Supreme Court refuses to review Guaman case

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court again rejected Monday a new attempt to end fights over 1990 U.S. military draftees who were arrested in the territory.

In 1990, the justices refused to review a lower court's decision that the U.S. military had the right to draft Guamanian citizens.

The board's majority, which was appointed by the national government, had accused Guam of being too lenient in dealing with six Guamanian citizens who had been arrested in the Bloody gums, a rioting that erupted outside the U.S. military installations that were on the island.

The justices had refused to consider the case and instead asked the lower court to consider whether the U.S. military had properly carried out its duties.

Shelter warns owners to winterize their pets

Susan Watzel
The Daily Iowan

Old man or dog is no friend of man's best friend. That's what the Coralville-Iowa City Animal Shelter, owner of Edward Jones and Chipotle the dogs make their annual visit to the shelter as they ask pet owners to provide for their animals' needs during the course of the upcoming winter weather conditions.

"We prefer to see pets inside with a heat source," said Thompson, animal control officer for the shelter. "We've had a lot of animals who were light of weight and they have a hard time warming up. It's important to provide a heat source." Thompson explained that there were several precautions that owners can take to protect their pets if they have to spend time outdoors.

Thompson said a dry, elevated dog house or igloo should be provided. "If it's too big for the dog, then they'll just go inside and warm themselves up." Thompson has found her dog, a 10-pound cat, "to be the best friend of another dog," and to provide warmth for the pet.

Thompson also said that feeding pets during the cold weather is crucial. "I have a large number of people who make huge donations to the shelter," she said. "But for other students, a more frequent way of helping is to donate food." Thompson said that donating heat sources, such as blankets, is also important.

UI specialist answers questions on meningitis

The center at Iowa's Advanced Technology Laboratories building is the only one in working with the nation in meningitis in Iowa City.

While students flock to the Tech Labs for the latest on meningitis, they're also getting some attention in the form of classes and workshops. Answers were provided by Richard Wenzel, an assistant professor of epidemiology.

Wenzel in it'll be easy to tell patients what the vaccine is and how it works. Basically, a carbohydrate vaccine is derived from the bacteria that cause meningitis. It's not a live product, but rather the same carbohydrate that people find in their own body.

He said the vaccine is made from the bacteria that cause meningitis and is an inactivated vaccine. It's not a live product, but rather the same carbohydrate that people find in their own body.

A meningitis vaccine is also being offered to students at the University of Iowa's Health Care Services. The vaccine can be obtained at the Student Health Care Services, which can be obtained through the Student Health Care Services.

UI students line up for free meningitis vaccinations.

The university launched a program to give meningitis vaccinations to all UI students in order to prevent the spread of the disease. The vaccinations were given on the morning of November 30, 1993, and were administered by the UI Student Health Service.

The vaccine was free for all students, and it was given in the Student Health Center. Students were encouraged to get the vaccine, and the university provided free transportation to the center.

UI students were urged by administrators and health officials to attend the clinic, despite the long lines and waiting periods.

The money was put up by the UI Student Health Service, Des Moines Business College, and the UI Student Health Service Group, plus the UI Student Health Service Group.

A former UI student trustee at the School of Art and Art History has claimed she was unfairly discriminated against because of her gender when she was passed over for a seat on the board of trustees and has announced that she will sue the University if the offer of a similar position is not made.

She also ran for the seat, according to the UI's Board of Trustees, and was second in the race.

The Daily Iowan has learned that the University's decision to offer the seat to a woman was based on the fact that the University's Board of Trustees is comprised of all men, and that the board is not currently composed of at least one woman.

In the lawsuit, Dunn claimed that he was passed over for the seat because of his gender. The University of Iowa denied the claim, stating that the board's decision was based on a number of factors, including the candidate's qualifications and their ability to contribute to the University.

The lawsuit was filed in the Fourth District Court of Iowa, and the University of Iowa has been served with the complaint.

The University of Iowa did not provide a comment on the lawsuit.

Lae it or not, sports is a minefield of anxiety. More often than not, it is a problem, a problem in the sense that whole. Racists and intolerance are issues that are causing great problems, not just in sports but in society as a whole.

It is this reality that led Martin Luther King Jr. to enter the sports page yet again. It will be reflective of the world we live in and the challenges we face daily.

It has recently come to light that Martin Schott, owner of the Cincinnati Reds baseball team, made some highly offensive statements about blacks and Jews. He admitted to using the word "nigger" in his speech to the team. Schott is a man having a swastika in his home, and doesn’t understand why a Jewish player was on the team. He has been described described players as "million-dollar niggers" and called Martin Luther King Jr. a "nigger." Alas, just like Schott, have even described players as "million-dollar niggers" and called Martin Luther King Jr. a "nigger." Alas, Allegedly, is in every sense of the word. It really should come as no surprise that the fans have one of the worst ratings of "hating minority.

What is a surprise is that it took so long for her destinations. These revelations are of the ultimate effect of Schott’s behavior, or lack thereof. People who have experienced such behavior in the past and still don’t see the issue of race in sports, need to read this article and realize that there is still a problem.

It may be true that Schott has an image problem for a race of people, racism should not and can’t allow this type of behavior to continue. Schott was voted down the

Exxon official's kidnapper gets life in prison

Derek Sapper
Associated Press

Former Exxon employee Frank Brown, who was convicted of kidnaping, assaulting and threatening a company executive, was sentenced to life in prison by a federal judge today.

Brown, 53, was found guilty of kidnapping and attempted murder in March, and was facing a possible death sentence. He had been charged with trying to kill Exxon Vice President James D. Smith, who was kidnapped in a remote area near Exxon's headquarters in Houston.

Under the program, 2 percentages points could be added to the interest rate on a borrower'sesar's first 30 years, or on the first 30 years of the mortgage, whichever is less. A typical borrower with an 80% loan-to-value ratio would see an increase of 90 basis points in the interest rate over the life of the loan, which is typically 30 years.

The program was adopted in response to a surge in defaults and foreclosures, which some analysts attribute to the high interest rates and low home prices.

The program is expected to benefit borrowers who are struggling to make their payments, as well as the housing market as a whole, which has been hit hard by the downturn.

Under the program, the 2 percentages points could be added to the interest rate on a borrower's sewer if the sewer was first delinquent. The sewer would then be considered delinquent, and the borrower would be required to make the missed payments.

The program is designed to help borrowers who are having difficulty making their payments, as well as to prevent delinquencies and foreclosures.
Sexual harassment a global problem

Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Sexual harassment plagued working throughout the industrialized world, and efforts to end it in some cases led to major legal means to combat the problem, the International Labor Organization said Monday.

The ILO, in a 450-page report, said only 23 of 257 countries surveyed—Australia, Canada, France, New Zealand, South Africa and the United States—have statutes that specifically refer to or define sexual harassment.

The UN said the report said that sexual harassment caused 6 to 25 percent of women heading to work, depending on the country, that these women have experienced sexual harassment at work and that 15 percent to 70 percent have experienced sexual harassment at work and that 15 percent to 70 percent have sexual harassment at work.

UN officials urge countries to define sexual harassment more clearly. Many governments, concerned about the consequences of sexual harassment, have experienced sexual harassment at work and that 15 percent to 70 percent have experienced sexual harassment at work and that 15 percent to 70 percent have sexual harassment at work.

HDLI's chief legal officer, Judge Thomas L. Thomas, said it's too soon for the claims to be evaluated. "I'm concerned about the way this is handled," he said, "but we're going to continue to watch it and keep a close eye on it."
