Health plan will now cover partners

The United States will become one of the few educational institutions in the nation to implement a domestic partner health care plan following its approval Wednesday by the Board of Regents.

The health-care plan, which will cover current and former partners of U of I faculty and staff members, will go into effect Jan. 1, 1998, as part of a three-year transition.

The plan was approved after a year's planning effort by the U of I Health and Safety Task Fund. "We think it

"We're pleased," said U of I President Martin K.莹, fund chairman. "We're hoping that by 1998 other institutions will have a plan in place that guarantees the same health care to employees and family members as we have."

The major barrier to implementation was the 5 percent increase in graduate student health insurance premiums.

"We don't want to penalize students,"莹 said. "But we also don't want to raise the cost of students' health insurance, so we're going to have to find a way to make the plan work without a premium increase.

In other news:

"It's a tough decision,"莹 said. "But we believe it's the right thing to do for our employees and their families."
Bigger facilities needed to cope with demand

The Iowa City Emergency Housing Project is planning to move into a new, sprawling mealsoup kitchen due to growing numbers of hungry and needy people who cannot afford to provide for themselves.

Margie Hays, president of the Emergency Housing Project, said the project's current kitchen has been squeezed to the limit by the increased numbers of people using the daily service has increased. "We've always about 50 people a day, all living spread out of a group who are on the street," Hays said. "Now we have a lot more who are on the street who are coming in here for food and shelter."

"We're not taking in, but we are trying to make sure we come in contact with them," Hays said. "Our primary mission is to provide food, but that is not all we do. We are trying to meet people in their needs and make sure they get into programs that will help them in the long run."

Leach: U.S. should play major geo economic role

James Anderson

The first half of the 1990's has not been kind to the U.S. Rep. Jim Leach, Iowa, which has been called "the more secure, more civil and certainly more secure" by the United States of the hemisphere. Speaking before the Iowa City High School foreign language students, Leach cited several areas where the United States would be better served by the hemisphere's geo economic role.

The "broadly based" U.S. policy, he said, "is to work with people all over the world to build a strong world economy."

Leach then framed students' questions under three major themes: preservation of the United States, Euro-Asian relations and Americas in the world. Leach said that America's role in the world would continue to be a "strategic" one. and that the United States will continue to be the world's superpower. Leach said that America's role in the world would continue to be a "strategic" one. and that the United States will continue to be the world's superpower.

Smeal exhortors support keeping flight

Despite the sensational debates on the desirability of school leader Eleanor Doud's move to the University of Iowa's Women's Center, a new group of Iowa City's Domestic Violence Intervention Program called "DVIP" is trying to keep people focused on the problem of domestic violence.

"The Iowa City Women's Center has fumed about the loss of Eleanor Doud, who is now the director of the Women's Center, but beyond that it now exists and beyond, but that is not the point, we are still here," said Susan Smeal, DVIP Chairwoman.

Since Doud's move, DVIP is fighting to keep their program strong and expanding.

Smeal said that the group's vision is to help those who are suffering by "providing services to prevent domestic violence, to respond to domestic violence and to move survivors towards a life free of abuse."

"DDVIP is vital to our community," Smeal said. "DDVIP is there to help women and children who are in immediate danger, and we are here to support them."

Smeal said that since the DVIP's formation, the group has aimed to "provide services to prevent domestic violence, to respond to domestic violence, and to move survivors towards a life free of abuse."

"DDVIP is a vital resource for women and children who are in immediate danger," Smeal said. "We provide support, advocacy, and resources to those in need."

"DDVIP is making a difference in the lives of many," Smeal added. "We are proud to be a part of this important work."

"DDVIP is committed to ending domestic violence," Smeal said. "We work tirelessly to ensure that women and children are safe and protected."

"DDVIP is changing lives," Smeal concluded. "We are committed to making a difference in our community."
Government structure crucial for world order, says speaker

The former U.N. official says regional coalitions are needed.

Lynn M. Leslie

Admitting the question of how to develop a world order is "vast and complex," former U.N. Assistant Secretary General Eric Garretson said that the diminishing of interna tional cooperation and the growing splintering of local government is a "very real worry." He added that to know everything we need to know about the world, we need to focus on issues of "essence," not just "noise." Garretson said that he and his former colleagues in the Secretariat of the United Nations are trying to make the world "less of a mess" and that they have a "green" approach to solving the world's problems.

Regional coalitions developing within the global structure, the European Community, are an important part in the organization of the new world order and the accomplishment of goals.

There is a tremendous building about what the world is like. It's very very hard to say what the world is like. Miller also spoke of the United Nations' significant role in establishing world order and solving international disputes.

"We're entering what I think is a new phase," Miller said, "where we're entering into a situation where there's a lot of uncertainty in the world." He added that world leaders should look past the celebrations in the 20th century to the problems that will be caused by the 21st century. The world will have no borders and military forces. The world will be divided into different regions, which will be in conflict with each other, and the world will be divided into three different regions, which will be in conflict with each other. The world will have no borders and military forces.

We can propose a framework for world order that will be fairly different from the chaos with which we have lived in the last hundred years. Miller said.

He added that the world order is supported by the world's major powers, which are divided into four regions: the United States, Europe, Asia, and the Middle East.

"We're entering a situation where there's a lot of uncertainty in the world," Miller said. "It's a new phase." He added that world leaders should look past the celebrations in the 20th century to the problems that will be caused by the 21st century. The world will have no borders and military forces.

Health care: A right or a privilege?

When I think of the crisis our health system is in, I think of my father-in-law. He spent most of the week in the hospital with heart burns and a heart attack. He is scheduled to have bypass surgery next week. If he had bad AIDs. He did not and he somehow found the $12,000 for his surgery. The cost of his surgery is over $200,000.

On the other hand, I recently heard that the new president of the American Medical Association made a statement to the effect that health care is not a privilege but a right. The AMA is also upholding the right to health care for all. The AMA is also a much larger organization than the AHA.

But despite their often conflicting statements, the two organizations have a common goal: to ensure that everyone has access to affordable health care. The AMA is working to make health care more affordable and accessible to all Americans, while the AHA is focused on improving the quality and availability of health care.

The debate over health care reform continues to rage, with both sides presenting compelling arguments. The AMA argues that health care is a right that should be available to everyone, while the AHA argues that health care is a privilege that should be affordable to everyone.

Ultimately, the decision about whether health care is a right or a privilege will be up to us as a society. As we continue to debate the issue, we must keep in mind the goal of ensuring that everyone has access to affordable and quality health care.

BOSNIAN HIZBULLAH - With boasts and bravado, archeologists are being hailed the killing site of dozens of men, women, and children, some with bullet wounds or broken limbs, in a plot of land the Serb-dominated government tried to designate as a military training area.

The Legal Aid Office of the Bosnian Serb judiciary in the Roman Catholic church and in a report to the United Nations Commission for Human Rights, published on April 16, 1981, said that 1,000 Bosnian Serb men, women and children were killed in the area.

Jabavon, a town near Sarajevo, is situated on a narrow strip of land between the city and the airport where the Serbs have their mainWestern air base.

We were told that a fuel depot had been set up in the area, and that the Serbs were preparing to test new anti-aircraft missiles there.

The archeologists said they were examining a plot of land a few miles east of Sarajevo, where they had found a mass grave containing the remains of at least 200 people, including men, women and children, who had been killed by Serb soldiers.

The Serb government, which controls most of the country, has denied all reports of atrocities.

I fully designed to limit the financial impact to the university's students, and to provide some protection to faculty and staff in the future.

We "think it extends coverage to people who need it and we think this is something that should have been done before."

Several months ago, university, including Stanford and Ohio State, have been considering similar health-care plans, but Rawlings said he believes the UI is the first to actually implement coverage.

He said that other companies with exposure to the university's programs will eventually have to pay more as well.

The Associated Press

When Magic Johnson's next regular-season game at Forum is played Monday, he will return to the Los Angeles Lakers' home court for the first time since he was traded to the Boston Celtics on Oct. 30.

"I'm looking forward to it," Johnson said. "It will be my first game in Los Angeles in a while, and it's going to be good to see some of the people who were there when I played here."

Johnson, who led the Lakers to the NBA championship in 1980, will face his former team for the first time in a regular-season game.

"It's going to be a special night," Johnson said. "I'm going to have a lot of family and friends there."

The world is a stage; you are its actors. But what if the stage you’re on isn’t the one you want? And what if the audience who can’t be seen? What if the audience looks nothing like you?

These questions are suddenly visible to a dark-hearted character when she is cast in the part of Christopher Hatton’s “The Lady’s a Baby.” The play takes place in Jenny Forcier’s apartment. Jenny wants as much attention as her, so she’s become something of a shadow, trying to make contact. She’s going to have to do some growing, and it seems that she can’t outgrow that kind of thing. She’s failure to get these men up with a very important dinner could make or break Jasper’s career. Jenny wants to know that she’s the one with the right answer and the right way of thinking. She’s thinking about Susan B. Anthony and her struggle for women’s suffrage.

“The First Landing of Well-Dressed Men On the Moon!!!” opens tonight at 8 in Theatre B.
