While the beating of an unarmed motorist drew parallels to the videotaped beating of King and the rioting that followed the acquittal of officers in that case, NAACP officials have said the Detroit case was different.

They credited quick action by Police Chief Stanley Knox in suspending the officers allegedly involved. And Mayor Coleman Young publicly denounced the beating. Knox and Young are Rob Nye, director of communications and marketing for Independent Charities of America, said that while many factors go into the gift-giving equation, people do tend to give more as the end of the year approaches.

He also noted that many corporate fundraising efforts and the Combined Federal Campaign for government employees coincide with the holiday season.

"This is our normal season," he explained.

In the Iowa City area, the tendency to give more as the holidays approach is very evident, according to Capt. Miriam Miller, the commanding officer of the Salvation Army in Johnson County.

Miller said the Salvation Army, historically known for its bellringers, needs volunteers, food, clothing and direct donations. This year, because of the hard economic times, bell-ringers will be taking to the streets early, she said.

CHRISTMAS TRADITIONS REPRESENTED

Hoover museum features international tree exhibit

WEST BRANCH - The Hoover Library-Museum is celebrating this holiday season with over two dozen Christmas trees from around the world.

A total of 26 trees, which are decorated in many different styles and themes to show how different countries celebrate Christmas, are featured in an exhibit titled "Christmas Around the World."

"It serves to reemphasize Mr. Hoover's worldwide contributions as a humanitarian," said Timothy Walch, assistant director of the museum. "Each one of these trees symbolizes one of the countries where Mr. Hoover lived or

The exhibit, which is scheduled to run from Nov. 14 until Jan. 10, includes trees ranging from the traditional Russian Christmas tree, complete with colored eggs and spires, to the colorful Mexican display, which features ornaments with a mix of Spanish and Indian Walch explained how the decorated trees vary in style — from the fairly lighthearted to the very traditional.

While some trees — such as the Polish, Czechoslovakian and Peruvian - feature authentic ornaments, others are more in the spirit of fun, such as the "kangaroo crossing" sign-adorned Australian

"Most Australians like to go to the beach on Christmas, because it's very warm down there," Walch

The display is in its third year, and this year it has added decornew countries, including Hungary, Lithuania and Brazil.

Walch also pointed out interesting differences among each country's tree-decorating customs.

"Northern European countries tend to decorate up and down, instead of horizontally as we do," Walch explained.

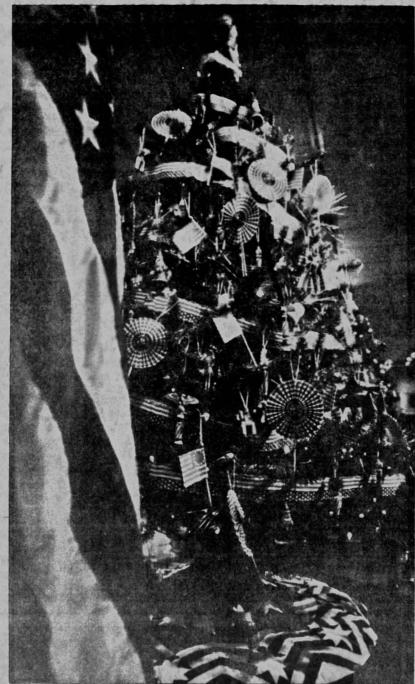

There is a complete porcelain Edwardian village and a train set amid the trees, along with some unusual trees, such as the one honoring Christopher Columbus, the one with Santa Clauses from around the world, made by the Iowa City Embroiderers Guild, and one dedicated to fishing.

"Throughout Mr. Hoover's lifetime, he had a very unabated passion for fishing," Walch said, adding that the former president continued to take fishing trips well into his 80s.

The Christmas tree display has grown quite a bit, Walch said, from 12 the first year to the current 26. Organizers hope to have even more in the future, due to the continued good reception to Over 10,000 people attended the six-week exhibit last year, and a similar turnout is expected this year if the weather permits.

"Christmas is a time of giving and good cheer, and Mr. Hoover's emphasis on helping others is something we want to reemphasize during this season," Walch said. "I hope people come away with a sense that the way we celebrate Christmas in the United States is only one of a great many different ways and different traditions for Christmas.'

SOME PATIENTS FAKE NEED

In frustration, the doctor prescribes a stronger pain killer. Maybe that fixes the problem. But chances are, says Dr. Daniel Murphy, the doctor has just been

The doctor interviewed 46 of his methadone patients early this year and published his findings in the current edition of Iowa Medicine, the journal of the Iowa Medical Typically, he said, addicts commit crimes to support their habits, but more than a third, 19, reported they "scammed" their doctors.

"What can Iowa physicians do? Be aware," he warned, especially with patients who have needle marks over their veins and those whose prompting leads the discussion toward opiates.

"Most of those interviewed felt doctors are too easily persuaded to write prescriptions for pain pills, especially those that can be injected."

Murphy said some addicts told him they stole prescription pads, obtained code numbers and wrote their own prescriptions. Others faked pain and became such a bother that doctors wrote prescriptions just to get rid of them.

TRYING TO CLEAN UP THEIR IMAGE

GOP govs. want to 'reclaim' party

John King Associated Press

FONTANA, Wis. - Republican governors are muting their campaign partisanship to wish fellow Gov. Bill Clinton well in the White House, even as they try to chart a course toward unseating him in

"It is our obligation to get behind and support our new president-elect," Ohio Gov. George Voinovich said Sunday as GOP governors gathered for their annual meeting. The Democrats now have the ball and will be judged on how effectively they carry it.'

While the Republicans lost the White House, those meeting on Wisconsin's Lake Geneva took solace in hoping that Clinton would bring to Washington the frustration all governors share with what they view as increasing federal requirements on them at a time of decreasing federal funding. "Because he is a governor he does understand much better than the Congress what the problems of the states and the problems of the grass roots are," said Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar.

"Give us the flexibility at the state level," echoed Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson, host of the Republican Governors Association

Still, the polite and hopeful words were tempered with arguments that Clinton got no mandate in winning with 43 percent of the vote. And, the GOP governors left no doubt the goal of their conference was to nudge the national Republican Party on a course designed to limit Clinton to one

We've got to build and make the Republican Party a majority party again," said Thompson. "I think the voices are going to come and the articulation of policy is going to come from Republican governors."

As they gathered, however, the challenge of uniting the GOP's factions was clearly evident. Some were already talking of moderating the party's anti-abortion platform stance while others blamed President Bush's defeat on a campaign McInturff told the governors. that did not stress that and other conservative themes.

Against a background of state flags, Secretary of Labor Lynn Martin addresses the Republican Governors Association conference in Fontana, Wis., Monday.

Republican gathering, the governors' session was a stage for the ideological tug-of-war for control of the Republican National Committee, which elects a new chairman in January.

A handful of the candidates and potential candidates for the RNC post are on hand for the meeting, as are several 1996 Republican presidential prospects, from Vice President Dan Quayle and Texas Sen. Phil Gramm to a handful of the governors themselves. "Being in the loyal opposition isn't always fun," Quayle said in a speech noteworthy for its conciliatory tone and urging that Republicans tolerate differing views on abortion. "But don't worry: we won't be there very long."

In their first formal session today, the governors heard a sobering analysis of the 1992 campaign's impact on their party's image.

"This election was about status quo and change and we were the status quo party," said Republican pollster Neil Newhouse.

Also, in a troubling sign for warring moderate and conservative already anxious GOP moderates, voters now brand Democrats the "pro-choice" party on abortion rights and Republicans as "right to life," Newhouse and partner Bill

As they gathered Sunday, the governors said they would not rally And as the first post-election major around a single candidate for the party post, but most called for Republicans to unite around shared support of lower taxes and fiscal conservatism and adopt a "big tent" approach on abortion and other divisive social issues.

"There are going to be differences, but the Republican Party has got to take the position of being the party of the big tent," said Thomp-

"Diversity of approach is probably a healthy thing," said Weld, who has angered many conservatives in the party, particularly the religious right, with his support of abortion and homosexual rights. Weld, retiring New Hampshire

Sen. Warren Rudman, California Rep. Tom Campbell and Maine Sen. William Cohen plan to form an alliance to raise money for moderate Republican candidates, including the 1996 presidential

"There is quietly building a group of Republicans who intend to try to be helpful in bringing the party back toward the center, where it belongs," Rudman said in an interview broadcast Sunday on WBZ-TV in Boston, Mass.

CLINTON ADMINISTRATION

Maintaining control

As Mr. Clinton goes to Washington this week, he begins the task of working with the U.S. Congress. Although it may seem that Clinton will have little trouble getting his proposals through Congress that is dominated by the Democrats, history has shown that this is not always the case. If Clinton wants to have a successful first hundred days, he must now plan out an effective course of action to deal with a Congress that most likely has visions of pork barrels and dollar signs dancing in their eyes.

Clinton has the same opportunity now that Jimmy Carter did in 1977. Any administration has its best opportunity to get legislation through in its first year in office; plus Carter, like Clinton, had the advantage of working with a Democratic Congress. However, Carter, hampered by a lack of Washington know-how, was not successful in getting proposals through Congress. It was one of many reasons that led to a one-term presidency for Carter. Clinton must be aware of the dangers and pitfalls that await him in Congress if he does not want to repeat the defeats of Jimmy Carter on Capitol Hill.

Clinton needs to do two things: First, he must prioritize and emphasize legislation that he sends down to Congress. Carter didn't do this; instead he sent many bills at once, which led to most of his agenda being bottlenecked. Clinton should not make the same mistake. According to his campaign, getting the economy jump-started is the item which tops Clinton's agenda. One example of what will probably come down is a large public-works bill that will attempt to put people back to work. But, it won't be several massive pieces at one time. If history is any sort of teacher, Clinton will know better than to try to overwhelm the folks on Capitol Hill.

The other thing that Clinton will have to pull off is getting firm control of the Democrats in Congress. He has to let House and Senate members know that just because a Democrat is now in the White House, they will not have carte blanche in getting pork-barrel projects through. Undoubtedly, some will try. But, if Clinton is going to keep his credibility established with the American people, he cannot be seen as someone who will not rein in a recklessly spending Congress, which would cause the deficit to keep skyrocketing.

The indication, so far, is that Clinton is fully aware of the pressures that are now upon him. He has not let the media goad him into making any rash decisions on Cabinet or sub-Cabinet positions. Moreover, he has not let the press force him to start running the country today, before his transition team has put everything into place. That's fine. Chances are remote that the country will slip into the Atlantic in the next two months, or there will be some other catastrophe that will need Clinton's personal attention. Right now, he has to go about getting his proposals ready for Congress in an effective and timely manner, so his first hundred days will be successful.

Just as Clinton probably looked at the Dukakis campaign in 1988, and did exactly the opposite, he would be advised to look at the first part of the Carter presidency and do many things differently. Clinton will never have as good an opportunity as

Instructional improvement

To the Editor: Now that "instructional improvement" has become the watchword of the moment, we have seen in the pages of The Daily Iowan several stories highlighting recent efforts and intentions in this direction. The Department of Economics was lauded for its 'innovative' program of videotaping TAs in the classroom, the purpose being to improve the TAs' teaching. However, as one TA noted, it would be more helpful to also have orientation sessions which trained TAs in how to teach. Indeed, one would think that holding training sessions would precede videotaping, since videotaping is simultaneously a training and an evaluative process. However, do not fear. During the week of Oct. 7, we also read of the desirability of training sessions for university TAs.

I have read these articles with some bemusement. In the Department of Spanish and Portuguese, we have had in place a training program for TAs for a number of years. A four- to five-day fall orientation preceding the start of classes has been standard. In this workshop, TAs are introduced to techniques of teaching language in all of its subcomponents (listening, oral practice, grammar, reading, writing, culture); n practice sessions they have the opportunity to try out some of these echniques and to get some feedback before actually entering the classroom. In their first fall of employment, all TAs are required to take a semester-length 3-credit graduate course on "Foreign Language Methodology," a course which introduces them to both specific pedagogical techniques and to the broader research questions in the field of second language acquisition. New TAs are also assigned a mentor TA whose class they visit to observe good teaching and who would work

vith them as necessary to help resolve problems. All TAs meet weekly to discuss problems and exchange ideas. Finally, from 1985 to 1990 and again starting this fall, regular visitation and videotaping of TA classes have formed an important component of the overall training program. Similar training programs are also in place in other foreign language departments.

The fact that so much excitement is generated over such minimal steps as videotaping and TA orientations only illustrates the depth of the problem. Consider that for a person to become certified to teach foreign language at the secondary-school level, it is considered standard and necessary that she or he pursue an entire undergraduate major in secondary education, including a semester of student teaching, along with the major in the relevant foreign language. At the university of level, however, where it is expected that the students will achieve greater proficiency in relatively less classroom time, the most training that the TA can expect to have had prior to actually stepping foot in the class-room is that week of fall orientation. In some cases, the TA cannot even count on having that week (as for example when she or he is hired to teach starting in spring semester because student demand requires it).

What happens to this new-found focus on instructional improvement if we should argue that we cannot start a new TA in January because of the lack of training? No, that cannot be a problem; there are always people who can speak Spanish who are willing and available. Certainly the ability to speak a language is a necessary condition for teaching it, but it is not a sufficient condition. The great majority of people on this campus speak English as a native language, but I suspect that most of us, myself included, would be at a loss as to how to begin teaching English as a second language.

Viewpoints Misplaced guilt overcome by 'Sex'

Like a virgin? Well, not like any virgin I've ever known. But Madonna, with all her lust and lasciviousness, does embody a kind of purity. Her photos seem to only display eroticism, but buried within them there is depicted a sense of pureness of spirit, an unusual openness. Not ensnared by the repressiveness of Christian morality - a morality that mutilates our perception of body - Madonna displays sexuality with creativity and vigor. She sensationalizes what most people refuse to acknowledge: desire unleashed. And by doing so Madonna helps us, as a society, overcome the misplaced guilt we have been forced to accept about our bodies, our sexuality and our desires. That is why "Sex" has merit and why those who are trying to censor its exposure are wrong.

Des Moines Mayor John "Pat" Dorrian doesn't agree. According to a recent Associated Press article, Mayor Dorrian feels that "the book is full of unnatural sex acts and nudity." Dorrian believes that because of this, the book should be removed from the city library. Apparently, "Sex" is simply obscene and doesn't have any socially redeeming qualities. That's a pretty Critics of "Sex" are unable to look beyond their glossy stares. Madonna has created something useful, something we should consider and discuss. I don't mean to imply that Madonna was motivated by concern; profit seems more likely. But something meaningful is occurring here, something we should try to understand.

"Sex" itself isn't meaningful, but the response it has generated is.

Madonna is forcing us to confront our guilt when she displays her fantasies in full view.

Her sexual fantasies are fairly commonplace. The book may be a little risqué. Her photos are unusual for a mainstream publication. But they're not revolutionary by any leap of the imagination and they're definitely not obscene. Most people would benefit by glancing through

I wouldn't suggest that everyone should run out and buy "Sex" — especially since it's so easy to walk down to Prairie Lights and look at the copy on display. But the book shouldn't be banned from a public library. Adults who are interested in viewing Madonna's creation should have the opportunity to view it for themselves. Then they should consider why so many people are so offended by "Sex," and how our society contributes to this unhealthy

Our country has an odd fascination with sex. We are innundated with sexual objects constantly. In television and film, sex seemingly underlies every encounter between an eligible man and an eligible women. Musicians return consistently to sex — a common denominator we all share. Advertisers play off our desires in order to sell their products. What does sex have to do with automobiles or smoking or beer? We allow titillation and then pretend that it will go no further. But it does; it always goes further.

And when it does, when the media takes another step and displays sex explicitly, there's a deafening outcry condemning the immorality of an issue we've been dancing around, not very discreetly, for years. And therein lies the problem.

Our society entices people to be sexual, but if some openly confront these desires, they become outcasts, sexual deviants. It's like offering dieters chocolate cake and then expecting them to abstain. Unfortunately, this is especially true for women who are taught to be desirable, but not sexual.

Madonna's not that stupid. She realizes that it's OK to be both desirable and sexual. In fact, she revels in it. For Madonna, those "unnatural sex acts" are natural (and profitable). It's an attitude that should be available to others without inflicting shame.

And that is why "Sex" should be available for everyone to see. People need to realize that sexual fantasies don't mean sexual deviance. We shouldn't be taught to feel guilty about our desires. According to the Kinsey reports, they are commonplace. So why do so people demand that these thoughts remark buried

(and why do I suddenly feel like Kim Painter)? In many cases it's probably because they are ashamed of themselves. Our repressive morality teaches that sin and sexuality are intricately woven together. Some would even argue that sex is simply for procreation and not an activity that should be enjoyed. These are the people who demand that others bury their desires behind a facade of disgust, because they are afraid their own desires might erupt when tempted. But it is these very same people, the most celibate, the most repressed egments of our society that inevitably erupt in the most unsavory ways.

We need to realize that sex can be discussed openly without guilt creeping needlessly into the discussion. Either we force young adults to fumble needlessly in the dark with concepts like birth control and sexuality or we explain these issues simply and rationally, just as we would approach any other subject Dorrian would restrict "Sex" only to those who can afford it, but we need books like "Sex" to counter the repressive elements who still insist that sex must be seen in one way only. Theirs is a restrictive and unhealthy view that sees normality as a sin; yet the real sin is branding the innocent unnatural and forcing them to cringe before their own nature.

GUEST OPINION

The rich aroma of a well-brewed solution

ast week saw the beginning of another vicious, ugly smear campaign. Surprisingly, it involved neither New York candidate for the U.S. Senate. Rather, alarmist doctors at Johns Hopkins announced that as few as two cups of coffee a day could be - get this - addictive. Quit cold turkey, the report warned, and you might wind own. up feeling like a chemotherapy patient.

such, though I wondered where the embarrassed to be seen not using medical establishment, having just them. discredited margarine and milk, would find new foods to trash. But in challenging coffee, it challenged much more than a mere hot drink. Coffee is an ethos, a way of life. It is not about anesthetizing oneself, but about making oneself more alert. To wake up and smell the coffee is to welcome the possibilities of the new day. While I would never advocate drug dependancy, I think Americans could do worse than get themselves hooked on coffee.

Coffee had traditionally been the intelligensia's drug of choice. Ever the 1700s, the beverage has been associated with the exchange of ideas. Dada, cubism and surrealism were born in Parisian cafés close to the turn of this century. And in the 1950s, American beat poets read their exceptionally hot verse in very cool cafes.

Coffee houses thrive in intellectual meccas — Berkeley, Cambridge, Greenwich Village. They are not only places where one can express heated opinions about, say, Susan Sontag's new novel, but where one can read that novel or write one's

A novelist friend recalled how she defeated writer's block in a café: Sitting alone in public with a pen This "news" hardly struck me as and notebook, she felt too

In its fall catalog, Coffee House Press, a Minneapolis-based publisher, announced its commitment to the "excitement of coffee and books," by which it meant poetry and literary fiction. Had it been, for instance, Chamomile House or Perrier Press, you can bet its list would have featured recovery books or treatises on body-building.

Americans didn't used to care how coffee tasted, as long as it gave them a kick. Today, however, kicks are out and flavor is in. Upscale java joints and mail-order bean outlets since the English coffee houses of have cropped up everywhere, especially in Seattle, which, curiously, is the specialty coffee capital of the United States. This should come as no surprise to anyone who watched "Twin Peaks," a show set in the Northwest in which even roughnecks hankered for what they called

"cup of joe."
Caffeine bothers doctors, I think, because they'd like to believe that all addictive substances cause harm. But unlike, say, crack, coffee doesn't destroy your body. Nor does it drive you to murder or steal.

"They can't get the goods on it to link it to any health hazard, despite years of trying to," said Corby Kununer, a senior editor at The Atlantic who recently wrote a four-part series on the beverage. "The one thing I know is that you feel depressed and irritable when you give it up.

Of course the obvious question is: Why give it up? To me, decaf tastes like witch hazel. Even if I could bear the stuff, I'd never trust a waiter to keep my order separate from those of the caffeine addicts around me. I cut down by drinking a capuccino or café latte, in which you know you're getting less caffeine because your cup is mostly filled with steamed

In the mid-1980s, the National Coffee Association ran a series of television spots urging viewers to "Join the coffee achievers," a group that included rock star David Bowie actress Cecily Tyson, comedian Jane Curtin, quarterback Ken Anderson and marathon runner Alison Rowe." "You are the New American Society," the commercials said, "the movers and the shakers," by which they presumably did not mean those twitching their way through caffeine withdrawal. "Coffee gives you the serenity to dream it," they continued, "And the vitality to do it."

What exactly "it" was remained unexplained, but such is the nature of advertising copy.

I found myself thinking se ads while sipping coffee d ing the presidential debate, when Ross Perot referred repeatedly to a similarly compelling but equally mysterious "it."

"Unless we're going to do it," Perot said, "then pick somebody who just likes to talk about it."

Perhaps the council should recruit Ross Perot for a new "coffee achievers" campaign, if Nike ("Just do it.") doesn't get to him first. Even if he never touches a drop, he is living the coffee ethos. I can already hear his voiceover: "We have all kinds of great plans lying around, and the American people are just a few cups away from implementing them." M.G. Colo. bank, Iowa Trust fight over funds

SANTA FE, N.M. - An Iowa government investment pool and a Colorado bank returned to court Monday in a dispute over $43 million lost in a securities scheme that collapsed a year ago.

The two institutions are at odds over money they separately invested with California money manager Steven Wymer. In September, Wymer pleaded guilty to nine criminal counts stemming from a complex securities-kiting scheme that may have cost victims

Iowa Trust, an investment pool of local governments, sued Jefferson Bank and Trust of suburban Denver, Colo., claiming $43 million of the trust's money fraudulently ended up in Jefferson Bank's

In May, U.S. District Judge Lewis Babcock agreed, ordering Jefferson Bank to return the $43 million to Iowa Trust.

Iowa Trust lawyer Walter Garnsey asked a three-judge panel of the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to dismiss Jefferson Bank's appeal on grounds its lawyers were improperly raising whole new arguments they never made in the trial before Babcock.

"After the trial, Jefferson Bank and Trust jumped off its horse and tried to litigate on new grounds," said Garnsey. "They got a new lawyer, new facts, and subtly tried to give the court the impression that the case was not completely litigated."

Jefferson Bank lawyer Bill Waller urged the panel to overturn Babcock's ruling. He said the bank owned at least $44 million in securities and that even though they were misappropriated, the money they received was owed to them by Wymer.

"Jefferson Bank and Trust thought it was receiving its investment in Wymer's account," said

Waller described Wymer's activities as a "Ponzi" scheme, in which a thief gathers up several individual investments and, through transfers and diversions, "creates the illusion of profits."

In such cases, victims are often left to absorb their losses, and the courts have never before ordered one victim to return money to another victim, said Waller.

The scheme began to unravel a year ago when federal bank examiners asked Jefferson Bank to prove the liquidity of its assets by cashing in some of the U.S. Treasury bills it had invested through

UPDATED CATECHISM RELEASED

Catholic church puts new spin on some sins

Patrick McDowell

Associated Press

PARIS, France — The Roman Catholic Church took a step Monday to bring doctrine into line with modern life, unveiling a new catechism that maintains bans on divorce and abortion but urges compassion for homosexuals and condemns low wages as theft.

The first catechism of the Catholic Church in 426 years contains no new sins and absolves none of the old ones, though it in some instances casts a more tolerant eye on the sinners.

In a retrenchment of orthodox positions bound to disappoint many of the world's 900 million Catholics, divorce and abortion remain forbidden sins. The only contraception accepted by the church is natural.

"We have simply tried to take up the commandments again on how a Christian can conduct his life today," said Jean Honoré, bishop of Tours and the catechism's French editor.

Woman priests — approved last week by the Church of England are unacceptable, since Christ's 12 Apostles, whom priests represent, were all males.

catechism describes homosexual acts as "intrinsically dissolute, contrary to natural law, and instructs homosexuals to practice chastity.

But since most homosexuals do not willingly choose their lifestyle they must be welcomed with respect, compassion and delicacy," it says.

"One must avoid all unjust discrimination against them."

The catechism spurred intense debate among the 3,000 bishops who submitted some 24,000 amendments to the six-year project. It is rooted in the Ten Commandments, with some up-to-date twists. The Seventh Commandment - "Thou Shalt Not Steal" is interpreted as a call for economic and social justice.

Archbishop of Paris Jean-Marie Lustiger holds a copy of the first Roman Catholic Church catechism in 426 years Monday in Paris. The document maintains bans on divorce, abortion and homosexuality, but calls for more compassion for homosexuals and broadens the implications of "Thou Shalt Not Steal."

Forging checks is sinful, as is says that "human life must be badly performed work. Going on strike is a moral right, unless accompanied by violence.

Guidelines on sexual behavior fall broadly under the Sixth Commandment - "Thou Shalt Not Commit Adultery." Apart from greater tolerance for homosexuals, the catechism broke little new ground. Sexual union outside marriage remains forbidden.

"Among the sins gravely contrary to chastity, one must cite masturbation, fornication, pornography "Any manner of taking and and homosexual practices," the catechism says. "Adultery and divorce, polygamy and free sexual union are grave offenses to the dignity of marriage."

Study shows most heart attacks occur on Mondays

Daniel Q. Haney Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Here's another reason to hate Mondays: The risk of a heart attack may be as much as 50 percent greater than on any other day. Not surprisingly, though, this discovery only applies to people who work.

Researchers from Germany studied nearly 6,000 heart attacks to come to the conclusion that Mondays are even worse than people thought.

"It must have something to do with going from eing a couch potato to a working person. Maybe we should all call in sick on Monday," commented Dr. Robert Zoble of the University of South Florida.

The findings, though, have a serious side. For everal years, researchers have been studying when heart attacks occur, because this can provide clues about precisely what triggers them. And that information will help doctors come up with new strategies to prevent heart attacks, the No. 1 killer the United States and other industrialized Recently, for instance, other scientists have found that the chance of dying from a heart attack is twice as high during the first two hours after getting up as it is for the rest of the day.

The latest data were presented Monday at the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart

"This points to the role of changing activity levels in triggering cardiac events," said Dr. Stefan Willich of the Free University of Berlin, who directed the

He and colleagues kept track of all the heart attacks and coronary arrests over five years among 330,000 people who lived in the Augsburg, Germany, area. During this time, 5,596 attacks occurred. The researchers found that among working people, Mondays were especially hazardous, accounting for 18 percent of all heart attacks. Sunday was the safest with 12 percent of all heart attacks, or 50 percent less than on Mondays. Monday's risk was 40 percent higher overall compared with the rest of the week, the researchers

The second-riskiest day was Thursday, followed by Saturday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

However, for retirees and others who were not employed, there was no significant difference when heart attacks happened.

The study needs to be conducted elsewhere before scientists can be sure the results are true. However, experts said the trend is likely to be the same in any industrialized country that follows a Monday through Friday work week.

Willich said that if the findings hold up, they may suggest the importance of being sure to take such heart-protecting medicines as aspirin and beta blockers on Monday morning.

"It's one of those quirky things we sometimes see in medicine that may turn out to be important," commented Dr. Warfield Johnson of Springfield, Mo.

Dr. Clarence Grimm of Charles R. Drew University in Los Angeles, Calif., speculated that weekend drinking might account for some of the Monday increase in heart attacks.

That is a whole week early, because this year the need is so much greater," she said. "People are having a hard time just making it from payday to payday, and that's without allowing for extras." While most organizations receive

'A Song for Marty' explores loss, grief

Kevin Ruby The Daily Iowan

Three years ago, Iowa City residents witnessed a rare act of compassion unfold at the Johnson County Courthouse. Ray Davies requested a limited sentencing of Martin Robinson, who accidentally killed Davies' 14-year-old son, Marty. Though it was indeed a noble gesture, the courts and the family of the other victim thought otherwise and Robinson, then 20, was sentenced to 20 years in prison. The com-munity was able to rest again, knowing that justice had been served and the wrongs had been

Save one. After the moderately publicized hearing ended, Davies, his wife Linda and daughter Melissa, had an even harder trial, one that deals with the notions of absence and fury. Davies showed an incredible amount of insight when he realized the nature of the accident (two kids, best friends, cruising about in the countryside). But what does that leave Davies with? How does one deal with anger, when the death was a grotesque accident, and there is no one really to be angry at?

"A Song For Marty" is a collection of essays and journal entries that document the two years after the day Davies lost his only son. All of the individual essays revolve around topics of loss and moving on, neither of which are easy topics to mull over for anybody.

Some of the essays seem sophomoric and perhaps a little too symbolic. "Just Another Day Without Sonshine" and "The Scrapbook" are noble attempts at allegory, but they feel like writing assignments instead of passages of personal revelation. The counterargument is, of course, dammit, it's Davies' pain, and he's got the right to deal with it however he sees fit, even if it segues into the melodramatic.

I'll agree with that, but the stronger passages are the more day-in-the-life sketches like "How Are You?" and especially "What Can You Say?" which deal convey their grief as if the loss of minds to read.

son / daughter were their own. I'm certain that everyone has had the wonderful experience of when a narcissistic, yet seemingly well-meaning, friend comes up and says "I lost an uncle once . . . so I know how you feel."

When Ray Davies spends less time meditating in the metaphoric and more time deliberating on specifics, the essays work. Through these passages (other favorites include "Survival" and "Reactions"), I found Ray Davies' prose to be a true voice that does speak from pain, as well as for it. We learn to move on, usually, but we shouldn't necessarily be required to move on.
"A Song For Marty" is not always top-drawer writing, and its message about loss and recovery get diluted occasionally in unnecessary analogy. Some people are likely to compare the loss of a loved one to an incomplete scrapbook and the "empty pages" that may never get filled. This is an interesting comparison. Most other people would be more blunt, and say that the recovery was long, hard and painful and that was what it meant to them. Davies writes in this slant as well and that is what makes "A Song For Marty" an effective collage of reflections for anyone with third parties attempting to with death and loss on their

Beaujolais celebration to hit city

Kenny Putnam The Daily Iowan

Like a preview of an upcoming feature film, this year's Beaujolais Nouveau will provide wine lovers with a taste of things to come, according to Wally Plahutnik, the "wine guy" at John's Grocery, 401 E. Market St. At midnight on Wednesday, 188 corks will pop the world over and out will pour the simple, light and moderately dry red wine - a fanfare to the arrival of 1992's vintage wines.

Beaujolais Nouveau, made from 100 percent Gamay grapes grown in the Beaujolais region of France, is the first wine to finish its fermentation and needs no aging to be enjoyed. "It is a picnic wine," said Plahutnik, "made to wash things down." The flavor of the fruit is unburdened by tannin and only suffers if it is watered down. Some Beaujolais is aged in oak casts until late spring, it then emerges heavier and more com-

CONCERT REVIEW

Fans of all ages make landmark KISS concert a success

Tim Rissman The Daily Iowan

For concertgoers at Sunday night's KISS concert in Cedar Rapids, the evening became as much an educational event in band history as a rock concert. The boys took special delight in introducing their songs in a historical context, referring to older albums by saying things like, "Who the bleep out there remembers an album called Rock and Roll Over? Come on, let me see your hands if you don't know the intro of this next song! Don't be embarrassed now!" They played the intro to "I Want You" again, as those familiar with the song roared their approval. A few hands went into the air. The girl in front of me, with her pierced nose and blackhole eyeliner tentatively reached

ANTIQUITY & MODERNITY

Gross displays of wealth also common in antiquity

E.B. Holtsmark The Daily Iowan

"sed quid haec tam parva commemoro cum populatio morum atque luxuria non aliunde maior quam e concharum genere prove-"But why am I talking about these really insignificant matters when it is the class of seashells that is a greater source than any other of the destruction of our morals and the rise of an indulgent lifestyle."

— Pliny, "Natural History" 9.104.

In this way Pliny the Elder, writing his "Natural History" in midfirst century A.D., segues from a descriptive account of seashells to a cautionary tale that maps human decadence onto the lowly mollusk. According to Pliny (9.106), it produces the most expensive items in the world: pearls. He goes on to recount a moralizing anecdote about that dissolute thug Anthony and rich Cleopatra, the last queen of Egypt and owner of the "two largest pearls that ever existed" ("maximi uniones per omne aevum," 9.119). She had made a bet with Anthony that she could throw a banquet at which she herself, alone, would eat a meal of incalculable cost (10 million sesterces equals roughly U.S. $300,000). The first course was served. It proved to be merely the standard luxury fare of the day, and when Anthony mocked its pitiable pecuniary shortfall Cleopatra told him that that had just been a lagniappe as it were, and the real bill was now coming up. She had a single goblet of strong vinegar placed in front of her, undid an earring containing one of the huge pearls, and dropped it in. As Pliny tells us, the pearl dissolved ("liquefactum") before she drank down the contents, causing Anthony to lose the bet, and, shortly thereafter, Rome, when, after the battle of Actium in ple of conspicuous consumption from antiquity. Indeed, antiquity appears to have felt about such grand gestures something of the scandalized "frisson" familiar to us from seedy weeklies that report on the outrageously expensive foibles of those whose wealth makes them so different from you and me. Excoriating the unholy extravagances of the very rich was as popular in antiquity as it is today. In Greece, the genre began in earnest with the poet Hesiod, literary history's first genuine "victim." He lived unhappily in the late eighth century B.C., and wrote bitterly about the financial beating Excoriating the unholy extravagances of the very rich was as popular in antiquity as it is today.

he'd taken from his peculating brother, who was in unseemly cahoots with the wealthy and crooked "dōrophagic" ("gift-eating") politicians of the day. Thus Hesiod whines - in clever, if sour, dactylic hexameters, it is true, but whines nonetheless - at having missed the golden age and now being forced to inhabit this worst of all possible worlds, the iron age, utterly devoid of decency and traditional family values ("fathers don't treat children right brothers will not be friends, like in the good old days . . . aging parents are abused, ... people have no respect for religion ... etc." ("Works and Days," 182-187). Well, that was almost 3,000 years ago, but it still sounds astonishingly "au courant," doesn't it? I remember hearing what's-hisname talking about all that family values stuff earlier this fall as if he'd really locked on to a gripping issue nobody had ever thought of

This archaic nostalgia for a roseate past that never existed was an idea that held as enormous an appeal for the ancient Romans, especially those of the first centuries B.C. and A.D., as it does for modern Americans, especially those of the 1980s and 1990s. The Romans liked to talk about the complicated depravity of today while invoking the simple morality of yesterday. Their buzzword for that bygone edenic era was "maiores nostri" - "our ancestors." In those days people didn't build houses out over the water, sail the seas for gain, pillage the earth for her wealth, wear soft garments dyed in Tyrian purple, and so forth. How simple it all used to be — just about right up until the time I was born. How satisfying to believe it - now that I've been born into this uniquely wicked world. But back to Anthony and Cleopatra and conspicuous consumption. In October, a group of affluent romantics celebrated Columbus' journey to America by boarding a Concorde in Lisbon, Portugal, for a round-the-world trip at a cost of $23,800 per person. It was in the papers. It was on television. From the voice-over as the passengers embarked it was kind of hard to tell if the reporter was disgusted, envious, impressed, or some, or all. Each age has its own idiosyncratic versions of the ultimate in selfcoddling profligacy — drinking a pearl from the depths of the Indian Ocean for dinner, flying a Concorde in the stratosphere for a day and a half. Like, man, Cicero said it all once and for all: "o tempora, o

Michigan's impressive sophomore class is led by Chris Webber and Jalen Rose. They will be tested early with a Dec. 5 game at Duke. On the same day, Kansas is at Indiana, making an early December Saturday seem like a weekend day in late March.

Fisher, who won a national championship as Michigan's interim coach in 1989, knows his current team is good, but he also knows they understand the huge task ahead of them.

We got hot, white hot, at the right time last year and still only finished tied for third in our conference," Fisher said. "I think our players are smart enough to realize we haven't scored a basket or stopped one yet and those are the things we have to do consistently and very well to be as good a team as I'd like us to be."

Michigan, which was never higher than No. 11 last season and entered the NCAA tournament ranked 15th, was last No. 1 in the final regular-season poll of 1976-77. The Wolverines, then led by Rickey Green, Steve Grote and Phil Hubbard, were beaten in the regional finals by Cornbread Maxwell and North Carolina Charlotte.

Duke ended last season in the No. 1 spot and the Blue Devils have to replace player of the year Christian Laettner and forward Brian Davis. Kansas lost just one starter from last season, as did Indiana.

At No. 8, Memphis State is the highest ranked of the eight teams in the preseason poll who weren't in the last regularseason poll. The Tigers, who lost to Cincinnati in the regional finals, have superb swingman Anfernee Hardaway back among four starters.

Four conferences have four teams each in the rankings. The Big Ten has Michigan, Indiana, Iowa and Michigan State. The Big Eight has Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa State and Nebraska. The Atlantic Coast Conference has Duke, North Carolina, Florida State and Georgia Tech, the first three all in the Top Ten. And, the Big East has Seton Hall, Georgetown, Connecticut and Syraglance at how the baseball expansion draft A glance at how the baseball expansion draft will work Tuesday:

Draft Order: The Colorado Rockies, having won a coin flip last week with the Florida Marlins, will make the No. 1 pick at 1 p.m. The Marlins will follow, and the teams will alternate picks throughout the first round. Each expansion team will take 13 players in the first round, and the 26 established major league clubs will each lose one player.

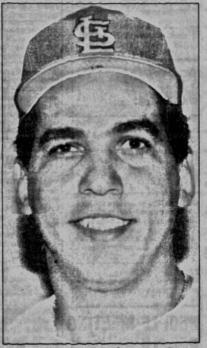

Draft Process: There will be three rounds, with the Marlins picking first in the second and third rounds. There will be five minutes between each selection, and a 30-minute break between the rounds. After each round, American League teams add four players to their protected list and National League teams add three.

Who's Eligible?: All players except those on protected lists and those who: a) either signed their first pro contract in 1991 or 1992 or b) signed in 1990, but were younger than 19 on June 5 that year.

Who Loses Whom?: All 12 established NL teams will lose three players. In the AL, eight teams will lose three players and six teams will lose two Galarraga, who batted over .300 for Montreal in 1987-88 and twice won the Gold Glove, missed 44 games last season because of a broken wrist, sustained when he was hit by a pitch in the second game of the season.

Galarraga hit .301 with eight home runs and 27 RBIs after July 23 for the Cardinals.

Answer: Andres Galarraga. Question: Who was the first free agent to sign with an expansion team?

"I thought this summer about signing someone early," Gebhard said. "When I saw Andres Galarraga's name on the free agent list, it set off a red flag."

Badgers think bowl

Talk with Copper, Freedom, Peach

Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. - Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez said Monday his Badgers' hopes for a post-season bowl bid may hinge on a victory at Northwestern Saturday, but even that may not

At his weekly news conference, Alvarez said that even if his Badgers defeat Northwestern and finish the regular season with a 6-5 record, a bowl bid might not be extended.

"A 6-and-5 record is not real attractive" for the selection committees that issue the bowl invitations, Alvarez said. "There are going to be some 7-and-4 (teams) who don't go" to

Alvarez and athletic director Pat Richter talked with a number of officials on bowl selection committees after Wisconsin's 34-6 victory over Minnesota Saturday, said Steven Malchow, director of sports information.

Malchow said the talks were with officials of four bowls: the Copper, Freedom, Independence and Peach.

"I've talked with some people," Alvarez told reporters. "We definitely do not have anything concrete.

He declined to identify the bowl officials. Alvarez said he and his players are excited about the possibility of a post-season game because of what it would mean in the recruitment of high school talent.

The coach said a bowl appearance would be a "selling point when you're going after top

"You have to be able to sell tradition," he said. "That is a tremendous help in recruiting."

"I'm just happy we have an opportunity to win a football game ... and that we'd be an option" for a bowl, Alvarez said.

Alvarez, who came to Wisconsin three years ago, said the fact that Wisconsin has even an outside chance to capture a bowl bid means the team has made "tremendous progress."

"Our program is definitely on the way," he Alvarez said he warned his players to focus on Northwestern, 2-8 overall and 2-5 in the Big Ten. Wisconsin is 3-4 in conference play. "If you start focusing on (a bowl invitation) and lose you won't have any chance at all," said Alvarez, whose Badgers could finish with the school's first winning record since the 1984 team went 7-4-1.

and they can use any one of those options."

Ditka became angrier when it was suggested that his blowup at Butler might have unsettled the kicker to the point of missing his final field "He missed the field goal," Ditka said. "If you want to make me the scapegoat, go ahead, if that will answer your question. You can write about it or talk about it all week."

Butler refused to talk about the situation Monday. Most of the other players also were reluctant to discuss the game or their 4-6 record and three-game losing streak, the longest since 1989 when they lost their last six games.

There were some exceptions.

Safety Markus Paul got involved in the episode following the game and scuffled with "People think we don't hear things but we do hear," Paul said. "If you cut us, we bleed. If you throw stones it does hurt and we do lose our temper. It was frustrating."

Quarterback Jim Harbaugh said "If somebody threw something at me, I'd do the same thing. How would you react?

"Coach Ditka gets blamed a lot. People throwing things and yelling obscenities. He's doing all he can but we're not executing."

Women runners earn at-large bid to nationals

The Big Ten champion lowa women's cross country earned one of six at-large bids to the 22-team NCAA national meet Nov. 23 at Bloomington, Ind.

Led by Tracy Dahl Morris, the Hawkeyes placed third at last weekend's NCAA District IV meet in Bloomington, Ind., behind third-ranked Wisconsin and No. 7 Michigan. The Hawkeyes fell from eighth to 17th in the final poll Monday, Villanova and Arkansas are ranked No. 1 and No. 2, respectively.

Morris qualified individually for the national meet by placing second at the district meet. The top three individuals and top two teams earned automatic berths.

CHICAGO (AP) - Tailback Robert Smith of Ohio State was named Monday the Big Ten's Offensive Player of the Week.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) - The financially troubled Heritage Bowl, the only bowl game for predominantly black schools, is moving from Miami to Tallahassee.

Injuries impede Hawkeyes' early progress

With three of her top returners bothered by injuries, Iowa basket-ball coach C. Vivian Stringer hopes her team can get ready for its first exhibition game of the season, Thursday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena against the Czechoslovakian National Team.

"I don't know if this is the year of the injuries, or if maybe it's the year of getting the injuries out of the way and getting on with it," Stringer said.

Wieland: every place but first

Curtis Riggs

The Daily Iowan

If yearning for a national championship was based solely on tenure, then no one would thirst for it more than goalkeeper Andrea Wieland.

The sixth-year senior has experienced her share of disappointment every year as a Hawkeye, finishing fourth in the NCAAs in 1987, second in '88 and third in '90.

"I know what it feels like to be all the other places," said Wieland, who will be tending the cage when the No. 2 Hawkeyes tangle with No. 3 Massachusetts in a Final Four semifinal game in Richmond, Va., Saturday.

"Now I want to know what it feels like to be No. 1.'

The 1990 first-team All-American arrived on campus the year after Iowa won its first and only national title in 1986.

"My first year, being a little naive, I was hoping we would repeat," said Wieland, who redshirted in 1989 because of a back injury and sat out 1991 to be the goalkeeper on the U.S. National team. "It has been my national championship the whole time and we have gotten everything but first."

Coach Beth Beglin said that she will feel secure with Wieland in goal due to her Final Four experi-

"Andrea can keep us in a game," said Beglin. "In two games against Penn State this year, Andrea has come up with spectacular saves."

Should the Hawkeyes get past the Minutewomen, they would face either No. 1 Old Dominion or No. 4 North Carolina. And Wieland's big-game experience could prove to be handy in the final, as she holds the Hawkeye single-game record with 25 saves in a 1-0 double overtime loss to the Monarchs in 1990, a game in which Iowa was outshot 31-5.

AP POLL

Hawks ranked No. 11

Iowa enters the 1992-93 season ranked behind two Big Ten rivals in first Associated Press Top 25 poll. But one of those rivals is ranked No. 1 and the other No. 4.

The Hawkeyes will start the season ranked No. 11 in the AP poll, higher than they were ranked all of last season, when they finished 20-11 and lost to eventual champion Duke in the NCAA tournament.

Michigan's Fab Five also lost to Duke, in the final game, ending their freshman year as close to a national championship as you can get. The Wolverines start their sophomore season No. 1 with Kansas, Duke, Indiana and Kentucky rounding out the top

"I think it says a lot of people recognize the quality of our layers and program and the strengths are perceived to be that good," Michigan coach Steve Fisher said Monday. "But there are 10 or 12 teams good enough to be considered the No. 1 team. I think we are one of those teams, but how good? I don't know.' Michigan received 23 of the 65 first-place votes and 1,536 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. Kansas, which was second in the final regularseason poll last year only to be upset by Texas-El Paso in the second round of the NCAA tournament, had 19 first-place votes and 1,513 points.

Two-time defending champion Duke was named first on 15 ballots and had 1,504 points, 15 more than Indiana, which was No. 1 on six ballots. Duke beat Indiana in the national semifinals last season before handily defeating Michigan 71-51 in the championship game. Kentucky was fifth followed by

Seton Hall, with two the only other team to get first-place votes, North Carolina, Memphis State, Florida State and Arizona. Iowa led the Second Ten, fol-

EXPANSION DRAFT

Expansion already beginning Ben Walker

Associated Press

NEW YORK - The Colorado Rockies began what might become baseball's biggest shopping spree ever, signing free agent Andres Galarraga on Monday, a day before the expansion draft.

Atlanta pitching phenom David Nied was expected to be the No. 1 pick by Colorado when the draft starts at 1 p.m. today. The Florida Marlins may follow by taking Toronto outfield prospect Nigel Wilson, and both teams figure to finish selecting each of their 36 players by about 8 p.m.

Then, it appears, the fun will really begin.

Because that's when the big names, the Lee Smiths and Shawon Dunstons and Jose Linds, should start flying. And the result could be much more than merely a stocking of two new teams; instead, it could be a major shakeup of the whole major leagues.

Sure, the Marlins and Rockies plan to pick young and inexpensive players, but both teams are certain

Indeed, Marlins general manager Dave Dombrowski said Monday that he already had two trades set to announce after the draft, and that he was continuing "serious trade talks" with 17 other general managers.
