Council ordered to put bonuses to public vote

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

Almost three months after granting bonuses to City Manager Stephen Atkins, City Attorney Linda Gentry and City Clerk Marian Karr, the Iowa City City Council will soon vote publicly on them, following an order from Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

White ordered the public vote last Tuesday after deciding the council violated Iowa Open Meetings Law by implementing a $3,500 bonus for Atkins in closed session. White said law dictates that all salary decisions be conducted in open session.

According to official records, the council evaluated the performance of Atkins, Gentry and Karr, who were appointed and whose salaries are set by the council, at its June 8 executive session. Results of the evaluations are confidential.

Not confidential however, White said, is the recommended compensation, which is subject to a public vote at a regular council meeting.

According to the minutes of the June 23 council meeting, Councilor Susan Horowitz moved for the adoption of a resolution on the unclassified salaries of Atkins and Karr. (Gentry's salary appeared on a resolution at the July 7 meeting). The resolutions established a 6 percent raise for each of the officials, making Atkins' total salary $88,192, Gentry's $60,132 and Karr's $40,144.

During council discussion of the resolution, Councilor Karen Kubby asked how much consideration should be given to union contracts when deciding the salary of the city manager, since union employees would only be receiving a 5 percent raise.

Iowa City Mayor Darrel Courtney interrupted Kubby, saying that her remarks were inappropriate for the discussion. Councilor John McDonald agreed.

Horowitz then called the question to end the debate, saying that Kubby's point was moot because Atkins and the other two are not unionized. By a vote of 4-2, with Kubby and Councilor Randy Larson opposed, the council voted to terminate further discussion on the resolution, and then voted 5-1, with Kubby opposed and Councilor William Ambrisco absent, to give Atkins and Karr their raises. A similar vote established Gentry's raise at the next council meeting.

"I called the question because we had already discussed the issue at length in closed session," Horowitz said in a recent interview. "We had all come to closure in closed session, and Karen's point was moot."

Larson said he agreed that Kubby's point was irrelevant, but was angry that debate was ended before he had a chance to speak.

"You don't call a question until everyone has expressed their opinions," he said.

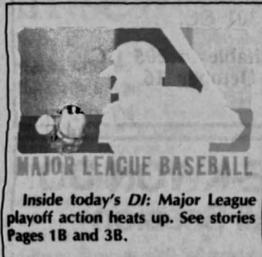

After the meeting Courtney asked Gentry if Kubby had violated Open Meetings Law by introducing debate already discussed in closed session.

Gentry said she initially believed that Kubby could have violated the law by threatening the confidentiality of the closed session.

Illinois man charged with stabbing Iowa Citian

An Illinois man was charged with attempted murder after inflicting multiple stab wounds on the upper torso of an Iowa City resident, who was rushed to Mercy Hospital after the incident Saturday at 12:03 a.m.

The victim, Scott Small, 28, 32C Meadowbrook Estates, was stabbed by Jason Brown, 20, of Gurnee, Ill., as the two engaged in a physical fight at a party at 15 N. Johnson St., according to a press release issued by Iowa City Police Investigations.

Brown, who fled the scene of the crime, was later located and found in possession of a hunting knife. Brown, identified as the person who had stabbed Small, was charged with attempt to commit murder, according to the release.

Small's condition was unknown at press time.

House committee attacks Quayle Council's FDA recommendations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration's plan to change how the Food and Drug Administration approves new drugs would undermine the agency's ability to make sure medicines are safe, a House committee report says.

The report, approved by the House Government Operations Committee, is a 27-page attack on Vice President Dan Quayle's Council on Competitiveness and its call for altering the FDA's operations.

"The Quayle Council's recommendations strongly resemble the 'wish list' it received at a secret meeting with the drug industry last year," the report says. "The Quayle Council's initiatives may well slow down drug approvals, while exposing consumers unnecessarily to dangerous drugs."

New species discovered in Amazon

NEW YORK (AP) — A pocket-sized monkey with a koala-like face has been discovered in a remote part of the Amazon, the latest evidence that the world's largest rain forest has yet to give up all of its secrets, a biologist said.

The monkey, which has a hint of zebra stripes, is "a completely new species" and its discovery "shows how poorly we still know an area like the Amazon," said Russell Mittermeier of Conservation International.

NBC ANCHOR LECTURES AT UI

Preparing for millenium topic of Brokaw's talk

James Anderson
The Daily Iowan

As a result of cataclysmic events — both international and domestic — NBC "Nightly News" anchor Tom Brokaw said that now is not the time for America to lie low.

"It seems to me that this should be a time of celebration, yet I find it is a time of anger and anxiety," Brokaw said. "It is a time of division when it should be a time of unity, a time of drift when it should be a time of passage."

A UI student from 1958-59, Brokaw delivered the UI Alumni Association's Distinguished Alumni Lecture to a capacity crowd of 1,400 people Friday night, as another estimated 400 watched on closed-circuit television in the Wheelroom of the Union.

Brokaw, who worked as an NBC correspondent in Los Angeles, Calif., during the 1965 Watts riots, said the condition of the inner city is deteriorating with the speed of a burning fuse and the 1992 Los Angeles riots left America "stunned but not yet surprised." The riots had been building for some time, he said, as a result of a new racism in America, both black and white.

Brokaw said America is "racially polarized," and truth is a casualty if race is involved.

"Many blacks in the inner cities honestly believe that crack, AIDS and guns in their neighborhoods are deliberately introduced by white financiers determined to wipe out the black population," Brokaw said. "America is exhausted by the complexities of urban areas and the nation's collective response has been benign retreat, neglect and denial."

The 30-year journalist also said people must learn to live together in an ever-smaller world.

"We have to learn to live together because our anxieties are compounded by our uncertain place in

TRIPARTITE MEETING DISINTEGRATES

Bosnian military leaders to pull out of U.N. talks

John Daniszewski
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian military leaders said Sunday they would pull out of U.N.-backed talks on ending the siege of Sarajevo because Serb rebels were preventing crews from restoring water and power to the city.

Intense fighting was reported overnight around the beleaguered Bosnian capital, and on Sunday government troops pounded an arc of land linking rebel Serb territories in the north. But for the first time since the U.N. Security Council banned military flights over the former Yugoslav republic last week, there were no reports of Serb air raids on government-held cities.

Military officials of the Muslim-led Bosnian government, Bosnian Croats and insurgent Bosnian Serbs had agreed to meet in Sarajevo on Monday to discuss the section-by-section demilitarization of the city.

The meeting was to have been the first tripartite talk since June, and was viewed as a last-ditch effort to end fighting in the Bosnian capital before the arrival of brutal winter weather.

But Sarajevo radio quoted Stjepan Siber, deputy chief of staff of the Bosnian army, as saying the government side would not attend the meeting because the Serbs have refused to allow U.N.-protected crews to restore vital services to the city.

Croatian radio also quoted Bosnian officials as saying Serb air raids — which violate a U.N. ban on military flights — also were a factor in the decision to boycott the talks.

A government withdrawal from the demilitarization talks would cripple chances for peace in the devastated city. International mediators have insisted an agreement would have to be approved by all three of the warring sides.

In Geneva, Switzerland, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said he had not heard that the Bosnians would stay away from the talks.

Mustaf Bijedic, a Bosnian government representative, also could not confirm the pullout.

CLINTON WINS

Candidates battle over patriotism, change

Tom Raum
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Bill Clinton and President Bush clashed over character and the economy Sunday night in a bristling three-way debate with Ross Perot. "I was opposed to the war, but I love my country," Clinton said in reply to Bush's criticism of his anti-war activities in the Vietnam era.

From taxes to crime to AIDS to foreign policy, the three men grappling for the White House outlined differing visions in a 90-minute nationally televised debate.

In his first major campaign appearance, Perot was a flamboyant participant, providing a series of one-liners and offering himself as an outsider who can shake up the system.

Clinton said he was neither a trickle-down Republican nor a "tax and spend" Democrat. He said he represents hope for "real change" in a country beset by economic woes.

Turning to Bush, he said, "For 12 years you've had it your way, you've had your chance and it didn't work."

Bush answered, "Change for change's sake isn't enough," and cast himself as the experienced

SHARING AMERICAN CULTURE

OIES makes hit explaining baseball

International students may feel they have two strikes against them if they come to the United States and do not understand baseball.

Althen began the program by describing the pitcher-catcher relationship and discussing how popular the sport is.

"More people in America know who Babe Ruth is than Millard Fillmore. Fillmore was a president," he said.

Zhu Hong, a student from China, said she never realized so much goes on in the game.

"You have to think to do it," she said. Zhu said baseball isn't widely played in China and when she came to the United States, "baseball was always so fun for my friends but I didn't feel the same."

When she would ask her friends to explain the game, she said, "they were so excited and they talked so fast that I couldn't understand."

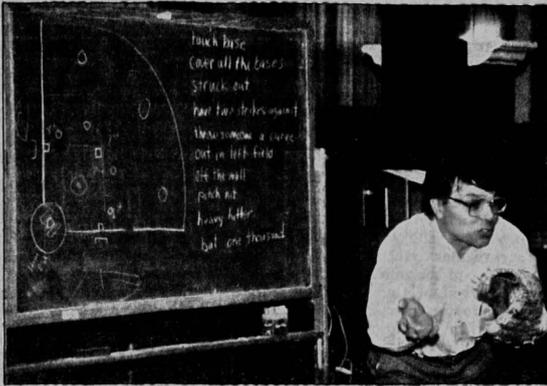

Because of the program, Zhu now understands baseball and knows why her friends love it so much.

"Now I can watch the World Series and understand it or amuse myself by watching baseball on the weekend," she said.

Peter Huidkjaer, from Denmark, said he went to a Minnesota Twins game last summer with two friends and found it boring. "I want to know why Americans think it's exciting."

After the program, Huidkjaer said he now understands the game and said baseball is "American culture." He compared his feelings about baseball to the reaction of most Americans going to a soccer game.

"If you go to see a soccer game you find it boring, yet I find it exciting."

Baseball aficionado Gary Althen explains the rules of baseball to foreign students. He spoke at the "Baseball for Foreigners" program at the International Center Friday.

I understand how you feel about baseball because of soccer," he said.

Americans talked about how a baseball team in the World Series or playoffs can bring an entire city together to watch and root for the team. "It unifies people," said a student.

If he goes to another baseball game, Huidkjaer said he wants to sit close to the action so he can "see the communication between the catcher and pitcher." He said that might make it more exciting.

strikes, outs and innings, more questions were fielded. "What's an RBI?" "Where are the umpires?" "Can you get more than three strikes?"

After all questions were answered the words to "Take me Out to the Ballgame" were passed around and everyone took part in a mock seventh-inning stretch.

Althen tried to explain the popularity of baseball to those people who think it's boring.

"People who play and watch baseball are people who love baseball and have played all their lives," he said.

where they used passersby and interested onlookers as extras.

Freshman Quadrangle resident Christine Smucker — one of the many performers — said she was on her way to visit friends at Hillcrest when she saw the crew.

"We saw a camera and thought it was for television," she said. "We found out it was for 'Coach.'"

"Coach" has used the UI campus for transitional scenes in past seasons, portraying life on the fictional Minnesota State campus. The program centers around the character, Hayden Fox, a college football coach with a name association to UI football coach Hayden Fry.

The program has other roots at the UI. Executive Producer Barry

Kemp and Associate Producer Craig Wyrick are both UI alumni.

Jon Van Allen, of the Iowa Foundation staff, directed the shoots. He said Wyrick, an acquaintance of Van Allen, contacted him about shooting the scenes. Van Allen said he had worked on five similar projects for "Coach" in the past.

He said on one of his recent projects for "Coach," he shot pictures of the Iowa scoreboard for scenes at the "Pineapple Bowl" in Hawaii. Van Allen said "it was kind of ironic," that the temperature at Kinnick Stadium was actually eight degrees below zero.

Last fall, he filmed crowd scenes for the program at the Iowa-Cincinnati football game with cameraman and UI student Aaron Wolf, who is now making films in California.

Jack Beck, a UI graduate student in production studies, operated the camera on this shoot.

He said he has worked on several student films in the past, but "it's always nice to have some professional experience."

Van Allen said the students working as extras were "very helpful and very responsive."

"Even though they saw my back," Hillcrest sophomore Jason Jahnke said, "I get to say I was in 'Coach.'"

Dave Boblenz, a fellow Hillcrest sophomore, said he was going to call his parents. He added, "It will definitely make me watch the show now."

$25 donations requested at Magic Bus fund-raiser

The guest of honor was noticeably absent from the party held in its honor Sunday evening. A cardboard replica was all that was there to remind partygoers of the reason they had all gathered.

The Magic Bus was missing because it was impounded one month ago when its owner, Brian DeCoster of Iowa City, was arrested and charged with bootlegging at the Iowa State football game.

Sunday's party was a fund-raiser for the Magic Bus Defense League. Friends of the Magic Bus are attempting to raise the necessary funds for the upcoming court case.

DeCoster's initial hope was to get $25 from each person and said donations were being accepted at Sam's Pizza, 321 S. Gilbert St.

Dan Stone, a friend of DeCoster who was helping to set up the party Sunday afternoon, stressed that the money is for the bus, not the food and drink provided at the party. All donations will become part of the defense fund for the Magic Bus.

Early attendance at the fund-raiser was low, but Magic Bus supporters said they expected an increase in the evening.

Shawn Noble, a Magic Bus loyalist and UI graduate student said that among the people he has talked to, support for DeCoster is good. Noble described DeCoster as someone who looks out for his friends to make sure they are happy and have a good time.

"The thing about Brian is that he goes all out," Noble said.

IC ROBBERS STILL AT LARGE

Public's help requested in search for suspects

Yokota Masuo

Iowa City Police are asking the public for help in establishing the identity of two suspects in a robbery earlier this month.

Two college-aged males ran away with an instant-access card, an Amoco credit card and a Whistler radar detector from the 600 block of River Street in the early morning hours of Oct. 2, according to the police.

It was reported to the police shortly after 3 a.m. the same day that the two men were discovered in the garage of an Iowa City resident, whose name is being withheld.

On discovering the men, the resident unsuccessfully attempted to detain the suspects. However, it was believed that one of them sustained an injury on the right side of his face, said Steve Duffy, a detective with Iowa City Police Department.

"If someone has a friend who recently developed some sort of injuries on his face, I want to know about it," Duffy said.

The robbers escaped by car, which has not yet been identified.

About one hour after the report, one of the suspects paid $17 for gas by using the stolen Amoco credit card at Jerry's Amoco, 102 Second St. in Coralville, Duffy said. The transaction was videotaped by a surveillance system.

The culprit is described as a white male, about 5-foot-10-inches tall and weighing 150 pounds, with short blond hair. He was wearing a dark-colored T-shirt with a large logo on the back. He is believed to have received an injury on the right side of the face.

The other suspect is about 5-foot-10-inches tall, has black hair and is weighs about 150 pounds. He was wearing a black jacket with "WARTBURG" on the back in white letters.

Asked why the police waited six days to release the information on the robbery and assault, Duffy said it was "because we didn't have good enough evidence to give out to the press until now."

PROMOTING AWARENESS

UI community urged to clean up campus

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

As part of an ongoing effort to improve, maintain and preserve the appearance of the UI campus, the UI has designated Tuesday as Campus Care Awareness Day.

In recognition of the event, UI students, faculty and staff have been asked to participate in any part of a series of 30-minute cleanup sessions at various campus sites, including Hancher Parking Lot, the Pentacrest and the Boyd Law Building.

Assistant director of the UI Physical Plant Bob Brooks said the cleanup will basically involve picking up litter. Brooks said the sites and date of the cleanup were chosen for specific reasons.

"We expect that after a football weekend there's a little more litter, and we tried to pick sites where there is usually a little more trash," Brooks said, adding that the approach of Homecoming also played a part in the choice of the date.

"Part of the reason we selected this date is because we're coming up on Homecoming," he said. "It's kind of the old 'clean up the front room, company is coming' type of thing."

UI Coordinator of Student Services Belinda Marner said she has no idea how many people will participate, but all are welcome and needed.

"We're really encouraging anyone who has the time to participate to come and help us," Marner said. "There's sites all over campus, and there's a variety of times."

Also included in the Awareness Day is a presentation by UI Associate Director of Planning and Administrative Services Larry Wilson.

Wilson will be discussing campus improvement projects at the Union in his presentation, "What's new in the campus landscape — What the future holds," at 12:15 p.m. and 3 p.m.

The UI Campus Care Awareness Committee will also be available in the South Room of the Union to answer questions and discuss committee goals Tuesday afternoon from 4-4:45.

Additionally, the new Iowa Advanced Technology Laboratories will be open to the public for self-guided tours throughout the day.

Brooks said the day is just the beginning of an ongoing process to improve the UI campus, and more projects are planned for the future.

"In the spring we'll try to do something more," Brooks said. "The intention is this will be something ongoing. Hopefully we'll have a spring and a fall type of project. This is just the kickoff."

For information on the cleanup efforts, contact Bob Brooks at 335-5061.

IMPLICATIONS OF AMENDMENT WEIGHED

Union discussion encourages pro-ERA campaigners

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

The heated debate over the proposed Iowa Equal Rights Amendment continued Saturday at the Union, where counterarguments to what were called "hate-filled tactics" were presented and campus ERA campaigners were encouraged.

Katherine Spillar, Iowa Women's Campaign for Equality coordinator of student campaigns, spoke to about 25 UI students, most of whom were members of Students for Equality, about the chances for the amendment's passage.

She said that while recent polls have shown approximately 70 percent of the state population is in favor of the ERA, traditionally low voter turnout among young people and males answering untruthfully to female poll-takers are factors that place the real proportion closer to 50 percent.

Navdeep Jassal, an organizer of Students for Equality and a UI alumnus, said the group wants to register every female between the ages of 18 and 24 on campus to vote.

Spillar said a huge campus campaign is one of the reasons the 1992 ERA campaign is different from the 1980 campaign, when the ERA was defeated. Restrictions on where people on university campuses may register have been an obstacle in this campaign, she added.

Spillar said the opposition's argument that the ERA will mandate state Medicaid funding of abortions is untrue. In most states, Medicaid is considered a privilege and not a right, and the ERA does not apply, she said, pointing out one exception.

"In Connecticut, there is a twist in the law, where in effect, funding of Medicaid is a right," she said.

Spillar also disagreed with the Stop ERA campaign's assertion that with the ERA, women will pay higher insurance rates.

"The truth is, women pay more for insurance," she said.

After the age of 24, women are charged the same car insurance rates as men, even though they drive half as much, according to Spillar.

She also pointed out that women pay higher life insurance rates than they should because though death rates even out after age 20, insurance companies say women live nine years longer than men. Spillar said women actually only live three years longer.

"If insurance companies are going to get to charge more, don't you think they'd be funding our campaign?" said Spillar. "They pour millions into Robertson and Schlafly fronts."

Pat Robertson of the Christian Coalition and Phyllis Schlafly of the Eagle Forum are expected to launch a television campaign Oct. 21 to stop the passage of the ERA.

Students for Equality will host Feminist Majority President and ERA expert Eleanor Smeal speaking at the Union on Oct. 21.

UI TO SHARE FUNDING

Genetic research awarded $15 million

Anne Johnston
The Daily Iowan

Officials announced Friday the award of a $15 million grant to the UI College of Medicine for research on the Human Genome Project, an international effort to produce maps of human chromosomes in order to pinpoint the origins of inherited genetic disorders.

"This is a very big project, a very ambitious undertaking," said UI Vice President for Research David Skorton.

The grant will make the UI one of nine U.S. centers funded by the National Center for Human Genome Research — a component of the National Institutes of Health.

The UI will receive approximately half of the $15 million, with the remainder of the grant being shared among three other institutions involved in the project.

"We have here an unusual project that is of enormous benefit to science and to human health," UI President Hunter Rawlings said.

"It's also of enormous benefit to us here in Iowa in terms of what it does for the university and for the state."

The main component of the project will be the production of "high resolution" genetic maps, which researchers say will aid in diagnosis, understanding and treatment of the more than 4,000 genetic disorders that affect humans.

"This project takes advantage of some recent, quite dramatic technical advances and allows us to apply them in a very direct way for a better understanding of human inherited disorders," said Dr. Jeffrey Murray, UI associate professor of pediatrics.

Murray is the principal investigator for the four-year cooperative effort, which will also involve researchers from Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia, Pa., the Marshfield Medical Research Foundation in Marshfield, Wis., and the department of genetics at Harvard University.

Murray said the first step in identifying the causes of some of those disorders will be to pinpoint the location of the genes responsible, which may lead to improvements in both prevention and treatment.

Murray said the research will be conducted in existing UI facilities. He added it will lead to the creation of about 10 new research and administrative positions.

An additional aim of the project will be to address the ethical, legal and social issues related to the knowledge uncovered by genetic research.

Two UI pediatrics professors, Robert Weir and Dr. James Hanson, will study the quality of procedures for conducting genetic tests, confidentiality of test results, access to health care for people who are diagnosed with genetic diseases and job discrimination.

The grant also provides funding for high-school teachers from across the country to visit the UI and learn about the genetic research taking place, so that they can pass on that knowledge to their students.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST ABORTION

Minor candidate's ad to reveal drs.' identities

Associated Press

DES MOINES — A minor party presidential candidate plans a television ad campaign showing the faces of Iowa doctors who perform abortions and giving their names and addresses.

"They will show who the Dr. Menges are," said Howard Phillips, who heads the U.S. Taxpayers Party ticket. He referred to Dr. Josef Mengele, the Nazi death camp doctor accused of atrocities.

Phillips' party earlier ran TV ads that showed aborted fetuses.

Jill June, president of Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa, said such ads "will generate hate" and "will appeal to the lowest common denominator."

Phillips announced plans for the ads at a news conference Friday outside the Des Moines' clinic of Planned Parenthood, an organization that provides abortions as part of a range of family planning services.

Phillips said the ads would appear in about two weeks and would use photos of the doctors that are "publicly available." He did not say how the pictures were obtained, who would be depicted or how many would be identified other than saying the individuals "are Iowans who perform abortions in Iowa."

Dr. Susan Haskell, executive director of Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa, said she recently was photographed as she walked and from her car at the clinic's parking lot and that she expects to be in the ads.

But she added, "I do think it's rather intrusive."

He said his organization, based in Vienna, Va., chose Iowa for the ads because of support it received from its fetus commercials from Dan Shedlock, the Des Moines director of Operation Rescue, an organization of anti-abortion activists.

MACINTOSH-CLONES NOW AVAILABLE

Apple's new Performa hits store shelves

Retailers think the new line will be a big seller.

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

Apple Computer has finally brought the power of their Macintosh computers to the masses. Or at least to the mass-consumers by introducing their new Performa computer line-up to local retailers.

"It's going to be a big item," said Jim Spence, home-entertainment and home-appliance manager at Sears. "Everybody is really curious and a lot of people want to see them," Spence said.

Some of the "new" Performa computers are basically repackaged versions of the traditional Macintosh line, according to a press release from Apple.

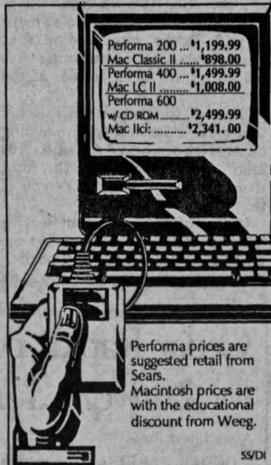

The Performa 200 and the Performa 400 are equivalent to the Macintosh Classic II and the Macintosh LC II respectively, but they will feature an easier-to-use operating system and will come with extended service and user-support.

Apple said the Performa 600 will be vaguely similar to the Macintosh IIfx. The release also stated that it won't be quite as fast, but will have the option for a built-in CD ROM.

"It's been a long time coming," said Spence. With Christmas around the corner, he added, it would provide a big opportunity for the new computers.

The Performas will also feature what Apple hopes is a more competitive price to compete head to head with other computers already on retailers' shelves.

UI students and faculty, however, have the Weeg Computing Center as well as the educational discounts offered by Apple on the Macintosh line to consider.

"I'm just kind of waiting to see," said Marilyn Drury, manager of the personal-computer support center in Weeg.

"I guess I don't know how much into price cutting they'll get," Drury said.

Drury added that students can still get a loan through the UI to help buy a computer, and also that Weeg wasn't concerned about price wars.

"The reselling of computers isn't a real high priority to us. It's the service and support and training," she said.

"We aren't selling computers to make a profit," Drury said. "It's a service. We aren't making any profit."

Spence however hopes Sears will make a profit and says that they have been getting two or three calls a day inquiring about the computers.

Spence said he would like to have the computers on the shelves by Wednesday. He added that Sears was still contemplating which software and accessories to sell.

CHANGING IMMUNIZATION ATTITUDES

New TB-prevention program uses foreign peer advocates

The program is one of the first of its kind.

Ana Mendieta
Special to The Daily Iowan

Since tuberculosis is still a threat for 8 million people in the world every year, the UI Student Health Service and the Office of International Education and Services have begun a new tuberculosis-prevention program for foreign students.

The new program, one of the first of its kind in the United States, will use foreign students as peer advocates to inform their compatriots about preventive therapy. Peer advocates will be matched up with students during the immunization program Oct. 13 and 15 at Student Health.

The tuberculosis surveillance program at the UI has been in place for more than a decade. However, the compliance rate for taking the preventive therapy — designed for those who are infected with TB but do not have the active disease — has been low.

"Cultural attitudes and health beliefs contribute to the resistance of many people towards the tuberculosis preventive therapy," said Amy Snelling, health-education intern at Student Health.

"Some people who have the tuberculosis infection do not take the medication because they think that it is harmful to their livers," Snelling said. "Others say that they will always have a positive TB skin test because they had a BCG vaccination, and some patients will not see the need of preventive medication because they feel fine."

Dr. Larry Anna Afifi, nursing supervisor at the Student Health Service, said there are other factors which add to the confusion about tuberculosis.

"People are given BCG immunization against TB in their childhood in many parts of the world where tuberculosis is a high-prevalence disease," she said, "in the belief that they will be protected for life."

"Although most of us thought that was true, we now know it is not. Even if you had a BCG when you were young, a positive PPD — purified protein derivative — test now means that you have the tuberculosis germ, although not necessarily the active disease," said Afifi.

TB-prevention peer advocates will serve as a communication bridge between Student Health and foreign students.

"These peers can identify with the people they are helping," said John Rogers, OIES coordinator of the program. "Therefore, their preventive work will be more effective in informing both the administrators about the concerns of their group, and their compatriots about recent medical information on tuberculosis."

Eight UI students from Taiwan, India, China and Sudan have been selected as peer advocates for fall 1992.

"I really think that this program is a good idea, because it makes students who are in the TB-prevention program more comfortable," said Rebecca Lueth, a UI freshman from Sudan. "If they have a problem, we can explain it better because we are from the same backgrounds."

Student Health and OIES hope to create prevention programs for other health problems.

According to Rogers, their goal is "to use the present initiative as a stepping stone for a more comprehensive peer advocate program. Ideally, advocates will also deal with problems of nutrition, stress management, substance abuse and culture shock."

Most Iowa land domestically owned

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa has the lowest number of foreign-owned farmland acres of any surrounding state, according to a survey by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Foreigners owned 132 parcels totaling 32,008 acres as of Jan. 1. That amounts to one-tenth of 1 percent of all agricultural land in the state, considerably less than the national average of slightly more than 1 percent, or 14.8 million acres.

The largest percentage of foreign-owned farmland in a state is 15.7 percent in Maine, where foreigners own 2.8 million acres. Two states, Alaska and Rhode Island, report no foreign ownership of farmland.

In Iowa, a 1979 law has kept foreign ownership down. It states that foreigners may own no more than 320 acres each and that the land must be converted to a nonfarm use in five years.

But landowners of record before 1979 were permitted to keep their land. In some circumstances, they may also will it to heirs. In the early 1980s, state officials reported there were about 35,000 acres of foreign-owned farmland.

The USDA said there are foreign owners in 56 Iowa counties, and that two-thirds of them are German. German nationals own 20,335 acres, Canadians own 2,826 acres, French owners have 830 acres, Swiss investors have 397 acres and a variety of others own the remaining 7,620 acres.

Cerro Gordo county has nearly twice as much foreign-owned farmland, 4,192 acres, as any other Iowa county. There, foreigners own six parcels totaling 4,192 acres. County Assessor John Boedeker said most of the land is owned by a German-based company that bought a big cement firm northwest of Mason City. He said the land will eventually be used for nonfarm purposes.

Other counties with foreign-owned land include Kossuth, with 2,130 acres; Fayette, 2,089; Linn, 1,908; Mitchell, 1,542; Woodbury, 1,355; Benton, 1,278; Taylor, 1,040; and Buena Vista, 1,013.

DRUG ALLEGATIONS

Covering up to save an election?

Does the name Brett Kimberlin ring any bells? It may, but some would have had it otherwise. Kimberlin is the convicted drug smuggler who claims that he had sold Dan Quayle marijuana. Due to the timing of his claim, at whom the accusation was aimed, and the fact that he had called a press conference to make his accusations, Kimberlin found himself removed from prison's general population and placed in solitary confinement. As a result, his press conference never happened.

Last week, a Senate report was released accusing the Justice Department of acting to isolate Brett Kimberlin for "political reasons."

Add to this the fact that Brett Kimberlin's phone calls were tapped and recorded by federal officials, and we have a violation both of Kimberlin's attorney-client relationship, and of Justice Department regulations which state that officials "may not monitor an inmate's properly placed call to an attorney."

But why? If Quayle had never purchased any marijuana, as he has since claimed in response to Kimberlin's allegations, then there should be nothing to cover up and no real reason to have moved Kimberlin into solitary. If Quayle's denials are true, then there should be no evidence whatsoever to link Kimberlin's claims to anything more solid than fantasy.

If Quayle's denials are true, then there should be no evidence whatsoever to link Kimberlin's claims to anything more solid than fantasy.

But the actions of the unnamed federal officials suggest otherwise; they suggest that there may have been something to hide, some substance to Kimberlin's claims. Federal authorities monitoring private phone calls, canceling a press conference which may have had a detrimental effect upon a current administration's campaign, and locking into solitary confinement the man who posed the threat of that detrimental effect. Together these circumstances add up to something that the federal government found important enough to try to hide from us, the general public.

What we do know is that, at the very least, Kimberlin's rights have been violated, and that he was placed in solitary so as to eliminate any possibility of his claims surfacing and influencing the 1988 presidential election. While this indicates a cover-up, it also indicates the willingness of our current administration to deal with such unflattering accusations in any manner necessary, whether or not those means be legal. And this does not speak well of the executive branch of our federal government.

If J. Danforth Quayle did purchase marijuana from Kimberlin, he should not be lynched for it, but he should have the incident exposed, as would any of the rest of us. And he should have the hypocrisy of his hard-line, anti-drug stance questioned.

LETTERS

Irradiation defended

To the Editor:

Henry Spira's letter (DI, Sept. 30), addressing the unsanitary conditions of the chicken-packing industry, evoked mixed emotions. I am pleased that Mr. Spira is concerned about the quality of food we eat. But it is regrettable that Mr. Spira's uninformed opinion may cause others to question the significant benefits that food irradiation provides in curbing food spoilage and reducing food-borne illnesses.

Mr. Spira makes unsupported claims about the "possible hazards associated with the use of irradiation." The truth of the matter is that food irradiation has been researched extensively, and has been proven to be a safe and highly effective means of inhibiting spoilage. This is briefly illustrated by the following list of some of the organizations that endorse the safety and recommend the use of food irradiation: the World Health Organization; the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organization; Codex Alimentarius (a U.N.-sponsored body responsible for establishing standards for handling food); a panel of international microbiological societies; the Institute of Food Technologists; the Health Physics Society; the Council for Agricultural Science and Technology; the American Council for Science and Health; the American Medical Association; the Canadian Medical Association; national scientific committees in Australia, Canada, Denmark, France, the Netherlands and Great Britain; the U.S. Food and Drug Administration; the National Food Processing Association; the National Pork Producers Council; and the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. As of 1990, food irradiation had been approved in 38 nations (counting the former U.S.S.R. and Yugoslavia as a single nation).

The following statistics further demonstrate the necessity of utilizing every safe, effective means available to inhibit food spoilage: About 20 percent of the world's food supply is lost due to spoilage, and in some disadvantaged areas of the world where food is needed the most, the spoilage rate is as high as 50 percent. According to the National Centers for Disease Control, 6.5 million serious cases of food-borne illness occur in the United States each year, resulting in 9,100 deaths. Other estimates, which include more mild forms of illness, are as high as 80 million cases, with costs of medical treatment and reduced worker efficiency as much as $17 billion.

Mr. Spira's assertion — that food irradiation should not be used in the poultry industry on the basis that "irradiation encourages producers to lower already outrageously low standards" — is not well reasoned. This assertion is equivalent to the suggestions that condoms should be banned on the basis that their use promotes risky sexual practices; that all medicines should be banned on the basis that their availability induces people to contract diseases; or that all vegetation should be eradicated on the basis that the existence of vegetation diminishes our concerns with global warming.

If Mr. Spira had taken the time to research the facts and think his position through logically, I am confident that he would have come to the conclusion that we must maximize the use of irradiation technologies in order to improve the quality of the food we eat.

For further information on the benefits provided by the irradiation of meat, poultry, seafood, fruits, vegetables, wheat and spices, see "Irradiated food: Is there a need?" Bernard L. Cohen, Nuclear News, June 1992, pp. 60-68.

Be all that you can be; come out

There is out, there is in, there is outing, there is coming out. In the past year or so, much has been written about all these topics. Whether as a cluster of concepts being widely examined in our popular culture or as ways of life — chosen freely or taken up under duress — the topic of closets and coming out of them creates a good deal of anxiety for many gays and lesbians.

In August 1991, Pete Williams was just another guy with a government job. That job, assistant secretary of defense, happened to put him before the television cameras a lot during Operation Desert Shield. Ironically, it was also at that moment in history that the military was on the cusp of discharging some 2,000 Desert Shield troops. Neither incompetence nor treachery nor cowardice was the charge. They were about to be dismissed because they were gay and lesbian. This set the backdrop for Aug. 27, 1991 — the day Assistant Secretary of Defense Pete Williams made the cover of The Advocate. The national publication, geared to a gay and lesbian readership, had decided it was time to let the world know that Assistant Secretary of Defense Pete Williams was gay. They did; and the ensuing uproar occupied front pages and editorial pages for weeks.

But that was a year ago August. This is October, which means National Coming Out Week is approaching. One wonders what the pros and cons are to being "out." One wonders, in fact, who defines the meaning of the term. Is Phyllis Schlafly's son "out," now that he's been outed? He doubts it. He's still leading a quiet life at home with mom and pop in Alton, Ill.

Did the woman who accepted her second Academy Award for best actress in five years

"come out in code," as so many people said, or had she just finished reading Robert Bly's "Iron John" prior to formulating her acceptance remarks? I have never once referred to other gays as "my tribe, my blood, the pioneers, the outcasts," or anything else our erstwhile Yale graduate gushed from the stage of the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion last spring. I would be more likely to ante up with something along the lines of: "Yo. We be homos." But then, I am from the Midwest. People here appreciate a certain economy of speech. If they are going to be told something they would rather not hear, by God, say it and get it said. Don't make them use a decoder ring to take it in, or they'll really be hostile.

The oft-overlooked truth about coming out is that it isn't a radical move at all. It's the shortest distance between two points, the most conservative approach to relating with others. Why, coming out conforms to a veritable Ockham's razor of interacting as a homo in society and politics. It just means standing up and claiming your right to deal straight (sorry) with the world.

People who feel forced into secrecy about their lifestyles pay an exorbitant emotional price for hiding. (Again, keep in mind that we're dealing with a wide-ranging continuum of options here, from yes-the-other-parents-in-the-car-pool-know to oh-my-God-she's-in-the-damned-paper-with-it-again.)

Arguments against keeping the big secret abound. Secrecy creates fear of being found out, which is a pressure, which in turn accumulates and seeks an outlet. This can spiral into drug and alcohol abuse, a trait frequently ascribed to homosexuals (by idiots) as an outcome of desperate unhappiness with their lot and a wish to change. Nonsense. They're desperately unhappy, if and when they are, because they haven't found their lot. They're in no way being themselves or operating optimally as human beings if they have to fear who they are.

In addition, closeted people often endure the destructive agony of perceiving relationships as a threat. This happens because of the fear that if sustained over a long period of time, the relationship itself could become the "clue" that results in exposure. Clearly, it wouldn't take long for even the most well-suited couple's relationship to deteriorate under the weight of such unspoken but palpable pressure.

No one should have to put up with it. No one should have to feel twisted, lied and terrorized within themselves because of who they find themselves attracted to. But there's another point that needs to be made. If heterosexuals, as law-abiding and decent sorts, have an obligation to treat all people with respect, then homosexuals, as full citizens, need to treat heterosexuals with respect. And that means you know them and they know you. It means that you take responsibility over your life and claim your spot in this society by finding your own way to declare that you are gay or lesbian. It is not, in my experience, that big a deal. Most people take a reasonable pride in being decent. They respect you for being honest. Most people get nervous over what they don't know, not what they do.

So I look forward, this Coming Out Week, to a time when we won't have to have one. It is devoutly to be wished that someday, instead of coming out, we can all stay in — with friends, family and loved ones. If that day comes, we will have reached a very common-sense utopia in which we simply regard one another as people going about the business of living our lives the best way we know how. That seems like an end worthy of everybody's agenda.

ORDEAL IN IRAQ

Bomb expert free after 2-day captivity

Chad Hall was captured Thursday while using mines in a disputed area of the Iraq-Kuwait border.

Neil MacFarquhar Associated Press

KUWAIT — An American bomb-disposal expert, free in Kuwait after Iraqi police seized him in a border dispute, blinked back tears on Sunday as he described a terrifying ordeal, but said he was not harmed.

Chad Hall, released Saturday after two days in Iraq, said his hopes for a quick and peaceful resolution of the conflict withered as he was led away at gunpoint, then taken to Baghdad and issued a prison uniform.

Hall's seizure Thursday afternoon in a disputed section of the Iraq-Kuwait border had raised tensions ahead of the U.S. presidential election in November. There had been speculation that Baghdad was trying to provoke President Bush, who is trailing in the polls to Democrat Bill Clinton, but Iraq blamed the incident on "confusion" along the unmarked frontier.

The United Nations took custody of Hall in Baghdad on Saturday and flew him to their border head-

Sale of F-16 fighters to Taiwan justified

At a time when people are starting to feel relief from the nightmare of the superpower conflict, U.S.-China relations have been severely strained by the recent U.S. sale of 150 F-16 fighter jets to Taiwan. Chinese officials warned that the United States would be responsible for the serious consequences of the sale. Moreover, the United States was told that China would not attend a meeting of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council concerning arms control in the Mideast.

President Bush's decision to sell the F-16s would result in $6 billion in U.S. exports and 3,000 jobs saved in Texas. However, some important reasons for this sale are worthy of public attention.

The F-16, a 1972-designed, light-weight fighter, has been used by the Pacific Rim nations: Indonesia, South Korea, Singapore and Thailand. The addition of F-16 fighter jets to Taiwan's aging air force can by no means affect the security of Taiwan's neighboring countries, including China. This F-16 sale is actually an arms trade with the least offensive effects. On the contrary, China's overseas arms sale is increasingly undermining the global stability. With help from China, Iran's nuclear plant and related processes could directly help a nuclear program. Missiles and plans for a nuclear bomb sold to Pakistan by China could reach deep into India. China's arms exports are directly monitored by a Special Weapons Sales Review Board of the Central Military Commission of the Chinese Communist Party. Its recent $1 billion weapons sale to the oppressive Burmese government is even suspected to have been paid for by drug money. As a major arms exporter, China is also buying high technology while trying to sell missiles and nuclear weapons overseas.

Among the governments in today's world, China has continuously proven itself the least credible and predictable. Tibet has actually been a killing field since China's takeover. Eighty-seven thousand Tibetans were killed in a 1959 uprising against Chinese rule. In Cambodia, China is the main supporter of the Khmer Rouge regime, which is responsible for the countless deaths there. As the rear guard of today's communist world, China was the sole cheerer of last year's aborted Moscow coup. China even intervened in Mongolian politics to maintain the Communists' power in Mongolia. As East-West tensions ease, China is increasing spending on its military strength, including the purchase of Sukhoi Su-24 long-range fighters from Russia. At the same time, China has warned Israel and France against selling fighters to Taiwan. And China never stops its armed threats toward Taiwan. It continuously emphasizes its "right" to use force to resolve the so-called "Taiwan problem," which it considers to be its own "internal affair." A military crisis in the Taiwan Strait has never been ruled out by experts. Under these circumstances, the sale of F-16s to Taiwan is an urgent necessity, if the law of the jungle is not expected to be part of the New World Order.

For people in Taiwan, the repeated armed threats from China are inevitably part of their daily life. The responses that follow have been repeated in human history. Many definitely resist it with high resolve, just for the dignity of being human beings. Some kneel down to entertain the potential future governor. In recent years, travelers from Taiwan to Beijing have sometimes been reported toasting the hosts, praising Chinese leaders and China's armed threats toward Taiwan. Even people on the China side are shocked by this shameful behavior. Under these circumstances, the denial of the sale of an effective defense weapon to Taiwan would cause dramatic effects. An open call of surrender to China might surface and result in a severe disturbance inside Taiwan. This could well be interpreted by China as an invitation to invade Taiwan.

For the post-Cold War Asian nations, China's continuing military buildup has caused great concern. In the wake of the Soviet Union's withdrawal from Vietnam and the closure of the U.S. Subic and Clark military bases in the Philippines, China's recent moves have prompted charges that it is bullying its neighbors. China has switched its military planning to a "limited local war," especially on its southern and maritime borders, and is planning accordingly. Since March 1991, there have been 15 attacks on foreign boats and ships in these disputed strategic areas of the world. With a 12 percent defense-budget increase last year, China is reportedly eyeing a half-built Tbilisi-class carrier now in a Ukraine shipyard. This 60,000-ton ship would be able to project China's air power 4,000 kilometers (2,480 miles) from its shores; as far as Africa, Australia and the mid-Pacific. Because of this, Asian nations were very relieved after hearing about this F-16 fighter sale. It restores a little bit of geopolitical balance at a time when China has really been throwing its weight around.

As the world is looking forward to a new era of peace, people are expecting China to play a constructive role in the Pacific Rim area. However, China has been responding to this expectation with a fearsome policy of expansionism so far. As an ancient empire, its weight always means other people's pressure. Its glory always means other people's unnecessary misery. The way to deal with this expansion has to be determined somehow. However, if it must be stopped sometime, somewhere, somehow, it is better to be stopped sooner than later, better to be stopped in front of Taiwan than at some place thousands of miles off the coast of China, and better to be stopped by some effective fighter jets ready on the ground than by some anti-missile missiles exploded in space.

Hawk heroics prevail over Badgers

Win causes Iowa to don dance shoes

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry and his Hawkeyes have finally found their long-lost dancing shoes. Now the only question is whether Iowa will waltz its way through the rest of the season, or if the Hawkeyes will two-step themselves out of the Big Ten race.

If Saturday's 23-22 last-minute dramatic victory over Wisconsin is any indication, one thing is for sure — the last six games ought to be an adventurous fling.

"We obviously had a little bit of a celebration. We did the first chapter of the Hokey-Pokey," Coach Hayden Fry said. "That was one of the most courageous victories I've ever been associated with. I just give credit to the Lord, and I'm sincere about that. I don't know how else we could have won it."

A virtually uneventful first half produced two Wisconsin field goals sandwiched around an 11-yard Hawkeye touchdown from Jim Hartlieb to Alan Cross. In fact, the Badgers had amassed as many passing yards as they had points in that span — six.

But the final 30 minutes were a different story.

With 10:26 left, Badger fullback Brent Moss plunged into the end zone for a one-yard score, making it 19-15 Wisconsin. The 88-yard drive only took 1:19, keyed by a 42-yard strike from Darrell Bevell to Lee DeRamus after lineman Jeff Nelson had the quarterback in his grasp at the one-yard line.

Kicker Rich Thompson stretched the lead to 22-15 on a 32-yard field goal with 3:54 remaining, before Hartlieb launched the Hawkeyes Cornerback Carlos James eludes Badger guard Chuck Belin on a 23-yard interception return in the final minute of the third quarter. James would stretch arms of strong safety Reggie Holt — yes, the same Reggie Holt whom Mike Saunders victimized in a footrace to the end zone last year.

"I'm a great believer in Anthony Dean," Fry said, although he needed a second opinion on the sophomore's potential. "I went up to Danan on the sidelines and I said, 'Danan, do you think Anthony can handle it?' He said, 'Coach, he'll be a lot better than me. That was kind of the attitude of the whole team.'"

"We all had faith in A.D.," Hartlieb said. "It was designed to go to the backside or even over the middle. They had the coverage, but he just kept working for an open area and I just put it up, and he got up and made an excellent catch."

But the mission of winning was yet to be accomplished, as the Hawkeyes still trailed 22-21 with 55 ticks showing. And for Fry, there was only one thing left to do.

"Oh, Lord no," Fry responded. See HAWKEYES, Page 28

later block a Wisconsin field goal attempt on the game's final play, preserving a 23-22 Hawkeye win.

"It was a big moment for me and the rest of the team," said Dean, a sophomore out of Pompano Beach, FL, who also caught the two-point conversion pass in the back of the end zone to put Iowa up 23-22. "I knew that Danan was down and somebody needed to step up. And, like I said when I first came here,

Here's the scenario: The score is 22-15 in favor of Wisconsin. With 0:55 left in the game, Iowa is facing third-and-goal from the 4-yard line after two unsuccessful rushing attempts to get into the end zone.

In any normal situation, you'd look for star receiver Danan Hughes across the middle or on a fade to the back of the end zone. But he's been out of the contest since half-time with an injured ankle.

So who do you go to? Do you look for tight end Alan Cross, who's already caught five passes for 92 yards and a touchdown? Or how about speedy sophomore wideout Harold Jasper, who's been so successful making the catch on the crossing route all afternoon?

With all of these options, you decide to look past the statistics and to go to little-known, little-played receiver Anthony Dean high in the right corner of the end zone — at least that's what Hawkeye quarterback Jim Hartlieb did.

"I knew that he was either going to catch it or it was going to go out of bounds over his head," said Hartlieb, who ended the afternoon with 297 yards on 31 completions. "He made a great catch."

"It was a big moment for me and the rest of the team," said Dean, a sophomore out of Pompano Beach, FL, who also caught the two-point conversion pass in the back of the end zone to put Iowa up 23-22. "I knew that Danan was down and somebody needed to step up. And, like I said when I first came here,

NLCS GAME 5

Pirates Walk by Atlanta

Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Barry Bonds is back and the Pittsburgh Pirates are back in the National League playoffs.

With Atlanta on the brink of clinching its second straight NL pennant, Bonds ended his 0-for-forever postseason slump with runners on and helped the Pirates to a 7-1 victory Sunday night in Game 5.

Bob Walk, who wasn't even in the rotation when the playoffs began, allowed three hits, turning in the best effort yet by a Pirates' starter. It was his first three-hitter since his rookie year with Philadelphia in 1980.

But the night belonged to Bonds, who drove in the second run in Pittsburgh's four-run first. He had two hits and made an exceptional running catch as the Pirates kept the Braves from winning the pennant at Three Rivers Stadium for the second straight year.

The Braves still lead the series 3-2, and can wrap up the franchise's first back-to-back pennants since 1958 by winning either Tuesday or Wednesday in Atlanta.

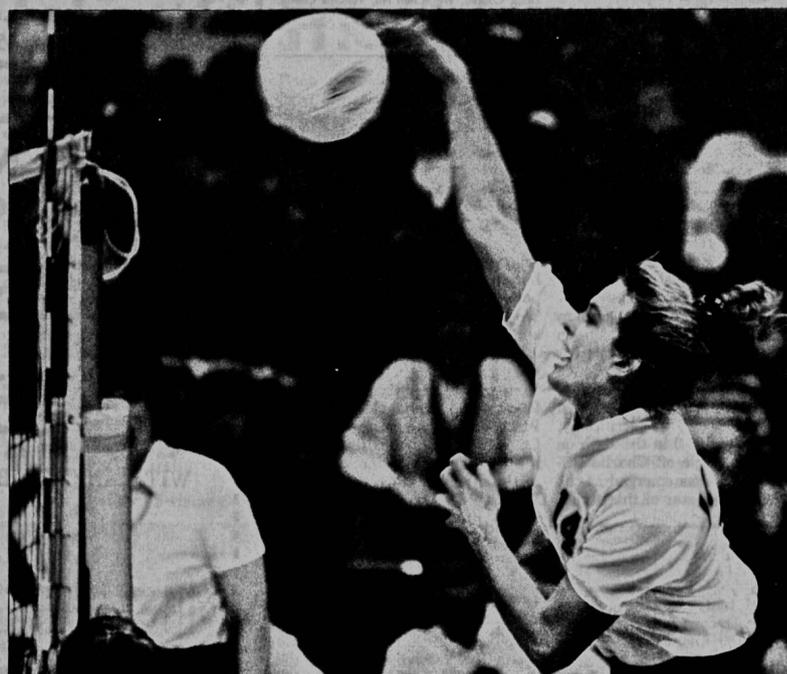

Pittsburgh will try to duplicate Atlanta's comeback of last fall, when the Braves reversed a 3-2 deficit by winning the final two playoff games on the road.

If the Braves needed some inspiration for a comeback, they got it from Walk, who threw his second complete game of the year and second in two seasons, — and the history book.

Walk, making his first postseason start in two years and his fourth over a 13-season span, appeared badly outmatched against Atlanta starter Steve Avery, the owner of a record 22½ inning postseason scoreless streak.

Hardly. Avery never got out of the first inning and the Braves never got to Walk, the same pitcher they released eight years ago after Hawkeye sophomore Staci Morley of Houston, Friday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Iowa lost to Tex., registers a kill in Iowa's victory over Indiana Purdue on Saturday.

Big Ten split puts Iowa at .500

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

With a 1-1 split this past weekend, the Iowa volleyball team snapped a four-match losing streak. More importantly, the Hawkeyes won their first conference match this season.

After a win over Indiana Friday night and a loss to Purdue Saturday night, the Hawkeyes moved to 1-5 in Big Ten play, 9-9 overall. The Hoosiers dropped to 0-5 in the conference, 2-12 overall and the Boilermakers are 3-3, 10-6.

According to Coach Linda Schoenstedt, the 15-8, 15-4, 15-8 win over Indiana at Carver-Hawkeye Arena relieved much of the pressure the team was putting on itself.

"The things that we worked on in practice made the difference,"

Schoenstedt said. "The players put so much pressure on themselves. We asked them to re-focus on team work and reach out to each other. Tonight there was an obvious improvement on team-work."

Junior Courtney Gillis led the Hawkeyes with 12 kills. She also leads the team in total kills with 179 this season.

Defensively, sophomore Staci Morley led the team with 12 digs. Freshman Jennifer Welu and sophomore Tracy Schunk each had five block assists. Welu is the team's blocking leader with 72 in 59 games.

Although the Hawkeyes dropped their match to Purdue 13-15, 15-6, 15-6, Boilermakers coach Carol Dewey said that she was impressed with Iowa's tough blocking.

"They blocked really well and that presented some problems for us," Dewey said. "We needed to pass well and once we started doing that, things went better for us."

Actually, Iowa blocked more effectively against Indiana the previous night, compiling 20 block assists and two solo blocks. Against Purdue, freshman Lisa Dockray led the Hawkeyes with three of the team's eight total block assists. She also had the team's only solo block.

Morley led Iowa's offensive attack with 11 kills. Gillis led the team in digs with 14 and Dockray had 13.

Schoenstedt credited the play of Purdue's senior middle blocker Donna Gill, who had 16 kills for an attack percentage of .364 and also contributed seven block assists.

FIELD HOCKEY

Hawkeyes notch two shutouts

Curtis Riggs
The Daily Iowan

For the Iowa field hockey team, it was business as usual this past weekend, as the Hawkeyes shut out No. 13 Northwestern and Southwest Missouri State in Evanston, Ill.

Coach Beth Beglin's second-ranked Hawkeyes ran their season record to 11-0 with 2-0 wins over the Wildcats and Bears at Dyche Stadium.

Beglin says she feels good that the Hawkeyes have not let the Wildcats score on them this season. They also shut out Northwestern 2-0 Sept. 25 at Grant Field.

"That is quite an accomplishment," the fifth-year Iowa coach said. "We feel good about limiting them."

In Sunday's game against the Wildcats, freshman Ann Paré scored unassisted off a scramble at the 8:41 mark of the first period. Beglin likes Paré's style of play. "Ann is very aggressive," Beglin said. "She will sacrifice her body and is not afraid to shoot."

Paré was starting for forward Kris Fillat, who injured an ankle in the pregame warmups. Her status will be day-to-day this week, according to Beglin.

Junior Aimee Klapach scored on a penalty stroke with help from Wildcats coach Marisa Didio. Didio was penalized for yelling at the officials, resulting in a seven-yard free shot at the goal for Klapach.

Klapach, a defensive specialist, said that the Hawkeye defense remained composed against the Wildcat forwards.

"We were pretty poised for the most part," said Klapach, who was named Big Ten Player of the Week two weeks ago. "It is always tough to come to Northwestern."

Senior Amy Fowler also said that the defense was the key against the Wildcats.

"We had good control of the game," the co-captain said. "But in the second period, Northwestern came out strong and put us back in the defense for a while."

Aimee Klapach

The fact that this victory was a conference win made it even sweeter to Fowler.

"Winning the Big Ten is our main focus right now," she said. "If we take care of the conference, we control our own destiny."

The Hawkeyes had 15 shots on goal to 10 for the Wildcats. They also led in penalty corners, seven to two.

Iowa goalkeeper Andrea Wieland had three saves, while Donna Barg had nine for the Wildcats.

Beglin said that the team improved its game from Friday's match against Southwest Missouri State.

"We moved very well to the ball against Northwestern," Beglin said. "It was much improved from Friday."

Junior Kristy Gleason scored both goals in the 2-0 win over the unranked Bears. In the first period, she scored on an assist from senior Jamie Rofrano and Fowler. Junior Tiffany Bybel and Fowler assisted Gleason on her second tally in the second period.

Beglin was not happy with the Hawkeyes' play against the Bears. "Our team performance was absolutely pathetic," Beglin said.

 Tie: Sam Houston State 19, Nicholls State 19

Only one person went a perfect 10-0 this week, but that wasn't good enough for Steve Gwenevold. Nope, he had to go ahead and actually predict a tie between Sam Houston State and Nicholls State to add insult to injury. Does this guy have ESP or what? But maybe he could use a little work. Steve only picked 21-21. Anyway, congratulations for winning a $25 gift certificate from Active Endeavors.

 deciding he'd never mature into a consistent major-league pitcher.
 The Pirates, hitting only .205 as a team in this series and .209 in the last three NL playoffs, had a playoff record-tying four doubles in the first.
 How bad had Bonds been? He was 1 for 11 in the series, and 8 for 56 (.143) in the postseason until his double — with one extra base hit and one RBI in 18 postseason games. Not any more.
 Avery's start was the shortest in the NL playoffs since the Pirates' Bob Moose lasted just five batters in Game 5 against Cincinnati in 1972.
 The lead was the Pirates' first in the postseason since their 1-0 victory in Game 5 in Atlanta last year, and Walk wasn't about to blow it. Not after coming this far.

 The only Pirate left from their 100-loss days of the mid-1980s, Walk has filled every role a pitcher can have: starter, stopper, long man, short man, mopup man. But never has he seized center stage like he did in Pittsburgh's biggest game of the season.
 He was in trouble in the first when the Braves put two on, but he got Sid Bream to hit a rope to third baseman King. Bream doubled in the fourth with one out for the first Atlanta hit, but Bonds' Gold Glove saved him, as the left fielder accelerated into left-center to chase down Ron Gant's sinking line drive.
 The Braves' chances sank right with him.
 The Braves' lone run came in the eighth when Lonnie Smith led off with a triple. He scored one out later on a groundout by Jeff Blauser. Terry Pendleton had the third hit off Walk, a single, later that inning. Walk struck out five and walked two.
 The Pirates, who had only as many hits (26) as the Braves did runs in the first four games, added another run in the third when Bonds singled, stole second — the Pirates' first steal of the series — and scored on McClendon's sacrifice fly.
 They made it 6-0 in the sixth on Redus' RBI single off Charlie Leibbrandt. Redus has emerged as the Pirates' unsung star of this series,

HAWK TALK

Iowa

Iowa's thrilling 23-22 nailbiting victory over Wisconsin did more than stretch the Hawkeyes' winning streak over the Badgers to eight. For Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez it was another futile attempt at beating Hayden Fry, under whom Alvarez spent as a Hawkeye assistant for eight years.
 With the victory, Iowa and the Badgers moved into a second place tie with Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan State, Northwestern, Purdue and Indiana at 1-1. The Badgers still have not beaten the Hawkeye since a 38-21 win in 1976 and the last triumph in Iowa City came 1974, 28-15. The overall series now tied at 34-34-2.
 Afterwards, both sides led insights into the roller coaster struggle at Kinnick Stadium.

Emotional week
 Fry explaining his team's injury status coming into the game: just did all I could do from crying at Tuesday's press conference because of the injury situation. We had 16 kids that didn't work the early part of the week. A lot of the guys we started didn't even practice. We lost (line)man Terry Velicer today. The doctor says that knee looks real bad."

 OAKLAND — Never let it be said again that the Toronto Blue Jays are chokers.
 Criticized for years as the best team in baseball that could not win the big game, the Blue Jays matched the biggest comeback playoff history Sunday, stunning Oakland 7-6 in 11 innings.
 Pat Borders' sacrifice fly in the 11th was the official game-winner and gave Toronto a 3-1 edge in the AL series.  But what may go down in Iowa history as "The Catch" may not have even happened if it weren't for Dean's tenacity.
 Early in the second quarter, he was momentarily knocked unconscious when he was blind-sided by a Wisconsin linebacker coming from the opposite direction.

 "I had to persuade the team doctor to let me go back in and play," said Dean, who ended the day with three catches for 27 yards and a touchdown — his first of the season. "I went blank for maybe a few seconds after the hit, and I was dizzy for a while afterwards."

HAWKEYES: No sacks allowed by frontline

 when asked if he contemplated settling for a tie. "Didn't even think of it."
 With time enough to look for three different receivers, Hartlieb called Dean's number again, this time in the back of the end zone for the winning two-point conversion in front of free safety Scott Nelson.
 "It was a perfect pass," said Dean, who finished with three receptions for 27 yards. "He couldn't put it any other place. It went right between two of their defenders."
 Still, the Badgers refused to roll over. Starting from his own 20, Bevell marched his team to the 42-yard line, where he was leveled by linebacker Matt Hilliard and forced to leave the game. On came backup quarterback Jay Macias and after driving to the Hawkeye 36, Thompson attempted a 53-yarder with 0:06 remaining.

 Holder Tony Spaeth handled a poor snap, but Thompson's kick was blocked by cornerback Carlos James and scooped up by Scott Plate, setting off a wave of pandemonium and on-field celebration reminiscent of Iowa's 30-9 win over Purdue in 1990 just prior to the Rose Bowl.
 "In the end we came through in the clutch," said James, who also recorded his second interception of the year. "That's what our job is on defense. We got great confidence in our offense and we knew it would come down to defense. They came through for us and we came through for them. It was a great team win. There was no one person that stood out."
 "That's about the highest I've seen Carlos jump in two years," Plate said.
 "That had to be one of the most courageous drives for the TD and the two-point play," Fry said, "and then to block the field goal because the Wisconsin kicker has an extremely strong leg, and he had the wind to his back. Everybody on the sidelines thought it was over with, and I'm going crazy."
 But the key to the winning points may have been the offensive line. After taking their share of heat for yielding 20 sacks in Iowa's 1-4 start, the Hawkeyes' frontline put up a goose egg at the Badgers defense.
 "I didn't know that. That's good news. That's unbelievable," was all an emotionally-drained Fry had to say.

 "I can't say enough about the offensive line," said Hartlieb, who finished with 31 completions in 51 attempts for 297 yards, a pair of touchdowns and an interception. "They made it their goal all week not to give up sacks."
 In addition to the victory, Iowa's Hughes took over the Hawkeyes' all-time lead in receiving yards with 2,052, eclipsing Ronnie Harmon's record of 2,045.
 "If we keep winning, the records will keep coming and I'll keep breaking records, probably ones I don't know even exist," Hughes said.
 "Whatever it took, we did it," Fry summed up. "I imagine the fans got their money's worth."

Iowa in eight-way tie for second place

Iowa's thrilling 23-22 nailbiter over Wisconsin did more than stretch the Hawkeyes' winning streak over the Badgers to eight. For Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez, it was another futile attempt at beating Hayden Fry, under whom Alvarez spent as a Hawkeye assistant for eight years.

With the victory, Iowa and the Badgers moved into a second place tie with Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan State, Northwestern, Purdue and Indiana at 1-1. Afterwards, both sides lent insights into the roller coaster struggle at Kinnick Stadium.

Emotional week

Fry explaining his team's injury status coming into the game: "I just did all I could do from crying at Tuesday's press conference because of the injury situation. We had 16 kids that didn't work out the early part of the week. A lot of the guys we started didn't even practice. We lost (lineman Ted) Velicer today. The doctor says the knee looks real bad."

Dodging bullets

Fry on the character of his team: "Isn't it amazing how young people get out there when the bullets are flying and forget about their injuries and play ball?"

Top-notch performance

Fry on quarterback Jim Hartlieb, who threw for 297 yards on 31 of 51 passing for two touchdowns and one interception: "I've had a lot of quarterbacks do a lot of great things, but that has to go right at the top. That was as gutsy a performance as I've seen."

Reach out and touch someone

Fry on the winning two-point conversion from Hartlieb to Anthony Dean: "I called (offensive coordinator Don) Coach Patterson upstairs and said, 'Tell me what we execute the best' and he didn't hesitate."

No weaking

Hartlieb on his motivation for the game: "There's a lot of doubters out there. People saying, 'He can't throw downfield, he's a running quarterback.' I had a goal to prove to people that I wasn't a weak quarterback."

Pulling out all the stops

Hartlieb on rallying the troops: "I told them at halftime that we're not going to lose this game. I didn't care what it takes."

Challenging the Chief

Running back Marvin Lampkin, an East St. Louis, Ill., native on the Iowa-Illinois encounter Saturday in Champaign: "For me personally, this is a personal game. I'm going back to my home state. I have some guys over there, (linebacker) No. 40 Dana Howard, who's a leader on the team. I played high school ball against some of those guys. The rivalry against Illinois is still a big one. We're going to go in and play Illinois like they're a Big Ten contender. We still are, and give it all we got."

Silent treatment

Dean: "I'm the type of player where when I get on the field, I tend to block everything out. I don't listen to the fans, only to what play is called. I was nervous

Carl Bonnett/The Daily Iowan

Harold Jasper had this leaping attempt foiled by Wisconsin's Corey Manley with just over two minutes remaining, but Anthony Dean would at first because I didn't know how much I would play."

Hurts so good

Dean on being at the bottom of the pile after catching the winning two-point conversion with 55 seconds left: "At first, I thought I was going to get myself hurt, but everyone's so excited and you're so pumped up about making the catch, you don't really think about it."

Who was that masked 49er?

All-Big Ten wide receiver Danan Hughes on Dean bouncing back from a concussion sustained early in the game: "He got knocked out early in the game, unconscious, and when he came back, he said supply the heroics moments later for a 23-22 Hawkeye win. At 1-1 in the Big Ten, Iowa is now in an eight-way tie for second.

that doesn't happen much around here."

Words of encouragement

Fry on his conversation with kicker Andy Kreider, who hit the right upright on a 19-yard field goal attempt: "He didn't need anybody on him. Bless his heart. He didn't miss it on purpose. I said, 'You're a lot better than that' and he said, 'Yes sir, I know it.' I said, 'Next time, you concentrate. Forget it.'"

Coming through in the clutch

Lampkin on the offensive line, which did not allow a sack after giving up 20 in the first five games: "Right now, the offensive line is coming into its own. They're getting the confidence back. This week, they did a lot of soul-searching and taking it personal and really concentrating on taking the heat off of Jimmy."

Tremendous shootout

Alvarez: "It was a good college football game. Before the end of the game, an official told me that this was the best game he had ever seen. I would have to agree with him."

Farewell to the Badgers

Fry, when told that the Hawkeyes and Badgers won't play the next two years: "No more Wisconsin for two years? Dad gum."

ALCS GAME 4

Toronto takes Game 4 from A's, Eckersley

Ben Walker
Associated Press

OAKLAND — Never let it be said again that the Toronto Blue Jays are chokers.

Criticized for years as the best team in baseball that could not win the big game, the Blue Jays matched the biggest comeback in playoff history Sunday, stunning Oakland 7-6 in 11 innings.

Pat Borders' sacrifice fly in the 11th was the official game-winner and gave Toronto a 3-1 edge in the AL series. But this one will forever be remembered for Roberto Alomar's shocking, two-run homer off Dennis Eckersley in the ninth that tied it and completed a sensational, five-run rally against the A's and perhaps the most dominant reliever of all-time.

"I wasn't here when they didn't win in the past," Alomar said. "I just want to be here in the present when we win the big one, so we won't have to hear anymore about the past."

Alomar's homer accounted for the biggest turnaround in a major-league game since Kirk Gibson's homer in the 1988 World Series, also off Eckersley. And, more importantly, it put Toronto one game away from the World Series.

The Blue Jays, three-time losers in the playoffs, also held a 3-1 advantage in the 1985 playoffs against Kansas City. But they blew that one with three straight losses, and began the history of failure that has followed them ever since.

"I think this should dispel any talk about the Blue Jays being losers," Toronto's Dave Winfield said.

On Monday, Game 2 winner David

Cone will start against A's ace Dave Stewart.

"You look back and you think a 6-1 lead is pretty healthy," Eckersley said. "Who blows 6-1 leads? It's a reinvented Rickey Henderson revitalized the A's early as they knocked out Jack Morris in taking a 6-1 lead after seven innings. Only once before had a team overcome a five-run deficit in the playoffs — Oakland trailed Boston 5-0 in the second inning before winning 10-6 in 1988."

But for the second straight day Eckersley was ineffective, and this time it cost Oakland the game.

"I think Eckersley wasn't the Eckersley we've seen before," Alomar said.

Toronto scored three times in the eighth, setting up Alomar's tying homer.

Then in the 11th, Derek Bell drew a leadoff walk from loser Kelly Downs, took third on Candy Maldonado's single to right and scored easily on Borders' fly ball to Henderson in left. Duane Ward was the winner and Tom Henke pitched the 11th for his third save of the series.

Aside from batting left-handed, Alomar, who had four hits, bears no resemblance to Gibson. But to the Blue Jays — and to Eckersley — what he did almost was the same.

Devon White led off the ninth with a single that skipped past Henderson in left for a two-base error. That brought up Alomar, and he launched a drive high and deep to right, as did Gibson in the ninth inning of Game 1 of the 1988 World Series, for the tying home run.

Alomar hit only eight homers during the regular season, although he connected in Game 3. The Blue Jays made a big deal of this blow, spilling out of the dugout to congratulate him.

Two outs later, a single by John Olerud forced Eckersley from the game. He walked off to a few boos, but was saved a loss when Jim Corsi retired Borders on a bases-loaded grounder.

The A's had the potential winning run thrown out in the ninth. Harold Baines opened with a single off Ward, and pinch-runner Eric Fox stole second and took third on slugger Mark McGwire's first sacrifice bunt of the season.

Terry Steinbach followed with a grounder to Alomar at second, and Fox hesitated before breaking home. The delay cost him as Alomar's throw to Borders was in plenty of time for the tag.

A sensational catch by shortstop Mike Bordick thwarted Toronto in the 10th. With two out and two on, Bordick raced across the Coliseum's ample foul territory to catch Dave Winfield's pop-up just before he ran into the short retaining wall.

That Toronto was even in position in the ninth to win it was weird. Bob Welch shut down the Blue Jays on six hits for seven innings, and held a 6-1 lead. He left after Alomar led off with a double, and reliever Jeff Parrett surrendered singles to Joe Carter and Winfield, scoring a run.

The A's needed to win this game, so manager Tony La Russa made an uncharacteristic move and brought in Eckersley early. It didn't get any easier, however, as Olerud and Maldonado hit RBI singles on Eckersley's first two pitches, making it 6-4.

Eckersley was perhaps the most dominant pitcher in the majors this season, converting 51 of 54 save chances, not including one in the first game of the playoffs.

He did it with a 1.91 ERA, an 8½-to-1 strikeout-to-walk ratio, and a .211 opponents' batting average. Even so, he was nothing special in Game 3, when Toronto got two hits against him in only one-third of an inning.

Henderson, held to a 1-for-10 effort for three games, looked like his old self. Stung by criticism in the Bay area that he should be benched, he sprang to life by singling three times, stealing a base and reaching on an error. Henderson also showed some of the stuff that so

CROSS COUNTRY

Herd nabs 3rd win in a row

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Kevin Herd

Iowa runner Kevin Herd made it three wins in three meets with a championship finish Saturday at the Murray Keating Invitational cross country meet in Orono, Maine.

The senior from Aurora, Colo., finished the five-mile race with a time of 24 minutes, 18.9 seconds — over 30 seconds ahead of the second-place runner.

Junior transfer Bill Branigan took seventh for the Hawkeyes in 25:30.3. Seniors Sean Gale and Garry Roseman finished 10th (25:41.7) and 15th (25:56), respectively.

Other runners for Iowa were freshman Rod Rerko (26:26.4), junior Marc Roehl (26:30.8) and senior Steve Marshall (26:31.5).

Iowa finished in third place with 53 points. Purdue took first place with 39 points, followed by Maine (46), Iowa, New Hampshire (100) and Holy Cross (130).

Coach Larry Wiczorek was pleased with the finishes of his individual runners, particularly those of Gale and Roseman.

"Gale ran a very aggressive race," Wiczorek said. "It was a good breakthrough for him. If he can run stronger each meet he can really make an impact."

Wiczorek also said that Herd is looking good and finishing strong.

"Kevin ran an excellent race," he said. "He ran with the pace for the first two miles then threw in a real strong surge. He put in a big gap on everybody."

Wiczorek thinks that the Hawkeyes are improving on their pack running as well.

"We're making progress," he said. "We're doing some good things. We're pulling the pieces together little by little. It's making a difference what type of team we have."

Wiczorek said that Big Ten rival Purdue looked very good as a team and that the first three Maine runners were very strong.

"It was a great experience seeing these other teams," Wiczorek said. "It helped in our development as a team."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Hurricanes, Washington share No. 1 spot in Top 25

Rick Warner
Associated Press

Miami and Washington, last year's co-national champions, share the No. 1 spot again in this week's college football polls.

Washington edged Miami by one point in Sunday's Associated Press writers' poll, while the Hurricanes led the Huskies by one point in the USA Today-CNN coaches' survey.

Washington (5-0) led both polls by a comfortable margin last week, but Miami (5-0) gained ground by beating Penn State 17-14 Saturday. It was the Hurricanes' second consecutive victory over a Top 10 opponent, following a 19-16 win over Florida State the previous week.

Washington's 35-16 victory over California was the Huskies' third straight over a ranked team, but none of those opponents is currently in the AP Top 10. Nebraska is 11th, Southern Cal is 18th and California, which was 24th last week, dropped out of the Top 25 this week.

Miami and Washington each received 30½ first-place votes in the AP poll. But the Huskies got one more point (1,517½-1,516½) because one voter listed Alabama first, Washington second and Miami third. Another voter split his first-place vote between Washington and Miami.

In USA Today-CNN, Miami outpolled Washington by two first-place votes (31-29) and one point (1,467-1,466).

The results are the opposite of last year's final polls, when Miami was No. 1 in AP and Washington was No. 1 in USA Today-CNN.

Washington coach Don James said

Sunday that he was "pleased we're still recognized as No. 1 in the AP poll." But, he added, "I don't think coaches get as caught up in the polls as other people do. I think all this stuff will sort itself out in time."

Miami coach Dennis Erickson agreed.

"There will always be a comparison until one of us loses," he said. "The players can't worry about this... There's nothing we can do but play well and win games. The rest is in the hands of others."

The closest final AP poll was last year's four-point difference between Miami and Washington.

Four runners achieve bests as Hawkeyes finish in 5th

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Sometimes outstanding individual performances won't give a team the finish it wants. Such was the case for the Iowa women's cross country team, which took fifth place Saturday at the Lehigh Paul Short Invitational in Bethlehem, Pa.

The bright spots for the Hawkeyes were the personal bests set by four runners. All-American Tracy Dahl-Morris finished second in the field of 250 runners with a time of 16 minutes, 45.7 seconds. Junior Jennifer Johnson took seventh for the Hawkeyes (17:21.8), sophomore Erin Boland finished ninth (17:24) and senior Amy McReil finished in 120th place (19:39.9).

Other runners for the Hawkeyes were senior Christine Salsberry, who finished in 33rd place (18:16.2), and freshman Staci Sparks, who took 127th place (19:46).

Defending national champion and top-ranked Villanova finished the 37-team field in first place with 21 points. Thirteenth-ranked Penn State finished second (72 points), followed by Providence (120), SUNY-Cortland (163), Iowa (171), and Minnesota (172).

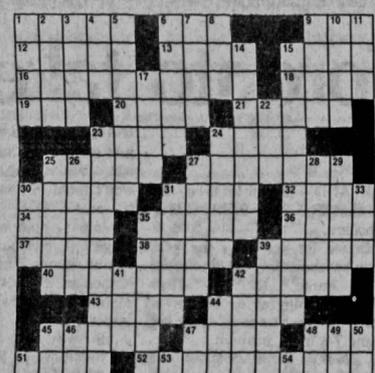

The big blow for Iowa was the injury sustained last week in practice by Tina Stec. The junior from Downers Grove, Ill., started the race but was forced to drop out after a mile because of an ankle injury.

But Coach Jerry Hassard said he can't complain about the individual finishes.

"I can't fault anyone in the six," he said. "Going in, they had serious business on their minds. We had good races from all six runners."

The life of Christopher Columbus and his voyages to the Western Hemisphere are too broad a subject to put into a convenient, two-hour story form. Two movies in less than two months on this very topic have proven

Last August was the birthing of "Christopher Columbus: The Discovery" which owed a lot more to the Sinbad-the-sailor tradition than to objective history.

This weekend marked the release of "1492: Conquest of Paradise" which, although significantly better than its Brando-clad competitor, is still a 140-minute tro through foggy swampland.

The film focuses on the first three of the four journeys that Columbus (Academy Award nominee Gerard Depardieu) made to the Caribbean under the Spanish flag and banner. A man of daring proportions, he suggests to a group of Catholic scholars that a new sea route to Asia can be found by sailing west over the uncharted Atlantic Ocean. The scholars rebuke him for his apparent craziness, but Columbus attracts the interest of another entrepreneur, a boat-builder named Pinzon (Tcheky Karyo, "La Femme Nikita").

Through Pinzon, Columbus meets with others who may consider the venture, leading to a crucial rendezvous with Queen Isabella (Sigourney Weaver). The project remains afloat, so to speak. The film then spends 10 minutes in the water — literally — until the Nina, Pinta, and Santa Maria touch ground, not at China, but at a place with much more significance.

Juliana Hatfield

John Kenyon
The Daily Iowan

Juliana Hatfield sounds at times like a shy child when she sings. Her endearing vocals made the Blake Babies worth a listen, and gave her solo LP a chance in a sea of competition.

But don't let the timid bark fool you — Hatfield has bite. Her first post-Babies LP, Hey Babe, is a tempting mix of light-handed pop and hard-edged rock, all buoyed by that angelic voice.

On the surface, it seems that Hatfield's songs follow the traditional boy-meets-girl, boy-leaves-girl formula. But dig below the surface and you find tales of isolation and heartbreak that know no specific gender or situation. So far, most critics have not scratched that surface, something Hatfield doesn't appreciate, but seems to understand.

"I suppose it's easier to have simplistic interpretation," she said. "I know some of them sound like love songs, but that's simple. It's too easy."

She says people won't have such troubles with her newest batch of songs. She has changed her songwriting style to express herself better. These songs, new and old, will be showcased tonight at Gabe's Oasis, and on a new LP that could come as early as this spring.

"It should be really obvious with these new songs what I'm really about," Hatfield said.

One thing Hatfield is about is rock. To hear her talk, she doesn't much like some of her own songs, citing pop gems like "Forever Baby" as direction she'll never take again.

"My new stuff is more powerful now I have a real band," Hatfield said. Hatfield, who played bass in the Blake Babies, has moved to guitar. Todd Phillips, of Bull-Lavolta, is on drums, and Dean Fisher will play bass. "We're getting to be real solid."

Hatfield first realized that women could rock when she heard Exene Cervenka sing on an X record.

MOVIE REVIEW

Even Gerard Depardieu can't save '1492'

Kevin Ruby
The Daily Iowan

The life of Christopher Columbus and his voyages to the Western Hemisphere are too broad a subject to put into a convenient, two-hour story form. Two movies in less than two months on this very topic have proven last August was the birthing of "Christopher Columbus: The Discovery" which owed a lot more to the Sinbad-the-sailor tradition than to objective history.

This weekend marked the release of "1492: Conquest of Paradise," which, although significantly better than its Brando-clad competitor, is still a 140-minute trog through foggy swampland.

The film focuses on the first three of the four journeys that Columbus (Academy Award nominee Gerard Depardieu) made to the Caribbean under the Spanish flag and bankroll. A man of daring proportions, he suggests to a group of Catholic scholars that a new sea route to Asia can be found by sailing west over the uncharted Atlantic Ocean. The scholars rebuke him for his apparent craziness, but Columbus attracts the interest of another entrepreneur, a boat-builder named Pinzon (Techey Karyo, of "La Femme Nikita").

Through Pinzon, Columbus meets with others who may consider the venture, leading to a crucial rendezvous with Queen Isabella (Sigourney Weaver). The project remains afloat, so to speak. The film then spends 10 minutes in the water — literally — until the Nina, Pinta, and Santa Maria touch ground, not at China, but at a place with much more significance.

The basic problem with "1492" is its story. Characters drop in and out of the story for literally an hour at a time, so it is hard to decide which character has the most influence on Columbus' sea voyages, or whether any of these people were that integral/relevant to Columbus' goals at all. His mistress Beatriz (Angela Molina) remains loyally devoted — bringing up his child Fernando — even though they haven't seen each other for years, and love/lust seems (in this film's story) very far from Columbus' mind. And Fernando (played early in the film by Billy Sullivan and later by Loren Dean, of "Billy Bathgate") is supposedly the scripter of Columbus' "restoration into history," but the interaction is minimal and vague (except for the opening scene, which is succinct and appropriate).

A deliberately unlikable nobleman, Moxica, tags along for the second voyage, intent on taking advantage of the "Indian savages." Moxica also bears an incredible resemblance to a Metallica roadie, thus maintaining one of the oldest rules in cinema: black equals evil. I suppose that there were indeed noblemen like Moxica, full of pompous airs and a general disregard for the "foreign," but this guy is little more than a caricature, a distinguishable villain to pit against Columbus' idealism (shown when he brings over sketches of Da Vinci's architecture to build in the "New World").

The real villain seems to be Columbus' own vision, and with good reason. To his credit, Columbus was taking a leap of faith based on sketchy figures and intuition. And in parts, we see how his quest turns into his own little inferno, as his discoveries are destroyed by less-noble men. Upon returning to the island named Hispaniola, Columbus finds that the colonists have been slaughtered, and the villages, by European standards, are in complete ruin. Another scene shows Columbus directing the lifting of a giant town bell, as dozens of natives and Spaniards tug and sweat the brass monstrosity into place. "1492" is story has this particular scene right, but unfortunately, it's also a moment lost in the devotion to the vague supporting characters in Columbus' world.

Ridley Scott is an interesting choice for director of this film; I guess he feels that he hasn't apologized enough for "Black Rain." Designing Columbus as a politically conscious hero (the story was written by Roselyne Bosch), sort of a Mr. Smith Goes to the Caribbean Sea, is also an interesting choice. I guess that if you are making a film about a man who is at once the most important and controversial man in European-American history, you can rewrite such a character as "largely misunderstood" to appease self-conscious WASPs and other contemporary nobles.

Earlier I said that this story is unfilmable. I take that back. I think it would be interesting to see the Columbus story from the American Indian viewpoint. It would probably make for a more cohesive script.

One day, while Utopan and his pals were hanging out at the hut, three giant ships came ashore, their inhabitants wearing funny, billowy clothing. They didn't know much about etiquette, and called the natives bizarre. They took a couple of natives home for some good old-fashioned Christian brainwashing along with what little gold existed on the islands. None of these people ever asked if the natives minded; they all had this glassy look in their eyes, as if lost in their little world of Eurocentrism.

Juliana Hatfield: a woman who rocks

John Kenyon
The Daily Iowan

Juliana Hatfield sounds at times like a shy child when she sings. Her endearing vocals made the Blake Babies worth a listen, and gave her solo LP a chance in a sea of competition.

But don't let the timid bark fool you — Hatfield has bite. Her first post-Babies LP, Hey Babe, is a tempting mix of light-handed pop and hard-edged rock, all buoyed by that angelic voice.

On the surface, it seems that Hatfield's songs follow the traditional boy-meets-girl, boy-leaves-girl formula. But dig below the surface and you find tales of isolation and heartbreak that know no specific gender or situation. So far, most critics have not scratched that surface, something Hatfield doesn't appreciate, but seems to understand.

"I suppose it's easier to have a simplistic interpretation," she said. "I know some of them sound like love songs, but that's simple, it's too easy."

She says people won't have such troubles with her newest batch of songs. She has changed her song-writing style to express herself better. These songs, new and old, will be showcased tonight at Gabe's Oasis, and on a new LP that could come as early as this spring.

"It should be really obvious with these new songs what I'm really about," Hatfield said.

One thing Hatfield is about is rock. To hear her talk, she doesn't much like some of her own songs, citing pop gems like "Forever Baby" as a direction she'll never take again.

"My new stuff is more powerful, now I have a real band," Hatfield said. Hatfield, who played bass in the Blake Babies, has moved to guitar. Todd Phillips, of Bullet Lavalita, is on drums, and Dean Fisher will play bass. "We're getting to be real solid."

Hatfield first realized that women could rock when she heard Exene Cervenka sing on an X record.

"I was blown away the first time I heard them," Hatfield said. "It was loud and distorted, and there was this girl singing — but she wasn't wimpy. Before that I was listening to Olivia Newton-John. That was the first time I realized you could mix pop music with punk rock."

She has proven that the two mix well with songs like "Nirvana," a song about how hearing a great rock song just makes you feel good (in this case it was Bleach-era Kobain and Co. that did the trick), and a knock-your-socks-off cover of Dinosaur Jr.'s "Raisans" from her Forever Baby EP. She belts 'em out better than any pretty-boy metal crooner, and with more conviction too.

Want proof? Play devil's advocate with Hatfield, like suggest she should give up ideas of powerful rock and embrace the light pop ditties that fit her voice so well — and her quiet voice takes on an even, determined tone.

"That's not even a consideration," she says of a determined move toward the pop charts. "I realize my voice is technically weak, but I think originality is a key to success. Besides, I would be so unhappy if I had to sing Belinda Carlisle songs. If I'm gonna do something like that, it's gotta rock!"

Juliana Hatfield will appear tonight at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St. Doors open at 9, and admission is $5.

ARTS CENTER

Anita Hill inspires 'I Believe Her'

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

One year after the Clarence Thomas / Anita Hill sexual harassment controversy, people are still talking about it, thinking about it, and taking sides.

The Women's Caucus for Art, in a new exhibit at the Arts Center, is showing its support for Hill with the new collaborative multimedia presentation titled "I Believe Her."

Although inspired by Hill, the exhibit represents the experiences of many individual women and the common societal disbelief they face if they are brave enough to come forward with the truth.

The majority of the pieces in the show are life-size outlines of various female figures painted on large pieces of transparent plastic. Each figure is unique through its individual designs and patterns. Most have quotes, sayings or parts of stories written on them to give a small glimpse of the thoughts behind the figure.

Some of the figures are bloody and speak of hate and rage while others express the small, powerless child within the grown woman. Many of the pieces speak of the struggle to find and maintain their own identity. One figure in particular expresses this through a body made completely of pictures of hands.

The exhibit tries to bring the issue to a personal level for its audience. One wall is devoted to the personal stories of those who visit the show; and once viewers find a body figure the size and shape of theirs, they could have trouble shaking off the message that it could happen to anyone.

A tape recording also plays in the background with the voices of women telling their stories about being harassed or abused and not being believed.

The Women's Caucus for Art succeeds in the task of driving home this ubiquitous female experience which crosses all geographical, race, class and generational lines. The exhibit immediately emits the presence of a thousand voices expressing fear, sadness, denial and rage.

The exhibit is effective in getting across its message, but perhaps this is a case where art cannot compete with the reality that millions of Americans felt last year when they watched one woman telling her story to the critical faces of a Senate committee that did not believe her.

Sheriff killed in standoff at N.C. bank

OAK CITY, N.C. (AP) — A sheriff was shot and killed in an attempted bank robbery Monday and a gunman is holding hostages inside the bank.

Sheriff Jerry Beach, 57, responded to a call from Branch Banking and Trust Co. employee before opening time. He was shot in the abdomen and died about 30 minutes later at a hospital.

Two hostages were held in the bank throughout the day and gunfire was heard again twice before noon, authorities said. The FBI, state police and local officers surrounded the downtown bank.

Time magazine miffed over Bush campaign ad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Time magazine demanded Monday that President Bush's re-election campaign retract a TV ad that uses one of its covers in accusing Clinton lying about his draft record.

The magazine sent a letter via facsimile transmission to Robert Teeter, chairman of the Bush-Quayle campaign, demanding that it "immediately cease and desist from any further broadcast of the commercial which uses Time magazine's image," said spokesman Peter Costiglio.
