Kevin Taylor refuses to pay cost of state audit

Former 11th Judicial District Attorney Kevin Taylor refused to pay the costs of an audit ordered by the state last year. A spokesman for the state auditor's office said Thursday that Taylor had not paid the $18,590 cost of the state audit, which was approved in May. Taylor said the investigation could have lasted 100 hours and that he had asked them for information, Taylor said. Taylor's lawyer, Scott Dunbar, said at the time the audit was ordered that Taylor had asked for more information. The case was presented in Des Moines last Thursday. Taylor said he would pay but not yet be willing to testify.

Democratic challenger Joe Lloyd said Iowa lawmakers had the big picture in mind when they passed a bill that would allow the sale of small quantities of farm pesticides over the counter.

Lloyd's Senate campaign is aimed at the baby boomers and their concerns about the use of new technology and the environment.

The bill, known as the "right to know" bill, would require farmers to register with the Environmental Protection Agency and get a permit before they could apply the pesticides.

Abortion Rights

The Quayle choice

The anti-abortion position of the White House is a subject which has been demonstrated repeatedly and firmly. The precise position of the vice president, however, appears to be less immovable. During an interview recently, Vice President Quayle was asked whether his 13-year-old daughter would have the choice to abort her pregnancy. The vice president indicated that she would have the choice to have an abortion.

Marilyn Quayle would sit by her own daughter down, and, regardless of the circumstances of the pregnancy, forbid her the choice to have an abortion. The younger Quayle would have no voice in the matter and no choice.

Marilyn Quayle has already made the decision: no choice means no decision. In this instance the individual in question, the daughter of the vice president, would have no choice, no instead over what would be a more propagandized process. Marilyn Quayle would kill her own daughter down, and, regardless of the circumstances of the pregnancy, forbid her the choice to have an abortion. The younger Quayle would have no voice in the matter and no choice.

But the exact opinion within the Quayle household was not confined to a single daughter. And oddly, this response was not even made by the vice president, but by one of the press. Mrs. Quayle informed the press that their daughter would carry a child to term. She indicated what this meant in terms of the decision she would make for her daughter, she replied, "We will make that decision together," which, of course, means that Mrs. Quayle was speaking for her own daughter and also in the end was the decision of her own father.

Men is an erotic. It's a sex. We have never liked that sort of sex. To make our con- amination of women by making explicit how men like to have sex with women and how women like to have sex with men. The more we talk about sex, the more we talk about sex with each other. The more we talk about sex, the more we talk about sex with each other.

But we can also rationalize, which leads us to think that we are not making a comparison on which sex is superior to the other. In this case, it is impossible to expect that any more free of great corruption, since we will never be able to make the comparison. The comparison is a kind of comparison that we do not make.

Croatian voters go to polls in independent election

Dusan Stanjevic

ZAGREB, Croatia—Voters in secessionist Croatia began voting yesterday for an assembly that will help determine the fate of a multibillion-dollar dispute with the United States over disintegrating Yugoslavia.

U.S. officials have said they are watching the election with concern because Croatia is a key ally in the war against terrorism.

The election is being held in a country that has been divided into two parts by a line running from Zagreb to the capital, Sarajevo.

Voters will choose 199 members of a new assembly that will replace the parliament of the former Yugoslav republic of Croatia. The assembly is expected to elect a president who will then appoint a prime minister.

The election is the first in the country since the breakup of Yugoslavia in 1991. Croatia declared independence from Yugoslavia in 1991 and has since been fighting a war of independence against Serbia and Montenegro.

The election is expected to be a test of the new government's ability to govern the country after nine years of war.

Satellite released too low in orbit

Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Achilles tendon received a new life in space, and so did three American airmen, who died in a plane crash in Korea during the Korean War.

The Air Force's Aries 201-99 distinguished itself Saturday when it released a satellite that orbits the earth at 13,150 feet. The satellite, named after the ancient Greek hero, is identical to one the Air Force plans to launch in January for the National Reconnaissance Office.

"This is a very successful flight," said Col. John W. Phillips, commander of the Air Force's 1st Space Operations Group. "It's a demonstration mission, and we're happy with the results.

The satellite is designed to test the ability of the Air Force to launch small satellites into orbit. The Air Force hopes to use this technology to launch satellites for other agencies, such as the National Reconnaissance Office, which is responsible for monitoring global activities.

The satellite is also designed to test the durability of materials used in space. The satellite's orbit is expected to last for about six months, during which time it will be subjected to various environmental conditions, such as solar radiation and temperature extremes.

The satellite's success will be judged by its ability to maintain its position in orbit and to perform its intended functions. If successful, this mission will pave the way for future satellite launches using the same technology.

BarceloLLIA, Spain - Jackie Joyner-Kersee and Tia Hidate made history Sunday at the Grand Prix of Icarus, leading the United States to a rousing 90-83 victory over France.

The United States, which hadn't won a match in nearly five months, went ahead 34-32 in the first half.

The French, who were on a 10-game winning streak, had been unbeaten by the United States since the 1988 Olympics.

The win was the United States' fifth in six games, including a win over France in the semifinals.

Former Hawkeye point guard Troy Kremer, who had 21 points, was also a key player, scoring nine in the third quarter.

The United States won its fifth straight match and moved into a first-place tie with France in the qualifying round for the World Cup.
