Libants favors term limits for Iowa legislators

James Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Defeating a legislative incumbent is rarely an easy task. Especially if the incumbent is a Democrat in Johnson County, where registered Democratic voters outnumber Republicans 2-to-1.

Marc Libants, the Republican candidate for the 45th District Seat in the Iowa House of Representatives, admits that defeating a 26-year Democratic incumbent will be difficult. So the 21-year-old UI political science and journalism major has taken the semester off this fall to campaign full time.

"Minnette Doderer is a powerhouse," Libants said of his opponent. "I realize as a first-term legislator I'm not going to have a great deal of influence. But the problem is legislators worry more about their careers and getting elected, including Minnette Doderer."

To reduce the state's budget deficit, Libants said it is important to do "whatever is necessary," and would favor a pay cut for state legislators.

"For me the job is going to be a pay raise," he said. Libants currently works five to 10 hours a week in the operations department at WSUI radio.

Libants, who moved to Iowa City in 1986 from Benton Harbor, Mich., said he supports a plan that allocates $60 million a year to reducing the state's budget deficit, estimated to be between $250 million and $300 million by generally accepted accounting procedures.

"I'm not any expert, but legislators I have talked to say there is a five-year plan to eliminate the budget deficit," said Libants. "I support the plan they are using, but I could not tell you where that $60 million is coming from."

Libants said he has "not thought much" about the first piece of legislation he might introduce in the Iowa General Assembly, but it would probably be term limitations for elected officials. He has pledged to serve only six years as a state representative.

A 1989 graduate of Iowa City Regina High School, Libants agrees with Ross Perot's statement that government ought to be "run like a business," and said it will be "fun" learning about the legislative process. If elected, he would like to serve on committees where education and appropriations are involved.

On the issue of gun control, Libants said it is not a definite aspect of his agenda and that even a seven-day waiting period would not have prevented the shootings on the UI campus last November.

"I don't see what the benefit would be for moving the waiting period from three to seven days," said Libants. "Unless it would give them more time to conduct more background checks."

Libants supports a woman's right to have an abortion, but for women under age 18, he supports parental notification because it is a "serious medical procedure."

With regard to the approved 1 percent increase in the sales tax last spring, Libants said it was the

Former House Post Office chief pleads guilty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The highest-ranking official to be indicted in the House Post Office scandal pleaded guilty Thursday in a criminal investigation that could target members of Congress and their campaigns.

Former Post Office Chief-of-Staff Joanna O'Rourke, promising to cooperate with prosecutors, admitted to two misdemeanors.

Former Judge Hastings' impeachment overturned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge, in an unprecedented move, on Thursday overturned the impeachment of former U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings on grounds he did not receive a fair trial from the Senate.

U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin said Hastings' 1989 ouster was unfair because a 12-member Senate committee, rather than the full Senate, conducted the impeachment trial.

Hastings, Florida's first black judge, was acquitted of bribery-related charges in a 1983 criminal trial.

Syria threatens to quit talks with Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syria said peace talks with Israel are verging on deadlock and threatened Thursday to walk out of the negotiations unless Israel acknowledged it must withdraw from all of the Golan Heights.

Chief Israeli negotiator Itamar Rabinovich said he could not understand the Syrian position, accusing Syria of "an attempt... to stage a mini-crisis."

CREATING A SAFER WORK PLACE

Review committee says UI can do more for Jew

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

The UI could take additional steps to assure a working environment free of sexually-based hostility for UI anatomy Professor Jean Jew, according to a report issued earlier this summer by a UI-appointed special review committee.

The UI asked the committee last spring to investigate whether or not the UI is in compliance with a 1990 federal court decision in the case of Jean Y. Jew vs. The University of Iowa and the Board of Regents of the University of Iowa, which ordered the UI to provide such an environment.

Explaining the difficulty involved in such an investigation, the committee said it could not express an opinion either way at this time.

While recognizing the steps that the UI has taken, such as hiring outside consultants and distributing the UI's sexual harassment policy, the report pointed out that because the UI will be facing "substantial change" in the near future, it is "impossible to predict the character of the working environment to be faced by Dr. Jew over the long term."

The upcoming appointments of a new dean for the College of Medicine, a new general counsel and a new vice president of health affairs could have a significant impact on this environment, the report said.

The committee made several recommendations to the UI, including issuing a new statement that expressed the UI's commitment to fostering a supportive and equitable working and learning environment, and to eliminating sexual harassment.

The committee also suggested that the UI take the opportunity, when hiring, to the open administrative positions, to inquire into the candidates' experience in issues of equal opportunity and a harassment-free

PRICE-CONTROL BATTLE

House OKs cable bill; Bush expected to veto

Diane Duston
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House responded Thursday to consumer complaints about escalating cable television rates and indifferent service by voting to put the industry under government control.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., sponsor of the bill that passed 280-128, called it the most important consumer legislation Congress would face this year. But President Bush said he would veto it because it "will hurt Americans by imposing a wide array of costly, burdensome and unnecessary requirements on the cable industry."

The measure now goes to the Senate, which was expected to act on it next week.

The cable industry has aggressively opposed the bill supported by such groups as the Consumer Federation of America, the AFL-CIO and the American Association of Retired Persons.

Key to the measure is Federal Communications Commission regulation of basic cable service which would consist of cable-delivered local broadcast affiliates of ABC, CBS, NBC, Fox and PBS and public, educational and government cable channels, but not C-SPAN.

The FCC would determine "reasonable" rates that customers should pay for those channels and ensure that equipment such as converter boxes and remote control devices also be priced reasonably.

The commission also would:

- Set service standards to protect against chronic outages.

- Guarantee that customers get quick telephone response to questions about billing, refunds and service problems.

- Streamline its system for handling consumer complaints.

- Step in if cable charges for additional programming became exorbitant.

Rep. Sonny Callahan, R-Ala., said some people wonder "why is it we have a problem with a cable industry. The problem is that basically they are all a monopoly."

The bill addresses that condition with various provisions designed to help other television systems get a better foothold in the market. Lawmakers said they consider competition the most effective way to keep costs down.

The cable industry has fought the bill with full-page newspaper ads excerpting quotes against it from major metropolitan papers. It has used inserts in monthly cable bills and cable channel spots to contend the bill would create added costs that would be passed on to consumers.

The industry is most opposed to a requirement that they negotiate for local broadcast signals.

Under existing law, cable operators take broadcast signals for free to retransmit on any channel they choose as part of cable service. In other words, Channel 4 could be Channel 27 on cable.

The broadcast industry lobbied hard for the provision that allows them to negotiate terms with cable companies that would include placement on the dial and could require financial compensation.

ECONOMIC STAGNATION

U.S. trade gap swells to highest in 2 years

David Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit surged 16.2 percent in July to the highest level in nearly two years as export sales to economically stalled Europe plunged, the government said Thursday.

The latest $7.82 billion trade gap was the nation's worst since November 1990 and marked the fourth time in five months that the imbalance has widened after hitting a nine-year low of $3.29 billion in February, the Commerce Department said.

During the depths of the recession, trade provided one of the few bright spots in the U.S. economy. But economic stagnation has spread to major U.S. trading partners, and analysts said Americans will have to look to domestic growth to keep the tenuous recovery alive.

"We're going to have to lift ourselves by our own bootstraps," said economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago, Ill. "We've been helped considerably by the foreign sector for two years, but these latest numbers say our growth is going to have to be home grown."

Separately, the Labor Department reported the third consecutive weekly increase in claims for unemployment benefits, a sign that the U.S. economy is growing too slowly to reduce the unemployment rate.

Claims during the week ended Sept. 5 totaled 400,000, up 6,000 from the week before.

During the first seven months of this year, the trade deficit was running at a $74.5 billion annual rate.

Dederick and many other economists expect a trade deficit of around $80 billion this year and around $100 billion next year, up from an eight-year low of $65.4 billion last year.

That's bad news for President Bush, who has been using trade as a campaign theme. He has particularly touted the recently negotiated North American Free Trade Agreement, which if ratified would create a free trade zone stretching from Mexico's Yucatán peninsula to Canada's Yukon wilderness.

"Today's trade figures throw more cold water on President Bush's claim to be leading the nation toward world prominence as an export superpower," said Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee.

The latest deficit with Western Europe widened to $1.14 billion, from $90 million in June. July's gap was only the second with Europe during the past year and it was the worst in two years.

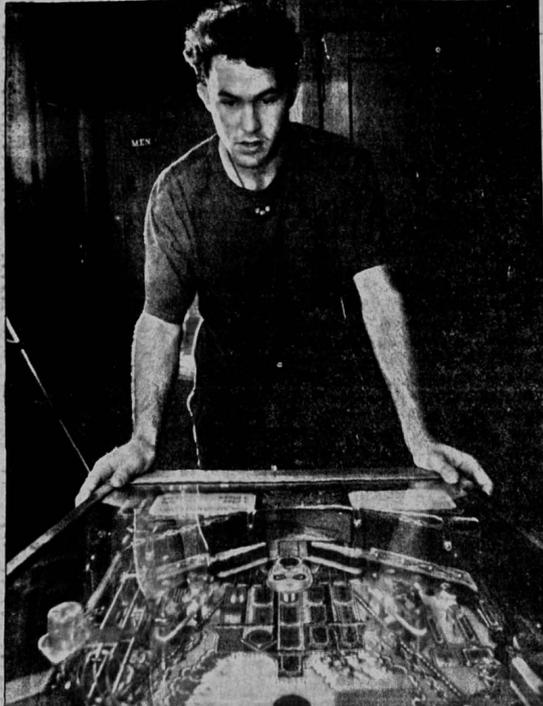

If the turmoil gripping Europe's currency markets slows the conti-

IC bar hosts state pinball tournament

Joe Taiber plays "The Addams Family" pinball machine Wednesday afternoon at the Deadwood. The Iowa Pinball Federation Fall Tournament continues through Saturday.

The contest ends Saturday afternoon.

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

The silver balls are flying and competition is tightening at the Deadwood in Iowa City as the Iowa Pinball Federation Fall Tournament heads into its final two days.

A week of tournament play at the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., kicked off Tuesday morning.

Parke Heller, who has only been playing the Deadwood machines for a couple of months, has stormed to an early lead.

Thursday afternoon he held top scores on three machines. "He's the rookie of the year," commented IPF executive director and Deadwood employee Phil Brown.

Brown and St. Louis, Mo., newcomer John Castelleo have registered impressive scores. This tournament is far from its Saturday afternoon conclusion.

Tom Brandau, who played only the final two days last spring to win the IPF State Tournament at the Deadwood, had only listed one score by Thursday afternoon this time around.

Trophies will be awarded for men's and women's combined high scores on the five pinball machines as well as for men's and women's high scores on each individual machine.

Prizes awarded by local sponsors for high scores on individual machines include 10 compact discs and a baseball jacket, among others.

Deadwood owner Jim Bell said the tournament is good for his tavern because "it gets some new people in here." Bell said he was pleased that about a third of the players have been women.

Boasting about the Deadwood's pinball machines, Brown said, "We'd like to think we have the best selection in town."

He said their oldest machine is a year old. Bell added that the establishment acquires a new machine on almost a monthly basis.

The IPF State Tournament last spring was the Deadwood's first IPF event. The tavern sponsored a delegation of top scorers from the tournament to the World Pinball Federation Tournament in Milwaukee, Wis., in April.

In Milwaukee, Brown placed ninth in the world, while IPF women's champion Deb Rashleigh and her partner knocked off the defending world mixed champions.

This tournament can be considered, for the serious players, a tune-up for the November Pinball Expo in Chicago, Ill., one of the grand-slam pinball events, Bell said. Yet the Deadwood won't be sponsoring a delegation from this tournament to the Expo.

Bell said he hopes to increase the number of tournament participants from the 30 last spring to 50. He said he expects an expanded advertising effort for this tournament to push the numbers up.

VANDALISM, NOT PUBLICITY

UI officials say sidewalk chalk ads illegal

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

An easy and inexpensive way to advertise amounts to extra work for employees of the UI Physical Plant.

For years student organizations and community businesses have put fliers or chalk writing on the Pentacrest as a way of advertising their upcoming events.

This practice is illegal, according to Director of UI Department of Public Safety William Fuhrmeister.

"It's a form of vandalism," Fuhrmeister said. "If we can catch the individual doing it, we have them make restitution to the university by paying for whatever the cost is to remove it."

The biggest problem with the advertising is the cleanup, Grounds Supervisor Sean Fitzpatrick said.

"It's a little bit of a burden," Fitzpatrick said. "I have no idea how many hours we spend actually cleaning the ads up, but it does take away from other things we'd like to do."

Fitzpatrick said the ads come in different forms. Some organizations simply write in chalk, while others tape fliers to the ground and trash cans. The fliers are the hardest to get off, he said.

"The paper gets some pretty gooey gum on the back of it from the tape," Fitzpatrick said. "This summer we had a student spend half the summer just repainting trash cans because of the flyers taped to them."

Sigma Kappa sorority is one of several groups that has used chalk to advertise. Informal Rush Chairwoman Diane Duncan said she didn't know there was any problem with writing in chalk.

Duncan added that cleanup wasn't a problem because the rain washes away the writing. The success of the advertising was mixed, she said.

"We've had a lot of people talk about it, and a lot of people see it," Duncan said. "I don't know if it really brings girls to the house, but it does get our name around campus."

If the Physical Plant can link the vandalism back to any particular organization or group, it will be charged for the labor of cleanup.

"We can trace some things back to the organization and we try to use the charge as a deterrent, with marginal results. We probably don't charge back as much as we should," Fitzpatrick said.

He said the chalk ads aren't as likely to receive a charge as fliers, which take more time to clean.

Despite the deterrent factor, chances of completely stopping the advertising are small, Fuhrmeister said.

"The main thing is to discourage people from defacing and littering up the campus. It's something we don't like to see, but it happens here and at other campuses," he said.

REVITALIZING LOCAL SPOTS

Project GREEN restores safety, beauty of park

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

The revitalization of College Green Park, which started this week, will create a safer, more accessible place for Iowa City residents to spend their time.

Better lighting, wider sidewalks, easier entrances to the park and wheelchair accessible playground equipment are all part of the College Green Park Revitalization Project.

Project GREEN, a volunteer group dedicated to beautifying Iowa City, is sponsoring the project, which will restore and update the 150-year-old park.

Emilie Rubright, co-chairwoman of the Project GREEN steering committee, said that after the revitalization project, the park will be easier to enter and more accessible to the disabled.

"On the Dodge Street side there will be no steps at all," she said. "We're replacing the sidewalks with wider sidewalks and part of the playground equipment will have a hard surface underneath it and low entry onto ramps for wheelchairs," Rubright said.

Reducing a series of long steps on the northwest side of the park to a series of smaller steps with landings and hand rails will make the park more accessible to those who have trouble walking up steps, such as the elderly, Rubright said.

Project GREEN is also trying to make the park safer. According to Rubright, 32 lights will be installed along the interior sidewalk of the park. Currently, the park has only four interior lights, which has caused some controversy in the past, Rubright said.

"There's been a number of complaints about the lighting . . . you have no idea what's at the top of those stairs entering the park," Rubright said. "One of our concerns was to make the entrance more safe and visible so nothing can hide. It's not a fail-safe, but it will certainly be an improvement."

Pat Boutelle, co-chairwoman of the Project GREEN steering committee, said that other steps will be taken to make the park safer.

"We are not planting any shrubbery because we felt that you should be able to see through the park. You will have peripheral sight of all four street sides,"

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

College Green Park is being restored and updated by the College Green Park Revitalization Project, sponsored by Project GREEN.

Boutelle said. "It should help increase safety in the park, which is an issue that Project GREEN and Parks and Recreation are very sensitive to."

In order to make these changes and revitalize the park, Project GREEN will be planting 47 new trees and cutting down about six existing trees, Boutelle said. Some people are concerned about the trees being cut down.

"Project GREEN is renovating College Green Park which is an admirable concept," said Rebecca Rosenbaum, a concerned citizen.

POLICY IN TRANSITION

Smokers find refuge in Union despite ban

Jean Kendall, Union director, has applied for an exemption from the ban for certain areas.

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

The campuswide ban on cigarette smoking in all UI-owned buildings and vehicles has been in place since the beginning of classes on Aug. 24. However, for smokers at the Union, it's been business as usual.

Several locations in the Union, including the River Room and the Wheelroom, still bear the unmistakable signs of smokers in action — overflowing ashtrays, clouds of drifting carcinogens and the sound of phlegm being hacked into pop bottles and open palms.

In the River Room, "smoking permitted" signs still hang from pillars, and tin ashtrays continue to be placed in strategic positions for smokers to use.

Jean Kendall, director of the Union, said Thursday that the Union administration was "waiting for answers" from a UI ad hoc committee for a smoking ban exemption request.

"We're submitting a proposal for several sections of the building," Kendall said. "Our exemptions would be minimal — for the most part, it will be a smoke-free building."

The ad hoc committee of eight UI faculty members and administrators has been formed to hear and decide upon individual exemption requests from the smoking policy, such as UI professors who want to continue smoking in their private offices.

According to Joanne Fritz, director of University Relations, implementation of the ban has been a slow, step-by-step process.

"We're aware that there's going to be a period of transition..."

Joanne Fritz

"We need to make sure everyone's aware of the policy," Fritz said. "We're aware that there's going to be a period of transition, and we're allowing for that."

A similar period of transition occurred last summer. The ban, originally slated to go into effect July 1, was moved back to Aug. 24 in order to ensure campuswide notification of the policy and the changes it would cause.

Ann Rhodes, vice president of University Relations, said at the end of June that "The ban was postponed so we'd have a chance to let everybody know about the ban and what it involves."

Fritz said that while policy was in effect for the entire campus, it was the responsibility of individual building managers to see it was enforced.

"We're counting on the individual administrators of each building to try and make sure the buildings are smoke free," Fritz said.

Despite the continuing cigarette puffing in the Union, the month-old ban has held sway in other campus buildings.

Barbara Dewey, director of administrative and access services for the University Libraries, said the Main Library has been smoke-free since the ban went into effect Aug. 24.

"It seems to be working well," Dewey said, adding that there had been no specific problems with implementation of the policy.

Dewey also said that the study area on the fourth floor of the Main Library which had previously served as a smoking lounge is now used frequently by non-smoking students.

According to Fritz, the non-

smoking policy is dependent on a "good-faith effort to comply" on the part of smokers.

In terms of physical enforcement of the policy, Fritz said, "We haven't gotten to that problem yet."

"This is kind of new territory, and we're dealing with problems as they present themselves," Fritz added.

Branstad requests disaster aid for flooded areas

Mike Glover

DES MOINES — Even as waters were receding, Gov. Terry Branstad was making plans to notify federal officials that flood-stricken southern Iowa needs their help, aides said Thursday.

"The governor will send a letter indicating he will be making a formal request for a presidential disaster declaration," said Branstad spokesman Richard Vohs.

Vohs described that step as a way of starting the process to obtain federal help for flood damage.

Some rain fell overnight in portions of the flooded areas, but it didn't aggravate the damage, Vohs said. "There was some rain, but we haven't heard of anything where it had a major impact," he said.

Branstad has issued disaster declarations for six Iowa counties — Adams, Wayne, Union, Clarke, Lucas and Decatur — and is virtually certain to seek federal aid.

Undergrads signing up for Alumni Association

Victoria Forlini
The Daily Iowan

When most students think of the UI Alumni Association they think of the alumni marching band in the homecoming parade or an organization catering to the over-50 crowd.

Think again. At the beginning of the 1990-91 school year, the association started actively recruiting undergraduates in an effort to have students see that the association can benefit everyone.

The recruitment begins every fall semester with mailings to the entire undergraduate population on the operation of the alumni association and how a student can benefit from joining it.

UI senior Jennifer Estabrook said she joined the association two years ago because of discounts she received from the University Book Store, free athletic passes, and a discount voucher on a United Airlines flight.

"The credit card is definitely the best thing," she said. Visa or MasterCard, offered through the alumni association, do not require an annual fee for undergraduates and have a lower annual percentage rate than most bank cards.

Estabrook also said many of her friends had signed up with the association because "it really is a pretty good deal."

To become a member of the alumni association an undergraduate pays a yearly fee of $15 while an alumnus is billed $30.

According to Shirley Vermace, assistant director of marketing with the Alumni Association, the UI was the first university in the country to recruit undergraduates. "Now other Big Ten and Big Eight schools are calling and asking how to do it."

Vermace said she is pleased with the number of students who have joined the alumni association.

During the first year of recruitment, 1,400 undergraduates joined the association. In the following academic year of 1991-92, there were 1,200 out of the nearly 18,000 undergraduates who became alumni members.

This year the association, which is still making its recruitment push, already has over 1,000 students signed up.

Vermace said this year's recruitment goal is 2,000.

The main reason behind admitting undergraduates is "to let them know what we're all about and how they can benefit from the association," said Vermace.

Iowa has one of the more successful alumni associations in the country, she said. Last year it received the Gold Award for best alumni association.

Of the 160,000 living UI alumni, 45,000 belong to the Alumni Association.

These members organize Iowa Clubs around the country to form job networks or get together for sporting events.

They are also involved in community activities such as literacy programs. Literacy work has begun in Iowa as well as Illinois where UI graduate and Chicago Bulls guard, B.J. Armstrong, is the sponsor.

"We know because of the increasing enrollment, the undergraduates should be one of our biggest focuses," said Vermace. "Undergraduates shouldn't wait until they leave to see the benefits in their own back yard."

UI senior Amy Davoux would agree.

This is the second year she has signed up in the association and says she will definitely continue to be in it after she graduates.

"I've had a really good four years at Iowa," she said. "I'm staying for graduate school so why shouldn't I stay in the association."

SEXUAL ASSAULT AWARENESS WEEK SEPT. 13-19
Poem About My Rights
Even tonight and I need to take a walk and clear my head about this poem about why I can't go out without changing my clothes my shoes my body posture my gender identity my age my status as a woman alone in the evening alone on the streets alone not being the point the point being that I can't do what I want to do with my own body because I am the wrong sex the wrong age the wrong skin and suppose it was not here in the city but down on the beach or far into the woods and I wanted to go there by myself thinking about God or thinking about children or thinking about the world all of it disclosed by the stars and the silence: I could not go and I could not think and I could not stay there alone as I need to be alone because I can't do what I want to do with my own body and who in the hell set things up like this

LOW TURNOUT

Lack of interest in meetings, elections vexes School Board

Though officials are understandably frustrated, they say total uninterest is not necessarily indicated.

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

Anyone who has attended an Iowa City School Board meeting in recent years or voted in a school election probably is unfamiliar with the troubles of finding a place to stand in line at the polls.

While in some regards this may suggest a lack of interest on the part of the community, some district officials say low turnouts are frustrating, but may not necessarily reflect total disinterest.

"It's not troublesome to me that there's not more people," Alan Leff, board president, commented.

He said some complicated budget, finance, and curriculum issues that span several meetings are difficult to understand.

"The way our agendas are set up, people always have a chance to address the board," he added.

Leff said when people make presentations to the board they tend to leave as soon as they're finished and "I can't blame them one bit."

Penny Hall, president of the District-wide Parents' Organization, said the community is probably interested in what is happening, yet "unless there is something they really want to address, they don't bother to go down."

Hall agreed that the recent election results were "pretty predictable" but added that the candidates "needed that election vote of confidence."

"There must be something in the electoral process that if there isn't a competition there isn't a turnout," she added.

The September school board election featured two candidates running for two available seats on the board. The 515 voters out of 53,000 — less than 1 percent — turned out to vote.

Leff commented that this is not surprising because the race was uncontested.

Newly elected board member Tom Bender agrees.

"It's somewhat disheartening to see the lack of interest in elections," Bender said. "Yet if I hadn't been running, I may not have voted either."

Opinions about why the community appears disinterested in school board issues vary, but no one seems to have a definite answer.

"I can't explain the lack of interest," Leff said. "One reason may be that it's viewable on cable."

Leff said he is surprised by the number of people who say they've watched the televised meetings on cable Channel 27.

Bender said one of the goals the school board needs to address is how to get the community more involved in board issues and elections.

Bender said the apparent disinterest may be caused by a lack of effective communication between the school board and the community.

"A lot of people don't know what's going on," he said. "They have to tell us what they want."

He added that in talking with community members he has discovered a lot of misinformation and anger about issues long past.

"In a way, they're taking it out on today's kids," he said. "We've got a public relations obstacle to overcome here."

While the September board election saw a very low turnout, last May's bond referendum saw a record school election turnout of 11,392 voters.

"People know how to vote in school issues," Johnson County Commissioner of Elections Tom Slockett commented. "When there's a ballot issue they feel strongly about, they vote."

Slockett added that while he would like more people to vote in elections, he understands refusing to go to the polls may simply be an expression of satisfaction although "I know that's not a popular view to present."

"I wish everyone would take a stronger interest in local government," he said. "Sometimes people's lack of participation can be interpreted as support."

According to Slockett, "The job of being a director in the school district involves a tremendous effort with virtually no pay."

He added that becoming a candidate is very simple, however, requiring a petition with only 25 signatures to get on the ballot, and is unsure why more people don't get involved in running or voting, but is not overly concerned by it.

"I hope this in no way is interpreted as saying I approve of not voting," he said. "I think you have to look at the other side."

In December, voters will be asked to go to the polls again to decide the fate of a third bond referendum for $7.9 million.

After the failure of the previous referendums in May and October of last year, Bender said the board is going to have to work extra hard to get the message out to the voters.

"We're going to have to find a way to explain it in simple terms and give people a clear choice," he said.

9 ISU students charged with theft of cable services

Associated Press
DES MOINES — Nine Iowa State University students have been charged with stealing cable television services, university officials said.

The men were arrested this week and charged with fifth-degree theft.

Jerry Stewart, assistant director of public safety at ISU, said the students are accused of using a two-way splitter to receive the cable transmission.

"Because these devices are inside residence hall rooms, it would be impossible to speculate on how widespread the problem is," Stewart said.

Arrested Tuesday were: Richard Hines, 18; John Mullen, 19; Shawn Allan, 19; and Travis Christianson, 19, all of Storms Hall on the ISU campus.

Arrested Wednesday were: Troy Conroy, 20, and Troy Pflaghaupt, 19, both of Willow Hall.

Arrested Thursday were: Travis Fell, 21; Michael Hovotec, 26; and David Willet, 23, all of Willow Hall.

Fifth-degree theft, a simple misdemeanor, is punishable by up to 30 days in jail or a $100 fine.

Poll shows lack of faith in Bush's tax cut vow

Howard Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Most Americans in an Associated Press poll think President Bush's talk of a tax cut is "just politics." They think their taxes will probably go up whether voters re-elect Bush or choose Bill Clinton.

Voters are confused about the president's position on taxes, according to the poll of 1,002 randomly selected adults on Friday through Tuesday. About four in 10 think Bush is promising "no new taxes," but another four in 10 say he is refusing to make such a promise.

Bush declared last week that "I went along with one Democratic tax increase and I'm not going to do it again. Ever. Ever." But presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the next day — the day before the poll started — that Bush was not repeating his 1988 pledge against new taxes.

The president also suggested last week that Americans could receive a 1 percentage point tax-rate reduction if Congress approved some $130 billion in spending cuts he has proposed. Democrats in Congress have balked at many of the cuts, and 79 percent of those polled said they regarded Bush's idea as "just politics," rather than a serious proposal.

If Bush is re-elected, 56 percent think he is likely to raise their taxes, compared with 27 percent who think taxes will be unchanged and 6 percent who foresee lower taxes.

If Clinton gets into the White House, 68 percent think he'll raise their taxes. Fifteen percent think their tax bills won't change, and 8 percent think they will go down.

The poll by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., a part of AUS Consultant Cos., has a margin-of-sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points. The margin is 4 points for the 757 registered voters who were included and whose answers were not significantly different from the overall sample.

Bush campaign communications director Will Feltus dismissed the poll's finding that most voters — and two-thirds of Republicans in the survey — consider Bush's most specific plan to lower taxes and spending as "just politics."

"In the middle of the campaign, voters are going to consider everything a candidate says as political," Feltus said.

Those who think Bush would raise their taxes are reacting to the 1990 tax deal, Feltus said. "The Democrats raised taxes, blamed it on the president, and it stuck."

Other polls have shown that Bush's credibility suffered because he broke a campaign promise by agreeing to the 1990 tax increase, but that a majority now considers both men likely to raise taxes.

Clinton has proposed $150 billion in tax increases over four years, largely for the rich and for foreign corporations, with tax breaks for the middle-class and working poor.

In the poll, 80 percent of those with family incomes over $40,000 thought Clinton would raise their taxes, compared with 59 percent of those earning under $25,000.

WAR IN BOSNIA

Factions wage hostilities on verge of peace talks

George Jahn
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Fierce fighting erupted in the western part of the capital Thursday in what the U.N. commander said was an apparent attempt to stake claims before the opening of peace talks in Geneva, Switzerland, on Friday.

Bosnia's increasingly isolated government rejected a Serb proposal to use the talks to start dividing the republic into ethnic regions.

Forces of the Muslim-led government poured into Stup and Azici after Serb rebels launched a fierce attack with tank guns, artillery and mortars on the western neighborhoods. The government forces had been pushed back into that area in recent fighting.

Gen. Hussein Abdel Razeq, the Egyptian commander of U.N. forces in Bosnia, said the battles appeared to be an attempt to lay territorial claims.

Although the fighting was escalating, he said it was a "war of attrition" and that neither side had much chance of winning.

Bosnian government defense headquarters were deserted because all available officers and troops rushed to reinforce the Stup and Azici fronts, where the fighting sent columns of thick black smoke into the sky.

Although the battles were virtually next door to the airport, Abdel Razeq announced that a U.N. relief plane would fly into Sarajevo as a test and, if it went well, aid flights to the capital could resume next week. He set no date for the flight.

Humanitarian flights were halted on Sept. 3 when an Italian plane crashed on an aid mission. The Italian government has said in a preliminary report that the plane was hit by a heat-seeking missile, but it did not say which side launched the rocket.

VIOLENT CRIME

Better protective devices lead to rise in carjackings

Sally Streff Buzbee
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Kimberly Horton was waiting at a red light on the way home one July night when some young men decided they wanted her car.

The 21-year-old college student ended up on the sidewalk, shot in the head and dying. Her Honda Accord was pulled over two hours later, 35 miles away.

"It's just beyond comprehension," said her father, the Rev. Richard Horton. "All her hopes and dreams gone, and for such an inconceivable reason."

This week, a man was shot to death in New York City when he tried to stop someone stealing his car. And in a highly publicized carjacking last week, a Maryland women was dragged to her death. Instead of breaking into parked cars, thieves increasingly are resorting to forcing the driver out at stoplights, freeway ramps or parking lots, and then speeding away. A crime once considered "victimless" is turning up casualties.

Some police officials think amateur thieves are simply stymied by the sophisticated alarms, steering-wheel locks and homing devices installed by desperate auto owners as thefts continue to rise.

The FBI doesn't keep statistics on carjacking alone, said spokesman Mike Kortan in Washington, D.C., but in the last two years, the phenomenon has occurred in cities around the nation, notably Detroit, Mich., and Houston, Texas.

INTRODUCING THE IOWA BASKETBALL

BLOCK PARTY

Introducing a new and exciting way for University of Iowa students to enjoy the excitement of Hawkeye basketball!

BLOCK SEATING HAWKEYE STYLE!

Beginning this season, you can cheer the Hawkeyes while sitting next to your sorority sisters, fraternity brothers, dorm floor mates — any group of friends you choose to assemble!

You choose the members of your group. You choose the number of games your group wants to attend (6, 12 or 15 games).

Also, the larger your group, the closer you sit to the hard-hitting action because the location of your group's block of seats will be determined by the number of persons included in your group.

It's a whole new way to enjoy the Iowa Hawkeyes and all the action of Big Ten basketball!

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT 1992-93 IOWA BASKETBALL STUDENT SEASON TICKETS

You can place your student ticket order for the 1992-93 Iowa Basketball season Monday, Sept. 14, through Friday, Sept. 25.

Student tickets for the 1992-93 Iowa Basketball season cost just $5 per game and are available in 6-, 12- and 15-game packages.

Students ordering a ticket as part of a block order will be assigned a seat in Section LL, KK or JJ of Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Your exact seat location will be determined by the number of persons in your group. The larger your group, the closer your block of seats will be to the floor of Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Students ordering a single ticket will be assigned their seat in Carver-Hawkeye Arena based on their seating priority.

RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE

Presidential authority

George Bush made a telling statement as to his misunderstanding of the duties of the president when speaking to the National Guard Association on Tuesday. In an attempt to call Gov. Bill Clinton's qualifications into question, Bush said, "Despite all our problems at home, we can never forget that we ask our presidents to lead the military — to bear the awful authority of deciding to send your sons and daughters in harm's way."

While it is certainly true enough that our presidents have that "awful authority," Bush fails to recognize the connection between "all our problems at home" and the reasons that we sometimes send those "sons and daughters in harm's way." As Bill Clinton said to the same audience, "National security begins with economic security." It is this very fact that Bush fails to realize. A country that is worried about energy sources and jobs is a country that is less secure and more likely to be at risk of war or civil strife.

Perhaps this basic shortsightedness explains Bush's failure to head off problems before they happen, instead of reacting to things as they come, as he has in the past. Bush himself has

Bush said, "... we can never forget that we ask our presidents to bear the awful authority of deciding to send your sons and daughters in harm's way." Bush fails to recognize the connection between "all our problems at home" and the reasons that we sometimes send those "sons and daughters in harm's way."

admitted that he lacks "that vision thing." It had always been assumed that he meant he would "stay the course" of Ronald Reagan, but now we see that not only did he not have a progressive vision for the future, he has no clear view of the present.

"The president, assisted by the National Security Council, develops national security strategy employing the political/diplomatic, economic, informational and military powers of the nation to secure national policy aims and objectives," according to the Joint Chiefs of Staff's Joint Pub 1.

This process apparently was not explained to the commander-in-chief, who precipitated the gulf war by encouraging our national economic dependence on oil, failed to heed warnings from both domestic and foreign intelligence sources, and failed to provide a coherent policy for our diplomats in the Arab world. Certainly, our military might was used to great effect in repelling Saddam Hussein's forces from Kuwait, but a modicum of foresight would have rendered the expense and agony of that slaughter moot. The debate over war or economic sanctions against Iraq would not have happened had the Bush administration not illegally given billions of dollars to prop up Hussein's regime, money which also bought weapons which were aimed at our "sons and daughters."

Bush thanked Gov. Clinton for his support during the gulf war, but has questioned Clinton's stand on the war and his draft record during the campaign. What Bush has termed "wavering" on the gulf war, was actually an example of judiciousness, a concept which apparently fails Bush. Although not obligated, Clinton allowed a glimpse of his thought process and we saw someone who weighs the options before rendering a decision. His draft record is consistent with his view that military action may sometimes be necessary, but it is a last resort and that we should not "send our sons and daughters in harm's way" unnecessarily.

From kissing a female Air Force cadet during graduation ceremonies in 1989 to his lack of a coordinated national security policy, Bush has failed as our commander-in-chief. Although Bush derided him as the "head of the Arkansas National Guard" at one time, Clinton has shown a grasp of the issues that actually determine our national security. Bush himself said that the president need not be a combat veteran.

"Of course not. Not at all."

Celibacy — movement for the '90s

Mike and Harry are both semi-permanent graduate students of the UI. One is in his late 30s, the other his late 20s. They are both celibate.

Mike (not his real name) says he's waiting for the ideal woman to arrive at his doorstep via UPS. He's abstained from sex for 2½ years and he's prepared to wait longer. He's taken a philosophical approach to the whole thing.

Harry (another alias) has been abstaining for four years through a combination of flawed opportunities, near misses and disinterest. I think he's starting to get a little grouchy.

When I first discovered Mike's deep, dark "secret," my jaw hit the floor. Here's a handsome guy with the world and his department at his feet and no woman to gloat over it in bed with him.

"But you're a guy," I noted.
"Yeah, so?"
"Well, I thought guys were different."
"What?"
"Y'know. Don't you NEED it?"

Ah, yes. Another fallen female victim of the Philosophy of the Dashboard Lights. I never believed the hokey that sweaty young men tried to preach to me, but I could still convincingly play a wide-eyed innocent in the art of "he's gotta have it." I liked to see how schemy guys could get. As early as high school, I developed the love of listening to male bullshit — thus my chosen career in journalism.

Those evenings usually ended with a quick shake of my date's hand and my brief but familiar lecture on its many uses.

But now that the '90s are surging ahead, and more men and women are getting in touch with their respectively feminine and masculine sides, I'm finding myself caught off-guard by the new male honesty.

Not to mention the new celibacy. 'Twas not too long ago that admitting you hadn't done IT or weren't doing IT on a regular basis, be you male or female, was strictly lame.

A few of us in high school, all girls, by the way, banded together under the slogan, "The few, the proud, the virgins," but come senior year they were dropping like flies. All puns intended.

Here's a handsome guy with the world and his department at his feet and no woman...

Now, 10 years later, I can't think of any acquaintance who hasn't had a significant "dry spell" in their sex lives. When they shared stories of the experience, it was through whining, not simply stating fact.

They were also usually talking about a period of months, not YEARS.

What happened? A number of people I've talked to this week have confessed their sordid sexual details of the last year or so.

And they've been BORING.

No one's having sex. Those few who recently have are being ridiculed by those who recently have not. It used to be that those who have been doing it were called "lucky," not "stupid."

My, how times change. Mike seems to be of the opinion that he's outgrown his generation's mindset of free love — sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll. "Look at ME," he gestures, intimating he doesn't do, or need, those things ANYMORE.

That's nice. I happen to think that there are other factors as well, things like AIDS, divorce rates and affordable VCRs.

We're all staying home and renting movies. One-night stands have once again been replaced with group dates.

Cosmopolitan says bowling is coming back into vogue. Was it ever in? We've become a nation of squares.

When we're not burrowing into granny square afghans, we're shaking with fear. The old ad question, "Does she or doesn't she?" takes on a whole new meaning in an age of STDs that can kill.

Or maybe we're just trying too hard to be perfect.

When talking about his record abstinence, among other things, Harry utters his favorite cliché: "Anything worth doing is worth doing right."

This could translate into "Why settle for Kraft Cheese and Macaroni when you can wait and maybe get refrigerated pasta?" The key word in this is MAYBE.

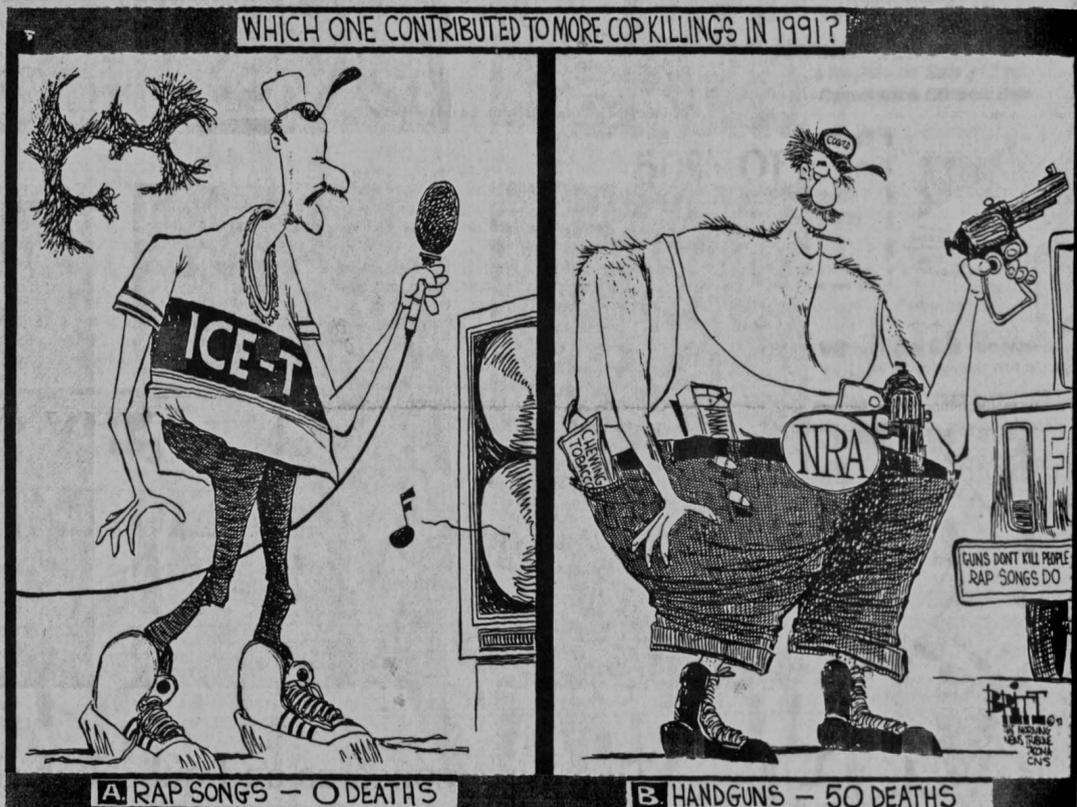

Some of us are getting a little worried. What happens if that pasta water never boils?

Is part of the reasoning behind the new celibacy our pickiness or is it our fear of failure? Do we really believe the Ideal Matchmaking Service delivers with UPS? How long are we willing to wait for delivery? What do we do with all those packing peanuts?

And how do we find these people, now that sex is no longer a fine how-do-you-do? I'm worried. I'm a lousy bowler.

JAMES O. GOLDSBOROUGH

Is it time to short-circuit democracy?

I have doubts about the value of official American propaganda. If government is going to intervene in the information game, as with the Voice of America, as with National Public Radio, it should be as factual and fair as possible.

Even during the Cold War, even when the Communists were bending facts, history and truth every way they could, the idea that we would also play that game was wrong. In America, the news serves the truth, not the party.

The report a few days ago by President Bush's Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy was on the mark. It recommended that the government phase out Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, close down Radio Marti, abandon the idea of Radio Free China and scrap plans for a huge new radio project in Israel, to beam toward Central Asia.

Old Cold Warriors swear by RFE and RL, and new Cold Warriors believe Radio Free Asia will help bring down the Communists in Beijing. Radio Marti is the darling of the Cuban exiles in Miami, and the transmitter in Israel is seen as helping to spread the truth into Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan.

Two questions are intertwined here: Did RFE-RL propaganda do any good during the Cold War, and, even if it did, is that kind of propaganda still useful?

The West won the Cold War by getting its foot into the communist door. Credit goes to those, like Presidents Nixon and Ford and West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, who rejected the policies of the '50s and '60s, which were meant to isolate the Communists.

The most important event in winning the Cold War was the Helsinki Final Act of 1975, which guaranteed the interchange of people, ideas and goods between East and West. Helsinki Watch committees sprang up everywhere, and when their organizers were jailed, as in the Soviet Union and East Germany, new ones took their place. In Poland, Solidarity was created, and in Czechoslovakia, Charter '77. The foot in the door became the whole body.

During the Cold War, the West had information policies that encouraged the process of change, and those that set it back. Fifteen years reporting from Europe taught me that the Voice of America, the BBC, Radio France and Deutsche Welle served the process of communist disintegration. The broadcasts of the RFE-RL slowed it down.

Staffed essentially by Soviet and East European émigrés and funded by the CIA, the RFE-RL mission was to stir up trouble, even foment revolt. The best-known case was in 1956, when Hungarians, encouraged by RFE reports that U.S. armed forces would help them, rose against the Communists. U.S. forces did not move, and the Soviets brutally crushed the revolt.

Friends at RFE-RL headquarters in Munich defended their work.

"If the Communists hate us so much," they said, "we must be doing something good." It was a seductive argument that begged the question. What good was done, for example, in Hungary?

After 1971, when CIA funding of RFE-RL became public, the operation lost all journalistic credibility. News broadcasts by an intelligence agency were something down the Soviets' alley. Though CIA funding of RFE-RL was curtailed, the VOA, which is synonymous with reliable news and information, moved to the forefront.

"RFE-RL served the country well," said Tom Korologos, chairman of the commission, "but with political changes, their programs increasingly resemble those of Voice of America. Their phaseout shouldn't happen overnight but it should happen; the taxpayers do not need to fund this duplication."

These are not tiny sums involved. With $207 million budgeted for '92, RFE-RL receives nearly as much as the Voice of America's $210 million. The operation in Israel will cost $190 million annually, and Radio and TV Marti cost about $50 million annually.

The toughest fight centers around Radio Free Asia. Last December, another presidential task force recommended, 7-4, to fund the program, and now Congress has established its own task force, which is still to report.

The Bush Administration opposes Radio Free Asia as a waste of time and money, but an odd coalition of Senate liberals, led by George Mitchell and Joseph Biden, and conservatives, led by Orrin Hatch, backs the project, which would cost $106 million annually.

The minority four on the Asia committee had it right: If the goal is to reach more Chinese with good programs — as it should be — for $2.1 million the VOA's China service could be upgraded to do the job. If evidence existed that RFE-RL played a role in the Iron Curtain's fall, an argument might be made for spending $106 million annually to undermine Beijing. But the evidence isn't there.

Democratization will come in China as it came in Europe — not through Cold War policies of propaganda and isolation, but through interchange and engagement. The message is already reaching China daily through Hong Kong and Guangzhou, just as it reached the Soviet Union from Helsinki.

China can no more resist the tide of free-market democracy sweeping the world than the Soviet empire could. The idea that Chinese émigrés broadcasting from the Philippines are going to help undermine Deng Xiaoping is fantasy. If anything, it will slow the process.

Political phobia

To the Editor:

Jay Casini states in his column "Sticking with Bush — anyway" (DI, Sept. 10) that his vote for George Bush, "like far too many others, will be motivated more by an acute fear of the alternative than any burning desire to ratify Bush's record so far." Mr. Casini's "acute fear of the alternative" is definitive of his party's politics and the reactionary mindset of people that adhere to it. Casini's apology reveals the true motivating factor of those who will vote for George Bush in November: FEAR. What could Casini, a law student and former editor of The Daily Iowan, possibly have to gain by disrupting the status quo? What are you so afraid of, Jay? Willie Horton is behind bars. The Evil Empire is history. Oh, yeah, I almost forgot. Murphy Brown is unraveling the moral fiber that holds this nation's television viewers together, and overzealous lawyers are destroying our judiciary system. Hurry up and graduate, Jay. Our country can always use another lawyer whose actions are motivated by phobias rather than a firm belief in justice. Who knows? You may even grow up to be vice president. Stranger things have happened.

ERA and abortion

To the Editor:

My work in the women's health movement, particularly to protect reproductive rights, requires most of my time. As a result, I haven't spent much time working for the ERA. If this amendment increased a woman's right to abortion as anti-choicers pretend, you can bet I would be working vigorously on the campaign. Unfortunately, it does not.

However, I heartily support the ERA because it is about fairness. I want to ensure that my 12-year-old daughter has the same rights, privileges and responsibilities that my 22-year-old son enjoys.

It is that simple, and that fair.

Peruvian class divisions still reflect those of colonial years

1 LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peruvians say the class divisions that subjugate Indians have changed little since Simón Bolívar fought Spanish colonialism to end exploitation of the native majority in South America.

The divisions are sharpened by enmity between coastal residents of predominantly Spanish blood and the Indians and mixed-race people of the Andes.

"This may be one of the most racist nations in the world," said Juan José Vega, a Peruvian with Indian blood. "It's much worse than the United States. Here, the minority discriminates against the majority."

No official statistics are available, but it is apparent that the relatively few wealthy Peruvians are of mostly European descent. More than 80 percent of Peruvians are of mainly Indian blood.

Upper-class Peruvians often refer to the "decent people" when comparing social groups. Vega said that is a code phrase for whites.

Job listings in Lima newspapers often say only people of "very good appearance" need apply.

"A girl who is a mestiza or Indian may be a very good typist and even know English, but she won't answer an ad that says 'very good appearance,'" Vega said. "They're going to tell her, 'The job has been taken,' or 'You arrived too late.' It's a very subtle, underhanded racism."

Political observers say President Alberto Fujimori's upset victory in 1990 was due largely to the anti-white vote against writer Mario Vargas Llosa, who was seen to represent the white elite.

Reports: British royal family's allowance may be trimmed

3 LONDON, England (AP) — Could it be belt-tightening time at Buckingham Palace?

Prime Minister John Major's visit with Queen Elizabeth II and the recent royal family controversies fired media speculation Monday that the royals may face a cut in their allowance.

With a recession hitting British families hard, the issue of royal finances, including the queen's income tax exemption, has been the subject of much debate.

Press Association, the national news agency, reported Monday that members of Parliament believe the queen has expressed readiness to take a cut in the $14.9 million a year from the Civil List, the public funds allocated to pay expenses of the head of state and relatives.

The family received $18.5 million from the Civil List this year to cover expenses during official duties.

The rest of the list is divided among the Queen Mother, Prince Philip, Prince Andrew, Princess Anne, Princess Margaret, Prince Edward and Princess Alice, the queen's aunt.

Prince Charles and Diana are funded from revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall.

The Civil List represents a fraction of the total cost of the royal family, which probably runs well over $94.5 million a year.

World religious leaders call for peace, solutions for poverty

4 BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Leaders of the world's major religions appealed Tuesday to governments around the world to work for global peace and ease poverty.

"To those with political responsibility we ask to do all that is possible to avoid the further spread of war and we ask them to make their main priority," they said in a joint appeal that followed a two-day conference.

They prayed for peace in houses of worship throughout Brussels before marching to the city's neo-Gothic central square for a ceremony, including a minute of silence for all war dead.

Russia admits violating 1972 germ weapon treaty

5 MOSCOW, Russia (AP) — Officials this week admitted that the Soviet Union and later Russia had been violating a 1972 treaty banning germ warfare until at least March.

Bowing to pressure, Russia also announced this week that it has cut the number of personnel engaged in military biological projects by 50 percent and slashed their funding by 30 percent.

The moves were detailed in a joint statement by senior Russian, U.S. and British officials, who met in Moscow on Sept. 10-11.

The United States and Britain repeatedly have voiced concerns that the Russian government has failed to act on its promise to shut down the Soviet Union's extensive program for making illicit bacteriological weapons.

High toxic levels found in St. Petersburg's water

6 ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — American environmentalists were shocked to find untreated sewage pouring into the Neva River a few hundred yards upstream from the pipes that take in the city's drinking water.

"Our jaws just dropped," said Ed Nute, a water-quality control engineer from San Rafael, Calif.

Nute was one of six Americans associated with the California-based Center for Citizen's Initiatives who came to Russia's second-largest city at the invitation of local environmentalists and the city's Geographical Society.

The U.S. team suggested Russians act on a 130-year-old plan and move drinking water pipes away from sewage discharge pipes in this city of 5 million.

St. Petersburg residents routinely boil the yellow-brown water that pours from their taps and often let it settle or strain it through cheesecloth before drinking it. Boiling kills toxic bacteria that cause diarrhea, nausea and stomach cramps; settling helps to sift out some heavy metals and pollutants.

Focus on sterilization fails to control Indian population

7 NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Population experts this week criticized India's birth-control policy for its focus on sterilization and said the country's mushrooming population may become the world's largest in the 21st century.

India was one of the first Third World countries to understand the need to check its growth, and has had a family planning program since 1951.

But stifling government bureaucracy and central planning has hampered implementation, said a study released today by the Washington-based Population Crisis Committee.

India's estimated population of 883 million is growing about 2 percent annually, compared with the U.S. growth rate of 0.8 percent and 1.5 percent in China, which has about 1.2 billion people.

Although the average number of births for Indian women has fallen from six to four, the committee said India's goal of reaching two births per woman by the end of the century is unrealistic.

Renovation of Asia's infrastructure deemed urgent

8 TOKYO, Japan (AP) — Go to most any big city in Asia, hop into a taxi, give the driver directions — and get ready for a slow, tortuous ride through urban hell.

Whether on the narrow highways of Tokyo or the broad, smoggy avenues of Bangkok, Thailand, monumental traffic jams are the most obvious sign that Asia's infrastructure needs to be overhauled after years of rapid urbanization and industrial development.

In addition to new roads and mass transit systems, Asian countries are thirsting for more electric power, better communications and a cleaner environment.

"Asia is outgrowing its britches," said Robert Broadfoot, an investment risk consultant in Hong Kong.

In Thailand, as in many other Asian nations, "a large number of projects are already under way: telephones, expressways galore, you name it," said Graham Catterwell, chief representative for Crosby Securities in Bangkok.

While nobody expects that all the projects being dreamed up will be realized, there is the money and the will to complete a good many.

Study: More Asian-Americans get college degrees

Tim Bovee
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Asian-Americans have a devotion to higher education more widespread than most people in the United States, the Census Bureau said Thursday in its first detailed study of the nation's fastest growing racial group.

The bureau said two out of five Americans with roots in Asia and the Pacific had completed four years of college or more. That's about twice the rate for the whole country and for whites, and four times the rate for blacks.

The drive among young Asian-

Americans to get an education comes from the home, where parents daily teach the lesson that schooling counts, said Katsumi Kunitsugu, executive secretary of the Japanese American Cultural and Community Center in Los Angeles, Calif.

She graduated from high school in the Heart Mountain, Wyo., internment center, where she and her family had been sent after Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, and later graduated from the University of Wisconsin.

"I'm a second-generation Japanese, and my folks certainly emphasized we should get the highest education possible," she said.

"Even in the most trying circumstances, we always tried to get our education, not so much for earning a living but for forming good character."

More recent immigrants were highly educated in their own countries, and so had the motive and means to send their own children to college, said William O'Hare, population and policy analysis director at the University of Louisville.

The number of Asian-Americans more than doubled from 1980 to 1990. Immigrants accounted for about three-fourths of that growth.

"It's sort of a spinoff effect," O'Hare said.

BILL

Bush called the bill "heavy-handed."

"My vision for the future of the communications industry is based on the principles of greater competition, entrepreneurship and less economic regulation," the president said in a letter to House and Senate leaders. "This legislation fails each of these tests and is illustrative of the congressional mandates and excessive regulations that drag our economy down."

In response, Consumer Federation of America spokesman Gene Kimmelman said: "Now it is quite clear the president sides with the cable industry. . . . If this is his economic policy — ongoing rip-offs by monopolies — I don't think it is a policy the public can support."

The bill approved Thursday came from a House-Senate conference committee which created it by compromising a cable regulation measure approved 73-18 earlier this year by the Senate and one approved 340-73 by the House.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how Iowa members voted Thursday as the House voted 280-128 to regulate cable television rates.

A "yes" vote is a vote to approve the bill. Voting yes were 208 Democrats, 71 Republicans and one independent. Voting no were 38 Democrats and 90 Republicans.

Jew agreed, though she expressed some doubts about the UI's initiative in the future.

"The UI invested in some good advice — I think they ought to take it. But unless they do take more action, I'm not optimistic," she said. She added that she hasn't seen the UI move aggressively in the past and that actions to date have merely been a response to pressure.

When Jew won a lawsuit against the UI two years ago, federal District Court Judge Harold Vietor ordered the UI to take "all reasonable steps to assure a hostility-free work environment" for Jew.

In her suit, Jew contended that she experienced sexual discrimination due to false rumors that she gained favor with her department head by engaging in a sexual relationship with him and that this resulted in a hostile work environment and also the denial of promotion to full professor. She also contended that the UI retaliated against her for pursuing these claims.

Judge Vietor found in Jew's favor on Aug. 28, 1990, and ordered the UI to promote her to full professor, effective July 1984, and reimburse her for six years of back pay.

The special review committee consisted of Stephen Dunham, former general counsel at the University of Minnesota; Mary Rowe, special assistant to the president at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; and Judith Wegner, dean of the University of North Carolina's law school.

ECONOMY

ment's economy further, the United States could see its usually reliable surplus with Western Europe turn into a persistent deficit, analysts warned.

U.S. sales to Western Europe totaled $8.74 billion in July, down 7.8 percent.

"The U.S. economy is dreadfully weak, but the European economy is worse," said economist Laurence Meyer, a St. Louis, Mo., forecaster. "Instead of looking to one another for help in pulling out of recession, we're having mutual stagnation."

Overall, exports fell 2.2 percent from a record $38.2 billion. Much of the deterioration stemmed from a huge $898 million drop in sales of civilian aircraft. But exports of chemicals, oil drilling equipment and computers also declined substantially.

"Aircraft is particularly volatile from month to month," said Stephen Cooney, a trade expert with the National Association of Manufacturers. "The really bad news is that exports of no other products are expanding strongly enough to take up the slack."

Imports in August rose 0.6 percent to a new record of $45.2 billion as Americans maintained their appetite for foreign goods despite a stagnant economy.

NBA
Walter Davis retires

DENVER — Walter Davis, one of the best pure shooters ever to play basketball, announced his retirement Thursday after 15 NBA seasons.

Davis, 38, ended his career as the No. 18 scorer in NBA history with 19,521 points in 1,033 regular-season games — an average of 18.9. The NBA's rookie of the year in 1978, Davis played in six All-Star games.

No. 2 field hockey begins homestand

Curtis Riggs
 The Daily Iowan

Coach Beth Beglin is not expecting her Iowa field hockey team to experience a letdown during their season-opening homestand against Ball State and Boston University at Grant Field this weekend.

The No. 2 Hawkeyes are 3-0 after defeating Rutgers, North Carolina and Temple last weekend. The team had never beaten North Carolina in six tries prior to last Saturday, and the Temple victory earned the Hawkeyes the championship of the Temple Owl Invitational.

Iowa, which has never lost at Grant Field, will have its work cut out for them when they take on the Ball State Cardinals today at 3 p.m.

Beglin said that it is easy to keep her team focused for this homestand.

"It is not hard to keep the team motivated. Especially with the results of what happened with Ball State beating Northwestern and Northeastern," Beglin said. "It is not too hard for our team to get motivated to play a No. 6 team coming in on 3-0. Our team knows that they have their work cut out for them."

Senior goalkeeper and co-captain Andrea Wieland said that the Hawkeyes take any team that they will come up against very seriously.

"We are not going to take any opposition lightly," Wieland said. "Each game is very important, and we will play each game as if it is for the national championship."

Beglin said that there is a similarity between the Cardinals and her Hawkeye team that went 17-2-1 last year.

"They are in a situation where people are not giving them much chance and the team is out to prove otherwise," Beglin said. "They are legitimate."

Beglin, who is in her fifth season at Iowa, learned a great deal about her team from last weekend's slate of East Coast games.

"We are playing exceptionally well in the corners," Beglin said. "Evidence of this is Kristy Gleason's scoring spree."

Gleason garnered Big Ten Player of the Week honors for having a trio of hat tricks last weekend. Her nine goals moved her into fifth-place on Iowa's career goals list with 69.

The Hawkeye coach is concerned with the number of shots-on-goal opponents are getting on her squad. The Hawkeyes outshot their opposition 45-21 last weekend.

Thompson lifts Hawkeyes to 3-0 sweep

Iowa improves to 5-4 in time for Challenge

Iowa's Lisa Dockray prepares for a block on Wisconsin-Green Bay freshman Marie Kaland during the 5-4 Hawkeyes' three-game sweep of the Phoenix Thursday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Roxanna Pellin
 The Daily Iowan

A week ago, Coach Linda Schoensted described senior hitter Michelle Thompson as "not at capacity" in the Iowa volleyball team's 3-2 loss to Loyola Sept. 9.

Leading the team with a .433 attack percentage and 15 kills, Thompson showed little resemblance to the player Schoensted described in a 3-0 win over Wisconsin-Green Bay Thursday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"It just feels much better. Actually tonight it was the best it's been in a while," Thompson said, referring to the shoulder injury she received early in the season. "When I'm out there playing I don't think about it."

Coming into the match, Thompson averaged 2.5 kills per game in eight matches. Last season, her attack percentage was .179.

Defensively, the Hawkeyes were led by junior Courtney Gillis, who had 12 digs in the 15-7, 15-4, 17-15 win. She leads the team in digs with 86 in 29 games.

"Our defense was good tonight," Thompson said. "We covered behind our hitters and our block better."

Both Gillis and Thompson agree that the team was ready for Thursday's match.

"We worked really hard in practice this week, especially in all of the defensive drills," Gillis said. "We were prepared to win."

"We had a good warmup tonight and that helped," Thompson said. "We were able to carry the war-map into the game."

Overall, Iowa hit .245 in the three games. Wisconsin-Green Bay hit .195 with 27 kills.

The Phoenix were led by sophomore setter Amy Plinska, who had nine kills. Plinska also led the team in serving with four of the team's six ace serves. She has 18 ace serves for the season.

Inconsistent serving was again a problem for the Hawkeyes. Iowa committed nine serving errors and Wisconsin-Green Bay had eight. The Phoenix dropped to 2-7 with the loss.

"We have to work on getting our serves in," Gillis said. "Serving is our biggest weakness."

Iowa's Stacy Morley and Erin Weaver each had a pair of ace serves. Morley leads the Hawkeyes with 12 aces for the season.

The win moves the Hawkeyes' season record to 5-4. Last year, Iowa ended the season with a record of 7-27.

"Nothing could be worse than last year," Gillis said. "There's no way we wanted to go through that again."

"This definitely feels more like it should," Thompson said. "We should be winning."

The Hawkeyes will host the Hawkeye Challenge tonight and Saturday. Play begins at 5:30 p.m. when St. Louis faces Wisconsin-Milwaukee. The Hawkeyes will play Cincinnati at 7:30 p.m. All matches will be played at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"I think we have to stay mentally tough throughout the match," Thompson said.

WOMEN'S GOLF

Hawkeyes host Lady Northern

Karen L. Karaidos
 The Daily Iowan

The University of Iowa women's golf team will host the 1992 Lady Northern Invitational today through Sunday at Finkbine. Tee times are at 9 a.m. each day.

The Lady Northern Invitational is held annually at the school that will host the Big Ten Championships, in order to give the players the opportunity to compete on the year's championship course. The Big Ten meet will be held at Finkbine May 7-9.

Coach Diane Thomason isn't sure how much of an advantage her players will have by competing on their home course. Due to some rain earlier in the week, the Hawkeyes have had only two days to prepare for the tournament.

"I think that by spring it will be to our advantage just because they've had more time to play on it," Thomason said. "Our kids should be a little more familiar with the greens and that should help us."

"I think we'll do well because it's on our home course," said Jennifer Nodland, Iowa's top finisher in the Lady Tar Heel Invitational last weekend. "The greens that we played on (last weekend) weren't the best and so I think we'll play better on our greens."

At last year's Lady Northern in Champaign, Ill., Iowa placed 14th out of 18 teams. First place went to Minnesota for the second straight year with 919 strokes over 54 holes. Illinois and Northern Illinois tied for second place.

For this season, Thomason is hoping to improve on both the team and individual standings.

"I'd like to at least be in the top half of the field so that we can get a good seed for the Big Ten Championships, and I'd like to see if we could maybe get an individual in the top ten," Thomason said.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Hawkeyes start season healthy

Michael Watkins
 The Daily Iowan

Over the past few seasons, Iowa tennis coach Micki Schillig has had to deal with more than just preparing for the opposition.

One of those problems has been the overwhelming epidemic of chronic injuries. In fact, during the 1990-91 season, three of the top six seeds were on a match-to-match basis because of untimely sprains and twists. The results were close losses in dual matches and an uncharacteristic ninth place finish at Big Tens.

But for Schillig and the Hawkeye netters this season, those are things of the past.

"Knock on wood, all of our injuries are gone," said Schillig, starting her sixth season with Iowa. "In the past, it seemed like if one of the players became injured, then someone else would and then someone else — it was like some sort of contagious disease."

"But this year, everyone is healthy and eager to get the season underway. They all did their homework over the summer playing in tournaments, and are very excited."

Iowa returns three of last year's top six players heading into this weekend's Indiana Invitational, a no-team scoring tournament consisting of four singles brackets and three doubles. Among the returnees are last season's Big Ten Freshman of the Year Laura Dvorak, who compiled a freshman record and team-best 27-9 mark, and team captain Andrea Calvert, the squad's only senior and last year's team all-around athlete.

But despite the lack of older, seasoned players, Schillig says she is confident that there will be no drop-off in team leadership.

"We're basically starting from where we left off last year," Schillig said. "Even though we lost Tracey (Donnelly) and Lori (Hash) to graduation, there are still a lot of leaders on the team. I believe that as you get better tennis players, you encounter different problems than lack of leadership or more injuries — you get a more competitive nature amongst the players, which is healthy in any sport, especially one as highly-individualized as tennis."

Dvorak agrees. "We have all just decided to go out and give 100 percent this whole season," said the sophomore who tallied a 13-1 conference record at the No. 1 spot last season. "We have a lot of confidence in ourselves as well as the entire team. That's one of the things that Micki always strives for is a team effort."

Along with Calvert and Dvorak, junior Miyuki Moore and sophomores Cara Cashion, Kim Isaak, and Amy Jahn are back from last year's sixth place conference team, as is junior Rhonda Fox, who returns to the lineup this season after sitting out the season due to the NCAA transfer rule.

A native of Salem, Ore., Fox played tennis for Iowa in the

Coach Micki Schillig

1989-90 season, compiling a 23-10 record in singles and a 14-9 mark in doubles, before transferring to the University of Washington in 1990-91.

In what Schillig terms "a strong recruitment class," the Hawkeye netters welcome two new additions to the team this year in California recruits Sasha Boros and Nicole Willette.

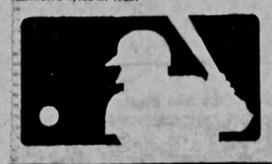

Boros, whose parents have since moved to Iowa, was a three-year letterwinner at No. 1 singles for Poway High School and is largely responsible for getting Willette, once ranked 18th nationally in singles and fourth in doubles in the

Baseball Today

SCOREBOARD
 Texas at Toronto (7:35 p.m. EDT). Kevin Brown (19-9) tries to become a 20-game winner for the Rangers. Jimmy Key (10-13) is scheduled to pitch for the first-place Blue Jays.

STATS
 Since the start of the 1990 season, the Pittsburgh Pirates have been in first place in the NL East 91 percent of the time, missing just 46 days out of 325. They have been out of first place only 10 days this season. . . . The seven runs scored by the Orioles in sweeping three games from Kansas City was the fewest Baltimore has scored in a three-game sweep since scoring five at Chicago in July 1972.

STREAKS
 The Seattle Mariners set a club record Wednesday when they lost their 13th straight game. . . . California's Mark Langston has pitched 200 or more innings for seven straight seasons. . . . Atlanta ended a seven-game losing streak at Riverfront Stadium by beating Cincinnati 3-2 Wednesday.

SLUGGERS
 Frank Thomas and George Bell are only the third pair of Chicago White Sox teammates to hit 20 homers and drive in 100 runs in the same season. Thomas and Ventura did it last year, and Carlton Fisk and Harold Baines did it in 1985.

STARTERS
 Seattle's Randy Johnson allowed one hit and struck out 15 against California Wednesday, but the Mariners lost 2-1 in 13 innings. The 15 Ks tied Atlanta's John Smoltz for the major league high this season. . . . Baltimore's Mike Mussina has a 1.56 ERA in four games against the Royals this year.

STOPPERS
 Mel Rojas of the Montreal Expos has not allowed a hit with runners in scoring position since Aug. 19. . . . Detroit's Mike Henneman recorded his 23rd save, a career high, with two hitless innings in Wednesday's 4-1 victory over Texas.

SWINGS
 Dave Hollins has 24 home runs this season for the Philadelphia Phillies. He hit eight homers last season.

SLUMPS
 Baltimore's Brady Anderson was 0 for 4 Wednesday night and is 1 for 28 in his last seven games.

STARS
 Wednesday
 — Andre Dawson went 4 for 5, including a two-run homer and an RBI single in Chicago's eight-run seventh inning that led the Cubs to a 14-9 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies. It was Dawson's 397th career homer.
 — Frank Thomas went 5 for 5 with a pair of doubles as Chicago beat New York 9-6. He scored three runs and drove in two.

SIDELINED
 Minnesota first baseman Kent Hrbek returned to Minneapolis on Wednesday and faces surgery on his right shoulder either Friday or Monday, the Twins said. Hrbek, 32, missed all three games of the series with the Athletics and won't accompany the team to Anaheim, Calif. He hasn't played since Sept. 6 due to shoulder inflammation caused by a slight tear in his rotator cuff.

STATUS
 Seattle's Edgar Martinez missed his third straight game Wednesday. The injury may require him to undergo season-ending surgery. He is expected to make a decision by Sunday.

SPEAKING
 "I don't think it's poetic justice or anything. When you put ability like that on your club, it's got a chance to shine." — Oakland manager Tony La Russa on Ruben Sierra, Bobby Witt and Jeff Russell, the three players acquired from Texas for Jose Canseco.

SEASONS
 Sept. 18
 1954 — The Cleveland Indians clinched the American League pennant with a 3-2 triumph over the Detroit Tigers.
 1963 — The New York Mets lost their last game at the Polo Grounds to the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-1, in front of a crowd of only 1,752.
 1968 — Ray Washburn tossed a 2-0 no-hitter against the San Francisco Giants at Candlestick Park, one day after the Giants' Gaylord Perry tossed a no-hitter against Washburn's St. Louis Cardinals.
 1984 — The Detroit Tigers clinched the American League East with a 3-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers, making the Tigers only the fourth team in major-league history to lead from start to finish. The others were the 1923 New York Giants, 1927 New York Yankees and the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers.
 1987 — Detroit's Darrell Evans became the first 40-year-old player in major league history to hit 30 home runs in a season as the Tigers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-6.
 Today's Birthday: Ryne Sandberg 34.

CROSS COUNTRY

Men take on Minn., Badgers...

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's cross country team has a different look this season, but Coach Larry Wiczorek is confident the team will show improvement this season.

"We have a lot of ground to make up but I am optimistic for improvement," Wiczorek said. Iowa starts the season Saturday when they travel to Minnesota to compete against defending conference champion Wisconsin and the Golden Gophers.

Vital to the Hawkeyes' success is senior Kevin Herd. A 1990 NCAA Championship qualifier, Herd was a medical redshirt last year. He is optimistic about the upcoming season.

"This year's team is greatly improved," Herd said. "The group is talented which makes it a better environment to run in." Herd hopes the Hawkeyes can move up to fifth place in the Big Ten this season. He also has an individual goal to meet.

"My goal for this season is to become the first all-American since Gogch (Wiczorek) in 1968," Herd said.

Top veterans returning from last year's team are senior Garry Roseman, Iowa's top finisher at the 1991 NCAA Regional, senior Steve Marshall, and junior Marc Roehl. Also expected to be a big contributor is senior Sean Gale, who redshirted the 1991 season.

Adding a new dimension to the team are Bill Branigan, a junior transfer from Cal-Irvine, Pete McDowell, a junior college all-American from Southwest Michigan Junior College, and Rod Kerko, a freshman recruit out of Ohio. "Both Branigan and McDowell have college experience and are nice finds for us," Wiczorek said. "Kerko should have an impact on the top five before the end of the season."

Wiczorek called this season the first of a two-year program. Everyone on the team has two years of eligibility remaining and that should help make the Hawkeyes strong in 1993.

"In the next two years, we really have the chance to move forward," Wiczorek said.

Wiczorek picks Wisconsin to repeat as Big Ten champions, with Michigan State and Michigan also running strong teams. Last year, the top four teams in the Big Ten finished in the top ten nationally. This year, Wiczorek hopes the Hawkeyes can compete at the top.

"One of my goals in making outstanding progress is to finish in the top four in the Big Ten," Wiczorek said.

As for Saturday, Herd remembers last year's meet against the Badgers, when Wisconsin packed their runners around him. This year, he has a strategy of his own.

"For the Wisconsin-Minnesota meet, I want to run a little slower and help out my teammates and make it a team race," Herd said.

...while staying healthy is key for No. 16 women

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

The 16th-ranked Iowa women's cross country team begins the season today at the Illinois State Invitational.

Sixteenth is the same place the women finished at the 1991 NCAA Championships.

Lost to graduation is all-Big Ten and all-American Jennifer Brower, who finished in 22nd place in last year's national meet. Also gone is Christa Holms, who has retired from competition.

Expected to pick up much of the slack is senior Tracy Dahl-Morris. Dahl-Morris received all-Big Ten and all-America honors a year ago. She is also the 1992 NCAA Indoor 5000-meter champion.

Coach Jerry Hassard is hoping that Dahl-Morris' success during the indoor season will help her through the cross country season.

"I hope she takes charge of the team and helps us become a national power," Hassard said.

Other top runners returning to the team are senior Christine Salsberry, juniors Jennifer Johnson and Tina Stec, and sophomore Erin Boland. All four competed in the NCAA Championships last year.

Hassard believes the key to a successful season is staying healthy.

"We are going to walk a tightrope this season and the key is to maintain health. We must minimize injuries to become a national powerhouse," Hassard said.

Johnson, who won all-Big Ten honors a year ago, agrees.

"The team's success this season really depends on the people who are injured," Johnson said.

Most important is the continuing rehabilitation of Salsberry, who underwent surgery early this summer. Hassard said that she is not at full strength, changing the depth of the team. "The season may be an up and down road but I remain optimistic to have a successful season with a little bit of luck," Hassard said.

Three Big Ten schools are ranked in the nation's preseason top ten. Wisconsin is fifth, Michigan seventh, and Penn State ninth.

Illinois State hosts seven teams for Friday's meet, including Big Ten rivals Illinois and Purdue. Iowa won the meet last year, but Hassard thinks that Illinois State should be an improved team, and could compete for first place.

Johnson, who placed fifth at Illinois State a year ago, is excited about the meet.

"I expect to definitely place in the top five again," Johnson said.

Dahl-Morris, who took last year's Invite title, will not be competing today. She competed in the Olympic Trials this summer, and Hassard said she needs the extra time to rest. Salsberry will also sit out the first meet.

"This meet should be a challenging start," Hassard said.

HARDEE'S GOLF CLASSIC

Frost leads after rain-shortened round

Associated Press

COAL VALLEY, Ill. — David Frost shot an 8-under-par 62 Thursday and held a two-stroke lead in the first round of the Hardee's Golf Classic, which was suspended because of a 2-hour rain delay.

Frost, who won the Buick Classic in June, birdied three of his first five holes and finished with eight birdies and one bogey in coming within a stroke of the course record.

"I could have putted with my foot today," Frost said after what he called his best round of the year.

Tom Lehman, the leading money-winner on the Ben Hogan Tour last year, Willie Wood, who finished second in the Hardee's last year, and Bart Bryant were tied for second at 64.

Lehman already has posted eight Top 10 finishes this year but is still looking for his first PGA victory.

The group of eight one stroke back in third included Bryant's older brother, Brad, and defending champion D.A. Weibring.

Twenty-four golfers were still on the course when play was suspended at 7:08 p.m.

Preview II pits 4-time losers vs. Philadelphia

It's the third week of the season and we have Super Bowl Preview II to follow Buffalo and San Francisco last week.

This one's Denver at Philadelphia — the guys who always lose Super Bowls vs. the latest team that Herschel Walker is supposed to get there.

EAGLES, 24-10
Detroit (plus 9½) at Washington

The Lions were at RFK Stadium twice last year and came out losers by a combined score of 86-10. These aren't those Redskins — Darrell Green is gone for the season and the Johnsons (A.J. and Sidney) will replace him.

REDSKINS, 27-14
San Francisco (minus 4) at New York Jets

This is the second time in three games the 49ers are playing at Giants Stadium — they beat the Giants 31-14 there opening week. So scratch home field advantage — the 49ers have played more in the Meadowlands this year than the Jets.

JETS, 31-14
New Orleans (plus 1½) at Atlanta

The Jerry Glanville factor — up at home one week, down on the road the next. And he loves to beat up on the Saints.

Two nights of rock at the Yacht Club may leave a gaggle of Drenched heads and blues hounds wandering aimlessly around campus in disillusioned haze, but the result should be thankful.

On Friday, the Dashboard Savors bring their country-rock styling to the Yacht Club, and New Harbinger folk-rockers Miracle Legion into town on Saturday.

Miracle Legion founders Mr. Neal and Mark Mulcahy search for a rhythm section after a stripped-down offering of Me and Ray. They found it in drummer Spot and bassist Dave McCaffrey.

This incarnation of Miracle Legion has been together for 3½ years but their only release to date is Drenched LP.

"It's odd that it has been so long," said Spot, the band's drummer. "We began searching for a new home before Rough Trade folded, but we aren't the businessmen in the world."

They are now out on the road the second time in support of Drenched, an album full of sprightly folk-rockers and penitential ballads. The title is certainly appropriate, as songs that were spare in Miracle Legion's past are layered with instruments and vocals that give them a m...

Rhino Records presents
The Best of Rachel Sweet

Jim Patterson
Associated Press

Fool Around: The Best of Rachel Sweet (Rhino) — Rachel Sweet Out of Akron, Ohio, with a wall-of-sound voice that belied her teen years, roared Rachel Sweet. She had a voice that made her the logical heir to Darlene Love and Ronnie Spector.

A true prodigy, Sweet won an electric garage-door opener in a singing contest at age 3, was doing commercials by the time she was 6, and opened for Bill Cosby in Las Vegas when she was 12.

Signed to the English company Stiff Records, Sweet's first album was Fool Around. It is contained in total on this new release.

Songwriter Liam Sternberg wrote much of that album, in a quirky 1980s new-wave style. Some of it is too precious, but on "Wildwood Flower" and "Who Does Lisa Like?" songwriter and singer find common ground. The latter is a remembrance of high-school politics, and "Wildwood Flower" is a prostitute's lament (Sweet was 15 when she recorded it).

Elsewhere on Fool Around: The Best of Rachel Sweet are competent remakes of soul classics and Sweet's covers of some of the hot bands and songwriters of the time.

Sweet sounds most comfortable with material by the top new-wave 1980s writers. She tears up The Records' "Pin a Medal on Mary" and Graham Parker's "Fools Gold."

She really shines on Elvis Costello's "Stranger in the House," which was written for George Jones. This and "Wildwood Flower" show off an instinctive country music vocalist.

Tacked to the end are a couple of examples of Sweet blowing lesser talents out of the water. Teen idol Rex Smith tries mightily on the disco hit "Everlasting Love" (sadly, Sweet's biggest hit), but he's in way over his head singing a duet with Sweet. "Shadows of the Night" was put out to little notice by Sweet, then was a hit in a subpar copy by Pat Benatar.

Band lovers get ready for double whammy

John Kenyon
The Daily Iowan

Two nights of rock at the Yacht Club may leave a gaggle of Dead-heads and blues hounds wandering aimlessly around campus in a disillusioned haze, but the rest of town should be thankful.

On Friday, the Dashboard Saviors bring their country-rock stylings to the Yacht Club, and New Haven folk-rockers Miracle Legion roll into town on Saturday.

Miracle Legion founders Mr. Ray Neal and Mark Mulcahy searched for a rhythm section after the stripped-down offering Me and Mr. Ray. They found it in drummer Spot and bassist Dave McCaffrey.

This incarnation of Miracle Legion has been together for 3½ years, but their only release to date is the Drenched LP.

"It's odd that it has been that long," said Spot, the band's drummer. "We began searching for a new home before Rough Trade folded, but we aren't the best businessmen in the world."

They are now out on the road for the second time in support of Drenched, an album full of sprightly folk-rockers and pensive ballads. The title is certainly appropriate, as songs that would be spare in Miracle Legion's past are layered with instruments and vocals that give them a more textured sound.

"We've been playing longer shows this time out, and we will probably mix the set up a bit because we don't get out to Iowa too often," Spot said.

The band was complemented by keyboards, horns and a 17-voice choir on the LP, but they will pull the songs off as a four-piece Saturday.

"We are sticking pretty close to the record, but everything rocks out a little more," Spot said. "We pull the stuff off pretty well though."

Offering yet another night of respite from the blues, the Yacht Club welcomes the Dashboard Saviors Friday night, a good warm-up for Saturday's Miracle Legion show.

The Dashboard Saviors hail from Athens, Ga., but before you throw on those R.E.M. and Pylon shirts and head on down, beware — these guys aren't all jangly college rock.

The Saviors sound falls into a more traditional slot on the pigeon-hole wheel. On their debut LP, Kitty, they sport a more rustic country-rock sound than most of their contemporaries.

There are also a couple of out-of-place college rockers that begin each side of the record, but save those throwaways, the Dashboard Saviors certainly have a strong set of songs to draw from tonight.

The Cleveland Quartet will perform at Hancher Auditorium on Sunday, Sept. 20, at 3 p.m.

UI Chamber Series focuses on Brahms

William Palik
The Daily Iowan
Hancher Auditorium's 1992-93 Chamber Music Series, which consists entirely of three all-Brahms concerts performed by the renowned Cleveland Quartet "and friends," kicks off Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. For reasons too numerous to enumerate here, the programming of the three concerts has been altered slightly, with the result that the Brahms Clarinet Quartet in B Minor, Op. 115, will be performed this Sunday, featuring UI School of Music faculty member Maurita Murphy Mead as clarinet soloist.

The Cleveland Quartet, founded some 20 years ago, has earned worldwide plaudits, and is currently acclaimed — along with the Emerson, Guarneri and Tokyo — as one of the foremost string quartets appearing on today's concert stage. The addition of Iowa City's own William Preucil Jr., as first violinist of the Cleveland Quartet has only solidified the ensemble's excellence, providing the quartet's upper reaches with with a new, unerring richness and true intonation that match the well-established finesse of the group's lower register.

To those who bristle at the thought of three all-Brahms concerts (Sunday's performance begins with the Quartet in A Minor, Op. 51, No. 2), it must be admitted that the single-composer programming does have its pitfalls, and that Brahms in particular can suffer by careless or obsessive program selection. However, the three concerts offered in this series do present a variety (within obvious limits, of course): Each program includes one of the German master's three string quartets, paired with a larger ensemble piece — in Sunday's case, the volumptuously autumnal Clarinet Quintet, and on the concerts, the composer's lively early Sextet and the F Minor Piano Quintet, a real barn-burner featuring pianist Emanuel Ax.

Granted, this represents the 19th century at its most sophisticated and forward-looking; but the chamber music of Brahms, alternating between dramatic passion and gnomic (some might say sphinxlike) terseness, should leave only the most ignorantly hostile audience members wearing that frozen look people have when forced to endure something they know must be edifying to their spirits and intellects.

Tickets remain available at the Hancher Box Office; discounts to UI students, to those 18 and under and to purchasers of the series.

Richard Pryor's off the wagon

Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — Richard Pryor says he's drinking again and weak from multiple sclerosis, but he's eager to perform. The 52-year-old comedian, who was severely burned in 1980 while freebasing cocaine, told Jane Pauley on "Dateline NBC" on Tuesday that he avoids illegal drugs but that he is an alcoholic who "dove" off the wagon. Pryor, who had heart surgery last year and has the degenerative disease multiple sclerosis, said his ill health provides material for his act.

One-woman show gives intimate portrayal of legendary Graham

Michelle-Therese Forcier
The Daily Iowan

A one-woman play is very difficult to pull off. The actress must deliver to the audience every emotion that an entire cast is sometimes not skilled enough to do.

"Martha," a one-woman play by UI Playwrights Workshop student Ellen Melaver, revolves around the life of Martha Graham, a pioneer in modern dance.

The play begins when at the age of 74, Graham is advised to stop dancing. Graham, played by Anne Fogarty, reflects on her life and accomplishments.

Graham was asked by her board of directors to stop dancing because her performances had become too painful to watch. She was suffering from cirrhosis of the liver and her sickness was evident in the performance. Graham said in "Blood Memory," her autobiography, "I think I really only started to choreograph so that I could have something to show off in. It came as a great shock to me when I stopped dancing that I was honored for my choreography as well."

Graham died at the age of 96 and left her ballets and her spirit in the Martha Graham Dance Company as her greatest legacy.

Some of Graham's sayings still echo in Agnes de Mille's book, "Martha: The Life and Work of Martha Graham."

"A World History of Photography"

The real Martha Graham in 1940, photographed by Barbara Morgan. The photo is titled "Martha Graham: Letter to the World."

"Our body is our glory, our hazard and our care. The dancer's body is the celebrant of life."

Perhaps the source of Graham's creativity can be described by her friend, de Mille, in her book: "She concentrated on the torso as the source of life, the work room, the kitchen. The arms and legs might be useful for servicing or locomotion and the head for judging or deciding, but everything, every emotion, she believed, starts or is visible in the torso first."

The performance is scheduled for Friday and Saturday, Sept. 18 and 19 at 8 p.m. in the Studio Theatre of the UI Theatre Building. Admission is $1 at the door, seating is limited.

Ken Zuckerman is sarod sensation

Michelle-Therese Forcier
The Daily Iowan

Embracing a way of life and a culture foreign to your own would prove most difficult to any Westerner, but Ken Zuckerman has earned worldwide admiration for the results of his dedication to the sarod.

Zuckerman has been hailed as one of the best sarod virtuosos and the best disciple of Ustad Ali Akbar Khan, the sarod maestro. According to The Times of India he has "imbibed the spirit of Indian classical music," which is the end result of 20 years of study under Khan on the sarod, an Indian string instrument. To appreciate how impressive his "faultless technique" is, consider the instrument's partial description. The body is of teak or mahogany, the belly is covered with goat skin and the unfretted finger board is metal. The instrument has 25 metal strings, 10 of which are played with a plectrum made from coconut shell. Four strings carry the melody, three are tuned to the tonic as an accent and three more are tuned to the dominant notes chosen. The 15 remaining are termed "sympathetic strings."

Zuckerman, director of the Ali Akbar College of Music in Switzerland, will be performing with Ghulam Abbas Khan in Mabie Theatre in the UI Theatre Building this Saturday at 7 p.m.

Admission is $12, $10 for senior citizens and $6 for students. Tickets are available at the Hancher Box Office.

Beth George gets 2 years probation

Beth George was sentenced to two years probation Friday in a Johnson County District Court. George, a former Domestic Violence Intervention Project counselor who changed her name to her husband's, received the deferred judgment on a charge of tampering with records for signing a false name on her Iowa driver license application and entering fictitious birthdate and Social Security number in May 1991.

The FBI and Coralville police arrested her in December 1991 a felony charge of interstate flight to avoid prosecution.

Hit-and-run leaves 2 injured

A hit-and-run accident which resulted in two injuries was reported late Friday evening. Occupants of the car that was hit were transported to the UI Hospitals and Clinics after the accident. The driver and the passenger had minor injuries.

Police spotted a vehicle matching the description of the fleeing vehicle at the intersection of Burlington and Gilbert streets. After chase, the vehicle finally crashed into a tree at 10 N. Dubuque St. and the driver, Morton Padgett of Lawton, Mich., was taken into custody.

Short-circuit causes fire early Saturday morning

Two people were injured when fire broke out at 319 E. Davenport St. early Saturday morning during a party. One of the injured refused treatment, and the other was treated and released at the UI Hospitals and Clinics' Burn Clinic. The fire, reported at 3:33 a.m., was caused by an electrical short circuit near combustible materials according to the Iowa City Fire Department. Damage is estimated at $20,000.

Dubuque man kills wife, shoots self

DUBUQUE (AP) — A Dubuque man reportedly upset about his impending divorce shot his wife death before killing himself Saturday, authorities said. Burnett Salwolke, 68, shot his wife, Carilee Ann Salwolke, 57, several times Saturday afternoon front of their house as a garage was being held there.
