UI Cent Anita Verma died of natural causes

Anita Verma, a UI freshman from Lincoln, Neb., died of natural causes, according to the Johnson County medical examiner's report. Medical Examiner Dr. T. Bozek determined the probable cause of death to be anaphylactic shock.

"Anaphylactic shock is a sudden and severe reaction to an allergen," said Dennis Fisher, a Mercy Hospital R.N. He said this type of shock is very rare.

The report indicated that the 18-year-old had a history of allergies and was taking prescribed medications to alleviate symptoms.

Verma died Oct. 18 when she developed respiratory distress in her room in Daum Residence Hall.

Georgia man convicted of assault

A Georgia man was convicted of assault with intent to commit sexual abuse causing injury, false imprisonment, and burglary in the second degree Monday at Johnson County Courthouse.

Karl Knutson broke into a woman's room at the Motel 6 in Coralville on April 9. He used a stun gun to gain control of her, putting welts on her back.

Knutson tied her to the bed with leather restraints. He gagged her with cotton and tied her mouth with a pair of nylons. When Knutson left the room, saying he was going to his car to get a condom, the victim was able to break free and call for help.

Dubuque Telegraph Herald publisher resigns

DUBUQUE — Michael J. Sexton, publisher of the Telegraph Herald in Dubuque and vice president of newspapers for Woodward Communications Inc., has resigned.

Sexton became publisher in February 1989 and a WCI vice president the following May.

Mike Gile, operations manager, will handle the day-to-day activities of the Telegraph Herald until a successor is selected.

High court weighs religious freedom, animal cruelty

WASHINGTON (AP) — A church that practices animal sacrifices told the Supreme Court on Wednesday that government may not ban such religious sacrifices when it lets people kill animals for other reasons such as hunting.

But an attorney for a Florida city that banned animal sacrifices countered that the Constitution does not protect a church's right to kill animals in worship services.

In Hialeah, Fla., "you can kill animals for almost any reason... but not for religious reasons," said Douglas Laycock, attorney for the Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye.

The court's ruling in the case, expected by July, could provide new guidelines for religious freedom that also could affect mainstream denominations.

Ore. voters say they chose the wrong candidate

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Several dozen voters angrily complained that they had mistakenly voted for George Bush because of confusing placement of the candidates' names on the ballot.

"I have never seen such a deceptive ballot in all my life," said Benjamin Siegel, 78, a retired professor from Portland.

"We had about 30-40 angry calls," said Alfredo Wheelock, a lawyer for the state Clinton-Gore campaign. "Some actually voted for George Bush because the box is closer to Clinton than Bush."

Area voters surprised by failure of ERA

Yokota Masuo
The Daily Iowan

The failed passage of the Equal Rights Amendment to Iowa's Constitution Tuesday surprised some opponents and depressed most of its supporters.

Iowa failed to be the 17th state to add equal rights provisions to its constitution by a 4 percent margin of voters.

Nathan Swanson, a UI junior who voted against the ERA, was taken aback when he learned the outcome of the voting on television late Tuesday night because the previous poll predicted that the amendment was likely to pass.

The rejection disappointed Lauren Peake, a UI graduate student who voted for the ERA, but it didn't surprise her as much.

"I was hoping it would go through," she said. But Peake expected the consequence, to some extent, because of the "horrifyingly negative" campaign of ERA adversaries. The equal-payment issue between men and women was one of the issues which drove Swanson to vote against the amendment.

The wage differences between men and women stem from economic issues, not solely from discrimination, he said.

"They cannot change the economic problems by making laws," he said. "That's not the way you can change the situation."

Peake voted for the ERA because she didn't find any strong reasons to reject it.

"I don't see how I could vote against it, because basically it's just a change of wording," Peake said.

Regarding the amendment's failure to pass, Peake said that while anti-ERA organizations gave clear-cut reasons to object to the amendment, pro-ERA organizations didn't provide clear-cut reasons for its approval.

Terri Monk, a volunteer for Students For Equality, agreed.

"It's unfortunate that a lot of people might have believed the propaganda which the Stop ERA people used," Monk said.

Michael B. Clark, president of Students Against ERA, said the abortion issue was a strong force for many people to become involved in the anti-ERA movement.

"But the abortion issue is not the only one," he said. "All things combined, there is such a cloud and doubt hanging over the other issues."

"If you are not sure what you're voting for, or how this amendment will affect Iowa, there is no reason to vote for it," Clark said. "Proponents of this amendment couldn't produce any substantial reasons to vote for it."

Margaret Duffy, a UI teaching assistant in the School of Journalism and Mass Communications, was in favor of the ERA, but she shared with Clark a similar view to the strategies by pro-ERA organizations.

"Basically all they did was say 'go ahead and vote for the ERA, it can't hurt,'" she said.

It was extremely difficult for pro-ERA groups to cope with the exceedingly negative campaigns of anti-ERA groups on abortions and alternative lifestyles, Duffy said.

"Many of the strategies pro-ERA people used were good," she said. "But the mass-media advertising had some problems. They should have been more specific to show how the passage of ERA would be beneficial to a relatively passive group of voters."

As to the future possibility of passing a similar amendment in Iowa, Duffy thinks it is possible.

"To make this happen, pro-ERA people are going to have to be well-funded and tough, I mean really tough, to anti-ERA people," she said.

SHIFTS IN POLICY EXPECTED

Clinton to implement major changes

President-elect intends to focus on jobs, health care, family leave

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America, meet your new president.

Bill Clinton wants to ban assault weapons. He wants to guarantee family leave from jobs. He will push for a national examination system to measure the progress of students and schools. He wants to guarantee — by law — a woman's right to abortion.

Across a wide swath of government policy, a sea of change is coming.

Executive orders signed by George Bush and Ronald Reagan are up for review. Bills they vetoed are being resurrected.

An activist government is stirring after 12 years of Republican attempts to restrain Washington's power.

"Clinton is a young leader who has a clear message about solving some problems in society," said James Thurber, director of American University's Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies. "That alone will bring a great sense of change. This is a historic election." The economy was issue No. 1, and the centerpiece of Clinton's campaign was a stimulus program built around a $20-billion-a-year spending plan for highways and bridges to create jobs. Longer term, he'll seek investment-tax credits for new plants and equipment and a capital-gains tax cut for new business.

He wants to raise taxes on Americans with household incomes over $200,000 and cut taxes for middle- and lower-income workers.

Beyond Clinton's highly publicized promises on the economy and health insurance, though, are numerous other unequivocal positions that lay a blueprint for his administration.

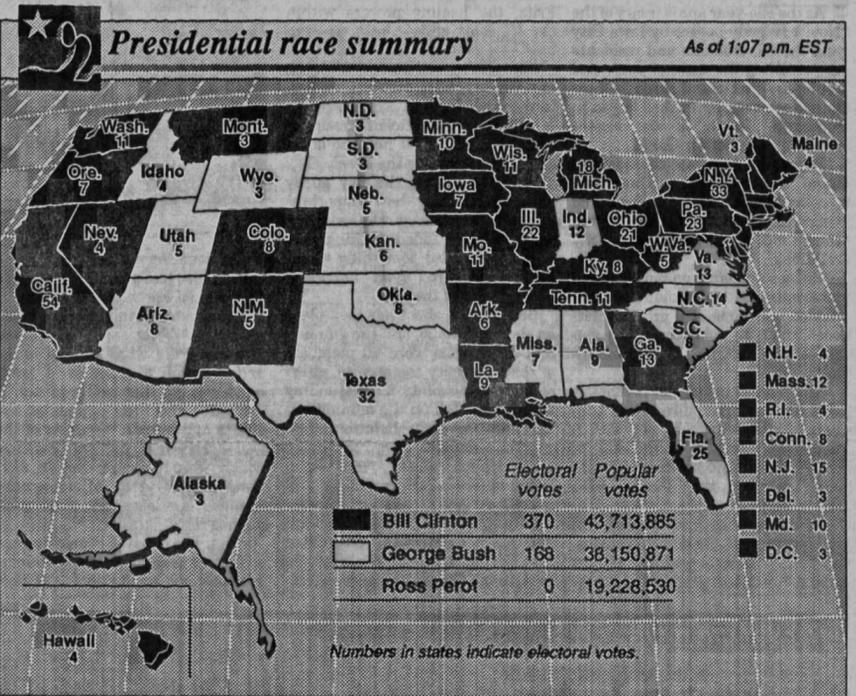

He has pledged to sign the Brady

"Clinton is a young leader who has a clear message about solving some problems in society."

Bill requiring a waiting period for handgun purchases. He wants to ban offshore oil drilling where rigs are not already in place. He wants a law to prohibit companies from hiring permanent replacements for strikers.

Clinton says homosexuals should not be excluded from the military. The number of American troops in Europe would be cut to 75,000 to 100,000 under Clinton rather than the 150,000 ceiling set by President Bush. Clinton says allies should shoulder more of the burden.

He wants a system under which states would automatically register people to vote when they apply for driver's licenses. He is willing to spend $8.25 billion on the atom-smashing superconducting supercollider projects. He says he'll repeal most Bush policies on abortion.

To combat crime, Clinton wants to put 100,000 new police officers on the streets through a national police corps and other means. He supports the death penalty.

He wants to limit carbon-dioxide emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2000 to reverse global warming. For cars, he wants to phase in a 40 mpg auto-fuel efficiency standard by the turn of the century, although he has wavered. He would set national water-pollution runoff standards. He is committed

DEMOCRATS STILL AHEAD IN SENATE

Iowa Republicans gain narrow lead in House

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Statehouse Republicans ended a decade in the political wilderness as unofficial returns gave them a slender majority in the House and narrowed the Democratic lead in Senate.

Those results from Tuesday's vote left Democrats clinging to a 26-24 edge in the Senate while Republicans held a razor-thin 51-49 margin in the House.

Recounts were a certainty in a handful of tight elections, but top Republicans in the House already were burning up the phone lines Wednesday in intense campaigning for new leadership spots suddenly open to them.

House Republicans set a Nov. 13 meeting to elect new leaders. Votes still were being counted in some key Senate races.

House Democrats were to meet on Saturday to elect a new group of floor leaders.

"We lost a lot of close ones," said House Speaker Bob Arnould. "I think it's safe to say there weren't a lot of coattails at work."

Republican Gov. Terry Branstad declared "we had a pretty good night" and pledged to meet with new leaders quickly to begin mapping an agenda.

"I think this is going to be the most cooperative group of legislators I've had a chance to deal with," Branstad said Wednesday. "That changes the whole dynamic of it."

Branstad has faced a Legislature dominated by Democrats since he was elected in 1982. He said the narrow split would force compromises on all sides.

"The margin is going to be close enough that neither party is going to have clear domination in either house," Branstad said. "We're going to have to all work together."

The results leave the Legislature deeply divided on partisan lines, but significantly more conservative.

Anti-abortion forces on Wednesday were already renewing their vow to seek new restrictions when the restructured Legislature convenes in January.

Well before that, hot leadership fights were certain among both parties and in both chambers.

The biggest changes would come in the House, where Republicans would pick a new speaker, majority leader and heads of all of the various committees that sift legislation.

It was a stunning setback for Democrats and the second consecutive election where the party has fared poorly at the Statehouse. In all, the Democrats lost three seats in the Senate and six in the House.

Gov. Terry Branstad

They had started the day holding 29 Senate seats and 55 in the House.

More than a third of the 150-member Legislature will be made up of new faces.

Reapportionment meant that everyone this year was running in a new district, and that jumbled legislative politics enormously. All 100 House seats were up for grabs, while 32 Senate seats were on the line.

Redistricting also set up nine races where sitting members of the Legislature faced each other.

Republicans won six of those contests.

46TH BILL VETOED

Bush nixes urban-aid, tax measure

Christopher Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Wednesday made good his threat to veto the $27 billion urban-aid and tax bill, killing the measure because of its tax increases on businesses and upper-income Americans.

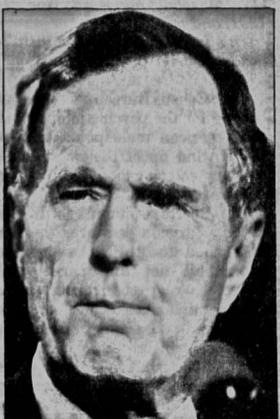

He signed the veto on Air Force One as he flew home in defeat from Houston, Texas. Bush's action kills the measure because Congress has adjourned for the year.

It was Bush's 46th veto, several coming after last month's adjournment. Only one veto — of a bill tightening regulation of the cable-TV industry — has been overridden.

"I am withholding my approval... because it includes numerous tax increases, violates fiscal discipline and would destroy jobs and undermine small business," Bush said in a written message.

The tax bill contained elements of Bush's stalled blueprint for revitalizing the economy and luring businesses to hard-pressed inner cities and rural areas with enterprise zones.

But Bush said, "The urban aid provisions that were once the centerpiece of the bill have been submerged by billions of dollars in giveaways to special interests."

Some Republican lawmakers as well as Democrats had urged the president to sign the bill and nursed hopes that he would do so despite his pre-election vow not to raise taxes again. Congress delayed sending it to the White House after final passage on Oct. 8 in a vain attempt to change Bush's mind.

Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, was "disappointed but not surprised" by the veto, said a committee aide who declined to be identified by name.

The measure would have expanded tax breaks for individual retiree- See VETO, Page 7A

TRAGEDY INCREASED AWARENESS

Unusual activity monitored closely

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

In response to the shootings by Lu Gang last Nov. 1, awareness of suspicious activity on campus has risen among UI faculty members, according to William Fuhrmeister, director of the UI Department of Public Safety.

"Everyone is more willing to speak out when things aren't looking quite right," he said.

Fuhrmeister said that phone calls to the department reporting concerns about odd behavior in UI students or staff members have become more frequent.

"I think that the incident has made the faculty more aware of different behaviors," he said. "They are making us more aware in cases where a student or a faculty member is acting strangely."

More than likely, neither advanced phone calls nor increased campus security would have prevented the shootings, Fuhrmeister said.

"What we had last year was a well-planned and deliberate murder," he said. "With this kind of a thing there was nothing we could have done to prevent it. We could have had people in every building and it still could have happened."

Since last November, the public-safety officers have been told to take more safety precautions before advancing a potentially dangerous scene and to carefully evaluate each site before approaching it, Fuhrmeister said.

UI Department of Public Safety Lt. Mike Laing, who was on duty during the shootings, said that besides an increased awareness of risky situations, he has seen little change in the way officers handle their duties around campus.

"It has made everyone a little more aware and alert of things," he said. "Instead of looking at things like nothing could ever happen, the incident has made us more careful when approaching situations."

Laing agreed with Fuhrmeister that there has been a noticeable increase in calls reporting strange behaviors among students and requesting that an officer be present in possibly unsafe situations, like a meeting with a student who has been displaying odd behavior.

"This scare is not something that is going to go away for awhile," Laing said. "It has marked every-Fuhrmeister added that the blue-cap phones which are to be installed this month would not have been a preventable measure for the shootings. He did say the phones would be helpful in cases like vandalism or assault, and that they will provide a way to quickly contact officers in the Department of Public Safety.

DEALINGS WITH MEDIA PRAISED

University Relations' role still remembered

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

As the one-year anniversary of the Nov. 1 tragedy passes by Iowa City and the UI, students and residents are recalling the wave of panic and confusion that raced through their minds when news flashes began to announce details of the violent shooting spree of Lu Gang.

Ironically, the face conjured up more often than Lu Gang's in recollections of that shocking and tragic day is that of Ann Rhodes, the UI vice president for university relations.

Rhodes appeared on national and international television as she fielded questions at a press conference about the shootings, the status of the victims and the assailant.

Also putting in long hours that day was Joanne Fritz, director of University Relations, who sat with a telephone answering questions for the television and radio media that couldn't reach the Rhodes press conference.

At that point, Fritz had been in her position for only two months, and had been building a new friendship with T. Anne Cleary, the associate vice president for academic affairs killed by Lu Gang. According to both Rhodes and Fritz, the healing process within the UI community continues even now — a year later.

Both also agreed that observing an anniversary memorial was important to that healing process.

"A year is a significant amount of time," Fritz said. "It helps to bring a certain closure to the event."

"We couldn't let the day go by without realizing how important and extraordinary the victims were," Rhodes added. "I think a lot of people needed something tangible to recognize what happened and remember them."

Because the shootings took place on the UI campus, and the gunman and his victims were all members of the university community, much of the responsibility for responding to the crisis fell on the administration and University Relations.

"It was unusual to have that much concentration under one institutional umbrella," Fritz said.

Fritz praised the instant cooperation between the UI and the local and state authorities. She noted that having so many people willing to help out "made a lot of aspects of the situation easier."

Fritz also had generous words for Rhodes and her work that night.

"Ann is something else in a crisis — a rock," Fritz said. "We almost intuitively did what we had to do, and we didn't know we'd work hand-in-hand that well together."

Rhodes and Fritz applauded the efforts and human resources of the University Counseling Service, which were instrumental in alleviating the grief of mourning friends, families and community members.

Fritz, who received counseling herself some time after the shootings, admitted she was temporarily emotionally numb, but her feelings eventually "thawed."

"After awhile I got so caught up in busy activity that I had to postpone my feelings," Fritz said.

Rhodes said the UI is taking reports of threats and violent behavior much more seriously now. She remained unsure, however, whether a crime of such "viciousness and cold-bloodedness" could be prevented in the future.

"We're definitely monitoring threatening behavior more closely," Rhodes said. "But I don't know why he did it, and if you don't know the motivation you really can't prevent it."

THE PHYSICS OF REVENGE

Examining Lu's grievances with his professors, department

Jim Mann
Los Angeles Times

Editor's note: References to the gunman and other Chinese persons in this and all DI stories follow the Chinese tradition of putting the family name first.

This article by Mann, originally printed June 7, 1992, in the Los Angeles Times Magazine as "The Physics of Revenge" is a definitive look at what happened Nov. 1, 1991, and why.

This is the fourth of five installments. Reprinted with permission.

If the Census Bureau ever goes out looking for the psychic midpoint of the American male population, it might wind up at the Sports Column, a watering hole just off the University of Iowa campus.

The Sports Column features a dozen television sets over the bar (all tuned to ESPN), a practice basketball net and three pool tables. There are banners of sports teams (particularly Chicago's: the Cubs, White Sox and Bears), girls still trying to imitate Farah Fawcett and beer that sells for 75 cents a draft. On Thursday nights, when the weekend juices begin to flow and the jukebox blares John Mellencamp, the Sports Column offers Hula-Hoop tournaments and limbo contests.

The bar became, in effect, the setting for Lu Gang's transition to American life. "My favorite public place in Iowa City is the Sports Column," where I have been around for about five years," he wrote in one of the letters he left for the newspapers. "I made lots of friends and inevitably some jealous enemies there. They have the prettiest girls in town." Lu's car, a gray-blue 1985 Chrysler Laser, carried a single bumper sticker: "Td rather party at the Sports Column."

By late 1987, two years after Lu Gang arrived in the United States, there were some clear indications he was unhappy with physics and desperate to change his life. Margaret Brooke, a pleasant woman who works in the university's office of international education, recalls that about that time, Lu came to her asking to find a way to replace his teaching assistant's income. But the business school, which doesn't have the physics department's need for research aides, turned down Lu's request for a stipend or a teaching job, and the idea fell through. Lu's files show that in November, the university's department of electrical and computer engineering also rejected his request for a transfer.

He was trying to date women, particularly Americans, and apparently wasn't above paying for sex. "When some new Chinese student arrived and asked about girls, Lu said, 'I know someone, you can just pay her $50,'" recalls Chi, his former roommate. "He seemed to know the whole underground scene, prostitution and so forth. One vacation, he went on a trip to Las Vegas, and when he came back and was showing the pictures, there was one with a showgirl on his lap, and Lu Gang was talking about the price, $70 or $90."

Lu claimed in his letters that he had met some girls at the Sports Column. He also placed at least one personal ad in The Daily Iowan, the campus newspaper, attracting a couple of tentative, inquisitive responses. "We are two beautiful women who are wondering why you must go to such lengths just to find someone to 'share good times and quiet moments with,'" says a letter in his files. "What are your goals, and what the hell do you look like?"

Later, in his last letter to his sister, Lu wrote, "Though I am single, I have had a few girlfriends. ... After I came to the States, I had liaisons with Chinese and American women, with single and married women, with girls of good families and girls of the streets."

But these words may well have been a bit of braggadocio and a lot of fantasy. Despite all of Lu's efforts, no one recalls seeing him — a short, plain, bespectacled man — with a regular girlfriend. Chi says Lu never brought a woman home to their apartment. On the night after passing his comprehensive exams, a graduate-school milestone, Lu Gang celebrated not with a girlfriend, but with fantasy. He saw his first American movie, the story of an unmarried couple: "About Last Night," starring Demi Moore and Rob Lowe.

Lu grew increasingly remote from his family in Beijing. He was entitled to one free trip home and had planned to go back in the summer of 1987. But he held off after Goertz invited him to Paris. He again intended to go home in 1989, but had to cancel once more because of the upheaval in Tiananmen Square. After the pro-democracy demonstrations started, other Chinese students say, Lu's parents urged him not to come home to the tumult.

Feng Wei, another Chinese physics student, recalls that when he was home in Beijing one summer, Lu's brother-in-law brought over a suitcase of Chinese herbs and snacks for delivery to Lu, then pumped

QUESTIONNAIRE RESPONSES COMPILED

Report shows homophobia part of UI climate

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City may not be as liberal as it seems to be, at least on the issue of homosexuality.

The UI Council on the Status of Women, in conjunction with the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Staff and Faculty Association, released a report last week that suggested the Iowa City community may not be as progressive as is commonly thought.

The report is the first of three phases of surveys attempting to examine the climate for gays, lesbians and bisexuals at the UI. It was conducted by the subcommittee on Campus Homophobia and Lesbian/Gay Concerns, which is composed of members of both organizations.

This first phase exclusively surveyed self-identified members of the gay, lesbian and bisexual communities, and the report outlines results from questionnaires sent to 95 people. The second phase will survey a random sample of UI faculty and staff while the third will focus on a random sample of UI students.

Having studied results from similar studies on other university campuses, subcommittee Chairwoman Dee Ann Casteel, assistant professor in the UI College of Pharmacy, said her committee was interested in documenting the local climate.

She said several UI services and programs, including the Human Rights Committee, Student Health Service and the Affirmative Action Office, received poor comments.

The report also shows that while many respondents feel the UI has a strong human rights policy, they do not think it is strongly enforced. In fact, 75 percent of the respondents felt it necessary to conceal their sexual orientation some or much of the time.

One respondent wrote, "The university should back up its human rights policy by actively punishing people who discriminate against gays and lesbians."

Another stated, "In the Campus Review 'Back off, Faggot' incident, it became clear that higher officials at this university are not concerned at all with combating homophobia."

However, Virginia Melroy, subcommittee member and librarian in the UI College of Law, stressed the limited nature of the data in the first phase, explaining that these respondents were not a random sample.

LACK OF HUMAN RIGHTS DISCUSSED

Activist tells of injustices against Honduran people

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

"Honduras has been an ignored country, it is a country for sale," said Dr. Juan Almeyda, a Honduran human rights activist, environmentalist and women's rights advocate.

Almeyda spoke Wednesday night in the Illinois Room of the Union about effects that Honduras and the United States have on each other due to what he called "military, economic and political occupation."

After giving a short background of recent Honduran history involving U.S. foreign policy, Almeyda explained that multinational companies, most of which have U.S. monetary ties, are greatly responsible for supporting a chain of human and environmental travesties.

"The banana plantation is like a green desert," said Almeyda. "It doesn't grow anything else besides the bananas."

Examples Almeyda used of the environmental destructiveness of the banana industry were: nonbiodegradable plastic waste, jungle clearing, pesticides — some of which can't even be used in the U.S., and chemically hazardous working conditions for the people.

"Contaminated meats and bananas don't go to the U.S. but to the Honduran people," Almeyda said.

In addition to environmental injustices, Almeyda said there was a lack of basic human rights and unfair treatment of women.

Almeyda told a story of a woman who was raped by nine American soldiers and was left naked along a road only to be found by Honduran police and raped again.

"The life of the family depends on women," said Almeyda. "If you make terror in society where women are the target then the whole family is afraid."

He warned that increasing poverty and injustice along with deteriorating working conditions and environmental changes could lead to injustices for the American worker.

Almeyda said that the solution lies in people from both countries working together.

"In order to change this world, we must first change ourselves," he said.

He said his travels have given him new hope for the human race.

"This hope is that we might learn from what we are doing," Almeyda said.

Feng for information about why they were losing contact with him. Indeed, after a few years, his parents appeared almost desperate. Zheng Feng, a high-school classmate from Beijing, wrote Lu in April 1991: "Your father urged me to contact you. . . (He) called me, telling me that from Spring Festival (in January) until now, you have never written a single word to your family, and your mother was worried about you."

About the same time that his family was wondering what had become of him, Lu was having new problems with physics, with his thesis adviser, Goertz, and with Shan.

Shan and Lu were working simultaneously on doctorates for Goertz. And while Lu was good in physics, Shan was better. Feng Wei took a course in general relativity with the two of them and reports that Shan got one of only two "A's" in the class of 30. Lu got an "A-minus." "Shan worked much harder than Lu Gang," says another Chinese physics student who knew both of them. "He was genuinely interested in physics. But Lu Gang was not that interested."

For his dissertation, Lu chose to do research with Goertz on the "critical ionization velocity phenomenon" — how certain gases in space behave when electrically charged. Shan's Ph.D. thesis was on the rings of Saturn. By all accounts, Shan's work was a stunning success, and Lu's was not.

"Lu didn't seem to have the talent for seeing what the trick was in these research problems," says Dr. John Lyon, a physicist working in the plasma physics group headed by Goertz. Unlike Shan's, Lu's thesis didn't break new ground and lacked the same degree of relevance, according to Lyon. "If you don't have that talent, even if you do the course work very well, you're at a disadvantage for research."

Some Chinese students say that Goertz was particularly tough with his students, openly criticizing them. Lu complained regularly that Goertz was exploiting his grad students, working them too hard, insisting that they do long hours of research at low pay. "Both Lu and Shan had pressure from Chris Goertz," says Wu Li. "If the boss had been nice to both of them, they would have had a more relaxed relationship. As it was, whenever the two of them came together, you could tell they were competing very much."

Despite the difficulties, Lu seemed to keep his hopes up until last year. He finished his doctoral thesis and began applying for jobs. Then, in April, he went in for oral exams on his thesis, before a committee composed of members of the department, and bombed out. Lu had particular trouble with the questions from the department chairman, Dwight Nicholson. Lu later admitted that he was "exposed brutally to both personal humiliation and emotional anguish" at his thesis defense. He blamed Goertz for failing to tell him beforehand what he was expected to do.

That evening, Ulrike Goertz remembers, her husband came home upset. "Lu Gang made a fool of himself," he told her. Goertz was also angry at his friend and colleague, Nicholson, for hammering away and making Lu look bad. "Lu Gang did not defend himself well, but you should not humiliate a student like Dwight Nicholson did," he said. Lu was required to make some quick modifications to his thesis. But in one respect at least, the damage was done.

Each year, the University of Iowa gives out the D.C. Spriestersbach Dissertation Prize, a cash award of $2,500 for an outstanding doctoral thesis. The prize rotates among various disciplines, and in 1991 it was to go to a student in the natural sciences. The physics department had been asked to submit recommendations. According to Ulrike Goertz, Nicholson, as chairman, had originally asked if he could submit two names, Shan and Lu. But in late April, after sitting through Lu's troubled defense of his dissertation, Nicholson decided — on his own, Ulrike Goertz says — to submit a single name, Shan.

Lu found out about the decision on April 26, apparently when he came upon a memo Nicholson wrote congratulating Shan on his nomination for the prize. That afternoon, Lu told Goertz he was "very upset" about the decision. Lu was still revising his own thesis, which would be finished in only a couple days, yet Nicholson had already nominated Shan's dissertation. Shan won the award. Goertz didn't think the award mattered much. "It's not very important for (Lu's) future," he told his wife. Other Iowa physicists agreed. "That prize isn't even important in this department," says Gerald Payne, then acting department chairman. "And no one outside this university would even know what the award is." Besides, Goertz told Ulrike, Shan deserved the award more. He had spent more time at Van Allen Hall, making better use of Goertz's supervision, and the thesis reflected that fact.

Still, Lu was furious. He decided to fight back, but in ways more familiar to America than to China. He turned to legal appeals — and to guns.

RESOLUTION PASSES

Voters adopt Amendment 2; duelers may now hold office

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa elected officials can't take anything worth having from lobbyists. They can't become lobbyists themselves for two years after leaving office. But now they can fight a duel and still hold office.

Iowans voted Tuesday to remove language from the Iowa Constitution that said anyone who participated in a duel "shall forever be disqualified from holding any office."

With 94 percent of the precincts in, the vote was 497,780 or 57 percent in favor to 371,790 or 43 percent opposed.

If You're Ready For Serious Music, You're Ready For Technics.

DESIGNED ON THE PRINCIPLE THAT THE BEST INTERPRETATION OF A PIECE OF MUSIC IS YOUR OWN.

The Technics SA-GX530 A/V Receiver lets you express your own ear for music. That's because it has a 3-band parametric equalizer which gives you more flexible control over the sound. It's almost like you're conducting the music with endless variations at your fingertips. You can even highlight specific instruments. For example, you can emphasize a cool riff of the saxophone, or boost the bass line of a hot guitar solo.

And if you don't feel like choosing the equalization setting every time, our receiver will do it for you. You can store three equalization settings in its memory and recall them at the touch of a button. The Technics SA-GX530 also has an intelligent remote that controls the components of your A/V system — TV, CATV, VCR, CD, and tape deck. And it's pre-programmed to be compatible with most existing brands of equipment and can learn the commands of many others.

Our receiver can be the heart of your audio-visual system. And since it lets you interpret music in your own way, you can be the soul.

SHOW TO INCREASE ALCOHOL AWARENESS

Comedians advocates moderation

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

With Alcohol Awareness Week at the UI winding down, the Health Iowa is sponsoring a comedy group rather than a lecturer to convey a message of moderation.

UI Health Iowa Active Director Cathy Barnett said the group is distributing information to students about the dangers of drugs and alcohol and is promoting the theme "Think Soberish. A Message of Moderation for Alcohol Awareness Week."

"We are not abstinence-based," Barnett said. "We're trying to promote low-risk drinking."

The feature event for the week is an appearance by the improv comedy troupe, ComedySportz, tonight at Macbride Auditorium. The group is based in Madison, Wis., and has appeared at campuses throughout the Midwest, including a stop at the UI last Halloween.

Barnett explained that the performers divide themselves into two teams and compete in whatever event the audience suggests. The audience then gets to vote on which team performs better.

"It's pretty interactive," Barnett said. "It's fun."

To promote the event, sponsors including Health Iowa, UI Student Health Service, and Zephyr Copies gave out free popcorn at the Union Wednesday and will distribute "mystic" soda water today. The sponsors are also giving out facts and information about drugs and alcohol. Door prizes including compact discs, pop and movie tickets will be raffled off tonight as well. Barnett said the sponsors are focusing more on distributing information through the media rather than scheduling activities.

"We're not going to have so many activities," Barnett said, adding that Health Iowa instead will be concentrating on ComedySportz.

Barnett said that some people have wondered why a comedy group was chosen to be featured in a week dedicated to alcohol awareness.

"We were just trying to think of things that are educational and fun," she said.

Barnett added that many students may be planning to go out drinking before or after the performance and the show may serve as a reminder to observe moderation.

ComedySportz will perform at 8 p.m. in Macbride Auditorium. The show is free and open to the public.

Journalist discusses Russia's woes

Anne Johnston
The Daily Iowan

One of Russia's top television newswomen gave a UI audience Wednesday her impressions of the political and economic changes taking place in the "stormy sea" of her country.

Tat'iana Komorova, one of three principal anchors on Russia's nightly news program — "Novosti" (News) — discussed a wide range of problems plaguing the former Soviet Union as it struggles to transform its economic and political systems.

"It is impossible to change people at once, even if an idea is very good... like democracy," Komorova said.

Classifying current Russian politics as a "rather dirty business," Komorova discussed the continuing power struggle between increasingly unpopular President Boris Yeltsin and the country's Parliament.

While there appears to be no political figure ready to step in and take his place, she said there is a possibility that the Parliament may call for Yeltsin's impeachment when its deputies gather for their upcoming December meeting.

In addition to his ongoing battle with Parliament, Komorova said Yeltsin is waging a mass-media campaign against rival Gorbachev, whom she declared politically "dead."

"Both the left and the right blame him for the collapse of the old Soviet Union and the economic difficulties now present," she said.

Komorova said the current rise of nationalism presents a "tremendous danger" within the already collapsed Soviet Union. She said it threatens to disintegrate the former republics even further as regions assert their independence.

"The disease of nationalism is likely to spread throughout the world and it could be even more dangerous than the Cold War that we had for many years," she said, citing the current fighting among the former republics of Yugoslavia.

If Russia can "get on its feet" soon, however, it could bring some stability to the former Soviet Union, she added.

In its attempt to do so, Komorova said, Russia must pave its own path of economic development and not "wear somebody else's dress," citing a Russian saying.

Popular UI professor lectures on art of teaching

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

Teaching can be a difficult and often unenjoyable profession, even for Jay Holstein, the UI's most popular professor.

Bad teaching conditions and short attention spans were some of the problems Holstein talked about Wednesday afternoon in his speech, "Teaching, Teachers, and Students: The Art of Teaching."

"Once you start taking yourself seriously, go to a mirror and examine yourself, or stop teaching and become an administrator."

Jay Holstein, UI religion professor dom," Holstein said. "In the course of my 22 years here I have witnessed a great variety of reactions from students. Sometimes it's hostility and sometimes people just get up and walk away."

Using examples is the best way to keep a student's attention, Holstein said.

"There's one thing that works," he said. "Examples. The more graphic, the more personal they are, the more you can bring people back."

In his speech, Holstein also discussed the importance of teaching and the impact it has had on his own life.

"All of us know that teaching is one of those arts that can make a difference," he said. "I've had teachers who have made a difference in my life, and I remember them with gratitude and respect."

Speaking of problems he faced when he first began teaching at the UI, Holstein discussed the more difficult aspects of teaching.

"I taught a class, and about three people signed up for it, two of whom dropped it right away," Holstein said. "That hurt, it really hurt. No students, empty rooms... over the years it got a little better, but there are still chinks in the armor."

Holstein advised the group, consisting mainly of education majors, not to let their ego get the best of them in teaching.

"The No. 1 pitfall for a teacher is to subsume the ego in search of the art," he said. "Once you start taking yourself seriously, go to a mirror and examine yourself, or stop teaching and become an administrator."

"The great enemies in the classroom are indifference and bore-

Joe Pesci

Jay Holstein

Loreen Fordice, a graduate student in the education department who attended the speech, said Holstein is one of her role models.

"I had him five years ago for my 'Quest for Human Destiny' class," Fordice said. "I've never exchanged a word with the man, but he's one of my top three teachers who's had an impact on me." Lisa Gelman, a UI junior elementary-education major who attended the speech, was impressed by Holstein.

"I think he's an absolutely dynamic speaker," Gelman said. "He's an inspiration for anyone who wants to teach."

DANGERS OF HEPATITIS B DISCUSSED

Health officials explain low availability of vaccine

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Although hepatitis B is one of the eight most common sexually transmitted diseases and is 100 times more contagious than HIV, Iowa City residents may discover finding a clinic that offers the vaccination hard to find.

Hepatitis B is the only sexually transmitted disease that can be prevented through vaccination. Often overshadowed by the AIDS virus, the disease claims 14 lives each day and one in 20 Americans is infected with it.

The Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, Planned Parenthood and the Iowa City Family Planning Clinic do not offer the vaccination or testing for the disease.

Paula Laube, a physician's assistant at the Family Planning Clinic said that patients requesting the hepatitis B vaccination are referred to the Free Medical Clinic, Iowa City Family Practice Clinic or UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"The tests include serial blood testing, so we refer the patients to another clinic because we can't guarantee anonymity," Laube said.

The Free Medical Clinic does not provide the vaccination, but they do administer the shots. Clients can request testing, but the vaccination must be purchased through a drug store and then be brought back to the clinic in order for the vaccination to be administered.

"The vaccination is very expensive. It has to be given three different times, so the cost tends to add up."

Larry Afifi, nursing supervisor at UI Student Health Service

According to Jack Crowell, office manager at the Family Planning Clinic, vaccinations are performed only on patients of the practice.

"This is not a walk-in clinic," Crowell said. "If there is a reason that a patient wants a shot, a physician will evaluate the background and exposure risks, but it's not routinely looked for."

The same routine holds true for the UI Hospitals and Clinics and Mercy Hospital. Patients must make appointments with physicians and receive prescriptions for the shots.

Hepatitis B is closely linked to college students, with 75 percent of all cases striking adolescents and young adults between the ages of 15 and 39, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

For UI students who want the vaccination, their best bet may be Student Health Service.

According to Nursing Supervisor Larry Afifi, students can walk in and request the vaccination at the front desk.

"We don't ordinarily test for hepatitis B, but if students have specific reasons to assume that they might be infected we will run the test," she said.

Afifi said one reason that the vaccination is not readily available may have to do with the cost, which is $40 per shot.

"The vaccination is very expensive," she said. "It has to be given three different times, so the cost tends to add up."

Afifi said that the shots are required for health-science students.

"Hepatitis B is a blood-borne pathogen and health-science students are at a high risk for getting this organism during the course of their work," she said.

An increased number of students have been taking advantage of the vaccination, Afifi said.

"This is a growing issue at all college campuses in the U.S. about whether we ought to be getting more information out about it," she said. "It's possible that we'll be doing some health education about who should be getting this vaccination and who is at risk."

CAMPUS SEES ELECTION-DAY VANDALISM

Political graffiti mars UI buildings

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

The 1992 presidential election is over but the UI may be paying for the efforts of overzealous campaigners for some time.

Against the brick background of Seashore and Van Allen halls' outer walls, the efforts of political vandals can be seen, spray painted in big black letters: PEROT '92.

Although UI officials do not yet know how much it will cost to remove the paint, UI Department of Public Safety Director William Fuhrmeister said he has come to expect a certain degree of Election-Day vandalism.

"It's not any more excessive than what happens during rallies," he said. "We don't ever want it to happen, but we do expect it to happen when there are elections and other political events."

James Howard, UI associate director of building operations and maintenance, said it can take Physical Plant workers a couple of hours to remove spray paint from buildings, a process that can be quite costly.

Using a high-pressure water spray, the cost of removing paint can run up to $30 an hour, Howard said.

Regardless of cost, Howard said, UI workers have become quite adept at removing paint over the

David Guttenfelder/The Daily Iowan

After the presidential election, the mark of political vandals remains on the walls of Van Allen hall.

"A couple of years ago it was the Zodiac that was being spray painted on the buildings," he said. "In recent years it hasn't been as bad as it was about 10 years ago."

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said she was disappointed people have chosen to use UI buildings to express themselves.

"We try to encourage people to have a little more respect for UI buildings," she said.

Spray painters were not the only ones making Election Day mayhem Tuesday. According to Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department, one person was arrested for campaigning too close to a polling site.

Lihs said his office received calls throughout the day that ERA supporters were demonstrating within 300 feet of several polling places. State law requires that all political activity must be done outside that distance.

Most demonstrators were persuaded to move away from the polling places, yet one woman was arrested after she ignored repeated requests to move away from her post, outside the Robert A. Lee Recreation Center.

"We asked her to leave three times but she just wouldn't," Lihs said.

Although there were no other election-related arrests Tuesday, Lihs said, Democrat Party leaders reported that over 100 political signs were vandalized throughout the day.

"We had a lot of signs stolen and kicked over," Lihs said. "In the off years things are usually pretty quiet, but in presidential election years, things heat up a little."

Show features women's out-of-home trade

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

Home-based businesses owned by women will be featured at a three-day exhibit and sale in Montgomery Hall at the Johnson County Fair Grounds.

Holiday Marketplace, which runs today and Friday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., will display the products offered by 16 local businesses operated by women out of their homes.

Mary Lea Kruse, co-chairwoman of Holiday Marketplace and owner of Artists Concepts, said the market will offer a chance for these businesses to be recognized by the community.

"These are real-life businesses — because we don't have storefronts, many people have no idea of the size of these businesses," Kruse said. "Some sell their products nationally."

Some of the items that will be for sale include baskets, wreaths, flowers, jewelry, clothing, pottery and holiday ornaments.

Linda Brisben, co-chairwoman of Holiday Marketplace and owner of Spice of Iowa, emphasized that the market is not a craft show.

"This is more of an artisans type of show," she said. "These are businesses that operate year round. It's more in the line of artisans and manufacturers who don't sell directly to the public."

Admission to the show is $1 and will go to the Iowa City Public Library for women's career-development materials.

"We want to provide material for women, or anybody, who wants to get back into the world of work or start a business," Brisben said.

Holiday Marketplace is an annual event and this is its fourth year. Over 1,500 people attended the show last year, and Kruse said she is expecting more to attend this year's show.

Kruse said the event was inspired by individual shows of a similar nature.

"People would often have shows in their homes," she said. "We decided to band together and have it in a public place to get more women together and make more of a community statement."

LEGISLATURE

 Fort Madison ousted Republican Sen. Mark Hagerla of West Burlington.

In a battle of incumbent House members from Cedar Rapids, Republican Ron Corbett beat Democrat Kay Chapman 58 percent to 42 percent. In a race pitting Council Bluffs area House incumbents, Republican Brent Siegrist beat Democrat Emil Pavich 55 percent to 45 percent.

Republican Rep. Stewart Iverson beat Democrat Rep. Janet Adams 57 to 43 percent in a north-central Iowa showdown, while Democratic Rep. AMICollie beat Republican Rep. Bob Johnson in the Clinton area.

Besides losing two-thirds of those pairings, Democrats were on the short end in three of the four races where sitting House members were turned out of office.

Republican Ruhl Maulsby of Rockwell City was retired, but so were Democrats Donald Knapp of Cascade, Mark Shearer of Columbus Junction and Joyce Nielsen of Cedar Rapids.

There were some razor-thin races certainly headed for recounting, none more narrow than an apparent 42-vote victory for Jesup Republican Joseph Kremer over Democratic Sen. Larry Murphy of Oelwein.

Democratic Rep. Gordon Burke of Marshalltown had a 54-vote margin over Republican challenger Tom Bower. Republican Mona Martin topped Democrat Jim Lykam by 53 votes in their eastern Iowa House race.

VETO

 ment accounts, renewed tax breaks for research and restored the targeted jobs tax credit.

But it also included such tax increases as limiting the deduction for job-related moving expenses to $10,000, requiring individuals with sizable amounts of income not subject to withholding and large corporations to pay more tax in advance and taxing securities dealers' inventories at market value.

AFTER THE RACE, WORK STARTS IN EARNEST

D.C. begins preparing for new administration

David Espo
 Associated Press

President-elect Clinton pledged Wednesday to "spare no effort to restore jobs, growth and incomes" as he contemplated the first Democratic administration in a dozen years. The party's top leaders in Congress offered cooperation and a fast start on setting the economy right.

President Bush flew home to a heroes' welcome at the White House and said he would "cooperate fully" with the man who defeated him. "It's been a wonderful four years and nobody can take that away from us," the president told supporters and members of his administration who gathered to greet him.

On the morning after his victory, Clinton took a brief hand-in-hand sidewalk stroll with his wife, Hillary. "I am happy, exhausted, thinking of all the work to be done," said the president-to-be. Asked his plans for the day, he replied, laughing, "I am going to be taking a nap."

He also arranged a meeting with the leaders of a pre-election transition team.

In remarks aimed at business and financial leaders, Clinton said later that "although change is on the horizon, we understand the need to pursue stability even as we pursue new growth."

To the voters, he said he would "get up every morning and work hard" on tackling the nation's economic difficulties. "It will not be easy, but we will spare no effort to restore growth, jobs and income to the American people," he said.

Foreign leaders were getting in touch. British Prime Minister John Major announced he had sent the 46-year-old Clinton a message. "We live in a troubled and often disorderly world and I look forward to working closely with you as you lead the United States in pursuit of our shared goals," he cabled.

In the statement he read to reporters, Clinton reaffirmed the "essential continuity" of American foreign policy, and reminded allies and potential adversaries alike that the nation's affairs of state remain in Bush's hands as long as he's president.

Already the transfer of power was shaping up. In a government building a few blocks from the White House, work crews installed telephones, spackled walls and worked on a security system in preparation for the arrival of the Democratic planners who will build the nation's new government. Clinton and Vice President-elect Al Gore aside, the newly elected members of the Democrat-controlled Congress looked ahead to their terms in office, including 22 additional women in the House, 16 additional blacks, and six additional Hispanic legislators.

Four new Democratic women were elected to the Senate, including two from California.

Carol Moseley Braun, D-Ill., the first black woman elected to the Senate, was asked what she thought when she found out she had won. "Praise the Lord," she said.

In a round of television interviews, House Speaker Tom Foley and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, often at odds with Bush, said they would cooperate well with the incoming administration.

CHANGE

to eliminating the production and use of all ozone-depleting chemicals as soon as possible.

Clinton wants to cut defense spending by about $100 billion by 1997. He intends to scrap the massive spaced-based defense system known as Brilliant Pebbles. He wants to build another Seawolf submarine and shrink the Navy to 10 carriers instead of 12.

Clinton would give Head Start enough money to cover all eligible 3-year-olds as well as older preschoolers. He would make college aid available to all, to be repaid through community service or as a percentage of future income. Every employer would be required to pay a 1.5 percent payroll tax for federal training and education programs.

He will push the trade agreement with Mexico but wants to negotiate additional safeguards for U.S. workers and industries. He would toughen sanctions against Haiti, make favorable trade terms for China dependent on respect for human rights and set up Radio Free Asia. He will restore U.S. money cut off by Bush to the U.N. population-control program.

Clinton will seek the line-item veto. He will increase spending for AIDS research. He would put a two-year cap on welfare benefits, during which time a recipient would be helped with education, training and child care. After that, those who can work would have to. He wants to raise the earnings limits on Social Security benefits.

He says that scientific findings — not economic dislocation of workers — should be the sole criterion in determining whether wildlife should be protected under the Endangered Species Act.

Arlene Levinson

Associated Press
 The Clinton electoral landslide was accompanied by a term-limited tidal wave, as 14 states imposed brakes on how long members of Congress may serve. But these laws faced immediate challenge — in the courts.

Hours after Florida voters approved term limits by a 3-to-1 margin, a suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Tallahassee, seeking to block the new rules. Others challenges were expected elsewhere.

"If they take this to the courts, the courts are going to say to them, you are taking it to the wrong people," said Jim Coyne, a former Republican congressman from Pennsylvania who organized Americans to Limit Congressional Terms, one of several such groups. "We view this as an unstoppable tidal wave," he said.

Adoption of term limits in states ranging from Florida to California means about one-third of Congress is now subject to mandatory turnover.

But few voters seemed interested in changing representatives on Tuesday. Among 28 U.S. Senate incumbents seeking re-election, 23 kept their jobs, as do about 93 percent of 349 U.S. House incumbents.

The same goes for state legislators. One in five — about 1,500 of the nation's nearly 7,500 state lawmakers — retired, lost primaries or were shoved out by redistricting. Among those who survived to Election Day, 92 percent won re-election.

The University of Iowa Community Credit Union offers the best CD rates in town. Take for example our 12 month variable rate certificate — a full percentage point above the competition with the potential to go even higher — a feature you can't get with their fixed rate CDs. In fact, the floor on our 12 month variable certificate is 4.0%, making our low higher than their high. Interest on a UICCU variable rate certificate compounds monthly, not every quarter like many of theirs. And if you want a shorter or longer term, we offer the best rates on most of those too. As always, your funds are federally insured up to $100,000. Remember, if you live or work in Johnson, Washington, Muscatine, Iowa, Louisa or Cedar counties you are eligible for credit union membership. Just the sort of advantages you'd expect from your credit union.

Oklahoma State wrestling put on probation

Oklahoma State University President John Campbell, left, and Coach John Smith field questions from the media after the Cowboys' wrestling program was placed on probation through 1996.

Owen Canfield
Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — The NCAA came down hard on the Oklahoma State wrestling program Wednesday, banning the Cowboys from postseason competition this season and eliminating new scholarships for this school year and next.

The NCAA's Committee on Infractions said several major violations were uncovered, but that the school's cooperation kept Oklahoma State from getting the "death penalty," which would have meant suspension of the program.

The committee said the program, which has 29 national titles to its credit, may not provide official visits to recruits until after Aug. 1, 1993. It also said wrestlers on scholarship cannot compete in non-intercollegiate competition this school year.

The committee also extended

Oklahoma State's probationary period for an additional three years, to Jan. 5, 1996. The school was placed on four years' probation in January 1989 for violations in the football program.

The university said it did not expect to appeal the findings or the penalties.

The wrestling violations date to 1985 and occurred under former coach Joe Seay. Seay was suspended with pay in May 1991 and was not rehired when his contract expired this summer. The committee banned Seay from working at any NCAA institution for five years without first going before the Infractions Committee for permission.

The violations included providing cash and other benefits to red-shirted wrestlers so they could wrestle in open meets, and employing recruits in summer camps and giving them benefits. See COWBOYS, Page 2B

Hockey players ranked

Three Hawkeye field hockey players rank among the top 20 on the national scoring list, released Wednesday.

After becoming Iowa's all-time leading scorer and tying the Big Ten mark, junior forward Kristy Gleason is now tied for first in goals scored with 30. Old Dominion's Maaike Hilbrand has scored 30 goals in 20 games, while Gleason has played in 16. Gleason also ranks fourth in the country with 34 points.

Senior Jamie Rofrano is third in assists with 20 and ranked sixth with 30 points, while senior Kris Fillat is tied for 18th with 17 points.

Devlin not selected finalist

HOUSTON — Florida State linebacker Marvin Jones, Washington offensive tackle Lincoln Kennedy, Alabama defensive end Eric Curry, and West Virginia center Mike Compton have been selected as finalists for the Lombardi Award as the nation's top college lineman. The winner will be announced Dec. 3.

Iowa center Mike Devlin was one of 12 semifinalists for the award.

Lineman Player of Week

NEW YORK — Erik Williams of the Dallas Cowboys earned a rare honor for an offensive lineman on Wednesday when he was named the NFC's offensive player of the week.

Minnesota's Jack Del Rio was named NFC defensive player. Ken O'Brien of the New York Jets was named AFC offensive player and Cincinnati's Alfred Williams earned defensive honors.

It is only the fourth time in the eight years the offensive player award has gone to an offensive lineman. Brad Benson of the New York Giants won in 1986, Chicago's entire offensive line in 1990 and Washington's Jim Lachey last season.

Magic speaks out on retirement

NEW YORK — Fear and ignorance forced Magic Johnson to retire a second time from the NBA, the player says in an interview with Chris Wallace that will air Thursday night on ABC News' "PrimeTime Live."

Johnson said in the interview that he was "helped out" of the league by his fellow players, including Karl Malone of the Utah Jazz, who played with Johnson on the U.S. team that won an Olympic gold medal at Barcelona.

Fry tries to put season in perspective

John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry has been able to laugh and joke recently, which is a testament to his ability to put things into proper perspective.

Like he said prior to last weekend's 38-15 loss to Ohio State, a football game isn't going to change "whether you eat your breakfast the next morning. It's not life or death."

But with only three games remaining in a disappointing season, Fry is starting to wonder if he's done all that he could with a team that was ranked No. 10 by both the coaches and media last season. And he admitted that despite the laughing and joking, this season has been tough on him.

"You take it harder because you start to question yourself," Fry said at Tuesday's weekly press conference. "You know this is a good technique, this is the way to block, this is the way to play defense and you coach it and stay with it."

"And yet when it doesn't happen that way in a ballgame, you start to question yourself."

The Hawkeyes (3-6, 2-3) head into Saturday's contest at Indiana without any hope of a winning season. And, little hope of a bowl berth. The team's predicament has more than just Fry questioning things.

"I wonder if it's leadership. I wonder if we've done enough as seniors," said Scott Davis, a member of an Iowa offensive line that was hailed as one of the best in the country prior to the start of the season.

But injuries and one of the toughest schedules in the nation have decimated the Hawkeyes' front five. Only preseason all-American Mike Devlin and backup Hal Mady have escaped injury this season.

Davis and linemates Ted Velicer, Mike Ferroni, Bob Rees and Matt Purdy have all been sidelined at one time or another while the Hawkeyes have plummeted to ninth in Big Ten rushing and have given up close to 30 sacks after allowing 11 all of last season.

"It's tough. I don't know how else to describe it," Davis said. "I don't know if I'm mad. I'm disappointed. I expected more out of us. ... I kind of feel that something hasn't been provided to this team that's really needed."

"It just makes you think as a senior of what a great job in the last couple years that the seniors have done, and if we've gone wrong somewhere. Losing brings up so many questions and makes you wonder about yourself and your own beliefs."

Fry called last year's 10-1-1 season "a picnic compared to this year." The Hawkeyes started the season playing four Top 25 teams in their first five games, coming out a disappointing 1-4 after starting last season 4-1.

"The quality of the opposition this year is much better than we've had. And that psychological thing of not winning early and establishing has an impact that we can't judge," Fry said.

According to Davis, the Hawkeyes seemed to turn it up a notch against highly-ranked teams like Miami (24-7 loss), Colorado (28-12 loss) and Michigan (52-28 loss) while letting down versus unranked opponents like Purdue (27-16 loss) and Ohio State.

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Danan Hughes insists the Hawkeyes are not down despite a two-game losing streak.

"I'm just wondering where our performance against Miami was against Purdue? Where was our second-half performance against Michigan at against Ohio State?" Davis asked. "How can we play so darn good against great teams and play so terrible against teams of about the same caliber as us?"

"It makes me wonder where people are. The games are 90 percent mental, it kind of makes you wonder where these guys are at mentally, if they're off in some zone."

But Davis admitted that losing six games this early — the earliest in Fry's 14 years in Iowa City — has taken its toll on the team.

"Last year as the season wore on, we became more confident. Maybe a little more cocky. We felt invincible by the end of the season," he said.

"Once you start doubting yourself, you're done," Davis added. "Unless you're sure of yourself — that you're going to beat the guy in front of you — you're going to get beaten. If you doubt yourself, it's over."

Fry still doesn't know exactly why his team is playing so poorly, why the team's two leading tacklers are safeties, why the team's leading rusher has 441 yards and why the kicking game continues to flounder.

"That's what the coaching staff is trying to figure out each week," Fry said. "Either we're doing a poor job of coaching or the young men are doing a poor job of responding."

Senior split end Danan Hughes, who has caught only five passes since spraining his left ankle against Michigan Oct. 3, says the Hawkeyes shouldn't be counted out.

"I don't think we're down at all," he said. "We just have to realize that we can win these last three games. The seniors and everybody have been talking about not going out as losers."

Four Hawks to face top competition

Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

Four members of the Iowa women's tennis team will go head-to-head today against the best players in the Midwest, as they begin opening round singles and doubles play in their final tournament of the fall season.

All 11 teams from the Big Ten are expected to compete in this weekend's Rolex Regional tournament at Michigan State, as are perennial tennis power Notre Dame and a host of other top teams.

According to Hawkeye coach Micki Schillig, the team goal this weekend is to mirror its performance two weekends ago at the Riviera All-American Championships in California, before taking it Coach Micki Schillig one step higher heading into next spring's Big Ten season.

"We've never made it past the second round before, and I want to see everybody go all the way through this time," said Schillig, who saw two of Iowa's three singles players fall in their opening round. See WOMEN, Page 2B

Schulman grows into Hawkeye 'spark plug'

Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

He was 17 years old and facing the same decision that all soon-to-be college freshmen encounter — where to go to school.

But for tennis player Eric Schulman, that decision was more complicated by having to choose a university not only on an academic level, but also for its tennis program.

So, considering that his stepfather, Rod Schroeder, had been the University of Illinois' top men's tennis player in the late '60s and early '70s, it was evident he would carry on the family tradition and become a Fighting Illini.

Well, maybe for some, but not for Schulman.

"My decision to come to Iowa rather than Illinois had a lot to do with (Coach) Steve (Houghton), and I wanted to go to a school where academics was stressed equally with athletics," said Schulman, an English major currently pursuing an interest in teaching. "The coach at Illinois always seemed to be really forceful about coming to practice no matter what. Steve always took into consideration that we have things going on here other than just tennis."

"Once I saw the Iowa campus and facilities, I didn't want to go anywhere else," Schulman added. "I also had a couple of friends on the team at the time (Paul Buckingham and Jay Maltby) and that also helped me make my decision."

Schulman started playing tennis at the age of seven when Schroeder began hitting balls to him from across the net. But while most youngsters learn to play from the back of the court and work their Eric Schulman way forward, Schulman learned to play in the opposite direction.

"My dad started me out as a very aggressive, serve-and-volley player," Schulman said. "He would hit balls to me from the baseline and I would volley them back. Although this isn't considered to be

OSU Wrestling

STILLWATER, Okla. — Here is a look at the sanctions imposed on the Oklahoma State wrestling program by the NCAA Committee on Infractions and a summary of the major violations uncovered:

SANCTIONS

1. A three-year additional probationary period imposed on the school. The probation will expire Jan. 5, 1996. Oklahoma State had been placed on four years' probation in January 1989 for football violations.
2. No postseason competition in wrestling during the 1992-93 season.
3. No additional athletically related financial aid may be awarded in wrestling prior to Aug. 1, 1994.
4. No expense-paid visits may be provided in wrestling prior to Aug. 1, 1993.
5. No members of the wrestling team who are receiving athletically related financial aid may compete in non-collegiate competition during the 1992-93 academic year.
6. The university may not provide financial or other assistance during the 1992-93 and 1993-94 academic years to student-athletes to compete in any wrestling competition, other than regularly scheduled intercollegiate competition.
7. No members of the wrestling coaching staff may be involved in any non-collegiate wrestling activities within a 30-mile radius of Stillwater prior to Aug. 1, 1994.
8. No student-athlete may participate in any summer camp during the summers of 1993 and 1994 at which any member of the Oklahoma State University wrestling coaching staff, or any former member of the university's wrestling staff who was found to have been involved in a major violation, has any affiliation.
9. The institution's team standing in the 1992 NCAA wrestling championship shall be stricken from the record.

10. If former coach Joe Seay seeks employment as an athletics department staff member at an NCAA-member institution during the next five years, he and the involved institution must appear before the Committee on Infractions; the committee will consider whether the member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of NCAA legislation. Those procedures could limit that coach's athletically-related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

VIOLATIONS

1. Former coach Joe Seay lied about his involvement with violations, convinced an assistant coach to "work out a story" to confirm Seay's explanation and induced several student-athletes to provide false and misleading information about events in which they were involved.

4. Prospective student-athletes were employed in summer camps and provided them with transportation, free enrollment and other benefits that are considered inducements under NCAA legislation.

WOMEN: Boros prepared to bounce back

matches at last year's tournament in Madison, Wis. "As was indicated from our performance at the tournament in California, we know that we can play tennis on a very high level."

Sophomore Laura Dvorak, last year's Big Ten Freshman of the Year who lost in the third round in last year's open-draw, single-elimination format, heads the Hawkeye singles contingent. She is joined by senior captain Andrea Calvert and freshmen Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette. Calvert will pair up with Dvorak to play doubles as well.

Last week at the Riviera tournament, Dvorak lost in the opening round of qualifying to No. 6 seed Jill Craybus of Texas, but it was the farthest any Iowa women's tennis player had ever reached in a nationally-based competition.

Willette fell just short of joining Dvorak in the qualifying round by losing her fourth and final match of prequalifying, as did Calvert, who fell in three sets in the third round.

"They realize that they are capable of competing on a national level," Schilling said. "Now it's just a matter of putting it together in one tournament and playing their best tennis."

Boros, who suffered a sprained ankle in the first set of her opening round match two weekends ago, said that the swelling has subsided and that she is ready to make amends for her early departure in California.

"I've been taking it kind of easy during practice the past week, and it should be OK during the course of the tournament," Boros said. "I was disappointed (by the injury) because I felt I was playing confidently, and I had a pretty good draw. But I knew that I still had this tournament, so it wasn't too bad."

"I'm just going to push my ankle hard this weekend and then give it a good rest until we resume competition next semester."

SCHULMAN: Earns high praise from coach

the accepted way to teach, I think it's a better way to do it because it helps players be more aggressive both at the net and the back of the court.

"It also helps eliminate unnecessary errors caused by over-preparing. You are just more instinctive to hitting the ball."

Despite his father's success at Illinois while playing at the No. 1 position and earning all-Big Ten honors, Schulman, an all-conference selection his senior year at Niles West High School in Skokie, Ill., said that he never put any pressure on him to mirror his accomplishments.

"He knows what my potential is and he doesn't expect me to duplicate what he did," said Schulman, who, along with Schroeder, was ranked No. 3 in the nation in father-son doubles in 1991. "He supports whatever I do, and he understands what I can and cannot do."

While numbers are important and the won-loss record plays an intricate part in comparing the achievement of players, Houghton says that Schulman has shown him success in ways other than just putting a "W" in the win column.

"One of the things that I admire most about Eric is his commitment to the team and sticking with it," said Houghton, who played for Iowa the same time that Schroeder played for Illinois. "A lot of guys who don't get to play doubles until they're sophomores and singles until they're juniors would just give up. But Eric's not like other guys."

"I can't remember a time when he's ever rolled over and given up. He's one of the most feisty, most competitive guys on the team."

Schulman agrees. "I think, more or less, that I'm mostly a fighter," said Schulman, who recorded a 4-6 mark in the Big Ten at No. 4 singles last spring. "I'm not the fastest guy and I'm not the most consistent. But I get through a lot of matches just by hanging on and getting through when it's crunch time."

"My job isn't really to be the top guy on the team," he added. "I'm kind of the 'spark plug' — the guy who gets everyone motivated and fired up during the matches."

"All along he's been real supportive of the team, even when he was a freshman and wasn't playing at all," Houghton said. "He'd be into every match cheering on his teammates. He's the epitome of the team player. It's his last year, and I know that he'd like to end it on a high note."

Schulman, who is slated to graduate in May, says that of all the things he will miss once he hits his last forehand or punches his final volley, his teammates — his friends — will be missed the most. "I'll miss the team camaraderie and competition a lot," Schulman said. "I've made a lot of good friends who've helped on the court as well as off the court. But one thing I know I won't miss is running Carver three times a week."

COWBOYS: Banned from NCAA tourney

considered inducements by the NCAA.

"I have a hard time understanding why the athletes are being penalized again," said coach John Smith, referring to the fact the Cowboys canceled their first-semester schedule last year while clearing up eligibility questions about some wrestlers.

"I think Oklahoma State will be able to overcome it. My concerns now are with the individuals."

The wrestlers were not available for comment. School officials said they needed more time to grasp all aspects of the report.

This is the fourth time in 14 years that Oklahoma State has been placed on probation. The football program had sanctions levied against it in 1978, '80 and '89.

"There is no stretch left in the rubber band as far as this university is concerned," said D. Alan Williams, chairman of the Infractions Committee.

Williams, a professor at Virginia, said there was a "clear lack of institutional control at a time when the university was on probation for major violations."

He pointed out that the school was directed after the football probation to develop a compliance and rules-education program to prevent further violations.

"While it is significant that no additional violations have been found in football since the previous hearing, it is obvious that no effective compliance program had been introduced for wrestling," he said.

Seay was suspended with pay in May 1991 after admitting he had misled investigators. The committee said Seay lied about his involvement, convinced an assistant coach to come up with a story to fit him, and persuaded several wrestlers to mislead investigators.

The committee said Seay "was not familiar with basic NCAA rules and regulations, or ignored them, provided no rules-education for his staff and did not seek interpretations of rules from athletic department staff members charged with compliance."

Seay's attorney, Stan Ward, said the penalty against Seay was "a little harsh" compared with what other coaches have received in similar instances.

The violations were made more serious, the committee said, by the fact that they occurred under an athletic director who was a former wrestling coach. That was a reference to Myron Roderick, who resigned in early 1990.

University president John Campbell said the school has done five things to ensure compliance in the future:

— He interviews all coaches before they are hired.

— The school recently hired a new director of athletic and academic services who answers to the provost and vice president for academic affairs.

— The school soon will hire a full-time athletics compliance coordinator who will report to the president.

— The school is preparing a comprehensive summer camps policy manual.

— Virtually all of the faculty council's recommendations concerning academic experiences and successes of student athletes have been implemented.

"Oklahoma State University has the nation's richest wrestling heritage and we intend to preserve and build on that tremendous reputation," he said. "We're going to ... come back strong and we will come back in compliance."

Consistency from senior Judy Bornholdt helped the Hawkeye women golfers take 17th at the 18-team UCLA/Pioneer Golf Classic in Temecula, Calif.

Iowa, in its final tournament of the fall season, finished with a score of 334 to beat Pepperdine.

Bornholdt led the team, carding rounds of 82-83-84 for a total of 249.

"We were all hoping we would have done better," Bornholdt said.

"It was okay, but I was hoping for a better score."

"I think Judy Bornholdt was probably the most steady player for us and actually, she ended up being our lowest scorer," Coach Diane Thomason said. "I think what always impresses me about Judy's play, particularly in this tournament, is that she had a good up and down percentage. She got the ball up and down when she needed to and that's impressive on a golf course like this."

Sophomore Jennifer McCullough had the second best score for the Hawkeyes, finishing with a 252. Jenny Nodland, a transfer from Minnesota with freshman eligibility and junior Stacy Boville both had a three-day total of 261.

"We're just an average team right now and we're going to get better," Thomason said. "Today 83, 84 was the average that we shot and I know this group can shoot in the 70s, and we're just going to have to get back down there again."

"I feel like we did a lot better job with our short game," Thomason added. "It may not really show in the score, but we made a lot of good saves, sometimes for bogey."

The biggest problem all season for the Hawkeyes has been their consistency, according to the Iowa coach.

"We just can't hit the shots when we need to," Thomason said. "We have a good collection of shots and we can all stand on the driving range and hit the ball straight, but when we get under pressure and we know it counts for something, we can't always pull it off."

The Hawkeyes won't see action again until March 20 when they travel to Arizona.

BASEBALL

Despite not even making the Brewers' opening day roster, shortstop Pat Listach proved to be good enough to win the American League Rookie of the Year Award on Wednesday.

Listach voted top AL rookie

Former Hawkeye pitcher Cal Eldred takes fourth in the balloting, including one first-place vote.

NEW YORK — Pat Listach, who failed to make the Milwaukee Brewers' opening day roster, was voted the American League Rookie of the Year on Wednesday.

The Milwaukee shortstop was chosen first on 20 of 28 ballots and received 122 points in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Cleveland outfielder Kenny Lofton was second with 85 points, followed by Seattle pitcher Dave Fleming with 23 and Milwaukee pitcher Cal Eldred with 22. Lofton got seven first-place votes and Eldred one.

"It came as a surprise, the difference in the voting," Listach said during a news conference Wednesday at Milwaukee's County Stadium. "I expected it to be a lot closer. I didn't know if I'd come in first or second."

Listach hit .290 with one homer and 47 RBIs. He also stole 54 bases to break the Brewers' previous rookie record of 30, set by Paul Molitor in 1978.

"I didn't set any goals," Listach said. "I didn't even expect to be here this year."

"I was new to most of the other teams in the league. Off the bat, early in the season, they didn't know I would run. I got a few cheap stolen bases. As the season went on, it got harder."

Rookie manager Phil Garner sent Listach to the minors in his first round of spring training cuts, figuring Bill Spiers would be his regular shortstop. But Spiers didn't recover from offseason back surgery and the Brewers called up Listach one day after the season started.

"It's a long way once you think about it. I expected to start the season in Denver," Listach said. "I was fortunate enough to come in on opening day and get some chances to start."

"We all felt like he had the qualities to be an exciting player," Garner said. "We just didn't realize he would do it this soon. He was consistent all year. It seemed like just about every night he did something to help us win a ball game."

"It's hard to imagine how far I've come in the last eight months," Listach said.

Listach, 24, was supposed to be a utility player when the Brewers brought him back but his speed eventually earned him a starting role.

Listach, a switch-hitter with a .250 average in four minor league seasons, led all rookies in hits with 168 and scored 93 runs.

"He came up here and he was going to sit but he kept himself ready," Garner said. "He's played well in all aspects. He kept impressing me until I decided to give him more playing time."

Milwaukee made Listach its second-round pick in the 1988 amateur draft. He played on the Arizona State team that advanced to the College World Series championship game against Stanford in 1988.

"He improved by leaps and bounds over the season," Milwaukee infield coach Tim Foli said. "He's not the kind of rookie who's in awe of what other players can do. He says 'I can do it, too.' We knew he was a great athlete, but he's also a great student."

Lofton hit .285 with five homers, 42 RBIs and 66 steals in 78 attempts for the Indians. Fleming was 17-10 with a 3.39 ERA for the Mariners and Eldred went 11-2 with a 1.79 ERA in 14 starts after Milwaukee brought him up.

Pac-10 barnburner pits tough defenses

No. 1 Huskies and No. 12 Wildcats tied for second-best defense, yielding a scant 9.3 points per contest.

Rick Warner
Associated Press

If you like high-scoring shootouts, you'll probably be disappointed by Saturday's game between No. 1 Washington and No. 12 Arizona.

Each team is allowing only 9.3 points per game, tied for second-best in the nation. Washington hasn't allowed a rushing touchdown in its last five games, while Arizona hasn't given up a touchdown in the first half all season.

The Huskies (8-0) and Wildcats (5-2-1) are particularly good at stopping the run. Arizona is No. 1 in rushing defense, limiting opponents to 54.9 yards per game. Washington has been almost that good the past five weeks, giving up only 77.2 yards per game on the ground.

While Arizona has a slight edge in defensive stats, Washington has better offensive numbers. The Huskies are averaging 29.4 points and 391 yards, compared to Arizona's 23.5 and 289.8.

Washington uses two quarterbacks (Mark Brunell and Billy Joe Hobert) who have been Rose Bowl MVPs, while the Huskies' best offensive weapon is Napoleon Kaufman. The sophomore tailback averages 100 yards rushing per game, and is one of the most dangerous kick returners in the country.

Arizona's offense has struggled at times, but appears to be improving. Senior quarterback George Malauulu has thrown for 862 yards and five touchdowns, while sophomore Ontwaun Carter leads the team in rushing with 640 yards and six TDs.

Arizona needs a victory to stay in the Rose Bowl hunt. Washington must win to maintain its bid for a national championship and second consecutive perfect season.

The Huskies won the last two meetings by a combined score of 108-10, but they're only favored by a touchdown Saturday ... WASHINGTON 17-7.

Eclectic Kronos returns once more to Hancher

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

Question: What do politics and string instruments have in common?

Answer: The Kronos Quartet. This unique eclectic foursome has taken the range of their music to its limits by questioning, celebrating and attacking policies, people and events in the world.

They will share some of these ideas with Iowa City during their concert at Hancher Auditorium tonight.

The quartet consists of first violinist David Harrington, second violinist John Sherba, violist Hank Dutt and cellist Joan Jeanraud. Their unprecedented and unparalleled style ranging from punk to chamber music, has caused Rolling Stone magazine to label them "classical music's fab four."

"All the Rage," is a musical protest against the violence suffered by gays and lesbians.

Thursday's performance will feature the world premiere of "How It Happens (Words of I.F. Stone)." Commissioned for Kronos by Hancher Auditorium, the work is a musical tribute to maverick journalist and political philosopher I.F. Stone by composer Scott Johnson. Stone edited I.F. Stone's Weekly and had liberal commentaries appear through syndication in magazines throughout the country.

In "How It Happens" patterns and intonations of Stone's speech from several of his lectures are transformed into music.

Stone was considered by many to be a voice of conscience for the American system.

"We have to begin to think of ourselves as a family," Stone said in a 1983 speech. "We have to begin to enjoy the differences in the human family like we enjoy the differences in a garden of flowers... and there's very little time left to muster this broader vision against the ancient, conditioned reflexes and psychoses of mankind and his homicidal tendencies. But

Michael Lavine

The controversies and confrontations of America's political season will be reflected in the concert of the Kronos Quartet tonight at 8 in Hancher Auditorium.

The concert will include the world premiere of the Hancher-commissioned "How it Happens (Words of I. F. Stone)."

either we learn to live together, or we die together."

Another piece which will be performed at the concert is "All the Rage," a musical protest against the violence suffered by gays and lesbians, especially during the San Francisco riot following California Gov. Pete Wilson's veto of a bill designed to protect gays and lesbians from discrimination. It was written by composer Bob Ostertag and features text by Sara Miles. Actual screams, angry voices and sounds of destruction taped during the riot are electronically processed and incorporated into the work.

The group's only nonpolitical work will be the Quartet No. 5 by Phillip Glass.

The Grammy-award-winning Kronos Quartet's performance includes sets, costumes, lighting and production design.

The event is supported by the Inter-Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts and by Hancher's friends through Hancher Circle for the Performing Arts.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. Tickets for Kronos are $20 and $18. UI students qualify for a 20 percent discount, and tickets for people 18 and under are half price.

Hancher Box Office is open from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays and 1-3 p.m. on Sundays. Tickets can be purchased at the box office or by calling 335-1160 or 1-800-HANCHER.

BANDS

Big Citizen says farewell as it plays its last gig tonight in Iowa City.

Big Citizen says ciao before changing name

Tim Rissman
The Daily Iowan

If you have missed Big Citizen of late, you'll get the chance to reacquaint yourself tonight when they perform live at the Iowa City Yacht Club. And don't miss this show because you probably won't see them again. As far as the current lineup goes, this is a farewell of sorts.

This will be their last show under the Big Citizen name. After the first of the year, they will have a new name (Ultimate Poplins), at least one new member and a musical style that has developed into something that no longer resembles the kind of music Big Citizen started with. Thus, the new name.

With their strong rhythm section and interesting lyrics still intact for the show, it should live up to the high expectations the band's old following have, as well as impress those who are seeing the group for the first time.

While the band has remained somewhat aloof when it comes to those outside its close-knit circle, musically it has developed the reputation of being one of the better area bands, thanks in part to the members' ability to simply write music that gets people on their feet. And although they admit that they started as more of a "power" band, the music today is much stronger in as far as indicating its progress.

A listen to Big Citizen's demo tape shows a diverse palette of musical sounds, with straightforward chord changes in one song, to be followed by a song with complex changes and ringing solos. All of this is held together with strong, steady drumming and the clear vocal style of guitarist Chris Bucheif. Proof enough of musical development.

The band has been pushing for a record deal this year, and keyboardist/vocalist Stephanie Petrick said that the "more power and less pop" approach that the band originally started with didn't apply anymore.

"The name Big Citizen to me indicates more of an 'industrial' type of music, which doesn't fit with what we're doing now. So we decided to mark the changes in the band with a new name," she said.

Far from being sellouts, the band is simply beginning a new chapter in its history. Come out to the Yacht Club tonight to say goodbye to Big Citizen, and come also to welcome the Ultimate Poplins. Whatever the name, the music promises to be pleasing.

The show starts at 9:30 p.m., with a cover charge of $3 at the door.

For Sinatra, 2nd time was a charmer

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Marcia Gay Harden, who is playing the late Ava Gardner in an upcoming television mini-series about Frank Sinatra, says the sultry actress who was the crooner's second wife was "the love of Frank's life."

Sinatra and Gardner were married in 1951 and divorced in 1957. Gardner died in 1990.

Eulenspiegel Co. preserves art of puppetry

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

How long has it been since you've been to a puppet show? No, not a couple of socks with buttons for eyes dancing on top of your dining room table with voices that sound strangely like your Uncle Herbert, but a real puppet show with lighting and set design, a full musical score played by live musicians and master puppeteers who have the talent of making wood come to life.

An Iowa City company believes this kind of puppetry is an experience which needs to be preserved, and since 1975 the Eulenspiegel Puppet Theatre Co. has been working to preserve and further the appreciation of the art of puppetry.

"I grew up with puppets. My parents always had puppets," said Monica Leo, one of the two founding members of Eulenspiegel. "I've always loved puppets."

An opportunity to witness one of these shows will be had Nov. 6-8 when the company will present "The Elves and the Shoemaker." It is an adaptation of the Brothers Grimm tale of a poor and kindly shoemaker whose luck changes one memorable night when some elves decide to help him out while he and his wife are asleep. The shoes the elves make are so unusual and beautiful that people rush to buy them, and the couple's luck is turned around. In the end, the couple finds a way to reward the elves.

The puppeteers will use their own invention, stringless marionettes, for the show. They are weighted, full-bodied dolls worked by a handle in the back. They will also use rod puppets to tell the story. The elves will be played by rabbit puppets.

"We did that to emphasize the dailyness of the magic," Leo said. "Really in the story the elves are a symbol of personified good luck. We thought that using everyday creatures that people see every time they look out the window would emphasize that good luck is something that is always around you. You just have to open your eyes and see it."

The Eulenspiegel production will be a musical with an original full score composed by UI music professor, Dr. Sven Hansell. The three musicians will perform live. Lighting for the show was designed by Pip Gordon.

The company produces three original shows a year and brings in one guest performer. They also sponsor an annual Young Puppeteers Festival and take their shows on the road yearly for national and international tours.

Leo and her partner, Teri Jean Breitbach, write their own scripts and construct all of the sets and puppets. Last season they performed for sold-out audiences, so people interested in seeing the show may want to purchase their tickets in advance.

Tickets are $5 each and may be purchased from the Eulenspiegel Puppet Theatre Company at 5691 Sioux Ave. S.E., or by calling the company at 337-9260. All performances are at the Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St. Tickets may also be purchased by calling 338-7672. There will be five shows; Nov. 6 at 7 p.m., and Nov. 7 and 8 at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Crimefighter Eliot Ness portrayed in 'Shadow'

During his search for the Mad Butcher, the reluctant hero is tailed by Al Capone's ghost.

Michelle-Theryse Forcier
The Daily Iowan

Al Capone is perhaps the most notorious gangster in American history. You take him down and put him away — now what do you do?

"In the Shadow of the Terminal Tower," shows post-Capone Eliot Ness as he tracks down a serial killer — the Mad Butcher of Kingsburg Run. The Butcher has been murdering and dismembering the homeless. Although Capone is physically no longer a concern of his, he continues to haunt Ness. Capone's spirit has become a part of Ness' psyche showing himself only when the two are alone.

Playwright Peter Ullian said the audience will see, "Capone as a specter following Ness around. Capone reflects Ness' doubts, his self-doubts."

Through discussions with Capone, Ness is seen grappling with his one constant fear. He cannot live up to the public image he created during his Capone days. His frustration at not being able to find the killer only adds to his fear. It is ironic that this fearful publicity has become his addiction. He constantly invites reporters on raids and investigations, tempting the failure that will deflate Ness to a regular detective — no longer the caricature of justice.

Ullian said he got the idea for the play when he was attending Oberlin College near Cleveland, Ohio. Ullian found, through preliminary research, that Ness had moved to Cleveland after the Capone caper and had become the director of safety. Ullian searched through old newspapers and realized how frustrated Ness had become trying to live up to his larger than life image. Ness once again gained the spotlight when the series of Butcher murders began. The investigation of these crimes once again gave Ness the sensational publicity fix he craved.

Ullian added that the play incorporates many American themes. The first, of course is the gangster icon. Other themes reflected in the play are screwball comedy, vaudeville and film noir. "The play has a lot of humor in it," said Ullian. Although the play is not a musical by definition, it incorporates songs from the '30s as well as songs written specifically to reflect the tumultuous era of prohibition.

It was because of these American themes that Ullian feels the play was selected as the UI's entry in the American College Theatre Festival competition. Ullian said the festival's theme is "not really to celebrate Columbus but to take advantage of it."

The play opens tonight at 8 in Theatre A of the UI Theatre Building and runs through Nov. 22. Tickets are available by calling Hancher Box Office at 335-1160. Ticket prices are $11.50 for adults and $5 for UI students, senior citizens and people 18 and under.
