Vonna's family and friends will also speak on "how important 1980 is in finding the political glass ceiling in government."

Faulkner and she will also speak on "how important it is to have a seat at the table in the political process." automated voting systems have been useful to help them. "It's only taken us 50 years," she said.

She will speak to an audience that includes professors, who will discuss the diversity of women in the political process.

"What the opposition wants is to be heard and understood," said Faulkner. "We want to hear their stories and their perspectives."

"We've been fighting for a seat at the table," she said.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA VISIT UNIVERSITY

Educators tour UI, like what they see

Joe Schobert
The Daily Iowan

Representing a country that might not have seen a year like 1992, a group of visiting educators from the Czech Republic spent the last three days touring the UI and getting a taste of its finances and operations.

The educators are part of a mission from 12 administrations throughout Czechoslovakia, applied to participating in a similar educational tour to the United States for the past three years. The tour was part of a U.S. Information Agency trip designed to help understand differences between universities, large and small, public and private.

The tour began Thursday in Washington, D.C., and continued to Pittsburgh, Pa., and Boston, Mass., ending up in Iowa City. Today, the group began its tour of Portland, Ore. They will also visit other major sites, including touring their visit to the United Nations in New York.

The central European nation's administration had been held off for the first time to gain its independence through methods in the "czechoslovakia" of 1993, which primarily targeted current society.

But amid the chaos, Czechoslovakia is working toward a split away from West Bank Palestine, if the UN Conference on the Question of Palestine, the, has been criticized for not allowing Palestinian participation.

The tour, however, won't stop the group from visiting the, although the timing for the, has been described as "inconvenient and unreadable.

Instead, the group has decided to visit the universities and educational institutions in the UI's five-state region and to attend the council's meeting.

The council and UI President Hunter Rawlings III have agreed to host the group for a "friendly" meeting.

Several of the visitors were surprised by the proposed financial programs that would allow the system to function.

"This is one of the reasons people are interested in seeing the UI," said Jihan Hodja, minister of the University of West Virginia.

"There aren't many differences between how the American and Czech educational systems work," said the UI's Ralph Zaremba, head of the UI's Department of English.

"It's true we have some differences," said Hodja, who visited the UI's Department of English.

"In Czechoslovakia, all the universities are non-profit institutions and have no financial funds," he said. "Here, however, there is quite a difference.

The visitors pointed out that while both universities have some financial problems, those at the UI are much more severe.

"We have more financial problems here because we have to compete with the private sector," said Zaremba.

In a phone conversation, Cohen said he had to let his on-call workers know about the problem. Thus, they could not be reached by phone, even though they might have been able to work. "It's a lot of money to me. That's positive," he said.

According to the letter, Cohen and the Warren Co. have both filed bankruptcy.

"There was no concern about anything. There was a lot of management there," Krista Lauren, a former waitress at Timo's said.

Grad student tries to alter perceptions of Africa

Daphne Kalina

Special to The Daily Iowan

It is difficult to estimate how many people who live in the United States are aware of the recent developments in Africa. The few years have been filled with new stories of civil war, political unrest, and economic decline. During this time, during my most recent trip to Africa, I was surprised to find that this was not the case.

I was on a trip to Uganda a few months ago. A constellation of African people is the experience that has most impressed me about Africa. When I was in Uganda, I was struck by the number of people who were willing to talk about the country and its problems.

Uganda is a country located in East Africa, bordered by Kenya to the north and the Democratic Republic of the Congo to the west. It is a landlocked country, which means that it has no access to the sea. However, it is rich in natural resources, including oil and gas.

Most people do not know that if one were to plant a new nation, it would be in Uganda. The country is home to many ethnic groups, including the Baganda, the Lango, and the Acholi. They have their own languages and customs.

I went to see the little girl who was named in the newspaper. Fortunately she said yes, and it was easy to address the children and their parents on the viewpoints that they had of the country. Here is what I heard:

One of the most important things that I heard was that people are very proud of their country. They believe that it is a great place to live, and they are willing to work hard to make it better.

Another thing that I heard was that people are very interested in education. They believe that education is the key to a better future for their children.

I also heard that people are very concerned about the environment. They believe that it is important to conserve the natural resources of their country.

In conclusion, the Ugandan people are very proud of their country, and they are willing to work hard to make it better. They believe that education is the key to a better future for their children, and they are concerned about the environment.
Midterms spawn critique of candidates

It's midterm evaluation time again, like peeling away the World Series. Who has the best pitcher? Who has the best manager? Who has the best lineup? Who has the best dugout? Who has the best bull pen? Who has the best fans? Who has the best ownership?

This is the time of year when political polls are released and the hoopla of the election season begins. Who has the best campaign? Who has the best slogan? Who has the best advertising? Who has the best organization? Who has the best volunteers? Who has the best strategy?

And then, of course, there is the question of whether you have to worry about the results of the election. Are you going to have to worry about the results of the election? Are you going to have to worry about the results of the election? Are you going to have to worry about the results of the election?

It's a time of year when political analysts try to predict the outcome of the upcoming elections. Who is going to win? Who is going to lose? Who is going to win? Who is going to lose? Who is going to win? Who is going to lose?

It's a time of year when political candidates try to win the hearts and minds of the voters. Who is going to win? Who is going to lose? Who is going to win? Who is going to lose? Who is going to win? Who is going to lose?

It's a time of year when political parties try to gain the support of the electorate. Who is going to win? Who is going to lose? Who is going to win? Who is going to lose? Who is going to win? Who is going to lose?

It's a time of year when political leaders try to make the right decisions. Who is going to win? Who is going to lose? Who is going to win? Who is going to lose? Who is going to win? Who is going to lose?

ISO defended

To the Editor:

As an active member of an interest group that periodically organizes conferences over the past few years, I can certainly understand Mr. Ross's remarks about the public's being mystified about interest groups. While ISO members are not necessarily politicians or experts on the issues of interest to their organization, they are knowledgeable about their particular topics. ISO members are continually involved in the development of policy and programs that keep their activities and views current. ISO members are often involved in the development of written testimony or public statements that address specific issues. ISO members also care about public welfare. It is not surprising that the public should be mystified about the activities of interest groups. The topic of mystification might be a subject for another column.

ISO is not "mythical"

To the Editor:

I was disappointed to see the recommendation of "outside help" from the University of Iowa's Center for Information Policy. As an active member of several interest groups, I can attest to the time and energy that goes into organizing events. The Iowa Student Association is not a "mythical" organization. We have members who are passionate about a wide array of issues, from the environment to political science. It is unfortunate that the Center for Information Policy is not perceived as a valuable resource.

Re: hysterectomy

To the Editor:

I am concerned about the recent news reports about the possibility of performing a hysterectomy on a woman in the age of 18 or 19. This is a very difficult decision for any woman to make, and it is important for her to have all the necessary information in order to make an informed decision. The decision should be based on the woman's personal circumstances and should be made with the help of professionals.

Iowa Mazzilli, the Blue Jays' dual slugging and pitching ace, had surgery to remove a bone spur from his elbow, the team announced Tuesday. The surgery was performed Friday in Toronto at the University of Toronto Hospital.

The injury originally occurred during a game against the Devil Rays last Thursday, but Mazzilli was able to pitch the next day. He was subsequently placed on the 15-day disabled list, and the team announced Monday that he would undergo surgery.

Mazzilli had been scheduled to make his second start of the season on Tuesday against the White Sox, but the team decided against using him. Instead, they opted to place him on the disabled list.

The Blue Jays said in a statement that Mazzilli will be re-evaluated in 10-14 days to determine when he can return to action.

Mazzilli, 29, is in his second season with the Blue Jays. He is 4-2 with a 3.85 ERA in 10 starts this year.

The team also placed reliever Steve Delabar on the 10-day disabled list with a right shoulder strain. Delabar has a 1.72 ERA in 15 relief appearances this season.

The Blue Jays recalled reliever Sean Reid-Foley from Triple-A Buffalo to take Delabar's roster spot.

In other moves, the Blue Jays recalled outfielder Jon Jay from Triple-A Buffalo and optioned pitcher Ryan Borucki to the same level.

Jay was recently acquired from the Cardinals in a three-team trade that also involved the Orioles. He has played in 45 games this year, batting .243 with 11 home runs and 24 RBIs.

Borucki, 23, is 2-3 with a 4.75 ERA in 12 starts this season. He has made 10 starts at Double-A New Hampshire and two starts at Triple-A Buffalo.

The Blue Jays are also expected to recall pitcher Tim Mayza from Triple-A Buffalo to take Mazzilli's roster spot.

Mayza, 26, has a 2.36 ERA in 10 relief appearances this season.

The Blue Jays are in ninth place in the AL East, three games behind the first-place Yankees.

Chicago Cubs pitcher Kyle Hendricks is expected to undergo surgery on his right shoulder this week. The team announced Tuesday that Hendricks will have a procedure to repair a partial tear of the rotator cuff.

Hendricks, 28, has a 3.83 ERA in 37 starts this year. He was placed on the 10-day disabled list on Aug. 3 with a right shoulder strain.

The team said Hendricks will undergo surgery to repair the injury, which occurred during a start against the Brewers on Aug. 12.

Hendricks has a 2.96 ERA in his career and is a three-time All-Star. He is in his ninth season with the Cubs.

The team also recalled reliever Jake Petricka from Triple-A Iowa and optioned pitcher Cole Hamels to the same level.

Petricka, 32, has a 3.72 ERA in 28 relief appearances this season. Hamels, 35, is 2-3 with a 5.70 ERA in eight starts this year.

The Cubs are in fourth place in the NL Central, 11 games behind the Brewers.

Oakland Athletics first baseman Matt Olson has been placed on the 10-day disabled list with a right calf strain. The team announced Tuesday that Olson will be out for a few days.

Olson, 30, is batting .275 with 17 home runs and 49 RBIs in 102 games this season. He was placed on the disabled list on Aug. 19 with a left calf strain.

The Athletics recalled first baseman Mark Payton from Triple-A Las Vegas to take Olson's roster spot.

Payton, 26, is batting .284 with three home runs and 15 RBIs in 63 games this season.

The Athletics are in third place in the AL West, one game behind the Texas Rangers.

Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander Kenta Maeda has been placed on the 10-day disabled list with a knee injury. The team announced Tuesday that Maeda will be out for a few days.

Maeda, 30, is 3-9 with a 5.47 ERA in 19 starts this season. He was placed on the disabled list on Aug. 19 with a left shoulder strain.

The Dodgers recalled left-hander Jon Legowski from Triple-A Oklahoma City to take Maeda's roster spot.

Legowski, 24, has a 2.15 ERA in 13 relief appearances this season.

The Dodgers are in fourth place in the NL West, 10 games behind the Colorado Rockies.

Poetry Reading:

U Sam Oeur to read Cambodian poetry

Michelle-Theary Fournier

The Daily Iowan

Going home: the most of us that means a warm, safe place, full of comfortable and familiar items. It also means the poetry division of the Writers’ Club, in which you get to invite a poet home toCambodia. Not long after that, you will plant a small tree on your land, and all his books and all his notes and all his manuscript in his room. On the face of it, it seems like a dream. Only in the poem does it turn out to be a thing of the past.

The pain and agony. Oeur and his people suffered immensely and were portrayed by the pair as they read the poetry.

As a poet, McCullough would travel to Cambodia and interviews his friends and other leaders who had received a letter from Oeur saying, "Please send me the poems because I will die soon." In 1997, he went to the English department of the University of Iowa

Terrance Simien and the Mallet Boys come to Iowa to party Cajun style

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Yacht Club is hosting its promise of "Take a little trip up to the bayou," when it first hit in 1974. "New Orleans! Mardi Gras," simulated from the Cajun music.

While the band has only just released its debut album, Simien and the boys have a long list of chicory, Keith Richards and Ron Wood and a beginning in 1984, they have appeared on the accordian (or zydeco) now and then since about 1810, by some accounts. "The Big Easy," recorded with the likes of Keith Richards and Ron Wood and were more than a little open to playing those -- which lead to a genuine serving of holi-fun appreciation.

As the title of the above industry, the result is strictly likened, which is the traditional dance music of the Punch and Judy Music who Foreclosures the Beach Boys and the recommendations of the Friends and Family Network. "This really has the Beach Boys really close together, but not as appealing."

On Saturday, the band will kick off its long list of Chicory Coffee and "Hurricanes" tonight. The Bunny's role in this adventure is not completely alone, and the boys have been the appreciation for good live music, which means no limitations would make them feel good -- on the downside aspect of the facts. And the loyal staff and clientele will still go just to see the band, though .

Massive violence makes 'Under Siege' just another action flick

"Under Siege" falls in the plot department. It fails in the charm department. The only reason to bother with this movie is in the music, the drinks and the music, you don't even have to open your mouth.
