . . . In the case of "Coastal Disturbances," the flotsam is all human, as a random group of people drifts together for a series of afternoon sunbathing sessions and evening trysts on Massachusetts' North Shore during the last weeks of August.

Among these are lifeguard Leo Hart (David Woodside) and photographer Holly Dancer (Brenda Lawton), the object of Leo's demanding affections. She's trying to escape a bad relationship and an impending nervous breakdown; he's chasing her, occasionally tackling her, and trying to convince her that he's the answer to her problems.

Also on the beach from time to time are an elderly couple, a bitter divorcee and her bratty son, a pregnant woman and her adopted daughter, and Holly's estranged lover. Cavorting on the 16-ton set (nine tons of which is sand), they set the backdrop for Leo and Holly's tentative romancing. Lies, lust and lamentations abound all around.

Siblings Paul and Jane Schlapkohl (10 and 6 years old, respectively) as the obnoxious and energetic children present more than a few pacing problems. Pauses and interruptions are frequent as the adults try to keep conversations running smoothly. Still, both are engaging, funny and surprisingly believable actors. They steal virtually all of their scenes with their high-powered, cute-but-not-cloying horseplay, familiar to anyone who's ever walked a beach in summer.

William J. Reiter and Pauline Tyler are two more high points as the elderly Adams couple. Playwright Tina Howe's talent for presenting timeworn but sparky couples, seen to such advantage in "Painting Churches," is once again evident in this charming, whimsical pair's alternate cuddling and sniping. Seemingly the only really happy people in "Disturbances," the Adams' complex but deep affection is an important contrast to the other characters' angst.

Faith Bigelow (center) gives comfort to her daughter Miranda as Winston Took, Ariel Took, Holly Dancer and Leo Hart provide help in the Iowa Summer Rep production of "Coastal Disturbances," which continues its run at the Mabie Theatre.

But despite Howe's winning characters, the disassociative narrative never really pulls together, due at least in part to lackluster directing. Dialogue lurches and sputters along, giving the play a slightly drunken, reeling sense augmented by the motif of characters staggering and falling (often very unrealistically) in the sand. Lawton's flailing and thrashing as the needlessly spastic Holly doesn't help. From time to time it seems like the characters are stumbling through a desert rather than sunning at a beach.

The characters are apparently intended to complement each other, each providing a patch of complex webwork in a larger whole. There are no one-dimensional filler people; Howe even takes the time to make Andre, Holly's ex, into a real person instead of a cookie-cutter bad guy. Unfortunately, the slack pacing, the diffuse blocking, and the occasionally unbelievable movement tends to lose track of this intent.

Not to put all the blame on director Cosmo A. Catalano; there are both script and acting problems as well. The Leo/Holly romance, central to the plot, is hard to swallow; Leo's style of persuading women by grabbing them and holding them down till they agree with him is basically assault, and makes sympathy for him almost impossible. Lawton's Holly looks like an epileptic half of the time, flinging her arms and legs about in a manner that defies suspension of disbelief.

The energies in "Coastal Disturbances" are varied but unfocused, as though each of the characters is trying to put on his or her own little show. Most of the interactions seem forced coincidences. The chemistry between the oldest couple and between the two children is the exception rather than the rule. More attention to the larger picture instead of the small scene would have helped this production immensely.

"Coastal Disturbances" plays at the Mabie Theatre July 8, 12, 18, and 24 at 8 p.m.

RIVERSIDE THEATRE

Anna Weinstein as 'Divine Miss M' a la Bette Midler

Kristen Carr
The Daily Iowan

Everyone has had the sort of teacher who can inspire bladder-loosening fear with one razor-edged glare; the sort of teacher who never got sick and gave the class the relief of a substitute teacher.

The latest production at Riverside Theatre recreates the fear and loathing some teachers inspire, with "Miss Margarida's Way," by Brazilian playwright Roberto Athayde. "Miss Margarida's Way" features native Iowa Citian Anna Weinstein in a one-woman tour de force about a teacher whose classroom style can only be described as dictatorial.

Weinstein, a veteran of local theater, debuted as Miss Margarida last January, in a benefit held by the Riverside Theater for Miya Rodolfo-Sison.

Censored in Brazil for its commentary on the horrors of dictatorship, "Miss Margarida's Way" metaphorically demonstrates the use and abuse of political power. Miss Margarida stakes out territory unexplored by "Evita," the well-known musical about dictatorship in Argentina. The grandiose musical numbers sung by a large supporting cast are replaced by ad-libbing with the audience members who are bold enough to challenge Miss Margarida's authority.

"A teacher immediately establishes a very intense rapport with an audience," said writer Athayde of his character's profession. "Everybody has been to school. Everybody knows teachers. I've always been obsessed with making theater more theatrical, and I want to give audiences roles they can play."

Intense is right. Director Ron Clark said audience reaction ranges from "nervous acceptance" to "sheer delight" but "Anna's presence is so strong that it's undeniable that the audience will become involved. Exploring the role of a tyrant could become very typical, very tedious. But you never know who will be involved next, in what way — it's very exciting."

Potential audience members who are adverse to finding themselves in the spotlight might do well to stay away during Miss Margarida's run/reign at the Riverside Theatre, as Miss Margarida has been known to climb in audience members' laps in order to get her point across. And, as in any classroom, paying close attention to what the teacher says is of crucial importance.

Warned Clark, "Heaven help anybody who Miss Margarida sees is talking and not listening."

Miss Margarida's Way will be presented July 10 and 11 at Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St. Ticket prices are $12 for adults and $10 for students and senior citizens. For ticket information and reservations, call the Riverside Theatre Box Office, 338-7672.

MOVIE REVIEW

Associated Press

Tom Hanks says Dairy Queen helped him keep on the extra weight necessary to play a washed-up hitter in the movie "A League of Their Own."

Davis flies past bloated Hanks, iconic Madonna, greasy Lovitz

Former model hones quickly evolved acting skills to support a cardboard cast in "A League of Their Own."

Kristen Carr
The Daily Iowan

Maybe it was those years of "Laverne & Shirley" that did it. "A League of Their Own" proves that director Penny Marshall got boosted into the movie majors before she'd kicked the sitcom dust off her cleats.

"League" has the TV trappings of cardboard characters held together by gooey plot sentiment. However, it's a trio of ex-small-screeners — Geena Davis, Tom Hanks and Jon Lovitz — which keeps the movie from plummeting into the one-star range.

Davis, who broke out of modeling with a part on the short-lived sitcom "Buffalo Bill," went on to play a series of spacey-but-likable characters which took her from "Earth Girls Are Easy" to an Academy Award. Her quickly evolving acting skills are much in evidence in "League" where she's smart and likable. She plays Dottie Hinson, Oregon farm girl turned star catcher for the Rockford Peaches, an all-woman baseball team thrown together to fill up the dugouts emptied by the World War II draft. She's joined by younger sister Kit, whose fast balls are fueled by a fierce sibling rivalry, and a host of other players who are as dimensional as the Seven Dwarfs. (Pretty, Ugly, Mommy, Pudgy, Racy. . .)

As Dottie, Davis wades through the goo to save the story from drowning in its own sticky-sweet mire. Her backbone and brains hold winning teams (and movies) together, as she fends off her sister's green-eyed monster attacks and a budding romance with the team manager (Tom Hanks) with equal grace.

Hanks' Jimmy Duggan, even at his puffy-faced, hungover worst, manages to retain a trademark boyish appeal, whether he's spitting out huge wads of tobacco juice or sarcasm. Lovitz exudes a greasier appeal as the equally sarcastic baseball scout who lives to insult his recruits. ("See the field, cowgirls?" he asks the Hinsons. "It's grass. Don't eat it.")

And, lest we forget, Madonna, who does fine with an art-mirrors-life role that lets her flex her muscles and her libido — nothing that puts too much of a strain on acting techniques honed in "Who's That Girl?" She and her sidekick, played by comic Rosie O'Donnell (Sandra Bernhard must have been booked), schtick it up well.

Marshall milks a few situations bone-dry in her quest for knee-jerk emotional response, at one point letting Hanks mug for so long that the scene self-destructs. The team reunion at the end lacks of gratuitous hanky-panky, although the casting director did do a great job of picking the override Peaches.

Surprisingly, "League" probably won't be getting the Susan Faludi stamp of approval. It's as though Marshall thought the equal opportunity implications of an all-woman's baseball team were too obvious to spend much time on. Some scenes need to be muscled up, like the one where one newly liberated player tears up her Jewish boyfriend's picture. "League" would have been a lot stronger if Louise had joined Thelma in the lineup.

Leaders agree to put together peacekeeping force of 10,000

Alan Cooperman
Associated Press

MOSCOW, Russia — Commonwealth leaders agreed Monday to form a peacekeeping force of up to 10,000 soldiers to try to stop the bloodshed in Moldova and other troubled spots across the former Soviet Union.

The leaders also authorized Russian President Boris Yeltsin to seek deferral of the $68 billion Soviet foreign debt when he meets with leaders of the seven biggest industrial democracies this week in Munich, Germany.

The summit, the seventh, was one of the most successful for the 11-member Commonwealth of Independent States since it replaced the Soviet Union in December.

However, Ukraine continued to oppose economic initiatives that it considered a threat to its sovereignty. It also failed to reach agreement with Russia on temporary control of nuclear weapons that are scheduled to be dismantled.

Azerbaijan, whose newly elected nationalist president is highly skeptical of the commonwealth, sent only an observer to the talks. Georgia, which is not a member, also sent an observer.

But on the whole, the leaders "worked more fruitfully than in the past," Yeltsin said at a concluding news conference.

"We immediately will create military peacekeeping forces that will be sent right away into the conflict zone in Moldova," he said.

In other areas, the leaders: ■ Agreed to work on creating an economic court to settle financial disputes among the republics and between businesses throughout the republics. Ukraine objected to the initial proposal, saying it feared a super court with too much power over the republics;

■ Discussed establishing a joint nuclear defense warning system;

■ Agreed on the storing of state archives. Central archives will remain in Moscow and republic archives will stay in the respective capitals. The deal also will allow exchanges of documents and free access to declassified papers.

At the last summit, in Uzbekistan May 15, six of the republic leaders signed a collective security pact and agreed to consider forming a peacekeeping force.

The leaders went substantially further Monday by ordering their defense and foreign ministers to draft a peacekeeping force agreement within 10 days.

Clinton ponders running mate, monopoly of media attention

Karen Ball
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — When should Bill Clinton announce his running mate? The campaign is debating whether to deliver the big news this week or hold off to create "high combustion" at next week's convention in New York.

Aides even toyed briefly with the idea of postponing the announcement until next Tuesday, so newscasters would break into baseball's All-Star game and its guaranteed audience of millions.

The timing of Clinton's announcement still depends mainly on when the Democratic presidential candidate makes up his mind, and that hasn't happened yet, aides report.

Clinton decided to travel to Washington, D.C., late Monday, a day earlier than originally planned, allowing time for possible meetings with those under consideration.

So far, Clinton has successfully kept his favorite choices under wraps to heighten suspense. Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana, Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee, Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey and Pennsylvania Sen. Harris Wofford are widely mentioned as among those under serious consideration.

But aides said Clinton also was looking at other prominent Democrats, and a "surprise" pick was possible.

Speculation that Mario Cuomo might still be an option subsided with the campaign's announcement Monday that the New York governor will give the nominating speech for Clinton at the convention.

The Arkansas governor, just a week away from the start of the Democratic National Convention, spent much of the holiday weekend mulling his choices while aides reviewed "a tremendous amount of background research" on potential candidates, one campaign aide said Monday.

Campaign spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said the announcement would likely come sometime between Wednesday and next Monday.

Debating the exact timing is "like debating how many angels are dancing on the head of a pin," Myers said. "It's not productive, because Clinton's going to make up his mind and we're going to announce it. You're going to get a bounce out of it no matter when it happens."

U.N. team keeps watch on Iraqi ministry

Nabila Megallii
Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — U.N. chemical weapons inspectors maintained a round-the-clock watch Monday on Iraq's Agriculture Ministry for a second day in the latest confrontation between the United Nations and Baghdad.

The 16-member team, heading by a U.S. Army major, was staking out the ministry to prevent the possible removal of weapons-related documents or other materials after being barred entrance to the building the day before.

Rolf Ekeus, chairman of the U.N. Special Commission eliminating Iraq's weapons, said the building contains material that "has to do with their weapons procurement program," but would not elaborate.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council was drafting a demand that Iraq give the inspectors access or face serious consequences. The consequences, as usual with such warnings, were not spelled out.

On Monday, the official Iraqi News Agency quoted Foreign Ministry Undersecretary Saadoun al-Zubaidi as saying the team's main goal was to collect intelligence information.

Under U.N. cease-fire terms, Iraq is required to allow the inspectors to eliminate its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons potential as well as its long-range missiles.

Iraq must also allow U.N. inspectors to make unscheduled inspection visits to any site within the country.

Think of it as CROSS-TRAINING for the MIND

The principle: the more ways you have of learning something, the better you'll understand it. Academic types call this "multi-modal learning." At Kaplan Test Prep, we call it cross-training for the mind.

At Kaplan, we integrate more different learning approaches than any other program. When you train for the MCAT with us, you'll have access to live classes, audio reinforcements, academic and strategy clinics, home study notes and individual tutoring.

You'll take practice tests that run the gamut from topic drills to full-length released exams, from taped self-tests to a simulated MCAT.

With this kind of training, no wonder Kaplan produces more top MCAT scores and prepares more med school candidates than all other courses combined.

Evidence of wrongdoing weakens President Collor

Todd Lewan
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Lawmakers have uncovered damaging evidence they say ties President Fernando Collor de Mello to a scandal that threatens to bring down his administration.

The respected newsweekly Veja reported Sunday that a special congressional panel had found a $6,000 check deposited by an employee of a Collor confidant. The money was used to pay the president's household and personal expenses.

The confidant, Paulo César Farias, the president's 1989 campaign treasurer, is the target of a federal probe into charges of graft, influence peddling and tax evasion.

Veja also published documents and interviews that showed Collor's two sons used a $90,000 limousine paid for by Farias' construction firm during the past year.

"If the facts continue along this path, we will be required to carry out impeachment proceedings," Sen. Mauricio Correa, vice president of the commission, told the newspaper O Estado de Sao Paulo for a story published Sunday. Collor, who in 1990 became Brazil's first elected president in three decades, has said the reports of corruption were being orchestrated by "coup forces" to prepare for a grab at power.

He has accused the media, which has covered the story aggressively, of bias. Monday, presidential spokesman Pedro Luiz Rodrigues released a handwritten note from Collor blaming the scandal on "malicious disinformation" spread by "non-patriots."

Collor has vowed to stay in office until his term expires in 1995. But Collor's popularity, already hurt by high inflation and unemployment and scandals involving his wife and cabinet ministers, has divided.

Collor claimed on national television Tuesday that he cut off all contact with Farias in 1990. The president insisted that only his lawyer, Claudio Vieira, handled his personal expenses.

Collor presented an affidavit with his personal secretary, Ana Maria Acioli, saying that Vieira deposited money for the president's personal expenses into an account under her name to facilitate payments she made.

The panel said that more than $500,000 was deposited into this expense account from Sept. 1, 1991 to May 30. Collor's salary is $3,600 a month. Financial analysts say he earns another $3,500 monthly from personal investments.

Congressional investigators have been unable to find a single bank deposit by Vieira into that account.

Also, a respected Sao Paulo handwriting expert told Veja that the signature of Collor's secretary on the affidavit was irregular. The 22-member congressional panel plans to examine the document for fraud.

The scandal broke in May when Collor's younger brother, Pedro, charged that Farias took kickbacks from government contractors and stole millions in illegal campaign contributions.

IRAQ

French first lady unhurt in bombing

Martin Marris
Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — A bomb exploded Monday near a motorcade carrying the wife of French President François Mitterrand in northern Iraq, leaving her unscathed but killing four Iraqis, U.N. officials and Iraqi dissidents said.

The blast also wounded 19 people, said U.N. officials in Geneva and the opposition Iraqi National Congress in Vienna, Austria.

No one claimed responsibility for the bombing, which occurred about 8:45 a.m. near the city of Sulaymaniyah in the Kurdish region of Iraq.

Danielle Mitterrand, 67, was accompanied by Bernard Kouchner, France's minister for humanitarian affairs, who also was not injured. Both have frequently visited refugees in disputed regions of the world.

Their three-day trip to the Kurdish region was not arranged through President Saddam Hussein's government and had been criticized by Baghdad.

Danielle Mitterrand talked with her husband by phone after the blast and reported she was in "perfect health," presidential spokesman Jean Musitelli said at the economic summit in Munich, Germany.

In Paris, France, Foreign Ministry spokesman Daniel Bernard said: "We condemn this kind of attack in the strongest terms." He would not comment further.

The French government has been a strong supporter of the Kurdish drive for autonomy. Danielle Mitterrand, a longtime proponent of Kurdish rights, visited Kurdish refugee camps in Iran last year after their failed uprising against Saddam following the gulf war.

Last week, Mitterrand himself made a dramatic trip to the besieged city of Sarajevo in Bosnia-Herzegovina on a mission to focus world attention on the bloody ethnic conflict in that former Yugoslav state.

Danielle Mitterrand's visit to Kurdistan was denounced Monday in an editorial of a major, state-run Baghdad newspaper, Al-Qadisiya. The official Iraqi News Agency quoted the newspaper as saying her visit to Kurdistan was "foolish behavior and a rude violation of Iraq's dignity and sovereignty."

The report, which appeared before the bombing, accused Danielle Mitterrand of having "deep contacts" with "the dissident gangs in the north."

The attack brought a condemnation from Turkey, which also is fighting a Kurdish insurgency and has been hostile to Mitterrand's activities on behalf of Kurds.

"We are against any kind of violence, no matter whom it is targeted at," Premier Suleyman Demirel told reporters in Ankara.

The Iraqi National Congress, an umbrella group of organizations opposed to Saddam, said an explosion killed three Iraqi Kurdish guerrillas in the last car of Danielle Mitterrand's motorcade and a 10-year-old boy nearby.

The guerrillas were in the motorcade to guard Danielle Mitterrand, the congress said in a statement faxed to The Associated Press in Nicosia.

The statement quoted unidentified witnesses as saying a Toyota Land Cruiser exploded in a 60-foot-high fireball as the last car in the motorcade passed. Several of the injured were in a bus that was passing in the opposite direction, it said.

U.N. officials in Geneva, Switzerland, speaking on condition of anonymity, gave a similar account. U.N. agencies have operated relief programs in northern Iraq since the Kurds' rebellion collapsed.

RESEARCH

Skorton said he will place special emphasis on talking to professional and scientific staff in his consensus-forming effort.

Skorton succeeds Derek Willard, who has served as interim vice president since April 29, 1991, and will return to the post of UI associate vice president for research, a position he held from 1984 until assuming the interim vice presidency.

Willard believes Skorton was an exceptional choice for the position.

"He has a distinguished record of accomplishment," Willard said. "I think he will be an excellent addition to the UI administration."

Skorton said his 12 years experience at the UI will be beneficial in his transition from faculty member to administrator but that he will have to assume a new perspective for the job.

"What I need to do is to spend some time talking to various people around the UI," Skorton said. "I plan to meet with a lot of faculty and staff during the next few weeks."

Willard agreed that Skorton's experience in the UI community, in both the College of Medicine and in the College of Engineering, where Skorton has served as a professor of electrical and computer engineering, will help him in making a smooth transition.

"He is very familiar with the UI," Willard said. "His appointments cut across two colleges, giving him a broad range of experience here."

Skorton's appointment must now be approved by the Iowa state Board of Regents, which will next meet on July 15.

SUMMIT

to flights into the Sarajevo airport. But an administration official, who briefed reporters under rules that prohibited use of his name, said that opening of the airport "is at best a first step" and too small to handle supplies for the 300,000 to 350,000 Bosnians under attack from Serbian militia for three months.

The French, meanwhile, revived a proposal for holding an international conference on Yugoslavia that would be attended by U.N. Security Council members and some neighboring countries, Italian Foreign Minister Vincenzo Scotti said.

Western aid for Russia was cleared by the announcement Sunday in Moscow that the International Monetary Fund and Russia had reached a first-stage agreement on the country's economic reforms.

While all of the summit leaders are suffering from weak economies at home and would desperately like to find a way to bolster global economic activity, it was unlikely that they would be able to resolve disagreements over such matters as interest rates, government budget deficits and rising trade imbalances.

LIBRARIES

"People need to draw on the resources of other people's thinking and ideas," she said. "It's impossible to do so if you don't have a top quality library."

UI Interim Vice President for Research Derek Willard also expressed concern over the diminishing quality of the University Libraries.

"I think we have to have it as a goal to strengthen the library," he said. "Not only because of the ranking, but because it effects all the other aspects of the UI. It has a pronounced affect on the amount and quality of the research we produce."

Willard said the budgetary problems that have faced the UI in recent years have had an adverse effect on the University Libraries.

People nationwide are worried about this," he said. "As budgets have tightened nationwide, libraries have felt the crunch. As a scholar you always have to be concerned."

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for university relations, said that funding for the libraries will be given serious consideration as the UI draws up its budget for next year.

"The library is always a very high priority and it will remain to be a high priority when we ask for money from the Legislature," she said. "The fall in the ranking will be a matter of concern."

While Creth said the ranking is cause for alarm, for her, the true indication of the quality of the libraries comes from how the faculty perceive the libraries' resources.

While Willard agreed that rankings such as those by the ARL are secondary in importance to the actual resources that are available at the libraries, he also said that the UI has to change its approach to dealing with some of the libraries' problems.

MAJORS: Smith shuts down Houston years as the Kansas City Royals continued their batting revival, beating the weak-hitting Boston Red Sox.

Reed (2-3) held Boston to five hits in 6 1/2 innings, while the Royals broke a three-game losing streak with a 12-hit attack. They began with a .306 average in their previous eight games that raised their season mark to .253, 12th in the American League.

Reed's last win as a starter came July 5, 1990 with Pittsburgh in a 9-5 win over Los Angeles. He became a minor-league free agent after spring training and joined the Royals last June 3.

Pirates 1, Astros 0
PITTSBURGH — Zane Smith pitched five-hit ball for 8 1/2 innings and Orlando Merced's homer helped end Pittsburgh's four-game losing streak.

Smith, who beat St. Louis 1-0 with a five-hitter on July 1, was two outs away from his second consecutive shutout when Stan Belinda finished for his 12th save.

Smith (7-7) continued to dominate the Astros at Three Rivers Stadium, where he is 4-0 with an 0.28

ERA and two shutouts since joining the Pirates in August 1990. The left-hander struck out four and walked one to improve to 7-1 with a 1.62 ERA in his last 12 appearances against Houston.

Athletics 13, Indians 4
CLEVELAND — Scott Brosius returned from the minors with a fury by hitting home runs in his first two at-bats and going 4 for 5 Monday night as the Oakland Athletics beat Cleveland.

The A's salvaged a split of their four-game series against the Indians, who had beaten them six straight times before Oakland recovered to win the last two games.

Mike Moore (9-7) improved to 2-0 in July after going 1-4 in June. He allowed four runs and eight hits in six innings.

Dodgers 8, Expos 3
LOS ANGELES — Dennis Martinez, pitching at Dodger Stadium for the first time since his perfect game last July 28, was hit hard this time as Los Angeles beat the Montreal Expos in the first game of three consecutive doubleheaders between the teams.

Martinez (9-7) lost for only the third time in his last 11 decisions, allowing 11 hits and a season-high seven runs in 4 1/2 innings. Only three of the runs were earned.

Winner Kip Gross (1-0), called up earlier in the day from Class AAA Albuquerque, allowed three runs and seven hits in six-plus innings.

After the game, the Dodgers activated Darryl Strawberry and sent Gross back to the minors.

Twins 10, Yankees 5
NEW YORK — Kirby Puckett doubled in two runs in a four-run third inning while pinch-hitter Shane Mack also hit a two-run double Monday night as the Minnesota Twins rallied past the New York Yankees.

Carl Willis (3-2) allowed two hits in 4 1/2 innings in his longest outing this season, and Mark Guthrie pitched three innings for his second save. Bill Krueger lasted only 1 1/2 innings, the shortest stint of any Twins starter this season.

Tim Leary (5-6) allowed six runs and six hits in 2 1/2 innings and walked four. Reliever Jeff Johnson allowed four runs and six hits in 4 1/2 innings.

Mets 3, Braves 1
ATLANTA — Dave Gallagher's run-scoring double snapped an eighth-inning tie and David Cone pitched three-hit ball for seven innings as the New York Mets beat the Atlanta Braves.

Cone (8-4) struck out nine and walked a season-high seven in handing the Braves only their ninth loss in 33 games, and only their fourth in 20 home games. The loss dropped the Braves five games behind Cincinnati in the NL West.

Cone's nine strikeouts increased his major league-leading total to 145.

Rangers 3, Brewers 1
ARLINGTON, Texas — Kevin Brown became the first 13-game winner in the major leagues this season as the Texas Rangers beat the Milwaukee Brewers behind home runs from Ivan Rodriguez and Dean Palmer.

Brown (13-4) won his fourth consecutive start and set a career high for victories in one season, surpassing his 12-9 record of 1989. He allowed seven hits in 8 1/2 innings, struck out eight and walked two before Jeff Russell finished for his 20th save.

REALIGNMENT: Cubs, Cards upset

which has governed the National League for decades. Although we worked to attain realignment, we did so within the guidelines of the constitution."

Vincent, who at the same time declined to change the formula for splitting gate receipts in the NL, said in a telephone news conference that "there were probably four or five clubs who were in favor of realignment at the league level, but were opposed to my taking action."

"I think this was extraordinarily difficult," Vincent said. "There were times when I was persuaded it shouldn't be done. I did go back and forth, I will confess to you."

Vincent, who last month fended off a power grab by some owners on the Player Relations Committee, has been criticized by some owners for his decisions on splitting expansion revenue and handling the George Steinbrenner litigation. He said he was prepared for further criticism.

"I don't know whether there will be a lawsuit," he said. "I think one is possible."

But he added that the majority of NL teams were behind him. "A fair number of clubs in the National League are going to be very supportive," he said. "They expressed their points of view to me in writing."

The Cubs had opposed the move because it means more California games with later starting times for WGN, the superstation owned by the Tribune Co., which also owns the team.

"We believe the commissioner's decision is wrong, bad for baseball and especially bad for baseball fans here in the Chicago area," the Cubs said in a statement. "We are presently considering alternatives available to us."

Cardinals vice chairman Fred Kuhlmann criticized the decision, saying, "I would rather have seen it done by the National League as such, rather than by dictate of the commissioner."

"I don't think any great good comes out of it from the Cardinals' standpoint," Kuhlmann said. "I think we will suffer some from the fact that we're losing our traditional rivalries and I also think we'll also probably suffer some what financially from the change in time scheduling."

Braves president Stan Kasten issued a statement saying "we believe realignment has long been overdue and will certainly benefit all the teams and their fans." Los Angeles Dodgers general manager Fred Claire also defended Vincent's decision.

"I would describe it as logical, because you took two teams that were in the Eastern time zone and placed them in the Eastern Division," he said. "There's a certain amount of logic that is very hard to dispute."

NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney said Vincent's decision would further delay the issuance of a draft schedule for 1993. The league office is examining various formations, ranging from the American League's so-called "balanced schedule" of 13 games against intradivision opponents and 12 games against teams in the other division, to formulas calling for 20-6, 18-8, 16-9 and 15-10.

"We have to go back and determine what format we're going to recommend and start working on a working, practicable schedule," Feeney said.

The leagues are supposed to present draft schedules to the Major League Baseball Players Association by July 1, but the union has granted the NL a one-month delay. Mark Belanger, the special assistant to union head Donald Fehr, said he would consider a request for a further delay, but said that "it is getting late."

Reds general manager Bob Quinn was most concerned with the schedule debate.

"I don't think that there's any question that scheduling is the next issue," he said. "We favor more of a balanced schedule. We just don't favor the 20-6 proposal."

With gate receipts, some teams had asked Vincent to order the NL to adopt the AL's formula of giving visiting teams 20 percent. The NL currently gives visiting clubs 44 cents per ticket, a move to change that resulted in a 6-6 vote in December.

"Unlike the strong consensus on realignment, the National League is deeply divided on this issue," Vincent said.

DREAM TEAM

Ailing Bird makes cameo return

Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — It took Larry Bird just over two minutes to sum up the first Olympic qualifying tournament to be held in the United States. The sore back of the Boston Celtics forward had allowed him to play in just one game until Sunday. That was one more game than the U.S. team was given by any of its six opponents.

He took the court with 2:04 to play with smiles on every face in Veterans Memorial Coliseum, just as there had been all nine days of the Tournament of the Americas.

He scored two points in that time, not quite the pace the Dream Team had managed in blowout after blowout, but it helped keep the margin of victory as high as expected.

"I played the last couple of minutes obviously because I wasn't going to get hurt," said Bird, a co-captain of the team along with Magic Johnson. "I was almost sleeping until the time Magic ripped my pants off."

The United States was leading Venezuela by 45 points in the gold medal game — just below its 51.5 average margin of victory — when the sellout crowd of 12,888 started chanting for Bird to make a cameo appearance.

Johnson did indeed pull Bird's warm-up pants and top off and stood menacingly over his rival of the last 13 years as he tied his sneakers.

The crowd roared as Bird took the court and loved it even more as he got off three shots until finally scoring with 16 seconds left for the game's final margin of 127-80.

It was only fitting that Bird, who started the tournament for the United States with the first basket, scored the last.

"Magic was really giving him a hard time," said Chris Mullin, who had 12 points on Sunday. "Larry had been giving everybody a hard time every time they missed a shot. You knew one thing; he was going to get some shots off. I don't know if he's really that funny or if he was because he had all that time to sit there and think of things to say."

The decision on whether Bird will continue to sit when the team opens play in Barcelona on July 26 against Angola will be made after he returns to Boston for treatment.

"I figure that by the end of next week I should be OK," Bird said. Then he began to talk of the Olympics. "Personally, I can't wait. I hope I can play. I think once we get there, we'll become more serious and more focused, and we'll be all business."

That has to be a scary thought for the other 11 teams which have qualified — Venezuela, Puerto Rico and Brazil being the other three from this competition.

Injuries were the only negative thing for the Americans. In addition to Bird, John Stockton broke a bone in his leg and his status for Barcelona is in doubt; Patrick Ewing missed the first game as he recovered from a broken thumb sustained in practice in San Diego, and Clyde Drexler missed one game as he nursed a sore knee.

The wins were easy and they came as U.S. players posed for pictures with opponents, played more golf than a mini-tour veteran and displayed a brand of basketball rarely seen at any level.

"I tip my hat to the U.S. team. They are a great bunch of players," said 39-year-old Venezuelan point guard Sam Shepard, who played at Delaware State. "At halftime I was a little disconcerted with the other players for not being focused on what we wanted to do. They seemed to be more concerned taking pictures of the U.S. players than being competitive with them."

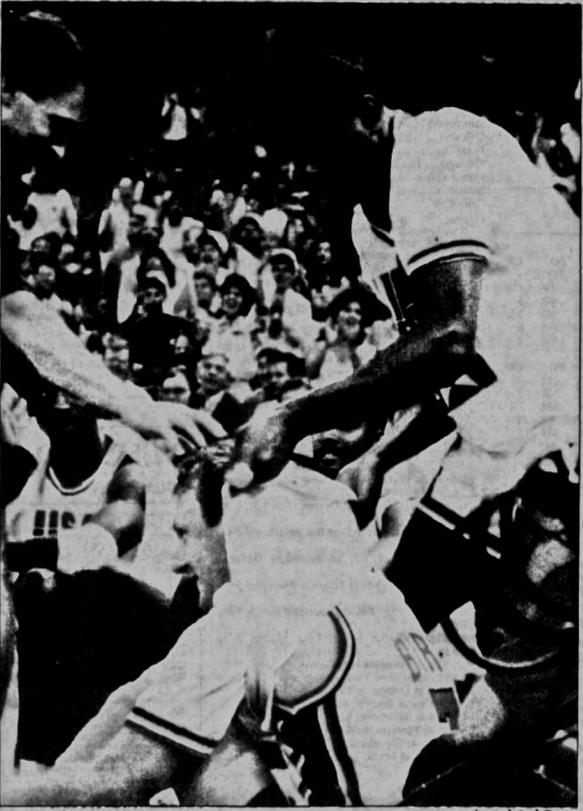

No one was competitive with the Americans; the final game was a perfect example.

While the United States shot 62 percent (54 for 87), its devastating at times defense held Venezuela to 39 percent (35 for 89) and that included a wide-open, shoot-when-open final 10 minutes.

"We've had a very interesting two weeks," coach Chuck Daly said. "There's been some interesting bonding between the people on this team, the way they came together as a team. Obviously, we have controlled the games from the outset, our talent is at such a level."

Charles Barkley, who had tied for scoring honors Sunday with Karl Malone at 17 points, led the United States in scoring in the tournament, averaging 16.3. He summed up the feelings of the team fans and opponents couldn't wait to see.

"It's been just like a great vacation. I've had a lot of fun here ... just hanging out with the fellows. It's been a lot of fun," he said, fingering the gold medal he had been awarded moments before. "But, I want the big one around my neck."

Associated Press

Magic Johnson gives Larry Bird some incentive to enter Sunday's championship game of the Tournament of the Americas by taking off his warmups. Bird, who had missed four games with a back injury, was coaxed into the lineup by the sellout crowd at Portland's Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

WIMBLEDON

Mac Attack redeems himself by winning doubles title

Robert Millward
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — John McEnroe collected his fifth Wimbledon men's doubles title Monday when he and Michael Stich beat fourth seeded Americans Jim Grabb and Richie Reneberg 5-7, 7-6 (7-5), 3-6, 7-6 (7-5), 19-17 in a record-breaking final.

For McEnroe, who won the title four times with Peter Fleming, the title made up for a semifinal loss in singles to eventual champion Andre Agassi. For Stich, it was compensation for losing the singles title he won last year.

"Winning the doubles is the best way possible to get over losing the singles," McEnroe said. "I think we didn't do too bad."

"This is not what I had in mind. But to win a Grand Slam title is incredible. I'm very happy and this is the next best thing."

McEnroe suggested he and Stich should go for two Grand Slam doubles titles in a row.

"I think it would be appropriate, as far as I am concerned, to go play the Open," he said. "To stop now would be crazy."

It was the longest Wimbledon final ever in terms of games, beating the 70-game match in 1968 when John Newcombe and Tony Roche downed Ken Rosewall and Fred Stolle 3-6, 8-6, 5-7, 14-12, 6-3.

That final took three hours but the 1992 version, even with tiebreaks, lasted five hours and one minute, another Wimbledon record, officials said.

The game was held over from Sunday because of fading light with the score at 13-13 in the final set.

Wimbledon allowed free entry for the fans on the extra day and, with hundreds locked out, a full house of 7,500 packed Court One.

After 34 games in the final set had gone with serve, McEnroe gained the first break with a stunningly disguised lob that brought roars from the fans.

When Reneberg planted a McEnroe serve into the net at match point, Stich grabbed McEnroe around the waist and lifted him high while the American threw his arms in the air in celebration.

The fans gave the unseeded pair a standing ovation as they collected the trophies from Wimbledon chairman John Curry.

When the match was halted Sunday, an angry McEnroe clearly wanted to keep playing. He offered a tie-break solution, but officials refused.

It was the second time McEnroe had gotten close to a title in this year's championships.

In the singles event, the three-time champion reached the semifinal before losing in straight sets to Agassi.

At least the women's doubles was finished Sunday.

No. 2 seeds Gigi Fernandez and Natalia Zvereva won their second straight Grand Slam doubles title with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over No. 1 seeds Jana Novotna and Savchenko-Neiland.

Americans pay visit to Tampa Bay

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Banners and signs at Tampa Airport proclaiming the city as "the road to Barcelona" and a billboard along Interstate 275 reading "Tampa Bay Welcomes the 1992 U.S. Olympic Team" are greeting American athletes heading to the Summer Games.

"The welcome is very visible, and it's always nice to see some recognition that you are in town," U.S. Olympic Committee spokesman Frank Zang said.

Many U.S. athletes will go through Tampa during the next two weeks to get uniforms and medical checkups before heading to Spain.

A delegation of some 900 Olympic athletes, coaches and USOC personnel will be arriving in Tampa over a 16-day period for processing. The first athletes arrived Sunday night.

In most cases, it will be the final stop for the athletes before boarding charter flights for Barcelona and the XXVth Olympiad.

"... We're taking about 650 athletes to Barcelona and only about 15 percent are going to medal," USOC director of international games preparation Greg Harney said. "So for everyone else, we want this to be an Olympic experience to remember."

Associated Press

Olympic swimmer Tripp Schwenk from Sarasota, Fla., signs an autograph for a young fan during opening ceremonies at the official Olympic Village in Busch Gardens in Tampa, Monday.

Some basketball and track and field stars have prior commitments and will go straight to Europe, bypassing Tampa. Also, many athletes will pass through Tampa quickly and their public appearances may be limited to autograph sessions for paying visitors to Busch Gardens where an Olympic Village has been set up.

Highlights of Tampa's Olympic send-off include a July 10 showing of the Bud Greenspan movie "The Magic of the Olympics" at the Tampa Bay Performing Arts Centers.

The following night is a Gold Medal Celebration Gala, hosted by Busch Gardens and featuring appearances by retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf and 1984 Olympic gymnastics standout

Mary Lou Retton.

Tickets to both functions already are sold out.

The finale is a July 18 Breakfast with the Olympians at the Tampa Convention Center with special guests former long jump world record-holder Bob Beamon, ex-Olympic gymnast Kathy Johnson, two-time Olympics gold medal speed skater Bonnie Blair, 100-meter gold medal swimmer Steve Lundquist and 1980 hockey team captain Mike Eruzione.

There will be an afternoon celebration daily at Busch Gardens' Olympic Village from Monday through July 21 with selected Olympians available for autograph and photograph opportunities.

NFL TRIAL

Lawyer: selective data was used

Mark Neuzil
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — NFL attorneys said Monday that the high salaries of some league owners introduced as evidence in the pro football antitrust case, including Philadelphia owner

Norman Braman's $7.5 million 1990 pay, misrepresents their true financial picture.

Attorney Frank Rothman, in cross-examination of Stanford economics professor Roger Noll, said the witness for the plaintiffs used "selective data" when he described the million-dollar salaries of Braman, Buffalo owner Ralph Wilson, Phoenix owner Bill Bidwill and the Smith family of Atlanta.

In vigorous questioning, Rothman pointed out that Braman did not pay himself a salary from 1985 to 1989.

Tigers stop Seattle in marathon game

Associated Press

DETROIT — Bill Gullickson couldn't do it the easy way.

Instead, Skeeter Barnes' 14th-inning sacrifice fly lifted Detroit to a victory over Seattle in a game that lasted 4 hours, 23 minutes, the Tigers' longest home game in seven years.

Gullickson, 7-0 in seven career starts against Seattle, was leading 4-2 with none on and two out in the ninth inning. But, on the verge of his 10th win, he walked Jay Buhner, and Pete O'Brien hit a two-run homer to send the game into extra innings.

"I had two out, and I walked a right-handed batter," Gullickson said. "That was the guy I had to get."

John Kiely (2-0) pitched the final 2½ innings for the win.

Seattle made two roster moves after Monday's game. They put Greg Briley on the 15-day disabled list with an injured right elbow, and they designated reliever Mike Walker for assignment.

NBA

Johnson may play for Lakers

PORTLAND, Ore. — Though he won't say for sure, Magic Johnson seems to be inching toward a return to the NBA next season.

He told ESPN earlier in the week that people shouldn't bet against the possibility. On Sunday, after leading the United States to its sixth dominating triumph in the Tournament of the Americas, he repeated the comment.

"Since I don't bet, I was just saying that if you were a betting man, you'd bet that I was coming back," he said after the Americans beat Venezuela 127-80 in the gold medal game.

He insisted, however, that the statement doesn't mean he's leaning toward returning to the NBA in the fall.

"Everybody has their own opinion about my situation," he said. "I'm going to stick to what I said. I'm going to wait until after the Olympics and decide what to do."

Johnson retired from professional basketball just after the start of last season after he tested positive for the HIV virus that causes AIDS. He told ESPN that he'd been cleared to play about 60 NBA games if he wants to return.

"My wife and I will sit down and talk about it," he said Sunday. "I think she's leaning more toward denying me because before she was against it. ... We'll see what happens."

Cubs, Cards to go west next year

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Commissioner Fay Vincent overrode a veto by the Cubs on Monday, ordering Chicago and the St. Louis Cardinals to the National League West next season and the Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds to the East.

The Cubs had blocked the move in March, a right granted under the NL constitution, but Vincent decided to order realignment with his power under the Major League Agreement to act "in the best interests of baseball."

The move immediately drew criticism from NL president Bill White, who called it "extraordinary" and said he was "very disappointed." Vincent acknowledged the possibility of a lawsuit to block the move, but said he was convinced he had the power to order it. The Cubs called the decision "wrong and bad for baseball."

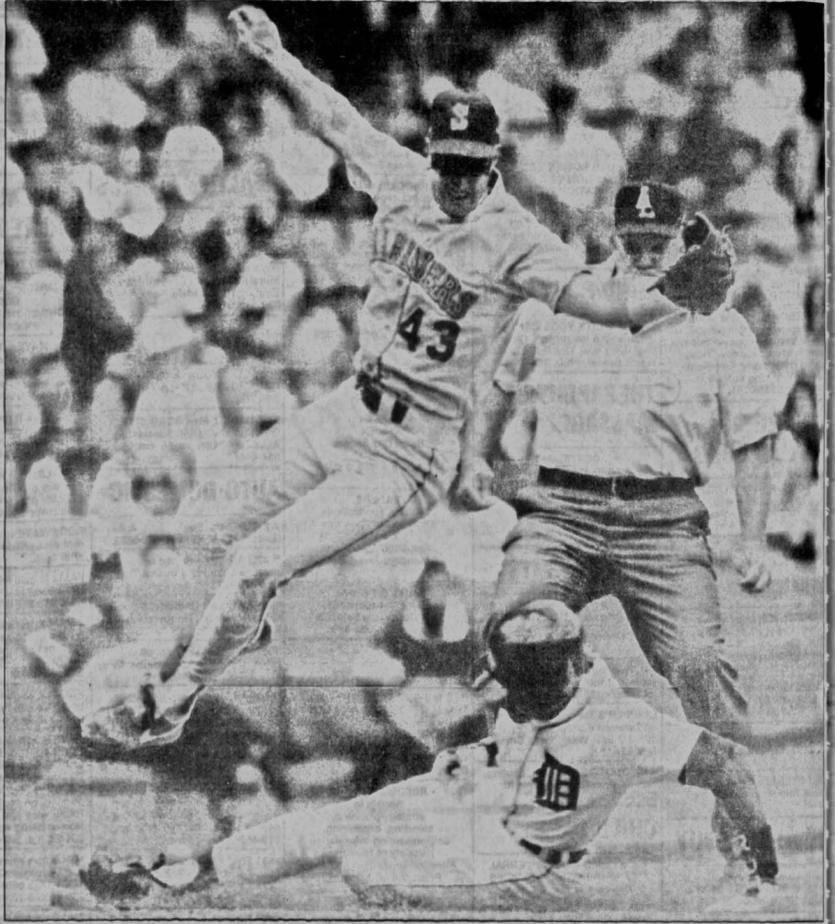

Under the NL constitution, a 75-percent vote is required for realignment, which also needs the approval of all clubs involved in switching divisions. On March 4, clubs voted 10-2 in favor, with the Cubs and New York Mets opposed.

"I have determined that the best interests of baseball have not been served in this instance by the National League's stringent voting requirement, which thwarts the preference of the great majority of National League clubs," Vincent said in his nine-page decision. "Therefore, I hereby order that the Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds will play in the National League Eastern Division and the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs will play in the National League Western Division beginning with the 1993 championship season."

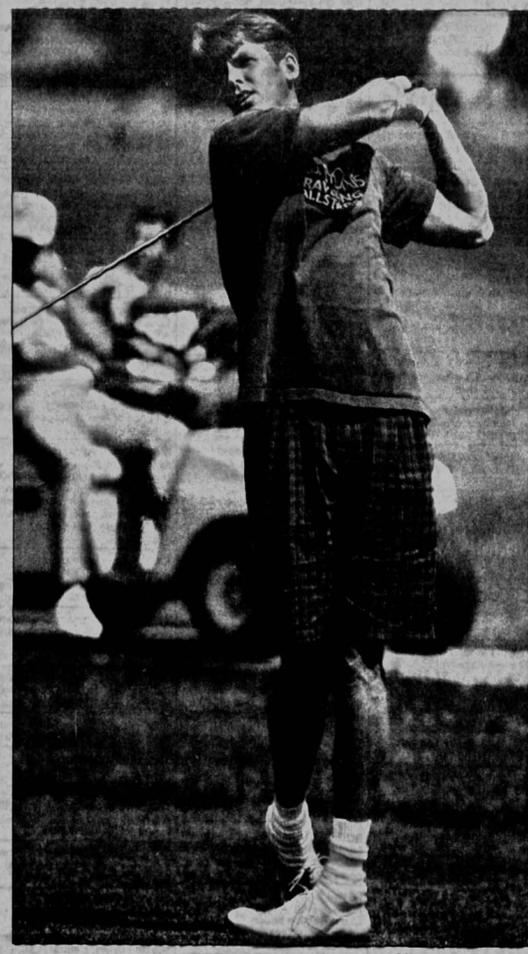

The Cubs and the Cardinals have been in the East since the league split into divisions prior to the 1969 season. Chicago and St. Louis insisted on the placement before they voted in favor of expansion from 10 to 12 teams. Realignment became an issue with the 1990 expansion to Miami and Denver.

"I am very disappointed with the commissioner's extraordinary decision to override the National League constitution," White said in a statement. "By this act, the commissioner has jeopardized a long-standing, working document."

Image of choking critics is everything

The monkey is off his back. Maybe now, the media and general public will give the monkey some company.

Andre Agassi's hard-fought, electrifying shootout triumph over Goran Ivanisevic in Wimbledon's final was more than a gut check of Agassi's character.

It was a chance for the rebel himself to put all of those verbal cheap shots he had always fielded from the press behind him.

But then again, at least figuratively speaking, that's where all of the shots had ended up in the past — blistering behind Agassi like the 37 aces Ivanisevic served up at 123 mph. The media's jabs came in all shapes and sizes.

There were those who criticized Agassi for having more hair, earrings and unjustified product endorsements than sheer ability.

Others scoffed at Agassi earlier in his career when he went against tradition by wearing fluorescent-colored shirts and shorts rather than the customary white, which didn't sit too well with the international tennis world.

And of course, still others would not say a word upon hearing the slightest mention of Agassi. Those people were quite content to grasp their throats as a way of saying he couldn't win a major tournament, couldn't win "The Big One."

But Agassi's 6-7 (8-10), 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 win over the Croatian put to rest all of the accusations. At least, it should. Maybe the fact that he became the lowest seeded player to ever win Wimbledon will have something to do with that.

The book on Agassi was that the grass surface of Wimbledon would give him no chance to win the tournament.

After all, critics claimed, if Agassi couldn't win on the clay courts of the French Open's Roland Garros Stadium or the cement of Flushing Meadows's U.S. Open, how could he possibly hope to take a grass tournament when he had only played 13 matches on grass in his whole life?

In his moments of ecstasy following Ivanisevic's fateful return into the net at championship point, Agassi reflected on how he shunned Wimbledon from 1988-90 because he refused to wear white.

He said the victory gave him a new respect for Wimbledon, an ironic statement considering it is the critics who should develop a new, but long overdue, adoration and acknowledgement of a more-than-credible tennis player.

At the time, Agassi could have returned all of the pass. He had endured from the media with the same fervor he used to shout back Ivanisevic's offerings. He could have said something to the effect of, "I'd like to dedicate this victory to all of the people out there who have never believed in me."

But like the true champion he is, Agassi didn't criticize back. Instead, he praised those who never lost faith in him, such as his coach.

Andre Agassi will certainly remember the 1992 Wimbledon as his first Grand Slam victory. He is the rebel who claims that "image" See NANDA, Page 7
