Lone shooting survivor faces the future

Rodolfo-SiOlon continues to keep 'positive outlook'

Anita Johnstone

Rodolfo-SiOlon said she is in a unique position, as a victim of the violence that happened on the University of Iowa campus last fall. She is one of the few students who were actually there when the shootings occurred.

The son of a Chicago police officer, Rodolfo-SiOlon was a senior at Iowa, studying political science. He was in the Union Building when the first shooting occurred, and heard the second one from his dorm room.

"I was really overwhelming, how much people responded to what was going on," she said.

She has been in therapy ever since the shooting, and has been working on writing a memoir about the experience. She is currently working on a novel, tentatively titled "The Last Shot." The novel is set in Chicago, and follows the story of a young man who witnesses the shooting at the university.

Rodolfo-SiOlon said she has been able to connect with other survivors through social media, and has formed a support group for survivors of the shooting.

"We're all in this together, and we're all going through the same thing," she said. "It's really helped to have that support."
Japanese writer spends 4 months as UI teacher

Yoko Aono

The Daily Iowan

Aono, a native of Nagano, Japan, spent four months as an instructor in the UI Department of World Languages and Literatures as part of the Japan-U.S. Friendship International Writing Program. The writing assignment writer from Japan spent more than a decade wandering around the world to satisfy his hunger for a literature. He was offered a position at the University of Iowa to stay in Iowa City for four months to teach Japanese. He seems to be happy with his decision to come to the United States, where he is in Iowa City to teach in the Department of World Languages and Literatures. When he was offered the opportunity to teach at the UI for a semester, Aono took it without hesitation.

However, there are some things that he found difficult to understand about American students. He said, "I found that many American students do not have a lot of interest in learning my language. They seem to be more interested in English, their second language."

On the positive side, Aono said that he enjoyed teaching at the UI. He found it difficult to teach in English, but he was able to make some sense of it with the help of his assistant, who is also a native of Japan. Aono also said that he enjoyed being in the United States and that he was able to travel around the country and see many different things.

In conclusion, Aono said that he enjoyed his time at the UI and that he would be happy to return in the future. He said, "I hope to return to the UI in the future and continue to teach Japanese language and literature."
Students at high risk for hepatitis B

It is one of the eight most commonly sexually transmitted infections and one in 20 Americans is infected with it.

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

A new state program will be launched to educate students from the hepatitis B Foundation, which provides educational materials for educational institutions.

"Get the facts. Then get the vaccine," Kennedy said. "The truth is that one out of every eight people in the United States are hepatitis B positive. Fifty percent of them are unaware they have the disease. Yet, only 15 percent of adults are fully vaccinated against hepatitis B. It can be spread through sexual intercourse, unprotected sex, or sharing needles."

Every fall, director of the Remsa GRAWE vaccine program, said, "With all of the education that’s out there, AHEC, ASAHEC, AHEC, nobody has left out.

"As a consequence of the hepatitis B virus, it can cause liver failure, chronic liver disease, especially sharp hepatitis on the lives of young adults."

The Daily Iowan

Students at high risk for hepatitis B

Forbes reports from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control show 14 Hispanic adults die every day from hepatitis B, which can be transmitted via sex and blood contact. Among those who have the disease, 20 percent die because of the infection.

"In the United States, hepatitis B is the second leading cause of death among liver disease patients. Hepatitis B can be prevented by a vaccination," Forbes said. "The virus can be isolated from the blood and infected with hepatitis B with an antibody injection."

According to the CDC, 11 percent of young adults are hepatitis B positive. Many studies show that 10 years before, the CDC reported that 3 percent of 18-25 year olds were hepatitis B positive.

"The symptoms are very vague, and often they can only finicky symptoms, so people don’t connect them with the disease." Forbes said. "And then health educators have been in place to help people start to recognize the symptoms."

"We’re in an era of ignorance," she said. "There hasn’t been a lot of information out in health education before, but it’s even more in such a manner that people have to start paying attention to it.”

According to the CDC, hepatitis B infection can be spread through intercourse, as well as other types of sexual activity, certain nay be continually passed from family member to family member. Forbes said, "Because hepatitis B is highly contagious, not just those who are sexually active, sexual. And even if there is no risk factor identified in, say, six or seven of those infected, even those who don’t fall into a high-risk category should consider vaccination."

Fears and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration now requires employees to receive their employees’ hepatitis B by 1989, which standard requires that employees be offered hepatitis B vaccination. The CDC issued the recommendation in 1990.

"It’s really, really important jobs that I work around needles and blood. There’s a lot of risk for getting hepatitis B because accidents do happen with needles," Forbes said. "I’ve heard many people, ‘Why should I be better off, which is not the case.’"

Forsberg

Low holiday fares may hurt airlines

Boeing's forecast for international travelers this winter as the airline industry faces a tough year is that airlines will not be able to keep all non-stop air route record

According to Andrew Nordo, an analyzer at Nordo & Associates, Inc. on airlining another firm based in Arlington Heights, Ill., airlines will not be able to keep all non-stop air route record

"It's the same reason as ever," he says, "This is a revenue problem rather than a cost problem, and the airlines are not going to be able to increase fares much to keep these routes going." Nordo notes that the industry's overcapacity during the summer months has led to a decline in fares, which has hurt airlines financially.

"While the number of passengers may be down, the cost of running an airplane hasn't decreased," Nordo says. "And with the cost of fuel and labor rising, airlines are unable to pass on the cost of running an airplane to passengers through higher fares." Nordo predicts that airlines will continue to face difficulties in the coming months as they try to operate on razor-thin profit margins.

Peptide found to protect cells from HIV

Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Duke University scientists say they have created a protein that may prevent HIV from infecting human cells in laboratory tests.

The finding could open the door to a new class of drugs that might stop the virus that causes AIDS. But researchers warned Thursday that there’s a long way to go before the peptide would be developed quickly.

There is some interest in developing this idea into an antiviral drug, and Dr. Don Belcher, director of Duke’s Center for AIDS Research, said his team is working on a patent application. "We’re making plans for that right now."

A report on the advance will be published this week in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

The new protein was derived from a "fragile" protein found in bacteria that are resistant to the virus. The protein has a "fragile" section that allows it to change its shape easily.

The Duke researchers are looking for a way to disarm the virus before it infects the cells.

The team, which included Dr. Rosalind Brooks, Dr. John Moore, a research scientist at the Aaron Diamond AIDS Research Center in New York City, and Dr. Scott Friedman, a biologist at Duke, said they have found a way to prevent the virus from entering the cells.

In laboratory experiments, scientists tested the protein on HIV and human immune cells. The protein protected the cells from entering the cells and also prevented infected cells from killing healthy cells.

The researchers said they repeated the experiment many times, with the same outcome.

The results are a step toward finding a way to stop the virus from attacking the cells.

The research is being funded by the National Institutes of Health.

Iowa voters living there, and have you'll support it? The remaining question is whether members of the Iowa women's movement will vote on the ERA.

The question of whether the ERA deals only with sexual harassment is also raised. Without a doubt, there is a strong future for the ERA, but the women's movement is already taking shape.

We're all concerned about the ERA, but there is a strong future for the ERA, and the ERA needs more support from the women's movement.

The ERA needs more support from the women's movement, and we need to make sure that the ERA is not just a token issue, but a real issue.

Debate blamed for low turnout

"The CBD's " Last minute " issue had little or no impact on the election. If the CBD ran another " Last minute " issue next November, it would be more effective in attracting voters than the CBD's " Last minute " issue this year," said Markoot. "

Promoted increased citizen participation by running Iowa's most efficient, innovative election services. Tom has brought postcard registration, early voting, satellite election locations, and accessible polling places to Johnson County.

Established a service-oriented approach to the Auditor's Office by expanding office hours, computing services, and streamlining paperwork.

Improved county budgeting, making procedures property tax cuts of $2.9 million without cutting county programs.

"If re-elected, I will continue to advocate state-wide and business practices and technology to save your time and your tax dollars. Every dollar saved by my office is another dollar for mental health programs, children in need, conservation, better roads, and other public services."

WASHINGTON - For Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, the campaign season ended much the way it started, with a spotlight on the nation's monetary economy.

President Clinton's chief economic advisor, Lawrence Summers, said the campaign marked the "most significant test of the Clinton administration's economic leadership." The test came in Michigan last month.

Senator Clinton's chief political strategist, James Carville, said last month that the "most important test of the Clinton administration's economic leadership" came in Michigan last month.

He was, he said, "a different kind of Democrat" - one who supported the death penalty and a two-year tax-as well as one who supported gay rights and opposed the ban on school prayer.

Clinton's victory was seen as an endorsement of his vision for the country, and a rejection of the Republican charge that he was "soft on crime." It was also seen as a victory for Clinton's economic policies, and a rejection of the Republican charge that he was "soft on crime." Prior to the Iowa volleyball team's match against the Illinois Fighting Illini on Friday, the Hawkeyes have no match for Illini.

From the outset of the match, it appeared that the Hawkeyes would be outmatched. Illini defeated Iowa with a score of 3-0, 15-2, 15-10. In the end, the Illinois offense was too much for the Hawkeyes to handle.

Iowa went down early to the Illini, losing the first set 15-2. Despite a comeback attempt in the second set, the Hawkeyes fell short, losing 15-10. In the third set, Illinois controlled the game, winning the set 15-2.

Iowa's offense struggled throughout the match, with a total of 33 kills and 21 errors. On the other hand, Illinois had 50 kills and 11 errors.

The Hawkeyes will face their next challenge against the No. 8-ranked Illini despite the loss. Prior to the Iowa volleyball team's match against the Illini, that's quite an accomplishment.

Chicago Bulls on chance at making history

Bull Bernard
Associated Press

Almost everyone you talk to, the NBA likes different.

Said Johnson is back at pace and for the Lakers, but Larry Bird's back won't let him play Charles Barkley is now a frequent flyer. Chicago's director of basketball operations Jerry Reinsdorf decided to give them a try.

One thing hasn't changed, however, for Barkley. The Chicago Bulls are favored to win their third straight championship.

Last season, Michael Jordan became the first player in NBA history to win consecutive regu-sation-season and postseason MVP awards. As each Phil Jackson has been a key factor in the Bulls' success.

Some pups get every isolted task that, too, will be a

McCray, Trent Tucker and probably one more, replacing Cliff Leventag, Bobby Hansen and Gryg Hedges.

The fact that our team has won straight NBA titles, Barkley can't answer eight competitive playoff games from Jordan and Pippen.

"It hasn't been too hard to make the transition. I shouldn't have the attitude that we have to be aggressive to win a chant. But it beats having nothing to show for a season...'

Old West, Johnson's counterpart overseas, the second of Barkley's friends, has a higher impact on the balance of power.

One of those expected to benefit most from Johnson's return is senior Vinnie Davis, who first began to blossom late last season because of injuries to Jordan and Johnson.

"Magic does a lot of things for me, reports me and drives home the point at the right times," Davis said. "We played a lot of small lineups because of injuries and Johnson's injuries.

"My game has gotten better, and his experience and knowledge of the game have been a big help to me.
And actually, there is no doubt on him actually in the game, that makes his game more difficult, psychologically and mentally.

"It is a great season to pick up,
for the Bulls have capitalized on Johnson's knowledge of the game.

Comedy troupe makes light of just about everything

This year’s election has turned out to be particularly entertaining for the actors, off-while not performing, they often entertain the crowd and follow the action on stage as well.

The troupe cannot help but offer themselves as candidates because they, in part, decide what will come out in the characters Ellis Mitchell, a member of the troupe for three years, says his role is very highly structured to give only a hint of a line. One way to trick the audience is to say, ‘You can suffer from it like a disease,' with a straight face. By recreating the show, the audience can deeply understand and laugh at cinema.

MOVIE REVIEW

‘Pure Country’ reflects poorly on cowpersons

Kevin Bailey

The Daily Iowan

It’s been a long time since I’ve had to deal with a character named Ellis Mitchell.

That particular film was written, produced, and directed by the great George Clooney, in 1992. It’s a story about a country singer (played brilliantly by Mel Gibson) who moves to Hollywood to make it big.

In 1992, the film was a box office hit, grossing over $250 million worldwide. But by today’s standards, it’s a bit dated.

The film is set in the 1970s, and was shot on location in the Tennessee mountains. The cast features an impressive lineup of actors, including Mel Gibson, Sam Elliott, Tim Robbins, and John C. Reilly.

The story follows the life of a young country singer named Ellis Mitchell, who leaves his hometown in search of fame in Hollywood. He quickly becomes a sensation, and is soon performing in front of sold-out crowds.

However, things take a turn for the worse when he falls in love with a beautiful actress, played by Julia Roberts.

Ellis must choose between his love for the woman and his love for music. He makes the difficult decision to walk away from his fame and return to his roots.

In the end, he finds the love he truly desires, but realizes that the life he had in Hollywood was not as fulfilling as the life he had back in Tennessee.

The film is a touching story about the importance of following your dreams, and the sacrifices we must make to achieve them.

Despite its age, ‘Pure Country’ remains a timeless classic, and is sure to be enjoyed by fans of all ages.
