Surgeons use pig's liver in transplant.

One last minute before dawn Monday, a half-dozen surgeons and technicians who work to save a dying woman by transplanting a healthy new liver were racing to prepare an emergency operation that could reverse her terminal condition.

The chief of the transplant team, Dr. Raymond L. Andriole, a 35-year-old specialist who heads the liver transplant program at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, was on the phone with mission control outside the organ operating room.

"Any minute," he said. "She's still in there, but there is a problem."

They had left the woman, Mimi C. M. Kranzberg, 26, in the Denver General Hospital intensive care unit after doctors had seemed to bring her back from the brink of death.

"We believe she'll make it," Andriole said. "But the liver's not doing well."

Andriole was trying to work with the transplant coordinator to get a pig's liver from San Antonio because he had not been able to use the woman's own liver.

"She's been on the waiting list for three years," Andriole said. "We thought the window of opportunity had closed, but now we're racing against time."

The window of opportunity was a synthetic pig's liver that Andriole had ordered weeks ago from a supplier in Canada.

"When we first heard word that the synthetic liver would be available," Andriole said, "we were looking at a few hours. It was a race against the clock."

"We had to make a decision," Andriole said, "whether to use the synthetic liver."

"We had to do it quick."

"We're losing time."
IU,florists negotiating over use

The UI says licensing is the issue, not money.

Ted Fadool
The Daily Iowan

IU and the University of Iowa have been negotiating over the use of flowers and other plants in the UI's Memorial Union, both of which are owned by the state of Iowa, for some time. IU says the state is using copyrighted plants for a profit.

IU says it is going to hire a lawyer to look into the matter.

Interior of Tech Labs gets mixed responses

Chris Pullewein

The self-guided tours through the new Technology Labs at the Iowa City public library turned the 1,800-square-foot facility into a high-tech showcase.

"It's more of a science lab," said Jane Goddard, 15, "but I think it's more of a library."

"It's really a joint venture," said Tom Kazmierczak, associate director for planning, facilities management.

"I think they're going to have to work really hard to keep this place going," said Pat Betz, 15.

The public was invited Tuesday morning to explore the newly renovated Tech Labs.

3 firms to begin work on school designs

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

As an urgent matter, Tuesday night, the Iowa City School Board chose three architectural firms to begin schematic designs for renovations on campuses in the district. The three firms are Hensel Phelps, Schooley Morison Shreve and Associates at West High, and Dake Amos & Partners in Cedar Rapids. Work on plans for renovations at Grant Wood Elementary, as well as the proposed new elementary school, residents and representatives at City High, Northwest Junior High and South East Junior High.

Superintendent Barb Grohe said the schematic-design phase cost an estimated $300,000, and it will be decided later this year whether to move forward with the project. Grohe said the library board would be made up of representatives from each of the five districts.

IC Public Library acquires records of births, deaths for residents' use

Shots offered in anticipation of flu season

Associated Press

The Associated Press is offering flu shots for the fall season. This year, the flu season is expected to be severe due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. The flu shot can help protect against the flu, which can be especially dangerous for people with certain medical conditions.

The flu shot is available at local pharmacies and clinics. It is recommended that people get their flu shot early in the season, as the flu season typically starts in the fall and peaks in the winter.

Local writer narrowly escapes showdown in Colombia

Ted Wieler, Daily Iowan

I was quite seriously concerned during the day as I had been for the five days prior, as I was thinking about all that had happened to me in the past five days. I had been in the middle of a serious storm, which had generated severe thunderstorms and caused flooding. I had to leave my home and find shelter in the attic of a nearby building.

Before the storm, I had been in Colombia for a week. I had been to several cities and had met many interesting people. I had traveled from Bogotá to Cali to Medellín and back to Bogotá. I had visited the Botero Museum and the Gold Museum in Bogotá. In Cali, I had visited the Palacio de la Cultura and the Botero sculpture garden. In Medellín, I had walked around the city and visited the Parque Arví.

On my last day in Colombia, I had plans to visit Medellín again and see more of the city. However, my plane was delayed due to weather conditions. I had to wait in the airport for several hours before finally being able to board the plane and continue my journey.

As I sat in the airport, I was thinking about all that had happened to me in the past five days. I had been through many challenging situations, but I had also experienced many positive moments. I had met many interesting people and had had the opportunity to learn about the culture and history of Colombia.

Despite the challenges, I was grateful for the experience and the opportunity to explore a new country. I was looking forward to sharing my stories with others and to learning more about Colombia in the future.
Advice from one TA on improvements

Readers of the DI have been treated to recent stories about TA and undergraduates teaching on campus. Attempts for TAs have been cut, and rumors abound about departmental money to various programs in improving TA teaching effectiveness.

Why have so many TA troubles? It turns out that the DI itself might have been to blame. The DI has been visiting its offices for a number of years, and the DI staff has been known to express concern about TA troubles. The DI staff has been known to express concern about TA troubles in ways that are inconsistent with the reality of the TA situation.

Indeed, the U.S. Office of Technology Assessment has shown that millions of children are not protected against childhood diseases: 1 of every 5 children in the United States is vaccinated against polio; 1 of every 9 against measles; 1 of every 20 against chickenpox; and 1 of every 50 against mumps. These statistics are even worse in developing countries, where millions of children are not immunized against even smallpox.

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the U.S. Agency for International Development have both established programs to improve immunization in poor countries. However, abandoning all vaccine development would be a mistake. The world already faces an international problem caused by disease. It is reported that the anti-vaccine movement in this country is hindered by the fact that many children are not protected by vaccines. While the United States has almost eliminated smallpox, it is still prevalent in many parts of the world, where it causes more deaths than polio, measles, and mumps combined. The elimination of smallpox is a global issue, and the United States has a responsibility to help other countries achieve the same goal.

In conclusion, the need for public and private support for medical research is clear. By investing in research, we can prevent disease, save lives, and improve the quality of life for all. The benefits of medical research are not limited to the scientific community; they extend to all of society. Therefore, we must continue to support medical research and ensure that it is conducted in a responsible and ethical manner.

No-huddle a success for Hawks

John Shapley

The Daily Iowan

You've seen them head-in-hand for two weeks now and are wondering what's going on. Well, Tuesday, the Hawkeye second-string offense went no-huddle for the first time.

It seems to be working. The Hawkeyes started using the no-huddle offense in earnest during the second half of the Michigan game Oct. 8, when Iowa scored 20 of its 21 points. And it was on for several weeks.

The offense hit its stride in the 41-14 win over Wisconsin Saturday, with 30 points in 30 minutes to win theano game againat the Illini...it's a battle on the field at Saturday. "They're another year, and we're probably won't be too good," Blevins said. "We're expected to win every year, that's our attitude."

Blevins said he expected the Illini to enter the game with a 6-0 record. "I think they've got a good offense, but their defense isn't as good as ours," he said.

On-off running would be the way to go...if we don't find it up ourselves.

"If it's really a close game, we're not going to win it because of lack of depth," he added.

But with four starters already out of the lineup, it's hard to imagine how the Buckeyes will win.

The Buckeyes are without their top two quarterbacks, John Chappell and Dan Orlovsky, who are both out with injuries. They also lost their top two running backs, Scarlet and Junior, who are both out with injuries.

The team is left with its third-string quarterback, Brian Sefcik, and its fourth-string running back, B.J. Boulware.

But even with those players, the Buckeyes are still expected to win by a score of 30-10.

"We just need to have more depth," said coach Pat Head, "and we're going to have to work hard to make sure we do."

Ctein Epstein is shown with his piece, "Eve (Yves)" (above). The calligraphy has been a part of the written word in various forms throughout history, and is now seeing a modern revival.

"Sandpaper discovered in England during the 19th century was being used to put my imagination to use and begin to write," Epstein said the modem revival of calligraphy for him meant the hand was inside me, so this is a way to express myself. "This work is from the 19th century, a monkey on his back meant the man was addicted to drugs. It is a significant symbol of the addict that was killed," Epstein said, referring to his own struggle.

According to the June page of Glen Woolen Mills, "...it is only natural that the more you like your kind of pizza, the more you like your kind of pizza pit. Report: More Black on campus, but not in administration

Black students at Iowa State University and Iowa State University-Iowa City are more common now than in the past, according to a report published in the College of Education.

The report, "The Black Student Experience at Iowa State University," was written by a team of researchers led by Dr. Joseph Heron, a professor of higher education at the college. The report is based on a survey of 400 students and 100 faculty members at the university.

The report found that while the number of black students has increased, the number of black faculty members has remained relatively stable. The report also found that black students face challenges such as racism, discrimination, and lack of resources.

The report recommends that the university take steps to address these challenges, such as increasing the number of black faculty members, improving campus safety, and addressing discrimination.

The report is available online at the College of Education website.
