UI to hold graduation ceremonies Aug. 7

The UI will hold summer commencement ceremonies Friday, Aug. 7, at Hancher Auditorium. Graduate and bachelor's degrees will be awarded to 930 students during ceremonies held at 2 p.m. for graduate students in the Graduate College and at 8 p.m. for undergraduates in liberal arts and the colleges of business, engineering and education.

UI Vice President Peter Nathan will deliver the traditional charge to students at both ceremonies. Pamela Jo Lothspeich of Fargo, N.D., an Asian languages and literature major, will deliver the undergraduate student response.

Commencement ceremonies are open to the public.

Weston named UI director of International and Comparative Legal Studies

Burns Weston, Bessie Dutton Professor of Law at the UI, has been named director of International and Comparative Legal Studies at the UI. Weston began his duties July 1.

Weston, an internationally known scholar, lecturer and writer on global issues, has served the past two years as chairman of the faculty committee that oversees the program. He joined the UI faculty in 1966.

In making the announcement of Weston's appointment, N. William Hines, dean of the College of Law, noted the recent growth of the international law program at the UI.

Five killed when bus burst into flames

VERNON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A chartered bus heading for an amusement park Sunday slammed into a car and burst into flames, killing at least five people and injuring 36 others, authorities said.

The bus apparently lost brake power on a two-lane road, said police Capt. George Dolak. The bus hit the car, then overturned, crashed into another car and went up in flames, he said.

Ice cream company helps Harlem homeless

NEW YORK (AP) — Harlem, meet Ben & Jerry's.

The self-described socially progressive ice cream company with a dairy cow mascot and unusual flavors made its inner-city debut Saturday with a new shop in a struggling Harlem business district.

It's a joint venture of Ben & Jerry's Homemade Inc. and HARK-homes, a shelter and community center for homeless men founded by local businessman Joe Holland.

Seventy-five percent of the shop's profits will go to HARK-homes and most of the 10 part- and full-time jobs will be filled by homeless people, Holland said.

Iraq concedes to search of ministry

Victoria Graham
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — A U.N. official said Sunday that Iraq had agreed to permit weapons inspectors to search the Agriculture Ministry in Baghdad, Iraq, ending a three-week standoff that had threatened to explode into war.

Iraq's U.N. ambassador had been the first to announce an agreement, although hours before in Baghdad, President Saddam Hussein had said the "mother of all battles" he promised during the Persian Gulf War was not over.

It appeared his government had backed down in the face of veiled U.S. threats. President Bush expressed satisfaction that Iraq had agreed to let inspectors into the ministry, but said he remained concerned about Saddam's intransigence in other areas.

Rolf Ekeus, head of the U.N. commission that is eliminating Iraq's terror weapons under the terms of the gulf war cease-fire, said the threat of force "put an element of reality" into negotiations with Iraq.

But the United Nations also compromised, reorganizing the inspection team, so that it is overwhelmingly European, and keeping American experts outside the ministry.

The agreement "means the Special Commission will conduct a full inspection of the building of the Ministry of Agriculture, as previously designated for inspection," Ekeus told reporters.

The United Nations says its inspectors should have full access to all sites in Iraq under the cease-fire, which demands that Iraq destroy all of its nuclear and chemical weapons.

U.N. inspectors say they believe material on ballistic missile, chemical, biological and nuclear programs are hidden in Iraq's Agriculture Ministry. Iraq denies this, and had said U.N. insistence on going in was a violation of its sovereignty.

Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari said Sunday's agreement ensured "full respect for Iraqi sovereignty and national security."

Ekeus said the inspection would take place Tuesday and that he would go to Baghdad to meet with Iraqi officials to discuss their government's obligations.

Ekeus was to leave for London, England, Sunday evening, arriving in Baghdad Tuesday.

Bush said Saddam "caved in after a lot of bluster," but that his "violation continues in other important areas."

"The international community cannot tolerate continued Iraqi defiance of the United Nations and the rule of law. There is too much at stake for the U.N., the region and the world," Bush told reporters after returning to the White House from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

Although Iraq agreed to the cease-fire ending the war that forced it to reverse its invasion of Kuwait, it repeatedly has clashed with the United Nations over the terms, and demanded that the U.N. resolutions be annulled.

Iraq also has maintained a virtual

Eagleburger says Baker will stay at post

W. Dale Nelson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — James Baker will remain secretary of state "for some time to come" and reports that he will step aside to help with President Bush's campaign are nonsense, the State Department's No. 2 official said Sunday.

"I will wager you that, for some time to come, I will be the deputy secretary of state and Jim Baker will be the secretary," Lawrence Eagleburger said on the ABC-TV program "This Week With David Brinkley."

When a questioner suggested the time period could mean three weeks, approximately the time until the Republican National Convention, Eagleburger shot back, "A lot longer than that."

He said it was "at least highly possible" that Baker would not be moving to the campaign as reported.

"I happen to believe that Jim Baker will stay as secretary of state for some long period of time to come, and the Middle East is one obvious reason for that," Eagleburger said.

"All of this speculation, which Jim has himself tried to put to rest on this trip, I think is a bunch of nonsense," he said.

Bush, asked about Eagleburger's remarks after returning to the White House from a Camp David weekend, said, "I have no comments on that subject."

Baker was returning Sunday night from a trip to the Middle East. Eagleburger was acting secretary in his absence.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin is scheduled to visit Washington shortly before the GOP convention, and Eagleburger said there are also meetings on the Middle East scheduled for late August in Washington.

Bush's campaign press secretary, Torie Clarke, could not be reached for comment on Eagleburger's remarks.

The New York Times reported last week that Baker would resign shortly after the Rabin visit to run the president's re-election campaign. The newspaper quoted Bush administration officials and Republican political strategists.

Asked whether he meant that Baker would take a leave of absence instead of resigning, as indicated in earlier reports, Eagleburger said, "No, no, no, no, no. I am saying that . . . all of this speculation about his departing within the next week or two weeks or three weeks, I think, is nonsense."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., asked on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation" whether he would like to see Baker join the campaign, replied: "From the standpoint of the campaign, I would like for him to take charge. I think that would be very important to the president's political success. From the standpoint of the country at this particular moment, I'm glad he's secretary of state."

IC may see shakeup in bus travel

Eric Detwiler
The Daily Iowan

UI students and Iowa City residents using buslines to travel could be in for a major inconvenience. Iowa City is attempting to evict Bobby Rerox, operator of the Union Bus Depot of Iowa City, 404 E. College St., as a result of unpaid rent and damages to the property.

Rerox refused to comment Sunday on the impending eviction movement.

As early as Wednesday, Iowa City could be without an intercity bus service coming just as a large portion of students are in transition between summer and fall sessions. According to City Manager Stephen Atkins, the rent owed by Rerox is a substantial amount.

"It's about $5,000 in back rent, and the rent has not been paid over a period of about six months," Atkins said.

Although rent is important in prompting the attempted eviction, Atkins says the condition of the property was the main concern.

"This fellow has been leasing the building for several years," Atkins said. "The back rent was one issue but more important has been the substantial property damage. Because of damages to the property we feel we have to get him out of there."

Atkins says around $5,000 to $7,000 in damages has accumulated during Rerox's rental of the building. He added that as part of the lease, Rerox is responsible for the condition of the facility.

"The roofing has not been maintained," Atkins said. "You have to take that damage into account with the back rent and the value of the property. The value of the building has been appraised at $27,000."

The hearing for eviction is scheduled for Wednesday and what immediate effect this will have on bus services is unknown.

Prime Minister and Chairman of the Liberal Democratic Party Kiichi Miyazawa, left, paints an eye of a "daruma" doll at the LDP headquarters in Tokyo, Japan, Sunday night as a traditional sign of victory after his party won the elections. The LDP has governed Japan since the 1950s.

Record low turnout at elections

Elaine Kurtenbach
Associated Press

TOKYO, Japan — The conservatives who have governed Japan since the 1950s trounced the opposition once again Sunday in a nationwide parliamentary election, but jaded voters stayed away in record numbers.

Results compiled by television networks showed Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa's Liberal Democratic Party winning a majority of the 127 seats up for election in Parliament's 252-seat upper house.

Only 44 percent of Japan's 93.7 million eligible voters had cast ballots by 5:30 p.m., half an hour before polling ended, the government reported. The public Japan Broadcasting Corp. predicted the final turnout would be 48 percent, down from the previous low of 57 percent set in 1983.

Some pundits blamed the muggy, 90-degree weather. Others blamed summer vacation travel and the opening ceremony of the Olympics. But many voters also apparently stayed away out of disgust with the scandal-plagued political system, or out of conviction that the governing party remains invincible.

Those who did vote chose overwhelmingly to stay with the Liberal Democrats.

Political analysts said the shaky economy would benefit the Liberal Democrats because voters don't want untested opposition parties to lead the country during hard times.

"Whenever there is (economic) instability, people will vote for a party that can rule," said Ichiro Ozawa, a top Liberal Democratic lawmaker.

Japan's stock and real estate markets are sagging, and many companies have announced dips in profits. Few expect the government to reach its goal of 3.5 percent growth this year.

Final, official election results were not expected until Monday. By 11 p.m., the Japan Broadcasting Corp. said the Liberal Democrats won 67 of the 119 seats for which it had declared results. Other networks carried similar results.

As soon as victory was certain, a weary but smiling Miyazawa upheld tradition and triumphantly painted a black dot in the blank eye of a huge papier-mâché "daruma" doll, signaling he had achieved his goal.

Political analysts have said a Liberal Democratic victory would boost Miyazawa's efforts to expand Japan's international role and help stabilize his position among the party power brokers he depends on for support.

Miyazawa was hit with a series of embarrassing scandals and legislative setbacks shortly after he assumed office Nov. 5.

ANNUAL EVENT

Host towns pull out all stops for RAGBRAI

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

As thousands of cyclists flooded the small town of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, Friday, two women stood on a curb in grass skirts, white sailor hats and Hawaiian leis to welcome them.

The students of Iowa Wesleyan College were helping their school celebrate its 150th anniversary by hosting a beach party for participants in RAGBRAI-XX.

Martha Potts-Bell, director of public relations, said the college had been working with community groups since February to plan events for the 20th Register's Annual Great Bicycle Ride Across Iowa.

"This is a really good opportunity to showcase what we've got," Potts-Bell said.

Cyclists started their sixth day in Oskaloosa, Iowa, riding 87 miles to Mt. Pleasant. Many residents relaxed on their front yards to watch the cyclists go by.

"Everybody's ready to cut loose and have a good time," Potts-Bell said.

Cyclist Kathleen Ross, of Barrington,

Ill., said she is partial to the smaller towns like Mt. Pleasant, which has a population of about 8,000.

"Some of the houses here are gorgeous," said Ross, who was on her second RAGBRAI and brought her 14-year-old nephew. "Iowa looks great right now. It looks just like Ireland."

She added that the cloudy, cooler tape the event.

Sheri Seggerman, of Iowa City, said RAGBRAI renews her faith in humanity.

"People are always willing to help you. If someone loses a billfold, it's always returned. . . Rural people have stands with pies and cinnamon rolls," said Seggerman, who has been on RAGBRAI seven times and has met a lot of friends said that beer was still readily available.

"Beer drinking in this situation really doesn't agree with me," he said. "Some people party all night — I don't know how they do it."

Ross added that Miller Brewing Co. was one of RAGBRAI's official sponsors and that every night a beer tent was set up. Indeed, a section of downtown Mt. Pleasant was cordoned off for a 21-only beer garden.

Seggerman said that RAGBRAI officials told overnight host-towns to enforce the open container law, and it was rumored that on the first night in Glenwood, Iowa, 140 people were arrested.

Though Seggerman had a great time, she said the new conservatism bothered her.

"Some things are sacred to me and RAGBRAI is one of them," she said.

Potts-Bell said many activities were planned for the evening in Mt. Pleasant ranging from water balloon volleyball to a show choir performance to a talent show for the cyclists.

The weeklong, 494-mile RAGBRAI ended Saturday in Keokuk, Iowa.

"Some things are sacred to me and RAGBRAI is one of them."

Sheri Seggerman, RAGBRAI participant

weather was perfect.

"It's really exciting to be part of a mob of bicycles," she said. "All you have to do for a week is ride your bike and take care of your equipment. . . People are delighted to see us."

Some porches had signs welcoming the cyclists and several children were operating curbside lemonade stands. One couple even had a video camera out on their lawn to through it. "And if I don't do it, I feel like my body is going to fall apart."

Greg Porter, of Calendar, Iowa, has ridden in RAGBRAI the last three years.

"I do it for fun, enjoyment and relaxation, if you can believe that," he said.

Although RAGBRAI officials have supposedly tried to downplay alcohol consumption this year, Porter

TRAVEL

Journeyers relate trials, adventures of bus rides

UI students tell of their varied experiences while traveling on buses — from making friends to trying to avoid cockroaches.

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

To some, it is the ultimate nightmare. To others, it's just a hassle. But for some people, it's the only means of transportation they know.

When you're low on cash and you don't have a car, buses may be your only option.

Beware, says Beth Barrett, riding the bus can be an experience that will truly test your soul.

"You stop in every little town," said the UI graduate student. "It makes a three-hour journey into a six-hour one."

Barrett said she takes the bus to and from Chicago, Ill., five or six times a year, and luckily she has never had any horrible experiences.

Dan Collins wishes he could say the same. The UI graduate student thinks you have to be kind of crazy to ride the bus. Though he hasn't had to ride it too often, the last time convinced him to avoid bus rides altogether.

Seven years ago, Collins was riding the bus at night reading a Russian novel while everybody else was sleeping.

"I felt something on my leg, so I reached down to swipe it off and I realized it was a cockroach," he said. As he looked around he noticed that roaches were literally pouring out of the ventilator strips on the side of the bus.

"They were all over," Collins said. "I was absolutely repelled."

Though Collins sat crouched in a ball on his seat, he said he kept involuntarily swiping himself and imagining roaches crawling on the back of his neck. He didn't sleep a wink.

"I didn't complain. All I wanted to do was get the hell out of there," he said. To make matters worse, he said, he found two roaches in his carryon bag after arriving home.

UI freshman Mayasa Alshaibi didn't experience anything so horrifying, but she did meet a lot of strange people.

"One lady's arm was bleeding from a fight. I asked her what was wrong and she said a girl had bitten her in a bar," she said.

Alshaibi said she had an uptight driver who threatened to throw those people who were caught smoking or drinking alcohol off the bus even in the middle of nowhere.

Though Alshaibi didn't witness such an episode, Barrett did.

"It was really frightening," said Barrett, who told of a passenger who had been warned against smoking and then had been caught in the bathroom. "I thought, 'God, I hope I don't do anything wrong.' It was kind of unnerving."

Barrett has encountered some pleasant people on the bus. She described one particular man who had his head and eyebrows shaved and had a spider web tattooed on one side of his head.

"He bummed a cigarette from me and he turned out to be a really nice guy," Barrett said. "He got off the bus with me and gave me a hug goodbye. My mother almost dropped dead."

She did say that one time the guy behind her insisted on telling her about all the mental institutions he'd been in, but for the most part, she said bus rides are just long and boring.

Though she's only spent two hours on a bus, UI sophomore Wendy Stevenson will never do it again.

"It's convenient and cheap for students, and you don't have to rely on people for a ride, but you pay for it with time and effort," Stevenson said. First the bus broke down and then while it was raining, she said the windshield wipers broke and the bus had to stop. "It was just the biggest hassle."

Alshaibi said she would only do it again if she were financially desperate, and she certainly wouldn't look forward to it. But she advises future riders to be open to anything, because anything is possible.

"I was more open and outgoing, and had a lot more fun. It makes the miles go faster," she said. She suggested bringing reading material and a Walkman, as well as a blanket and a pillow.

Collins said people should bring their own food and not use the bathrooms on the bus.

"But there's really nothing that's going to prepare you for the strangeness that goes down," he said.

Disease-carrying mosquitoes reported close to Iowa

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Asian tiger mosquito, a potentially dangerous carrier of disease, has been detected in nearby states, health experts report.

"You can bet that it's only a matter of time" before it arrives in Iowa, said Russ Currier, an environmental epidemiologist at the state Department of Health.

The mosquito with a fondness for tire dumps was first spotted in the United States in 1985 and has been reported in 20 states, including Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota and Missouri.

But it has yet to show up in any of the eight mosquito traps checked by Iowa State University's Medical Entomology Laboratory, researchers report.

Health officials are worried about the tiger mosquito because it has been linked to Eastern equine encephalitis, a rare but often fatal form of brain disease.

An article in the journal Science reported that investigators found the encephalitis virus in tiger mosquitos taken from a Florida tire dump but did not know if it was an isolated incident.

Health officials say the mosquito is especially dangerous because it lives closer to people than other disease-carrying mosquitos.

UI COLLEGE OF MEDICINE

Towns blame school for lack of drs.

Associated Press
IOWA CITY — Most graduates from the UI College of Medicine choose specialties at a time when small Iowa towns are begging for primary-care physicians.
 Critics say the school steers students away from careers in primary care. School officials disagree and say they're not to blame for the shortage of doctors in rural areas.
 Rep. Dorothy Carpenter, R-West Des Moines, said the school has a well-deserved reputation in the specialties but that it needs to shift its focus.
 "Its goal is to be one of the top-notch medical research and teaching schools in the nation, but we need primary-care doctors — internists, pediatricians and general surgeons," she said.
 Cresco, Iowa, family physician Dr. Clint MacKinney said the school has a bias against family practitioners.
 He said a UI medical student told him she was discouraged from her goal of entering family practice. He reported she put it this way: "If you're always wanting a blue car and you spend four years where everyone drives a red car, tells you to drive a red car and everybody you respect drives a red car, are you going to buy a blue car?"

 MacKinney said that long hours, insurance hassles and lower compensation drive doctors away from family practices. He said that Cresco recently lost two doctors,

"... No school policy is designed to discourage students from family practice or any other primary care."

Dr. Paul Seebomh,
 UI medical school consultant leaving four. "We were swamped when we had six. We're screaming for doctors out here."

 The UI has a long-standing program to recruit doctors for rural areas. Roger Tracey, director of the college's community programs, said 516 UI medical graduates have chosen primary care since 1987, which includes family practice, internal medicine and pediatrics.

Of the 1,154 UI medical school graduates from 1986 through 1992, 239 chose family practice. That's 20.7 percent, second highest among the nation's largest medical schools. At Minnesota, it was 21.5 percent (370 of 1,719). The others range from 14 percent to 19.5 percent in family practice.

Dr. Paul Pomrehn, associate dean for student affairs, said a survey of fourth-year students showed "almost to a person" that they had not been discouraged from careers in family practice. "Students come here to solidify their goals" and aren't steered one way or another, he said.

Dr. Paul Seebomh, a UI medical school consultant, agreed.
 "There are 450 or so faculty, and we can't vouch for what anybody has said to a given student, but no school policy is designed to discourage students from family practice or any other primary care," he said.

A spokeswoman for the University of Osteopathic Medicine and Health Science in Des Moines said she does not have any data on what percentage of students there enter family practice.

RAGWEED SEASON

UI researchers seek participants for study of allergy medications

Kelly Hassenstab
 The Daily Iowan

Researchers at the UI College of Medicine are looking for people who suffer from ragweed allergies to participate in a study of two new medications.

The study will test a new nasal steroid spray and a new antihistamine/decongestant which are not yet available on the market. The study will be conducted during mid-August, the height of ragweed allergy season.

Dr. Thomas Casale, UI associate professor of internal medicine and co-principal investigator in the study, said the drugs have been studied previously, but more testing needs to be done before approval by the Food and Drug Administration.

Participants in the study must be between the ages of 18 and 65 and must be of good general health. All will be screened to verify ragweed allergy. Frequent visits to the UI allergy clinic are required and participants must keep a diary of their symptoms.

Previous ragweed allergy studies have drawn a large number of volunteers, Casale said.

"Iowa is the center of the ragweed-growing universe," Casale said. "All the farm areas are a very good environment. Iowa offers fertile ground for testing drugs to treat the allergy. We usually never have a shortage of volunteers."
 Ragweed allergy is a very common affliction. Close to 20 percent of the population is allergic to the plant and 10 percent suffer significant symptoms.

Ragweed pollinates during late summer, sending more than 250,000 tons of microscopic pollen grains into the wind, Casale said.

The allergic reaction is caused by the body's immune system over-reacting to the otherwise harmless pollen grains which are inhaled, producing antibodies that cause itchy eyes, runny nose and scratchy throat.

People interested in participating in the study can contact Project Coordinator Arlene Donnelly at 356-2135 or Dr. Barbara Muller, co-principal investigator, at 356-3694.

Century-old Indian bones unearthed

Associated Press

WEST DES MOINES — The bones and teeth uncovered at a West Des Moines construction site have been identified as the remains of at least four Indians buried more than 100 years ago.

Teeth and parts of an elbow, jaw and leg bones were found Tuesday. The largest bone was 6 to 7 inches long, said Francis Garrity, a medical examiner.

He said the remains were consistent with discoveries that are 100 to 200 years old.

Garrity said the remains are from at least two elderly people and other adults at least 20 years old. But no artifacts were found that would help scientists identify the tribe.

Bill Green, a state archaeologist, said the remains will be interred in a traditional ritual at one of four confidential Indian burial sites in Iowa.

Six years ago, Green had led a team of archaeologists searching for Indian remains at the same site, during road construction on Grand Avenue west of Interstate 35. At that time, a test hole was dug within two feet of the burial site unearthed last week.

State law requires the bones to be thoroughly examined before reburial.

Construction work is continuing at the site, except for the area near where the remains were found.

Union deplures song, wants stock sold

Associated Press

DES MOINES — In a protest of the rap song "Cop Killer," the leader of Iowa's largest public employees union wants the state's main pension fund to sell its stock in Time Warner Inc.

"We don't have to put our hard-earned money into those kinds of lyrics," said Don McKee of Council 61 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

But Betsy Sanders, chief financial officer of the Iowa Public Employees Retirement System, said it is unlikely the 184,000 shares of Time Warner would be sold as a result of the controversy over the record by rap star Ice-T and his band, Body Count.

The $6.3 billion fund invests for the pensions of 200,000 active and retired employees of cities, counties, schools and state agencies.

McKee, whose union members include some state university security officers and enforcement officers for the Iowa Department of Transportation, said Friday that he respects free-speech rights of performers. But he added that does not mean public employees should provide financial support for attacks on police.

any restrictions on our managers. We have hired them because of their expertise, and they have a fiduciary responsibility," he said.

Gov. Terry Branstad, who is no fan of Ice-T's record, still is not expected to intervene, said a spokesman, Richard Vohs.

"He wants to avoid any apparent conflict of interest or political influence in their decisions," Vohs said. "At the same time, he thinks the message of that particular record is abhorrent."

The lyrics include, "I'm 'bout to dust some cops off" and "Die, pig, die."

Mike Fitzgerald, the state treasurer, said pension funds representing Iowa judges and Iowa State Patrol troopers do not have any Time Warner investments.

Fitzgerald also said the only restriction is a state law that affects investments in companies doing business in South Africa. That law bars investments in any such company that lacks standards to ensure fair treatment for all employees in South Africa.

Sanders said the retirement fund's board has not discussed the record nor its investment in Time Warner and does not expect any stock sale because of the controversy.

Boy discovers 7-legged frog in Des Moines park

According to the Science Center of Iowa, frogs and other amphibians can regenerate cut limbs.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Michael Leonetti's new pet would make a gourmet's mouth water.

The 11-year-old Des Moines boy found a frog with seven legs.

The pet, yet to be named, was discovered last Monday at the Des Moines Water Works Park while Leonetti was fishing for tadpoles with a friend.

"I didn't believe him," recalls the boy's mother, Terri Leonetti. "I said there's no way."

A call to the Science Center of Iowa disclosed frogs and some other amphibians are able to reproduce limbs that are cut.

Bonnie Callan, the life science curator at the center, said she believes one of the legs of the frog was cut as it developed from a tadpole. "As it was growing, each part of the leg-forming tissue that was slashed would grow into its own leg," she said.

Callan, who said she had never before seen a frog with as many as seven legs, wants to display Michael Leonetti's pet this week.

Meantime, the frog is in a fish bowl, ignoring the dead flies its keeper has collected. Callan said frogs prefer their flies alive.

1993 CHRYSLER

CONCORDE

CAB-FORWARD DESIGN

Concorde's futuristic appearance begins with its cab-forward design featuring a "wheels-to-the-corners" stance that gives it an aggressive, road-worthy appearance while providing a longer wheelbase (113 inches) and a wider track (62 inches) for a smoother ride and agile handling characteristics. Cab-forward design's benefits are immediately noticeable with Concorde's unusually wide rear doors, making entry and exit easy and enjoyable.

STANDARD 4-WHEEL ANTILOCK DISC BRAKES

Hydraulic pressure is selectively modulated. If only one front brake starts to lock, only the pressure to that brake is reduced. If either rear brake starts to lock, pressure to both rear wheels is reduced. The single hydraulic supply has a fluid level sensor to trigger BRAKE or ABS warning lights on the instrument panel.

AVAILABLE INTEGRATED FOLD-AWAY CHILD SEAT

offers a five-point belt system for use with toddlers.

OCCUPANT PROTECTION

The Concorde is the first Chrysler car with dual front occupant air bag restraint systems. Driver and front passenger-side air bags are standard on Concorde. The instrument panel's lower surface also functions as a knee blocker in an accident and prevents excessive forward motion of the lower torso. Vehicle structure is specially tuned to optimize its performance with the air bag sensor system which will deploy at 14-mph barrier frontal impact speed and above. Dual capacitors store electricity to deploy the air bags even if the vehicle's power system fails. These safeguards also protect the air bags' system from unwarranted deployment below 10 mph.

REAR-SEAT HEAT/AIR CONDITIONING DUCTS

For the comfort of the rear-seat passengers, the Concorde features four rear heater/conditioning ducts integral to the center console. These four ducts include two directable outlet vents to help direct air to the desired locations, two ducts mounted at floor level to warm rear-seat passengers' feet. The Concorde is the first Chrysler passenger car equipped with rear-seat heat and air conditioning ducts. Standard on Concorde.

DR. JACK KEVORKIAN

Murder or euthanasia?

Last week Dr. Jack Kevorkian, a man who is quickly becoming recognized by titles such as "the suicide doctor," found murder charges against him dropped in Michigan. Dr. Kevorkian's near-infamy is the result of his willingness to assist certain terminally ill patients in the ending of their pain through the ending of their lives. This has been referred to as "physician-assisted suicide" by Dr. Kevorkian and others.

The object of Dr. Kevorkian's work in euthanasia has been to allow those who are afflicted with intractable pain and those who are terminally ill the choice of whether to continue their existence; it is to grant them a choice between the fates of inescapable torture or rest.

This not an easy decision for either the patients or their families and friends to make. But sometimes, as difficult to accept as it may be for those of us not directly affected by terminal illness or inescapable, unmanageable pain, dying may become the better alternative to an existence made up of 24 hours a day of torture.

Sometimes euthanasia is the only humane answer. That decision may only be made by the affected individual, and in cases where the individual cannot end his or her own life without assistance and where the patient has requested this alternative, the only humane action would be to empower that person by making a means of ending that life available to them.

Dr. Jack Kevorkian's physician-assisted suicide does exactly that. It allows the patient, the victim of incurable, terminal illness and/or pain, to trigger a mechanism designed by Kevorkian, which will end that patient's life painlessly. While prosecutors in Michigan refuse to see this side of the argument, the courts have thus far sided with Dr. Kevorkian, throwing out first-degree murder charges against him.

The real debate is focused upon the interpretation of precisely how the ending of a life with the use of Dr. Kevorkian's device is defined. Is he committing murder by providing this means of suicide for these patients? Or is he empowering those who have been disempowered by medical conditions? Is he simply making this choice available to them, as it is to those among the terminally afflicted who have not yet been rendered helpless by their circumstances?

If Kevorkian had activated the devices which brought about the ends of the lives of the terminally ill patients for whose deaths he was charged with murder then the debate could conceivably have become less clear — but the devices in question are tripped by the patient, not the physician. Whether or not one agrees with suicide as a means of ending incurable, biological suffering, the decision to end one's existence under these circumstances must remain in the hands of the affected individual, not in the hands of the state, and not in the hands of the patient's physician. And in these few, extreme cases, that is exactly what Jack Kevorkian's work has made possible.

U.S. government

To the Editor:

N. Botna's comments (DI, July 20) on John Lyon's editorial on the USS Vincennes (DI, July 6) have left me with a decidedly mixed reaction. Botna is correct in both his identification of the gang of dissemblers, toadies, profit-seekers and bottom-feeders who have ruled the country for so long as the "ruling criminals" and the assertion that the reality of U.S. imperialism is the main obstacle to justice for the Vincennes' victims. However, I find Botna's objections to Mr. Lyons' identification with his government and his sense of responsibility for the Vincennes incident both fatalistic and ineffectual.

N. Botna's assertion that the government of the United States is "theirs" rather than "ours" conveniently ignores the fact that said government was duly elected by the majority of Botna's neighbors, friends and fellow citizens, and thus, for good or ill, represents the will of a nation. Whether this is due to ignorance, apathy, or outright fraud is entirely beside the point. The fact remains that the basis for these actions was the consent of the majority of voting citizens.

Also beside the point is the question of whether or not N. Botna was part of that majority. It is especially incumbent on those of us who find ourselves in opposition to our government to register our dissent in any way possible, including, yes, letters to the editor, and to fight ignorance, apathy and fraud while we're at it. As a citizen of a world that has seen successful democratic actions in Europe and elsewhere, I find N. Botna's eschewing of the responsibilities of democracy both unforgivably slothful and every bit as dangerous as the actions of the "ruling criminals." Silence plus cynicism equals consent.

KIM PAINTER

What we don't admit can hurt us

Some years back, a fresh new approach to racial issues in America presented itself in the pages of Harper's magazine. The article, "I'm Black, You're White, Who's Innocent? Race and power in an era of blame," was authored by a professor of English at San Jose State University, Shelby Steele. A collection of Steele's essays for Harper's appears in the HarperCollins book "The Content of Our Character." It constitutes perhaps the most significant contribution yet made to our national discussion of racial politics.

Steele is not for the faint of heart. He has no respect for what he sees as the uneasy, guilt-ridden peace we've made with the notion of affirmative action. In the July 1992 issue of Harper's, he prods us to review America's passive slide into expedient adoption of collective entitlement.

"By the mid-Sixties, the democratic goal of integration was no longer enough to appease black anger. Suddenly for blacks there was a sense that far more was owed, that a huge bill was due. And for many whites there was also the feeling that some kind of repayment was truly in order. This was the moral logic that followed inevitably from the new consensus. But it led to an even simpler logic: If blacks had been oppressed collectively, that oppression would now be redressed by entitling them collectively. So here we were again, in the name of a thousand good intentions, falling away from the hard challenge of a democracy of individuals and embracing the principle of collective entitlement that had so corrupted the American ideal in the first place. Now this old sin would be applied in the name of uplift. And this made an easy sort of sense. If it was good enough for whites for three hundred years, why not let blacks have a little of it to get ahead? In the context of the Sixties — black outrage and white guilt — a principle we had just decided was evil for whites was redefined as a social good for blacks. And once the formula was in place for blacks, it could be applied to other groups with similar grievances. By the 1970s more than 60 percent of the American population — not only blacks but Hispanics, women, Asians — would come under the collective entitlement of affirmative action."

We have all heard people with ill intentions, people like David Duke, say similar things to rouse the rabble. Thus, our memory throws an internal warning switch as Steele presses us to think the unthinkable. He holds us to the arduous principles of equality on which this country was founded, while fully aware of the existence within the new country of a "much meaner reality." This was the reality of an America in which "the Founding Fathers collectively entitled themselves and banished all others to the edges and underside of American life." These are not the cheap shots of a subminimal intellect like David Duke.

Steele's challenge is bold. He urges us to cast aside the weapon of collective entitlement we have used against those who brandished and benefited from it at the country's founding. We had to stoop to pick up that weapon, Steele argues. The reach was far beneath us, and the nation has been engaged in a dehumanizing sham since the moment we bent to it. That the weapon effectively assuaged white guilt and was within easy reach at the time is scant comfort to any of us now, whether people of color or white.

Challenges such as Steele's do not go down well. He is asking the very best of people who have seen the very worst, and who have suffered greatly at its hands. But he seems to know what he is asking.

"I think it is time for those who seek identity and power through grievance groups to fashion identities apart from grievance, to grant themselves the widest range of freedom, and to assume responsibility for that freedom. Victimhood lasts only as long as it is accepted, and to exploit it for an empty sovereignty is to accept it. The New Sovereignty is ultimately about vanity. It is the narcissism of victims, and it brings only a negligible power at the exorbitant price of continued victimhood. And all the while integration remains the real work."

The point Steele makes with such precision is that allowing oneself to become dependent on the lifestyle of the victim is ultimately as degrading as any other form of dependency. It saps the vitality of those enslaved to it. Living as a perpetual victim constricts the imagination, until what was once a magnificent mixture of outrage and idealism becomes little more than the carping of a cheap moral bureaucrat who has long since forgotten what set him off in the first place. It is an ugly fate. Steele's precision and vigor in exposing it are called up in direct proportion to his anguish at seeing it lay so many of his contemporaries to waste.

Shelby Steele is a disconcerting man with a passion for examining the most painful questions that face this diverse democracy. He has entered the temple of white/black guilt and dependency and turned over the tables. Whether you view him as an iconoclast or a dangerous sycophant, you cannot discount him. He refuses to blame the victims of racism. But his essays are powered by the full pain of his perception that their stake in victimhood has diminished their horizons and ravaged untold human potential. Who among us will blame him for his pain?

Dances with couches and U-Haul trucks

There have been a few warnings in the papers, and if you've lived here long enough you know what's coming soon. Nevertheless, nothing can change the fact that doomsday is almost here. July 31, I mean. When Iowa City moves.

Actually, so far I haven't had it too bad. Just the normal share of bedlam, I guess, enough to make for an article when I'm probably about to move for the last time in this town.

Two years ago, I moved into the dorms. The official term is "residence hall," but since I was given the building's smallest room and told that I would share it with a roommate, I shall foreclose the usage of that overcomplimentary term here. The room got even smaller when I ordered the bunk beds separated before my roommate arrived. (Bunk beds, in both suitability for certain situations and overall appearance, are highly unadulterated, in my opinion.) With each bed touching the floor, the "aisle" between the two was less than a foot wide. If you don't believe me, go check out G10 in Hillcrest; the room is now a single.

It became a single when I transferred to a bigger room for the spring semester. The roommate and I were just about beginning to contemplate justifiable murder anyway. But the moving angle in all of this was remarkably easy, because I being a foreign student and airline restrictions being what they are, my bulk worth was what two suitcases and a carryon had been able to accommodate. As student after student arrived in a minivan carrying 18 family members including a golden retriever, plus seven racks of clothes, a stadium-size stereo system, personal condom dispensers and queen-size water beds, all I could do was amuse myself with the helter-skelter and think up theories about Midwestern wealth. Not to mention the prominence of the family supposedly on the verge of total disintegration in America, according to conservatives.

By the time summer of 1991 came down and sublet blues were upon me, I had amassed quite a collection of possessions myself. My good friend (and spring semester dorm roommate) Les and I faced the unenviable task of moving our stuff to a westside home in a single night; he had to be in Milwaukee the next morning. Our only means of transport was a matchbox-size Toyota Tercel '81, and even though he can't rival George Harrison's collection of dobros, Les has enough musical equipment to keep the surviving members of the Beatles busy. So it was no easy feat.

We did about 10 runs with that car, and with a few crates left to go around 3 a.m., barely made it to econofoods before starvation claimed our lives. Eating in the store, I joked lamely about how disastrous it would be if right then we locked ourselves out of the car. Ten minutes later outside Hillcrest, Les and I were asking each other how we could have been that dumb.

The police came. There were sympathetic sneers and signing of papers before the lock was expertly picked. I went to bed at 5 a.m. and slept like a log.

The next time we moved (August 1991) we rented a U-Haul truck. Everything was fine except that in the past months we'd gotten used to literally standing on the brakes to make the run-down Toyota stop; the same practice caused us to kiss the windshield of the truck a number of times and the stuff in the back to be disarranged enough to resemble goat's head soup.

Before we moved out of the summer sublet place, I had done some searching for furniture, which we would be in dire need of at our new apartment. The garage sales yielded little, so I took a walk near the garbage dumps of the apartment complex. Within a week's time I had gathered the following:

- A kitchen table with two chairs.
- A university-surplus armchair.
- A couch with a queen-size hide-a-bed.
- A papasan chair, with a bean bag for more comfortable seating.
- A chest containing bedsheets for the hide-a-bed, marked with the prestigious insignia "YSL."
- Two loudspeakers, that I now use as legs for my makeshift desk.

Again, one may theorize here about consumerism and waste in this society, but I'd rather not. I'm too busy to be analytical at now, and I've made good use of all that waste. As for this year, I believe I have accumulated enough wisdom to escape M-day unharmed; through careful planning and spreading out the moving activity over a time span, I can almost say I'm having fun.

Except for that couch. It's gotta be one of the heaviest in the world. When we moved it in last year, we made a vow that it would never be carried down those narrow steps by our hands. It served us extremely well, but unless somebody comes forward before July 31 wanting a free couch, I'm afraid we'll have to go at it with an ax.

Talk about waste. What a shame. Aziz Gökdemir's column appears on alternate Mondays on the Viewpoints Page.

CAMPAIGN '92

George 'Jr.' acts as Bush camp's troubleshooter

Rita Beamish
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — He has no campaign title. But his name is George W. Bush and when he talks, people at the Bush-Quayle campaign listen.

"Nobody blows off anything George Junior says," one Republican official says, speaking on condition of anonymity. But campaign aides are quick to dispel any notion they are merely pandering to the president's eldest son because of who he is.

They say he is a quick study, with astute political instincts that would merit attention anyway.

"He is the No. 1 troubleshooter, the No. 1 political antenna, the No. 1 confidant of his father, the No. 1 problem fixer," said Mary Matalin, a top Bush campaign political strategist who works closely with the younger Bush. "He sits in on whatever he wants to. ... He knows everything we're doing."

Bush's 46-year-old son — not officially a "Junior" because his name is George Walker Bush and his father is George Herbert Walker Bush — is considered his father's "eyes and ears" at the campaign.

Indeed, he was among those who helped to organize his father's re-election team, and many on the top campaign staff owe their positions at least in part to him.

Beyond that, "Junior," as he is known to the political operatives, is viewed as a strong political strategist in his own right.

"He knows people all over the country. He's got a good sense of what's going on out there. ... He functions just like the others who are the principal strategists," said Bush campaign adviser Charlie Black.

Feisty and energetic, the younger Bush's role has deepened since the 1988 campaign when he focused more on the campaign speaking circuit.

From his home in Dallas, Texas, where he is managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, he is in almost daily telephone contact with campaign officials in Washington, D.C. He visits Washington about once a month and is expected to come more often as the election nears.

Last month, he took a leave of absence from his job as director and consultant to Harken Energy Corp., trying to avoid any conflicts of interest with his campaign work. Critics already had suggested the firm had won foreign drilling rights due to Bush's political connections — an allegation that the son denies and that investigations have failed to substantiate.

GOP officials insist that the son's agenda, unlike many other political aspirants around Bush, is solely to advance the president's interests.

Campaign counselor Jim Pinkerton calls him "an effective advocate for his father's best interest."

He is said to offer advice on everything from strategy to personnel to state coalitions.

His closeness to the president makes him a sounding board for the campaign to get a reading on which way his father might lean on a given policy or strategy.

"If we're going down the wrong path, or the president would not like it, he'll say forget it, or drop it," and that advice is heeded, said one campaign official.

Bush's son was said to be one of the first Bush advisers to focus on the seriousness of Ross Perot's potential candidacy. He made clear he wanted Bush headquarters working on Perot background information at a time when the campaign was gearing toward all-out battle with Democrat Bill Clinton.

He stormed into town in April on a mission to review the White House and campaign operations amidst a spate of disarray reports. Campaign officials say accounts of that visit have been overstated, but do not deny he keeps tabs on their operations.

budget and selecting the prime minister.

The victory reversed a humiliating defeat for the Liberal Democrats three years ago, when they lost their upper-house majority for the first time because of voter anger over a new sales tax, and bribery and sex scandals involving top party officials.

This time, the Liberal Democrats could not have recaptured their overall majority — they lost too many seats in 1989 when the other half of the upper house was up for election.

blockade of Kurdish areas, despite U.N. Security Council demands that the Kurds be treated humanely following their failed rebellion. And Baghdad has rejected the findings of the U.N. commission that demarcated the border between Iraq and Kuwait following the Gulf war.

In the ministry dispute, Iraq had objected to inspectors from the United States and other countries that had taken part in the Gulf war. It said some of the inspectors were spies.

Ekeus said the nine-member team going in Tuesday would include six experts who would enter the building: two Germans, and one each from Finland, Switzerland, Sweden and Russia.

Three more experts — two Americans and one Russian — will be working outside to analyze documents or other materials team members bring out.

The two Americans were on the original team. But U.S. Army Maj. Karen Jansen, the original leader who left Baghdad last week, was not returning, sources said. The new leader will be Achim Biermann of Germany.

Ekeus denied that he bowed to pressure from Iraq and let Baghdad dictate the makeup of the team.

Ekeus said nothing about the minister's personal office being off-limits, as Iraq had suggested.

Ekeus repeated his concern that documents and materials had been removed, concealed or destroyed while inspectors were barred. But he said Iraq probably would not want to destroy some vital arms-related items. He did not elaborate.

The bus depot is also home for the Yellow Cab company. Gary Hughes, part-owner of Yellow Cab, has informally inquired about leasing the building but nothing has been determined as yet.

"I haven't heard yet what we're looking into," said Chuck Sinnard, a dispatcher for the cab company. "From what I know we're trying to retain the office here."

The court date is set for 1 p.m. Wednesday in Johnson County

Magistrate Court.

"It's tough to say what's next," Atkins said. "There's a lot of repair and we may have to make an adjustment. We've been monumentally patient with Mr. Rerox and he hasn't fulfilled his responsibilities."

first game of the first official Olympic baseball tournament.

The U.S. basketball team — starting Larry Bird, Magic Johnson, Michael Jordan, Patrick Ewing and Karl Malone — scored a 116-48 victory over Angola, which tied the score 7-7, then ran for cover. The Americans scored 46 of the next 47 points to lead 53-8.

"It would be interesting to see if the competition was there every night what this team could really do," coach Chuck Daly said. "It's a phenomenal team."

The only point for Angola during the U.S. run came after Charles Barkley was charged with a technical for throwing an elbow.

"He hit me and I hit him," Barkley said. "It's a ghetto thing. It's part of the physical play of the game."

Even so, Jordan warned that not only could this hurt America's image, "if he keeps doing things like that, they could kick him out of the Olympics."

At one point during its run, the U.S. team scored 31 straight points for a 38-7 lead. That's about the time Daly sent in the scrubs — Barkley, David Robinson, Chris Mullin, Clyde Drexler, Scottie Pippen and Christian Laettner. Even they couldn't hold down the score.

The 68-point winning margin was only four shy of the Olympic record set in 1956 when the United States beat Thailand 101-29. Barkley had 24 points, Malone 19.

Just 21 years old, Diebel has survived bouts with drugs and alcohol. He was thrown out of one prep school. He's been in several car accidents and sustained two broken wrists when he slipped on a railing and fell 20 feet to a pool deck in 1988. Now, he can forget about all that.

Diebel, of Chicago, was timed in 1 minute, 1.50 seconds, .10 off his own American record. The silver medal went to Norbert Rozsa of Hungary in 1:01.68, and Philip Rogers of Australia was third in 1:01.76.

He accepted his medal wearing a red-white-and blue bandana over his shaved head and three earrings in his left ear.

It was the lone victory for America in the pool, where it's powerful women's team had to settle for silver and bronze.

Jenny Thompson set an Olympic record in the preliminaries but lost to Zhuang Yong of China in the women's 100 freestyle final. And Summer Sanders won a bronze medal in the 400-meter individual medley behind Kristina Egerszegi of Hungary and Lin Li of China.

"I just choked big-time coming home. I don't know why," Thompson said.

All is not lost for them, however. Thompson and Sanders are entered in four more events apiece.

The Olympics started on a note of sorrow for the swimmers. The father of Ron Karnaugh, the world's best 200-meter individual medley swimmer, died of a heart attack at the opening ceremonies Saturday night.

A swim team spokesman said Karnaugh has decided to swim in his event Friday night, anyway.

Karnaugh's father, Peter, was 60. The family lived in Maplewood, N.J.

Zmeskal, the reigning world champion, fell while she was executing a back handspring on the balance beam early in her routine. She finished and was awarded a 9.35 out of a possible 10.

The Unified Team now leads the United States 197.507-197.007. Miller, however, took the individual lead from former world champion Svetlana Boguinskaia of the Unified Team, 39.636-39.625. Zmeskal trailed not only Miller among the U.S. women but also Betty Okino and Kerry Strug.

Zmeskal refused to be interviewed, but U.S. coach Bela Karolyi said she probably couldn't get into the top three Americans and thus would not be eligible for the all-around.

"She still has another day to go and could accumulate enough points, but it's remote," Karolyi said.

If the U.S. basketball players are called the Dream Team, then the American volleyball players should be called the Scream Team.

After the Americans rallied for a 15-8, 11-15, 10-15, 17-16, 16-14 victory, Japanese coach Seiji Oko protested that U.S. player Bob Samuelson should have been given a red card instead of another yellow card for yelling at an official.

A red card not only would have resulted in Samuelson's ejection but also would have given the Japanese a point. The incident occurred with the United States facing a Japanese match point in the fourth set.

U.S. and international volleyball officials will meet Monday.

"The game should have ended at that time, and we should have won," Oko said. "We prepared a lot for these Olympics, and this silly thing should not happen at the Olympics."

Griffin scored a decision over Fausto Mercedes of the Dominican Republic in the 106-pound division, and teammate Pepe Reilly, a 147-pounder, stopped Victor Baute of Spain with a flurry of punches in the third round.

"It's just great to get in the ring and get it over," said Griffin, a two-time world champion.

Michael Tucker hit a two-run homer and Jeff Alkire allowed one run on three hits while striking out 10 in 7½ innings for the U.S. baseball team. The Americans stole five bases and chased Spanish starter Felix Cano Riduejo after three innings.

In other games, Cuba returned after boycotting the last two games and beat a good Dominican Republic team 8-0, Taiwan defeated Italy 8-2, and Japan beat Puerto Rico 9-0.

Victor Mesa hit a two-run homer for the Cubans, then rubbed it in even more. "They should be very proud that they lost only 8-0," he said.

apiece in support of winning pitcher Kevin Tapani (11-6). Mark Guthrie pitched the final three innings for his third save.

Athletics 9, Blue Jays 1
OAKLAND, Calif. — Mark McGwire and Willie Wilson drove in two runs each Sunday as the Oakland Athletics ended Jack Morris's (12-4) eight-game winning streak.

Kelly Downs (2-2) and three relievers combined on a five-hitter as the A's won their third straight against the Blue Jays. Downs allowed one run on four hits in five innings, struck out seven and walked two.

Brewers 15, White Sox 4
MILWAUKEE — Darryl Hamilton hit a two-run homer in an eight-run eighth inning as the Milwaukee Brewers set a season high for runs.

Bill Wegman (9-7) allowed two runs and four hits in eight innings, struck out three and walked none.

Kirk McCaskill (6-8) was tagged for seven runs — five earned — and six hits in 4½ innings. Chicago has lost three straight and seven of 10.

Reds 7, Cardinals 6 (10)
ST. LOUIS — Hal Morris homered in the 10th inning and the Cincinnati

Reds, helped by Darnell Coles' five hits, rallied past the Cardinals.

Coles, who went 4 for 4 Saturday, set a career high by going 5 for 6. He became the first Reds player to get five hits in a game since Jeff Reed on May 1, 1989.

Rob Dibble (1-4) pitched two innings for the victory. He struck out five and gave up one hit.

Expos 4, Dodgers 3
MONTREAL — Delino DeShields doubled home the tying run with two outs and scored on Bret Barberie's bloop single as the Montreal Expos rallied for two runs in the ninth inning.

A crowd of 46,620, the largest at Olympic Stadium in more than four years, saw the Expos win for the fifth time in six games and stay two games behind Pittsburgh in the NL East. The Dodgers lost their fifth in a row and went 2-8 on their road trip.

Mel Rojas (3-1) was the winning pitcher.

Indians 2, Royals 1 (13)
CLEVELAND — Carlos Baerga homered off Steve Shifflett with two outs in the 13th inning.

Steve Olin (5-3) pitched a scoreless 13th as the Indians won for the sixth time in eight games. It was Cleveland's third final at-bat victory during the four-game series.

Baerga's 14th home run of the season dropped Shifflett to 1-3 and sent the Royals to their eighth loss in nine extra-inning games.

Pirates 5, Braves 4
ATLANTA — Atlanta's 13-game winning streak ended when Orlando Merced singled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning.

The Braves, who held off Pittsburgh 1-0 Saturday night on Otis Nixon's over-the-fence catch, seemed poised for another dramatic victory after pinch hitter Lonnie Smith's three-run homer in the eighth tied it at 4.

But the Pirates came back to win when Jeff King opened with a single off Mark Wohlers (0-2), took second on Don Slaught's sacrifice and scored on Merced's two-out single.

The Braves' winning streak matched the franchise record, accomplished when they won 13 in a row to start the 1982 season.

Rangers 6, Orioles 2
BALTIMORE — Nolan Ryan won his fifth consecutive decision for career victory No. 319, moving into sole possession of 12th place on the career win list.

Ryan (5-3), unbeaten in six starts since June 17, allowed two runs and four hits in seven innings, struck out five and walked two. He broke a tie on the victory list with Phil Niekro, and reached 100 strikeouts for the 23rd consecutive year, a major league record.

The 45-year-old Ryan is 5-0 with a 1.65 ERA over his last six starts, and has won five in a row for the first time since he won six straight from June 22-July 31, 1990. Floyd Bannister got one out in the eighth and Edwin Nuñez finished the five-hitter for his second save.

Phillies 7, Giants 2
PHILADELPHIA — Terry Mulholland overcame a first-pitch home run by Mike Felder and went on to finish for his seventh complete game of the season.

Mulholland (10-7) gave up seven hits, struck out eight and retired the final 13 batters in snapping his three-game losing streak. For the fifth time this season, he did not walk a batter.

Mariners 8, Yankees 5
SEATTLE — Kevin Mitchell homered twice and Randy Johnson (6-11) ended his eight-game losing streak.

Melido Perez (9-9) was pounded for seven runs and eight hits in 5½ innings.

TOUR de FRANCE

Indurain defends his Tour title

Terril Jones
Associated Press

PARIS — Miguel Indurain of Spain, cheered on by tens of thousands along France's most famous boulevard, pedaled his way Sunday to his second straight victory in the Tour de France. As Indurain, who had held the lead for the last nine days, made his way down the Champs Elysees, thousands of tourists and cycling fans as well as Spaniards waving flags from his homeland cheered him on.

The 28-year-old defending champion, from the Navarra region of Spain, finished Sunday's stage with the main pack of riders, slightly behind a few leaders who stayed ahead over the final laps.

His total time of 100 hours, 49 minutes, 30 seconds left him 4:35 ahead of Italian Claudio Chiappucci who was second overall. World champion Gianni Bugno, also of Italy, was third. Bugno was second last year, Chiappucci third, making this year's finish nearly identical.

But American Andy Hampsten finished fourth overall. It was a repeat of his finish in 1986, when he also finished fourth in his first Tour de France.

"It was easier than last year," Indurain said. "Since my first win, I've gained an enormous calm that keeps me cool in handling the stages and warding off the attacks of others. I'll be back next year, and I'll do the best I can to win once again."

Olaf Ludwig of Germany won Sunday's stage, the 21st in the grueling 2,479-mile road race, by overtaking his Panasonic teammate Vlachslav Ekimov of Russia in the final minutes. The riders covered 88 miles from La Defense, the high-rise suburb west of Paris, through towns west and southwest of the French capital before speeding 10 laps up and down the city's most famous boulevard.

Indurain started the Tour with a strong showing by winning the prologue July 4 in San Sebastian, Spain. A sprint specialist, he also won both individual time trials this year, bringing his consecutive time trial victories on the Tour to five.

U.S. OPEN

Inkster, Sheehan to settle verdict today

Bob Green
Associated Press

OAKMONT, Pa. — The magic number was two in the final round of the U.S. Women's Open.

Two good friends, Juli Inkster and Patty Sheehan, were marching up the 17th fairway on Sunday when the approach of a storm caused a 1-hour, 45-minute delay.

On their return, two shots separated them with two holes to play. Sheehan had to have two birdies to stay alive.

And she got them, rolling in clutch putts on the last two rain-soaked greens at Oakmont, catching Inkster with a 15-footer on the 18th, and setting up an 18-hole playoff on Monday.

"I've had my chances before and let them get away," said Sheehan, who blew a 9-shot lead in this event in 1990. "I just decided it was about time I showed some guts."

She did, coming back from the brink of extinction to push the weather-plagued tournament to a fifth day.

"She made two great putts," Inkster said. "My hat's off to her."

The two entered the final round in a tie at 2 under par. Each shot a 2-under 69 and finished regulation play at 4-under 280 on the longest, most difficult course the women have encountered.

It was a head-to-head struggle between Inkster and Sheehan, playing together in the final two some, throughout the rainy, stormy day.

No one else really got into contention.

Shutout gives U.S.' Koslowski sweet revenge

Stephan Nasstrom
Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Dennis Koslowski upset the defending champion in the 220-pound class as the U.S. Greco-Roman team got off to a perfect start Sunday in the Olympic wrestling preliminaries.

Koslowski, trying to become America's first two-time Olympic medalist in the Greco-Roman style, used a gut wrench move to post a 2-0 first-round victory over Poland's Andrzej Wronski.

Koslowski, 32, of St. Louis Park, Minn., had lost five bouts to Wronski, including two in European competitions earlier this year.

"I started asking myself, 'Maybe you like to lose to him. Maybe it doesn't bother you to lose,'" said Koslowski, a bronze medalist in the Seoul Olympics four years ago.

"But I felt like I had to dig a little bit deeper and make sure that I beat him this time."

In other first-round matches, Shawn Sheldon of Albany, N.Y., defeated Said Tango of Morocco 7-0 in the 114.5-pound class and Rodney Smith of Fort Benning, Ga., beat Pedro Villuela of Spain 6-1 at 149.5 pounds.

Second-round matches were scheduled Sunday night. The seven other weight classes begin later.

Koslowski's winning move came at the 3:01-minute mark, 38 seconds after Wronski had been called for being too passive by the referee.

"His long arms and legs make him so difficult to turn," Koslowski said. "He's got a very wide base. You can only use a low gut wrench when you're down on the hips."

A month ago, Koslowski strained his ribs on the move when wrestling Wronski in Poland.

Dowdall, McCarty steal show at Finkbine

Hawk makes most of playing with pros

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Win or lose, some golfers just can't get enough of the game.

Take, for instance, Sean McCarty. The soon-to-be sophomore Hawkeye golfer had just completed the final round of golf at Finkbine's second annual Ben Hogan Hawkeye Open, but that didn't mean he was through for the day.

"I gotta go play a club tournament today. I tee off probably around 3:15," the amateur West Branch native said.

By the time the popular local favorite had finished granting interviews and acknowledging well-wishers on his 1-over par two-day total of 143, McCarty had less than 20 minutes to pack up his clubs and head for his hometown. But he still had time to reflect on his experience of playing with the Ben Hogan professionals.

"It was really neat and fun to play with all these pros, and kind of soak up the atmosphere," McCarty said. "I had a good time at the tournament. Playing on a more experienced level really helps and hopefully, I learned a lot from that."

"I think Sean learned a tremendous amount this tournament," said Hawkeye coach and tournament director Lynn Blevins, whose own 73 on the first day missed the cut by two strokes.

"I was very happy to see him play well the first day. He didn't finish very good today but I tell ya what — Sean's the kind of kid that will learn a lot from this experience and it will make him a much better player. I just know that's the kind of person and player Sean is."

McCarty's first-round total of 2-under par 69 had him in contention for a possible victory heading into Sunday's final 18 holes (Saturday's second round was canceled because of rain), but a 3-over 74, while not too shabby, all but erased his hopes.

"I was hitting everything off to the right today," McCarty said. "I'm not disappointed at the way I played. I was a little nervous. I fell apart on the back side and just couldn't get back together."

"I was familiar with this course," he added, "so I wasn't as intimidated as I probably would have been if I had played on another course."

A big reason for that was probably McCarty's gallery, which granted the Hawkeye a contingent of fans that none of the pros could boast of.

"I wanted to put a good showing in for them," McCarty said. "Our West Branch community really supports us."

Sunday, McCarty picked up where he left off on Friday by going 1-under on the front nine. But bogeys on hole numbers 10, 12, 13 and 18, as well as a missed birdie putt on 11 that flirted with the edge of the cup, did him in.

"My putting was real bad. On number 11, I missed my birdie putt and numbers 12 and 13, I missed short ones. I thought I could have scored better than I did," McCarty said. "But hitting as bad as I was, I was probably lucky to get what I got."

What he got was a chance to see how he stacked up against stiffer competition than he normally finds during the Big Ten season. And, perhaps surprisingly, that meant not being given a pep talk by Coach Blevins.

"He was pretty much on his own," Blevins said. "I wanted as much as anything for this to be a learning experience for him, and then talk

Eagle putt carries Texan past leaders for tournament crown

For John Dowdall, a playoff to determine the winner of the second annual Ben Hogan Hawkeye Open was the last thing he wanted. But just in case, Dowdall was getting himself prepared.

"I was telling jokes to my caddy," the 32-year-old from Kingwood, Tex., said. "Can't say them in public, though."

Telling jokes was about the only thing the Ben Hogan professional had to hide from the public, however, as a missed par putt on the 18th green by Sacramento's Kevin Sutherland saved another hole of golf and gave Dowdall his first win of the year Sunday in front of an estimated 3,500 fans at Finkbine.

"My playoff record's terrible," said Dowdall, $25,000 richer as a result of his victory. "I'm about oh-for-everything. I'm happy to not have to go back to 18."

"I thought I'd two-putt it," Sutherland said. "It was a quicker putt than I thought. I hit every single shot coming down the stretch solid. I putted well all day Friday and today except for the last two holes, so, to blame my putting would be a mistake. Obviously, it's the reason I'm not in a playoff right now, but I made a lot of putts to get here."

"You never know what's going to happen," Dowdall said. "You just play the golf course and play your own game and hope for the best."

I've had a good year; hopefully, this will be the start of a big year."

Dowdall, who shot 8-under-par, 134, qualified for the Hawkeye Open last Monday by notching the cutoff point, a 69, at Pleasant Valley. He was three strokes behind Sutherland after Friday's first round, but after a birdie and an eagle on the sixth hole Sunday, the Hawkeye Open became a two-way race.

"The eagle I hit right in there about 20 feet (away from the pin) and I made the putt," Dowdall said. "The leaders weren't doing anything and that shot me up to 7-under right there. I think Sutherland was one back at the time and I said, 'Damn, one back, I'm probably in this thing again.'"

"He had a pretty hard putt," Dowdall said of Sutherland's fateful miss on 18. "He had to go up the hill and back down it. I really thought he was going to make a par putt. I was getting ready for a playoff."

Finishing in third, two shots off the pace, was Tom Pernice, Jr., while Brian Henninger, who is second on the Ben Hogan money list with over $115,000, finished in

Dream Team crushes Angola 116-48; Diebel swims to gold

BARCELONA, Spain — Look out, world. There's a basketball team on the loose. It's Team USA, the Big Mean Dream Machine, and it got America off to a rip-roaring, rollercoaster start at the Summer Olympics on Sunday.

It might be a good idea to keep an eye on Nelson Diebel, too.

The former two-pack-a-day smoker, who has the Olympic rings tattooed on his hip and sometimes wears a black leather warmup jacket to the pool, gave the United States its first gold medal, winning the 100-meter breaststroke in Olympic record time.

"I wasn't expected to make the team," Diebel said. "I used that to my advantage. I thought, 'I'll show them.'"

He's quite a piece of work. Speaking of which, that was quite a piece of work by Kim Zmeskal when she fell off the balance beam in the women's gymnastics team compulsories. Her bobble came just as the evening session opened, and it may cost her a spot in the all-around competition later.

At least her teammates, led by Shannon Miller, were able to keep the Americans in second place, just half a point behind the Unified Team going into Tuesday's optionals.

After the first day of medal competition, China led with four overall, including one gold with the upset of a favored American swimmer. The United States was second with three medals, one gold.

The U.S. men's volleyball team thought it was off-and-running in an attempt to win its third straight gold medal. It may be, but no one's sure now.

After the United States rallied to beat Japan, a Japanese protest was upheld, and the International Volleyball Federation will decide Monday what to do about it. Two American boxers, including world champion Eric Griffin, won their first-round matches, and the U.S. team beat Spain 4-1 in its

PRIME TIME LEAGUE

Lookingbill leads First National in PTL finale

David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

Sunday's marquee matchup in the last regular-season weekend of the Prime Time League paired the league's two best teams, Imprinted Sportswear/Airliner and First National Bank, in the grudge match of the season, and First National came away the undisputed winner by a 130-115 count.

First National brought a 12-2 record into the contest, while I.S./Airliner countered with a 10-4 mark. The teams had split their previous two meetings and in both games, Hawkeyes Chris Street (I.S./Airliner) and Wade Lookingbill (First National) provided the bulk of the offensive fireworks.

Sunday's shootout showed that little had changed from the past two games, with both players notching 43 points each, most of it coming against each other. Street grabbed 18 rebounds and Lookingbill had 10.

The game hardly began with the makings of a classic, as First National raced to a 27-7 lead in the opening minutes. Street got off to a slow start and had little help from his teammates, while Lookingbill had to contend with the absence of Iowa freshmen Kenyon Murray and Mon'ter Glasper.

After several minutes of back and forth scoring by both teams in the second half, I.S./Airliner actually took their first lead of the game at 80-79. It was short-lived however, and the burst of Iowa football player Willie Guy put to rest any thoughts of a First National fold.

Guy scored 30 points for the game, while ex-Hawkeye football player Dwight Sistrunk totaled 20 for I.S./Airliner.

Hurst gets hat trick in 1-0 win over Mets

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bruce Hurst shut out the Mets for the third time this season, scattering seven hits and getting game-ending help from center fielder Darrin Jackson, as the Padres beat the New York Mets, 1-0.

Hurst (10-6) matched the record for most shutouts against the Mets in one season, tying the accomplishment of Cincinnati's Gary Nolan in 1967. Hurst is 8-1 lifetime against the Mets, including eight straight victories.

The Mets threatened in the ninth inning when Bobby Bonilla led off with a single and pinch runner Daryl Boston was sacrificed to second. With two outs, Dave Magadan hit a long liner to the right-center field gap, but Jackson dove and caught it inches off the ground.

Angels 4, Tigers 3
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Von Hayes drove in three runs with a two-out single in the eighth inning.

Chuck Crim (5-3) pitched 2½ scoreless innings for California's third consecutive victory over Detroit and sixth in seven games this month. Joe Grahe got three outs for his eighth save.

Cubs 8, Astros 5
HOUSTON — The Chicago Cubs sent Houston off on its month-long road trip with a loss as Mike Harkey won his first major league game in nearly two years.

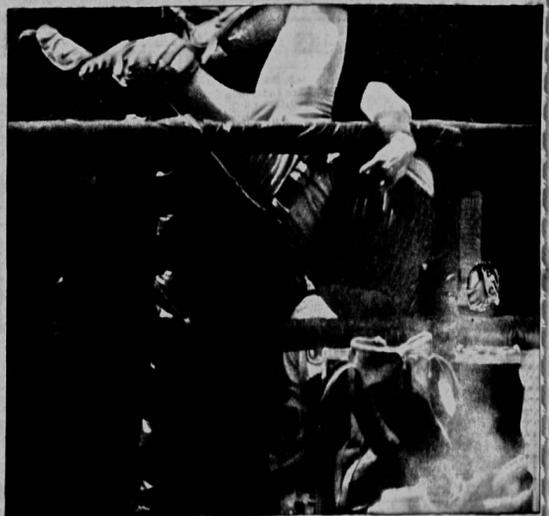

The Astros begin a 28-day, 26-game trip Monday night in Atlanta. They had to vacate the Astrodome so the building could hold the Republican convention, and will not play at home again until Aug. 25.

Houston's Eric Anthony hit two home runs in a game for the first time in his career and Jeff Bagwell added a three-run shot in the ninth for the Astros. Still, that was not enough to overcome Chicago's 16 hits, including a triple, double and single by Mark Grace.

Twins 8, Red Sox 2
BOSTON — American League batting leader Kirby Puckett drove in three runs and had three hits.

Brian Harper also had three hits, and Chuck Knoblauch, Shane Mack and Chili Davis had two hits
