Upset 23-year-old runs for mayor and wins

Cory Sandlin
Associated Press

WHEATLAND, Iowa — Up until this year, there was no mayor in town.

That changed when the police in this eastern Iowan town wouldn't let Cory Sandlin talk to them.

"I was upset about something," Sandlin said, "and I thought, 'Maybe I'll just find out what's going on.'"

So he did.

Sandlin, 23, is a recent graduate of the University of Iowa, where he studied political science.

And that's where the story really begins.

When Sandlin was a 17-year-old junior in high school, he said he "just happened to find out" that the town's police force was being paid a lat...

The survey was based on an annual statistical review of a representative sampling firm. The survey was conducted for the Racing and Gaming Commission, and the results for Iowa were shared with the state's gambling regulatory body.

"Further dramatic growth in Iowa's gambling market is ahead," he said.

"The future of Iowa's gambling industry, which grew during the 1990s, will likely see a downturn as the amount of money gambled in 1995 increased. However, the question remains: Will the market continue to grow?"

"If we can find a way to make Iowa's gambling market even more attractive, more people will come and enjoy it," he said.

Croats, Muslims formalize pact

John Daniszewski

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration Tuesday pressed both sides in the Bosnian conflict, including the Muslim majority, to accept the new peace agreement signed Monday in Sarajevo.

The United States is concerned about the pact negotiated by former U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, which has been condemned by Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

But the negotiations could bring a breakthrough to what President Bush once called the "slashing, unspeakably appallingly evil conflict." Baker held talks over several days in Jerusalem with Israeli leaders and in Belgrade with Serbia President Milosevic.

The talks did not produce a cease-fire, but Baker said the peace talks have "real potential." The United States is considering ways to help.

Baker flew to Sarajevo late Monday to meet with Bosnian officials and is expected to be in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, today.

Bosnian Muslims and Serbs, the two biggest ethnic groups in this war-torn country, finally agreed on a joint government Tuesday.

The accord calls for a seven-member government with equal representation from the Muslim and Serbian communities.

"We hope this will be a new beginning," said Muslim representative Chahid Namazov. "This agreement opens the road for the salvation of the nation of Bosnia-Herzegovina."

But the agreement may not end the war that has claimed the lives of 20,000 people and left another 200,000 homeless.

Bosnians are now just at the beginning of a long, necessary process to work out details of the agreement.

Baker was in Bosnia to try to help the Serbs end the war. "Each side must recognize the other's existence," he said.

At one point, Baker said, "I'm getting a sense of relief."

The U.S. administration on Tuesday invited the Bush administration to visit the region to help the peace process.

Calling for a "new era of peace," President Bush said he will send envoys to the region to try to help in the negotiations.

Serbs, Bosnians and others in the region have pressed for U.S. involvement in the region, which was once the crown jewel of the former Yugoslavia.

Baker said the Serbs and Muslims are "ready to work together, at least," and are "starting from a common foundation" for the first time.

The international community in Sarajevo is "optimistic" about the new agreement, said an official.

"The spirit is there," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

President Danilo Terrziska of the Balkan country of Macedonia said the agreement has "opened a new chapter in the Bosnian conflict".

Baker said the agreement is a "step forward," but others said it is only the "first step in a long, arduous process."

continued to read that "we learn to live with it," Mubarak said, outlining plans to "fight the war" and describing the military as "ready to fight." Mubarak said, "Egypt is in a war situation. There is no question of retreat and we will protect our land and our people."

The remarks by Mubarak and Raful indicated growing tensions over the border conflict.

The United Nations Security Council called for an end to the conflict and urged both sides to return to the negotiating table. The U.N. said that it was prepared to dispatch a peacekeeping force if necessary.

Despite the tension, the two leaders met in Cairo on Monday to discuss the situation.

Peebles longest jump gone with the wind

PIRRO, Italy -- Mike Powell and Holte Drechsler took advantage of a strong wind and altitude to make long jumps in track and field history.

"We will not go to the record books, though, because the wind exceeded the limit for world-record recognition," Powell said.

In a field with a strong tail wind, Powell soared 8.6 meters, 6 inches over Tuesday's jump of 8.58 meters to set the world record. Powell's jump of 8.58 meters, 6 inches would have been a world record with the wind at 0 meters per second. The limit for wind is 2 meters per second.

Drechsler jumped 8.45 meters, matching the world mark of 8.45 meters set by Pako del Moral in a 30-meter wind in 1981.

Drechsler's second jump of 8.33 meters, 6 inches was also a world record.

Paul Buck, Associated Press

"I am not going to claim the Powell record, but I want it to go in the field of desire," said Powell, who won the Olympic trials in 1992 for a place on the U.S. Olympic team but later was injured.

"I was thinking about all the people who are watching me in the Windy City," Powell said. "I was just happy to be here and be able to do that for them."

Powell, who set the world record in 1991, said he was happy to have done it in 1993.

"I have had my ups and downs," Powell said. "I have been to the Olympics, but I have been to the Olympics without my performance."
