Bond set for man accused of sexual abuse

Bond was set at $35,000 Monday, for an Iowa City man accused of committing second-degree sexual abuse and lascivious acts with a child.

According to court documents, Clarence Kane, 28, allegedly placed his fingers inside a 10-year-old girl's underwear, fondling her, last fall. He is also accused of placing a 9-year-old girl wearing only a nightshirt on his naked body, touching her vagina with his penis.

Kane was arrested Saturday. His preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 27 at the Johnson County Courthouse.

UI joins effort to improve high-school math

A $6 million grant from the National Science Foundation is being used by the UI along with Maharishi International University and four other universities for a five-year Core-Plus Mathematics Project designed to improve math curriculum in high schools across America.

The Core-Plus Project will develop, field test, evaluate and finally issue a three-year high-school mathematics curriculum for all students, according to Harold Shoen, director of the UI's development site and professor and chairman of curriculum and instruction in the UI College of Education.

Other universities included in the project are Ohio State, Maryland, Michigan and Western Michigan.

Flag to fly at half-staff for former associate dean

The Old Capitol flag will fly at half-staff today in memory of Paul Scholz, associate dean of the College of Engineering.

Scholz passed away early Sunday morning. He suffered from acute myeloblastic leukemia. Scholtz began his career at the UI in 1967. He has served as associate dean for the past 13 years, substituting twice as active dean of the college.

Memorial services will be held Thursday at the First United Methodist Church. Donations can be made to the Paul Scholz Memorial Fund at the Iowa Foundation.

FIRST bike ride co-organizer struck by car

Peter Brokaw, a UI employee and co-organizer of the FIRST Annual Community Bicycle Ride, was hit by a car Monday morning at the intersection of Madison and Court streets.

Brokaw, suffering from a broken left foot, was treated and released Wednesday from the UI Hospitals and Clinics. He will be in a cast for six weeks.

Sarajevo's flour mill destroyed in attack

A worker surveys the damage done to Sarajevo's flour mill Monday. The mill, which produced more than 90 percent of the city's bread and pasta, was hit Sunday during heavy shelling.

John Daniszewski
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A gutted heap of metal, broken glass, collapsed piping and burnt flour is all that remains of the vital electronic machinery that controlled Sarajevo's main flour mill.

And mill officials say that could spell disaster for the hungry Bosnian capital.

The city has only enough flour for one half-day's baking, mill director Dinko Meskovic said Monday, displaying the charred remains of the eighth-floor control room to journalists a day after Sunday's bombardment.

"Many, many people will die for lack of bread," he said. "More people will die from lack of food than from the Serbian shells."

Relief officials have promised flour shipments to make up for the loss, but mill officials expressed fears that this won't be enough.

The largest bread-making complex in what was formerly Yugoslavia, the Zitopromet mill and its adjoining bakery had accounted for 95 percent of the bread and pasta consumed by the 400,000 inhabitants of Sarajevo, Meskovic said.

Because bread products now make up more than two-thirds of the average diet, the attack on the mill was seen by some as a deliberate attempt to hasten mass starvation in Sarajevo this winter.

"The Aggressor Denies Us Bread," said the headline in the daily newspaper Oslobodjenje.

Lack of any electricity or running water in Sarajevo for the last month had already limited the mill to grinding what flour it could by using its own sporadic generator power, the director said. Ironically, power returned briefly Monday, the day after the destruction.

Meskovic estimated that the city requires at least 70 tons of flour a day, roughly enough for 110,000 loaves. Recent production has been in the range of 40,000 loaves, he said, and on Monday only 20,000 loaves were being baked.

So far, the city's flour has come almost exclusively from grain stockpiles stored in Zitopromet's silos, which now hold a two-month supply of grain. The mill's metal silos have been repeatedly perforated by shellfire, so the grain was shifted to solid concrete silos.

U.N. spokesman Mik Magnusson said the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees would pledge 50 tons of flour daily through its humanitarian relief efforts. But Meskovic cited the difficulty in getting supplies inland to Sarajevo because of the war.

CANDIDATES MOVE INTO FINAL STRETCH

3rd debate held at Michigan State

Bush goes all out in final round

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — In a jousting, climactic campaign debate Monday night, President Bush charged Bill Clinton would "sock it to the middle class" if elected president. Clinton pledged, point-blank: "I am not going to raise taxes on the middle class to pay" for his initiatives.

Fifteen days from the election, the fur was flying — so much so that at one point Bush suggested that Clinton's home state of Arkansas was the "lowest of the low," drawing a quick and passionate defense from the five-term governor.

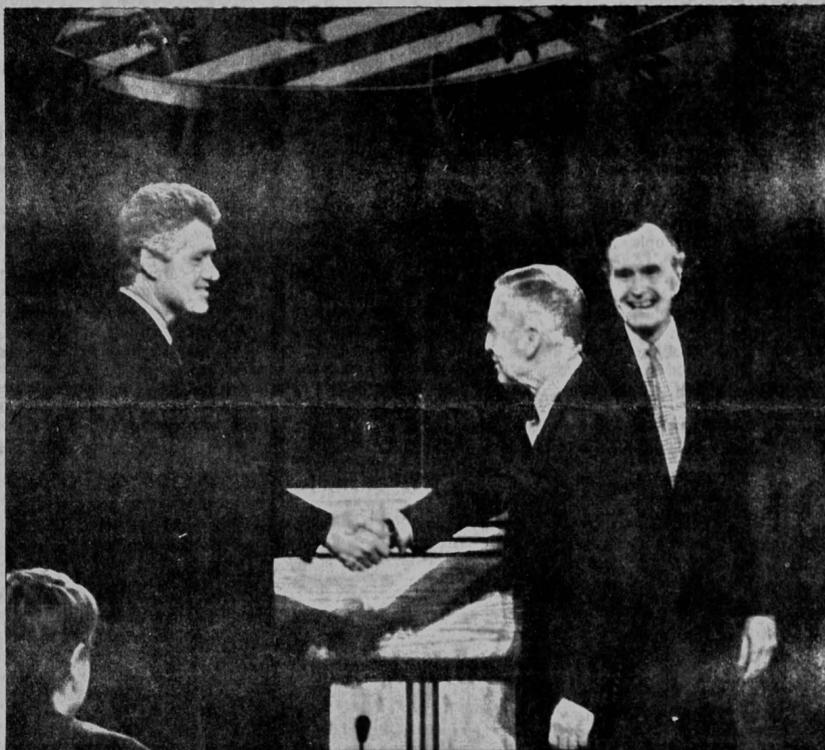

Ross Perot, the third man on the debate stage, stressed his nonpolitician's background in pledging to work on economic and other problems. He said he was spending $60 million of his own fortune on his independent bid for the White House.

"Tonight is just the beginning," Perot said, then giving the program schedule for a series of campaign ads to come.

Bush played the role of the aggressor throughout the 90-minute debate, charging that on issues as diverse as free trade and the draft, "Clinton had a pattern of trying to have it all ways."

Clinton, the front-runner on the debate griddle, said that Abraham Lincoln, too, had once opposed a war. He said he could send Americans into battle if necessary to protect the nation's interests, pointing out that Woodrow Wilson and Franklin Roosevelt had done so without having served in uniform.

The two men debated over issues as diverse as trade, auto-efficiency standards and the banking system in the final 90-minute debate of the campaign, but the sharpest exchanges came over the economy and Bush's attempt to raise doubts about Clinton's trustworthiness.

Mocking Bush's announcement that James Baker would take command of domestic-policy initiatives in a second Bush term, Clinton said that in his administration, the person "responsible for economic policy will be Bill Clinton."

Bush broke in swiftly: "That's what worries me. He's going to be responsible." He criticized Clinton's record as governor of Arkansas. "We don't want to be the lowest of the low. We don't want to be a nation in decline. We are a rising nation."

Bush, seeking a breakthrough in his run for re-election, said the economic record of his administration is not so bad, and that many Americans are benefiting from low interest rates and low inflation. He angrily fended off Perot's allegations that the administration had mishandled the situation with Iraq before the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Perot, and then Clinton, both criticized Bush for his handling of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein before the Iraqis invaded Kuwait. Bush replied that there wasn't any "iota of evidence" that Iraqis had gained access to American weapons through administration decisions to work with Saddam. The controversy, he said, is from "a bunch of people who were wrong on the war trying to cover their necks

Whether it was an Iowa City tavern, a pregame tailgate party or a formal cocktail reception, the focus of political chatter over the last nine days has been the 1992 presidential debates.

At George's Buffet — a friendly neighborhood drinking establishment on Iowa City's north side — boos, jeers, groans, cheers and two-syllable chants more associated with rowdy fans at a sporting event were hurled at the 27-inch television screen fixed above the far end of the bar during the debates.

"It was like Oprah Winfrey, Phil Donahue and Sally Jesse Raphael," UI psychology major Jackie Thomas said following the second presidential debate.

Ralph Cap, 49, a shipping supervisor at American College Testing, said that after two debates he was not sure for whom he would vote. Disgruntled with President Bush on economic issues, he had narrowed his choices down to Bill Clinton and Ross Perot after Monday night's debate.

"My opinion is, why has it taken 3½ years for Bush to do anything?" Cap said. "If he has an economic plan why hasn't it been implemented?"

Despite the fact that he will not vote for Bush, he said the president came across as "sincere and honest." Cap said he thought the concluding debate was the best of the three.

"Tonight's debate seemed a little more staged," said Bill Martin, a UI comparative literature major. "The thing I liked about the second

CONGRESS DEEMED 'GREAT SUCCESS'

New Chinese leaders mostly technocrats

Relaxing state controls over the economy was strongly endorsed at the weeklong party congress.

Kathy Wilhelm
Associated Press

BEIJING, China — China's Communist Party sought to ensure steady economic development by approving a new top leadership Monday that is dominated by technocrats and market reformers.

Senior leader Deng Xiaoping, 88, made a rare public appearance to give his blessing to the new leaders, who he hopes will continue his policies into the next century.

The appointments capped a week-long party congress that strongly endorsed relaxing state controls over the economy in favor of free markets. Deng believes growing prosperity can best ensure that the party stays in power.

However, the congress ruled out political liberalization and made no serious effort to confront the problems of official corruption and power abuse that have eroded public support and could trigger future challenges to party rule.

"The congress was a great success," the state-run Xinhua News Agency quoted Deng as telling party General Secretary Jiang Zemin during a 20-minute meeting in the Great Hall of the People with the congress' more than 2,000 delegates.

"Now that the policies are decided upon, we'll get down to work," Xinhua quoted Jiang as replying. The report said Deng was in high spirits and good health.

The evening television news showed Deng walking steadily with only a light, guiding hand on his arm from his daughter, Deng Rong. But his hands shook and his eyes sometimes seemed unfocused.

The Standing Committee of the Politburo, at the apex of the party hierarchy, dropped two 75-year-old members, Vice Premier Yao Yilin and Song Ping, both conservatives with backgrounds in economic planning.

They were replaced with three reformers, expanding the committee size to seven.

Vice Premier Zhu Rongji; Gen. Liu Huaqing, vice chairman of the Central Military Commission; and Tibet party chief Hu Jintao joined Jiang, Premier Li Peng, Li Ruihuan and Qiao Shi, who were carried over from the old Standing Committee. Four of the seven have engineering backgrounds.

The party also named a new 20-member Politburo on which only six members were carried over. Eight men over age 65, including several hard-line ideologists, stepped down to make way for a new panel dominated by engineers and accountants experienced in implementing economic reforms on the local level.

GAMES OFFER ESCAPE

Video arcades in IC popular with students

Anne Johnston
The Daily Iowan

Although hanging out at video arcades went out with Duran Duran and rat tails for many UI students, business is reportedly as strong as ever at campus area arcades, thanks in part to college-age customers.

Eric Mettemeyer, student supervisor of the Union Recreation Area, said the games remain popular with a number of students.

"It's an escape from books, for sure," he said.

Jerry Bruhm, manager of Aladdin's Castle in the Old Capitol Center, said UI students account for a large share of his business as well.

"Most of it is college students during the school year," Bruhm said. "Quite a few come in on a regular basis."

Bruhm and Mettemeyer estimated that 90 percent to 95 percent of their customers are male.

A recent trend in video games according to Bruhm and Mettemeyer is the appearance of "fight games," in which the objective is to outfit a series of different characters — such as ninjas or sumo wrestlers — who each have their own fighting tactics.

"People just play those nonstop," Mettemeyer said.

Mettemeyer said the fight games tend to get expensive for first-time users trying to master them.

"They'll throw $5 worth of quarters in those things easily because it takes so much money to learn all the tricks," he said.

Although most games still cost a quarter, Mettemeyer said expenses can add up.

UI freshman Willie Camarillo said he had to impose a $2 spending limit on himself earlier in the semester after deciding he was spending too much money on games.

Currently, Camarillo stops by to play the games at the Union Rec Area two to three times a week for an hour at a time.

Although he said video games can become an addiction for some, Camarillo said he doesn't consider himself to be an addict.

"I come here every once in a while, but it's not like I have to. I don't thrive on it," Camarillo said. "Some people do, though," he added.

UI junior Mark Passavant said he stops in at the Union Rec Area about three times a day, during breaks from his job at the University Book Store and after work.

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

UI student T.J. Fullington spends time Monday afternoon in the Union Recreation Center playing a video game. He estimates that he spends three hours per week playing games.

He said the attraction of arcade games lies in perfecting his skills and getting higher scores.

"Everybody's got something they're good at, and I'm good at video games," Passavant said.

Passavant said he currently has the third highest score on the Addams Family pinball machine — "the ultimate pinball technology" — at the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St.

Freshman Lionel McAfee said he usually plays a video game each day between classes to relieve stress.

"You let loose on the games and then you're pretty calm in your next class," McAfee said.

McAfee said he also has a Sega Genesis game in his room, which helps him relax before he goes to bed at night.

TEIKYO PRESIDENT TOUTS SIESTAS

Davenport college community urged to nap

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Most people haven't taken naps since kindergarten, so maybe it isn't surprising that they don't know how.

Joseph Olander took over as president of Teikyo Marycrest University in Davenport early this month. His first directive was to encourage everyone — students, faculty and staff — to take a brief siesta after lunch. Say 10 or 15 minutes.

"Latin, Asian and Mediterranean peoples have long known that contemporary medical researchers have discovered naps are very good for us, spiritually, mentally and physically," he wrote.

"Therefore, I should like to encourage each of you, some time between 1 and 2 p.m. every day, to take a 10- to 15-minute nap. Please take time away from work to refresh yourself by this simple 'wellness' program," he said.

Some are giving it a try.

"I have a class from 1:00 to 1:50, so I don't take 10 minutes out then, but I take 10 minutes out of my own schedule. I just kind of relax a little," said David Stedwell, an associate professor of communications.

"It's a positive experience. I have to admit I was not an experienced napper. I'm used to coming in early and staying late. But I have found the 10 minutes I take out of my schedule, I gain it back later on. I'm more refreshed," he said.

Olander said it's OK to nap during class as well. "I would like to encourage faculty who are teaching during that hour to ask students simply to lower their heads at their desks with them and take a nap."

Yeah, right, said Kim Brown, a junior from St. Peters, Mo.

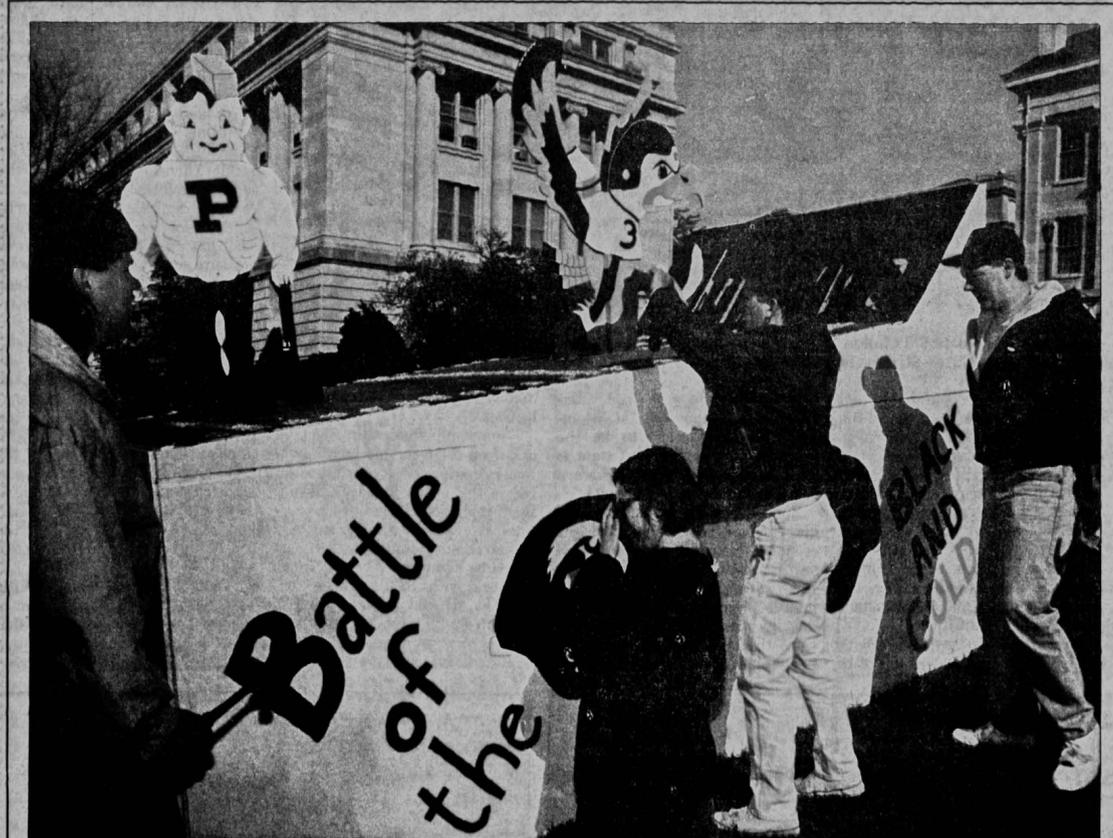

"I'm sure the professors are going to give up 10 minutes of their lecture for a nap," she said, her sarcasm showing.

Does it work for her? "Absolutely not," she said. "I do the bulk of my sleeping at night." As news editor of the school paper, she said she is constantly on the move.

Besides, she said, she doesn't dare close her eyes during the day.

Judy Scarpinato, public relations director for the school, said she likes the idea but isn't in the habit of taking naps.

"I'm not a nap person," she said. "But people are excited about it. This was the first communication from the new president, and it was a caring message."

EMPLOYMENT WOES STUDIED

Report focuses on faculty spouses

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

Employment of spouses and partners of faculty members constitutes a major problem for the UI and its faculty couples, according to a report to be released today by the Faculty Senate Task Force on Faculty Spouses and Partners.

The report, which has been over a year in the making, states that "a substantial number of spouses and partners are underemployed or not employed in their fields," and that the circumstances surrounding spousal and partner employment put the UI at a competitive disadvantage.

The report also states that "a significant number of women who have resigned from the faculty to take positions elsewhere have done so because their spouse/partner could not find suitable employment in the Iowa City area."

To remedy the problem, the task force is recommending the establishment of a vice presidential position and support staff responsible for issues relating to spouses, partners and families of UI faculty members. The task force also recommends allocating funds for a limited number of faculty positions specified for spouses and partners. Help from the UI in finding jobs for spouses in the Iowa City area, as well as an increase in the amount and quality of information about jobs available to spouses, are also among the task force's suggestions.

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for university relations, said the UI will take a serious look at recommendations made by the task force and the issues raised by the study. "They are legitimate concerns and they are concerns we need to be worried about," she said. "We will need to look at this very seriously if we want to attract and keep good people at the UI."

Rhodes said she has talked to several women who have left the UI because their spouses could not find employment at the UI. Implementation of some of the recommendations may help reverse that trend, she said.

"The bottom line is that we'll look at these recommendations very seriously because there is a wide recognition that this is a problem," Rhodes said.

Recommendations made by the task force are based on a five-page survey that was sent to the spouses and partners of all 1,750 of the UI's tenured and tenure-track faculty members. Of that number, the task force was able to use information provided by 413 spouses and partners.

Information from the survey was augmented by discussions with faculty spouses and partners, faculty members, administrators and responses from other universities and organizations who have dealt with spousal-employment problems.

The report shows that 60 percent of the respondents to the survey, to whom the issue was pertinent, strongly agreed that it had been difficult for them to find suitable employment. In addition, 17 percent of the respondents indicated that it took more than three years to find their current positions.

The report also indicates that the UI has no systematic and effective means to identify concerns and needs of faculty spouses and partners and facilitate productive ways to meet them.

Ed Lawler, president of the UI Faculty Senate, and George Nickelsburg, chairman of the task force, both reserved comment on the report until after it has been presented to the UI Faculty Senate today.

EC'S FUTURE UNCERTAIN

Maastricht Treaty's details outlined

Yokota Masuo
The Daily Iowan

Editor's Note: This is the first of a three-part series focusing on the Maastricht Treaty.

Europe is trying to overcome its history of bloody border wars by erasing all the borders among the 12 countries in the European Community. But they are standing at a crossroads concerning procedure.

The Maastricht Treaty is aimed at unifying Europe into a 21st-century economic superpower.

When the EC leaders gathered in the Netherlands for the EC summit last December, they signed the treaty to establish a European citizenship, a European Parliament and a single European currency.

But last Friday the leaders of the EC attended a special EC council in England to discuss whether the community should push the treaty ahead or revise it.

Neville Keery, a senior information professional with the EC Commission, who spoke to the Iowa City Foreign Relations Council Wednesday, said, "Twelve member states of the community will be integrated more and more closely together in the general interest of their compatibility in the international scene against the United States and Japan."

"The treaty also provides the solid bases in the European continent which is the state of change because of the collapse of the former Soviet Union," he added.

Each provision of the treaty has a different timetable. By the end of the century, a single currency will have been established.

Raymond Riezman, a UI professor of international economics, stressed that the political unity will be essential to monetary unity.

"I don't think that the unified currency will ever come about unless it becomes the United States of Europe," he said. "You can't have complete economic integration without political integration."

The treaty has to be ratified by all 12 countries in order to take effect.

To date, Ireland, Greece, Luxembourg and France, which yielded a razor-thin "yes" vote in September, have ratified the treaty. Denmark rejected it, but is scheduled to have another referendum as early as June.

Following the latest EC meeting, European leaders had to either ask the Danes to reconsider the treaty or revise it to make it more acceptable to them, said John Conybeare, UI professor of international politics.

Keery agreed, adding, "Everyone is held up at the moment because of the 'no' vote of the Danish referendum."

Keery attributed the Danes' rejection to their fear of being swallowed up by Europe's larger countries.

But he is optimistic that the Danes will ratify the treaty. "It's highly likely that the Danish people will approve the treaty this time, as it is," Keery said.

Robert Tamura, a UI economics professor, is rather pessimistic about whether the treaty will work, not just because of the Danish disapproval, but because of the many different aspects of each country.

"France and Germany don't have a common history. Their common history tends to be fighting wars against each other," he said. "Since what French people think is important differs from what German people think is important, to expect political union which the Maastricht Treaty is going to enforce is very difficult."

The monetary crisis in Europe in September is a vivid example of how hard it is to harmonize monetary policies within the community.

Britain dropped out of the European Monetary System under which EC countries agreed to fix their currencies in relation to the German mark. The EMS is regarded as a vital lead-in to the single currency system.

When the German Bundesbank, its central bank, kept the interest rates as high as 9 percent to curb inflation, currencies such as the British pound sterling and Spanish peseta were too devalued to sustain their positions against the mark.

Riezman said the dispute over the interest rates in Germany illustrates well the problems in the community.

"Germany wants high interest rates because they are anti-inflation," he said. "Many of the other countries like Britain want lower interest rates because they are more concerned about internal growth. There is a conflict in terms of preferences."

Riezman described the monetary crisis as a setback to monetary unity.

"They're not moving in any direction. They have an agreement to fix their exchange rate but they don't keep it, so I'm not sure exactly what it means," he added.

'TRUTH SQUAD' ATTACKS SENATOR

Lloyd-Jones: Grassley deluding voters

The senator's rival renewed her assault.

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Democratic Senate candidate Jean Lloyd-Jones on Monday renewed her assault on Republican Charles Grassley's free mailings, this time saying he's misleading voters on labor issues.

At a news conference, supporters of Lloyd-Jones said Grassley sent a free mailing to nearly 6,000 targeted Iowans in which he "falsely takes credit for leading the fight for extended unemployment benefits."

They said Grassley sent the mailing to Iowans who favor labor positions, trying to leave the impression he is on their side.

"The net result is that the voters are being deceived at the taxpayer's expense," supporters said in a statement. The group was formed by Lloyd-Jones and is known as a "truth squad." It regularly attacks Grassley.

Grassley aides dismissed the assault. "Jean Lloyd-Jones' truth squad is nothing more than a trash squad," spokeswoman Caron McKee said. "Everything we've seen from them so far is garbage."

Grassley is seeking a third six-year term in the Senate and holds a 40-plus percentage point lead in the polls.

The latest attacks by Lloyd-Jones show the extent to which she is facing an uphill fight in her campaign.

In addition to attacking Grassley on labor issues, Lloyd-Jones' supporters have charged that he is misleading peace activists.

Organized labor and peace activists are two core Democratic constituencies that Lloyd-Jones would ordinarily be taking for granted at this point in the campaign, focusing more heavily on independents who are crucial to an election's outcome.

Moving to shore up strength among hard-core constituents only two weeks before an election typically is a sign of a campaign in deep trouble.

"He is using the taxpayer's money to selectively deceive the voters," supporters said. "And make no mistake about it, the labor letter that Grassley has mailed at the taxpayer's expense is deceptive to the core."

Clinton elementary reopens after mystery illness

Associated Press

CLINTON, Iowa — School will reopen Tuesday at Longfellow Elementary after two days of tests to try to determine what made students and teachers sick.

On Friday, students and staff complained of headaches and nausea, but a check by the Clinton Fire Department could not find a cause. About 500 students stayed home from school Monday.

Officials said Monday's tests of cleaning materials and science experiments turned up no cause for the unexplained illnesses.

Ben Trochil, superintendent of schools, said no source of the illness had been found.

"We can't find anything that would indicate to us that we have a problem," he said.

CR BUILDING DESTROYED

Fire guts meat-packing plant office

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — Fire destroyed a three-story office building at the vacant Farmstead Foods meat-packing plant Sunday.

Firefighters were called to the plant at 2:57 p.m., shortly after an explosion rocked the building's third floor, sending papers shooting out the windows.

District Fire Chief Laverne Bagley said firefighters contained the blaze to the office building by setting up a hose crew on the roof of a nearby plant building. Some 40 or more buildings make up the Farmstead plant that stands on 19.6 acres on the city's southeast side.

The fire was brought under control about 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Natalie Kleis, Cedar Rapids Fire Department safety director, said no injuries were reported in the blaze.

Kleis said it could be two days or more before fire investigators determine what started the blaze.

She emphasized that the fire department had insisted that water be kept running to the plant since its closing 2 1/2 years ago.

"We just really felt this was a prime opportunity for a fire to happen," she said.

In recent weeks, the issue of the expense of asbestos cleanup at the closed plant had been reported as one company and then a second had expressed interest in a purchase.

Bagley said concern about asbestos was never an issue Sunday. He said the quantity of water poured on the building would have prevented asbestos fibers from becoming airborne. He also said asbestos does not burn.

The meat-packing plant closed in March of 1990, putting about 1,600 people out of work.

The city has objected to the sale, citing a $268,000 lien for unpaid water and sewer services.

JUDGE IMPOSES $232,500 BOND

Arrest in arson/murder case set for Nov. 30

Associated Press

DES MOINES — A $232,500 bond was set Monday for a man accused of setting a Des Moines apartment fire that killed two people.

Daniel Phillip Butler, 27, had his initial appearance before Associate Judge A. Patricia Houlihan in Polk County District Court, who set arraignment for Nov. 30.

Butler is charged with two counts of first-degree murder and one count of first-degree arson in the fire early Saturday that killed John Emerick, 40, and Emerick's daughter, Christine, 9. Dozens of other residents escaped from the five-story building.

Bond was set at $100,000 on each murder count and at $32,500 on the arson charge. Butler was held in the Polk County Jail.

If convicted, he faces a mandatory life sentence without parole.

Police said they had investigated a report Friday evening that alleged Butler had tried to break into the apartment of his girlfriend in the building where the fire later broke out. Police said no charges were filed at that time because there had been no injury.

Careers in data processing, accounting, actuarial, and auditing at State Farm.

At State Farm, we understand the concept of "work." Believe it or not, we also understand the concept of "play."

That's because we don't think you can be really outstanding at the first without having an appreciation for the second. Which is exactly why a career at State Farm in Bloomington could be the ideal place for you.

You'll work for one of the country's most respected companies on the most advanced computer equipment in the industry. You'll be challenged and stimulated. You'll be rewarded with excellent pay and benefits. You'll make your classmates very envious.

What's more, you'll also have time to appreciate the finer things in life. That's because Bloomington isn't just a great place to start a career, it's a great place to live, to enjoy, to start a family (if, indeed, you're ready to start thinking about that). In addition to the community's pleasant neighborhoods, inviting parks, and other recreational facilities, you'll find two universities that offer a host of cultural and social activities to take advantage of.

If you're a senior with a math, accounting, data processing, or computer science background, come talk to us at your college placement office. We're looking for people who are motivated and outgoing. People who enjoy challenges on the job — and away from it. After all, you're not just looking for a great job. You're looking for a great way of life.

GAFFE OFFENDS CANADIANS

Flag mishap brings forth complaints

Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

TORONTO, Ontario—The World Series is moving outside the United States for the first time and national sensitivities are aflutter. Some Canadians are upset over the upside-down display of their maple leaf flag in Atlanta, Ga.

Martha Gleeson, a Toronto resident, called the episode "an insult to our country."

"If that was their flag held upside down, the Americans would be rioting," she told the Toronto Sun.

However, Al Parsons, bar manager at Toronto's Sports Cafe, said patrons were much more excited that the Blue Jays had evened baseball's fall classic at one game apiece in the best-of-seven series against the Atlanta Braves. The series switches to Toronto on Tuesday.

"I think most people are making jokes about it," said Parsons. "But only small-minded people would think it was intentional."

In Atlanta, a Marine color guard carried Canada's flag upside down onto the field with the Stars and Stripes before Sunday's second game.

Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, his mind focused on an Oct. 26 constitutional referendum, said he was "just as dismayed and upset as any Canadian" about the flag flap, but added it was probably a mistake.

"It may have just been an error when they got going," he said during a radio interview. "I hope that's the case. It's the kind of thing that would offend anybody when you see the flag treated that way."

If Americans gave Canada an inadvertent slap in the face, one of their own dealt an equally embarrassing tweak.

Canadian singer Tom Cochrane, most famous for his song "Life is a Highway," muffed the words to "O Canada," the national anthem, in front of the 51,000 people at Atlanta's stadium and millions of television viewers.

Associated Press

Many Canadians are upset that a Marine color guard displayed their country's flag upside down Sunday prior to Game 2 of the World Series in Atlanta.

Before the first pitch, the phones began to ring at Canadian newspapers and broadcast stations around the country. It was the flag they were concerned about: The top of the big red maple leaf was pointing down, instead of skyward.

Major League Baseball and the Marine Corps apologized.

A Marine Corps spokesman, Chief Warrant Officer Randy Gaddo, said the color guard was given the flag only moments before it was to take the field, and in their hurry the Marines put it on the staff upside down.

"The first inkling they had (of the mistake) was when they unfurled it," Gaddo said. "It was obviously too late then, so they carried on. ... It was certainly not intentional."

Judge says drugs cannot be forced on convict

Kent Prince
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS—The Louisiana Supreme Court ruled Monday that the state cannot force an insane inmate to take drugs that will make him sane enough to be executed for the murder of five of his relatives.

The 5-2 ruling came in the case of Michael Owen Perry, 37, a schizophrenic who was convicted of murdering his mother, father, nephew and two cousins in 1983 in the small Louisiana town of Lake Arthur.

The court affirmed that Perry is insane and thus incompetent to be executed. According to medical records, Perry believes pop singer Olivia Newton-John is a goddess living under Lake Arthur. At one time, he shaved his eyebrows so his brain could get more oxygen.

The ruling blocked Perry's execution but left the way open for another death date to be set if he regains his sanity without the use of drugs.

Forcing him to take drugs, however, would violate his rights to privacy and would be cruel and unusual punishment, the court said.

"This particular application of the death penalty fails to measurably contribute to the social goals of capital punishment," said the majority opinion, written by Justice James Dennis.

"Carrying out this punitive scheme would add severity and indignity to the prisoner's punishment beyond that required for the mere extinguishment of life. This type of punitive treatment system is not accepted anywhere in contemporary society and is apt to be administered erroneously, arbitrarily or capriciously."

Japanese exchange student shot in La.

Jimmy Golen

BATON ROUGE, La. — A 16-year-old Japanese exchange student who went to the wrong house while looking for a Halloween party was fatally shot by a man inside, police said.

Rodney Peairs was questioned in the shooting Saturday of Yoshihiro Hattori, but wasn't charged because "there was no criminal intent," said Maj. Bud Connor of the East Baton Rouge Parish Sheriff's Department.

A grand jury scheduled to convene Nov. 4 will determine whether any charges should be filed, District Attorney Doug Moreau said. The case remained under investigation.

Hattori, from Nagoya, Japan, was dressed in a white tuxedo jacket as part of a disco-era John Travolta costume when he went to Peairs' home.

He was with an American friend wearing street clothes. Neither boy wore a mask. The house was decorated for Halloween and only a few doors away from the correct house.

Police say Peairs came to the door with a .44-caliber Magnum pistol and shouted "Freeze!" But Hattori, who spoke choppy English, apparently didn't understand, authorities said.

Police say he was shot when he moved towards Peairs.

Holley Haymaker, mother of the other boy and Hattori's host mother since August, said her son gave a slightly different account.

She said he told her that when they realized they were in the wrong house, they started to leave, and were on the sidewalk when Peairs opened his carport door armed with a gun and shouted a warning.

"I don't think if the man said 'Freeze!' Yoshi would understand what that means," she said.

SAN PEDRO DE URABA, Colombia — For decades peasants went to a 30-foot-deep depression near this rural town to relieve aches and pains in its warm mud and steam. Their spa turned deadly during a weekend earthquake, spewing boiling mud that killed at least three people and injured more than 40.

Two people died elsewhere during Sunday's quake, which registered 7.2 on the Richter scale a day after a tremor measuring 6.6 shook Colombia. About 60 people were reported injured by falling structures.

Authorities said nearly all the tin-roofed adobe homes in two towns were destroyed or damaged by the quakes, leaving more than 8,000 people homeless. Frightened residents reportedly camped in parks and other open areas in tents and improvised shelters of plastic.

Reports of injuries and damage were still trickling in Monday from isolated villages.

The worst casualties were in the rural coffee-growing area in the mountains of northwestern Colombia about 125 miles northwest of Medellin.

COLOMBIA STRUGGLING TO RECOVER

SAN PEDRO DE URABA, Colombia — For decades peasants went to a 30-foot-deep depression near this rural town to relieve aches and pains in its warm mud and steam. Their spa turned deadly during a weekend earthquake, spewing boiling mud that killed at least three people and injured more than 40.

Two people died elsewhere during Sunday's quake, which registered 7.2 on the Richter scale a day after a tremor measuring 6.6 shook Colombia. About 60 people were reported injured by falling structures.

Authorities said nearly all the tin-roofed adobe homes in two towns were destroyed or damaged by the quakes, leaving more than 8,000 people homeless. Frightened residents reportedly camped in parks and other open areas in tents and improvised shelters of plastic.

Reports of injuries and damage were still trickling in Monday from isolated villages.

The worst casualties were in this rural coffee-growing area in the mountains of northwestern Colombia about 125 miles northwest of Medellin.

Before the eruption, people had gathered around the steaming depression on Cacahual Mountain to watch flames licking from the bottom.

The crater suddenly exploded in a huge ball of fire, witnesses said, and a 10-foot-deep sea of mud rolled as far as 500 yards in every direction. Two people were known to have been swallowed up by the scalding mud and another woman died Sunday night of burns, officials said.

Four people were missing and believed dead, Mayor Arcides Caballero said. Forty-two people were treated for burns at the town's hospital, including a husband and wife and nine of their 11 children.

The mud buried one house, and burning rocks and hot ash set seven houses on fire. A volcanic mound about 300 feet high rose from what had been the depression.

The earthquake and eruption both occurred about 11:15 a.m., but there was no confirmation the events were linked. Scientists had not reached San Pedro on Monday. Hans Meyer, a researcher at Cali Seismological Institute, said such mud flows are caused when super-hot water liquifies sandy soil.

The mayor said 10 volcanic mounds are within a half-mile of each other and four have emitted steam and warm mud for decades. Peasants loll in the warm mud and pools of hot water around the mounds, he said, but it was not known if anyone was using the pools during Sunday's eruption.

About 70 miles to the south, the village of Vajira was nearly destroyed by Sunday's earthquake, Sheriff Alberto Zulaga reported by radio telephone Monday. He told the RCN radio network that 90 percent of the town's houses were destroyed or severely damaged but that no one was killed or seriously injured.

He said 3,500 people had moved to the town's parks, terrified to return to what remained of their homes. He said the town had no water or food.

He said boiling mud was oozing from huge cracks opened by the earthquake.

The 5,000 people of Murindo also lost most of their homes.

Antioquia state Gov. Juan Gómez said many of the town's adobe houses were toppled by the quake Saturday and most of the rest collapsed during Sunday's tremor. The residents will be moved to other towns, Gómez said.

Officials were studying whether the town, which apparently lies atop a geological fault, should be rebuilt elsewhere, he said.

Colombia lies over three shifting geological plates, so serious earthquakes and volcanic eruptions are not unusual.

An eruption of the Nevado del Ruiz volcano in 1985 melted part of a glacier, sending a 100-foot-tall wall of mud and rock crashing down on the town of Armero and killing 23,000 people.

A quake measuring 7.9 killed 800 people in Colombia and Ecuador in 1979.

Gorbachev on Monday returned to Moscow from Germany, where he attended the funeral of former Chancellor Willy Brandt.

The Russian government, citing humanitarian considerations, lifted a travel ban on Gorbachev to allow him to attend the funeral. He remains barred from other foreign travel because of his refusal to testify in Russia's Constitutional Court in a trial on the fate of the Communist Party.

Yeltsin told Russian television last week that Gorbachev's silence on Soviet responsibility for the Katyn massacre was the reason he did not want to testify.

BYRON KENT WIKSTROM

A 12-year reign coming to an end . . .

You could hear it in his voice: "I wish these draft dodgers would shut up so I can finish my speech!" George Bush is tired, he's irritable and, best of all, he's beaten — or pretty close to it. "George Bush," as Ann Richards said last week, "stick a fork in him, he's done." The president unless a state enacts demanding environmental regulations — then the federal government should protect business. We were getting a barrage of conflicting signals from our president which boiled down to a government concerned with the interests of the rich and the sensibilities of the religious right. No wonder the country became cynical and disaffected, especially the so-called post-boomers. We had a cynical and disaffected government. For the 20s generation, my generation, it's the seen is one that promises great change during an election, but once in office watches passively as our infrastructure crumbles, our cities decay and the standard of living for the poorest 90 percent of the people in this country remains stagnant or declines.

But it looks like that is about to change. Finally, after 12 long years, it looks like we'll have a president who will address the needs of the middle class and the poor; a president who will be more concerned about whether people have jobs than he is about some guy peeing in a bottle; a president who believes everyone should have health care and that everyone should have the opportunity to go to college, instead of one who thinks if you can't pay for it, tough.

This isn't a good time to get overconfident. With two weeks left in the campaign and one more debate (this column went to press before Monday's presidential debate), the election is far from over. As the vice presidential debate illustrated, the Bush team is desperate, and it will use any means to get George Bush re-elected. That explains why the State Department was asked to carefully look over its files on Bill Clinton and see if there was anything that could be used against Clinton in the final weeks of the campaign.

Bush operatives are back to character assassination; they've apparently decided that the only way to win this election is to convince the voters you can't trust Bill Clinton (as if you could trust Bush). But it looks like the voters don't care. And there's also the Perot factor. He's not going to win, but he might play the spoiler role. Polls indicate that Perot is cutting into Clinton's lead — apparently anyone is better than George Bush.

Still I can't help but savor the light at the end of the tunnel. As I said before, it's been 12 very long years. The thought of four more years and then what, a Quayle presidency? That's repugnant. It's no wonder the voters want a change, and they can get it by voting for Bill Clinton.

TERM LIMITS

Noble gesture; bad idea

If there is a constant silliness in American politics, it is that both regular people and politicians are looking for easy answers to difficult problems. The latest example of this is the effort to put limits on the number of terms that a member of Congress can serve. Even though term limits sound good to many people, it is a dangerous and probably unconstitutional idea that will cause more problems than it solves.

The term limits movement has grown in recent years as Americans become increasingly dissatisfied with Congress. People see a greater than 90 percent re-election rate, coupled with scandals such as the check-kiting fiasco, along with people who have served countless terms. Rightly, they perceive an arrogance in Congress, as members think they can't be touched. In light of this, people have begun to think that the only way to correct the ills in Congress is to limit the number of terms legislators can serve. The idea is, people will be better served if members aren't entrenched in their seats forever. People wanting to reform Congress deserve credit for trying to improve government, but term limits are not the right way of doing that.

Limiting terms is a bad idea for many reasons. The power that longtime incumbents have, and sometimes abuse, will not go back directly to the people if terms are limited. That power would flow to the congressional staffers, who are accountable to nobody, and the political-action committees that already dominate Congress. Without the presence of experienced congressmen, the staffers and PACs would be able to take advantage of the situation and pass their agendas, which generally are not in agreement with the rest of the country.

Another reason why term limits are a bad idea is that Americans would be tossing aside the good people in Congress as well as the bad. Granted, there are many members who are nothing more than self-important windbags, but there are also a good number of hard-working people who do good work for their district and for the country as a whole. As frustrating as it is to watch the jerks in Congress who do nothing more than cause gridlock, it would be crazy to get rid of the members who do solid work. Term limits would take away those good members, and that is something the country cannot afford.

Lastly, if 1992 has proven anything, it is that term limits are not needed. Longtime incumbents had never lost an election have been put into involuntary retirement by the voters. There will be anywhere from 120 to 150 new members when the 103rd Congress goes into session in January. This is the correct way to limit terms of Congress, the way that is constitutional.

Even though term limits will probably be passed by voters in 14 states on Election Day, all of those laws will most likely prove unconstitutional. Legal scholars, both liberal and conservative, state that the only limitations that can be put on Congress are ones that deal with age, citizenship and residency. It's hard to find somebody who says that term limits can stand up to a legal challenge. Therefore, term limits will just turn out to be a waste of time, money and effort for both opponents and proponents of the issue.

If people are serious about wanting to clean up Congress, they need to continue paying attention to what their respective members of Congress are doing. The reason why the re-election rate in Congress is so high is because people think their representative is fine, but the others are lousy. The members know that and they usually can take advantage of it. If people want a good and responsive Congress, they will have to continue to put the heat on individual members, as they have been doing in 1992, and not re-elect them without proper thought.

There needs to be some changes in campaign financing as well to give opponents a better chance to get their ideas heard. But most of all, instead of listening to half-baked ideas like term limits, average citizens must step forward to take control of Congress. That is the most effective way to reform the legislative branch, and if need be, limit the terms of members of Congress.

Roman Catholicism not 'anachronistic'

To the Editor:
I am writing in response to Byron Kent Wikstrom's column (DI, Oct. 13). Wikstrom concludes that "Catholicism is a reactive and oppressive force" that "needs to be reformed." Although I am not Roman Catholic, as a Christian I take offense at the accusations made which lead to this conclusion. The views of the Roman Catholic Church on reproductive rights attacked by the editorial are based on the Bible, the sacred book of the Christian faith believed to be God's word. Roman Catholicism, as well as Protestantism and other religions are not, as Wikstrom would have us believe, political parties that are free to change the planks of their platform as public opinion changes. Roman Catholicism is not "an anachronistic moral code," but is instead a set of objective moral values established by the Bible to be adhered to by believers. It is fair to disagree with the church, but the church cannot be expected to reform. If it did reform, this would be a true reason for criticism, since the objectivity of the Bible, which defines the position of the church, would be called into question, completely destroying the credibility of the church.

As for criticism concerning molestations by priests and the subsequent attempts to cover up the incidents, the church should be ashamed, but not condemned. The Roman Catholic Church, other than the pope, does not claim infallibility. These incidents are a definite embarrassment, yet comparable occurrences can be found in our political system (such as the Iran-Contra and Watergate political cover-ups). Just as these two isolated incidents do not mean that our entire governmental system is corrupt, the molestation incidents, although reprehensible, do not mean that the church as a whole is corrupt.

In conclusion, it is not reasonable to expect the Roman Catholic Church, or any religion, for that matter, to reform or, as Wikstrom implies, to conform to public opinion. The stage for social reform is in the political arena, not in churches. Keep your politics out of my religion.

When the Old and New Worlds collided

The immense implications of the Old World merging with the new, after the voyages of Columbus, cannot be narrowed down to simply biological, economic or even cultural ramifications. After 1492, the history of this planet entered a rapid phase, the likes of which had never been seen before. Two distinctly different worlds began to become alike.

Such a convergence resulted in a trend toward biological homogeneity, which can be seen as one of the most important aspects of the history of life on Earth since the retreat of the continental glaciers. The impact of cultural exchange through diffusion has been a monumental outcome of the Old and New Worlds' "merging," not to mention the biological mixing of certain diseases and characteristics.

The arrival of the Europeans in America signaled the arrival of fresh diseases in the new world. It could be argued that the "foreign diseases" were the Europeans' biggest weapon in conquering the aboriginal Americans. Widespread diseases such as smallpox had a much greater long-term effect on American Indians than all the warfare tactics of the Europeans put together. Bows and arrows were of little help against a silent weapon, which in many cases could not be used against its carrier due to immunity.

Despite the enormous fatalities related to disease exchanges between the Old World and the new — 1492 marked the beginning of a global population explosion ("Gaia; an Atlas of Planet Management," Myers, 1984). The underlying reasons for this are related to the exchange of fauna and flora which led to an increase in the efficiency of food production.

In the way of domesticated animals, the aboriginal American possessed little that was deemed worthy of transportation to the Old World. In 1492 he or she had only a few animal servants: the dog, the guinea pig, and several kinds of fowl such as the turkey. He or she had no beast of burden that could be compared to the horse, ass or ox of Europe. The first arrival of horses, dogs, pigs, cattle, chickens, sheep and goats arrived with Columbus on the second voyage of 1493. "The animals, preyed upon by few or no American predators, troubled by few or no American diseases, and left to feed freely upon the rich grasses and roots and wild fruits, reproduced rapidly. Their numbers burgeoned so rapidly, in fact, that doubtlessly they had much to do with the extinction of certain plants, animals, and even the Indians themselves, whose gardens they encroached upon." ("The Columbian Exchange," Crosby, 1972).

But, as suggested, it is in plants that America made its really positive contribution to the Old World. The food plant discoveries made in America revolutionized agriculture on a global scale. The most valuable of the new food crops included maize, peanuts, potatoes and many different kinds of beans.

An example of the profound effect of the introduction of these crops can be seen in China. No large group of the human race in the Old World was quicker to adopt American food plants than the Chinese. As excess population forced people up into the hills and mountains, the Chinese found maize was the key to extracting subsistence from the previously barren highlands. Similar examples were seen in Europe and Asia as well.

Current statistics suggest that something like one-third of the plant food raised to feed people and their animals comes from plants of American origin ("Gaia"). Global population has been greatly increased, then, as a consequence of the Columbian voyages to America, through both what was taken to and from the New World. The animals that were introduced to the New World by Europeans allowed for the first time the transformation of grass into human food on that continent. The plants that were taken from the New World meant an increase in the amount of arable land in the old. Hence, on a global scale, the efficiency of food production improved, leading to a more sustainable growth in population.

However, besides the obvious "benefits" of this exchange between worlds for some humans, there have been very detrimental effects of the collision of the Old World with the new. Through the specialization and reduction of the natural environment it is possible that humans have caused the extinction of more species of life forms in the last 400 years than the usual processes of evolution might kill off a million. Since 1492, the biological diversity of the planet has decreased at an alarmingly unnatural rate. The planet has been left not with a richer genetic pool, but with one which is more impoverished. The implications of this are being realized as we discover that the specialization of nature "almost always narrows the possibilities for future change; for the sake of present convenience, we lose the future." ("The Columbian Exchange"). And despite the gains in the efficiency of food production, tens of millions starve and millions more are malnourished on this Earth.

Study says white bread is healthful

WASHINGTON — The baking company whose name has become synonymous with white bread touted a study Monday that said the food that's helped raise generations isn't bad for you.

True, regular white doesn't have the fiber content of whole-grain breads, but it's an easy source of carbohydrates, which many people need more of, said Ruth Carpenter, who conducted the research for the Continental Baking Co., makers of Wonder Bread.

Her eight-week study of 118 overweight, sedentary people ages 25-50 found that bread did not cause weight gain and improved the quality of the participants' overall diet.

Whole-grain advocates are unlikely to be convinced. "If there were only two foods in the world, candy bars and white bread, then I'd eat the white bread," said Robyn Webb, a nutrition and cooking instructor in northern Virginia.

"We know white bread takes a lot of kidding," said Kerry Lyman, spokeswoman for Wonder.

More seriously, Webb and Michael Tims, the manager of Cash Grocer, a natural-foods store in Alexandria, Va., said white bread, compared to whole-grain, doesn't have the flavor, the ability to kill hunger or, most importantly, what it takes to stimulate digestion.

"Our diet has become so refined. The intestinal tracts need to be exercised," said Tims.

"The higher-fiber diets are definitely linked to prevention of colon cancer," said Webb.

The study's acceptance by the American Dietetic Association "is quite significant because the papers are peer-reviewed and it is very difficult to be selected," said Ruth Lahmayer, a spokeswoman for the 60,000-member organization.

CLEANER AIR

41 cities now meeting federal smog standards

Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than 86 million people are still breathing unhealthy air, but air quality in 41 cities from Maine to California has improved enough to meet federal smog standards, the government said Monday.

The Environmental Protection Agency reported that the three-year period beginning in 1989 through 1991 had the best air quality in urban areas in the last decade.

While much of the improvement was attributed to cooler weather, some new pollution controls on automobiles and cleaner gasoline helped, officials said.

The 41 urban areas complied for the first time with federal smog standards. Another 13 cities also for the first time met federal health standards for carbon monoxide. Both pollutants are associated with automobile exhaust.

The EPA said the number of urban areas violating federal smog standards was cut from 97 a year ago to 56 in the latest assessment, and those violating carbon monoxide standards dropped from 42 to 29.

Several urban areas including Chicago, Ill., Baltimore, Md., and Philadelphia, Penn., showed improvements in the latest three-year period, but still faced severe air pollution, especially from smog.

Golf may swing into Games

ATLANTA — Atlanta Olympic officials plan to add golf to the 1996 Summer Games, with the medal tournament to be held at the Augusta National Golf Club course, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution newspaper reported Monday.

It would be the first time golf has been a part of the Olympics since the 1904 Games in St. Louis.

If approved, golf would become the second new Olympic sport in 1996. Women's softball has tentatively been added, although negotiations are continuing on how to pay for it.

The golf competition would include both men and women, and about 20 nations would compete, the newspaper reported.

Giants' fate nears

TORONTO — By the end of the week, there may be a timetable for deciding the fate of the San Francisco Giants.

Bud Selig, the chairman of baseball's executive council, said Monday he will discuss the team's situation this week when he attends World Series games in Toronto.

Baseball officials say the issue is likely to be decided during a special major league meeting in November.

Jury selected in trial involving Jordan

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A jury was selected Monday for the federal money laundering trial of James "Slim" Boulter, a convicted cocaine dealer who has subpoenaed NBA star Michael Jordan as a defense witness.

The Chicago Bulls' guard, who grew up in the state and starred at the University of North Carolina in the early 1980s, is expected to testify later this week in U.S. District Court.

A jury of seven men and five women was selected to hear Boulter's case before U.S. District Judge Robert Potter. Jury questioning focused on things like their interests in sports, particularly golf, and betting.

Jordan, an avid golfer, was linked to Boulter when federal agents seized a $57,000 check from the latter's bank account. The check was signed by Jordan.

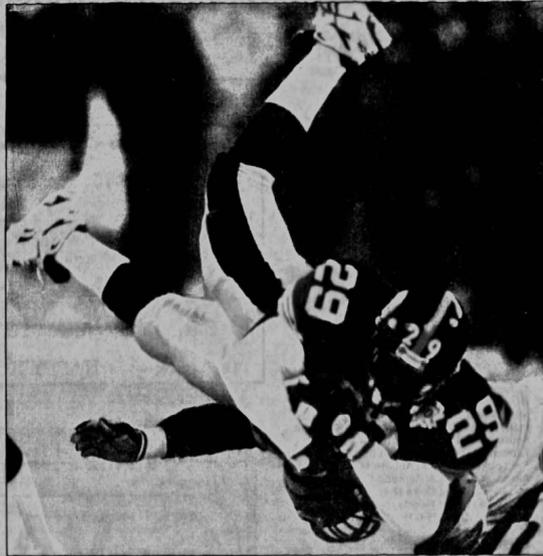

Both sides say the trial, which will begin Tuesday, should last about a week.

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers managed only two touchdowns against the NFL's worst-rated defense. It hardly mattered. The Cincinnati Bengals' offense was even worse than their defense.

Dwight Stone dropped three passes, then set up the first of his two scoring catches with a 30-yard run on a reverse in the second quarter and the Steelers beat the Bengals 20-0 Monday night.

Pittsburgh (4-2) ended a two-game losing streak to gain a first-place tie with Houston in the AFC Central. The Bengals (2-4) lost their fourth in a row.

The Steelers were held without a touchdown in consecutive losses to Green Bay (17-3) and Cleveland (17-9), and they managed only two against a Bengals' defense that was shredded the week before for five touchdown passes by Houston's Warren Moon in a 48-24 rout. And the Bengals set up one of those with a fumble, or one more touchdown than they managed themselves.

Stone's two touchdowns and Gary Anderson's two field goals were enough production against a Bengals' offense that managed only 127 yards, barely outgaining Pittsburgh running back Barry Foster. Foster, the AFC's leading rusher, carried 24 times for 108 yards, his fourth 100-yard game of the season.

In a matchup of the NFL's two youngest head coaches, the Bengals' David Shula and Pittsburgh's Bill Cowher, the Steelers trotted out a typical Pittsburgh football night: cold and blustery. The weather — temperatures dropped into the 20s by late in the game — and the icy-slick playing field apparently chilled out the Cincinnati offense.

Bengals quarterback Boomer Esiaison, questionable until just before the game with a bruised throwing arm, played but was ineffective against the NFL's 22nd-rated pass defense. The only time the Bengals seriously threatened, wide receiver Carl Pickens fumbled after an 18-yard gain to the Steelers' 21, with Pittsburgh's Sammy Walker recovering with just over a minute left in the first half.

The Bengals lost their second in a row in Pittsburgh after winning three straight there and six in row overall against the Steelers from 1988-90. Pittsburgh has won its last three against Cincinnati after sweeping the season series last season.

WORLD SERIES

Ontario takes over center stage

Classic first since '84 to be tied 1-1

TORONTO — Time for the Winter Classic.

The World Series shifted from the Deep South to the cold, cold north Monday as the Toronto Blue Jays prepared to host the first game of baseball's showcase ever played outside the United States. The clear autumnal nip of Atlanta was left behind for heavy clouds and wind-whipped cold, with highs in the low 40s.

And if the weather forecast for Game 3 Tuesday night is correct, that swinging top on the SkyDome better be snow-proof.

Forecasters say there's a chance of snow flurries in the Toronto area, with lows right around freezing.

EVEN UP AFTER 2: Put the champions of the American and National leagues on a field for two games and you might figure that each team would win once.

Not if you followed the recent history of the World Series, you wouldn't.

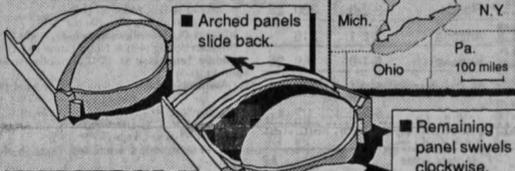

When the Blue Jays won Game 2 Sunday night, this Series became the first in eight years to be tied 1-1.

Detroit and San Diego split the first two games in 1984, with the Tigers eventually winning in five games.

How the SkyDome opens

Toronto's SkyDome became the official home park of the Blue Jays on June 5, 1989. It is one of the most unique parks in the major leagues, featuring a retractable roof, one hotel and three restaurants.

TORONTO — With maple leaves hanging high, and all of them right-side up, the World Series moved Monday across the U.S. border for the first time and into the SkyDome.

For the Toronto Blue Jays, it will be a welcome return to familiar turf Tuesday night when Juan Guzman starts Game 3 against Atlanta's Steve Avery.

Sure, they tied the series at one game each with a 5-4 victory Sunday night in Atlanta — thanks to a pinch-hit two-run ninth-inning homer by backup catcher Ed Sprague — but look at all the Blue Jays had to go through.

First, they watched as baseball committed an international error by flying the Canadian flag upside down and then heard the Canadian national anthem incorrectly sung.

Then, they survived a blown call at the plate. Finally, a problem with their charter flight leaving Atlanta forced a four-hour delay, and the team did not arrive home until 7:30 a.m.

"At least it was nice to get a win before that happened with the plane," Toronto's John Olerud said during Monday's not-so-lively workout. "It wasn't that bad, really, and guys weren't getting frustrated like they might have if we were down 0-2. But still, it was like, 'You've got to be kidding me.'"

There were no jokes, though, about the flag flap. The Marines apologized for the color guard's gaffe, and Canadians seemed to accept it, although they wondered how it could have happened.

"There's no excuse for it," said

Toronto third baseman Kelly Gruber, whose wife is Canadian. "If the U.S. Marines said the guy wasn't sure which way it should go, he shouldn't have been carrying it."

Echoed Dave Winfield: "I don't think it was a cruel joke, but it was beyond a faux pas. If tomorrow the American flag was hoisted upside down, would there be a mess or a fuss?"

"No matter what, you shouldn't let that happen," he said. "It's like having dignitaries coming to your home and putting out your old silverware."

Clearly, no chances were being taken on a similar occurrence with the World Series coming north of the border.

While the Blue Jays and Braves practiced Monday, two SkyDome workers spent the day hanging 65 Canadian flags from the mezzanine level at the SkyDome. They double-

UNLV President defends handling of administration

Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — UNLV President Robert Maxson made an impassioned defense of his administration Monday while blasting a "whole campaign of dirty tricks" he claimed supporters of former basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian have waged against the university.

Maxson, in an appearance before a legislative subcommittee probing events surrounding Tarkanian's resignation, lashed out at those who have questioned his credibility and blamed them for trying to sabotage the university.

"My university has conducted itself in an ethical, moral way and I think this is a sad day," Maxson said in concluding an opening statement that lasted 1 hour, 40 minutes.

Maxson spent much of the morning outlining his relationship with Tarkanian, saying he was supportive of the former Runnin' Rebel coach up through the point last year when Tarkanian agreed to resign following the publication of photos showing former players in a hot tub with convicted sports fixer Richard Perry.

Maxson accused Tarkanian and his supporters of then mounting an orchestrated campaign to discredit him and the university. He said the campaign included threats to university employees, forged letters and attempts to get student leaders to dig up dirt on the university president.

"Little did I know that within days of the resignation they would begin an orchestrated attempt to discredit the university or anyone perceived to be an enemy of the program," Maxson said.

Maxson denied he had ever been out to get Tarkanian, citing letters he wrote in support of the coach to the NCAA and others since being named president of the university in the summer of 1984.

"I never tried to dismantle the basketball team," Maxson said. "I never tried to discredit Jerry Tarkanian."

Maxson was interrupted several times by questions from Assemblyman Jim McGaughey, who chairs the three-member subcommittee. At one point, McGaughey refused to allow Maxson's attorney, Richard Wright, to respond, prompting an angry retort from the university president.

"I would respectfully ask you not interrupt me," Maxson said. "I was invited here to make an opening statement. I would like to finish my opening statement."

Some 200 people, mostly supporters of Tarkanian, crowded into a meeting room at the Cashman Field complex, to hear Maxson outline his dealings with Tarkanian and his accomplishments since taking over at UNLV.

Maxson said he was proudest of the academic accomplishments he has presided over at the university, which has nearly doubled in size since he took over.

"UNLV never claimed to be a Harvard of the west," he said. "We were just working our fannies off to be a good public university for the state of Nevada."

Maxson said he was encouraged by faculty members and university employees trying to clean up the basketball program from almost the time he arrived on campus. But he said he continued to support Tarkanian and the program despite the negative publicity the university was getting.

"When I arrived at UNLV, basketball was not at the top of my agenda and it's not at the top of my agenda today," Maxson said. "But we defended Coach Tarkanian. We defended the basketball program, where there was no agreement on the campus about that defense."

Maxson was the second person to appear before the subcommittee.

Two weeks ago, Tarkanian told the panel he believed Maxson and top UNLV administrators conspired to force him from the basketball program and tried to destroy the team he had built into a national power.

The subcommittee is looking into circumstances surrounding Tarkanian's resignation, but also wants to probe the workings of the UNLV Foundation.

The committee last month subpoenaed a long list of financial and personnel records, including canceled checks from the university and the UNLV Foundation.

Upstarts may input in this y Dave Goldberg Associated Press Forget those funny teams that made the NFL playoffs last year like Atlanta and Detroit. Forget those funny teams like Tampa Bay that started so well this season. Less than midway through the 1992 NFL season, it's become clear there will be no upstarts in the playoffs this year. Oh? In the NFC, try to get beyond San Francisco (6-1) and the Big Three in the East — Dallas (5-1), Philadelphia (4-2) and Washington (4-2). Add Minnesota (5-1) as the Central winner and New Orleans (5-2) as a wild-card and give Mike Ditka a chance to will Chicago (3-3) in from the fringe and you've got it. NOTEBOOK: Winfield no Deion or Bo

Continued from Page 1B 1-1, he celebrated with a page out of the Braves' book: the Tomahawk Chop. Gruber gave a two- or three-stroke rendition of the cheer, and that brought lots of calls Monday morning to Atlanta-area radio talk shows from fans who felt Gruber was unkind. No offense intended, said Gruber, either to Braves' fans or to the American Indian factions who feel the Chop degrades their culture. "I just bubbled and let loose," Gruber said during off-day workouts at the SkyDome. "It was just a little bit of excitement. It's not condoning them or condemning them, as long as what they do is not a bad gesture to the Indian race."

NO DOUBLE-PLAY FOR DAVE: Deion Sanders has grabbed lots of attention this postseason for trying to play on the pro level in two sports at the same time — outfield for the Braves, wide receiver and defensive back for the NFL Falcons. But he's not the only player in the World Series with two sports on his resume. Dave Winfield, the Blue Jays' 41-year-old outfielder and designated hitter, played college basketball at Minnesota well enough to consider a pro career in hoops. Winfield chose to concentrate on baseball, however, and says he's never looked back. "I could have done it, but I didn't wanted to," Winfield said when asked Monday if he ever contemplated playing baseball and basketball professionally. "I knew what I wanted to do since I was a kid." The experiences of Sanders and Bo Jackson, who had to have a hip replaced after trying to play baseball and football, convinced Winfield his choice was correct. "I did the right thing, no doubt about it," he said. "Bo's out and Deion's limping. It's not easy, man. But I give them a lot of credit. They've set some new standards." LET'S GO TO THE VIDEO-TAPE: In this age of the VCR and the ever-present replay, here's a real rarity for a big-time athlete.

More than 18 hours after his two-run, pinch-hit homer gave the Blue Jays their 5-4 victory Sunday night, Ed Sprague said he had yet to see a tape of the shot. "I'm still in kind of a fog," said Sprague, who, like all the Jays, had to wait until early Monday morning to leave Atlanta after their plane broke down on the tarmac. They arrived in Toronto about 7 a.m. "I haven't even seen a replay of the homer yet," Sprague said. "It took us so long to get home that none of what happened last night has filtered through. "I suppose when I go home and relax tonight, and watch what happened, I'll be able to appreciate it more."

TORONTO: Speed concerns Gaston

Continued from Page 1B and triple-checked, and all were correctly displayed. "Oh, guys on the field kept yelling up to us, kidding that we got one upside down," Marco Roccasalva said. "It's not going to happen," added his twin brother, Rick. "You don't think we'd make that mistake with our own flag, do you?" There was only one American flag on display, a big one hanging from the roof in dead center field. That flag, and a Canadian one next to it, were properly hung. The Braves, meanwhile, were busy getting the hang of playing at a new ballpark for the first time. The artificial turf at the SkyDome is bouncy, and even the Toronto outfielders occasionally play high-hop singles into doubles. Plus, Gruber said, the lights can make it difficult for third basemen to field choppers. Still, Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said the park is not that difficult. "I don't think they will have to make adjustments. There are not many terribly tricky spots," he said. "The ball comes off the wall true and travels down the lines without a problem. This place is easy to play in and the Braves are used to turf. They shouldn't have a problem." Braves shortstop Jeff Blauser felt comfortable after his first look. "The only difference is just like any other park you go into," he said. "The other team has its home fans, but you'd have that anywhere on the road." The Blue Jays will have 50,000-plus fans on their side and, this being their first World Series home game, the usually sedate crowd figures to be louder than ever. And, with the game at the home of the AL champion, Toronto will get to use its regular-season lineup with the addition of the designated hitter. "I think it's important when you have Olerud, Winfield and Candy Maldonado in there together," Blue Jays leadoff man Devon White said. Braves manager Bobby Cox previously said that Lonnie Smith would probably serve as the DH.

Cox also could use Deion Sanders, who went 1 for 3 with two walks and two steals Sunday night. Speed is a big worry for Gaston. The Braves are 7 for 7 stealing in two games, including a Series record-tying five Sunday night. Oakland was 16 of 18 running against Toronto catcher Pat Borders in the playoffs, although Toronto pitchers are poor at holding runners on base and usually throw a lot of balls in the dirt. Borders threw out just 29 percent of base-stealers during the season. "I'm certainly concerned. I think the problem is a combination," Gaston said. "Pat isn't throwing as well as he should. He doesn't have a real strong arm, but he has the ability to get rid of the ball quickly."

Jordan, Heat put on a show for youngsters

Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — Basketball's greatest scorer concentrated on rebounding Monday.

Michael Jordan and his Chicago Bulls teammates visited Miami seeking to raise money and spirits in the aftermath of Hurricane Andrew. The trip was Jordan's idea.

The Bulls and Miami Heat conducted a 30-minute midday clinic at Miami Arena for 12,000 schoolchildren from hurricane-ravaged south Dade County. The teams returned several hours later for a charity exhibition game added to the schedule after Andrew hit Aug. 24.

Students ages 8 to 15, delighted to be hanging out with Jordan rather than sitting in a classroom, cheered his every move during the clinic.

"He can teach me how to dunk," said 14-year-old Dexter Roberts, who might stand 4-foot-6 in Air Jordans.

"He's shorter than I thought he'd be," said 10-year-old Kelvin Edwards, referring to Michael Jordan, not Dexter Roberts.

In warmups, every layup Jordan made brought a frenzied shriek from the crowd. He participated in shooting contests between the two teams, and when the Heat outscored the Bulls 20-18 in free throws, some youngsters booed.

Jordan spoke briefly over the public address system.

"Being millionaires," he said, eyeing teammates with a smile, "we felt a sense of obligation to come and help people who mean so much to us. We consider Miami part of our family — the NBA family. Hopefully the money raised will give you a little more determination to rebuild."

Ticket sales, which grossed $375,000, will be donated to the recovery effort. The TNT network planned to solicit donations from viewers nationwide during its telecast of the game.

"The kids are why we're here," Jordan told reporters. "The game is a way to come together and reach out to try to help someone."

Jordan was a unifying force for South Florida once before. In 1989, when downtown riots forced the postponement of a Heat game, Jordan and the Bulls played in Miami two nights later and helped to restore a sense of normalcy.

Monday's visit resulted from a conversation Jordan had with Heat partner Billy Cunningham while they were playing golf in North Carolina two days after Andrew hit.

"Michael said to Billy, 'What can I do? It looked terrible on television,'" Heat managing partner Lewis Schaffel said.

The game drew a sellout crowd of 15,008. The Heat gave 700 seats on the floor to children.

"Instead of them going to the bigwigs in town," Schaffel said, "we let the kids who lost their homes — kids who are living in tents — sit in the best seats."

At a time when Jordan is making news for things other than basketball heroics, he clearly enjoyed hearing the children's cheers. The Bulls' star was confronted last week with a published report that he paid off a $57,000 gambling debt, and there was speculation he would miss the Miami trip because he must testify this week in the trial of a convicted drug dealer.

Michael Jordan slaps hands with one of the 15,000 youngsters who turned out to watch the Bulls and Heat Monday in a preseason game to benefit the victims of Hurricane Andrew.

NFL

Upstarts may not have much input in this year's playoffs

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Forget those funny teams that made the NFL playoffs last year, like Atlanta and Detroit. Forget those funny teams like Tampa Bay that started so well this season.

Less than midway through the 1992 NFL season, it's become clear there will be no upstarts in the playoffs this year.

Oh?

In the NFC, try to get beyond San Francisco (6-1) and the Big Three in the East — Dallas (5-1), Philadelphia (4-2) and Washington (4-2). Add Minnesota (5-1) as the Central winner and New Orleans (5-2) as a wild-card and give Mike Ditka a chance to will Chicago (3-3) in from the fringe and you've got it.

In the AFC, take Miami (6-0) and Buffalo (4-2) in the East; Houston (4-2) in the Central; Denver (5-2) and Kansas City (4-3) in the West and add one more from somewhere (the charging Raiders, determined Browns or youthful Steelers).

There are your playoffs.

"I really believe this team has a chance to get somewhere. And I mean all the way," coach Marty Schottenheimer of the Chiefs said after his team lost 17-10 in Dallas. "We're just missing on little things."

That loss dropped Kansas City a game behind Denver in the AFC West. But they're an impressive 4-3, three losses on the road by a total of 11 points — at Houston (in overtime), to a John Elway comeback at Denver, and in Dallas.

In fact, the 11 teams likely to make the playoffs have 20 losses among them.

Of those, only two are to rank outsiders — the Vikings to the 1-5 Lions, a defeat they avenged last Thursday, and the Redskins to the 1-5 Cards, a defeat they will avenge. Two other defeats were to the fringe teams — Houston to Pittsburgh and Buffalo to the Raiders.

One obvious development in the last week is the re-emergence of Washington, where Joe Gibbs just won't allow any post-Super Bowl doldrums. Another is the return to the upper pack by the Eagles, anointed as this year's team just two weeks ago after beating Dallas 31-7.

Washington's 16-12 win over Philadelphia on Sunday showed the Redskins' strength and the Eagles' weakness in the same place — the offensive line.

Playing without Jim Lachey and Jeff Bostic, and with Ed Simmons hurting, the Redskins juggled players, thrust in the untested Mo Elewonibi, and limited Philadelphia to just two sacks. The Eagles, meanwhile, whose front was a question mark, allowed five sacks as the Redskins kept Randall Cunningham under pressure all day.

"Anytime you can do a decent job against them you consider that a success," Gibbs said. "Because the Eagles' line isn't like anyone else, they're great."

Well, maybe not great, but good enough to make the playoffs.

Cleveland's Eric Metcalf and an official watch as Green Bay's LeRoy Butler tries unsuccessfully to come up with the interception over teammate Vinnie Clark (25) on Sunday. The Browns won 17-6.

ANTIQUITY & MODERNITY

Be very careful how you say you're sorry

E. B. Holtmark
The Daily Iowan

"neque imitare malos medicos qui in alienis morbis profitentur tenere se medicinae scientiam, ispi se curare non possunt."
"Don't be like those bad doctors who claim they have the knowledge to heal when it's other people who are sick but can't take care of themselves when they're the ones who are ill."
— Servius Sulpicius Rufus, "Ciceronis Epistulae ad Familiares" 4.5.5

When Tullia, daughter of the great Roman orator Marcus Tullius Cicero, died in childbirth in early 45 B.C., his friend and fellow lawyer, Rufus, wrote him a letter of formal "consolatio," or condolence, on the occasion of this personal tragedy.

Both consolatio and the personal letter are of great antiquity, examples of each being found already in the earliest literature of the West, Homeric poetry. Indeed, consolatio was as common in poetic form as it was in prose, and it served equally in fictional modes and as consolatio ory buffer against the harsh impingements of reality. Despite the high formalism that attached to the writing of such traditional genre pieces — it's not the first time this has happened, time heals all, I know you have the strength to bear it, a similar thing happened to me, your friends are thinking of you, etc. — the design of the nonfictional consolatio was sufficiently supple to accommodate a strategy of personalized particulars.

When you buy cards in a drugstore that contain both a pre-printed message of sympathy and enough blank space for you to add your own words for the specific situation of grief, you are buying into a most venerable bit of Western literary tradition.

animula . . . iactura (loss in the case of the trivial life of a single trivial woman) is after all a small matter when measured against the loss of the republic. What's more, he continues, "tamen ei moriendum fuit quoniam homo nata fuerat (she had to die sometime anyway, given that she'd been born human)."

I obviously caution against such an egregious approach when you write your next letter of condolence.

It strikes our modern sensibilities in such matters as unbelievably callous for Rufus to write as he does to Cicero. Although I doubt Cicero was entirely thrilled with this letter, I don't believe he and ancient sensibilities were quite as offended as we would be. Rufus' point is that Cicero has made a great theoretical display in his writings of the need to bear life's setbacks with philosophical fortitude, and now he has the perfect opportunity to illustrate theory with practice. And what in fact seems cruel to us did not always seem cruel to the ancient Romans — one need think only of their often capricious and rebarbative treatment of slaves, and the enormous popularity of the gladiatorial games. For all their similarities to us and for all the valuable points of contact that we can readily make with them, we should never lose sight of the fact that in some very important ways they, like the ancient Greeks, lived with cultural assumptions that were so different from ours as to seem positively alien.

As for the details of the hortative analogy Rufus here formulates, it is grounded in the same experience of ancient Roman physicians that the poet Ovid, in the next generation, apparently drew on. In his "Metamorphoses" he has the great physician-god Apollo, sick in lust, say that although "inventum medicina meum est (the art of healing is my discovery), nec prosunt domino quae prosunt omnibus artes (the skills that benefit everybody else don't benefit the one who controls them)." Roughly speaking, "physician" — or, in Cicero's case, philosopher — "heal thyself." We may console ourselves that these observations have broader applicability to us all.

ART SHOW

Neighbors name nude after Roseanne Arnold

Michael Bates
Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. — Bill Koch doesn't make any apologies for his eclectic taste in art.

"I always seem to pick out unusual pieces that the artist did, primarily because I like a painting that says something to me in a strong, powerful way," said the head of the team that won sailing's 1992 America's Cup. "It's all very personal."

Koch is sharing his art in an exhibit of more than 120 pieces at the Wichita Art Museum. "European and American Masterpieces From the William I. Koch Collection" runs through Nov. 1.

The collection, which ARTnews magazine rates as one of the top 200 in the world, includes everything from paintings by the masters to examples of American Indian beadwork.

Koch assisted with the cost of transportation of the works, installation, security and interpretive programming. More than half of the works had been on display in Koch's homes in Palm Beach, Fla., and Cape Cod in Massachusetts. Others were on loan to museums. Three Cezanne paintings were borrowed back from their new Japanese owner.

One large Botero bronze sculpture, "Woman Smoking a Cigarette," created some controversy when Koch had it in the yard of his rented home in La Jolla, Calif., while he was competing in the America's Cup.

Now on the art museum grounds, it depicts a large, reclining, nude woman. Koch's California neighbors nicknamed the sculpture "Roseanne," after comedian Roseanne Arnold.

More conventional works in the collection include textbook examples of paintings by French masters Monet, Renoir and Degas.

A Monet offering titled "Field of Oats and Poppies" is among Koch's favorites. It and a Remington, "Evening on a Canadian Lake," have been reproduced on exhibit posters.

MOVIE REVIEW

Who can chop your head off . . . why (singing) the Candyman can

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

With Halloween less than two weeks away, the latest horror flicks have arrived attempting to scare, jolt, shock and gore Iowa City, through this national spook day Oct. 31.

These films' values as successful trips through the supernatural and insane depend greatly on the expectations of the audience. "Candyman," the newest member of the uniquely American "slasher" genre, is no exception.

Someone seeking the sequel to "The Silence of the Lambs" — as the "Candyman" advertisement vaunts — will be greatly disappointed, but someone looking for a few loud "Boos!" by a man with a bloody hook for a hand, an occasional quickening of the pulse and a lot of laughs might actually enjoy this.

There is some unspoken agreement about watching a horror film like "Candyman" in a public setting which allows people to openly break the loosely followed social rule of being quiet in a theater. The audience in "Candyman" yelled, joked, condemned, and most curiously gave advice to the characters in the film. The advice fell along the lines of "Don't go in there, stupid! Man! Can't you tell the Candyman is in there by the trail of blood?"

Of course the characters never listened.

The attractive, well-endowed woman who repeatedly ignores common sense in "Candyman" is Helen Lyle (Virginia Madsen). Helen, along with her more cautious partner Bernadette Walsh (Hasi Lemmons), is working on her graduate thesis about urban folklore when she begins to repeatedly encounter stories of a demon who haunts the Chicago projects, killing its victims with a rusty hook.

This member of the nonliving race can be summoned simply by looking into a mirror and saying "Candyman" five times.

The almighty wise ones in the film immediately try it. They follow up that smart move, not heeding the audience's counsel, by heading down to the ghetto to visit the deserted apartment of the latest victim.

"Candyman" fails to even approach the level of truly frightening, but there are a few surprise visits by the title character which give people who are a bit too old to trick-or-treat a chance to scream and jump in their seats.

The film is also, unfortunately, not intentionally, very funny. Wounds heal incredibly fast, screams of terror are humorously fake, cast members are entirely too dramatic and the plot incessantly pushes the audience's suspension-of-disbelief limits.

"Candyman" also fails in the gore department. Plenty of blood is spewed on the screen, but that is something that any film novice with a camcorder and a bottle of ketchup can emulate. Many true slasher fans come expecting plenty of decapitated bodies and exposed inner organs. Whether this absence of mutilation is a positive or negative is probably best left a personal decision.

The actors do, however, deserve ample credit for placing their trust in some bare trainer for one nasty scene involving thousands of bees and a lot of bare skin.

No one with even their tiny toe firmly placed in reality should lose sleep after seeing "Candyman." But just in case, weak-skinned insomniacs should refrain, as they drive home from the theater, from glancing in their rearview mirror and chanting "Candyman, Candyman, Candyman . . ."

BOOK REVIEW

'Truman' is stunning success

Dan Sewell
Associated Press

MIAMI LAKES, Fla. — Ten years ago, David McCullough began working on a book about a president who left office nearly 40 years ago and died 20 years later.

Timing can be everything. McCullough's comprehensive account of the life and times of Harry S Truman hit the bookstores in time to become part of the 1992 presidential race.

"Truman" not only has been near or at the top of the best-seller list for four months, it's been on the night tables of President Bush and Bill Clinton, mentioned in their speeches and frequently quoted from by journalists tracking the candidates' efforts to cast themselves as a Truman for our time.

"It makes me want to laugh a little bit," said McCullough. The author of five earlier books on history and the ear-recognizable narrator of public television series that include "The American Experience" and the documentary series "The Civil War," McCullough pushed to get his book out this election year because he said people needed to be reminded of what Truman represented.

"I had no idea, though, that both candidates would be referring to the book, or that each would be saying that he is Harry Truman, which is, of course, pretty silly," McCullough said.

"Neither George Bush nor Bill Clinton is Harry Truman, nor is Ross Perot I should add, because there is nothing like Harry Truman. Nor is anyone who pretends to be Harry Truman like him, because the lesson of Harry Truman's whole political life is that he got where he did by being Harry Truman. He hated hypocrisy, and imitation was a form of hypocrisy."

McCullough smiled during an interview last week about the ways Truman has been called into this year's campaign: Bush's whistle-stop train tour borrowed from Truman's come-from-behind 1948 campaign in which he battled against Congress as Bush has tried to do; Clinton going to Truman's hometown in Independence, Mo.; Clinton saying Bush hurts the middle class while Truman helped it; Bush saying Truman fought overseas while Clinton wouldn't; Clinton saying Bush passes the buck where Truman's desk-top sign once proclaimed: "The buck stops here."

"Now if Clinton and Bush want to . . . speak in a direct, straight-from-the-shoulder fashion, if they want to speak the truth and be decisive, if they want to have courage of conviction, that's all wonderful," McCullough said.

While dubious about the candidates' claims on Truman's legacy, McCullough takes satisfaction from their attention to him.

"If my book has helped put Truman back into the discourse of contemporary American politics, that makes me very pleased. He belongs there."

McCullough says he doesn't want to make a myth of Truman. "He made mistakes; I'm not setting him up as a saint we should put up on our dashboard. He was very human."

"He appeared to be an ordinary man, but he was the ordinary man who did the extraordinary. He was one of us who rose to the occasion."

He said Truman's basic messages have particular appeal in a year in which Americans are expressing distaste with superficial modern politics.

"Speak the truth; work hard, be kind to the people you love, help your neighbors, do your duty, trust in God; love your country. He loved history and he wanted to know about his country."

McCullough, too, loves history and hopes the stunning success of "The Civil War" documentary and his massive Truman book are indicators of a renewed national interest. His earlier works included National Book Award winners "Mornings on Horseback" about the young Theodore Roosevelt, and "The Path Between the Seas" about the Panama Canal.

ALTERNATIVE RADIO

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Andy Quinn (left) and Mike Ferrari engage in some lively chitchat on the air following Ferrari's sportscast. The two are regulars at KRUI.

KRUI changes format, keeps great music

Tim Rissman
The Daily Iowan

You are scanning through the FM stations on your radio, and you come across a deejay talking in a monotone voice one step above a whisper. The guy sounds like he spent the evening downtown. Maybe even the afternoon. He leads into the next song, a tune by the Dead Kennedys. You wonder what station this could possibly be. You add up the facts.

A deejay out on the fringe of reality.

Loud, assaultive music.

It becomes clear—you realize you have stumbled across KRUI, the university's very own radio station. You quickly change stations, and are soon enjoying the latest Dire Straits release on KRUI. You breathe a sigh of relief, and kick back.

It is exactly this scenario that folks at KRUI have made efforts to avoid this year, with a change in attitude they hope will result in a larger audience and increased advertising revenue. Before you jump the gun and start hollering in defense of your alternative musical tastes, a rest easy. It isn't the music format that has been changed, but other portions of the station's structure.

According to Andy Quinn, general manager at KRUI, the changes at the station have been more in streamlining the current product than in making drastic changes in music format or daily programming. Said Quinn, "I think the station is sounding a lot more professional, primarily because of the experience of the current on-air staff, but also because of efforts in improving music rotation and special programming."

The experience of Quinn and Music Director David Gebhart is a definite benefit when it comes to recognizing good music and offering it to listeners. Said Quinn, "While we're not tampering with the type of music we're playing, we are very aware of what's hot, and what's not. If the response to a song is poor, it's gone."

Because of the loose format, he is quick to add that the style of the music can change over the course of an evening. "I always tell people that if the music you're hearing on KRUI isn't doing it for you, switch to something else and come back to us in a few hours. Chances are we'll be playing something different in a style that will appeal to you."

The staff at KRUI has also begun to tape the deejays and review them later, offering opinions on the good and bad things that they hear. In Quinn's eyes such efforts have really helped the deejays develop into more professional personalities, and advertisers have noticed as well.

Since KRUI is university-funded, staying in operation is — for the most part — guaranteed. But Quinn says that the station would like to keep some of the different funding options open. Increasing the financial stability, he thinks, will increase the station's ability to grow. And advertisers have recognized the changes that have taken place at the station and are impressed.

Quinn summed up by saying, "KRUI has a good reputation right now as far as recognizing good music and presenting it. We're excited about that and listeners are excited about it. And advertisers are starting to see it as well." He asks those interested to tune in to 89.7 FM, and give the station a listen.

Iowa City teen-ager injured in accident
 An Iowa City teen and his motorcycle struck an automobile Tuesday afternoon in an accident still under investigation, according to the Iowa City Police Department.

Kenneth D. Snow, 18, of 215 Amburst St., was southbound on Morningside Drive when he struck a vehicle operated by Mary Irene Baxter, 73, of 3345 Hanover Court.

Another parked vehicle was also struck, according to the ICPD. Snow sustained injuries and was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics for treatment. His condition was unknown.

Mideast peace talks to resume Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The quest for Mideast peace resumes Wednesday with Israel and the Arabs keeping an eye on U.S. presidential elections that could shape the future of their negotiations, Mideast experts said Tuesday.

A victory by Democrat Bill Clinton, and his certain stress on economic recovery over foreign affairs, could spur the parties to strive for progress in the waning months of the Bush administration, said Martin Indyk of the Washington Institute For Near East Policy.

Guam struck by 2nd typhoon in 2 months

AGANA, Guam (AP) — The second typhoon in less than two months began hitting Guam with strong wind and rain early Wednesday. Schools, businesses and government offices were closed and many residents were in shelters.

Typhoon Brian, with wind gusting to 145 mph, was expected to pass over the southern tip of the island.

By 9 a.m. Wednesday (7 p.m. EDT Tuesday), villagers on the southern end of the island were reporting that they couldn't see across the street because of wind-blown rain.

German Greens founder shot dead by lover

BONN, Germany (AP) — Petra Kelly, founder of Germany's Greens party and once a leading counterculture figure, was slain by her longtime lover who then used his .38-caliber derringer to kill himself, police said Tuesday.

The Greens party started out as an amalgam of leftist fringe groups battling police at U.S. military bases in the early 1980s. At her death, much of Kelly's ecological platform had been embraced by mainstream parties throughout Europe.

The decomposing bodies of Kelly and her 69-year-old companion — former Gen. Gert Bastian, who quit the army to join the peace movement — were found in their house Monday night.
