3 Iowa Citizens sue UIHC physicians

Six UI Hospitals and Clinics doctors are among the defendants in a lawsuit filed last week by three Iowa City residents who claim that a series of electrical shock therapy treatments used on one of the plaintiffs has caused permanent brain damage.

According to court documents filed by attorneys of the plaintiffs, Imogene Loretta Rohovit was hospitalized in August of 1987 because of depression and was given a series of six treatments of electroconvulsive therapy over the course of two weeks and was released.

Rohovit was later given a series of seven more ECT treatments in December 1988 and January 1989, according to the complaint.

Defendants in the case include Dr. Edward Sathoff, Dr. Keith Rogers, Dr. Bruce Pfohl, Dr. D. W. Black, Dr. Mark Fulton and Dr. J. Liesveld, all of UIHC; the Mecta Corporation, which is the manufacturer of the electrical shock-therapy machine used, and the state of Iowa.

Cedar Rapids teen fatally stabbed

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — A 17-year-old girl was stabbed to death early Wednesday, police said.

The body of Destiny Dawn Wright was found about 3:45 a.m. in a stairwell leading up to her apartment on the city's southeast side, Cedar Rapids police said. She had been stabbed several times.

The teen-ager had a baby, but police said the infant was at a baby sitter's when she was killed.

Bolivian Senate votes to expel U.S. troops

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivia's Senate voted Wednesday to expel American troops participating in anti-drug efforts in a coca-growing region.

Since June, 150 soldiers from Fort Bragg, N.C. have been helping civilians by building schools, dormitories and sanitation facilities in the rural town of Santa Ana, 340 miles northeast of La Paz.

Lawmakers say the projects were not approved by Congress, and leftists say the soldiers are the advance guard of a permanent U.S. military presence.

U.N. team retreats after civilian assaults

The weapons inspectors have been pelted with vegetables and even attacked with a skewer. Iraqi police have done nothing to prevent the assaults.

Walter Putnam
Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — U.N. weapons experts retreated from a 17-day watch outside an Iraqi government building on Wednesday after Iraqi police stood by while an assailant tried to stab an inspector, a U.N. official said.

The pullback from the Agriculture Ministry, suspected of housing materials for Iraq's weapons programs, was sure to raise tensions between Iraq and the U.N. Security Council. It also increased the prospects for a limited allied air strike in the latest impasse over U.N. monitoring of Iraq since the gulf war.

President Bush's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, accused Iraq of not abiding by U.N. resolutions ending the war.

"It is stonewalling U.N. inspectors who are trying to identify and destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction," Fitzwater said.

"We are not ruling out any option, including the use of military force," he said.

President Saddam Hussein's government has denied military documents are inside the ministry. It says that the building is a civilian agency not covered by the U.N. resolutions and that the attempt to search it was an insult to Iraq's sovereignty.

But Rolf Ekeus, head of the U.N. inspection program, said the U.N. experts believe the building contains documents and possibly equipment related to prohibited ballistic, chemical, biological and nuclear weapons programs.

At a news conference in New York, Ekeus said the team ended its round-the-clock vigil outside "the alleged Ministry of Agriculture" because of "the threat of violence and totally inadequate Iraqi government security."

Ekeus said an Iraqi tried to kill a U.N. inspector with a skewer outside the ministry about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday.

He said Iraqi police allowed the man to approach the inspector's vehicle and did nothing during the attack. Police intervened only after the inspector defended himself successfully and Iraqi officers then let the attacker "walk freely away," he said.

Chanting Iraqis had pelted the inspectors' cars with stones.

Two weeks ago an airplane flew over Medellin and dropped leaflets claiming that Escobar was ordering the murder of cartel rivals.

When the army entered the prison Tuesday night, Escobar and other prisoners grabbed guns from guards and took hostages, said one of the freed hostages, assistant justice minister Eduardo Mendoza.

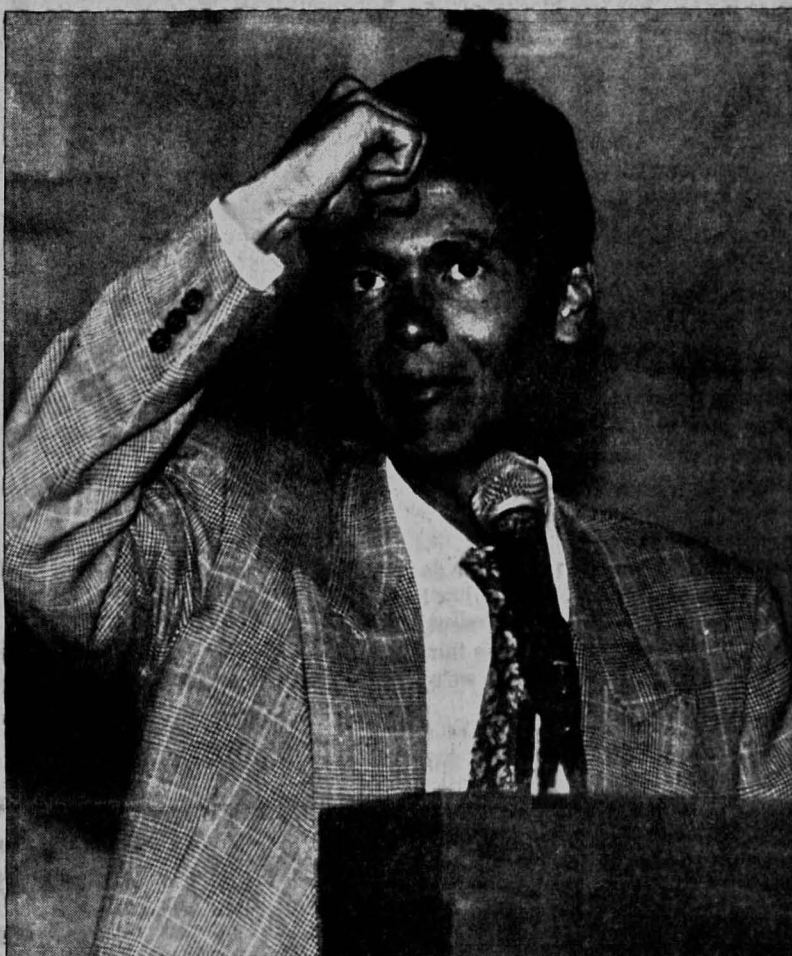

Mendoza, trembling and with his clothes dirty and tattered, appeared at a news conference at the prison.

Drug cartel leader Escobar escapes

Assistant Justice Minister Eduardo Mendoza talks to reporters Wednesday in Bogota, Colombia, after his release as a hostage in Pablo Escobar's escape from prison.

BOGOTA, Colombia — Medellin drug cartel leader Pablo Escobar and his lieutenants overpowered guards seeking to transfer him to a military jail and escaped Wednesday after a gun battle that left two dead, officials said.

The escape of Escobar, one of the world's richest and most notorious businessmen with hundreds of murders to his name, was a major blow to the government, which has been unable to counter the strength of the cocaine cartels.

It was in response to reports that Escobar was operating his drug business from his luxurious ranch house prison that 400 soldiers entered the jail Tuesday night to transfer Escobar and his 14 lieutenants to a military prison.

But the cartel leader instead seized three Colombian officials who were accompanying the troops.

Army commandos freed the hostages at dawn Wednesday, but in the meantime Escobar fled with nine other cartel members, said Sen. Claudia Blum, who attributed the information to President Cesar Gaviria.

Five other Escobar associates were recaptured, she quoted Gaviria as saying.

"The jail . . . is now under absolute control of the army, but Escobar cannot be found," Senate President Joe Blackburn said Wednesday afternoon. "Although the president told me that the government is certain that he has not escaped, it is clear that from right now no one knows where he is."

At 10:40 a.m., Escobar phoned reporters, saying he was in a prison tunnel and would fight to the death. That call appears to have been a bluff.

When the army regained control over the prison 200 miles northwest of the capital, the tunnel was empty, Blackburn said, and Escobar was gone.

Escobar and his lieutenants surrendered last year on condition that they be held at the ranch and not extradited to the United States, which charges that Escobar masterminded the big cocaine enterprises of the 1980s.

President Gaviria ordered the army to move Escobar to a military prison this week amid reports Escobar, who reportedly bribed his guards, had brought several rivals to the jail to be "tried" and later

Agencies receive few complaints but insist housing prejudice exists

Billy Hawkins, a graduate student in physical education and sports studies and manager of the UI Afro-American Cultural Center, has had a tough time finding housing this year. When he arrived in person to look at an apartment in Coralville, the landlord refused to show Hawkins the rooms and told him they had just been rented.

"She opened the door a crack and gave me a stare. I'm from the South and am familiar with that look," Hawkins said.

Hawkins, who had a friend call the same landlord to verify the fact that the apartment was still vacant, filed a complaint with the Iowa City Human Rights Commission and the Tenant / Landlord Association.

He was unable to take legal action, however. According to the Federal Fair Housing Law, an owner or landlord who lives in a residence has the right to choose who lives there.

"When I found out that the Human Rights Commission had no jurisdiction, the only thing I had left to do was voice my opinion," Hawkins said. He wrote an open letter to Iowa City and Coralville landlords which appeared on The Daily Iowan's editorial page.

"It would be a great service to the minority community in this area — especially to future black renters — if you would place 'preferably white' at the end of your advertisement," Hawkins wrote. "It would save us the time and energy we waste looking for an apartment . . . and then going to the place and being turned down because we are black."

As the apartment-hunting season begins, UI minority students like Hawkins are once again testing the tolerance of Iowa City and Coralville landlords. Unlike Hawkins, however, most minority students who experience housing discrimination will not write a letter or file a complaint.

Judy Guerrier, director of the Iowa City Tenant / Landlord Association, estimates that less than 2 percent of all calls she receives are reports of racial discrimination.

"We know it's out there. We hear about it through word of mouth all the time. But people who've experienced that kind of discrimination would rather not report it. They just find someplace else to live," Guerrier said.

Alice Harris, Iowa City's civil rights coordinator and a representative of the Iowa City Human Rights Commission, tells a similar story. Her office does not receive many complaints either.

"We are sure that it is going on, but there is a wide range of Syrian President Hafez Assad, right, gestures during a meeting with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker in Qadaha, Syria, Wednesday.

Baker, Assad to discuss West Bank settlements

DAMASCUS, Syria — Secretary of State James Baker on Wednesday traveled to a remote Syrian village to meet with President Hafez Assad in his quest for Mideast peace.

Assad had postponed a planned meeting with Baker on Tuesday to attend the funeral of his mother. Wednesday's meeting was scheduled at the village of Qadaha, 18 miles southeast of the northern port city of Latakia.

Baker began his latest Mideast tour in Israel, where he said new Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin assured him of a "severe and substantial" cutback of Jewish settlement construction in the occupied territories.

That won positive responses in Jordan and Egypt, Baker's next two stops, but could face a tougher appraisal from Assad, whose government has resisted softening of its hardline stance toward Israel.

Syria has refused to end its state of hostilities with the Jewish state before Israel returns the Golan Heights captured in the 1967 Israel-Arab War.

Baker, meanwhile, disputed reports that this diplomatic swing may be his last before he leaves the State Department to take over Bush's faltering re-election campaign.

"You see me actively involved here now in the peace process," Baker said during a joint news conference in Cairo, Egypt, with Egypt's Hosni Mubarak. He said he believes he will continue that effort "in the days and weeks ahead."

"There has been no decision made with respect" to his leaving office, he said, adding that until word comes from him or President Bush, "I wouldn't make book on it . . . and I wouldn't bank on it."

Baker's schedule calls for him to visit Saudi Arabia on Thursday before departing for a meeting with foreign ministers of the Association

Cruising: 1 night in the life of IC's finest

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

Editor's note: DI reporter Tad Paulson, along with photographer Andy Scott, spent last Tuesday evening riding in a squad car with an Iowa City police officer. The following is an account of the experience.

With the flick of a switch, Iowa City police officer Bill Campbell can change a person's life. It can be a living nightmare for a driver to see those red rollers turning over in the rear-view mirror and to hear that siren whoop and screech.

Several vivid images come to mind instantaneously — like a judge's stern face, the sound of a jail door slamming shut, or the gradual evaporation of a bank account through payment of fines.

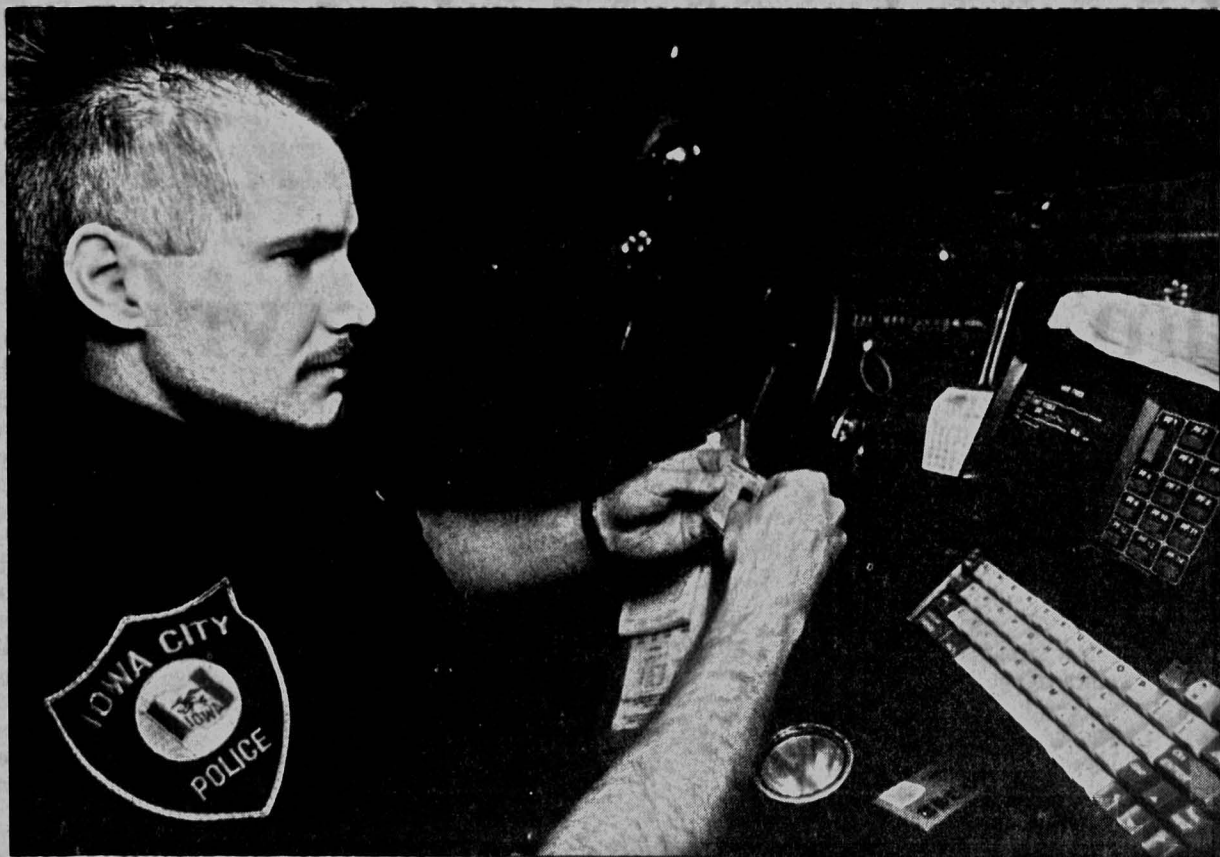

However, these consequences are beside the point in Campbell's occupation. His responsibility lies in the physical enforcement of the law. He makes the first contact with suspected offenders, investigates and questions them, makes arrests and serves papers.

He also wears a bullet-proof vest every night, and carries a gun at all times while working.

A two-year veteran of the Iowa City Police Department, Campbell works the second patrol shift, which runs from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m., and covers one of four designated city areas. When not responding to specific service calls, Campbell is a "free-lancer" — a rover who searches the streets for anything that could be a "mess."

On this particular night, Campbell's beat is "downtown area 1." This route encompasses a 15- to 20-block area downtown, including the Pedestrian Mall and commercial downtown businesses.

He's looking for transients, who could be sleeping, drinking or threatening passersby. In addition, he's on the lookout for early evening fights not associated with bar traffic, and general disturbances of any kind. Later, he'll check on closed business buildings and watch rear and alley entrances for any strange activities.

Iowa City Police Officer Bill Campbell checks the in-car computer for details of the driving record of a woman he pulled over for a traffic violation Tuesday night.

The interior of Campbell's patrol car seems to the casual observer a contemporary version of the Batmobile. A computer terminal hangs between the driver and passenger seats, through which he can acquire a person's address, vital statistics, driving record (including driver's education) and driving eligibility — all by just punching in a name and driver's license number. He also receives service dispatches and messages from other officers on the small screen.

On the dashboard sits the infamous radar. While driving and talking, Campbell leans forward several times and clocks the driving speeds of cars approaching him. Campbell believes that "people do a self-check when they see a police car" to see if they have their seat belt on or happen to be speeding.

An evil-looking shotgun sits in a locked carriage behind Campbell's head.

In contrast to the comfortable front seats, the back seat is a hard plastic bench with locked doors and little knee room. Unlucky passengers, most of whom will be handcuffed, have little to hold on to, and no place to stash away any incriminating substances or weapons.

According to Campbell, police officers have no set quota of arrests to make during an average night, and he has had nights when he hasn't had to pull anyone over.

During a two-hour period this evening, he will pull over two vehicles, check out two areas where transients reportedly sleep and camp, and help a lost-looking female driver whose car hood has gray smoke billowing out from under it.

"Every traffic stop is an investigation," Campbell says. "We make many contacts, and many traffic stops may be more than what appears on the surface."

"You can never predict what's going to happen," Campbell adds.

Campbell's first traffic stop involves an elderly woman who can barely see over the steering wheel. In mid-sentence, Campbell pulls his car into a quick, wide U-turn and bears down quickly on the driver, who doesn't notice his presence for another two blocks.

Later, he will do the same U-turn on Dubuque Street, after clocking a white sports car at 37 mph in a 25 mph speed zone. In this instance, he accelerates like Steve McQueen and is immediately noticed by the younger female driver.

In both cases, only warnings are issued.

As he drives down the alley that intersects the Pedestrian Mall, Campbell's eyes do a double-take at every person. He meanders for a moment, staring at a group of teen-agers playing hackey-sack in front of Burger King.

"We're not always popular," Campbell says, "just by the nature of the job and what we're doing."

"But the majority of the people do not resent me or hate me for what I do," Campbell adds. "We seek solutions to problems that are fair, and I think people sense we're doing the best job we can."

Fountain invites toe dips, hog's head disposal

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

Some call it the downtown fountain and some remember it as the Governor Lucas Square fountain. Many call it by its adopted name, "Three Women Peeing."

Lately everyone has just been calling it "out of order."

The unique three-pipe copper fountain that is the centerpiece of Iowa City's Pedestrian Mall stands dry, partitions surrounding it. No water flows, and kids opt to play on the nearby gym equipment instead.

Sheri Thomas, the central business district supervisor with Iowa City Parks and Recreation, said the fountain is not running because some of the brick needed repair and the water had to be shut off to allow the mortar to dry. She said everyone can rest assured the fountain will start flowing again late this week.

In its 13-year history the fountain has earned a reputation for being a focal point of downtown revelry and mischief.

On Sept. 22, 1979, more than 1,000 Iowa Citizens and others turned out to celebrate the completion of the downtown Pedestrian Mall area at festivities replete with jazz music, clowns and a dedication speech by Des Moines Register columnist Donald Kaul.

Since then thousands of other Iowa City residents, UI students and visitors have stopped to ponder the three-tiered structure and perhaps dip a toe or two in one of its shallow pools.

Thomas said the fountain's water is provided by four pumps under its base. Screens within the pumps serve to clean the water on a daily basis and the fountain is shut off and thoroughly cleaned every three to four weeks.

However, emergency cleanups are sometimes necessary, Thomas added.

"We're surprised all the time by what we find in there," she said. Items found abandoned in the fountain have included toilets and a hog's head.

Thomas said the water is also treated with "foam out" to ward off sudsy overflows from detergent poured into the fountain by curious onlookers.

The fountain's maintenance used to be quite expensive when its machinery was electronic and the wiring would corrode easily, Thomas said, but now the equipment is the easier-to-maintain manual variety.

From time to time even the City Council focuses its attention on the fountain and its uses.

In the summer of 1985 the Iowa City City Council addressed questions of the structure's safety and water flow with the help of its designer, architect Brian Gutheinz. Barriers to prevent people from playing in the fountain were considered, along with fines for violators.

Thomas said the idea was abandoned because it would have been even more dangerous to have people playing on the barriers. "Slippery When Wet" signs were attached to the sides of the fountain as a compromise to decrease the city's liability in cases of injury.

The water is turned on in mid-May and continues to flow until it becomes so cold that the pumps might freeze, usually in mid-October, Thomas said.

Part of the fountain's appeal is the number of people it attracts.

"I think the fountain is great," UI senior Jason Letcher said. "I love going downtown and seeing little kids playing in the fountain, and

The fountain was added to the downtown area as part of an over $2 million urban renewal project that created the Pedestrian Mall in 1979. Unlike the rest of the construction, which was eligible for bond funding, the fountain's $80,000 price was paid by pledges collected from private sources by the volunteer group Project Green.

Record alterations surface at UI

Anne Johnston
The Daily Iowan

A recent memo from the UI Payroll Office alerts supervisors of student employees at the UI to be on guard for falsified and altered time records.

The memo, dated July 7, was authored by Payroll Office manager Joe Joynt and was originally released by him to UI deans, directors and department heads.

Last week it was sent out by the UI Office of Student Financial Aid to 1,460 supervisors who oversee the more than 12,000 student employees on campus. That figure includes part-time and college work-study employees such as those with University Libraries, the Union, Campus, and the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Joynt said the memo was prompted by a few recent incidents, which resulted in losses varying from several hundred to over a thousand dollars.

However, he said that falsification and alteration of time records has not been an ongoing problem at the UI.

"It just seemed to all crop up at the end of the spring semester this year," he said.

Cynthia Seyfer, an assistant director of the UI Office of Student Financial Aid, agreed that the problem is not widespread on campus.

"I don't think that it's a major problem out there, but I do think that it's something we want to have resolved," Seyfer said.

In order to prevent further incidents, the memo from Joynt advises employers against signing employee time records before they are filled in. It also suggests that supervisors deliver their employees' time records to the Payroll Office, rather than permitting employees to do so on an individual basis.

"It was just to make people aware that they need to have procedures in place to control the records so that the opportunity isn't there to make alterations," Joynt said of the memo.

Seyfer said that, overall, the student employment program is an "excellent" program and that releasing the memo was primarily a "proactive" measure.

"If there are some simple things that can be done to rectify the system so that it's a safer system, then we want to do that," she said.

The memo requested that supervisors contact the Payroll Office if falsified information is discovered so that it may then notify UI administrators and the proper authorities if necessary.

Harvard law professor loses post after leave of absence

Harvard law Professor Derrick Bell, the school's first tenured black professor, was denied his request to extend his two-year leave of absence.

The school's dean, Robert Clark, told Bell his failure to return would be considered a resignation. In a statement, Clark said he was saddened to learn of Bell's decision.

Bell began an unpaid leave of absence to protest the school's failure to hire a tenured "woman of color." He is a visiting professor at New York University's law school, and can appeal the school's decision to Harvard's governing board.

Tombstones found during renovations at Pittsburgh frat house

As bulldozers were carving out a hillside located behind the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity house at the University of Pittsburgh, Pa., during the preparation for the construction of a new back patio, a tombstone was discovered, according to fraternity members.

The tombstone of an infant girl, who died in 1904, was taken by construction workers from the fraternity's chapter room without notice, according to SAE member Matt Major.

Construction workers would not comment on the whereabouts of the tombstone.

Chris Lucchese of SAE said he thought more than one tombstone was discovered. He said a worker told him four more were discovered at the residence hall located next door and that they were taken away soon after being dug up.

At the end of this month, the fate of Iowa State's VEISHEA festival, will be decided by the VEISHEA Task Force.

During a meeting last week, the committee received input from the student affairs office and ISU Government of the Student Body, protesting the committee's suggestion to place a one-year moratorium on the celebration.

GSB president Eric Hamilton gave other recommendations to the task force as alternatives to canceling VEISHEA for a year, including greater administrative involvement, more events geared toward minors and more involvement of student groups.

Ground broken for new center at Nebraska-Lincoln

A ground-breaking ceremony was held recently for the new George W. Beadle Center for Genetics and Biomaterials Research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The center was lauded by university officials and local politicians, for the possibilities it holds in the areas of both basic and applied research. The project, which will stand three stories high and span 130,000 square feet when completed, resulted from former Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr's Nebraska Research Initiative. It will house the Center for Biotechnology.

CROP SCIENCE CONGRESS

Scientists discuss world food demand

Steven P. Rosenfeld
Associated Press

AMES — Researchers from 85 countries ended the First International Crop Science Congress on Wednesday, saying their work has just begun in finding ways to meet an expected doubling in world food demand.

They were challenged to solve that problem without further harm to the environment and without widening the rift between the world's rich and poor.

"We hope you have developed an appreciation of the immensity of the task you face in the next 10 to 30 years," the congress president, agronomy Professor Kenneth Frey of host Iowa State University, told colleagues.

"Our work and accomplishments as crop scientists is done against a backdrop of an almost overwhelming population bomb," he said. "You have the power and the duty to do the science and research and to develop the technology to make the green plant more efficient and productive in converting the natural resources — water, carbon dioxide, mineral nutrients and radiant energy — into food."

As some 1,100 food scientists prepared to return to their studies, plans were under way for a second conference in January 1996 at New Delhi, India.

"The decision to take the next congress to a developing country is indeed the right start," said R.S. Paroda of the Indian Council of Agricultural Research.

He said India and Southeast Asia account for almost half the world's population. The concern over increased food production and the conservation of natural resources will be more relevant when the meeting is held there, he said.

He sounded a common theme of the congress, which pressed for international cooperation in fighting world hunger.

"In our pursuit to produce more food for humanity, we recognize no boundaries, be they geographical or political," Paroda said.

He is one of 16 members of a continuing committee organized to try to maintain the momentum built in the first meeting and to press for adopting of its recommendations.

"In the past, the scientific community has been reluctant to speak out on social and political concerns," said C. Jerry Nelson, a University of Missouri agronomy professor who is chairman of the continuing committee.

The inaugural crop congress was designed to raise questions and set an agenda for attacking common problems. It also was a source of introspection.

"A disinterested observer of our debates during the past week could not be blamed for asking if the specialists who have given us modern agriculture, with its full slate of environmental and social ills, are the very same people we depend upon to cure the problems that are largely of their own creation," Ricardo Salvador of ISU told the closing session. He was reporting on one of six working groups, and he presented recommendations on linking environmental and social concerns with research into increasing food production.

Among the groups' recommendations of the crop congress were:

- Focusing research on improving crop production to meet the anticipated needs of a growing world population without causing further damage to the environment with farm chemicals.

AMTRAK

Study shows route has potential

Associated Press

DES MOINES — A new north-south Amtrak train through Iowa could operate on a break-even basis financially and would improve travel connections for the national passenger rail system, a study says.

The report by Amtrak planners, which was recently sent to Congress, evaluated a 486-mile Minneapolis to Kansas City route that would include a stop in Des Moines. The train would run on the Chicago & Northwestern Railway's north-south main line through Iowa.

Other Iowa stops would be in Northwood, Mason City, Iowa Falls, Nevada and Chariton.

However, Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black said Tuesday that no money is available to finance the route and Iowans should not expect to see passenger coaches along the tracks anytime soon.

"This is one of 13 routes we studied in the United States that show potential," Black said. "But we don't anticipate starting up any of them. They all cost money that we don't have. Congress asked us to look at this and we did."

Iowa supporters of Amtrak trains were upbeat about the study and are hopeful that north-south passenger service could eventually be started between Minneapolis and Kansas City through Des Moines.

"This report certainly raises some intriguing possibilities," said Scott Rogers of Cedar Falls, president of the Iowa Association of Railroad Passengers. "It appears to show that this is one of the best potential routes in the country."

Rookie divas Kate, Jane, Judy and Jill try UI opera

Kim McKelvey
The Daily Iowan

Opera is a complex art compiling talents and expertise from a wide variety of areas. Some of the parts needed to produce the whole are far removed from the limelight and rarely brought to the attention of the viewing audience.

For example, few people realize the trials and tribulations suffered in order to put four mules and a donkey on stage for this summer's production of "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Country Chivalry) and "Pagliacci" (Clowns). In the case of the mules, it is not even necessary. Normally in "Cavalleria Rusticana," the team of mules are never seen by the audience. The person in charge of the four mules, Alfio, seemingly parks his animals off stage and then walks on with only a bullwhip to sing his aria about travel. It has been performed this way for 102 years, but the UI is breaking the mold this summer with a world premiere: the four mules will pull the cart (with Alfio driving) onto the stage and stay for the entire first verse.

In order for this staging to work, impeccably behaved mules are required. Fortunately, the opera management has its own "animal liaison," Tina Bourjaily, who has given advice on horses and even a pig in the past. She recommended the award-winning team of mules, Kate, Jane, Jill and Judy, as well as Tony the donkey to fill the roles. Once this stellar team was cast in the opera, they began rehearsing with trainer Chuck Irvine. These sessions consisted of listening to a fuzzy tape of the orchestra and chorus of the operas at a painfully high volume to familiarize the animals with the loud sounds of opera. After weeks of musical exposure, these equines are the newest breed of "opera snobs."

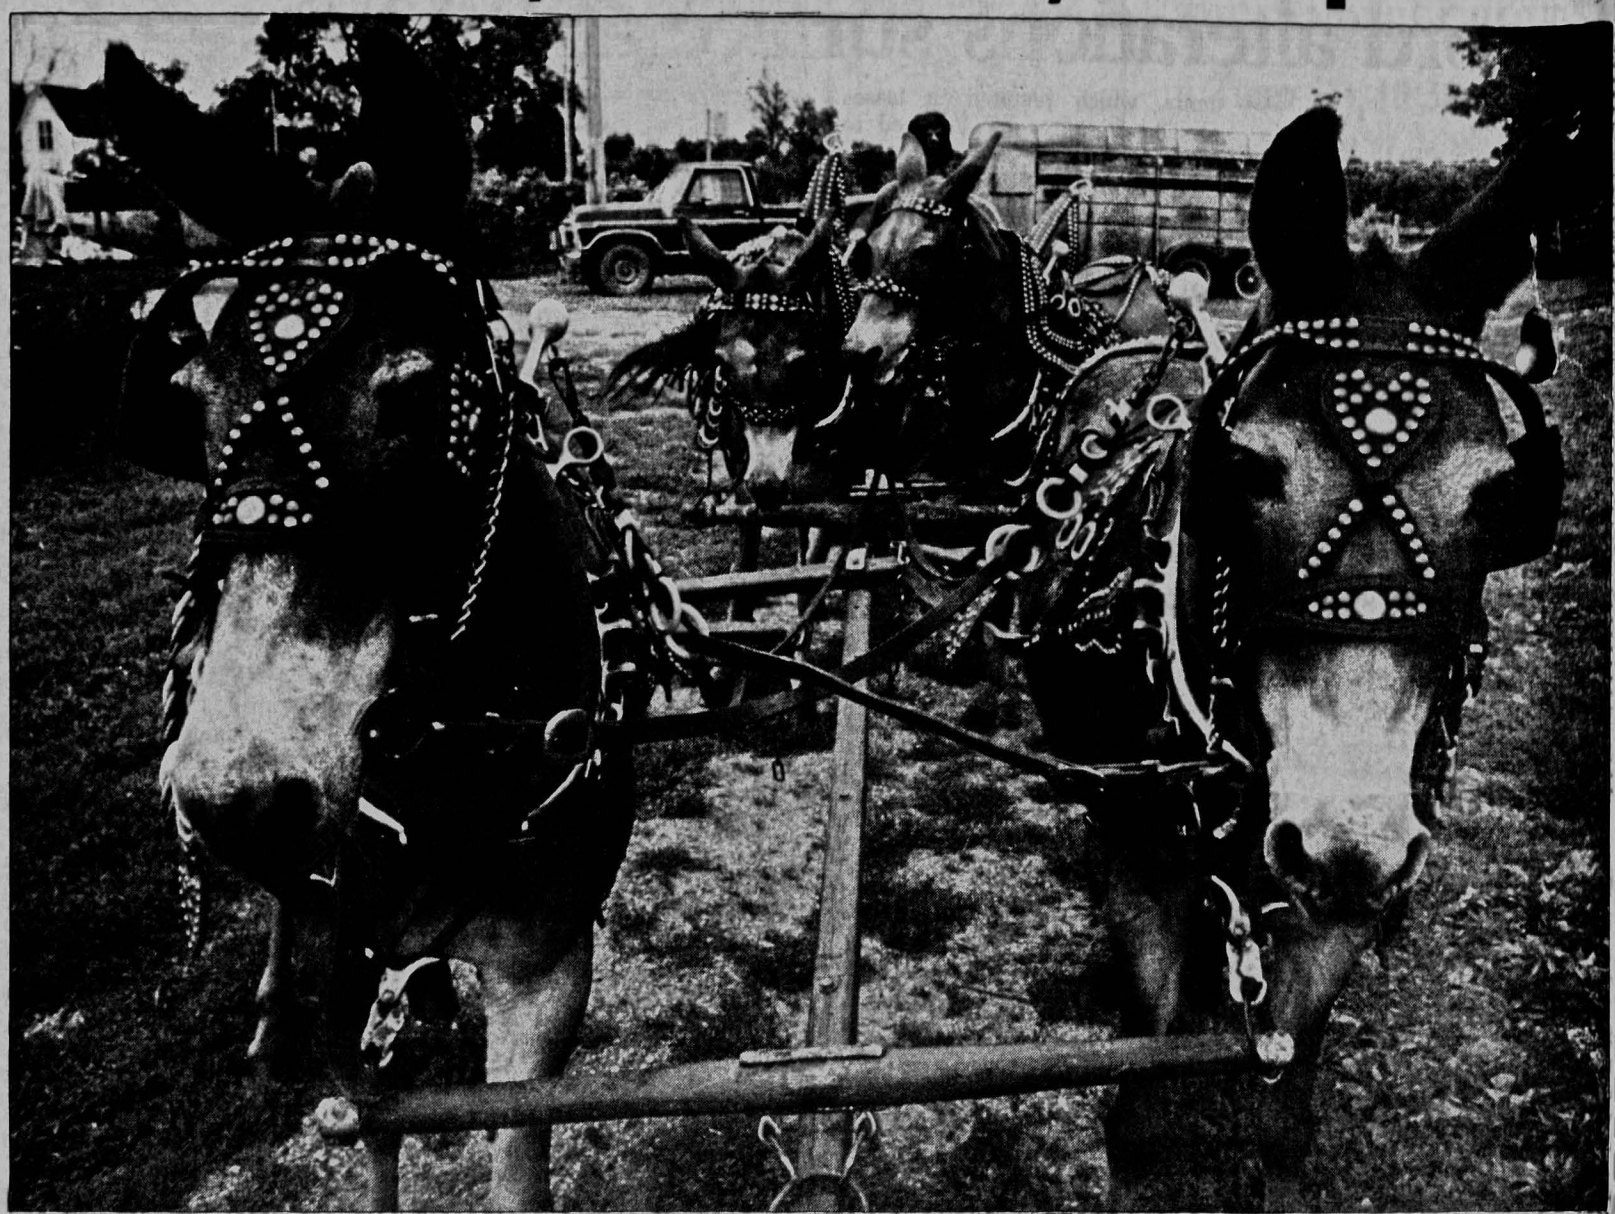

Next the mules became acquainted with Brian Burkhardt and Jeffrey

Fields, the two men playing Alfio on July 30 and Aug. 1, respectively. The introductions were made at Bourjaily's farm on a drizzly Monday morning; the mules pranced about in their finery as the tunes of "Cavalleria Rusticana" wafted through the morning mist. Both actors and director Beaumont Glass enjoyed a spin in the cart and the mules seemed perfectly well-behaved and ideal for their roles.

But a dark cloud loomed over the production in the form of a whip crack. During the number sung in which the mules are on stage, Alfio must crack a whip numerous times. The first whip crack attempted in Bourjaily's yard would have sent the cart and driver straight into the orchestra pit had they been at Hancher. Successive cracks resulted in the same panicked reactions. What could be done to prevent this problem in performance?

Why, tampons of course. Leave it to Veterinarian Katrin Kolder to find this highly technical solution; it seems that a couple of tampons stuffed down the animals' ears takes the edge off the whip cracks. Mind you, the mules did not enjoy the application of these toiletries, and there followed a lengthy discussion on the most comfortable and effective size of tampon for the sensitive ear (slender regular eventually won out).

The mules now practice listening to the tape with tampons in their ears while their owners shoot off fire crackers. Yet even with all this preparation, it could be an exciting evening at Hancher if the mules get scared. Not only might their actions be difficult to control but also their digestive systems. Dr. Kolder will be monitoring the mules' meals for the next few weeks to minimize the possibilities of an on-stage calamity. Needless to say, mule favorites like prunes and All-Bran will be excluded for the time being.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

The UI productions of the operas "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" will have in their cast a sole donkey and the four mules

Other problems involve caring for the stage floor. The carts which the mules and the donkey pull must use modern, rubber wheels to avoid damaging the Hancher stage. These look conspicuous on a 19th-century cart and the artists in the shop have designed some authentic 1800's hubcaps to cover the wheels. Equal harm may be done by the animals' hoofs. This problem was also solved in a creative manner: they will wear doggy galoshes.

After all this work, the mules will be on the stage for approximately two minutes. The donkey has a greater opportunity to develop his character during his 15 minute debut, but it hardly seems worth it to spend so much time on one small aspect of the whole opera. However, the sight of a mule team at Hancher should be spectacular enough to justify the firecrackers, and the diet — although it's doubtful the mules will ever feel that the fame was worth the humiliation.

Eddie Murphy's attempt at big cinematic apology fails

Kristen Carr
The Daily Iowan

"Boomerang" supposedly is Eddie Murphy's mea culpa for the misogyny of "Harlem Nights." Can there be a world in which Eddie Murphy is non-sexist and funny? Dare to dream.

With "Boomerang," Murphy is meekly shuffling down a road paved with good intentions. Before the first half hour, Murphy, as ad man Marcus Graham, has been bedded by one complete bimbo and three who happen to hold, ahem, top positions in the company he works for, Lady Eloise Cosmetics. (Eartha Kitt is Lady Eloise, Robin Givens is the boss, and Grace Jones is the company's Ines de Fressange.) How do one sex starved old lady, one bitch on wheels, and one psychobitch on wheels add up to an apology?

Eddie, Eddie, Eddie. No one expects you to start moving in on Woody Allen's territory. ("Hannah and Her Bitches?") If he wants to apologize, let him give a groveling interview to Ms. magazine. Or get publicly whipped by Grace on "Arsenio."

But by far the worst thing about the warm, fuzzy Eddie is that he's just not funny. His patented honk sounds like a pale laugh-track imitation, and it seems as if he threw in the sole white guy impersonation just to keep Spike Lee happy.

Eddie's Marcus is Murphy's Law all over again. What could go wrong did go wrong. Bad, womanizing Eddie is boring — you've seen in him in various shapes and colors in a million trillion other movies. The screenwriters for "When Harry Met Sally..." and "The Pick-Up Artist" should contact their lawyers. And casting Eddie as the boring nice guy is like casting Robin Williams as a patient and not the doctor in "Awakenings." There's something a little subdued about their reactions.

Robin Givens is — need I say more — perfectly cast as Halle Berry, the woman who whips Murphy into a quivering mass of Phil sensitivity. As cute as a bug, she is soon to be seen in better movies. Grace Jones (now, there would have been a match for Mike Tyson) is at her scary, exhibitionist best — her persona seems built solely upon a blatant disregard for wearing underwear. Score another one for character development.

Despite whatever righteous feminist indignation I can work up for this movie, the fact remains that just because he's been making essentially dumb movies for the past couple years doesn't mean he can't be fun to watch. In moments few and far between, his mastery over his facial expressions is the stuff of every class clown's dream, like when he's imitating an arty little girl explaining her fingerprint masterpiece. Murphy has a "watch me" quality that hasn't completely dimmed since the days he was flying through plate-glass windows to the accompaniment of vintage-'80s synth music. Hopefully next time he'll spare everyone the apology — or the need for one.

Joe Russo

Joe Russo's solo marks celebration

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Most people throw a party when they graduate. Joe Russo is throwing a performance.

This weekend the graduating senior will put on a one-man show, a series of monologues by David Mamet. Mamet is the author of "Sexual Perversity in Chicago," the basis for the James Belushi/Rob Lowe film "About Last Night." Russo will also perform an original piece, which he describes as "kind of a surprise at the beginning of the work. You'll know it's original when you see it."

Russo, who put together this performance as "a farewell to the theater department, or a thanks," was an English major until he became interested in theater a year ago. He was most recently seen as the ebullient and none-too-bright Chico Marx in "Arden Fever," one of the plays performed in the UI's Playwrights' Festival in May.

The show will consist of a series of character sketches, which Russo calls "a pepper in the human existence, Mamet slices of life." He says the show is intended as "a vindication of Mamet, of what can be seen as a great deal of machismo in a writer when he's just a man writing about what he knows, those masculine themes which are present in us all, male and female."

The one-man show will be put on at 4 p.m. on Saturday, July 25, at the Studio Theater of the UI Theatre Building. Admission is free and the event is open to the public.

Eddie Murphy stars as Marcus Graham, a suave and popular ladies' man who finally meets his match in "Boomerang."

BOOK REVIEW

Mosley says it sure ain't easy bein' 'Easy'

Author succeeds again with third thriller.

Kristen Carr
The Daily Iowan

Easy Rawlins returns in Walter Mosley's "White Butterfly," the follow-up to a pair of thrillers chronicling the adventures of a boy-n-the-hood turned private detective.

Having traded life on the streets for domestic life, Rawlins is asked by police to help solve the murders of three black bar girls. The pressure on Rawlins steps up when the next victim is a stripper who also happens to be the very white daughter of a prominent California lawman. He balks at the request, which by now resembles more of a threat, until he's told that his best friend, (an ex-con with a record longer than an L.A. traffic jam), is high on the list of suspects.

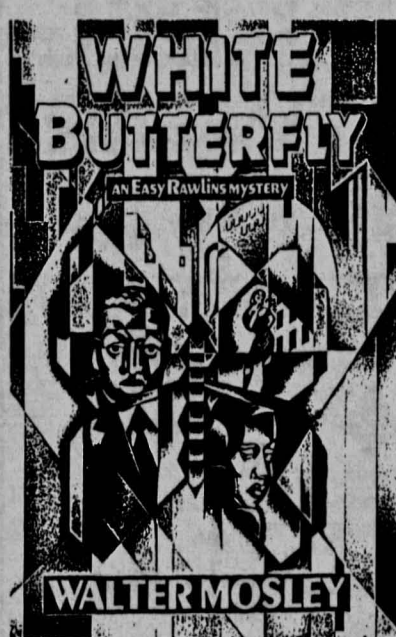

Mosley writes Rawlins into the shadowy areas of black-and-white issues. Rawlins works just outside of the law, finding his sources in the rundown bars and cheap motels where no white man would dare to go. A grey-toned morality also colors Rawlins' rationalizations about working for people who assume his race is guilty until proven innocent.

Rawlins' investigations hardly fall into the classic Sherlock Holmes mold — they are more likely to resemble a drug deal. Most of his sources operate on a street code of honor that counts answers as payback. He often swaps cash for clues — a practice that strips a lot of the suspense from sleuthing. More tension is generated by a deadlier form of payback, as sources seek to settle an old grudge with Rawlins.

Although "White Butterfly" takes place in 1956, its social commentary holds a "Back to the Future" relevance. Rawlins' Watts-area neighborhood comes complete with LAPD officers who are Daryl Gates prototypes, and a local library in need of cultural diversity.

The hard-nosed style of Mosley's previous novels, "Devil in a Blue Dress" and "Red Death," won him many comparisons to Raymond Chandler and Elmore Leonard. He is currently at work on the screenplay for "Devil in a Blue Dress." Rawlins is a graduate of City College in New York. Before turning to a life of crime writing, he enjoyed stints as a poet, short story author, potter and computer programmer.

Speaking of mysteries, recently a member of The Daily Iowan's book-reviewing staff (that's me) has been somewhat clueless about exactly when writers will be reading. Last week it was reported that Harper Barnes, author of "Blue Monday," was scheduled to read at Prairie Lights Books on Thursday, July 16. Instead, he will be reading tonight at 8 p.m.

Walter Mosley, on the other hand, will be reading from his book on Friday, July 24, at 8 p.m. Really.

'Zanzibar' is accurate account of dreaded middle-age crises

The Iowa Summer Rep closes shop on a glorious note.

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Loss and hope were prominent themes in "Approaching Zanzibar," the last in the Iowa Summer Rep's series of Tina Howe plays. "Zanzibar," which was given a minimally staged reading Monday and Wednesday nights, completed the cycle of currently available Howe plays, though two of her older plays are out of print and she is working on a new one.

The performance featured Rich Kurschner and Kirsten Fitzgerald as Wallace and Charlotte Blossom, a couple dealing badly with middle age. Wally is a famous composer who can't come up with anything new and feels frightened and useless; Charlotte is entering menopause and experiencing similar emotions over her inability to have more children. Both of them are experiencing some of the inevitable loss of freedom and spontaneity that comes with having young children (in this case, Doug Dawson as music prodigy Turner Blossom, and Jen Shepard as his nearsighted and fearful sister Pony.)

A further loss threatens the entire family in the form of a dying aunt, played by Rachel Lindhart. The play actually covers the cross-country road trip to see the aunt before she dies of cancer; the Blossoms run into a host of odd characters on the way, including deaf psychic Fletcher St. John (Kim Berg), translator Palace St. John (Pauline Tyer), and proud new father Randy Wands (Clint Corley).

Shepard was radiant as Pony Blossom, the play's eventual hero; she made the role seem too complex for an actual child to play. Many of the best scenes in the play consist of her and Dawson squabbling or playing games with the rest of the family. The scene where the four Blossoms have all switched roles and are imitating each other was an especially striking piece of whimsy.

The final scene between Lindhart and Shepard — one of them on the verge of dying, the other so terrified of death that she can't sleep at night — is possibly the best thing Tina Howe has ever written. What finally emerges from the themes of loss, fear, and uncertainty is not a sitcom quick fix where everyone's problems are solved, but a real-life moment of perhaps fleeting but still consuming happiness. It's a vindication of the problems of life, a promise for moments of happiness in the future.

New testifying limitations set

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Supreme Court on Wednesday set new limits on how far judges can go in shielding child sex-abuse victims from testifying in the same room as their accused attacker.

The court, ordering new trials in two sex-abuse cases, said the victim may not be allowed to testify via closed-circuit television if their accused attacker is kept in a separate room.

In a third ruling dealing with abuse cases, the high court refused to force a young victim to testify about earlier instances of sex abuse, citing the state's "rape shield" laws.

Those laws prohibit forcing victims to testify about their sexual history.

In child sex-abuse cases, it is not unusual for judges to try to prevent a young victim from being forced to confront the accused.

At one point, the Legislature adopted laws allowing screens to be erected blocking the victim's view and allowing the victim to be kept in a completely separate room.

The U.S. Supreme Court struck down those laws, saying they violated the constitutional right to confront an accuser. After that ruling, legislators revised the law. The revision no longer allows physical separation, the court said.

Allowing such testimony amounts to "ad hoc denial of constitutional rights," the court said.

Children may be allowed to testify from outside the courtroom by television but only if the accused is allowed into the room, the court said.

"Iowa code... still permits the court to protect child witnesses by shielding them from the trauma of testifying before a courtroom of strangers," the court said. "But it has removed from the statute the court's authority to sequester the accused from the accuser."

With the rulings, the court ordered new trials in child sex-abuse cases from Scott and Floyd counties.

In the Floyd County case, Madonna Kasel had been convicted of second-degree sexual abuse. She was charged with abusing a 7-year-old boy whom she regularly babysat.

The Scott County case involved Allen Overmyer, who was accused of abusing five young children.

The high court made it clear that state law does not allow children to be taken into separate rooms, but the justices said that procedure might pass legal muster if legislators put it on the books.

The third case — also from Scott County — involved Milton Sylvester Jones, convicted of third-degree sexual abuse. He sought to introduce evidence that the victim had been abused earlier in life and was confused about the incidents.

Counties forced to pay for mental-health care

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Counties cannot be forced to offer mental-health services, though they are required to pay for that care, the Iowa Supreme Court said Wednesday.

The court conceded that residents are entitled to mental-health care, but the manner in which that care is provided is established in state law. Local governments had closely followed the case.

"This right is not unlimited, however," the court said. "Its dimensions are defined, not by an individual's wishes, but by state law."

The case was originally filed by the family of Stacy Baker, a profoundly retarded woman now in her mid-20s who lived in Fort Dodge, Iowa. Her parents cared for the woman in their home.

After the woman had grown past the age when she could receive special-education classes through the local school system, she was evaluated and placement in an intermediate-care facility was recommended.

The nearest were in Charles City or Emmetsburg and the county agreed to pay the cost of placing her in either, the court said.

The parents went to court, saying counties have a responsibility to provide mental-health services locally, not just pay for them.

The parents filed a class-action suit against Webster County that, if successful, would have applied to all 99 counties.

The Iowa State Association of Counties intervened in the suit, protesting the claim.

By the time the case came to trial, an intermediate-care facility had opened in Fort Dodge. The lower court ruled the county had a responsibility to pay for mental-health services.

Convenience shops not liable for alcohol sales

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Supreme Court has again refused to expand the liability convenience-store owners face when they sell alcohol for drinking elsewhere.

Under the state's dramshop laws, tavern owners can be sued for damages caused by drunken customers. The court has on several occasions refused to extend that liability to convenience stores, which sell alcohol consumed elsewhere.

Critics have argued that's unfair. They say the decisions leave convenience stores free to sell more alcohol to already drunk customers who are a danger on the roads, all without facing the potential of being sued.

The court has said it just follows state law. The latest challenge was filed against a Cedar Rapids convenience store, and the high court summarily dismissed it.

"No useful purpose would be served by further discussion of those issues in this opinion," the court said in Wednesday's opinion.

GEORGIA PRIMARIES

Congressional election turns anti-incumbent

Dick Pettys
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Georgia voters sent angry messages to two congressional bad-check writers in primary elections. Republican Rep. Newt Gingrich escaped with only a scare, but Democratic Rep. Charles Hatcher was forced into a runoff.

And Democratic Rep. Ben Jones, under fire for congressional perks, saw his congressional career end at two terms, losing a bid to switch to a new district from one that had been mangled through redistricting.

The congressional primary Tuesday sounded an anti-incumbent note, spurred by the scandal at the now-closed House bank and compounded by the wholesale revision of congressional districts, said Emory University political scientist Alan Abramowitz.

Gingrich, the House minority whip and Georgia's only Republican in Congress, managed to slide past a challenge from Herman Clark, a former state legislator, whose ads roasted Gingrich for 22 bad checks on the House bank, his support for a congressional pay raise and his former use of a taxpayer-financed chauffeured limousine.

Gingrich, who has been a vocal critic of congressional Democrats, won the 1990 general election by only 974 votes. This time his edge was 980, according to complete but unofficial totals that gave Gingrich 35,682, or 51 percent to Clark's 34,702, or 49 percent.

"If I was him, I would seriously be concerned about his leadership style... the perks and privileges," said Jim Lovejoy, Clark's campaign manager. Clark said Gingrich ousted Clark nearly 10 to one.

Gingrich appeared to take note. "Since we already gave up the policeman and the car, obviously I think I'll have to make some changes," he said Wednesday.

But he added: "At the same time I would just point out if you look at the incumbents who had the toughest races in the state, we're doing pretty well."

Hatcher, who wrote 819 bad checks on the now-defunct House bank, led five opponents in southwest Georgia's 2nd District, which was redrawn to be mostly black. But he was forced into an Aug. 11 runoff with a black state legislator, Sen. Sanford Bishop of Columbus. Hatcher is white.

Rep. Newt Gingrich

The vote, with reports from 92 percent of the precincts: Hatcher 35,682, or 40 percent; Bishop 19,864, or 22 percent.

Jones, a former actor who played "Cooter" on TV's "The Dukes of Hazzard," ran far behind state Sen. Don Johnson in a five-way race.

"Ben Jones especially made an error in changing districts," Abramowitz said. "He was thinking ahead to November about the tough Republican challenge that will come out of his old district, but if he had stayed put, he probably wouldn't have had a Democratic challenge."

In complete but unofficial returns, Johnson had 45,571 votes, or 53 percent, to Jones' 25,838, or 30 percent. Three other candidates split the remaining votes.

PERU

Terrorism fails to shut down Lima

Alex Emery
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — Leftist rebels burned buses and bombed a school for the children of military officers Wednesday in a campaign to shut down the capital for two days.

Rebel threats kept buses and taxis off the streets, but tens of thousands of city employees defied the Maoist Shining Path movement and struggled to work on foot or in private cars and trucks.

In some cases, soldiers requisitioned vehicles to take workers into the city center.

A government spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said 85 percent of state workers were on the job, though many arrived late. Many schools closed, according to radio reports.

During previous rebel-ordered strikes, the Shining Path killed bus drivers to discourage Lima's 7 million residents from going to work.

On Wednesday, the rebels set fire to at least four buses and shot to death a taxi driver. They also dynamited two police stations, with caused only minor damage.

Police captured five rebels who were trying to bomb gas stations around the capital.

The so-called "armed strike" was intended to cap a week of violence that began last Thursday when the rebels set off two powerful car bombs on a residential street, killing at least 24 people and wounding 140.

The timing and placement of the recent bombs indicate the rebels are seeking to create a climate of terror in Lima. A 12-year guerrilla war in Peru has claimed more than 25,000 lives.

"Terrorism seeks to destroy our reality," said Hernando de Soto, a former adviser to President Alberto Fujimori. De Soto's research center was bombed Monday, with three people killed.

"What we have to do is prove that our reality is worth saving," he said.

Rebels set off a bomb attached to a vendor's cart in front of a school for the children of military officers in the seaside district of Chorrillos. Six students were hurt in the blast, which downed eight-foot walls and shattered windows.

On the eve of the strike, President Alberto Fujimori canceled plans to attend a summit in Spain of leaders of Latin American nations.

ITALY

FBI assists in murder investigation

Kevin Costelloe
Associated Press

ROME, Italy — FBI agents on Wednesday joined the hunt for the killers of Italy's top anti-Mafia fighter, and the government sought emergency passage of sweeping police powers to combat organized crime.

Paolo Borsellino and five police bodyguards were killed Sunday by a bomb in Palermo, stronghold of Italy's powerful Mafia. Just two months before, Giovanni Falcone, a close friend and colleague of Borsellino, was killed in a bombing.

The Mafia is suspected in both attacks. There have been no arrests, fueling criticism of the government's anti-crime efforts.

Late Wednesday, the government said Palermo's police chief was removed from office and transferred to Rome. The new police chief, Matteo Cincque, was flown to Palermo to take over the post immediately.

Cincque has been fighting organized crime for several years, most recently in the Sicilian city of Trapani, where his department has rounded up hundreds of suspected mafiosi.

In a television interview, Justice Minister Claudio Martelli said "Someone must pay" for the Borsellino murder. Martelli said there had been slip-ups in surveillance of crime figures, adding it was widely known that the judge was "the No. 1 target" for the Mafia.

Italy's national police chief, Vincenzo Parisi, was heckled and nearly crushed during Tuesday's funeral for Borsellino's bodyguards. Wednesday, he said he would not quit, and attacked his critics.

"On the one hand, there's the damage from the Mafia," he said. "On the other, there's the damage from those who discredit the government and who try to discredit it."

Borsellino's funeral is scheduled for Friday. His family decided on a private ceremony, inviting only Italian President Oscar Luigi Scalfaro to represent the state.

AIDS

'New' virus' link to HIV in question

Lee Siegel
Associated Press

IRVINE, Calif. — Researchers have discovered signs of a previously unrecognized virus in nine people who suffer AIDS symptoms but aren't infected by the two known AIDS viruses, a scientist said Wednesday.

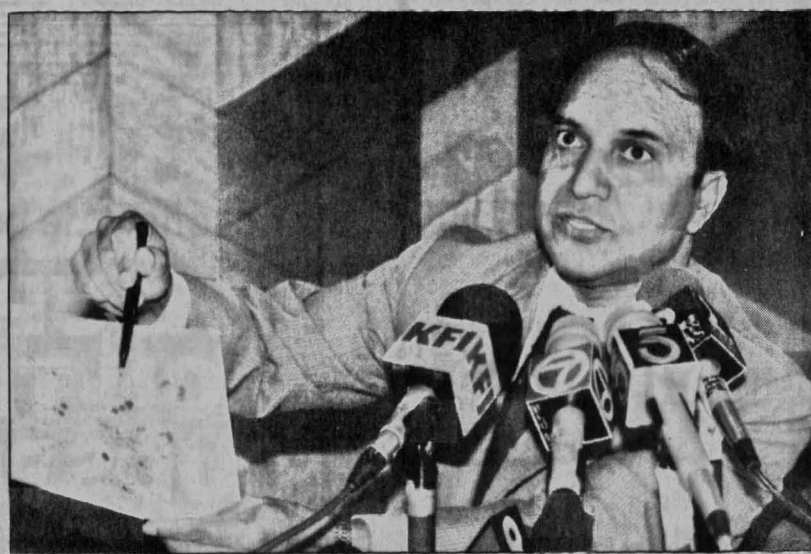

At least three of the infected people are among about two dozen recently reported cases of people who have what appears to be AIDS but don't have HIV-1 or HIV-2 — the two known AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency viruses.

The report Wednesday by Dr. Sudhir Gupta, an immunologist at the University of California-Irvine, was the first public announcement of a particular virus as a possible cause.

The newly discovered virus appears different from HIV-1 and HIV-2, but it's too early to say if it's an entirely new cause of AIDS or even the cause of a new AIDS-like condition, Gupta said during a news conference.

Nevertheless, the virus "appears to be strongly associated" with what looks like AIDS in people not infected with either form of HIV, he said.

Gupta said scientists don't know if it is a truly new virus or an old one that has gone unrecognized until now. Gupta has dubbed it human intracisternal retrovirus, or HICRV.

They also have no idea how the newly discovered virus is spread. While they can't rule out the possibility it is spread through blood transfusions, there are so few cases of the new AIDS-like condition that there is no cause for undue alarm over the safety of the blood supply, Gupta said.

Existing AIDS antibody tests, used to ensure the safety of blood transfusions, can't detect the newly found virus, but Gupta said that, within months, he hopes to develop a new test that will detect it.

Gupta said the mystery virus was found in a 66-year-old Southern California woman who suffers classic symptoms of AIDS, including the pneumocystis carinii form of pneumonia and a depletion of key immune system white blood cells called T cells.

The woman and her 38-year-old daughter — who weren't identified — both have antibodies to the mystery virus, but not to HIV, indicating they haven't been infected by either known AIDS virus, he said.

The daughter has no clinical symptoms of AIDS, but does have early signs of immune-system malfunctioning similar to that seen in AIDS-infected patients, he added. She isn't yet considered among those with the mysterious illness.

Blood samples from eight other patients with AIDS-like conditions were provided by researchers elsewhere. They also contain antibodies to the newly found virus, but not to HIV, Gupta said, adding that some of those patients have died.

Conference confronts financial toll

Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — The price of caring for one person with AIDS in the United States has soared to $38,000 a year, while developing countries harder hit by the disease struggle to spend a few hundred dollars per patient.

Researchers said costs have risen substantially in the last year alone, in part because of the high price of drugs.

The figures were disclosed in studies presented at the eighth International Conference on AIDS. While the week-long meeting has focused largely on the medical and personal tragedy of the disease, the latest research shows that AIDS is a financial disaster as well.

"Other types of costs can't be expressed in dollars — the cost of fear, the cost of grief, the cost in inequity and discrimination and the long-term cost of a pandemic that does not receive the attention it deserves," said Dr. Daniel Tarantola of the Harvard School of Public Health.

His research showed the financial inequities in the pandemic — or worldwide epidemic — of AIDS between wealthy nations and poor ones.

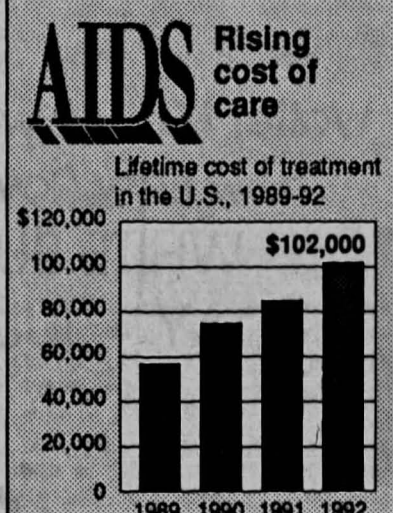

He found that 94 percent of all money spent treating the disease is in the United States, Western Europe and other industrialized regions. About 80 percent of the new cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome are in poor countries.

While one year of treatment for an AIDS patient in the United States costs $38,000, only $400 is spent a year for a patient in Africa.

In developed countries, people with AIDS are routinely treated with AZT, which costs about $2,500 a year. This is five times more than the per capita gross national product in sub-Saharan Africa.

Tarantola estimates that AIDS spending worldwide this year will total $3.5 billion for treatment, $1.4 billion for prevention and $1.7 billion for research.

Fred Hellinger of the U.S. Agency for Health Policy and Research said the cost of treating an American AIDS patient between the time the disease is diagnosed and death has nearly doubled in four years.

In 1989, the lifetime cost of treatment was $57,000. That rose to $75,000 in 1990, $85,000 last year and $102,000 this year.

In comparison, Americans spend $20,000 for treatment of lung cancer, $52,000 for breast cancer and $175,000 for kidney failure.

In the United States, caring for someone who is infected with the virus that causes AIDS but not yet sick costs $6,000 annually, largely for medicines to ward off AIDS symptoms.

The rising U.S. costs also result from the increasing availability of drugs to treat the disease's symptoms. For instance, Foscavir, a drug that prevents AIDS-related blindness, costs about $440 a week. AIDS activists demonstrated against Astra Pharmaceuticals, Foscavir's maker, during this week's meeting to protest the high cost.

Other AIDS medicines are also expensive. For instance, giving epoetin to stimulate the body to make more red blood cells costs $200 a week, while a medicine called GCSF that promotes white cell production costs $1,000 a week.

Among other reports at the meeting Wednesday: ■ Researchers disclosed new evidence that the virus becomes more lethal over time as it evolves inside the body.

■ Dr. Deborah Holtzman and others from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., said nationwide polls of high-school students demonstrate a modest drop in sexual activity.

AP poll says 56% of Americans feel 'better off' with Democrats

Howard Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a race with no Ross Perot, Americans by large margins are more willing to entrust their future to the Democrats than to the Republicans, according to an Associated Press poll.

President Bush has more than a hundred days to reshape these opinions. But for now, more Americans say they would be better off with Democrat Bill Clinton in the White House.

In addition, more Americans see the Democratic Party as closer to them on issues that matter, and better able to deal with the stagnant economy.

Still, only 38 percent considered a two-way race better for the country, according to the poll taken after Ross Perot's pullout. Reaction to Perot's departure was split, with 35 percent saying the Texan betrayed his supporters, and 46 percent saying he did the right thing by dropping out.

Asked to choose between the two parties, 56 percent said the Democrats are closer to them on the issues they care about while 26 percent said the Republicans are. The remainder didn't know or were part of the 12 percent who said neither party was closer to them on the issues that matter.

The nationwide poll of 1,004 adults was taken by phone Friday through Tuesday by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultant Cos. The margin of sampling error was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The poll showed how much the Democratic National Convention improved the party's image.

More than a third, 39 percent, said they will be better off in future years if the Democrats win the presidential election, compared with 12 percent who expected to do better with a Republican president.

The same question six months ago that could do a better job of dealing with the economy — 54 percent to 21 percent over the Republicans. Last November, the parties split evenly on that question. Six months ago the Democrats had a 9-point advantage, which grew to a 13-point edge in March.

The Democrats' current 33-point resulted in a virtually even split, 22 percent for the Democrats, 20 percent for the Republicans. The percentage who said it wouldn't make much difference which party won dropped from 51 percent to 44 percent.

The survey did not ask Americans to specify a preference for Clinton or Bush.

The Democrats also have been picking up support as the party advantage on the economy issue results not only from the stubbornly high jobless rate and declining personal income but also from the digs Bush's economic stewardship has taken from Perot and Clinton.

Democrats in the poll were more likely than Republicans to stick with their party as the one that could do a better job with the economy.

Baker may be Bush campaign rescuer

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The long wait for Secretary of State James Baker to take charge of President Bush's sputtering campaign dragged on Wednesday as White House officials worried that the summertime political drama was fueling an appearance of disarray.

Bush and Baker insisted no decision had been made — but they did not deny that the secretary would give up his Cabinet post to try to rescue the president. There was no lessening of the expectation that Baker would make the switch.

"I'm delighted that Jim Baker's coming back," said South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, a national director of Bush's campaign and the president's Southern chairman. Asked if he were certain about Baker's intentions, Campbell confidently said, "Baker will be back."

Bush brushed aside questions about Baker at a photo session before a Cabinet meeting, saying, "A lot of crazy rumors floating around, aren't there?" He said the press was in "that feeding frenzy that you love."

Asked about rumors that Vice President Dan Quayle would be dumped from the ticket, Bush said Quayle's status was "very certain."

Democrats seized on the Baker story to make fun of Bush.

"They are really getting desperate."

To pull Secretary of State Jim Baker — the best they've got — out of the Middle East peace talks at a critical moment to concentrate on politics is a sign of panic in the White House, said Sen. Al Gore, the Democratic vice presidential nominee.

With his experience in four national campaigns and close ties to Bush, Baker is expected to bring a strong hand to the White House and the campaign, ending months of confusion about Bush's direction as he battles for a second term.

There was concern that White House and campaign officials, by talking up prospects for Baker's move, were contributing to a long-standing impression of political disarray.

"It shows poor judgment on campaign people or staff people or anybody who chooses to do that," said presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater. "It undermines our campaign effort to have campaign people saying those things."

Bush made a rare appearance at the morning meeting of his senior staff and told aides he had made no decision about Baker. "He said it's all speculation," Fitzwater recounted.

Baker, traveling in the Middle East, also said there had been no decision. "Until you hear it from the president of the United States and the secretary of state of the United States, I wouldn't make book on it ... and I wouldn't bank on it."

It's generally believed Bush will not announce any new role for Baker while the secretary is traveling, and perhaps not for weeks. Baker returns Sunday night after a stop in the Philippines.

Moreover, a Republican source said that Bush "doesn't like other people making decisions for him, and he doesn't like reading about his decision-making process in the newspaper."

The most likely scenario is that Baker would move to the White House as a counselor to the president, officials said.

Owl-protective logging ban upheld

George Tibbitts
Associated Press

SEATTLE — A federal judge refused to lift an injunction that blocks federal timber sales in northern spotted owl habitat while the government and a loggers' association appeal an earlier order.

U.S. District Judge William Dwyer also said Tuesday that there is no excuse for the U.S. Forest Service not to get to work on a new environmental impact statement on protecting the threatened owl.

On July 2, Dwyer issued a permanent injunction prohibiting government timber sales on owl habitat in Washington, Oregon and Northern California. Earlier this year, the judge had ruled the Forest Service's impact statement was inadequate because it failed to consider new scientific information.

Dwyer had also ordered the agency to present to him, by July 14, a timetable for preparing a new impact statement that corrects the defects in the old one.

The Forest Service and the Washington Contract Loggers Association appealed Dwyer's decision on the impact statement. They asked that the injunction be set aside pending the appeal.

Dwyer ruled Tuesday that allowing the timber sales to go ahead would cause irreparable harm to the old-growth forests where the owls live. But he extended the date for submitting the timetable to Aug. 4.

"Nothing has been presented as to the prospects on appeal, or as to relative hardship or the public interest, that would justify a stay," he wrote.

In his ruling, Dwyer said the Forest Service had argued that he had no power to order it to perform specific tasks or complete them by a certain time.

"To hold that the courts cannot do this would invite lawlessness; an agency could escape its statutory duties simply by procrastinating," Dwyer wrote.

The owl was declared a threatened species in 1990 under the federal Endangered Species Act. Biologists estimate that only about 3,000 breeding pairs of the birds remain.

Dwyer said the Forest Service has a long history of delaying its protection of the owl and that a timetable is essential to ensure it complies with federal environmental laws.

"The agency has argued that it need not do what the laws plainly require it to do," he said.

Clinton, Gore end tour with promises, criticisms

Steven Komarow
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Bill Clinton and Al Gore capped their post-convention bus tour Wednesday with a huge rally, a promise to work for unity in a divided nation, and a long-distance exchange of political blows with President Bush.

"There is nothing wrong with this country except we're underorganized, undereducated and underled, and we're going to change all that in November if you'll help us," Clinton declared. He spoke to more than 25,000 people who gathered at lunchtime, overflowing a St. Louis park, clogging adjoining streets and peering from rooftops.

"We want to restore to this country a genuine sense of community and caring. To say we're all in this together," he said, echoing a central theme of the bus trip the Democratic team began last Friday in New York. "We're going up or down together without regard to race or region or income. This is America, let's start acting like it again."

Back in Washington, Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called Gore "Mr. Sellout America" for supporting stronger environmental planks than the president did at the recent world environmental summit in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

"Now he tries to talk about economic growth when he spent a week in Rio saying 'the heck with the economy, sell it out to the environment,'" Fitzwater said.

Clinton told reporters that Gore went to Rio because "he didn't want America humiliated, as it was, under George Bush's leadership or lack of leadership."

Gore criticized Bush on another subject, pointing to widespread reports that Secretary of State James Baker would soon resign to join the Bush campaign.

Such a move, which Baker said Wednesday had not been decided upon, would mean taking "the best they've got out of the Middle East peace talks at a critical moment," Gore said. He called it "a sign of panic in the White House."

Clinton and Gore took their five-day bus caravan from the Democratic National Convention in New York through the factories, farms and small towns of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois. They arrived in St. Louis late Tuesday night. Greeted all along the way by large and enthusiastic crowds, they portrayed themselves as the youthful and energetic alternative to the Republicans.

Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton reaches out to shake hands with supporters after a downtown rally Wednesday in St. Louis, Mo.

In advance of the Wednesday's rally, former Republican National Chairman Clayton Yeutter held a news conference to attack the Democrats' economic plan and criticize Clinton for his lack of foreign policy experience.

"Gov. Clinton does not have one-tenth the stature the president has all over the world," Yeutter said.

"The American public is going to wake up and recognize this."

He said the bus tour "has certainly generated some interest as they have gone across the country, but I don't believe it has generated anything in the way of answers" to national problems.

Clinton brushed away such talk, getting big cheers.

"Abraham Lincoln said that you can never lift yourself up by putting other people down," Clinton said. "Al Gore and I want to lift everybody in America up. We don't want anybody left out."

cars with eggs and vegetables and slashed their tires in escalating demonstrations since July 5, when the Iraqis refused to allow U.N. access to the ministry.

More demonstrations took place in Baghdad and other cities Wednesday, the Iraqi News Agency said. Protesters shouted slogans describing the inspectors as "stray dogs and scoundrels," it said.

In New York, Iraqi U.N. Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbani met with Ekeus, and said he thought there could be a diplomatic solution.

"I believe with good will, if people stop making lousy threats, it is possible to work out a solution. After all, this is what diplomats are supposed to do," Anbani said.

But he gave no indication of progress to end the standoff.

Some diplomats deemed the situation far more serious than the standoff last September when U.N. inspectors were surrounded in a Baghdad parking lot for four days before being allowed to take away documents on Iraq's attempt to produce nuclear warheads.

The diplomats said they were alarmed by recent attacks on U.N. guards in northern Iraq, Iraq's refusal to accept a U.N. plan for selling its oil to obtain food and medicine, and Baghdad's rejection of a U.N. commission's demarcation of the Iraq-Kuwait border.

Saddam has backed down before after being threatened with force. But Western and Arab diplomats speculated he might be willing to risk limited attacks because Iraq has made no progress in ending a trade embargo imposed after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

The United States has about 200

warplanes in the Persian Gulf region and others aboard the aircraft carrier Independence in the gulf.

But diplomats at the United Nations said no final decision had been made on use of force and that if limited strikes were authorized they would not come for at least 10 to 14 days.

Ekeus said 70 U.N. inspectors now in Baghdad would remain to carry on their work, including trying to gain access to the Agriculture Ministry.

COLOMBIA

the presidential palace in Bogota after being freed. He said that when he told Escobar he was being transferred, Escobar "told us we were hostages and that we were going to leave there dead."

At dawn Wednesday the hostages were being held on a balcony when the army attacked. The other hostages were the national prisons director, Col. Hernando Navas, and the jail's warden, Col. Omar Rodriguez.

"We heard the first shots and a loud explosion, and someone shouted to kill all of us," Mendoza said.

"All of a sudden I found a gun at my neck. It was a soldier of the special forces. He took me to a corner of the room and told all of us to be quiet while they disarmed all of the bandits," Mendoza said.

Mendoza said he crawled to safety "through a hallway amid a rain of bullets."

At least two guards were killed and another was wounded in the rescue operation, Antioquia state Gov. Juan Gomez said. RCN radio said at least six died in the shoot-out.

Forbes magazine once listed Escobar as one of the world's wealthiest men, with a fortune estimated at between $2 billion and $5 billion.

The tremendous wealth and violence of Escobar and other cartel leaders has made it virtually impossible for the impoverished judicial system to prosecute them.

Escobar and his 14 lieutenants had yet to be charged with any crime. Colombia's justice system works slowly, and some murder investigations have taken as long as six years.

Some officials feared that Escobar and his cohorts, footloose with a feeling of betrayal by the government, could unleash a new round of violence.

HOUSING

reasons why people don't file complaints about discrimination. Some may be turned off by the amount of paperwork involved, the time delay, the hassle," she said.

Hawkins felt that many minority students don't bother to file discrimination complaints because they do not view themselves as fully involved members of the Iowa City residential community.

"Iowa City has such a transient atmosphere — students are here for only a few years and then they move on. With that transiency there is a feeling of powerlessness," he said.

For the Tenant / Landlord Association and the Human Rights Commission, organizations committed to preventing housing discrimination, the lack of student response is distressing. "We can't handle a problem that we are not informed about — we can't fight what we don't see," Guerrier said.

Harris agreed. "The word needs to get out. They should file a complaint and see that justice is done. The only way discrimination will end is if this process is kept in motion," she said.

Both Guerrier and Harris were concerned that the UT's foreign students may be prime targets for housing discrimination.

"Too often, foreign students accept the excuses a discriminating landlord will give," Guerrier said.

New arrivals to the United States may not be fully aware of their legal rights as tenants or fully informed about community organizations that could be used as resources, Harris explained.

Guerrier encourages all residents of Iowa City who have experienced housing discrimination to make an appointment with the Tenant / Landlord Association to discuss the incident and get it on record.

"People may not want to come forth because they don't have any confidence in what the results of that action would be," Hawkins said. "But if I were writing this article, I would headline it, 'Agitate! Agitate! Agitate!'" of Southeast Asian Nations in Manila. He is to return to Washington, D.C., late Sunday.

Baker started the day in Damascus, making a quick side trip to Cairo to discuss the Mideast peace process with Mubarak, head of the only Arab country that officially recognizes Israel.

Mubarak, fresh from talks with Rabin in Cairo, said the new Jewish leader's decision to suspend new settlements in the West Bank and Gaza "is a very good step forward" for peace.

But "what has been offered still needs much more ... to persuade the Arab countries to go quickly and much more vigorously in the peace process," Mubarak said.

He did not spell out what further concessions he sought. But he said he remained committed to his proposal that the Arabs suspend their economic boycott of Israel if the Jewish state freezes settlement activity.

Baker, meeting Jordan's King Hussein on Tuesday, praised the Rabin government as offering "a new opportunity" to accelerate an agreement with the Arabs. The Bush administration had been sharply at odds with Rabin's predecessor, Yitzhak Shamir, who was adamant in refusing to give up captured land in exchange for peace and actively promoted new settlements in occupied territory.

Baker also endorsed Rabin's proposal that once the negotiations are resumed they should be in continuous session. The current round recessed in late April. The parties to the talks — Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Syria and the Palestinians — have agreed to meet again in Rome, but have not set a date.

LIGHTING THE OLYMPIC FLAME

An archer will light the Olympic flame by shooting a flaming arrow closely over the gas torch. It will be lit on Saturday, July 25, at 11:30 p.m.

Shortly before the arrow passes over the torch, the gas will be turned on.

MAJORS: "Rusty" Eck saves another one

Thomas said.

Donn Pall (4-2) was the winner and Scott Radinsky got his fifth save.

The mood in the Orioles clubhouse after the game was depressed following the news that the 6-year-old son of infielder Tim Lulett was in critical condition after being hit by a car.

"All I can say is that we're quite numb and devastated," Baltimore manager Johnny Oates said.

Cubs 3, Reds 0

CINCINNATI — Doug Dascenzo drove in a pair of runs with a single and a sacrifice fly and Greg Maddux threw a six-hitter.

It was the Cubs' second straight shutout of Cincinnati. The Reds had not been shut out in consecutive games since last Aug. 10-11 in San Diego.

Maddux (12-8) pitched his fifth complete game of the season, the 38th of his career. He struck out four and walked two.

Royals 6, Red Sox 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wally Joyner's leadoff double was the only ball that left the infield during a five-run fifth inning that vaulted Kansas City past Frank Viola.

Viola (8-6) sailed into the fifth with a one-hitter and a 3-0 lead. But Joyner's double, two infield singles, a walk, a hit batsman and an error put the Royals on top 5-3.

Tom Gordon (3-9), the third Kansas City pitcher, got the victory with three innings of three-hit, one-run relief. Jeff Montgomery pitched the last two innings for his 23rd save.

Braves 2, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — The Braves won their 11th straight game and John Smoltz extended his scoreless inning streak to 27 as Atlanta moved into first place in the NL West.

The winning streak is two victories short of the club mark of 13 set at the start of the 1982 season.

Braves pitchers have thrown five shutouts in the streak, and Smoltz, who leads the league with eight complete games, has been involved in three of them.

Smoltz (12-6) scattered seven hits over 8 1/2 innings, struck out five and walked one to earn his fifth win in six starts. It was only his second win in six career decisions at Busch Stadium.

Sid Bream drove in both runs with a home run in the second and a sacrifice fly in the seventh off Omar Olivares (6-5).

Brewers 4, Rangers 1

MILWAUKEE — No, there were no visions of no-hitters left floating around in Jaime Navarro's head when he faced the Texas Rangers. Just a vow to throw strikes and throw them quickly.

Navarro had taken a no-hitter into the eighth inning in his last start against Chicago and ended up with a no-decision. On Wednesday, he varied his style and ended up with a career-best two-hitter as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Rangers 4-1.

"I was looking to this (game)," said Navarro (10-6), who didn't allow Texas a hit in the final 6 1/2 innings. "I didn't want to think about the no-hitter. I just threw strikes and got a lot of fly balls and grounders. I didn't strike too many people out. I just let the guys make plays behind me."

failed, they fouled him, but he still made the free throws. In desperation, they tried to force him outside. Street responded by canning three 3-point field goals in the game.

With neither team able to pull away, it looked like Street's efforts would be in vain, but I.S./Airliner seized control with time running out.

First, Street hit a long 3-pointer to give I.S./Airliner a 10-point lead. Seconds later, after a UICCU miss, Street dunked over two UICCU players for his 40th and 41st points. UICCU tried to come back, but was only able to get within five points the rest of the game.

Street did have some help along the way, with ex-Hawkeye football player Dwight Sistrunk scoring 13 points, and Northern Iowa player Jon Ellis totaling 17 for I.S./Airliner. Ron Lassen also added 17 for I.S./Airliner.

higher than 11-under-par, saying that 14-under "sounds like a pretty good number."

The Hawkeye Open will field 135 golfers, with the 50 lowest scores surviving the cut after 36 holes.

Despite having plenty of offensive firepower, UICCU was at a loss as to how to control Street. They tried double-teaming him and when that professional — Toronto Blue Jays infielder Rance Mulliniks.

"He'll hear me complain about something and say, 'Well, when I played Double-A ball, we had lights where you couldn't see pop flies,'" recalled Todd, who began his college career at Ohio State before settling on Texas-El Paso.

"You just gotta go out there, prepare yourself and do your best. After I hit the shot, it's left my club face, there's nothing I can do about it when it's in the air. I've gotta accept where it ends up, whether it's good or bad, and I have to go play my next shot."

DREAM TEAM

Scrimmage goes down to buzzer

Bill Barnard
Associated Press

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — The best basketball games of the summer could be the ones the fans never see.

An intrasquad scrimmage between 10 Team USA players Wednesday had "some of the best basketball I've ever seen," Magic Johnson said. "It was everything a basketball player could want."

While tickets to the Americans' 111-71 rout of France in an pre-Olympic exhibition on Tuesday night cost about $100, the scrimmage was closed to the public. The media was allowed inside for only the last five minutes.

A team of Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen, Larry Bird, Karl Malone and Patrick Ewing beat the quintet of Johnson, Christian Laettner, Chris Mullin, Charles Barkley and David Robinson 40-36. The game wasn't decided until Jordan hit two free throws with 1.5 seconds left.

"We were jawing and trash-talking each other a lot," Robinson said. "We were all a little testy because we had a game last night and had to get up early. We all hate to lose, even in practice, because now they have the bragging rights for a day."

Associated Press

USA basketball coach Chuck Daly of the New Jersey Nets, middle, confers with the "Dream Team" Wednesday in Monaco following an intrasquad scrimmage.

After one call went in favor of Jordan late in the scrimmage, Johnson snapped at Jordan, "That was a Chicago Stadium call."

"That's because this is the '90s," Jordan smugly retorted, referring to his unchallenged status as the best player in the game.

"This is the best fun we have on the court," Jordan said afterward. "It might be the only competition we get all summer. There's a lot of talking out there."

Jordan said the public may not see Team USA at its best in the Olympics. "All of us would love to see us challenged one time," he said. "I don't think you'll see this team play to its potential unless it's challenged.

"A lot of us in the regular season can raise our games when a game is close, but we may not ever see that happen. There may not ever be a game except in the first half."

Johnson said Jordan was magnificent in Wednesday's practice.

"Our team was ahead 14-2 and for about two minutes, Michael just brought them back by himself," Johnson said. "I was telling myself, 'I've got to stop him,' but in the back of your mind you know you can't. He was unbelievable."

TOUR de FRANCE

Colotti takes easy victory in 17th stage

Associated Press

MONTLUÇON, France — Jean-Claude Colotti of France got a big lead and held it to the end to win the 17th stage of the Tour de France as defending champion Miguel Indurain of Spain maintained his overall lead Wednesday.

Colotti took the stage in 4 hours, 34 minutes, 55 seconds, crossing the finish line 3:31 ahead of Frans Maassen of the Netherlands and Marc Sergeant of Belgium.

Philippe Louviot of France was fourth and Guy Nulens of Belgium fifth, more than eight minutes behind on the 118-mile stretch between La Bourboule and Montluçon in central France.

"I missed winning so many times that I wanted to get ahead and stay ahead," Colotti said after taking a stage for the first time ever. "I kept my feet pumping the pedals all the way until five kilometers (three miles) from the finish. It still hasn't sunk in. It's my greatest finish."

"I missed winning so many times that I wanted to get ahead and stay ahead."

Jean-Claude Colotti

Indurain finished with the pack some 16 minutes behind the 31-year-old Colotti, but maintained a lead of 1:42 over Claudio Chiappucci of Italy with four stages remaining in the Tour.

"This morning everyone started quickly," Indurain said. The road was bad.

"As soon as (Australian Neil) Stephens took off, I followed him. It was the best way to avoid any problems on the gravel."

"Aside from that, it was pretty calm and we had things under control," he said. "I'm looking forward to the time trial Friday."

The top three finishers Wednesday broke away from the pack about 87 miles from Montluçon. Colotti left the other two behind about 21 miles from the finish.

The Frenchman said he dedicated his victory to American Greg LeMond, the Z team star and three-time Tour de France champion who dropped out of the race Sunday.

Dimitri Konyshov of Russia, who won two stages on the Tour last year, quit the race after about 50 miles.

WATER POLO

OLYMPIC TRIVIA

Water Polo got its name because originally players rode floating barrels painted to resemble horses and used sticks to hit the ball.

Skins Games canceled

The Ben Hogan Hawkeye Open Skins Games was washed out by rain Wednesday at Finkbine Golf Course and will not be made up.

Scheduled to compete were the top four money winners on the Ben Hogan Tour — John Flannery, Brian Henninger, David Jackson and Rick Dalpos — along with Iowa men's athletic director Bob Bowsby, baseball coach Duane Banks and KCRG meteorologist Denny Frary.

The AEGON USA/Ben Hogan Hawkeye Open Pro-Am will run all day today, with the Hawkeye Open slated for Friday through Sunday. Tickets for the Pro-Am are $5 at the gate. Fifty-two golfers will compete.

BASEBALL

Cubs decision expected today

CHICAGO — A federal judge is expected to rule Thursday on the Chicago Cubs' request to block realignment that would move the team to the National League West next season.

Ryan being sued

HOUSTON — Nolan Ryan is being sued by a couple who claim the Texas Rangers pitcher breached a contract involving the business' right to sell bronze castings of his hands.

The lawsuit, filed Friday by Bronze Memories Inc., and its owners, Roy and Bernadette Champiomont of Katy, names Ryan, Matt Merola and Mattgo Enterprises as defendants.

The lawsuit alleges that the former Houston Astros pitcher signed a contract with Bronze Memories in June 1989, giving the bronze-art business the exclusive rights to manufacture and market bronze or other non-photographic reproductions of the pitcher's hands, according to court records.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Source of UNLV photos goes public

LAS VEGAS — A 33-year-old Las Vegas man says he is the anonymous source who provided incriminating photos of three former UNLV players last year, prompting the resignation of coach Jerry Tarkanian.

The controversial photos showed the players and convicted sports fixer Richard Perry in a hot tub and playing basketball at Perry's Las Vegas home.

Lamont Sudbury, an architectural designer, denied the photos were released as part of a conspiracy to dump the popular coach. He said he obtained them by accident from Perry's wife and kept them for months before releasing them to the media.

TENNIS

Courier upset by No. 157 Perez

KITZBUHEL, Austria — Top seed Jim Courier was upset by Diego Perez of Uruguay 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 Wednesday in a rain-interrupted second-round match at the Philips Head Cup clay-court tournament.

The unseeded Uruguayan, ranked 157th in the world, survived a tiebreak and finished strongly to take the second-round match.

OLYMPICS

IOC divulges assets

BARCELONA, Spain — The International Olympic Committee broke with its policy of financial secrecy Wednesday and disclosed how much money it has in the bank.

Total assets are $85.8 million, according to figures released at a news conference by IOC Finance Commission chairman Marc Hodler.

Hodler said the IOC's goal is to achieve total assets of $150 million.

Ben Hogan Tour invades Iowa City

Flannery a favorite to win $25,000 prize

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

John Flannery seems to be enjoying his visit to Iowa City — even though he's a bit wary of the local folks.

"I got a golf scholarship to the University of Southern California," the Ben Hogan Golf Tour professional said Wednesday, "and I know the Iowa people probably don't like that with the Rose Bowl and all that stuff. So, you can take your shots at me now."

As the leading money-winner on the Ben Hogan Tour with $121,887, Flannery has plenty of reason to be relishing his days of golf.

And as one of the favorites to capture the second annual $125,000 Hawkeye Open, Flannery will probably find himself calling the shots, rather than taking them from others.

One of only three multiple money-winners on the tour this year, Flannery credits a psychologist with helping him upgrade his game.

"He taught me how not to spend too much time working on my swing and start working on a routine," Flannery said. "We talked about what you can and can't control on the golf course."

Being the money-leader, Flannery also cites 1991 Player of the Year

Tom Lehman and 1990 money-winner Jeff Maggert as giving him inspiration in every tournament.

"They give us hope out here. We've been able to look at their success and I think that keeps us going."

Another golfer to watch this weekend is Toronto native Rick Todd, currently eighth on the money list with $60,727 and the victor of last week's Dakota Dunes Open over David Jackson on the second hole of sudden death.

"The way I got started in golf was I was caddy for my mother. I got tired, so I grabbed a club out of the bag and started hitting the ball, and I liked it," Todd said.

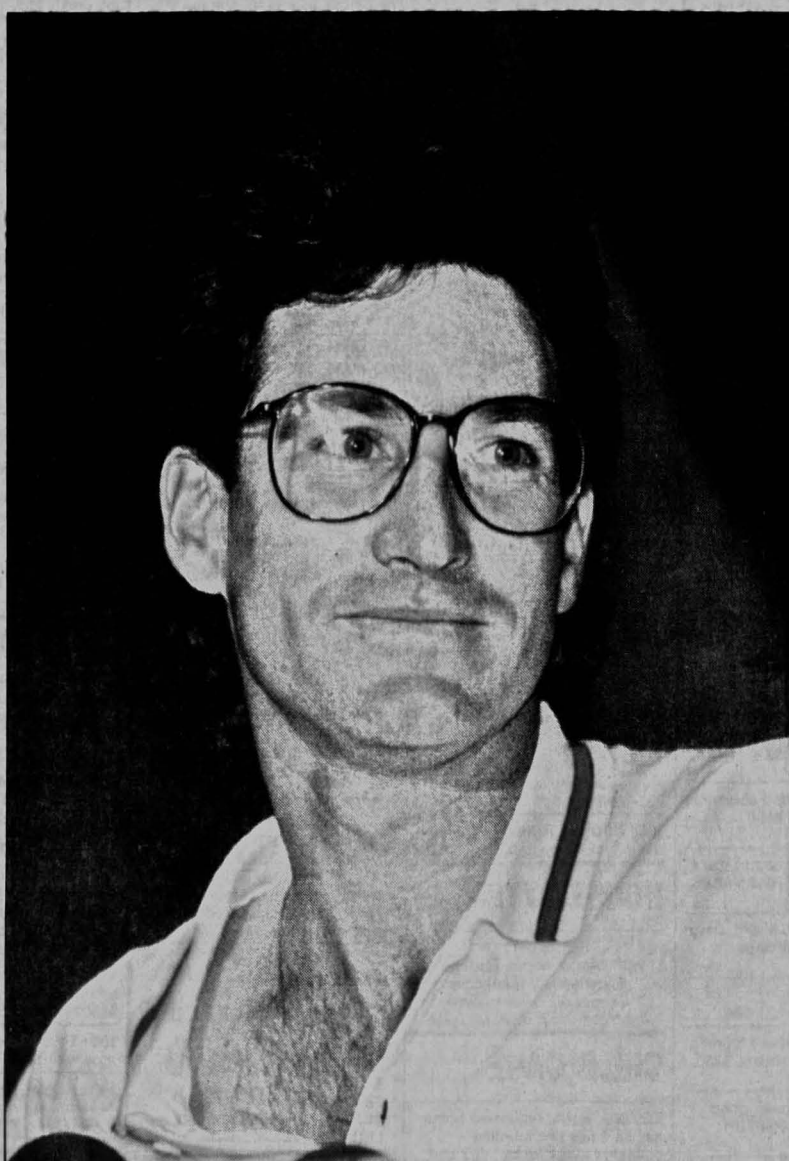

For both Flannery and Todd, Iowa's Finkbine Course presents an interesting challenge if they're going to emerge on top.

"I like the golf course," Todd said. "When you get on the greens, you gotta be careful. You don't want to hit above too many pins, 'cause you can three-putt or four-putt a green, which isn't too hard to do out here."

"It's in great shape and the greens are beautiful," said Flannery, winner of the South Carolina Classic and the Quicksilver Open in Pittsburgh, Pa. "It's a lot like the course we played in Fort Wayne (Ind.), two weeks ago) but the greens are trickier and longer."

According to Todd, a little

Hawkeyes' recruiting could go up

Local golf buffs shouldn't be the only ones reaping the benefits of the Ben Hogan Tour's stop at Finkbine this weekend. For Hawkeye men's golf coach Lynn Blevins, the Iowa program could be on the upswing with improved recruiting.

"It shows the visualization of golf in the area," said Blevins, who is also the tour's director. "Everyone immediately assumes you've got a good facility because you're hosting a PGA Tour event."

"That's not necessarily the case, but the understanding and mentality is, 'Boy, you guys are hosting a tour event, you must have good facilities,'" Blevins said.

Bad weather appears to be the main concern as Blevins prepares for a large turnout throughout the tournament.

"If we catch a good day and some weather, and the community takes advantage of it, I hope we can have 20,000 people on VIP days, because the golf course can handle that with no problem."

Blevins predicted a score of 205 on the par-72 course would be good enough to claim the $25,000 top prize, but leading money-winner John Flannery was willing to go

PRIME TIME LEAGUE

One-way Street for I.S./Airliner

It is safe to say that University of Iowa Community Credit Union did not even see what hit them Wednesday night.

Chris Street continued his dominating play in the Iowa City Prime Time League by ringing up 52 points and hauling down 19 rebounds, leading Imprinted Sportswear/Airliner to a 113-105 victory over UICCU.

UICCU finally had a near-full roster after several games without key players, but it made little difference who guarded Street. Terry Merfeld tried it. So did Jon Dietz and ex-Iowa State forward Paul Doerrfeld. None succeeded in stopping the 6-foot, 8-inch Hawkeye forward, as he simply scored at will.

The score stayed close throughout most of the game because of the balanced attack of UICCU, and the squad was able to offset the numbers of Street for a time. Val

Cone delivers; Tim Raines on Orioles

Associated Press

NEW YORK — This time, David Cone didn't have to throw 166 pitches to get a victory. New York Mets manager Jeff Torborg gave Cone the rest of the day off after he threw 124.

Cone, still drained from Friday's megapitch shutout victory over San Francisco, won his sixth straight decision for the Mets' fifth victory in six games, 7-5 over the Dodgers.

Cone (11-4) allowed five runs and eight hits in six-plus innings, struck out 10 and walked five. He said he didn't feel pooped, just a little off.

"I'm the type of pitcher who throws a lot of pitches," he said. "I'm a strikeout pitcher who goes deep in the count. It's not like I'm not conditioned for it. I just hope down the stretch it doesn't effect me."

Cone, who has eight games this season with 10 or more strikeouts, has won four straight starts and hasn't lost since June 10 at Montreal. He leads the majors in strikeouts with 177.

Orel Hershisier (7-9) gave up seven runs — five earned — and eight hits in 5½ innings, struck out five and walked two.

The Dodgers placed Darryl Strawberry on the 15-day disabled list after the game (retroactive to Tuesday) because of lower back pain.

White Sox 7, Orioles 5

CHICAGO — Most everyday players are a little uneasy with the idea of pinch hitting. Count Tim Raines among them, although his numbers would never show it.

Raines put Chicago ahead with a two-run, pinch-double and the White Sox rallied for three runs in the eighth inning.

In his only other pinch hitting assignment this season, Raines singled on June 10.

"Guess what? I'm batting a thousand this year," Raines said.

Frank Thomas, with seven homers and 33 RBIs since being inserted into the third slot on June 6, hit a two-run homer, his 14th, in the bottom of the third.

"When I'm batting in the fourth slot, I just go crazy. I don't have any game plan. But, batting third, I can try for singles and that's where I feel more comfortable,"

Matt Rodgers signs with Bills

Associated Press

Buffalo has come to terms with all of its 1992 draft choices except second-round pick James Patton, a defensive tackle. The Bills signed first-round choice John Fina on Tuesday, and negotiations with Patton continue.

Signed Wednesday was quarterback Matt Rodgers, a 12th round pick.

Bears

The Chicago Bears open training camp at Platteville, Wis., on Thursday and defensive lineman William Perry, a holdout, probably won't be there for the first time since his rookie season in 1985.

Coach Mike Ditka says Perry may as well not show up at all.

"I don't think he'll be with the team this year," says Ditka, who wants Perry, who weighed close to 400 pounds at the end of last season, to weigh no more than 320. "He's not coming in until we sign him, and we're not signing him until we weigh him and give him a physical."

Perry missed mini-camp and has not been working out at Halas Hall in Lake Forest, Ill. with the other Bears. But he has been spotted during past months in the Chicago area playing basketball and working out at a health club.

Five other veterans — receiver Wendell Davis, center Jay Hilgenberg, linebacker Dante Jones, defensive back Markus Paul and running back James Rouse — also are unsigned.

Saints

First-round draft choice Vaughn Dunbar had to skip the second of two 300-yard zigzag shuttle runs on Wednesday when a groin muscle tightened up and threatened to pull.

"It tightened up, and we thought it would be better if he did not run the second part," coach Jim Mora said.

Broncos

Denver's top draft choice, quarterback Tommy Maddox, signed for what sources said was $3 million over the three years of the contract, plus a $1.4 million signing bonus.

Maddox, who left UCLA after two seasons, was the first player in Pac-10 history to pass for at least 5,000 yards by the end of his sophomore year. He was taken with the 26th pick of the first round.

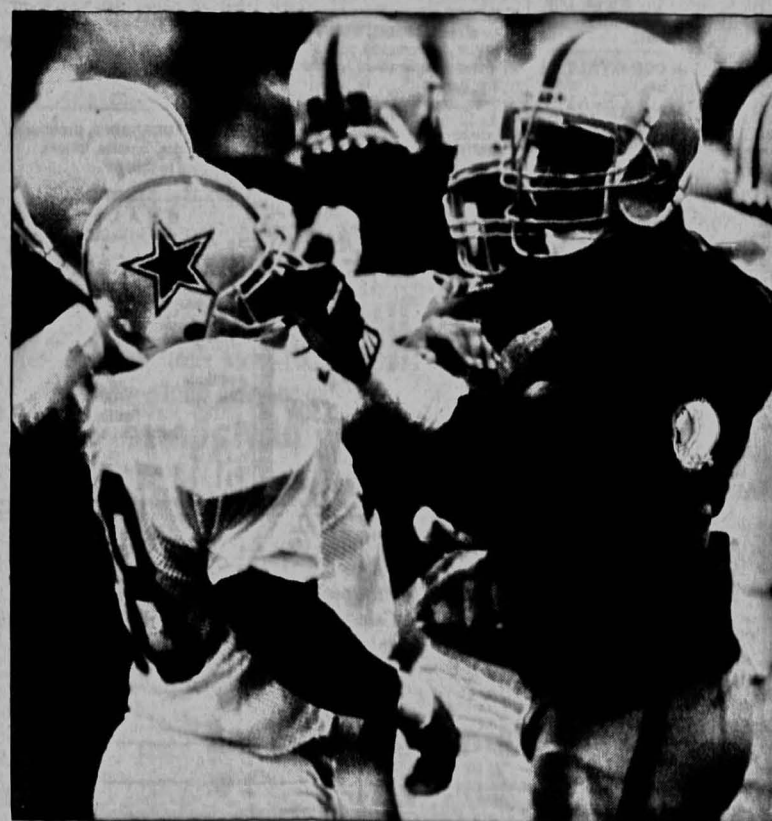

Cowboys

Cornerback Garry Lewis ended his holdout by signing on Wednesday. The Cowboys obtained Lewis, a three-year veteran, in an off-season trade with the Los Angeles Raiders for a seventh-round draft pick.

Packers

First-round draft pick Terrell Buckley says the Packers don't seem serious about getting him into training camp.

Buckley, projected by new coach Mike Holmgren as a likely starter at left cornerback, said he wants more than the $7.5 million, five-year deal, including a $3.2 million signing bonus, that the Los Angeles Rams gave the draft's No. 3 pick, Sean Gilbert. The Packers reportedly have offered $5.7 million over five years.
