Kevin Taylor refuses to pay cost of state audit

Former UI official Kevin Taylor, who was dismissed after embezzling thousands of dollars in student funds, stated in court last week that he should not have to pay the $19,100 cost of the state audit. While the state contends that the $19,100 audit was a direct result of his embezzlement actions, Taylor said the investigators could have reduced their costs if they had asked him first for information. Taylor pleaded guilty on Sept. 5, 1991, to charges of first-degree theft and falsifying public documents. State auditors said $58,011.16 had been misappropriated from student organizations. The case was presented in District Court to Judge Van Zimmer during a restitution hearing for Taylor last Thursday. What amount Taylor will pay has yet to be decided by the judge.

Co-creator of Superman dies at 78

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Artist Joe Shuster, who teamed with writer Jerry Siegel in the 1930s to create the Superman comic-book hero, has died, a county coroner's official said Saturday. He was 78. Shuster died Thursday at his west Los Angeles home of congestive heart failure and hypertension, said county coroner's investigator L. Shelton. Shuster and Siegel sold their idea for the nearly invincible superhero to DC Comics in 1938. Soon thereafter, the adventures of the Man of Steel and his mild-mannered alter ego, reporter Clark Kent, rocketed to popularity with millions. Superman's success lifted Shuster out of poverty, as he and Siegel went to work producing the character's adventures. But they lost out on much of the millions of dollars the character made because they signed the rights away. And when the two sued for more money in 1947, they were fired. Superman, meanwhile, went on to continued success.

German skinheads raid homes in 6 cities

BERLIN, Germany (AP) — Neo-Nazi skinheads went on a rampage over the weekend, attacking foreigners or their homes in six German towns, police said Sunday. At least five people were hurt and 10 arrested. All but one of the attacks occurred in small east German towns near Berlin either late Saturday or early Sunday, police said. The other attack took place in the west German city of Nuremberg Saturday night. It was one of the worst weekends of neo-Nazi violence in Germany, which has seen a rise in right-wing assaults on the increasing number of refugees.

Grant eligibility broadened

The new law changes the formula used in calculating need, and makes more middle-income students eligible for aid.

Nora Connell
The Daily Iowan

The 1992 Higher-Education Reauthorization Act recently signed by President Bush extends a helping hand to middle-income students and families burdened with the high costs of college education. The new law raises limits on the size and availability of Pell Grants, makes all students eligible for low-interest Stafford Student Loans and removes consideration of home and farm equity from the eligibility formula for student aid. The act may prove to be an empty gesture, however. Many officials caution that this law promises far more than it can deliver. Others are concerned that the new benefits are made available at the expense of low-income students.

According to Mark Warner, UI director of student financial aid, students and families should be aware that there is a difference between what Congress authorizes and what it can fund.

"Given the budget situation, there is clearly going to be a difference in what the act is authorizing and what appropriations will allow," Warner said. "Someone has to find the money to support this."

Warner pointed to the higher-education act of 1986 which set the maximum Pell Grant award at $2,300 and scheduled it to be incrementally increased to $3,100 by 1991-92. Five years later, the maximum had only increased to $2,400 because of a lack of funds.

Not only does the new act increase the maximum Pell Grant from $2,400 to $3,700, it also expands student eligibility for the federally-funded grants. Many fear that in this situation, limited government funds will be spread too thinly.

Low-income students who now qualify for Pell Grants and college work-study programs may receive smaller aid awards as increasing numbers of middle-income students become eligible for them as well.

"This is a new way of analyzing need," Warner said. "You've now got more middle-income families qualifying for Pell Grants, but

Firefighters hampered by smoke, rough terrain

Steve Geissinger
Associated Press

MOCCASIN, Calif. — Their ranks bolstered by conquest over one blaze, firefighters on Sunday battled in steep terrain against flames that burned across more than 3,500 acres of brush and timber dried by six years of drought.

Smoke was so thick airplane crews could not make an accurate acreage reading, said David Ortelge of the California Department of Forestry, adding that as many as 4,000 acres were affected.

No injuries were reported, but a barn was destroyed and hundreds of homes were threatened. Rugged terrain hindered firefighters who also faced the unusual problem of hard-to-see abandoned mine shafts.

About 100 firefighters who helped control a 425-acre blaze near Fricot, about 50 miles away, joined the fight against the larger fire, which forced the evacuation of 2,000 people, said Kathy Campbell, a state forestry spokeswoman.

The new contingent in California brought to 2,000 the number of people fighting the blaze. The fire burned in picturesque Sierra foothills country only four miles from Stanislaus National Forest and 20 miles outside of Yosemite National Park.

Improved weather helped firefighters reach about 35 percent containment by midafternoon.

"We got a little cooling, a little humidity," Ortelge said at a news conference Sunday.

Temperatures hovered Saturday afternoon near 100 degrees. Whipped by gusty winds, the fire moved so fast on Saturday it burned 1,000 acres in an hour.

Ortelge said there was no estimated time for full containment of the blaze believed to have been sparked by a camp fire.

Meanwhile Sunday, more than 700 firefighters were called to a fire raging in mountainous west-central Idaho. The blaze was reported Friday and has blackened nearly 4,000 acres. Some campers and sightseers were evacuated.

It was believed to have been caused by lightning. The area is so steep and remote that firefighters had to hike in or were dropped in by helicopter. One suffered a bro-

The California fire started near Don Pedro Lake in the Moccasin Point campground area. Flames jumped the steep grade of Old Priest Canyon and roared through the canyon, which was jammed with brush.

The evacuated people were mainly from the hamlets of Big Oak Flat and Moccasin.

"Fire is our biggest nightmare at the ranch, and now it's coming true," said Stacy Kennedy, an evacuee from the Moccasin area.

Yet another wildfire near the central California city of Salinas had burned across more than 1,600 acres by Sunday afternoon, said California Department of Forestry spokesman Don Stacy.

Orphan evacuees killed while escaping capital

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A bullet-scarred bus carrying dozens of crying orphans raced from Sarajevo on Sunday on the second leg of an escape that has claimed at least two young lives.

Left behind were about 100 other children awaiting evacuation as Bosnian forces try to punch through Serb lines encircling the city. Bosnian officials claimed some success in the battles.

Many of the orphans sobbed and struggled Sunday as they were put on the bus in the western suburb of Stup, the end of the so-called "Sniper Alley" highway from central Sarajevo.

One blonde toddler kicked as a burly soldier carried her under his arm to the bus. But another little boy happily sucked a candy bar and climbed aboard.

The bus traveled through war-torn territory en route to the Croatian port of Split, where officials from a German orphanage waited with a chartered plane to take them to Germany.

The children stopped for the night in a "secure" area in Fojnica, about 25 miles northwest of Sarajevo, said Anton Guenther Cromme, spokesman for the Saxony-Anhalt Social Ministry in Magdeburg, Germany. On Saturday, two orphans were killed when the bus was hit by heavy fire.

"I heard the glass shatter, then the bullet whistle past and then the gunshot," said bus driver Zeljko Grgic. "At first I wanted to throw myself to the floor, but then I remembered the kids were in the back and we had to make the last 200 to 300 meters to safety."

It was not immediately clear who fired on the bus or whether it was caught in cross-fire. Yugoslavia's premier, Milan Panic, condemned the attack. "Serbian, Bosnian ... they are all terrorists," Panic said during a visit to Bulgaria on Sunday.

Earlier in the day, Panic had proposed that the six republics See BOSNIA, Page 8

A former UI student has filed a suit in the Johnson County Courthouse against the state of Iowa, his former economics professors, two UI administrators and UI President Hunter Rawlings, charging that he was suspended from the school because of his mental disabilities.

The plaintiff, Scott Rohret, filed the petition on July 17 in the civil division of the Johnson County District Court. It named as defendants Rawlings, economics Professor Terry Kung, assistant Professor Lelia Helms, Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs Phillip Jones and Assistant to the Dean of Students Thomas Baker. Also named in the lawsuit was Director of New Dimensions Roger Childs.

SUMMER PROGRAM

Teens learn rewards of creating solutions

The projects included making the work place more accessible to people with disabilities and alleviating the problem of waste paper disposal.

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Investigating environmentally and economically sound methods of making mulches, fuels and construction materials from waste paper or working to adapt work place environments to accommodate people with disabilities may not sound like the best ways to spend a summer vacation, but for 60 high-school students, working on these projects proved to be rewarding.

These two studies were conducted by students from throughout the country attending the UI Summer Institute for Creative Engineering and Inventives.

The three-week program allowed students to do research and experiments in order to find solutions to serious problems.

Two projects, a biomedical engineering study and an environmental engineering study, were conducted.

The biomedical study, directed by Doug VanDaele of the UI College of Engineering and conducted by 30 of the students, was based on the need to integrate 43 million disabled Americans into the work place, said participant Ella Ingram, a high-school senior from Davenport.

"Many small business owners are worried about their obligations. What they don't know is that compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act is in many cases cheap and easy. Thirty-one percent of all modifications cost nothing, while two-thirds can be done for less than $500," Ingram said.

She said modifications could include installing cup dispensers at waist level at drinking fountains instead of lowering all fountains, or installing a doorbell to be answered by employees, rather than an automatic door.

"Employers don't need to spend a fortune in order to gain one," she said.

Ingram said that in order to obtain background for the project, the students participated in a "scavenger hunt with a twist." The activity entailed completing three tasks while simulating various disabilities such as visual impairment, hearing loss, speech impairment, multiple sclerosis, knee immobilization, or paraplegia.

Disabilities were simulated by such things as smearing Vaseline on sunglasses to cause visual impairment, or using wheelchairs to simulate paraplegia.

"Integrating people with disabilities will allow them to contribute to society, become involved in the community, be more independent and eventually change the views of the ignorant. These past three weeks have given us a greater understanding of engineering and people with disabilities," Ingram said.

The other project, involving environmental engineering, looked at ways to alleviate the problem of waste paper disposal.

The students, advised by Lou Licht of the College of Engineering, did research including learning how local businesses, such as HON Industries, are managing their waste products rather than depositing them in landfills.

Participant Gwen Gruber, a junior from Council Bluffs, said the group focused on discarded paper and worked to find commercially marketable products to bring solutions to environmental problems.

"We came up with three different projects that reduce waste," she said. The first was called "Back to Nature," because the paper taken out of nature was to be returned to it in the form of mulch and animal bedding.

The second project used paper as fuel. "Paper could become a perfect supplementary fuel source to replace the current use of fossil fuels," Gruber said.

The third project was using paper as a building material. Gruber said paper is ideal for reinforcing concrete.

"Using paper can be a great value economically and it can be beneficial to our planet as well," she said.

The institute, sponsored by grants from the National Science Foundation and the Roy J. Carver Charitable Trust of Muscatine, is co-directed by education professor Nicholas Colangelo and Paul Scholz, associate dean of the UI College of Engineering.

IC bike thieves evoke those summer blues

Yokota Masuo
Special to The Daily Iowan

Summer may be the best season to pedal around campus since the weather is good and the bus service is not as frequent as during fall and spring semesters — but is also the most lucrative season for bike thieves.

Four hundred and seventy stolen bikes were reported to the UI Department of Public Safety and the Iowa City Police last year. While 41 cases were reported between December and February, 183 cases, about 40 percent of all stolen bikes, were reported between June and August.

Jason Kerber, a religion major at the UI, had his 2-year-old mountain bike stolen from Quadrangle in October 1989. Since he had another bike stolen before, Kerber was cautious enough to bring his bicycle inside at night.

"But on that particular night I wasn't feeling well and it was raining, so I didn't bring it in," he said. "I thought just one night would be OK."

But next morning his bike and cable lock disappeared. "There wasn't any trace at all," he said. Kerber immediately went upstairs and called his father to ask him to check with the insurance company, which he found would pay for his stolen bike.

Another student caught a thief cutting her chain lock and escaping just under her nose this June. Yukari Usuda, a journalism major at the UI, chained her mountain bike near the Englert Theatre, watched a movie, had some drinks with her friends and came back around 10 p.m.

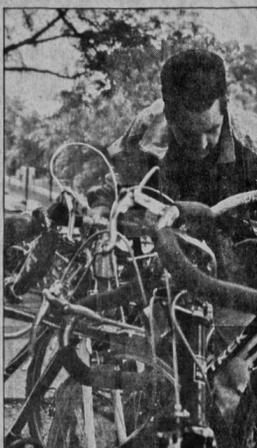

Usuda noticed a teen-ager touching her bike. When she asked him what he was doing, the boy jumped on it and started riding away down Washington Street.

She saw a crowd of people on the street and tried to shout to make him stop but couldn't because she had a sore throat.

Before the incident, Usuda used to stop by the library to borrow books even at night, but she doesn't do it any more.

She also has a tough time finding an apartment. "To look for the apartment for this fall, I've got to walk around the town," Usuda said. "It's not easy to look for three or four apartments a day without a bike."

A UI female student, who spoke under the condition of anonymity,

Yokota Masuo

UI senior Matt Arnold locks up his bicycle near the Union.

now tries to get home before sunset after her bike was stolen this July. "Since I feel it's dangerous to walk back after dark, I would rather stay home," she said.

"Most of the bikes that were stolen are typically either unsecured or left out downtown or at home overnight. Anyone comes along, pops on and rides off," Officer Robert Gass of the Iowa City Police Department said. "It takes just two seconds to cut a cable lock."

Gass recommends that cyclists register bikes with the police, take them inside at night and use U-locks, which are superior to cable and chain locks.

The penalties for stealing a bike are stiff. If a stolen bike is worth anywhere from $100 to $500, the theft constitutes a serious misdemeanor, punishable by up to 30 days in jail and/or a $100 fine. Stealing a bike worth $500 to $1,000 is an aggravated misdemeanor, punishable by up to one year in jail and/or a $1,000 fine.

The UI Department of Public Safety reported five arrests for stealing bikes last year. Yet the police and campus security don't necessarily go out to look for stolen bikes. They don't take action until people report finding bicycles to the police.

Kerber encountered a man with his bike at the Lindquist Center a year after it was reported stolen. After confirming the bike was his, Kerber went to the Department of Public Safety and got it back.

Dubuque, Quad Cities set record lows

Associated Press

August started on a record weather note in Iowa.

Clear skies helped temperatures dip 10 degrees or more below normal early Saturday, with low readings in the 50s in most of the state. The low of 51 in Dubuque was the lowest Aug. 1 reading on record in that city.

The previous low was 52 in 1985, the National Weather Service reported.

Another record was tied in the Quad Cities, where the low of 55 at Moline, Ill., tied a 1973 mark.

Dubuque finished July with an average temperature of 66.7 degrees to set a record for the month, according to the National Weather Service. The coolest July on record previously was an average of 68.0 degrees in 1971.

Rep. Leach delineates steps to reach New World Order

Among the proposed changes were a comprehensive test ban and an international criminal court.

Anne Johnston
The Daily Iowan

The challenges facing the New World Order call for American leadership as well as an attempt to widen international law and strengthen international organizations, according to U.S. Rep. Jim Leach.

The 1st District Republican delivered the keynote address Friday night at the Annual Hiroshima Day Memorial Celebration, "Update on Hiroshima: Nuclear Weapons and the New World Order," in Cedar Rapids.

In his introduction of the congressman, moderator Marshall Kerr said the purpose of the annual Hiroshima Day event was to remember past war policy decisions and their consequences as context for future weapons strategies.

He said the opportunity to work for peace is "now, before the devastation and horror of a new general world conflict leave the decision to a mere contest of arms, or leave all human decision-making moot."

In his opening remarks to the audience of about 50 people, Leach said that although a New World Order has been called for following the end of the Cold War, it has yet to be defined and peace remains elusive.

"We are the first generation of people that have ever had at our disposal weapons that can not only win wars or battles but that can destroy civilization," he said.

Leach said the existence of such weapons leaves no option but to come up with new strategies to resolve international conflicts and create a stable New World Order.

The first step, he said, should be a comprehensive test ban.

"If we don't have a test ban in the very near future, we won't be able to count on our fingers and toes the number of nuclear powers by the end of the century," he said.

Leach said he also believes the United Nations should establish an international criminal court in which individuals like Saddam Hussein of Iraq and Khmer Rouge leader Pol Pot of Cambodia could be held accountable for their actions.

In addition to international cooperation within the political arena, Leach said peace is more likely to be achieved with cooperation in the business arena, through organizations like the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

These organizations can aid the United States in helping the "losers" of the Cold War, which Leach said is critical to U.S. policy although it may not be popular.

"If we don't get these countries started down the path to democracy and free enterprise, they're very likely to follow a path of repression and economic systems that will lead to clashes rather than cooperation," he said.

Money is what is needed by these countries in the short term, Leach said, but trade and exchange programs are also important in the long term.

"The more contact between East and West, the better off we will be," he said.

Leach said he views protectionist economic policies as one of the greatest threats to the New World Order.

"I personally think protectionism belies its name," he said. "It's job security for candidates, not for workers."

Friday's event was sponsored by the Cedar Rapids Area Peace With Justice Network.

CITY COUNCIL

Amendment considered for General Mills facility

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

An amendment to Iowa City's General Industrial Zone to allow dry-grain milling and processing will be considered by the Iowa City City Council during its regular meeting Tuesday night, following a public hearing on the issue.

General Mills Inc. has requested the amendment so that it may construct a food-processing facility in the Business Development Industrial Park. Among concerns addressed during the hearing will be possible odors and dust emitted from the plant.

The city has received correspondence from area residents opposed to the project, as well as letters of support from mayors of other cities where General Mills does business, including Buffalo, N.Y., and Albuquerque, N.M.

Also on the agenda for Tuesday night is a resolution to approve an agreement for the city's use of the Market Street right-of-way in conjunction with the UI's North Capitol Street Pathway project.

The resolution would allow the UI to install streetscape amenities on the Market Street right-of-way provided they are a minimum of two feet from the curb and in good repair. Also included in the resolution is a clause holding the UI responsible for creating a single north-south crossing to decrease pedestrian-automobile conflict.

Resolutions to execute and attest a lease of the city-owned bus depot property at 404 E. College St. and to change the penalty for illegally parking in a handicapped parking space from $25 to $50 will also be considered by the council Tuesday night.

EDUCATION

Private colleges safe from economic woes

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Many of Iowa's private colleges are struggling along with the rest of the economy but remain on sound financial ground, a survey of their financial statements shows.

A review of federal tax forms shows that 23 of 31 schools had less operating revenue to carry over at the end of the 1990-91 school year than a year earlier.

The review was conducted by the Des Moines Sunday Register.

Seven schools ended up in the red for 1990-91 — Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Divine Word College in Epworth, Emmaus Bible in Dubuque, Faith Baptist Bible in Ankeny, Iowa Wesleyan in Mount Pleasant, Teikyo Westmar University in Le Mars and Vennard College in University Park.

None of the schools had deficits approaching the $1 million mark, and only Iowa Wesleyan had back-to-back deficits, the survey shows.

College financial officials said the bottom line can be misleading, because schools can have unexpected building costs or other special circumstances in a particular year.

"A lot of schools run very close to the margins and can have a deficit one year and then not the next," said John Hartung, president of the Iowa Association of Independent Colleges. "I think, by and large, the schools that I serve today are in a better position financially through prudent management than they were five years ago."

But the association's figures show contributions declined by $500,000 in 1990-91, totaling $26.4 million after reaching $26.9 million a year earlier. At the same time, financial aid provided by the institutions increased by more than $11 million.

"A lot of schools run very close to the margins and can have a deficit one year and then not the next."

John Hartung

"This is not an easy time for private colleges because we've seen a decline in federal student aid and, in some states, a decline in state aid," said Richard Rosser, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in Washington, D.C. "We've had to make up this decline with an increase in financial aid from the institutions themselves."

SENATE CANDIDATES

Sen. Jean Lloyd-Jones

Grassley attacked on pesticide issue

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's U.S. Senate candidates are battling over farm pesticides.

Democratic challenger Jean Lloyd-Jones issued a weekend statement accusing Republican incumbent Charles Grassley of refusing to support curbs on farm chemicals because he accepts campaign contributions from pesticide makers.

Lloyd-Jones said U.S. chemical companies are allowed to ship pesticides abroad even though the products are deemed too hazardous for use in this country. She said a "circle of poison" brings the chemicals back to the United States on food imports.

"These toxic exports kill countless thousands of foreign workers and injure millions more, and they are returned to us — and our children — on imported food from all over the world," Lloyd-Jones said.

Grassley's press secretary, Caran Kolbe McKee, noted that in a 1990 Senate speech, Grassley said some chemicals banned in the United States "may be a valuable tool used in many developing nations to combat malaria."

He added, "The threats of disease and famine are a much bigger concern in these countries than the question of food safety, or at least we ought to leave it up to their own governments to make that determination."

McKee said Grassley favors increased border inspections to prevent contaminated food from entering the United States.

Lloyd-Jones said Grassley's position "helps international chemical companies, and they have contributed mightily to his senatorial campaigns."

She said it is too expensive to inspect the 135 million pounds of produce entering the United States each year. She said the United States should outlaw the export of chemicals that cannot be used in this country.

Democrats, GOP on even footing in state elections

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — It's a source of never-ending wonderment to watch the issues of spring fade in the face of the kind of things that actually settle elections.

Not too long ago, the Statehouse was locked in one of those frenzies that occasionally grip political places. The air was filled with tension as politicians of both parties dissected even the tiniest development in the state's budget crunch.

Predictions were issued that this vote on that amendment would spell political doom, or that statement on this issue would assure success at the ballot box.

It was, as it always is, nonsense. Most of the politicians are gone from the Statehouse now, returned to their hometowns to gird for this year's election.

As they settle into the campaign trail, they report hearing a lot of talk about the weather, a good deal of speculation about the quality of football to be expected this fall and a lot of questions about where the economy is headed.

And, every now and then, somebody ventures an opinion about this "budget mess" up at the Statehouse.

There are no certainties in politics, however, and Democrats have their own vulnerabilities.

ABORTION RIGHTS

The Quayle choice

The anti-abortion position of the White House is a subject which has been demonstrated repeatedly and firmly. The precise position of our vice president, however, appears to be a bit less immovable. During an interview recently, Vice President Quayle was asked whether his 13-year-old daughter would have the option to choose to abort her pregnancy. The vice president indicated that while he would counsel her against abortion, the choice would be hers in the end.

In what might seem an unseemly move for someone who supposedly champions the conservative, family unit focused campaign, Marilyn Quayle was sent out to deliver the hard-line message. And her commentary concerning the matter differed decidedly from that of her husband. Asked the same question, Mrs. Quayle informed the press that their daughter would carry the pregnancy to term. Asked whether this comment meant that she would make the decision for her daughter, she replied, "We will make (that decision) together," which, of course, meant that Marilyn Quayle would sit her own daughter down and, regardless of the circumstances of the pregnancy, forbid her the option to choose to have abortion. The younger Quayle would have no voice in the matter and no choice.

Mrs. Quayle has already made the decision: No choice means no decision. In this instance the individual in question, the daughter of the vice president, would have no option, no control over what would become of her once impregnated. Marilyn Quayle would sit her own daughter down and, regardless of the circumstances of the pregnancy, forbid her the option to choose to have abortion. The younger Quayle would have no voice in the matter and no choice.

But the exact opinion within the Quayle household was muddled a bit by Quayle's response. And oddly, this response was made by the man who publicly stated not so long ago, "If a 12-year-old girl is raped by her father and becomes pregnant, she should not be allowed to have an abortion." This would appear to more closely mirror the hard-line stance taken by Mrs. Quayle than the sentiment of the vice president's more recent statement. There are several problems with this.

Firstly, the man whose hard-line, anti-abortion position would have condemned a 12-year-old girl for being the victim of an incestuous sexual assault is also a member of the Bush administration. If the vice president could somehow manage to push through a "no abortions, no matter what the circumstances" policy, and that policy became legislation, it would affect every person in our country. The vice president's position concerning legislating a ban on abortions sends a message to the hypothetical 12-year-old victim: She is to blame for this attack from her father; she must carry the pregnancy resulting from her sexual assault to term.

And secondly, Quayle's contradiction of his own stance against abortion — when the situation concerns his daughter — sets the stage for something abortion rights activists have feared for some time. His actions tell us that the right to abortion is acceptable for families, such as his, with proper political and/or monetary connections; they also tell us that, in Quayle's way of thinking, no one else in America deserves the very same right.

Charlton Heston

To the Editor:
Recently the evening news offered us the spectacle of Time Warner shareholder Charlton Heston, flanked by two uniformed cops, making menacing gestures toward that company for its part in marketing rapper Ice-T's "Cop Killer" album. Mr. Heston's prime-time compassion for the safety of police would be more compelling, however, if he spent a lot less time on late-night television shilling for the National Rifle Association, and a little more energy urging his elected representatives to pass the Brady Bill and measures to outlaw certain semi-automatic weapons — positions strongly supported by every major police organization in America, but obstinately resisted by the NRA and its apologists. As obnoxious as "Cop Killer" 's message may be, any first-year law student with only a passing knowledge of the Constitution and judicial precedent knows that Ice-T's free speech rights under the First Amendment are far better established than Heston's Second Amendment "right" to pack a pistol, let alone purchase it without a waiting period. The Founders had good reason to distinguish the legality of one from the lethality of the other: To paraphrase the tired rhetoric of the NRA, "gang-banger rap doesn't kill cops; gang-bangers with easily available handguns and semi-automatic assault weapons kill cops."

Tailhook: Looking for a few good men

Man is an animal. We have never liked that idea much. To reduce our consternation upon discovering we were animals, we opted to specify ourselves as sapiens instead of just being homo. We added that word because it denotes wisdom. Thus, man became an animal that considered itself wise.

By this pretty trick we have soothed ourselves with the idea that we are above the beasts of the earth. We can reason. We can create. The logical, philosophical, literary and musical accomplishments of man provide our world with much of its wonder and a special quality of human warmth.

But man can also rationalize, which leads to contradiction and an occasional spill from the pedestal on which we stand as sapient beings. When it suits man, he is an animal. When he argues this point, it is unreasonable to expect him to be any more free of greed, corruption, or more sordid biological lusts and skullduggeries than a hog in wallow. On the other hand, he is quick to brandish his status as homo sapiens whenever he can benefit from it. Like Superman ducking into a nearby phone booth, he emerges the apex of creation, epitome of wisdom and grace, benevolent ruler over all the earth.

This is nice work if you can get it, folks. And man's glorious powers of rationalization are rarely displayed with more brilliance than in the military realm. From the first time man took chisel to rock to signify the content of his life, the history of human conflict as it has played out on battlefields has been a much revisited topic.

Usually, battlefield tales sing of ideals, destiny and glory. Arms and the man. Today, we write the tale of Tailhook. This is the Navy sexual harassment scandal involving aviators at a convention. If you have not read the press accounts, the story is about approximately 26 women who were assaulted in the halls of the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel. The assaults took place during the Tailhook Association's convention there last September. The group's membership is drawn from both active-duty and retired naval aviators.

The perpetrators were male naval aviators. Many of the assaulted women were naval officers. The victim list also included one inebriated 17-year-old girl. She was filmed being handed from aviator to aviator. Our fine fly-boys pulled off the girl's clothing, and at least one person who has seen the film says the girl "appeared to have been drenched with beverages." Hotel security guards eventually put a stop to the proceedings. This fact is telling in and of itself — one surmises that a great commotion indeed would be required to get a security guard at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel to raise so much as an eyebrow.

Last week, the chiefs of the four branches of the armed services appeared on Capitol Hill to account for their troops' behavior in this instance. They were also challenged to explain their track record of non-response to sexual harassment allegations that have surfaced in all branches of the armed services.

The problem is critical. And it is rooted in the military's placid assumption that nothing can be done about the impulses of "fighting men" without damaging their competence as such. Respect, it seems, is something troops are not taught to value in themselves beyond boot camp. The only respect that carries any meaning is reserved for the guys with the stars and bars. The attitude is that any women within reach are fair game. They can be grabbed with impunity and abused to satisfy our warriors' appetites.

If officers were assaulted in this way, and if those officers were women, the aviators have a dramatically different view of the respect required of them by male officers compared to female counterparts. This view is not the product of biology. It is a choice men make. They are allowed — if not encouraged — to make that choice because they live in a society that pays women less, that listens to them less in classrooms, board rooms and bedrooms, and that constantly holds the private conduct of women in suspicious regard.

It is time for the services to kick some serious butt. Dragging out the four-star geezers to perfunctorily nod their heads in response to charges raised by the Tailhook incident does two things. It makes the armed services look as morally bankrupt as they consistently prove themselves to be. It also reinforces assaultive, demeaning behavior in male soldiers.

The sincerity level of higher-ups can be detected by subordinate homo sapiens, whether he is benefiting from being described as an animal who can't help his biological impulses or as a creature of reason. All the men involved in Tailhook know exactly how much it matters to their male superiors that they behaved like jackasses: not at all. And they all know what kind of impact their involvement in the Tailhook episode will have on their careers: none at all.

While this remains the case, the men who set policy and chart career paths in the armed services are being allowed to bask in the glory of homo sapiens much-vaunted wisdom. At the same time, they are not held accountable for encouraging the American male soldier to exhibit behavior for which we would beat a dog with a stick. Allowed to define themselves as they wish, they breach their own so-called codes of behavior and besmirch the values this country supposedly has soldiers to protect. Any continued tolerance of this state of affairs within the armed services community is inexcusable.

GUEST OPINION

Why apologies are not really necessary

After watching "Rhapsody in August" at the Bijou last month, I was embarrassed to see a one-sided history of Japan.

The film is set in contemporary Nagasaki where four Japanese teen-agers come to stay with their grandmother, Kane. Kane's husband was killed by the atomic bomb in Nagasaki in 1945. Kane says she neither likes nor dislikes Americans now and that the war was to blame for troubles which befell her.

While exploring the city, the teen-agers find the school yard where their grandfather, a teacher, died.

It's a warm-hearted, humorous, three-generation story between grandma, grandchildren and their parents until Clark, a Japanese-American played by Richard Gere, arrives in Nagasaki from Hawaii.

Clark, Kane's nephew, discovers that Kane's husband was among the atomic-bomb victims. Since they haven't been in touch, it had taken Clark 45 years to realize the cause of his uncle's death.

The plot becomes annoying when Kane and Clark are talking on the veranda of a traditional Japanese house under the light of the full moon. At face value, Clark seems to apologize to Kane for not knowing her husband was killed by the A-bomb.

But some newspaper film reviews in America, including ones in The New York Times and The Washington Post, read it otherwise. The New York Times said, "(When Clark arrives, he apologizes to his ancient aunt for the bomb that killed her husband."

Watching the scene, I felt the same way.

Clark doesn't look Japanese-American, due to his features, his name and his memorized Japanese. To me, he appears to represent Americans asking Japanese forgiveness for dropping the bomb on Nagasaki. Kane, who repeats that the war was to blame, is depicted as benevolent enough to accept his apology.

It is true that the bomb generated a catastrophe, resulting in about 140,000 casualties in Nagasaki, but it has nothing to do with Clark. As Kane keeps saying, "The war was to blame." Clark shouldn't be forced to take responsibility for the bomb.

Likewise, should I be held accountable for Japan's actions in the war? That was a question I asked myself in a trip to China last summer.

In the sleeping car for Harbin, far north of Beijing, I encountered a man and his mother. The stout man and I began to communicate when I traded my bottom bed for his mother's middle one as her legs weren't strong enough to climb up the ladder.

He offered me some fruits and drinks in appreciation. But when I introduced myself as Japanese, I didn't miss his ambivalent facial expressions. Since I don't speak Chinese, we communicated by writing. This is possible because the Japanese language imported most of its characters from Chinese a long time ago.

After an hour of snail-paced writing, I learned that he was 32 years old, taught martial arts to more than 100 students near Beijing and was on his way with his mother to visit his siblings.

Then he scribbled "Nanking" and asked me if I knew where it was. He kept on writing, "When the Japanese army invaded Nanking, my mother and her family were there." He imitated a gun with his hand, aimed at me and fired.

Japan invaded China in the early 1930s, and one of the most remembered and infamous incidents is the Rape of Nanking in December 1937. Nanking lies to the west of Shanghai. There the Japanese army slaughtered more than 30,000 people in one month, the majority of whom were civilians, according to official Chinese records.

I had decided to travel to China to trace the places where the Japanese forces wreaked havoc during the war, including Nanking, Beijing and Harbin, where the army conducted human experiments on war prisoners from China, Russia and Britain.

I wasn't bold enough to question what exactly happened to his mother's family and if her ailing legs had something to do with the Rape of Nanking. I felt deeply sorry for her and her family.

While sympathizing with her, an apology, which was not what he demanded, didn't come out of my mouth. I thought the Rape of Nanking was out of my control. I hadn't done it.

In Clark's character I saw what I represented in China. But in the film he is manipulated to kneel down to heal the bitter Japanese memories of the bomb.

If we regard history as a lesson for us not to repeat the same mistake, seeking an apology isn't the best way to do it. While empathizing with victims in Nanking, Nagasaki and Pearl Harbor, we had better give second thoughts to filia such atrocities happened. Why did the Japanese army massacre some 30,000 Chinese people? Why was the atomic bomb dropped on Nagasaki, when the Japanese government could have surrendered and when the U.S. government could have concluded the war in other ways?

You may take advantage of anniversaries to think about these issues. The first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 47 years ago, and the last atomic bomb on Nagasaki four days later.

Croatian voters go to polls in independent elections

Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

ZAGREB, Croatia — Voters on Sunday weighed hopes for peace and nationalist President Franjo Tudjman's claim to have fulfilled centuries-old dreams of statehood. Croatians were voting — some in bombed-out polling places or close to fighting in neighboring Bosnia — in their first general election since declaring independence last year. Polls showed Tudjman, running for re-election, slightly ahead in a field of eight.

"There is no doubt we will win," Tudjman, of the ruling Croatian Democratic Union, said as he cast his ballot in Zagreb Sunday morning.

Tudjman, a former Communist general, was chosen president by the parliament after his party swept 205 of 356 seats in the last elections in spring 1990.

Tudjman asserts that under his rule Croats finally gained statehood. They have won broad international recognition as Yugoslavia disintegrated.

Opponents blame Tudjman for losing one-third of Croatia's territory to Serbian and U.N. control in a bloody war that killed at least 10,000, devastated the country's economy and destroyed much of its cultural heritage.

"We expect these elections to bring us peace. We had enough bloodshed," Katka Balic, an elderly woman, said in Zagreb, the Croatian capital.

Besides the race for Croatia's first popularly elected president, more than 25 parties were competing for 120 seats in the parliament's lower house. Upper house elections will be held later.

More than 6,000 polling stations opened in Croatia at 7 a.m. (1 a.m. EDT) for 12 hours of voting. First unofficial results were expected Monday, but the final official tally was not expected before the end of the week.

The election results are not expected to cause a major shift in Croatia's domestic or foreign policies, since most of the favorites are nationalists with similar programs.

Many of the polling places were located in bombed-out villages and towns, or near battle zones in neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina, which has been engaged in a fierce war of independence with Yugoslavia since March.

As people voted in Slavonski Brod, heavy gun battles resounded across the Sava River from Bosanski Brod in Bosnia, the scene of heavy fighting.

Two people were injured as shells landed in Slavonski Brod, Croatian radio said.

Voting was not conducted in about one-third of Croatia's Serb-held territory now under the protection of the United Nations.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman casts his ballot in Sunday's general elections in Zagreb. Croatians voted in their first general elections since winning independence from Serb-led Yugoslavia.

Croatian refugees in Hungary, however, did vote. Between 12,000 and 14,000 refugees were eligible to vote.

SUPREME COURT

Judges dissent over refugees' fates

Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Saturday permitted the Bush administration to continue returning Haitians intercepted at sea to their Caribbean homeland.

The action — sought by the Justice Department — temporarily blocks a federal appeals court ruling Wednesday which voided President Bush's two-month-old executive order that Haitians fleeing by boat be escorted back to Haiti.

In a 7-2 vote, the Supreme Court gave the government until Aug. 24 to ask the high court to consider the merits of the case.

Justices Harry Blackmun and John Paul Stevens dissented, saying that the fleeing Haitians face "the real and immediate prospect of persecution, terror and possibly even death at the hands of those to whom they are being forcibly returned."

Lawyers for the Haitians say they are entitled to immigration hearings to determine whether they should be classified as refugees eligible to come to this country.

The Bush administration has said concern for the safety of the Haitians was a major consideration for its actions. Deputy press secretary Judy Smith said the White House was pleased that the stay "will continue to discourage Haitians from taking unseaworthy vessels to the United States."

Lucas Guttentag, attorney for the Haitians, said he is confident that when the case is heard, "the court will find that the president's order violates the most fundamental principles of U.S. and international obligations."

The lawyers representing the Haitians will ask the court on Monday to hear the case on an accelerated basis, Guttentag said.

"My only hope is that either Congress does something or elections sweep out President Bush," said another lawyer for the Haitians, Michael Ratner.

Thousands of Haitians have been intercepted at sea and returned to their country since the president's order of last spring, said Ratner.

And thousands of Haitians have sought asylum at the U.S. Embassy in Port-au-Prince in the last few months.

A Justice Department statement issued a few days ago encouraged the asylum requests. To date, less than 100 have been granted admission to the United States.

About 30,000 Haitians fled their country after a military coup deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide last fall.

President Bush in May signed his executive order permitting the return of the refugees.

The boat traffic declined immediately after the United States decided to return those picked up at sea directly to Haiti.

The Bush administration says most of those fleeing Haiti are seeking a better economic life and do not qualify for political asylum.

In the dissent, Blackmun said that the government has offered only "a vague invocation of harm to foreign policy, immigration policy and the federal treasury."

CAMPAIGN '92

Conservatives call for Bush to abandon presidential race

W. Dale Nelson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — George Bush is staying in the presidential race despite calls for his withdrawal by newspaper editorials and leading conservatives, supporters in the administration and Congress said Sunday.

Bush, campaigning in the Chicago suburbs, ignored a shouted question about editorials in Sunday's Waterbury Republican-American and Orange County Register urging him to quit his re-election drive.

The president's chief of staff, Sam Skinner, told reporters aboard Air Force One, "This is an election year. I have no reaction."

Sunday's editorials, and similar comments from conservative fundraiser Richard Viguerie, capped a week in which conservative writer George Will urged the president in a nationally syndicated column to abandon the presidential race and a former Florida Republican chairman took out a full-page ad in The Washington Post pleading with Vice President Dan Quayle to quit as Bush's running mate.

But Transportation Secretary Andrew Card, asked on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday" whether there was any chance of Bush either withdrawing or dropping Quayle from the ticket, replied, "None."

And Bush's rival, Bill Clinton, said he didn't expect the disarray among Republicans to last.

"What you see now is not what's going to happen in the next 90 days," Clinton told reporters in Little Rock, Ark. "I expect this to be a very tough campaign."

Prominent members of both parties in Congress agreed.

"If I know anything about George Bush, it is that he is not a quitter," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

As to replacing the vice president, Gramm said, "That issue is dead. The team is in place that's going to run."

House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri said on the same program, "I don't think there's going to be a new Republican ticket."

The Register, which has a Sunday circulation of 400,880 in one of Southern California's most conservative counties, said, Bush "can render his presidency most successful only by giving it up, voluntarily, before his party's convention opens in Houston a fortnight from now."

The Waterbury paper said that Bush, who grew up in Connecticut, "provides no vision to inspire the country to look to the future with confidence."

"George Bush can best serve his country and save the Union by declining the nomination," the newspaper said.

On Friday, The Herald of New Britain, Conn., also called on Bush to step aside, saying he has "clearly run out of ideas."

Viguerie, also on "Newsmaker Sunday," declared, "I think the president should follow the example of Harry Truman, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon and step aside, preserve his place in history and do his party and his country a great service."

Viguerie suggested the GOP nominate Housing Secretary Jack Kemp for president and Secretary of State James Baker for vice president.

KATMANDU, Nepal—Soldiers on their hands and knees crawled up a rain-soaked Himalayan mountain Sunday to begin retrieving the bodies of 113 victims of a Thai Airways jetliner crash.

At 11,000 feet, a monsoon storm stranded two helicopters at a makeshift camp 3,000 feet below the crash site, said Ramananda Vaidya, the Home Ministry spokesman.

No traces were found of survivors among the 99 passengers — including 11 Americans — and 14 crew of flight TG311 from Bangkok, Thailand, officials said. The crash was the worst airline disaster on Nepalese soil.

Search helicopters reached the wreckage at dawn. They were guided by a report from a villager who walked 10 hours to notify police he saw a fireball in the sky about the time the plane vanished from radar screens on its approach to Katmandu.

Soldiers clambered up slippery, moss-covered slopes to collect charred body parts and twisted shards of aircraft metal that may help to determine the cause of the crash.

"It is difficult to identify anybody. The parts are all completely burned up," Vaidya said.

The Airbus A310-300 disintegrated when it slammed into the mountainside just below the 11,500-foot Langtang mountain, 22 miles northwest of Katmandu, the Nepalese capital.

The largest piece of debris was less than 15 feet long, said Haribhakta Shrestha, an official at the rescue operation command center at Katmandu airport. In the only video footage from the scene, Nepal Television showed an aerial view of the slope, where just two sheets of metal were discernible among the aircraft debris.

Officials say the most likely cause of the crash was a technical problem the pilot reported minutes before he lost radio contact.

On Sunday, three investigators from the French transport ministry and three from Airbus Industrie, the European consortium that built the plane, joined Nepalese and Thai Airways aviation experts.

Only three pieces of the plane were brought to Katmandu before rain halted the salvage operation. Experts were waiting for the weather to clear to go to the remote site.

"The soldiers are literally crawling on all fours to reach the wreckage. The rain gods are not helpful, either," Vaidya said.

A Thai Airways flight brought coffins from Bangkok and the Nepalese government packed a helicopter with 500 body bags to be ferried to the crash site. Twenty-three relatives of the Thai crew also arrived.

57% of colleges cutting budgets

Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—More than half of the nation's colleges felt a financial squeeze last year that led to mid-year budget cuts and prompted most to raise tuition, according to a survey released Sunday.

The survey by the American Council on Education found 57 percent of colleges and universities had to cut their budgets midway through the 1991-92 operating year, compared with 45 percent the previous year.

Public colleges were most affected, with 73 percent of two-year institutions and 61 percent of four-year schools reporting mid-year cuts, the study said. Thirty-five percent of private colleges reported having to trim their budgets last year.

"Private colleges have gone over this budget cutting for 10 years. They've already cut back," said Richard Rosser, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

The survey was based on responses from senior administrators at 411 colleges, from a sample of 510 institutions.

At least 47 percent of public, four-year institutions and 43 percent of two-year public schools also had 1991-92 operating budgets that were the same or lower than the previous year, the survey said.

Only 14 percent of private colleges reported unchanged or decreased operating budgets. Thirty-three percent said they saw a 7 to 10 percent increase in operating funds.

Part of the problem, said researcher Elaine El-Khawas, is that state universities "are substantially unprotected" financially, lacking a cushion of money to avert a crisis.

"If the state budget is cut, the state budget is cut," she said. "They don't have ... a savings account to tap into."

The study also said 81 percent of four-year colleges and 67 percent of two-year institutions raised student fees as a short-term financial solution. Fifty-five percent of private colleges raised tuition because of a budget crunch, the study found.

Colleges also said they delayed or cut back building improvements, equipment purchases or faculty raises, froze hiring and postponed new academic programs because of budget woes.

Still, overall college enrollment was up, with 14 million students enrolled in the fall of 1991, according to the Department of Education.

Sixty-eight percent of public, four-year colleges and 54 percent of private institutions reported increased enrollment, while 79 percent of public two-year colleges said they saw enrollment rise, the study said.

More students are opting for two-year colleges, the study said.

Satellite released too low in orbit

Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Atlantis' astronauts released a European satellite Sunday after an anxious day's delay, but the spacecraft ran into more trouble and was left wandering too low with its load of crystals, seeds and shrimp eggs.

Unless the $213 million Eureka satellite is raised to a higher altitude, its orbit will decay to the point where the craft cannot be retrieved by astronauts next spring as planned. The satellite would plunge through the atmosphere and burn up.

Engineers at the European Space Agency's control center in Darmstadt, Germany, struggled to understand the latest problem, which involved the satellite's steering system.

The solution may be as simple as sending up a computer program correction, said Eckart Graf, a program manager for the European Space Agency.

Eureka managers hoped to fire the satellite's on-board thrusters as early as Monday, provided the problem can be resolved by then, and boost the craft to its proper altitude of 320 miles.

"We consider it as a glitch in the procedure, as a delay. It's a very unfortunate one," Graf said.

Iraq still claiming Kuwait 2 years later

Walter Putnam
Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — On the second anniversary of the invasion of Kuwait, Saddam Hussein's government and media continued to claim that the emirate is part of Iraq and vowed "zealous Iraqis" would continue to demand its recapture.

Prime Minister Mohammed Hamza al-Zubaidi, in a broadcast on state-run Radio Baghdad, hailed Aug. 2, 1990, as "an immortal day, if not the dearest and most glorious day, in the psyche of the Iraqis." "The return of Kuwait, a usurped territory, to the motherland, Iraq, epitomized the Iraqis' firm national will, apart from allowing one of their dreams to come true," al-Zubaidi said.

Similar statements flouting the gulf war cease-fire agreement under which Iraq renounced its claim to Kuwait were echoed by state-run newspapers.

Radio Baghdad called the annexation of Kuwait as Iraq's "19th province," "the greatest historic epic in the contemporary history of Iraq, one that was crowned with immortal victory with the entry of our valiant armed forces into Kuwait."

It said the then-deposed al-Sabah dynasty conspired with the United States and "stabbed their poison dagger in our backs."

The radio recalled the "demands made by zealous Iraqis throughout history to repossess Kuwait, because it is part of Iraqi territory."

The radio also lauded Iraq's efforts to circumvent U.N. trade sanctions.

Navy secretary resolves to make most of time left

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — He may have only six months to be secretary of the Navy, but Sean O'Keefe says he's determined to reshuffle American seapower during his tenure, even if it's brief.

The Navy must "employ its forces very differently" than it did in the past, O'Keefe said in an interview in his Pentagon office last week.

Regional threats have replaced the Cold War possibility of a superpower sea battle.

"It doesn't necessarily mean you have to have this gigantic carrier task force that's going to go out there, waving arms," the new acting secretary said.

Exactly how that plays out has many in the Navy on the edge of their seats.

The Navy is paring its fleet from 510 vessels to 450 by 1995.

O'Keefe's big concern is "that we'll come up with a scaled-down model of the past." Instead, he's interested in "thinking creatively."

In the near term, the Navy must decide whether it can spend bil-ions for the new AX carrier-based attack jet, build a next-generation submarine and determine if the V-22 tilt-rotor aircraft has a future in the Marine Corps.

Despite budget pressures, O'Keefe said, the Navy will move ahead with plans for a new submarine — dubbed by some as the Centurion — in light of the cancellation of the Seawolf program after two of the huge vessels are built.

"In terms of the conceptual design on moving ahead with a follow-on sub, it's in the plan, it's an objective we will follow through on," he said.

But the secretary also indicated that he's not inclined to build weaponry just to keep a so-called "industrial capacity" alive.

The Navy will have to choose very carefully "to get what we want in the mid-90s and beyond, and these are the decisions we are going to make in the next six months," said O'Keefe.

That may be all the time he has. O'Keefe was appointed acting secretary to replace H. Lawrence Garrett. If President Bush is re-elected, O'Keefe's name could be

Navy Secretary Sean O'Keefe submitted for confirmation as secretary. But if Bush loses, O'Keefe would be out.

He's reckoned as a heartless Pentagon budget-cutter, the man who helped Defense Secretary Dick Cheney stop the Army's M1A1 tank, the Air Force's F-15 fighter and the Navy's A-12 attack jet program because of its extensive cost overruns and schedule delays.

"We have to change the perception that the Navy is the greatest collection of ankle-draggers around," O'Keefe said.

low-income families may have money taken away from them to support this new pool of eligible students."

Mark Heffron, assistant vice president for financial services at the American College Testing program, concurred. "I don't see much in here for low-income students," he said. "The bottom line is that there is not more money."

Heffron anticipates that because of the changes in the aid formula which eliminate home and farm equity, financial aid officers may have trouble making distinctions between students of varying income levels. According to Heffron, it is conceivable that under the new law, families from different economic backgrounds could demonstrate the same level of need.

"The new formula is less sensitive," Heffron said. "The problem is that people's financial situations will look more and more alike. It will be difficult to determine who needs the money most."

Warner and Heffron both agree, however, that there are positive aspects to the legislation. The act frees up thousands of dollars worth of low-interest loans previously unavailable to middle-income students and parents.

"Essentially, the money that is available is loan money," Heffron said. "One must assume an even higher level of borrowing by students than has been the case in the past. The formula tells them that they need it."

Warner expects to see more students demonstrating need and qualifying for aid than ever before.

"I don't think this will have an impact on whether or not students attend the UI. Their needs will be met, but the question is how they will be met," Warner said. He predicts that increased student loans and employment will cover the costs.

"We need to work with Congress to find more funds," Warner said. "All in all, the act is good. However, the caveat to how good the act turns out to be is contingent on appropriations at the federal level."

Most of the changes in the legislation will not take effect until the 1993-94 academic year.

that once formed the Yugoslav federation held peace talks in Romania.

Panic welcomed the international peacemaking efforts, but said it was important for the republics to resolve the problems themselves.

Bosnia's Serb leader, Radovan Karadzic, denied his forces attacked the bus. "If the bus was properly marked and if nobody was firing from it, I guarantee that Serbian soldiers would not attack it," he said.

Bosnia is engaged in an increasingly desperate drive to cut ethnic Serb lines encircling the capital. An offensive by Bosnia's mostly Muslim government forces has concentrated on northwest Sarajevo.

At least 7,500 people — and perhaps as many as 50,000 — have died since Muslims and ethnic Croats voted for independence on Feb. 29.

SUIT

Rohret claims in the lawsuit that he was suspended from the UI on April 11, 1989, after being charged with harassing and threatening a university professor under the Code of Student Life. Rohret's requested hearing on the matter had "adverse" results, according to the lawsuit.

Rohret then filed a complaint with the Iowa Civil Rights Commission, and received a right-to-sue letter authorizing a lawsuit against the named defendants.

According to the petition, Rohret claims that the defendants excluded him from educational endeavors, and failed to "identify his disability" and "assist him in overcoming said disabilities."

In addition, the lawsuit states that "the plaintiff was charged with misconduct because the instructor involved in his case became unreasonably frightened of him, not due to any conduct on the plaintiff's part, but to her interpretation of the plaintiff's conduct, which was solely caused by his disability."

Rohret charges that the defendants "did aid and abet the University of Iowa in discriminatory practices," and that the university failed to accommodate Rohret, expelling him in "violation of equal protection and due process."

The lawsuit asks for judgment against the UI and also that Rohret be granted relief "to take affirmative action to carry out the purposes of the Iowa Civil Rights Act" so that he can continue his education.

Jones and Helms refused to comment Sunday on the charges against them.

MAJORS: Braves sweep Giants

 and versatility, not with his hitting.
 The rookie, who started the afternoon with a .190 average, surprised even himself on Sunday. He hit his first major league homer and drove in three runs behind Scott Erickson's four-hitter.
 "My job is defense and filling in when guys need a rest," said Reboulet, a 28-year-old utility infielder. "I'm not a real RBI guy."
 Tom Kelly, in his sixth full season with the Twins, became the seventh active manager with 500 wins. Kelly became the third-fastest manager to reach 500 victories, getting No. 500 in his 938th game. Sparky Anderson needed 849 games and Tommy Lasorda did it in 890.
Pirates 2, Cardinals 1
PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh rallied with two outs in the bottom of the ninth on run-scoring singles by Jeff King and Don Slaught against St. Louis closer Lee Smith to complete a four-game sweep.
 The Pirates held St. Louis to four runs in the series for their first four-game sweep of the Cardinals in Pittsburgh since May 28-31, 1962. They hadn't swept any opponent in four home games since San Francisco on July 14-17, 1988.

Dodgers 4, Padres 1
LOS ANGELES — Orel Hershiser continued his career-long brilliance against San Diego, pitching a five-hitter.
 Hershiser (8-9), who had won only one of his previous nine starts, retired the final 13 batters in order. He did not issue a walk and struck out three in lowering his lifetime ERA in 24 starts against the Padres to 1.95. It was his first complete game since Aug. 18, 1989.
Orioles 2, Red Sox 1
BOSTON — The Baltimore Orioles advanced a runner to third once and he scored. The Boston Red Sox did it six times and went 0 for 6.
 That was the story Sunday as Cal Ripken, fighting off a 3-for-16 slump, drove in the go-ahead run with an eighth-inning single.
 Ben McDonald (11-7), Mike Flanagan, Todd Frohirth and Gregg Olson combined on a five-hitter as Baltimore won its third straight over the Red Sox. McDonald gave up a run and three hits, walked five and struck out four. Olson got four outs for his 25th save in 30 opportunities.
 Boston manager Butch Hobson could only lament about his team's failure to advance runners.
 "All the losses are tough this year, 'cause we've lost a lot of games just like this one," Hobson said.

Tigers 5, Indians 4
CLEVELAND — Cecil Fielder is at it again.
 The man who led the majors in home runs and RBIs the past two seasons added four homers and 11 RBIs to his 1992 totals during the weekend, including a solo home run Sunday.
 Fielder's 91 RBIs lead the majors, and his 24 home runs rank third in the American League. He's bidding to become the first player to lead the majors in RBIs three straight years since Babe Ruth.
Expos 1, Phillies 0
MONTREAL — Chris Nabholz knows he's not a strikeout pitcher, so when he fanned the NL's RBI leader, Darren Daulton, with two men on in the eighth inning, he was tickled.
 "I really bore down against those two guys because I'm supposed to get left-handed hitters out," Nabholz (7-7) said after allowing four hits in eight innings.
Blue Jays 7, Yankees 6
TORONTO — Roberto Alomar hit a two-run double and Joe Carter followed with a two-run homer as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied for four runs in the seventh inning for a three-game sweep.
 Mark Eichhorn (3-4) got his first victory for Toronto, which acquired him from California on Thursday. Duane Ward got the final five outs for his 10th save, allowing Pat Kelly's sacrifice fly in the eighth. The win was the fourth straight for the Blue Jays.

Braves 3, Giants 0
Braves 8, Giants 5
SAN FRANCISCO — Greg Olson's two-run single capped a six-run, sixth-inning rally in the nightcap.
 The sweep gave the Braves a one-game lead over the Cincinnati Reds in the National League West. The two clubs begin a three-game series Tuesday night at Atlanta.
 Right-hander Pete Smith and relievers Kent Mercker and Alejandro Pena combined on a five-hitter for a 3-0 victory in the opener. It was the Braves' major league-leading 19th shutout of the season.
Astros 5, Reds 4
CINCINNATI — Eddie Taubensee's two-run homer and a pair of RBIs by Steve Finley snapped the Astros' three-game losing streak.
 Taubensee's second homer of the year came off Jose Rijo (8-8) in the seventh and drove in Pete Incaviglia, who had reached base on a fielder's choice.
 Reliever Joe Boever (3-4) got the final out of the sixth and the first of the seventh for the win in relief of Pete Harnisch.

OLYMPICS: Another chance vs. Cuba

 Before that, the women's multi-event in track and field was the pentathlon, and no one had ever repeated in that, either.
 Later in the week, Joyner-Kersey will try to win her second straight Olympic long jump title. She set an Olympic record of 24 feet, 3 1/2 inches in Seoul.
 Javier Sotomayor of Cuba, the only man ever to clear 8 feet, won the men's high jump with a leap of 7-8, the lowest winning height since 1976. Hollis Conway of Lafayette, La., wound up in a three-way tie for the bronze medal.
 In the day's other track finals, Elena Romanova of the Unified Team won the women's 3,000 meters in 8:46.04, and Igor Astapkovich led a Unified sweep of the hammer medals with a throw of 270-9.

 Jud Logan of North Canton, Ohio was fourth, the highest finish for an American since Harold Connolly won gold in 1956.
 "Not in my wildest dreams did I think I'd be in fourth place," Logan said.
 Scherbo, just 5-foot-6 and 136 pounds, won the parallel bars, vault, pommel horse and rings during the men's individual apparatus Sunday, adding those to gold medals he'd already won as the Games' all-around champion and in leading the Unified Team to the team title.
 Scherbo's highest mark of the night came in the rings, his least favorite event, when he scored 9.937 out of a possible 10. Scherbo lost his favorite event, the floor exercise, to Li Xiaoshaung of China, when he stepped out of bounds after completing a tumbling pass and finished sixth.

 Dimas, with a history of poor performance in big meets, won the high bar with 9.875 points. It was the only apparatus for which Scherbo did not qualify.
 Dimas, of Albuquerque, N.M., put on a gravity-defying show above the bar, executing three releases and catches that were the best of his life.
 "I thought about it all day today. I was so nervous, so scared. You get to where you have to accomplish your goals or get out," Dimas said. "I had no choice."
 The U.S. baseball team could have avoided a semifinal game against Cuba by beating Japan, but its pitching gave out.
 Left-hander B.J. Wallace gave up consecutive homers in a four-run sixth inning, so Japan will play Taiwan in the other semifinal. The undefeated and heavily favored Cubans beat Taiwan 8-1.

 The semifinal winners will play Wednesday for the gold medal, the losers for the bronze.
 "They might overlook us," U.S. coach Ron Fraser said of Cuba. "Hopefully, they do."
 The U.S. men's basketball now has won 90 games in Olympic competition. Charles Barkley scored 20 points, and the United States finished the preliminary round with a 5-0 record.
 Spain trailed the Americans only 20-15 midway through the first half, but the United States went on a 9-1 run, then later pulled off a 23-6 tear for a 54-27 lead with 2:27 left.

3 pitchers selected for game's Hall

Jim Donaghy
Associated Press

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — Tom Seaver used his induction into the Hall of Fame to make another perfect delivery.

Seaver, Rollie Fingers, Hal Newhouser and the late umpire Bill McGowan were inducted Sunday as more than 15,000 baseball fans looked on from the grounds outside the Alfred Clark Gymnasium.

The ceremony was moved from its usual site, the Hall of Fame library, which is under construction. But the location really didn't matter.

"It is the last beautiful flower in a perfect bouquet," said Seaver to an audience which included more than 30 Hall of Famers, including Ted Williams, Stan Musial and Johnny Bench.

This also was the first year Pete Rose would have been eligible for the Hall of Fame. But the doors of Cooperstown were locked to Rose after he was barred from baseball for gambling on the sport.

Rose was a distant memory on this day, however, as thousands of Met fans made the three-hour journey from New York to thank "Tom Terrific" for the memories.

Some of the memories were his 25-7 season in 1969, his near-perfect game against the Chicago Cubs and his 19 strikeouts, including 10 in a row, against the San Diego Padres in 1970.

Some of his personal highlights didn't even come with the Mets. He pitched a no-hitter and struck out his 3,000th batter with Cincinnati and recorded his 300th victory as a member of the Chicago White Sox at Yankee Stadium.

"I was fortunate to win 300 games," said Seaver, who won three Cy Young Awards and was Rookie of the Year in 1967. "Look at the players 60 feet, 6 inches away — Jerry Grote, Carlton Fisk and Johnny Bench."

Seaver's numbers tell you why he made it to the Hall of Fame — 311 wins, 2.86 ERA, 3,640 strikeouts, 61 shutouts — but you had to see him to appreciate and understand his constant striving for perfection.

And, many in the crowd seemed to understand what he was all about. They chanted his name and carried signs about him as if he were a presidential candidate. They wore Met caps, jackets and uniform shirts.

Seaver was the first real Met superstar and now their first real Hall of Famer. The Mets brought in big names like Duke Snider, Warren Spahn, Yogi Berra and Willie Mays for name recognition through the years, but they had been stars for other teams.

Seaver seemed to be as close to perfection on the mound as any pitcher who ever threw a baseball. The fluid, compact motion ending in an explosive fastball over the outside corner.

"When I talk of family I have been very blessed," Seaver said. "Family is the heart and soul of our lives."

Seaver is a broadcaster for the New York Yankees, and there are reports he might be considered as the NL president to replace Bill White.

As usual, Fingers was around to mop up what cheers were left after the demonstration for Seaver.

But Rollie was used to this role. Fingers retired after the 1985 season with a record 341 saves, broken this year by Boston's Jeff Reardon. He also had seven saves in the World Series and helped Oakland win three consecutive titles from 1972-74.

"I think I'm most proud of the position I played," Fingers said. "There were a lot of great relief pitchers before me. I happened to be at the right place, at the right time with the right team."

He was known for his pinpoint control, durability and his handlebar mustache. All the A's wore beards or mustaches, but Fingers' was famous. "Someday a little kid will see my mustache and think it should be 1892 instead of 1992," Fingers said.

When Fingers became a free agent, he talked with the Cincinnati Reds among others. But the Reds said no facial hair, and Rollie said "see ya."

As a member of the Milwaukee Brewers in 1981, Fingers had 28 saves and a 1.04 ERA en route to the AL Cy Young Award and MVP. In helping the Brewers gain their first postseason appearance, Fingers figured in 55 percent of Milwaukee's victories.

"Prince Hal" Newhouser dominated baseball in the mid 1940s, winning the MVP award in 1944 and 1945. But that's when a lot of the major league's best players were away for World War II, and some suggested Newhouser's success was a result.

Newhouser became a major leaguer at the age of 18 in 1939 and was only 25-43 through 1941. He started his career 0-1, 9-9, 9-11 and 8-14.

USA BOXING

Two-time world champ Eric Griffin

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Tim Austin took matters into his own hands Sunday and out of the computer's.

A day after U.S. teammate Eric Griffin lost a disputed decision to Spain's Rafael Lozano in a 106-pound fight, Austin peppered Bulgarian Julian Strogov with right jabs and hooks, won a 19-7 decision and moved into the quarterfinals at 112 pounds.

"I just want to go and beat my man more than the computer can beat me," Austin said. "They told me early this morning to go out there and knock him on his you-know-what."

While Austin and Raul Marquez (156 pounds) joined five other Americans in the quarterfinals, which begin Monday, Griffin sat helplessly by as the International Amateur Boxing Association rejected U.S. Boxing's appeal.

"I just want to continue in the Games is what I want to do," said the 24-year-old Griffin, a two-time world 106-pound champion from Broussard, La.

The appeal first was rejected by a jury of members of the referees and judges commission and the technical rules commission, then by the IABA Executive Committee.

Said Griffin: "Hopefully, the rest of my teammates can pull out seven gold medals."

Chris Byrd, 165 pounds, of Flint, Mich., will be the first American to go for the medal round when he fights Ahmed Dine of Algeria on Monday. Later, Oscar De La Hoya, 132 pounds, of Los Angeles, will box Dimitrov Tontchev of Bulgaria, and Danell Nicholson, 201 pounds, of Chicago, will meet world champion Felix Savon, one of 11 Cubans to reach the quarterfinals.

Joyner-Kersey lays claim as all-time best

California's Jackie Joyner-Kersey fires her way to a second consecutive gold medal and 7,000-plus point performance in the Olympic heptathlon Sunday in Barcelona.

BARCELONA, Spain — Jackie Joyner-Kersey and Vitaly Scherbo made history Sunday at the Summer Olympics. For the U.S. baseball players, it was another loss, and they could be history very soon.

Next up for Team USA: Cuba. Joyner-Kersey became the first woman ever to repeat as Olympic heptathlon champion, winning the two-day, seven-event marathon by nearly 200 points over Irina Belova of the Unified Team.

"This was the challenge," Joyner-Kersey said. "Because it was so historic, I really wanted to get the gold."

Scherbo, the 20-year-old Mighty Mite of Minsk, captured four of the six events in men's gymnastics and became the first gymnast ever with six gold medals in one Games. Trent Dimas gave the American men their first gymnastics gold in the high bar.

"I certainly did not expect this to happen," he said. "It seemed impossible that I could win so many gold medals."

A 7-1 loss to Japan sends the U.S. baseball team into a semifinal game against mighty Cuba on Tuesday. The Dream Team, meanwhile, rolled on with a 122-81 basketball victory over Spain.

With all of the day's events over, the Unified Team led with 74 total medals, 32 gold. The United States had 56 medals, 19 gold, and Germany was third with 45 medals, 14 gold.

The United States saw its final hopes for a medal in men's tennis disappear Sunday. Pete Sampras, the No. 3 seed, lost in five sets to Andrei Cherkasov of the Unified Team. No. 1 Jim Courier and No. 6 Michael Chang lost earlier.

One of the brightest spots for America on Sunday was also one of the wettest. These two guys were up a creek with paddles, and good ones. Joe Jacobi of Bethesda, Md., and Scott Strausbaugh of Dover, Pa., gave the United States only its fifth canoe-kayak medal ever, winning the doubles canoe.

"The river seemed narrow, the gates seemed wide. It was just ideal," Jacobi said.

Joyner-Kersey finished with 7,044 points, her best since a world record of 7,291 at the 1988 Olympics. She won the silver at Los Angeles in 1984.

Not only did she become the first double heptathlon winner, she also became only the second American woman ever to win the same track title in consecutive Olympics. The other was Wyomia Tyus, who won the 100 meters in 1964 and '68.

Belova won silver with 6,845 points and Sabine Braun of Germany captured the bronze with 6,649 points.

Joyner-Kersey, of Canoga Park, Calif., won the 100-meter hurdles, 200-meter dash and the long jump in the two-day competition. Also part of the heptathlon are the high jump, shot put, javelin and 800 meters.

The heptathlon has been contested in the Olympics only since 1984. See OLYMPICS, Page 9

Roosevelt product advances

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Natasha Kaiser advanced to the semifinal round of the 400-meter dash at the Olympic Games, finishing third in her qualifying heat Sunday with a time of 50.71 seconds.

The top four finishers in each quarterfinal heat advanced to Monday's semifinals. Finalists will run in the Olympic 400 on Wednesday.

Kaiser's quarterfinal time was the fourth-fastest overall. She won her first-round heat Saturday, finishing in 51.41 seconds.

Kaiser, 25, of Des Moines also has qualified for the 4 x 400 relay team.

While in high school, Kaiser ran for Des Moines Roosevelt. The former Missouri all-American has run in the Drake Relays.

Her parents, Fred and Elaine Kaiser of Des Moines, flew to Barcelona Wednesday to watch their daughter compete. A group of Roosevelt staff members, led by physical education teacher Mike Wilson, raised $10,000 for the couple's trip.

PRIME TIME LEAGUE

Fitzpatrick's edges Nike for title

Stokes' 26 points pace club to third crown in last four seasons.

The Daily Iowan

Fitzpatrick's Brew Pub wrapped up the sixth season of the Iowa City Prime Time League Sunday with a rousing 90-83 victory over Nike at City High.

The contest matched Iowa centers old and new in Greg Stokes (Fitzpatrick's) and Russ Millard (Nike), and the battle lived up to expectations with Stokes scoring 26 and Millard 33.

Stokes added seven rebounds and five blocked shots, while Millard grabbed nine boards for Nike.

The top two seeded teams, First National Bank and Imprinted Sportswear/Airliner, had surprisingly been knocked out of the playoffs after dominating much of the regular season schedule, but Fitzpatrick's had history on its side. The team has been in the past four Prime Time championships, and has now won three of them.

The game stayed even throughout most of the first half, as Millard scored 20 points to stake Nike to a 48-46 halftime lead. Both teams used a powerful inside attack and the strategy worked well for each squad, with a substantial portion of the points coming off dunks and lay-ups.

In the end however, the physical nature of the game was dictated by Kent Hill, another ex-Hawkeye and former teammate of Stokes', who came alive in the second half and helped Fitzpatrick's in the win.

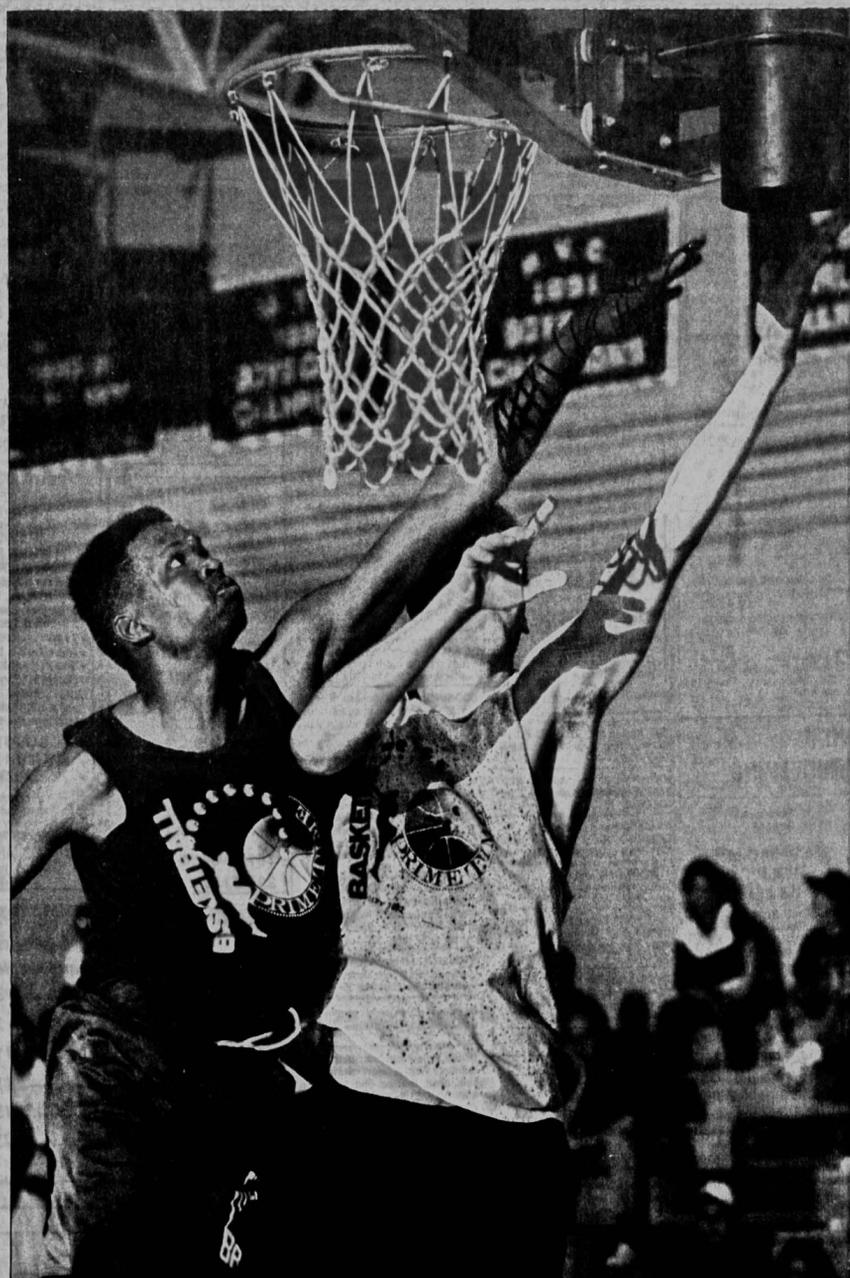

Hill, who had knee surgery just last May, scored 20 points, hauled down 13 rebounds and made four steals.

The burly forward was instrumental in the Fitzpatrick's comeback, as he was often able to bull his way inside for easy buckets in the second half after scoring only seven points in the first half.

After the score was knotted at 81-81 with just two minutes remaining, Fitzpatrick's went on a 9-2 run to end any hopes for a Nike win. Fitzpatrick's had led by as many as 10 just a few minutes before the game became tied, but Nike scratched and clawed back into it before finally succumbing.

Mike Kleppe of Morningside College scored 18 for Fitzpatrick's, while Troy Washpun totaled 17 for Nike.

During halftime, Prime Time Director Randy Larson presented the league's award winners and Iowa power forward Chris Street was named Most Valuable Player.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Fitzpatrick's Greg Stokes, a former Hawkeye All-Big Ten player, goes up for the block on Nike's Russ

Millard in the championship game of the Prime Time League Sunday night.

Street, who played for Imprinted Sportswear/Airliner, led the league in scoring (37 points per game) and rebounding (20.2 per game).

Former Hawkeye point guard Troy Skinner won the assists title with a 10 per game average.

Street's Iowa teammate, Jay Webb, was the league's second best rebounder at 14 per game.

And in an award that didn't come as a shock to anybody, Kent Hill was named Most Inspirational Player.

Blackjack wins 15th in 7-4 defeat of M's

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The last Chicago White Sox to win 20 games was LaMarr Hoyt, who was 24-10 in 1983. Jack McDowell appears on his way to ending the drought.

McDowell became the American League's first 15-game winner for the Sox' fifth victory in six games, 7-4 over Seattle.

"I've been able to make big pitches to get out of bad situations," McDowell said. "It automatically highlights those situations when your team can come back and pick me up, and they've been doing that for me all year."

McDowell (15-5) increased his career record against Seattle to 5-0, allowing four runs and eight hits in seven innings. He struck out six and walked three as he won for the fourth time in five starts. Scott Radinsky finished with one-hit relief for his ninth save.

Dave Fleming (12-5) gave up six runs — four earned — and nine hits in 6 1/2 innings, struck out three and walked three.

Rangers 5, Angels 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Kevin Brown pitched five-hit ball for eight innings to win for the first time since the All-Star game.

Brown (15-7) became the American League's second 15-game winner, joining Chicago's Jack McDowell, who won his 15th earlier in the day. Brown struck out nine to match his career high and walked one. He has lasted to the seventh inning in 20 of 23 starts.

Mark Langston (9-10), who had lost three consecutive decisions, allowed two runs and three hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked one.

Mets 4, Cubs 2

NEW YORK — This was an afternoon the New York Mets will remember for a long time, and not because they beat the Chicago Cubs or because Tom Seaver was inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Instead, in one of the worst medical days in Mets' history, they lost Bobby Bonilla with a fractured rib, discovered that Howard Johnson had a fractured wrist and found out that Bret Saberhagen will miss at least one start because of a re-injured finger.

"It's never hard to enjoy a win," manager Jeff Torborg said, "but it's harder when you lose people. It's tough anytime, but especially when you're down to the last two months."

Bonilla came out after one inning. He dove hard into the warning track chasing Andre Dawson's foul fly, and stayed in the game until the inning ended.

Steve Buechele did not play for the Cubs. He left the opener of Saturday's doubleheader with a slightly strained left ribcage, and is day-to-day.

Athletics 8, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Carney Lansford homered in a six-run sixth inning, and Bob Welch (9-5) won for the sixth time in seven decisions.

Twins 5, Brewers 0
