Man on trial kills 2, shoots self

CHICAGO (AP) — A man on trial for eight bank robberies slipped free of his handcuffs in a courthouse garage Monday, wrestled a gun from a federal marshal and fatally shot him and another guard before killing himself, the FBI said.

Jeffrey Erickson, 34, was being taken from the court at the Dirksen Federal Building when the shootings occurred.

While in the federal building's basement garage with eight other prisoners, Erickson somehow freed himself of his handcuffs, wrestled the service revolver away from a deputy U.S. marshal and shot and killed him. Erickson then shot and killed a building security guard.

Erickson started to flee, but then stopped and killed himself with one shot under his chin.

Suit filed to force Perot to run for president

MIAMI (AP) — A Ross Perot volunteer in Florida, refusing to take his "no" for an answer, filed a federal lawsuit Monday asking that he be forced to run for president if his name is put on the ballot in all 50 states.

Attorney Douglas Stein filed a class-action lawsuit on behalf of Michele Alexander and other Perot volunteers who donated money, time and effort to his undeclared presidential campaign.

It asks that he be required to keep his public promise that he would run if supporters collected enough signatures on petitions to put him on the ballot in every state.

100 dead in plane crash in Tbilisi, Georgia

MOSCOW, Russia (AP) — A cargo jet plunged into apartment houses after takeoff from the Tbilisi airport in the republic of Georgia on Monday, killing at least 10 people, news reports said.

The Interfax and Iprindia news agencies said the dead included eight crew and two cargo handlers aboard the Tupolev-154.

Some residents of a five-story apartment building struck by the plane may also have been killed.

Italy cracks down on Mafia after murder

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Authorities hustled imprisoned Mafia bosses to a remote island Monday and rushed paramilitary police to Palermo after the second assassination of a top investigator, a staggering blow to the battle against organized crime.

Impassioned calls for martial law in Sicily and imposition of the death penalty were sounded in Rome, Italy, after the blast Sunday on a Palermo street that killed investigating Judge Paolo Borsellino and five police escorts.

Judge Giovanni Falcone, his wife and three guards were assassinated May 23.

UI tries to clarify pay raise mix-up

Jon Yates

The Daily Iowan

Confusion over the UI's salary policy prompted over 100 UI employees to attend a special briefing on the budget Monday at Macbride Auditorium.

The briefing, which was designed to explain the decreased pay raise for non-union employees, consisted of an explanation of the error that occurred in reported state funding for pay raises and a question-and-answer session during which UI administrators fielded questions from UI faculty and staff.

"We regret this," said UI President Hunter Rawlings of the decrease in pay raises. "We would like to have this made up to us in the future."

The error, which was the result of a miscommunication between the state Department of Management and the Iowa State Board of Regents, amounted to a reduction in funds from $47 million to $43 million available to regents' institutions.

For the UI, that meant a reduction of $1.7 million from the General Education Fund, from where money for pay raises comes. As a result, non-union faculty members and professional and scientific staff will receive an

"This was a deplorable error, but an error that was made," Rawlings said.

RVAP

Record rape figures due to more victims coming forward

RVAP says that 39 of the 115 victims were UI students and staff, but the university says that only four cases were reported to Public Safety.

Nora Connell

The Daily Iowan

In the past year, 115 rapes were reported to Iowa City's Rape Victim Advocacy Program. According to a recent RVAP press release, this is the highest number of rapes ever reported to the organization over a 12-month period.

The 1991-92 figure represents a 35 percent increase from last year. Thirty-nine of the 115 rape victims were women who are students, faculty or staff at the UI.

"There is no one reason we can look to which would explain the higher numbers," said Diane Funk, director of RVAP. Funk indicated, however, that the increase in the RVAP statistics reflects the fact that more women are reporting incidences of sexual assault, rather than that a drastic jump in the level of violence has occurred.

Carolyn Dyer, associate director of the UI School of Journalism and a member of the RVAP board of directors, points to media coverage of sexual assault and harassment issues as responsible for the change.

"After the Clarence Thomas hearings, the public debate about women as victims of sexual assault has changed the social climate and made women more willing to speak," she said.

The problem facing Funk and Dyer now, however, is whether people will listen.

A recent federal law, the Student Right-to-Know and Campus Security Act, requires colleges and universities to inform current and prospective students of yearly campus crime statistics reported to the school's department of public safety.

In response to the federal statute, the UI

Dean of Students' office reported four cases of sexual abuse and three cases of attempted sexual abuse in its 1990 annual report of student discipline. The RVAP received reports of rape from 31 UI students during the same period of time and notified the Dean of Students' office accordingly.

"We historically have relied on the RVAP statistics to get a sense of patterns that are developing and also as a reminder that this is an ever-increasing problem," said Tom Baker of the Dean of Students' office. He added, however, that the annual report must indicate the number of rapes that have been reported to the UI's Department

Czechoslovakia's split nears; Havel resigns

Associated Press

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — President Vaclav Havel, the dissident playwright who led Czechoslovakia's peaceful revolt against communism, formally resigned Monday as the federation moved toward disintegration.

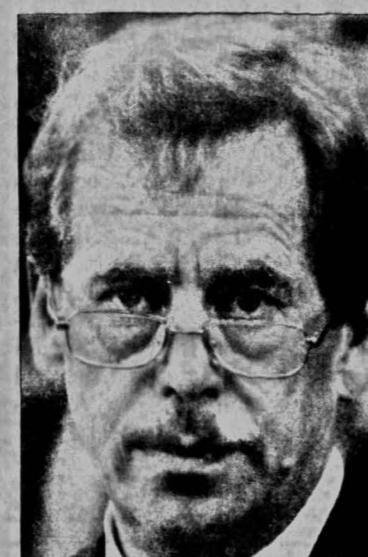

"The Czech and Slovak federative republic does not have a president anymore," said state radio. The report said the presidential flag had been lowered over Prague castle, seat of the presidency.

Havel announced his resignation plans Friday, moments after the Parliament of the poorer eastern republic of Slovakia declared sovereignty. The move was the latest step toward what has become an almost certain division of the country into separate Czech and Slovak states.

Havel made no immediate statement today. In his last weekly radio address as president, he said Sunday that he still believed Czechoslovakia should not break up after 74 years of union.

"A common state would be better, I do think that even today ... but I am a realist," he said.

The Westward-looking Czechs, about two-thirds of the nation's 15 million people, generally want to move quickly with economic reforms regardless of the short-term pain in order to put communism behind them.

The Slovak region is saddled with much higher unemployment and more inefficient Communist-era heavy industry, and its leaders argue that economic reform in their region must be slower and tailored to Slovaks' needs.

AIDS CONFERENCE

Expert: Women at highest risk

Daniel Q. Haney

Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — Women around the world are now catching the AIDS virus almost as often as men, and will probably become the primary victims by the end of the decade, an expert predicted Monday.

The fast spread of AIDS among women, especially in the world's poorest regions, is one of the dominant themes of the Eighth International Conference on AIDS, which began Sunday.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome first came to world attention a decade ago primarily as a disease of homosexual men and male drug users in the United States and Europe. Since then, however, AIDS has spread around the world, and now 80 percent of new infections are in developing countries, where sex between men and women is the main means of transmission.

The World Health Organization, based in Geneva, Switzerland, estimates that between 11 million and 13 million people are now infected with HIV worldwide.

More than 6 million of those infected are in Africa. In some cities, a third of all adults carry the virus and 80 percent of hospital beds are filled with AIDS patients.

During heterosexual encounters, women are biologically more likely than men to catch the virus from infected partners.

So "by the year

2000, more than half of all newly infected adults may be women," said Dr. Michael Merson, a New York City native who heads the WHO's Global Program on AIDS.

"With every passing year, the gap ... between the sexes has narrowed, in both developed and developing countries, as heterosexual transmission has become more common," he said.

The newly developed female condom is not yet approved for sale in the United States. She also urged development of a virus-killing cream that women can use without depending on men's cooperation.

CAMPUS PHONES

Break in communications irks users

Jon Yates

The Daily Iowan

Monday mornings are usually a busy time for the UI's Office of Student Financial Aid, but this Monday the calls just weren't coming in. Literally.

A severed phone line beneath Capitol Street left many UI offices and buildings unable to receive calls from off campus or make long distance calls all day Monday, as repair crews scrambled to splice the cut.

"Usually Monday morning is a heavy phone day but this morning we got very few calls," said Catherine Wilcox, associate director for student financial aid. "I would imagine people calling in will be pretty frustrated."

Workers putting in chilled water lines accidentally cut the US West line at around 9 a.m. Monday, leaving much of the UI east of the Iowa River without contact to persons outside the university.

Repair workers were able to patch the line by 10 a.m., but severed another splice already in the line in the process.

The second cut, discovered shortly after the first repair was made, required substantial excavation and concrete removal.

"We hope to have the lines up and able to receive incoming calls by Tuesday," said William Cleveland, senior engineer at the UI Office of Telecommunications. "There will be some delays."

Cleveland said the downed phone lines came at a time of the year when phone usage at the UI is usually fairly high.

"It's the major buildings on campus that people are going to have trouble getting through to from off campus," he said. "This comes at a time when more people will be calling."

UI Registrar Jerald Dallam said things could have been worse. As the beginning of fall semester nears, the Registrar's Office usually begins receiving more calls.

"Right now we're at a low ebb for calls coming in," he said. "This probably is as a good time for the outage to happen to us. A month later and it probably would have had much more of an effect."

But for those trying to reach campus offices by phone Monday, things couldn't have been worse.

"There were a lot of people complaining," said Emily Schiefer, manager of installation and maintenance for US West. "A lot of people on campus called us directly instead of calling the university like they should have."

Cleveland said he had received few calls from UI employees complaining about the downed lines, but the inability to make or receive outgoing calls was still a major problem.

"Any outage is an inconvenience," he said. "When you don't have it, that's when you miss it the most."

ADA

Study points to positives of employing disabled

Sara Epstein

The Daily Iowan

Many myths exist about the employability of persons with disabilities.

Peter Blanck, UI associate professor of law, has spent the last three years researching the effects of the Americans with Disabilities Act, which was passed last year.

Among his conclusions are the following:

- Employees with severe disabilities can succeed in the competitive job market.

- The cost of work-place accommodations is lower than has commonly been reported.

- Customers and clients are comfortable dealing with employees with disabilities.

- Hiring employees with disabilities does not inflate the cost of health and medical coverage for all employees.

"This law will open the door for many of them who have never been given the opportunity to enter the work force."

Peter Blanck, UI professor

"This study was designed to uncover empirical evidence about the attitudes of employers and employees with disabilities," said Blanck, who has training as both a psychologist and a lawyer. "Since in part by the Annenberg Foundation, should provide non-partisan information. He added that the study brings together issues that are important to him.

Beginning Sunday, Title I of the ADA goes into effect, stating that employers may not discriminate against any qualified person with a disability.

"There are an estimated 43 million Americans with disabilities," he said. "This law will open the door for many of them who have never been given the opportunity to enter the work force."

Blanck examined 3,000 people with disabilities and 47 employers, ranging in size from small family firms to large corporations. His research is reported in an article titled "The Emerging Workforce: Empirical Study of the Americans with Disabilities Act," which appears in the Journal of Corporation Law.

HERITAGE PRESERVATION

Hoover trail intertwines nature, Iowa history

Lynn M. Tefft

The Daily Iowan

What has traditionally been an effort to give bicyclists a scenic right-of-way through eastern Iowa has evolved into a way to preserve Iowa history.

Hoover Nature Trail Inc., which is in the process of constructing a 115-mile biking and hiking trail that will extend from Cedar Rapids to Burlington along the abandoned Rock Island railroad right-of-way, is now buying up pieces of Iowa history as well.

Recently Hoover Nature Trail Inc. purchased a Des Moines county bridge set for destruction and moved it with a crane to a portion of the trail located in Louisa county.

While acquisition of the bridge helped complete another section of the trail, it also helped save a landmark.

"Iowa is in the throes of replacing old bridges built in the 19th century," Hoover Nature Trail Inc. Executive Director Milly Gregg said.

Gregg said buying bridges preserves Iowa's history because while an occasional farmer may buy one, usually the bridges are just demolished.

Being the only bidder, the group was able to purchase the Des Moines county bridge for $1 from the state.

Hoover Nature Trail Inc. also bought the 95-year-old Rock Island depot in West Liberty, Iowa. Once restored, it will serve as the West Liberty trailhead.

Gregg said although these new historic additions to the trail are exciting, completion of the trail is inhibited by a lack of funds and other problems, including land acquisition disputes.

"We might be done by 1997," Gregg said.

Gregg said the group depends on donations from members to add to government grants.

"We also have donations of equipment and labor, which is really helpful," she said.

Gregg said that despite problems, her interest in the trail is never-ending.

"I think it's kind of like something I started and really got into and don't know how to get out of," she said.

Gregg said she was inspired by stories of other abandoned railways around the country being converted into nature trails, and she wanted to find a way to use this concept to create a right-of-way between West Branch, Iowa, and West Liberty.

IOWA LEGISLATURE

Hutchins signs on to lobby for blue-chip clients

The former senator resigned before the new ethics law went into effect, thus avoiding the two-year waiting period.

Mike Glover

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — Former Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, who resigned his seat to beat deadlines in a new ethics law, has registered to lobby the Legislature, legislative records showed Monday.

Hutchins said in an interview that he will be associated with veteran lobbyist Gene Kennedy. Hutchins' lobbyist declaration form listing the clients he will represent was filed Monday afternoon.

Hutchins resigned hours after the completion of a special legislative session in late June, saying he wanted to preserve the option of becoming a lobbyist.

At that time, Hutchins said he had no solid plans to become a lobbyist but merely wanted to keep his options open.

Asked Monday when he struck the deal to join Kennedy, Hutchins said contracts were signed June 29.

Hutchins, a veteran Audubon, Iowa, Democrat, had announced early in the year that he wouldn't seek another term in the Legislature.

His resignation was sparked by a new ethics law approved by this year's Legislature, a law that came because of a winter-long ethics controversy at the Statehouse.

Included in the law was a two-year "revolving door" ban on legislators who wanted to leave office and take lobbying jobs. That law didn't go on the books until July 1, and lawmakers who resigned before then weren't affected.

Hutchins was one of six legislators who resigned early to get around the new law.

He becomes the latest in a growing number of powerful former legislators to turn to lobbying. He joins former House Speaker Don Averittson, former Senate Majority Leader Lowell Jenkins and former Senate Republican Leader Cal

Bill Hutchins

Hultman.

Kennedy is one of the most powerful members of that group. A former Democratic state senator, Kennedy represents a blue-chip list of clients — from Associated General Contractors of Iowa to Proctor & Gamble Co. to gambling and liquor interests.

Hutchins was required to formally register as a lobbyist to be eligible to lobby interim committees that will write much of the agenda for the next legislative session.

Other clients listed on his declaration include the Iowa State Sheriffs and Deputies Association, Flexolute Inc., the Iowa Health Care Association, the Iowa Funeral Directors Association, the Iowa Association of Municipal Utilities, Iowa Outdoor Advertising Association, Dubuque Greyhound Park, Iowa Council of Solid Waste Solutions, Dubuque Casino Belle, Educational Systems Inc., California Wine Growers and the Chemical Specialties Manufacturers' Association.

RIVERBOATS

Ladies get Southern welcome

Associated Press

BILOXI, Miss. — The greeting two riverboat casinos received from more than 25 pleasure boats and hundreds of spectators shows how much the boats are wanted in the state, gambling officials said.

The Emerald Lady and the Diamond Lady, both formerly of Iowa, ended a weeklong trip down the Mississippi River on Saturday and were greeted by boats and hundreds of people who lined the breakwater to get a first glimpse of the sister ships.

"It looked like the blessing of the fleet out there," said Billy Creel, marketing manager of the two-boat operation that will form the Isle of Capri casino at Biloxi's Point Cadet. "All of a sudden they showed up. It just goes to show how much the people wanted this."

The boats, which will be docked at Biloxi's Point Cadet, are scheduled to open as a casino Aug. 1, the first to open in Mississippi.

"You had to see it from the pier. This is history," said Peggy Marsh, a Biloxi resident who will work as a blackjack dealer when the casino opens.

The Diamond Lady had been the first gaming boat to operate on April 1, 1991, when limited-stakes riverboat gambling became legal in Iowa.

Both boats are owned by Bernard Goldstein and left Iowa earlier this month, following management complaints of big losses. Operators blamed the Iowa law that limited bets to $5 a game and an individual's losses to $200 a cruise. There are no such limits in Mississippi.

In June, the Emerald Lady was held at its Iowa port until it settled claims for $403,000 in dock fees. A federal court judge later allowed the boat to leave Iowa waters after posting a $35,000 bond.

Fort Madison, Iowa, officials may seek more money.

Built in Jacksonville, Fla., in 1991, the two 201-foot, three-story riverboats will be separated by a two-story floating pavilion, that also will serve as part of the casino.

The Isle of Capri will open with 600 slot machines, craps, blackjack, poker, pai gow and baccarat. The casino will be open 24 hours a day.

The boats will remain docked at Point Cadet and the captains of each will be given different duties. They will remain on staff to pilot the boats to safe harbor if a hurricane threatens.

The casino, managed by Riverboat Corp. of Mississippi, is named for the barrier island, the Isle of Caprice, once located between Horn Island and Ship Island. Once a popular gambling spot, the island was washed away by storms and erosion.

ROBBERY

Teen to be tried as adult in bank holdup

Associated Press

NEWTON, Iowa — Seventeen-year-old Joshua Rupe of Newton will be tried as an adult for a central Iowa bank robbery, a judge ruled Monday.

Rupe is charged with first-degree robbery in the holdup July 13 at the Mid-Iowa Savings Bank at Baxter. He also is charged with driving with a suspended license.

At a hearing Monday in Jasper County District Court, Judge Scott Rosenberg said that if Rupe was tried as a juvenile and convicted he would be released when he turns 18 in less than a year. The judge said there would be little likelihood for rehabilitation during such a term and ruled it was in the best interest of the community that the boy be tried as an adult.

First-degree robbery is a Class B felony, punishable by up to 25 years in prison.

Bond was set at $32,500 and Rupe was ordered transferred from the juvenile detention hall at Chariton to the Marion County Jail at Knoxville. Public defender Nicholas Drees was assigned to represent the boy.

Authorities said a gunman held up the bank at 8:30 a.m. July 13 and made off with between $50 and $4,000. There were no injuries.

Officials said they recovered the money, a jacket and a ski mask from Rupe's car.

CAMPAIGN '92

Gov. dismisses Democrats' lead

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — President Bush can recover from a Democratic surge in the polls, but the recovery depends on what Bush has to offer, GOP Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

"This is July," Branstad said. "A lot of people don't really start focusing until after Labor Day in a presidential election."

Polls taken after last week's Democratic convention showed nominee Bill Clinton surging to a solid lead over President Bush. Branstad said that is nothing new. He pointed out that Democrats held a similar lead in the last presidential election, only to fade.

"It sounds a lot like 1988," Branstad said during his regular meeting with reporters.

"The Republican convention hasn't been held yet," he said. "I think it will be a volatile election. I think there are a lot of voters who have switched back and forth."

Branstad said Bush is likely to get similar help from next month's GOP convention, when he is likely to spell out a campaign agenda.

Branstad did warn that "a lot is going to depend on the program that the president puts forward."

One certain target during the election will be Congress, which is controlled by Democrats. There are signs Democrats understand that vulnerability, Branstad said.

"I noticed the Democrats were very careful to keep the congressional leaders pretty much out of sight," he said. "They recognize that their leaders in the Congress are a liability in this campaign."

Branstad will lead Iowa's delegation to the Republican convention in Houston, Texas, where there are expected to be few fights.

While some moderates have urged Bush to dump Vice President Dan Quayle, Branstad made it clear he will have no part of that. He noted that Quayle's wife, Marilyn, is campaigning in the state this week.

"I think (Quayle) should be kept," Branstad said. "I think we ought to look at what he's said and what he's done."

"I think he's intelligent, I think he's articulate, I think he's done a good job of communicating an important message," Branstad said. Quayle has drawn wide attention by his criticism of the television program "Murphy Brown," arguing that many television programs don't depict traditional family values.

Branstad said he supports that effort.

Branstad demands review in tax scam

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Monday said he's told state Revenue Department officials to review their procedures after officials found $700,000 in diverted tax refunds.

"The Department of Revenue and Finance obviously is a very critical area," Branstad said.

"You need to have a system of checks and balances to see that illegal activity cannot occur," he said. "We're going to review procedures to assure this kind of thing can't happen again."

Branstad spoke at his regular meeting with reporters, where he was asked about disclosures last week that checks amounting to about $700,000 in corporate tax refunds had been issued to nonexistent businesses.

"We fully intend to recover the money," Branstad said. "I'm sure there will be criminal action taken as well."

While Branstad said all the money would be recovered, he was defensive on the issue of how it was possible to issue checks totaling so much.

"I think there needs to be a review to find out how this happened," he said. "We cannot and will not tolerate dishonesty in government."

Revenue Department head Gerald Bair said the checks were issued over a three-year period by Lisa Leslie, of rural Knoxville, Iowa. She was a $25,000-a-year tax examiner who was fired late last month when the checks were discovered.

The checks ranged from $60,452 to $113,253. They totaled $692,000.

State officials said many of the checks were deposited in bank accounts controlled by Michael Gardner and Tina Gardner of Knoxville.

"It's a situation where somebody got by with something for a short period of time," Branstad said. "Dishonesty just isn't going to pay."

Wet crops hunger for sunshine

Steven P. Rosenfeld
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The condition of Iowa's two most important crops — corn and soybeans — improved last week, helped by nearly double the normal average rainfall. But officials said the plants now need more sunshine.

The weekly crop report said 84 percent of Iowa's corn and 86 percent of the soybeans were either in good or excellent condition as the new week began. That compared with 75 percent of the corn and 78 percent of the soybeans a week earlier.

Just 2 percent of the state's topsoil and 5 percent of the subsoil was deemed short of moisture, according to the report by the Iowa Agricultural Statistics office, a joint state-federal agency.

"Rain and warmer weather allowed crops to make good development this past week, however, more sunshine is needed," the report said.

While the state's corn crop has started pollination, development is behind schedule. But soybean development is on schedule, according to the report.

Eighteen percent of the state's corn acreage was in the silking stage, the second phase of pollination.

Twenty-two percent of the corn crop is deemed excellent, 62 percent good, 15 percent fair and 1 percent poor. A week earlier, 20 percent was judged excellent, 55 percent good, 23 percent fair, 1 percent poor and 1 percent very poor.

Mandy's new best friend . . . is Madonna!!!

Mandy Crane
The Daily Iowan

The latest Iowa Poll results are in and Sister Mandy Crane will explain it all to you.

This time the poll made national news (well, U.S.A. Today anyway) on whom those crazy Iowans would like for neighbors.

The poll, conducted a couple weeks ago, consisted of a list of celebrities' names read to Iowans 18 years of age or older. Iowans were to respond by telling how they'd feel having these people as potential neighbors. The results are weird. But am I shocked? I think not.

Winning the top spot for over-the-fence talk is retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, followed closely by Oprah Winfrey and Michael Jordan.

Now just suppose that these people really were your neighbors. Really think about it. Forget the fact that none of them would be able to afford housing in this town, just focus on what you would talk about if, say, their dandelions were blowing over into your yard.

What would their houses look like? Would Stormin' Norman pitch a tent in the back yard? Would Jordan demand cathedral ceilings in every room?

Other potential "neighbors" for the 'hood poll include Bob Vila, Jay Leno, Martha Stewart, Dr. Ruth Westheimer, Tom and Roseanne Arnold, and Madonna.

Along with the Too Goofy to be True category, the poll also asked neighborhood reception to the television characters Murphy Brown and Steve Erkel.

I can see the Labor Day block party now . . .

(Insert dream sequence effects here)

Mandy: Anyone else for my tempeh pasta salad?

Roseanne: No thanks, but could you hand me that bag of Ruffles?

Leno: Get your own bag!

Tom Arnold: I did.

Laughter track

Martha: Really, Mandy. You outfit yourself on this buffet table. But how about some pointers on more attractive table decorations for next year?

Mandy: Can it, Stewart. I think the pink flamingos are a nice effect. Besides, I bought 'em at Kmart.

Vila: Has anyone seen those lawn ornaments at Sears? Great place, Sears.

Cut to commercial

Madonna: So tell me, Norman, what's it like to be surrounded by nothing but sand and studs?

Schwarzkopf: You tell me.

Jordan: Yo, Leno! I told you to keep your dog off of my lawn! Wait till I tell Arsenio about this!

Stewart: Here's a handy way of dealing with excrement . . .

Vila: Of course, if you just knock a couple of joists together over this old eave here, you could build a puppy port-a-potty in no time.

Erkel: Hieeeeeee, everybody. Did I miss anything? Hey, Oprah. Who's that bitchy blonde journalist over there by the hydrangea bushes? I thought Murphy wasn't able to find a babysitter.

Oprah: Get those glasses fixed, Steve. That's not Murphy. It's Mandy Crane.

Erkel: Oops.

Dr. Ruth: That's okay, young man. It's a mistake anyone could make.

There's really little difference.

Madonna: Excuse me, you're talking about my best friend here.

Mandy: Thanks, hon. Could ya run inside and refill my iced tea?

Madonna: No problem.

Runs off

Tom Arnold: So, Jay, when you gonna let me on your show? Huh? Huh?

Leno: Well, let's see . . . Gee. Look at the time. I have to meet someone at Great Mid in a few minutes. Better run.

Oprah: Could I ride in with you? I feel the need for cheese fries at Micky's.

Leno: Sorry, Oprah. I don't believe there's room for you on the Harley.

Takes off

Mandy: Hey, where's everybody going? The band's just getting warmed up! It's your favorite, Dr. Ruth. Head Candy! Aw, c'mon!

More dream sequence effects

Whew. Thank God it's only a poll. Nobody as famous and funny as Tom and Roseanne would really live here in Iowa. Would they?

'Northwest Epic' — the highway to . . .

Michael McClintock
Special to The Daily Iowan

"Northwest Epic: The Building of the Alaska Highway," by Heath Twitchell, St. Martin's Press, 1992. $24.95.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the building of a gravel road with a rich history. The Alaska Highway was a 1,500-mile construction project that ran northwest through the rugged Canadian Rockies to isolated military bases in Alaska over some of the most challenging terrain ever presented to construction crews. And it was built in less than two years in the tense months following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in December 1941. The United States feared that the first Japanese landing in June 1942, on the island of Attu in the Aleutian Islands, would be followed by another attack in that region of the North American continent.

The project was quickly organized from the regiments of the U.S. Army Engineers, private contractors from both the United States and Canada, and even a few colorful old sourdoughs who acted as guides, tellers of tall tales, and in some cases fierce advocates for their own choice of the route they thought the project should follow. Colorful was certainly the right word for Tommy Clark, one sourdough, locally famous for his collection of glass eyes. On Sundays he wore one emblazoned with a crucifix; on weekdays the pupil might be a lovely yellow/blue mixture or, on special occasions that called for a display of patriotism, a tiny Union Jack on a field of pink.

Heath Twitchell calls his book an epic with good reason; the highway employed 46,000 people and it wasn't easy. The real heroes were the U.S. Army Engineers, two black and white regiments, at a time before the Army was racially integrated. These crews had the job of learning how to build a 1,500-mile road over muskegs, over mountainous terrain that hadn't been mapped properly or even explored, and over permafrost, which turns into something like this morning's oatmeal when the vegetation is cleared . . . all this in temperatures that dipped as low as 70 degrees below zero in the winter of 1942 and 1943.

The project was rife with bitter fights about where the road should go, whether its strategic importance justified the cost, and how important it was to add roads to oil fields on the way, at additional cost to a project that became the most expensive project of the war and sparked a congressional investigation.

Ultimately, the highway's most important wartime use was as a navigational aid to U.S. pilots, who ferried nearly 8,000 planes to the U.S.S.R. for use against the Nazis on the Russian front. Flight strips at intervals along the highway provided fuel, and the road itself was used for an emergency landing strip when required. Six different types of planes, from B-52 Mitchell bombers to P-51 Mustang fighters were ferried along the highway from U.S. manufacturing plants to Fairbanks, Alaska.

Harry Truman, then a senator from Missouri, was given the job of investigating the excessive cost of the project, and his masterful handling of that sensitive issue probably had much to do with his selection as Franklin D. Roosevelt's vice presidential running mate in 1944.

It's blacktop now. You can celebrate the road's 50th anniversary with a trip to Fairbanks, if you like. But get the book. It will make the trip more memorable if you appreciate its history.

Stephen Prokopoff was recently named the new director of the UI Museum of Art. He took some time out from house hunting to share his plans for the upcoming season.

New art director Prokopoff visits Iowa City, plans on staying awhile

Kristen Carr
The Daily Iowan

He hasn't even found a house to live in yet, but the new director of the UI Museum of Art seems to be around in his new position.

Stephen Prokopoff, who was interviewed last Friday in between house-hunting appointments, seemed confident that he would be around for a while, real estate shortages notwithstanding. "I've got my tent," he explained with a smile.

The UI Museum of Art has gone through four directors in the past four years. Robert Hobbs preceded Mary Kujawski, the last director, who served from 1988 to 1990. Following Kujawski's death, Fred Woodward and Mary Keough Lyman were appointed acting co-directors. Lyman was named interim director this spring. Considering the number of directors in such a short period, the museum was in need of a specific program for the kinds of exhibits and artists it would represent.

Prokopoff said that his design for the UI art museum has an increased emphasis on bringing outside exhibitions to the museum.

"The museum, after all, ought to be a window on the art world," he maintained. "One of the purposes of contemporary exhibitions is to provide that window."

Upcoming shows include the Lawry Collection of American Folk Art and a print retrospective by Claes Oldenburg, scheduled for 1992-93.

In addition to showcasing more recognizable names like Oldenburg, Prokopoff looks forward to introducing Iowa City to the work of lesser known artists like Annette Messanger, whose narrative installation works will appear this fall.

"I like to do exhibits that are very new to people. We're planning a program of contrasts — just as theaters try to plan plays that represent different styles, different sensibilities."

Prokopoff also hopes to put together "theme" shows, in which different artists respond to a particular subject or idea.

Prokopoff formerly headed the Krannert Art Center at the University of Illinois. He is married to Dr. Lois Craig, who is a professor at MIT, and has five grown children.

Prokopoff already seems at home with the challenges that have been left to him as the newest director of the museum.

"There hasn't been anyone here to get things moving in a consistent and cumulative way," he said. "It's not as though there hasn't been anyone tending the store, but there have been different people tending the store for relatively short periods of time. My plan is to stay awhile."

Alec Baldwin is Peter and Meg Ryan is Rita in "Prelude to a Kiss," an enchanting fable about the immortality of true love.

'Prelude to a Kiss' is false hope for lovers

Linda Deutsch

Associated Press

Like a summer romance fanned by balmy breezes, "Prelude to a Kiss" is a diverting interlude, a movie for romantics. It may not change your life, but it's intriguing while it lasts.

Cynics should be warned that if you scratch even an inch below the surface of this modern-day fairy tale, its premise evaporates into the air it's made of.

This mystical fable starring two of Hollywood's most attractive performers could touch the same sentimental chords that made "Ghost" a runaway hit.

Meg Ryan and Alec Baldwin are Rita and Peter, a mismatched couple who fall in love at first sight and quickly decide to marry. Sex brings them together, we are told, although the chemistry between these two stars is less than sizzling on screen.

What is it that Peter and Rita really love about each other? Is it their looks alone that attract or something else?

The question arises after their wedding in a garden overlooking the sea. An elderly stranger appears, mingles with guests and, when discovered as an interloper, asks if he might kiss the bride before he leaves.

That kiss from a white-haired stranger excites the heavens and leaves Rita dazed.

During their glamorous Jamaican honeymoon, Peter discovers that Rita is no longer the girl he married. Her mannerisms have changed; her values are different and she can't remember little sentimental secrets they shared.

The marriage quickly falls apart and Peter is moved to tears as he voices his suspicion that something or someone has taken over Rita's body.

What has happened to Rita? Only one person can answer that question — the old man who kissed her.

Without giving away too much, there's a male-female body transfer at work here. The question becomes: Would Peter love Rita if she were inhabiting another body?

Veteran stage actor Sydney Walker, playing his first starring film role at 71, just about steals the show from Baldwin and Ryan with his sweet, enigmatic portrayal of the old man. This is minimalist acting at its best.

Norman Rene directed "Prelude to a Kiss," from a screenplay by Craig Lucas based on his play of the same name. The director, whose previous credit was "Longtime Companion," sometimes takes his subject too seriously.

The director gives us endless closeups of Baldwin's dazzling blue eyes and beefcake shots of his physique in a swimsuit. Baldwin pretty much overcomes this with a likable performance. Ryan, so successful in "When Harry Met Sally . . ." plays Rita as a sweet airhead, but seems unsure how to project her transformation.

Three big talents, Kathy Bates, Ned Beatty and Patty Duke, regrettably are wasted in throwaway roles as family members. Some viewers may find it unnerving to see former child star Duke playing Meg Ryan's mother.

BOSNIA-HERZEGOVINA

John Daniszewski

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Fierce fighting engulfed Sarajevo and other parts of Bosnia on Monday, making a mockery of the latest cease-fire declaration and forcing U.N. officials to cut the capital's lifeline.

As Muslim victims of "ethnic cleansing" streamed out of Serb-held lands, the German and Swiss governments said they would accept more refugees and the European Community announced new moves to punish Serbia for the war in Bosnia.

A cease-fire that went into effect Sunday night lasted less than two hours and mortars and bullets began crashing into the airport itself, demolishing a hangar and damaging the control tower.

Shrapnel injured two Canadian U.N. observers, one in the head and the other in the leg, U.N. spokesman François Giuliani said in New York.

Aid flights were suspended for a full day for the first time since they began June 29. Three planes in the air turned back, U.N. officials said.

Maj. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie, the U.N. commander in Sarajevo, said it was hard to tell who violated the cease-fire. When one person fires, eight fire back, he said. "It just goes up exponentially."

Fierce battles also raged in the eastern town of Gorazde. A ham radio operator said hundreds of wounded were left "without any help, and many are lying and dying in the streets."

About 70,000 residents and refugees in Gorazde have been under siege by Serb forces for three months.

Under Serb siege for almost four months, Sarajevo's nearly 400,000 residents have relied heavily on the airlift — 280 planes have brought in 3,346 metric tons of supplies in three weeks — for even the most basic staples.

Scattered small arms fire continued during the day around the airport, in northeastern suburbs and around Serb-held Mt. Trebevic, south of the presidency building.

The new truce, agreed to Friday in London, England, by Muslim, Serb and Croat leaders, included a pledge to allow U.N. peacekeepers to monitor all heavy weapons. The truce was to have lasted for two weeks.

The European Community said Monday it would move to kick Serbia and Montenegro, the only remaining members of Yugoslavia, out of international organizations, including the United Nations.

Serbia has received much of the blame from the world community over the fighting in Bosnia and is suffering under tough U.N. trade and diplomatic sanctions.

The war in Bosnia is believed to have killed about 40,000 people. More than 1.3 million refugees have fled the bloodshed.

On Monday, the German government — which had been less welcoming to Muslim Bosnians than it was to victims of largely Catholic Croatia's war — relaxed and announced a relaxation of its visa requirements for Bosnians.

Clinton touts health plan, courts undecided voters

Steven Komarow

Associated Press

WILMINGTON, Ohio — Bill Clinton promoted himself Monday as the man to tackle the nation's rising medical-care costs, saying the American economy needs a national health program.

The Democratic presidential nominee also said that President Bush, said to be revising his economic recovery program, was offering "too little, too late."

Standing in a plaza beside the Nationwide Insurance Co., in Columbus, on the fourth day of his post-convention bus tour, Clinton said 16 cents of every American health dollar was lost in paperwork, compared to just five cents in Europe.

"We are hiring clerks in hospitals at four times the rate we are hiring nurses," he said. At the same time, he said, health-care premiums are driving up the costs of U.S. manufactured goods.

The Arkansas governor said his plan would make the health-care system more efficient, save billions of dollars, and make it possible to cover millions of uninsured people.

Clinton's plan calls for controlling costs through insurance reform and other steps, requiring businesses to insure their employees and phasing in public programs to cover other people.

He cited Germany and the state of Hawaii, which both have universal health care, as examples of how to tackle the problem.

"You have to overcome your cynicism that this cannot be done," he said.

The crowds greeting the Democratic ticket on its six-day bus trip continued to be large and loud.

Later, as Clinton spoke in shirt-sleeves from the steps of the Clinton County Courthouse in Wilmington, about 3,000 people cheered and chanted in response to a populist pitch that sounded a lot like Ross Perot, whose supporters the Clinton campaign has been seeking out.

Hillary Clinton reaches out to help Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton as he holds up 6-week-old Chad Lawrence at a rally in Wilmington, Ohio, Monday afternoon.

Former aides unveil defunct Perot platform

Tom Raum

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ross Perot was prepared to outline an economic program that would have cut Social Security benefits and farm subsidies and imposed a 50-cent-a-gallon increase on the gasoline tax.

On foreign policy, he was ready to call for an overhaul of the State Department to make trade the main mission of U.S. embassies around the world. And his campaign was putting the finishing touches on a tough "zero tolerance" anti-drug policy.

Despite criticism that the Texas billionaire lacked specifics on issues, his campaign was in the process of preparing a highly detailed set of position papers when Perot abruptly abandoned the quest late last week.

A centerpiece of the uncompleted Perot platform, according to associates and former campaign aides, was an $800 billion deficit-reduction plan that would have attacked the problem far more aggressively than advocated by President Bush or Democratic nominee Bill Clinton.

Intended to be the first plank of the Perot platform, the economic plan was to have been put out in late July or early August. Had the plan been presented, it likely would have generated considerable political opposition for its combination of new taxes and deep cuts in government programs.

"Our goal was to reduce the deficit to zero in five years and to do it by trying to be fair and spread the pain all across all programs, and that means all programs including entitlements," said John White, a former Eastman Kodak vice president and former federal budget official who served as Perot's issues director.

Entitlements are benefit programs including Social Security that are often viewed as sacred cows politically.

"I think politically it would have been a tough document to sell," former campaign co-manager Ed

Rollins said of the Perot budget.

"And I think it would have taken the entire campaign effort from now until November to make Americans buy off on it. And I don't think he was prepared to do that," Rollins said on NBC's "Today" show.

According to those familiar with the still-uncompleted plan, the measure would have called for roughly a 10 percent cut in government programs and reductions in the budget deficit by close to $800 billion over five years.

It would have called for higher taxes on a wide range of items. In addition to sharply increasing the federal gasoline tax, now set at 14 cents a gallon, it would have raised taxes on tobacco and alcohol.

It also would have imposed higher fees for various government services, including new fees for boaters who use the nation's inland waterways and higher fees for timber companies for logging on public lands.

Researchers study possibility of new HIV strain

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Researchers at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control are trying to determine why a few patients with AIDS symptoms test negative for the viruses known to cause the disease, a CDC official said Monday.

"We have not found a cause," said Dr. Harold Jaffe, the Atlanta-based

of Public Safety.

"It is hard for us to see that four out there, to look at the disparity in numbers," said Funk.

"I think sometimes universities in general fear that rape reports will scare prospective students away. In my opinion, it is more helpful to students and parents if everyone is aware of the problem and is clear on how to prevent it," she said.

Dyer agreed.

"The figures reported by the Dean of Students' office are not even

CDC's acting director of HIV-AIDS. "Reports from elsewhere indicate it may be a new illness. We're trying to determine if it's a big problem."

Jaffe said there have been half a dozen reports in the United States during the past few years of patients who tested negative for the HIV-1 and HIV-2 but had illnesses associated with AIDS, which suppresses a victim's immune system.

All had conditions that are found almost exclusively among people with AIDS, such as a cancer called Kaposi's sarcoma and the loss of a class of white blood cells called CD4 cells.

Thomas Spira, a CDC epidemiologist, described the cases in an abstract published in the Journal of Cellular Biochemistry.

Spira said in the paper, published in March, that five of the patients were men and one was a woman, and they ranged in age from 35 to 70.

The evidence, he concluded, "suggest that HIV may not be the only infectious cause of immunosuppression in man."

right to be disappointed," Havel said Sunday.

He could have stayed in office until his term expired Oct. 5, but his early resignation had been expected as the breakup he fought to prevent became inevitable.

It followed weeks of intense but futile negotiations on the future of Czechoslovakia, which was formed after World War I from parts of the Austro-Hungarian empire.

During the Communist years, Havel was harassed and imprisoned for his dogged criticism of Czechoslovakia's communist rulers. He became president 2½ years ago after the non-violent Velvet Revolution that forced out the authoritarian government.

"It is hardly possible to find any other person who would by his activities make Czechoslovakia as visible in the world as Havel did," Tomas Smetana, editor of the Czech newspaper Lidové Noviny, wrote in a commentary Monday.

There has been speculation Havel might continue in politics as the president of an independent Czech republic, although the federation's breakup has yet to be settled and no such post now exists.

Last month, the leaders of the Czech and Slovak governments agreed to split the federation in two and asked their regions' parliaments to work out the details by Sept. 30.

Friday's sovereignty declaration does not mean immediate independence for Slovakia, but Vladimir Meciar, premier of the Slovak regional government, has promised to present a new constitution by August.

Although there was jubilation among many Slovaks following the sovereignty vote, there is general agreement that they face difficult problems trying to go it alone.

ISRAEL

President Bush and this administration attach a very high priority to the absorption of immigrants to Israel," Baker said.

The Rabin government's pledge not to approve new contracts for housing units in the occupied territories apparently led to a U.S. turnaround.

And yet, an Israeli source in Rabin's office said the prime minister stands firm on the need for Jewish settlements for security reasons on the outskirts of Jerusalem, in the West Bank's Jordan Valley and in the Golan Heights.

Rabin objects to so-called "political" settlements, and the source said the money spent on them would be diverted to helping Israel's economy.

Refugees from the former Soviet Union are having trouble finding work. Some estimates place their unemployment rate at 35 percent to 40 percent. Overall, Israel's jobless rate is 11 percent.

Existing settlements will not be uprooted, and improvements in services — new schools, for instance — will be carried out.

"We are not going to harm the settlers," said the source, who declined to be identified further.

Baker said he was impressed that Israel was "reordering" its priorities and trying to revitalize its economy. He said absorption of refugees was "something the United States is strongly supportive of in principle."

Despite urgent appeals, Bush had refused to guarantee the loans without an Israeli commitment to stop adding to the 110,000 Jews living on land the Arabs lost in the 1967 war.

Palestinian Arabs who met with Baker urged him to delay action on the request until negotiations produce an agreement. Similar stands were taken by Jordan and Syria.

Rabin thanked Baker publicly for "trying to help us in finding ways to solve problems in the region" and "to assist Israel to be more capable of coping with its own problems."

Shimon Peres, the new foreign minister, said after he and Rabin had lunch with Baker earlier in the day that "from my point of view it looks all right."

Hanan Ashrawi, spokeswoman for the Palestinians, said Israel's decision on the settlements was unclear.

"We did see indications of positive steps in the right direction," she said after five Palestinians met with Baker for three hours and 15 minutes.

"We don't know whether the suspension of contracts applies to new contracts, unsigned contracts or to all contracts. . . . If there is still the distinction between political and security settlements, (that's) a distinction we do not accept," she said.

She said that as sponsor of peace talks, the United States cannot "allow its funds to be used for illegal settlement activities which negate the very principle of negotiations and the peace process."

7 believed dead in crash of prototype aircraft

Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

QUANTICO, Va. — An experimental V-22 tilt-rotor aircraft crashed into the Potomac River near the Quantico Marine air station Monday and officials at the base said all seven aboard were believed killed.

The aircraft, which features tilting propeller units that let it fly either like an airplane or a helicopter, was making a routine final approach after flying here from Eglin Air Force Base in Florida when the crash occurred.

"It seemed to be having no problem when it basically dropped right into the Potomac River," said Maj. Barry Moore, base public affairs officer. Moore said there were seven people on board and there were no known survivors of the 1:42 p.m. EDT crash.

He said he believed the craft, nicknamed the "Osprey," was making the transition from horizontal to vertical flight when the crash occurred.

"The final approach seemed to be error-free," Moore said. "Something happened at the last second."

Fishing guide Bill Kramer said he had watched the craft take off.

"It headed north about two miles and stalled out and hit the water. It was only in the air about five minutes, maybe less."

Kramer, fishing with two clients, said the Osprey "disintegrated when it hit the water. By the time we got to the wreckage, what was left of the main fuselage had already sank. It only took minutes for the fuselage to sink. It went down quick. . . . There was no explosion or anything like that."

He said it was at least 15 minutes before military rescue craft reached the scene.

Moore said there was no immediate indication why the crash occurred. A Marine Corps statement said the plane had experienced "unknown technical problems."

In Washington, D.C., Greta Creech, spokeswoman for Rep. Pete Geren, D-Texas, said she had been told the plane was "two miles out on final approach to the runway. . . . All of a sudden there were two loud bangs or pops . . . and then the aircraft took a dive into the water."

She said she was relaying information from the Marine Corps and Bell Helicopter, one of the craft's manufacturers. Bell is headquartered in Fort Worth, Texas.

One military official who had been to the site said all that was visible of the plane was tiny pieces of debris.

The Atlanta Braves have won 11 straight games

TOUR de FRANCE

One of them was third-place Andy Hampsten of Boulder, Colo., still 301 behind Indurain.

"The day was relatively quiet for me and the rest of the pack after the mountains," Indurain said. "I have to watch Claudio, though, because I don't want to wait for the time trial."

The three-week race continues over relatively flat terrain this week, has a time trial Friday, and ends Sunday in Paris.

Hampsten won Sunday's 113-mile leg between Sestriere, Italy and Alpe d'Huez in the French Alps. During the stage, fellow American and three-time champion Greg LeMond quit the race, citing exhaustion.

LeMond, 38, White Sox 2 (12) CHICAGO — Tim Hulett singled home the go-ahead run in the 12th inning Monday night.

Pat Clements (1-0) pitched 1½ scoreless innings for the victory. Gregg Olson got three outs for his 23rd save.

Steve Olin pitched the final two innings for his 17th save. The Indians broke it open with three runs in the ninth against relievers Bob Kipper and Carl Willis.

Twins starter Willie Banks (3-3) allowed five hits in a career-high eight innings, but was hurt by a first-inning bout with wildness. The Twins lost for only the seventh time in 30 games.

Expos 2, Giants 1

MONTREAL — Brian Barnes is getting close to his first major league shutout.

Barnes fanned three-hit ball over eight-plus innings and drove in a run with a sixth-inning single, sending the Giants to their fourth straight loss.

Barnes (2-2), who pitched at Triple-A Indianapolis until he was recalled June 20, struck out eight and walked two. John Wetzel got the last three outs for his 19th save.

It was the second time in the last month that Barnes just missed a chance at a shutout.

"It would have been nice to finish the game but Felipe (Alou) has been around a lot longer than I have," Barnes said. "I can't say I'm upset that I didn't finish. I was just happy to win."

When Barnes came to bat in the ninth inning, the crowd of 17,315 gave him a big ovation.

I said: Thank you, thank you," Barnes said. "I wanted to wave but I didn't know whether I should. I just wanted to concentrate on not striking out."

Orioles 3, White Sox 2 (12)

CHICAGO — Tim Hulett singled home the go-ahead run in the 12th inning Monday night.

Pat Clements (1-0) pitched 1½ scoreless innings for the victory. Gregg Olson got three outs for his 23rd save.

Brewers 5, Rangers 4

MILWAUKEE — B.J. Surhoff hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning Monday night, lifting the Brewers over the Rangers.

A Robin Yount single off second baseman Jeff Huson's glove moved him into sole possession of 18th place on the all-time hit list with 2,965.

Darren Holmes (3-3) pitched one inning for the victory.

Red Sox 5, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Tom Brunansky doubled, tripled and drove in three runs, helping Paul Quantrill win his major league debut.

Quantrill, 6-8 at Triple-A Pawtucket, relieved starter Danny Darwin starting the sixth and pitched 2½ scoreless innings. He gave up two hits and struck out three.

Charlie Hough, bidding for his 200th career victory, shut out Baltimore on four hits for eight innings. But Scott Radinsky and Bobby Thigpen could not hold a 2-0 lead in the ninth, and an error and hit batter set up RBI singles by Glenn Davis and Milligan.

Baltimore's tying hits came with one out against Thigpen, who has blown seven of 26 save chances.

Hough was denied in his third attempt to win No. 200. He walked one and struck out two, and retired 12 straight batters in the middle innings.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

USA fixes problems during trip to France

Pete Herrera
Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — A week in southern France can work wonders on bruised egos and Olympic ambitions.

"France was the best thing we could have done," said Steve Nunno, assistant coach of the U.S. women's gymnastics team.

Just three weeks ago, that squad showed more interest in battling itself than the Russians and Romanians.

The turnaround, says Nunno, occurred in Nîmes, France, where the team trained for a week before heading for the Games.

"It was very smooth and very relaxing," Nunno said Monday during the team's first workout in Barcelona. "The kids were in great spirits and we knew we had a task to do and a common goal."

The feuding began after the Olympic trials in Baltimore and extended from who would coach the team to who should be on it.

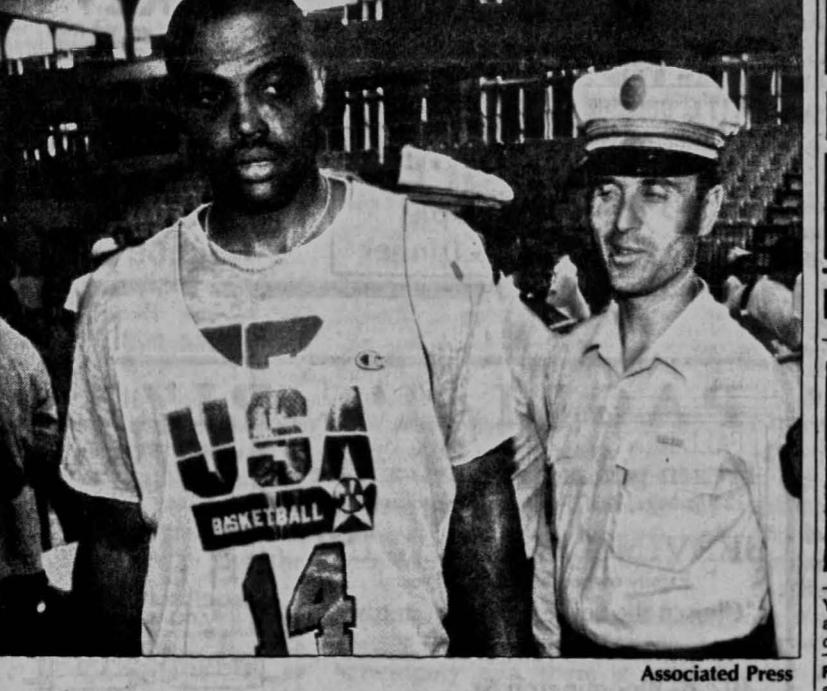

Much of the fuel was provided by Bela Karolyi, the team's head coach and personal mentor of team members Kim Zmeskal, Betty Okino and Kerri Strug.

Karolyi attacked the scoring at the trials, where 15-year-old Shannon Miller — coached by Nunno — finished ahead of Zmeskal, the current world champion.

Karolyi also criticized the omission from the squad of Hilary Grivich, another of his protégées and a member of last year's silver-medal team at the World Championships in Indianapolis.

Unperturbed by the turmoil, U.S. Gymnastics Federation executive director Mike Jacki delayed the naming of Karolyi as head coach until after the eight-member training squad was trimmed to the six competing athletes and one alternate.

Relaxing setting keeps Barkley's mouth content

Bill Barnard
Associated Press

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — If Monaco's Olympic swimming team has an opening, Charles Barkley is ready to apply, although he may need to work on his royal protocol.

Barkley, whose colorful and controversial statements keep writers' notebooks full during the NBA season, has been in top form in Monaco's relaxed atmosphere.

Monaco's Prince Rainier, high prices and topless swimmers — not the U.S. Olympic basketball team — had Barkley's attention Monday.

"I'm quitting this team for the swim team," Barkley said. "I'm going to the pool as long as there are babes with no tops. You'll think I'm Mark Spitz before this week is over."

Team USA's pre-Olympic stay in Monaco continued Monday night with a dinner hosted by the prince.

He was supposed to attend the team's practice in the afternoon, but failed to appear.

"He didn't show up and I don't appreciate that, him standing us up," Barkley said. "They told us you can't touch him and you have to call him 'your majesty.' I haven't called anyone 'your majesty' since Harold Katz."

Katz is the owner of the Philadelphia 76ers, who traded Barkley to the Phoenix Suns last month.

Barkley, however, did admit he had gotten some lessons in manners around royalty.

"We left the United States and left the controversial type things that were pitting one against another," Nunno said. "We got to France and everyone pulled together. The whole team solidified and the pressure was off."

It's certain to return when the competition begins Sunday at Palau San Jordi arena.

Led by Zmeskal and Miller, the U.S. team is expected to medal for the first time against a full Olympic field. The Americans took the silver medal behind Romania as the Soviet Union led a boycott of the 1984 Games in Los Angeles, and lost the bronze to East Germany four years ago in Seoul on a controversial deduction.

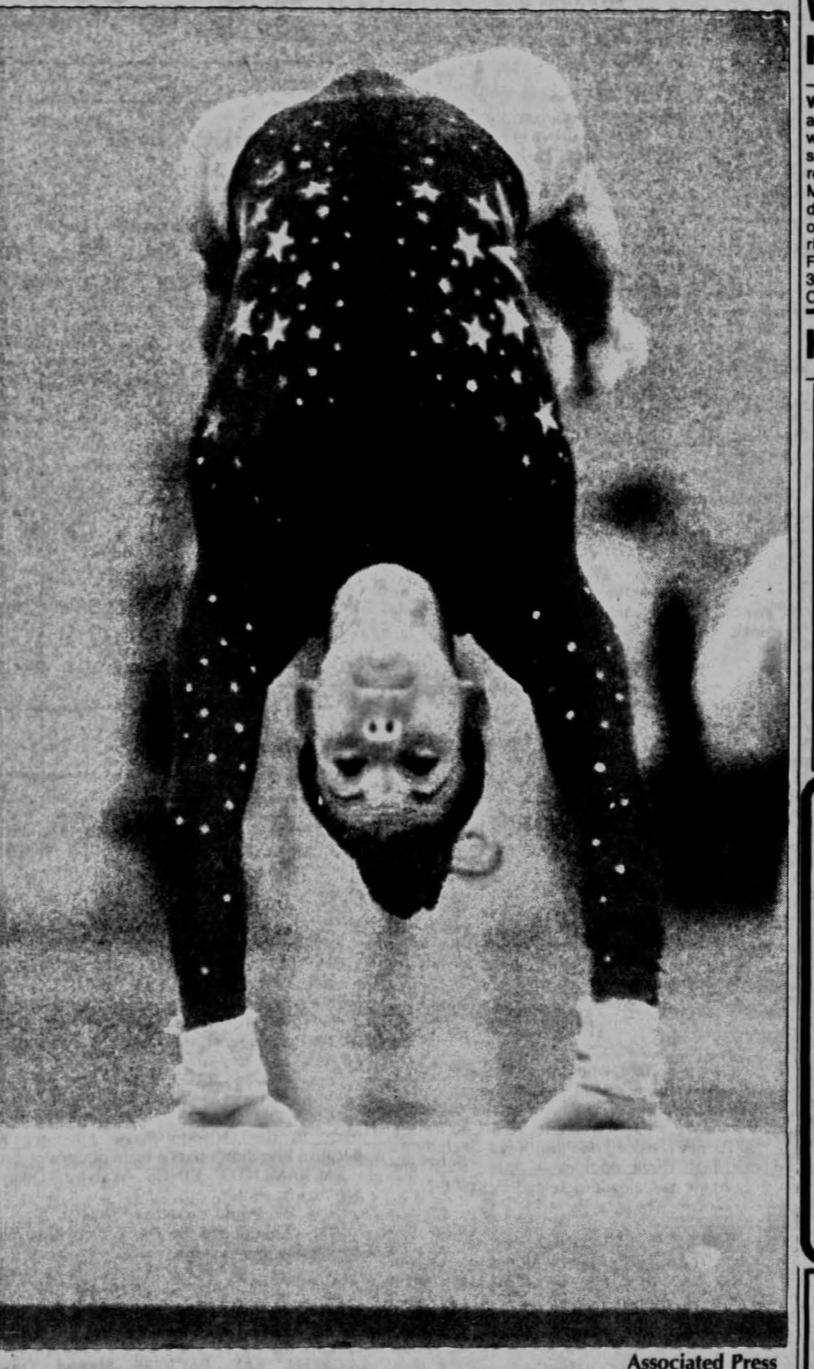

"With the Soviets in, we've never won a medal," said Nunno. "I think in '84 we would have won a medal even with the Soviets in. In '88 we had a very good team, but it wasn't as deep as it is now. We've got two superstars that will be in contention for the all-around medal."

The Soviets, competing as the Unified Team, are the overwhelming favorites to win their ninth gold medal in the last 10 Olympics. They're led by former world champion and 1988 Olympian Svetlana Boginskaya, whom Zmeskal dethroned last September.

But Nunno likes the always-solid Romanians, who beat the former Soviets two weeks ago in a triangular-meet with Italy.

"The Romanians feel they are the strongest team on the floor," Nunno said. "They're healthy and they've been hungry ever since we beat them in Indianapolis."

Romania finished third behind the Soviets and the Americans in the 1991 World Championships, but should be stronger with the return of Gina Gogean, a former national junior champion who missed Indianapolis due to an injury.

And while much of the pre-Olympics hype has been on a rematch of Zmeskal and Boginskaya, Nunno says the all-around battle should be wide open with athletes like Miller, Romania's Lavinia Milosovici and Cristina Bontas and Unified Team member Tatiana Gutu also in the field.

"I think there's going to be half a dozen players in this one," he said.

Hawkeyes get top seed

The Iowa men's basketball team has been awarded the top seed for the 1992 San Juan Shootout. Pairings for the eight-team tournament, to be held December 20-22 in Puerto Rico, were announced Monday.

Iowa will face No. 8 seed and host school American University on December 20th at 7 p.m. The other two teams in Iowa's bracket are No. 4 Illinois-Chicago and No. 5 Eastern Michigan. In the other bracket, No. 3 Southern Illinois will face No. 6 Radford and No. 2 Mississippi State will play No. 7 Florida International.

McCoy wins Iowa Amateur

BURLINGTON (AP) — Mike McCoy birdied the par-4 18th hole to win the Iowa Amateur golf championship Sunday in sudden-death.

McCoy of Des Moines, Mike Smith of Oskaloosa and Jonathan Frommelt of Des Moines were tied at 215 after 54 holes and entered a three-hole playoff round. McCoy and Smith shot a par 13 in the playoff, while Frommelt bogeyed.

Last year's champion, Gregg Winkel of Algona, finished well off the pace at 233.

BASEBALL

Lansford, Hollins honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Third baseman Carney Lansford of the Oakland A's and Dave Hollins of the Philadelphia Phillies have been named the American and National League players of the week, respectively, for the period ending Sunday.

Lansford batted .583 in four games following the All-Star break with seven hits in 12 at-bats. He had three doubles and scored three runs.

Hollins hit .563 with nine hits in 16 at-bats in four games. He hit two homers, two doubles and drove in seven runs and scored eight.

NCAA

Number of black athletes higher than black students

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A survey of last year's enrollment at Big Eight schools shows the percentage of black athletes who earn full scholarships is up to 10 times higher than the percentage of black students overall.

At Iowa State, blacks make up 2.4 percent of students but received 37 percent of football and 64 percent of basketball scholarships.

The report, in The Chronicle of Higher Education, was based on figures for 1991 because this year's are not available.

BOXING

Bowe an even favorite

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Riddick Bowe became the first heavyweight challenger in 30 years to be an even money favorite to win the title.

Mirage hotel oddsmaker Jimmy Vaccaro made Bowe and Evander Holyfield both even money favorites, the first time since Sonny Liston fought Floyd Patterson in 1962 that a challenger has been thought of so highly by the bookies. Bowe and Holyfield will meet Nov. 13.

Team was paying off Schlichter's debts

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Rockers of the Arena Football League announced Monday that quarterback Art Schlichter, arrested last week for passing a bad check, has had a relapse of his compulsive gambling problem.

Rockers general manager Keith Sprunk said the team had been managing Schlichter's paycheck since late May, giving his wife $300 a week and putting the rest into an account to pay off Schlichter's gambling and other debts.

Schlichter was suspended twice from the NFL for gambling in the early 1980s.

Little support, Reds spoil Harkey's comeback

Associated Press

The Cubs' Mike Harkey fires to the plate vs. the Reds Monday night. Harkey allowed one run in 5 1/2 innings, but did not get a decision, in his first start in over a year.

TOUR de FRANCE

Chioccioli wins stage; Indurain leads overall

Associated Press

SAINT-ETIENNE, France — Miguel Indurain rolled into the final week of the Tour de France by easily holding onto his lead Monday as Italy's Franco Chioccioli won the 15th stage.

Chioccioli, 32, won the Tour of Italy in 1991 but is racing in the Tour de France for the first time. He broke away with 17 miles to go in the 123-mile stage between Bourg-d'Oisans and Saint-Etienne.

"Today was a good stage for me," Chioccioli said. "With a hill but not a high mountain. Also the hill wasn't that far from the finish. I recovered from the mountains well because I didn't make too much of an effort in l'Alpe d'Huez. I am just discovering the Tour de France and it was my ambition to win a stage. Mission accomplished."

The Italian finished in 4 hours, 43 minutes, 59 seconds, 42 seconds ahead of Russian Dimitri Konyshov and 49 seconds in front of a pack that included Indurain and the other top leaders.

Indurain, a heavy favorite to retain his title following a strong weekend performance in the Alps, held his 1:42 lead over Claudio Chiappucci of Italy, who finished in the same pack.

CINCINNATI — Mike Harkey was nearly unhittable in a nice return from shoulder surgery. But the Reds beat up on Chicago relievers to take a 5-2 victory against the Cubs.

After trailing for six innings, Barry Larkin gave Cincinnati the lead with a sacrifice fly, Cesar Hernandez drove in two insurance runs with his first major league double and Rob Dibble did the rest, striking out all five batters he faced.

"That's the best I've ever seen Dibble pitch," Cubs manager Jim Lefebvre said. "He's at the top of his game."

Dibble earned his 13th save, taking over in the eighth with two runners on base and striking out Andre Dawson and Steve Buechele, who earlier accounted for both Chicago runs.

"We're playing with a purpose," said Reds manager Lou Piniella, whose club won its fourth straight and edged to a 1 1/2-game lead in the NL West over the idle Atlanta Braves.

The late rally by the Reds spoiled a sharp comeback performance by Harkey, who was making his first major league start since shoulder surgery in May 1991.

Harkey threw three-hit ball over five innings before giving up a leadoff triple and a walk in the sixth. Chuck McElroy (3-5) snuffed out that threat, but was charged with both runs in the seventh.

"Harkey is really a shot in the arm for our ballclub," Lefebvre said. "He pitched good enough to win. This kid has come a long way since spring training."

Scott Ruskin (4-1) pitched a scoreless seventh inning in relief of Tom Bolton, who was making his first National League start.

Harkey's last major league start was April 26, 1991, in Cincinnati, when he left the game with shoulder pain and missed the rest of the season following surgery.

Astros 11, Pirates 8

HOUSTON — Rookie Eddie Taubensee hit his first major league home run, doubled, singled, drove in two runs and scored twice, leading Houston.

Ken Caminiti also homered, singled and drove in three runs as the Astros snapped a four-game losing streak. In its previous four games against Atlanta at home, Houston scored only four runs.

Willie Blair (2-4) worked one inning for the victory and Doug Jones pitched 1 1/3 innings for his 20th save.

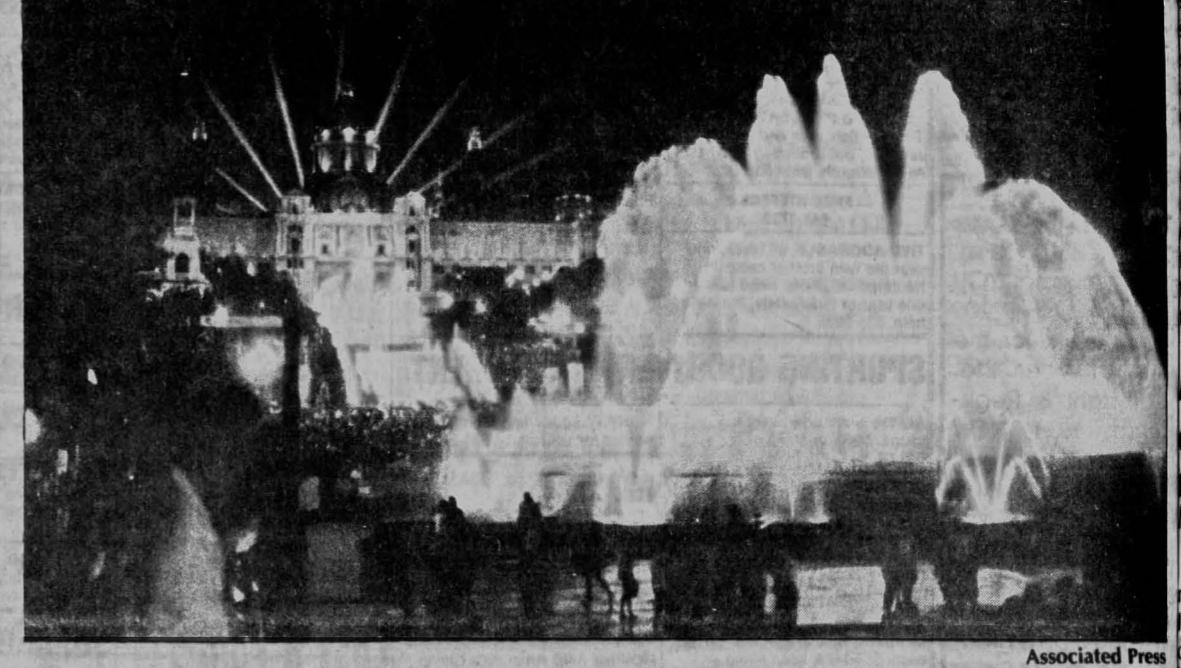

There were six homers in the third game, including three in one inning by Pittsburgh. It was the third time since June 24, 1983, that the three Pirates had homered in the lead-off spot.

Jeff King led off with his seventh homer of the season. Alex Cole then walked, stole second and third and scored on a balk by Shannon Reynolds. After a double by Jay Bell, Andy Van Slyke hit his sixth home run. Barry Bonds followed with his 17th home run.

Indians 5, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Dennis Cook made a strong case for a permanent spot in Cleveland's starting rotation Monday night, pitching the Indians past the Twins.

Moon shines on Oilers; Simms reaches agreement with N.Y.

workout, setting aside a year-old contract dispute in the interest of getting started as the Oilers attempt to improve on last season's second-round playoff appearance.

"If I was just going to play on the team, it would be easy for me to sit home and take care of my own personal stuff," Moon said after arriving around 5 a.m. "But I am a lot more important to the team than this individual stuff."

"I wrestled with it a long time, and it all boils down to what I feel is in the best interest for everyone. I'm still in limbo and I don't like the feeling, but I thought it was important that I get out on the field."

Moon and the Oilers have been at odds over $800,000 the quarterback says the team owes him from a performance clause in his 1990 contract. The team figured Moon's bonus at $1.5 million and paid him that much, but the player and his agent say the total should have been $2.3 million.

Moon, whose $2 million per year contract runs through the 1993 season, said the bonus dispute surfaced throughout last season and affected his performance.

"I experienced it last year and at times I didn't like the way I played during the season. I just don't want to go through that again," he said.

49ers

Joe Montana was given the day off from throwing as part of a regimen designed to prevent him from overworking his twice-repaired passing arm.

Montana, 36, missed all of last season because of a torn right elbow tendon. He had the tendon reattached during an operation last October, then underwent a second procedure in May to remove a buildup of scar tissue.

Team officials said Montana would throw between 40 and 60 times in one of the club's two daily practices, and take every fifth day or so off completely.

Safety Dana Hall, the 49ers' top draft pick, looked rusty in his first workout after signing a 3-year, $2.7 million contract Sunday night. Free agent wideout Mark Seay burned him during one-on-one drills.

Nine veterans remained unsigned, including All-Pro receiver Jerry Rice.

Giants

Camp opened without 11 unsigned veterans, though quarterback Phil Simms reached agreement on a new deal. The other unsigned vets include linebackers Carl Banks, offensive linemen Bart Oates, Eric Moore and Bob Kratch and defensive back Mark Collins.

Broncos

John Elway spent most of Denver's first full workout on the sidelines, giving his strained left hamstring a chance to rest. The quarterback was injured during mandatory 40-yard dashes on Sunday.

Fullback Robert Perryman, given medical clearance to work out on Sunday, was a full participant in the drills. He has undergone lengthy rehabilitation since rupturing the patellar tendon in his left knee last Dec. 15.

Cardinals

Timm Rosenbach, coming back from reconstructive knee surgery that kept him out all last season, wore pads and went full-speed in drills, completing the next-to-last step in his recovery.

All that's left for the fourth-year quarterback is actual contact, but that won't come until the Cardinals' first exhibition game on Aug. 8 against San Diego. Coach Joe Bugel has said Rosenbach will play early in the preseason, but he's off-limits during workouts and scrimmages.

Bengals

Ron Lynn, the man charged with rebuilding Cincinnati's 28th-ranked defense, took his first step toward that end in May. Now comes the hard part.

"Before you can do anything, you have to have some self-confidence," Lynn said. "I addressed the team's attitude in a May mini-camp. If all that happens, if we're belittled, then you have very little opportunity for that."

Lynn, who presided over a 1986 Diego Chargers defense that went from last in the league in 1986 to fifth in 1990, will have more to work on than attitudes with the Bengals.

Browns

Rookie defensive lineman Bill Johnson, relieved after signing a two-year contract and eager to prove his knee shouldn't be a cause for concern, worked out with Cleveland for the first time Monday.

"Right now my knee is pain-free, no matter what I do," the 6-foot-300-pounder said. "I'm not saying it's 100 percent ... I plan on participating in everything unless they tell me otherwise."

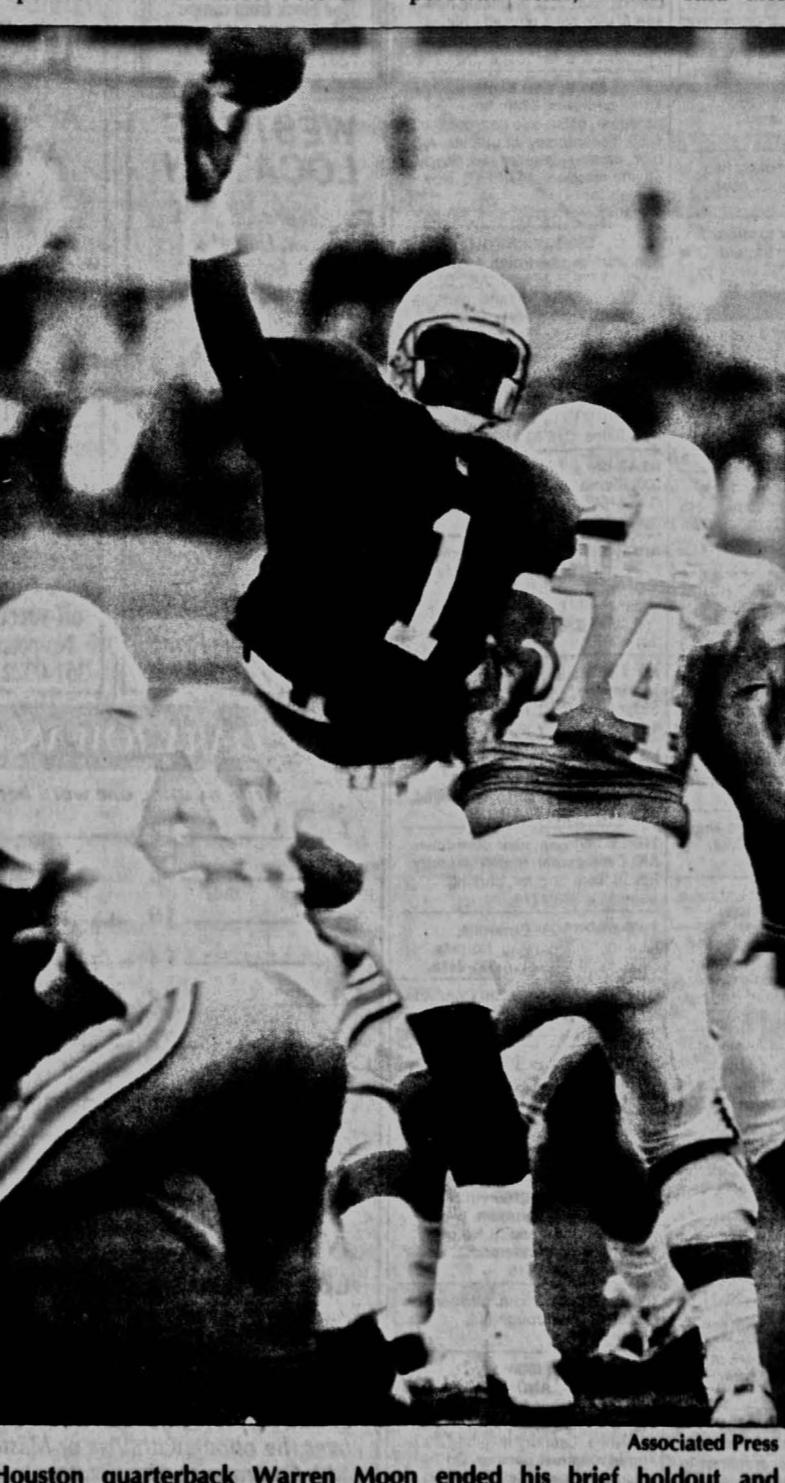

Falcons

Andre Rison might have been bluffing when he threatened to quit football in favor of the NBA over the weekend, but the All-Pro wide receiver was serious about his objection to playing second fiddle to two-sport star Deion Sanders.

"They offer Deion a million-dollar bonus just to come in. How do you think that makes me feel?" Rison said, referring to the Falcons' $1 million offer to Sanders designed to get him into training camp on time.

Cowboys

Rookie wide receiver Jimmy Smith will miss at least three weeks because of the broken right fibula he sustained during Dallas' Blue-White scrimmage on Sunday, team doctors said.

Associated Press

Houston quarterback Warren Moon ended his brief holdout and worked out at the Oilers' camp in San Antonio, Tex., Monday.
