Flag to fly at half-staff in memory of UI doctor

The Old Capitol flag will be flown at half-staff today in memory of Dr. Patricia S. Hicks, 70, who died of cancer at Mercy Hospital on Monday.

Hicks was born Jan. 25, 1922 in Iowa City, and graduated from Iowa City High School and the UI Medical School. She has practiced at UI Student Health Service since 1961, and was a team physician affiliated with sports medicine at the UI.

Memorial donations may be made to the Dr. Pat Hicks Scholarship Fund.

CR youths arrested for cross burning

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Two Cedar Rapids teen-agers have been arrested in connection with an October cross burning.

Steven Harford, 19, was arrested Tuesday and charged with third-degree arson, officials said. An unidentified 17-year-old male was arrested last week and charged with third-degree arson and harassment.

The arson charges stemmed from a cross burning at a home on the city's northwest side. Officials said the juvenile also is charged with making harassing phone calls to the occupant of the house.

Both youths were released from custody on their promises to appear for future court hearings.

West Branch man charged with sexual abuse

A West Branch man was charged with two counts of second-degree sexual abuse Tuesday, adding to charges of second-degree sexual abuse and lascivious acts brought against him in October.

According to court documents, two 15-year-old girls gave statements to police that they had allegedly been molested by Dallas Warner.

One girl told police that Warner touched her vagina with his finger under her clothing and made her touch his private parts when she was 9. The other girl said he had done the same to her when she was 10.

According to Johnson County court documents, medical examinations of the girls revealed findings consistent with their statements.

In October similar charges were filed against Warner involving a 10-year-old girl and 8-year-old boy. A preliminary hearing for the recent charges has been set for Dec. 18 at the Johnson County Courthouse.

Mayors endorse Clinton's urban plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mayors of eight U.S. cities endorsed President-elect Bill Clinton's $20 billion urban-revitalization plan Wednesday and made it clear to Clinton's transition chair they expect an important role in guiding the changes.

"For so long, we in the cities have been closed out of everything," said New York Mayor David Dinkins after meeting with Vernon Jordan. "I'm looking forward to a fruitful relationship."

The eight met with Jordan on behalf of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Carrier RA helps nab burglary suspect

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

One of the largest crime sprees in the recent history of the residence halls is believed to be over, thanks in part to the vigilance of students and staff.

Officials have apprehended William Albert Harris, the man suspected of single-handedly going door to door down residence halls looking for unlocked rooms to burglarize.

Harris, 29, of 2535 Bartelt Road, Apt. 2C, is not a student at the UI and is being held at the Johnson County Jail on a bond of $6,500. He is scheduled for a court appearance this morning.

"The residents gave us a call (Wednesday) morning when they saw an individual matching the description," said Lt. Richard Gordon of the UI Department of Public Safety.

Gordon explained that Damon Neagle, a first-floor resident assistant in Currier Hall, was the first to call Public Safety.

"I saw him through my door peephole across the hallway inside someone's room," Neagle said. "So I walked out to get a drink of water and to get a good look at him."

Neagle said he then returned to his room, made the call to Public Safety and then proceeded to follow Harris to the east wing of Currier.

"He was already coming out of another room when I stopped him to talk to him," Neagle said.

Reportedly Neagle stalled Harris by talking to him when David Moore, a Currier Hall resident whose room Harris had just emerged, from stepped out into the hall.

"Hey, stop him, he's the guy that took my wallet," Moore reportedly said.

Neagle said that Harris then took off running and dropped three wallets.

"We chased him around the back of the building and around Dey House," Neagle said.

According to Gordon, five Public Safety officers responded to the call and Harris was detained as he was "walking hurriedly," on Clinton Street.

Harris was charged with second-degree burglary. See DORM BURGLARIES, Page 10A

DIVERSITY AT ISSUE

Rawlings: UI doesn't need plan like ISU's

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

The UI will not follow Iowa State University's lead in proposing a plan for using contributions toward diversity as criteria for faculty promotions and salary decisions because it does not need to, UI President Hunter Rawlings said Tuesday.

"I am very pleased that at this university we have talked about the issue of diversity on a large number of occasions," he said. "I think it is quite clear that we are very strongly committed to affirmative action at the UI, and that goes not just for hiring and recruiting, but it also goes toward how we present diversity in the curriculum."

At ISU, faculty members recently rebelled against a plan drawn up by a committee of students, faculty and administrators that made faculty members' contributions toward diversity a consideration in decisions about salary increases

TROOPS MEET WITH NO RESISTANCE

Aid planes arrive in Mogadishu

Tina Susman
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — U.S. Marines freed the capital from the grip of warring gunmen Wednesday and opened the way for mighty air convoys of soldiers and supplies to revive Somalia's starving interior.

The first mercy flight to Mogadishu hours after troops stormed ashore brought in powdered formula for famished children and adults.

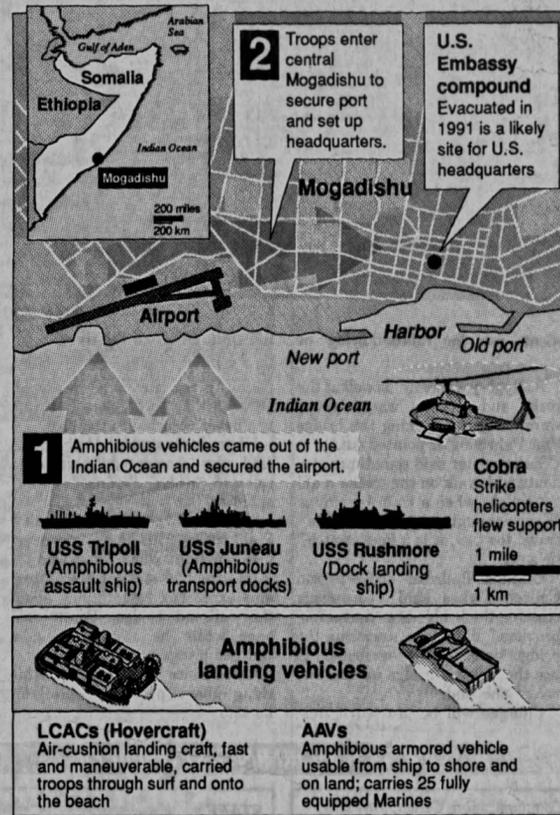

The Marines' next goal was to seize inland airstrips from bandits so that big U.S. transports can fly in tons of life-giving grain where it is needed most. The first of thousands of Army troops for the mission were to arrive today, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said in Washington.

Amid the thump of chopper blades and the rumble of amphibious vehicles, Somalis crowded hillsides and jammed into the airport to welcome the 1,800 Marines who brought Mogadishu one of its most peaceful days since civil war broke out two years ago.

There was no resistance. The teen-age gunmen and their cannon-mounted jeeps — the terror of the city since President Mohamed Siad Barre was overthrown in January 1991 — appeared mostly to have slipped out of town and into the bush.

But reporters saw youths riding in one pickup truck dismount two machine guns and stow them on the floor as the pickup approached a Marine checkpoint.

Mogadishu was in a festive mood for Marine Landing Day, an instant holiday. Youths perched on stacks of red, white and blue grain sacks to watch Marines dig fox-holes.

Many Somalis wanted the Marines to disarm gunmen.

"If there's no security, there is no food," said Omar Faiki, a 60-year-old former policeman.

After seizing the seaside airport and the harbor in uncontested landings at dawn, the Marines — spearheading a force of 28,000 U.S. troops — took up positions at three checkpoints leading into the city.

Three Marines entered the dented iron gates of the deserted U.S.

Embassy and hoisted the flag on a wobbly pole amid a litter of rusting typewriters. The $50 million embassy, built in 1990, was looted down to the rope on its flagpole after being evacuated last year.

In a diplomatic move, officials also raised U.S. flags on both sides of the Green Line separating the two warring clans in the capital. Old Glory went up over a liaison office in south Mogadishu, and over the former U.S. ambassador's residence in the north.

Food began arriving almost immediately. See SOMALIA, Page 10A

SUGGESTION DRAWS CRITICISM

Proposed funding cuts blasted by Pomerantz

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The president of the state Board of Regents shot back at the public schoolteachers' union Wednesday for proposing a cut in state university funding.

Marvin Pomerantz said an Iowa State Education Association proposal to increase public-school funding should not have come at the expense of higher education.

"I think that it's not good public policy to start to attack other segments of education," Pomerantz said. "We're all a necessary and integral part of a total structure and we have to find a way to work together and live together because the end result is educating our young people and it takes all the segments of education to be able to do that."

Pomerantz made his comments

"Where we have duplication we believe it ... (is) necessary duplication."

Medicaid. The ISEA has asked for a $116 million increase in public-school funding. Regents are seeking $26 million more than they get this year.

ISEA President Angie King said earlier this week that there is room to cut at the state universities, and that those institutions have not undergone the same reorganization that forced many rural public schools to merge in recent years. For example, she suggested that teacher-education programs could be dropped at the UI and Iowa State University, leaving the University of Northern Iowa as the only teacher-training program in the state university system.

Pomerantz told Branstad Wednesday that there already has been consolidation at the universities.

"Where we have duplication we believe it falls under the category of necessary duplication," said Pomerantz, a Des Moines businessman who was appointed to the Board of Regents by Branstad.

SOME PREFER ALTERNATIVE LIVING

UI students lounge around in temp housing

Anne Johnston
The Daily Iowan

High above campus, overlooking scenic Clinton Street, UI students Dave Abelson and Will McNary are enjoying what they like to refer to as "lounge life."

Originally told they would be assigned rooms no later than Oct. 2, Abelson and McNary are the only students on campus still in what is known as "temporary housing."

All semester, the only place they have had to call home is a study lounge on the fourth floor of Burge, but they're not complaining.

"We love it! It's like the presidential suite of the residence halls in Iowa City," Abelson said. "We have tons of space in here, we have a kitchen, and we have huge windows with a gorgeous view."

The lounge overlooks the busy Cambus stop across the street from Burge, providing Abelson and McNary with plenty of opportunities for people-watching.

Recently, however, one of those people down below threw a rock up and broke one of the lounge's windows.

"I think they were jealous," Abelson said.

McNary insisted temporary housing isn't nearly as bad as many students are led to believe.

"People walk by and say, 'Man... you're still living in temp housing?' like it's something bad," he said. "If they could only see inside here, they'd see how great it is."

However, at the beginning of the semester when there were nine people living in the lounge, temporary housing wasn't quite so "great," McNary said.

"It was like a living nightmare," he said. "The beds were stacked up to the ceiling and there wasn't very much elbow room."

But in late September, in what McNary said he likes to call "The Great Divide," four of the students moved to another lounge.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

With plenty of space and a great view, UI students Dave Abelson and Will McNary are not complaining about their temporary housing assignment in this Burge Hall lounge.

Then, one by one, Abelson and McNary's remaining "lounge-mates" were assigned rooms.

"And then there were two, and that's me and Dave," McNary said.

In their lounge, Abelson and McNary have a total of five beds and six study carrels in addition to a table and a couch.

They also have room to indulge in their hobbies. In one corner, McNary has set up a small studio where he paints, and Abelson has plenty of floor space on which to tie dye.

There's also plenty of room for recreational activities, such as tossing a football, playing hackey sack, and even racing around the room on Abelson's bike.

"Everybody who comes over here to visit us is like, 'Yeah, this place is way better than my shitty little cramped dorm room,'" Abelson said.

"If I ever meet anybody else who ends up in temporary housing, I'll be like 'All right, man, congratulations!'" he added.

In fact, Abelson and McNary have grown so accustomed to "temporary" housing that in November, they requested to stay until the end of the semester.

"We get along real well so we just decided, 'Hey, instead of going through the trouble of moving and having to break in a new roommate, why don't we just stay here and chill in Burge?'" McNary said.

With final exams fast approaching, the UI Housing Assignment Office agreed to let them do just that.

"We could have assigned them way before Thanksgiving, but they asked if they could stay, and their parents asked if they could stay, so we made an exception," said Maggie Van Oel, assistant director of housing.

Last year, all students in temporary housing had been assigned rooms by Sept. 17, but Van Oel said every year is different.

Despite its unfavorable reputation Van Oel said requests to remain in temporary housing are not unusual.

"It always seems like if people are in there for a little bit, it's hard to get them out," she said.

Abelson and McNary have both received room assignments — in Burge and Mayflower, respectively — effective at the end of the semester.

"I think the thing I'm going to miss most is the view," Abelson lamented. They will probably miss the rent, too.

Living in the lounge all semester has been costing Abelson and McNary $2 per day, as opposed to $7.44 per day for the average residence-hall double without air conditioning.

PEDESTRIANS CHOOSE THE HIGH ROAD

Railroad bridge warnings fail to deter risk-takers

Most say they use the bridge because it's the fastest and most scenic way to cross the river.

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

The signs warning pedestrians off the railroad bridge crossing the Iowa River between the Union and the English-Philosophy Building have been left nearly unreadable by rust and graffiti.

The wooden planks creak underfoot as one ventures along the narrow walkway beside the railroad tracks on the bridge. With a glance down to either side one can see the murky waters of the Iowa River 15 feet below. Frequently, ice and snow collect on the surface of the walkway and present an added danger during the winter months.

Despite all this, a few UI students in search of a shortcut to class choose to take the railroad bridge anyway.

UI sophomore Jason Plosch said he takes the railroad bridge rather than the footbridge up the river because "it's the closest way to get from EPB to the Music Building."

Plosch said he likes the railroad bridge because it is old and "it's probably the least frequently traveled bridge on campus."

Mike Cassidy, a UI sophomore, said he prefers the railroad bridge because for him it is the fastest way to get to the east side of the Iowa River. The railroad bridge is also more scenic than the others, he added.

UI senior Brian Minnis said the bridge makes his walk to class "just a little shorter."

Minnis said his main reason for taking the bridge is that it saves time, but also said he likes the graffiti on the sides of it.

UI sophomore Tim Schultz agreed

Despite the dangers, many UI students use the railroad bridge near the Union to cross the river.

that time is the main factor for taking the bridge.

"It's a lot shorter — we've measured it out," he said.

Schultz said he and his friends have observed other students taking nearby bridges and that they take longer to get to their destinations.

William Fuhrmeister, director of the UI Department of Public Safety, said the bridge actually falls under the jurisdiction of the authorities from the Crandic Railroad, but he recommends students take the Iowa Avenue bridge by EPB or the footbridge by the Union due to "numerous safety factors."

A slippery walkway, as well as the rocks and shallow water below, were dangers of taking the bridge that Fuhrmeister pointed out.

Fuhrmeister said sometimes students who walk on the tracks could get caught when a train is coming. "Even though the trains don't travel too fast, it is a long stretch," he said.

Crandic Railroad spokesperson Colleen Dykes said pedestrians crossing the bridge is a "continuing problem." With trains crossing the bridge daily, "it's very foolish to use the railroad bridge to cross the river," she said.

Charges will be pressed if trespassers are caught, Dykes said, although she conceded that this has never occurred in the past.

UI graduate student Aletha Stahl said she considered taking the railroad bridge Wednesday, but opted for the footbridge.

"I don't have a train schedule," Stahl said. "This one's more secure, especially when it's snowing."

UI graduate student Tom Pozen also expressed reservations about the railroad bridge a train came.

"Ever since then, I've had this thing about pedestrian bridges," he said.

WOMEN'S ARCHIVES ALSO INVOLVED

Officials seek records of women's athletics

Lesley Keedy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa women and girls have enjoyed the opportunity to participate in athletics for generations, and while phenomenal records have been kept for men's athletics, hardly any have been retained for females.

In an effort to restore the record, the UI Women's Athletics is joining the Iowa Women's Archives in conducting a search for photographs, scrapbooks, videotapes, diaries and letters documenting the history of Iowa girls and women in athletics.

"Women's athletics started almost a century ago but many people think they didn't begin until the 1970s," UI Women's Athletics Director Christine Grant said. "It's important that we join together in documenting this. Thousands of women have enjoyed girls' sports but we have no information about it."

Much of the credit for giving girls the opportunity to participate in athletics goes to E. Wayne Cooley, executive secretary of the Iowa High School Girls' Athletic Union, said Iowa Women's Archives curator Karen Mason.

"When Cooley became the executive secretary of the IHSGAU in 1954 there was only one sport for girls — basketball. He made the program much bigger and added track and field, softball, golf, swimming, tennis, volleyball and cross country," Mason said.

For his achievements, Cooley will be recognized in a halftime ceremony during the Iowa women's basketball game in the second round of the Amana Hawkeye Classic. Female student athletes from all of Iowa's high schools and middle schools have been invited to participate in the celebration.

As a lasting tribute to Cooley, the E. Wayne Cooley Women's Sports Research Assistantship has been created to fund a graduate student to collect written materials and memorabilia on girls and women in athletics in Iowa for the archives.

"The assistantship will provide the archives with the resources to collect and preserve the historical record of girls' athletics in the state," Mason said.

Grant said collection of these records is very important to provide some of the answers to the history of women's athletics.

"When I came to the the state in the late 1960s I was appalled with the women's athletics situation," Grant said. "I thought this country was so supposed to be a model of democracy. It bowled me over to see that discrimination was so rampant."

However, she said that while still far behind men's athletics, the state of Iowa was about 50 years ahead of all other states in women's basketball, thanks to Cooley's contributions.

Mason said collected material will be used for research and exhibits. "There has not been enough attention paid to women's sports in this country and Iowa is no exception," she said. "Something as seemingly insignificant as a letter could provide the information we're missing."

RELEASE CALLED 'PREMATURE'

Faculty upset over report to regents

Assembly members say the process was rushed.

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

Members of the UI College of Liberal Arts faculty assembly, distressed about what they considered a "premature release" of the benchmarks report in the "Framework for Selected Instructional Improvement" drafted a resolution to be passed on to the UI administration as well as the Iowa state Board of Regents at their meeting Wednesday.

UI English Professor Miriam Gilbert said submitting the benchmarks report in its draft form is "an appalling and embarrassing way for a university to proceed."

Judith Aikin, interim dean of the College of Liberal Arts, explained that because the report is part of the regents' published agenda for its next meeting, there was pressure to finish the document by the Dec. 1 deadline.

This prompted Gilbert to begin drafting the resolution, which was later passed by the assembly without dissent, expressing the assembly's concern about "the rushed process and lack of consultation which characterizes the benchmarks part of the report."

The resolution further states, "We feel this process produces inadequate data which are so flawed that conclusions drawn from them are suspect."

In other business, UI rhetoric Associate Professor Fred Antczak presented the Educational Policy Committee's recommendations concerning residency requirements and interdisciplinary certificate programs.

The committee proposed a number of modifications to the current policies.

"The reason this consideration occurred was to more closely match the college's policy to the education-seeking patterns of contemporary students," Antczak said.

He explained that the committee felt students who switch colleges within the university are treated unfairly under the residence requirement.

"We propose to change the idea of residence from collegiate to university residence," he said.

Antczak said the committee was also concerned about students who "due to financial or other reasons are moving back and forth between community colleges and the university."

Under the proposed change, students would be allowed to transfer credits from other colleges even after earning 62 credit hours.

SEATS MAY LIMIT CITY SERVICES

Supervisors discuss spending options

Johnson County SEATS was one of the organizations lobbying the board for additional funding.

Susan Kreimer
The Daily Iowan

Faced with a spending freeze for the 1994 fiscal year, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors listened to the first round of presentations Wednesday from county departments in an effort to decide allocation of steady funds and retain services amid rising expenditures.

Larry Olson, director of Special Elderly and Handicapped Transportation System, said the organization, which is three years behind in the purchase of new vehicles because of the delays in funding from the federal government, has had to refuse service to some users because of the shortage of vehicles available.

Olson said that on Tuesday SEATS had to turn down about 40 people who called in to schedule rides through next week.

SEATS, which has serviced Johnson County since 1975 and provides about 110,000 one-way rides every year, will order five new vans, valued at $30,000 each, this month. Delivery is expected by June 30.

The federal government has supplied $112,500, 75 percent of the cost for the new vehicles and transferred those funds to the state. The remaining 25 percent, estimated at about $40,000, will come from the state government, Olson said.

Supervisor Betty Ockenfels asked whether increasing the requested donation fee for SEATS could be used to supplement funding.

Olson said the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 requires that donations do not exceed the fares charged on city buses more than twofold. That stipulation will have to be implemented within the next five years. Currently the suggested donation is $1.50, three times the Iowa City Transit fare, he said.

Board members discussed several possible cost-saving measures. Options included a plan for SEATS to either eliminate service on Sundays or cut back the hours of service provided Monday through Friday.

Another option would be for the county to discontinue its contract with Iowa City and Coralville and to set up a new system, in which the county would be responsible for rural areas.

Supervisor Patricia Meade voiced her opposition to this option because it would cause an unnecessary hardship for the city.

"Johnson County provides a very good service and I don't want to see it disrupted," Meade said. "It's vital that we remember that we represent everyone in Johnson County."

RAWLINGS TO 'LOOK INTO' MATTER

Gov.: UI not doing enough to provide rural drs.

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad interrupted a state university budget presentation Wednesday to chastise the UI for not turning out enough doctors to work in rural Iowa.

"We've got another medical school here in Des Moines and frankly they've done a better job placing physicians in rural Iowa than the University of Iowa has," Branstad said.

The governor was referring to the University of Osteopathic Medicine and Health Sciences, a private school in Des Moines. That school and the UI College of Medicine are the only physician-training institutions in Iowa.

Branstad said rural Iowa doctors have complained about a lack of support from the UI. The governor said he has heard reports that some UI medical-school professors discourage students from seeking careers in rural areas.

"I sympathize with those who have been hearing those things," said UI President Hunter Rawlings.

"Faculty in the College of Medicine have been saying a lot of things lately, so we've got some work to do," he said.

Rawlings has also had to deal this week with rumblings from some medical-school faculty members upset about a pending change in administration at the UI Hospitals and Clinics and the colleges of medicine, dentistry, pharmacy and nursing. Rawlings is on the verge of naming a new university vice president to oversee those areas.

Board members thank community for support

The board has already contacted architects to begin discussions on various projects, with a goal of ground breaking for construction after the spring thaw.

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

Following the successful passage of the $7.9 million bond issue Tuesday, the Iowa City School Board took advantage of its regular meeting Wednesday night to thank voters for their support.

The bond will fund the construction of a new elementary school in southwest Iowa City, and classroom renovations and additions at various schools throughout the district.

"I would like to thank the community profusely," board member Sally Staley said. "I think that we will warrant the trust you've given us."

Board member Michael Howard added that he was impressed throughout the campaign with the large number of community members who worked to help get the bond passed.

"It takes a whole community to educate a child," he said.

Director of Administrative Services Jerry Palmer said the administration will move quickly to get the projects under way. This week Evensen Dodge Financial Consul-ants has been working on getting a "bond rating" for the district which is required before selling of the bonds can occur. The bonds will probably be sold the first week of January, he said.

Palmer added that meetings have begun with the architects on the various projects with a goal of completing project specifications by early spring and breaking ground for construction after the spring thaw.

In other business, the board heard a demographic report by UI geography Professor Gerard Rushton. The report indicates that 9,300

"I would like to thank the community profusely. I think that we will warrant the trust you've given us."

Sally Staley, School Board member

resident students are enrolled in the district and that the figure could reach 10,200 by the year 2000. Enrollment figures do not include special-education students.

Also, the gradual increase in students is expected to level off after the year 2000. The largest growth will be at the high-school level because the number of elementary and junior-high students has been increasing as well.

Rushton explained that overall district projections should be very accurate, but individual school forecasts are subject to more variability because of changes in open enrollment, busing, and school-boundary areas.

He added that the question addressed by the report on individual school enrollments is an attempt to determine only how many students live in a certain attendance area, not necessarily how many are actually in that school.

Currently, the schools with the highest enrollments are Penn Elementary with 529 students, South East Junior High with 783 students and City High with 1,350 students.

The board also approved a proposal to replace the Iowa Test of Basic Skills with an "authentic assessment" at the kindergarten through second-grade level. Also, the ITBS and the Iowa Test of Educational Development will be administered in alternate years to grades 7-12, and yearly to grades 3-6.

Staley opposed the motion, saying that the ITBS is a valuable external assessment of educational development.

"This is one measurement of the cumulative educational growth of your child," she said.

Additionally, the board approved the termination of the Saturday Enrichment School for grades 3-6 which offered elective courses in various subjects from computers to bookmaking, citing staffing difficulties. Staley expressed concern over ending the program without assessing the program to find its weaknesses first, which could set a precedent for future actions.

"I really don't want every program with over 100 students to have to send a board member to see if their program has been dropped," she said.

The board agreed to spend the next year evaluating the program to determine how it could be improved.

Omaha student's meningitis case believed to be isolated incident

Associated Press
OMAHA, Neb. — A case of meningitis in a 19-year-old University of Nebraska at Omaha student is considered an isolated incident, according to Douglas County Health Department officials.
 The unidentified male student was hospitalized Saturday but appears to be making good progress in battling the infection of the lining of the brain and spinal cord, said John Weston, chief of the Health Department's clinical services.

 Weston said there is no known link between the UNO student and Iowa meningitis cases, even though all were caused by Group C organisms.

 Weston said the source of the organism that infected the UNO student probably will never be known.
 The Douglas County Health Department is not recommending vaccines.

International students make most of break

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

For most students at the UI, the biggest holiday of the year is just around the corner after they make it through finals week. For many of the 1,900 international students at the UI, however, the Christmas holiday break has little or no meaning other than a month without classes.

While many have the financial resources and the desire to return to their native countries over the break, some either choose to remain here or are forced to because they don't have the money to travel home.

According to Lisa Dings, a foreign student adviser at the UI Office of International Education and Services, foreign students who don't head home spend their break in many different ways.

Dings said that while many international students use the time off to travel around the United States on their own, others choose to stay in the Iowa City area.

Zhang Xiangmin, a first-year graduate student in electrical and computer engineering, said she isn't going to return to her native China this holiday break and isn't sure when she will again.

"I have to work to earn money and then at the same time I'll study in the lab to do a project," she said.

Many international students have plans to explore America, with the South being a favored locale for many, according to Dings.

"Florida is a popular destination," she said.

That's where South Korean Eom Kyong Shik, a first-year doctoral student in finance, said he'd like to visit this break if he can.

"I am going to visit my friend who was a classmate in my country. I want to look around America, so I might drive down to Florida," he said, noting that he hopes he can get some studying done as well.

"I don't know if I'll have enough time to do that, but I want to," he said.

Visiting history student Taketazu

Manabu from Japan said he and several friends plan to rent a car and venture out to other regions of the United States as well.

"We're going around the U.S., to the South and the East," he said.

For students with families, traveling to other parts of the country is a much harder proposition, and many choose to stay in the Iowa City area during the break.

"I have two children," said education graduate student Lee Soo from South Korea. "Supporting my family is the most important thing except for studying."

Some international students participate in "international house" programs sponsored by churches around the United States, Dings said. Students spend part of the holiday season either living in a family's home or with other students in a church or dormitory.

She explained that while the programs do not try to convert foreign students to Christianity, they do offer them an exposure to the Christmas tradition.

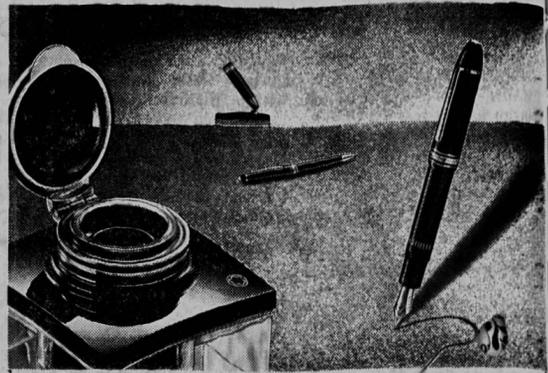

"It gives foreign students an opportunity to see how Americans celebrate Christmas and an opportunity to see another part of the country," she said.

Cheryl Warren, coordinator of the Southern Baptist Convention's Friendship International House, said this year 330 international students will be placed through the program with families and churches from Dec. 19 to Jan. 1.

According to Warren, many students studying in the southern part of the United States like to be placed farther north so they can see snow, while many of those already in the wintery regions like to head south.

"We see a big crossover there with people switching climates," she said.

While it's too late to apply this year for the program and some others like it, Dings said that for those staying in the Iowa City area this break, at least one foreign-student organization has tentatively planned an activity over the holidays.

Man killed in semi collision on snow-covered interstate

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Nasty weather conditions led to one fatality Wednesday afternoon following a head-on collision between a semitrailer-truck and a minivan on Interstate 80, just east of the North Dodge Street exit. Two others were injured.

Robert James Coleman, 68, of Davenport, died after he was thrown from the backseat of the minivan. Coleman's wife Patricia and their daughter Maureen Bennett, the driver of the vehicle, suffered multiple injuries. The driver of the semi was not injured in the collision.

Bennett was driving eastbound on I-80 when she lost control of the vehicle. The vehicle crossed the median and entered westbound traffic before striking the semi.

According to the Iowa State Patrol and the Johnson County Sheriff's Department, Bennett and Patricia Coleman were wearing seat belts. Whether Coleman was wearing his seat belt is unknown.

The Iowa City Police Department also reported 22 traffic accidents within city limits; however, dispatcher Kelly Jehle said there were no injuries.

Jehle urged drivers to use common sense under such slippery conditions — to drive slower and to be aware of other drivers.

Despite the poor road conditions neither Cambus nor the Iowa City Transit reported any major accidents.

Bush administration rethinking policy on Bosnia

Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With the situation in Yugoslavia deteriorating daily, the Bush administration is looking for ways to step up pressure on Serb forces who have besieged the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo.

Government sources said the administration is reconsidering its policy of noninvolvement, specifically looking anew at the possibility of using air power to enforce a no-fly zone over Bosnia or of lifting an arms embargo to allow Bosnia to acquire weapons to defend itself.

On Oct. 9, the U.N. Security Council ordered a halt to military flights over Bosnia, but no action has been taken to enforce the ban and Serb flights have continued. The administration also is grappling with how it can support Serb opponents of hard-line President Slobodan Milosevic. Presidential elections are scheduled for Dec. 20, and Milosevic is being challenged by a moderate, federal Premier Milan Panic. Some U.S. officials believe Milosevic may try to rig the elections.

The continuing siege of Sarajevo that has jeopardized international aid shipments on which the population depends has persuaded some in the administration and on Capitol Hill that the current policy is a failure.

There has been heavy fighting around the city in recent days. Five people in a bread line were killed when a missile, apparently fired from a Serb position in the nearby hills, struck the place where they were standing. "It is hard to get a united view right now" within the administration, said one senior government official, who spoke only on the condition of anonymity.

NEW CODE CALLS FOR 5-YEAR BAN

Clinton's team reveals new rules on lobbying

Jim Fournier
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Bill Clinton's transition team Wednesday unveiled a tough new ethics plan that would bar top government officials from lobbying their former agencies for five years after they leave office.

The new code, designed to bar administration officials from quickly trading their access for private gain, also would require them to sign a pledge agreeing never to represent foreign governments.

"These are the strongest standards any president has asked of his employees," said Clinton transition Director Warren Christopher.

Some 1,100 political appointees will be covered by the new ethics code, he said, calling it "a clear break with existing practice." "No doubt these rules will make people unhappy," Christopher said at a news conference. But he called the ethics rules — which do not require congressional approval — a "dramatic step to show that we're serious about making government work."

Current law bans any former government employee from lobbying his or her old agency for one year and bans top officials from lobbying any Cabinet secretaries and undersecretaries or lobbying on behalf of foreign nations for one year.

The new code, which Clinton had promised during his campaign and which he can impose by executive order once he takes office, is designed to underscore his vow to "slow the revolving door" between federal jobs and the private sector.

The Arkansas governor has complained that former government officials can become lobbyists too soon and cash in on their public service.

The current practice, said Christopher, "saps public confidence in the entire political process."

The Clinton administration will be prepared to seek court injunctions to stop violations of the code and sue if necessary to recover income obtained through such practices, he said.

"By these rules, we seek to change the climate in Washington and bring in a new area of public service," Christopher said.

Those covered by the code — basically officials earning more than $104,000 a year — will have to pledge not to lobby their former agencies for five years after leaving government, he said.

Associated Press

Clinton transition Director Warren Christopher explains the new administration's ethics rules at a briefing in Little Rock, Ark., Wednesday.

Top White House aides will be banned from lobbying any department for which they had substantial responsibility for the same five-year period.

All appointees covered by the code would have to agree never to lobby for foreign governments.

The code will apply to roughly one-third of Clinton's approximately 3,000 political appointments.

Not covered are highly paid career civil servants such as foreign-service officers and former officials who go to work for other federal, state or local government agencies. In addition, former government scientists who later work for non-profit corporations would still be able to seek federal grants.

Asked if Clinton himself would follow the code once he leaves office, Christopher said: "I'd be very surprised if he didn't follow the rules he promulgated."

In his book, "Putting People First," Clinton outlined the ethics code and said, "We will then challenge members of Congress to do the same."

The president-elect may not openly draw Congress into the ethics fight, but a senior transition aide said Clinton's goal is clear: "If we put in these ethics rules, maybe Congress will do the same. We can shame them into it."

Transition aides rushed to get the rules released before Clinton announces his first Cabinet appointments.

"You've got to first say, 'Here are the rules,' then say, 'Here are the jobs,'" said an aide, who also spoke on the condition of anonymity.

With the release of new ethics rules, prospective appointees must determine whether a Cabinet post is worth sacrificing lobbying business. Several of Clinton's advisers, including some on his short lists for appointments, make money lobbying.

SOMALIA

Not a simple situation

The human tragedy and ferment in Somalia and subsequent decisions by the United Nations and the United States to militarily intervene have predictably invoked two characteristic responses across the spectrum of opinions in the United States. There are those who are persuaded by the humanitarian-cause argument of the Bush administration on the one hand, and the critics who wonder whether the United States should police the world, and why such effort should be selectively used to help Somalia and not Sudan or Yugoslavia, on the other.

It is doubly unfortunate that mass-media coverage of the tragedy in Somalia or the ongoing multilateral military intervention have miserably failed to educate the American public on the causes and uniqueness of the Somali situation. Instead, they have opted for the easy (or glamorous) way out by merely describing the horrid details, saying how irredeemably hopeless the situation is. Even minimal interpretive attempts by the media could have sufficed to allay critics' fears. For example, unlike the case in other countries where deep ethnic and religious divides are at the roots of conflict, Somalia is unbelievably monolithic for the intensity and enormity of mayhem and chaos. Ninety-nine percent of Somalia's population is Sunni Muslim; Hamitic peoples comprise nearly all of her population, speaking the same language. This is the case in neither Sudan nor in Yugoslavia. Why should such a monolithic group seemingly rejoice in preying on one another with guns, or merely starving one another to death? This is the question that the media should help address instead of attempting to draw nonexistent parallels.

FIBER-OPTICS NETWORK

Finding funding when none is available

Branstad has arrived at a new list of proposals that pairs the expansion of a largely underfunded fiber-optics system with the ever-popular motif of "no new taxes." Due to the inability to produce the necessary $1 million, three Iowa community colleges have attempted to refuse link-up to the system. However, it appears likely that none of the three schools will be allowed to pull out as funding for the project becomes increasingly scarce.

Also, while Branstad will reportedly consider granting the schools more funding, a positive decision is predicted to end with the consideration itself. So how will the Iowa community colleges compensate with such a loss? Most likely, through the all-too-familiar tactics of increased tuitions or employee cuts. More interestingly, how will the state government, which allegedly cannot afford to grant the schools the extra funds, cover their own losses? So far, the system is estimated to have cost the taxpayers over $200 million and is 65 percent completed, though Branstad still maintains his plans to avoid the creation of new taxes in his future term. In his proposed outline, he also suggests improving school systems and cracking down on crime. Desirable as these programs sound, both also require money which Branstad will attempt to receive simply through interest and refinancing. The traditional welfare and health-care cuts, as usual, provide what he feels to be further financial justification for his policies, as he places continued precedence on technology over needful welfare recipients.

While other such pertinent issues of more serious caliber require funding, and while the state budget in general feels the economic crunch, acquisition of a system which enhances communication between two or more points within the state seems frivolous, to say the least.

Admittedly, the fiber-optics network would benefit at least one man. All Iowa state-government offices would have access the technology, involving, strangely enough, the same man who is campaigning for its usage.

Eliminating oppressive 'family' rhetoric

Sunday was a terrible day to be on the road. My wife and I drove to Des Moines in the morning, starting out in drizzle. It started to snow a few miles east of the city, and some drivers wound up in the ditch. The drive home that afternoon was much worse. We hit patchy fog and freezing drizzle a few miles east of Des Moines. We drove the last stretch at 30-40 mph, just another car in a sheet-metal snake crawling down the interstate.

We visited my dad and his wife. My dad is many things. He can contradict himself. He sells GM cars and dislikes the Japanese, whom he calls "the little people to the west." But he enjoys his new Mitsubishi TV. He is stubborn. He pulled out a copy of a column on Malcolm X that I wrote two summers ago. We replayed the argument we had then about who Malcolm X was. Some of his ideas are frightening: When I asked him point-blank if he thought the Tiananmen Square massacre was justified, he shot back, "Yes, I think the Chinese government did what they felt they had to do to stop the spread of disorder."

Yet, we are linked by more than blood. Dad spent his professional life in education as a teacher, coach and administrator. He is one reason why I was drawn to teaching, and I can trace much of my fascination with history and politics to him. A plaque which commemorates his service in the Army Air Corps sparked my interest in World War II.

One summer, he was working on his master's degree and writing about the People's Republic of China. I was 11, and had grown up hearing about some fearful thing called "communism." But I didn't know what communism was, so I hustled down to the branch library and checked out a book. With Dad's help I learned, albeit from a different perspective than he may have anticipated.

Keeping a balance between my parents after their divorce was difficult. I visited my dad every weekend, but my mom was the one who was there every day. She was alone, a working mother that the company took for granted. She is a hard-working woman with a high-school diploma. I remember how frustrated she became when the college-educated men she had trained were promoted above her.

To this day, I am awed by her endurance and resilience. We spent many a Friday night together at the kitchen table. Mom would pour out her anger and frustration, while I would listen. But she would be up at 5:45 a.m. Monday to catch the 7:15 bus. She had to work to support four children. She showed me a different kind of toughness than the kind my dad valued as a football coach. Her toughness was in working hard, but not for a company which exploited her. She sacrificed for us kids, because we were what mattered to her.

Something hit me while I was showing my dad how to program his VCR. Sharon wanted it set to record her soap operas, so I showed Dad how to do it. She also wanted to tape "Miracle on 34th Street." Dad set that program by himself, having learned by watching me. In paying a part of the debt I owe to him, I saw a connection with the work I do every day.

I have a part-time job working with mentally retarded adults. I helped one client assemble a TV cabinet that he bought. However, that "help" took the form of guiding him through the assembly, which he did himself. I may have torqued a screw tighter here or read an instruction there, but he did the bulk of the work. I could have finished the job in less time if I did it myself, but that wasn't the point. He wanted to do it himself, and my role was to show him how. Perhaps without knowing it, he has been teaching me patience.

Writing is a subtler activity than assembling a cabinet. I know I've frustrated many a student with my emphasis on process, but writing demands constant self-criticism. You have to assess your own ability, diagnose your problems and come up with solutions. But learning works both ways. One of the most memorable discussions I remember overhearing happened when one class redefined "family."

That group of students taught me a broader view of "family." Thanks to them, I finally understood why I spent years avoiding "family." It wasn't "family" that was frightening, but one definition which is stifling and oppressive. Blood ties are only one form of it. What links a group of people together is shared history. The common experience of joy and sorrow cements a commitment to other people.

"Family" is oppressive if it is used to blame the victims of exploitation for their plight, as Dan Quayle did when he made the astonishing declaration that the L.A. rebellion showed a lack of "family values." "Family" is stifling when it becomes an excuse to hate gay and lesbian couples and dismiss their sexuality. "Family" is suffocating when women are told their only roles are homemaker, wife and mother.

A class of students, brought together for 16 weeks by registration and university requirements, may not be a "family." But a circle of friends who shares the four (or five or six or seven) years of college may be. The need for support from other people does not end when you move out of the parents' house; you look for new people to rely on. I remember meeting a funny, crazy woman in Burge dining. I unloaded dishes from the dishwasher, she sorted silverware. The setting was not classically romantic.

Donna and I became good friends. That relationship has lasted for over 17 years, five as "just friends," the last 12 as husband and wife. Some people may not consider four cats and two people a "family," but we don't care. We complement each other. Each of us has the other to share our triumphs and setbacks with. If you feel liberated by your family, apologize to no one. People who don't like its form can stuff it. They need to get lives so the rest of us can live ours.

Abandonment of select taboos irrational

"Take but a degree away, untune that string, and hark what discord follows."

— William Shakespeare, "Troilus and Cressida"

The taboo. The very word itself conjures up images of superstition and backwardness. Modern individuals hardly need defer to the unthinking, constraining strictures of a taboo system. So the recent history of our age is the history of the destruction of our taboos, and that with a vengeance.

After all, taboos prevent us from doing what we want to do; they impede our journey towards happiness and self-fulfillment; they prevent us from following our own lights.

Since we know that personal liberation is good, then we know that the destruction — or, perhaps better, the consumption — of the taboo system is also good. But like an economic externality while the benefits seem to outweigh the costs on the individual level — that is, we never bear the full cost of our individual liberation — the matter may be quite different when we sum the costs over society as a whole.

Thus Leszek Kolakowski, a professor at the University of Chicago and Oxford University, writes in his essay, "Modernity on Endless Trial," that the "most dangerous characteristic of modernity," the aspect that he fears most, is "the disappearance of taboos."

Kolakowski points out that "there is no way to distinguish between 'good' and 'bad' taboos, artificially to support the former and remove the latter; the abrogation of one, on the pretext of its irrationality, results in a domino effect that brings the withering away of others. . . . Various traditional human bonds which make communal life possible, and without which our existence would be regulated only by greed and fear, are not likely to survive without a taboo system, and it is perhaps better to believe in the validity of even apparently silly taboos than to let them all vanish."

Kolakowski may seem overly pessimistic in his assessment of the fragility of cultural norms. Yet how do modern, rational individuals reasonably distinguish between, say, any one of the "silly" sexual taboos and the "good" taboos against, say, behaving cruelly.

After all, University of Virginia philosopher Richard Rorty, who perhaps has replaced Harvard philosopher John Rawls as the leading liberal philosopher, says that the liberal has no answer for the question, "Why not be cruel?"

Remember, Rorty fancies himself as a defender of liberalism. Yet Rorty sneers at attempts to ground liberalism in a metaphysics or a theology (which pointedly indicts Rawls's project in his "A Theory of Justice"). Any absolute, that is, any taboo, is perforce illiberal, even if it is a taboo against treating other people cruelly.

Rorty cannot find a principled method to distinguish between taboos that we may want to keep — like strictures against cruelty — and taboos that we think we want to throw away. Liberal instruments are much too blunt to perform surgery on the body social without killing the patient.

Take a more practical example. Christians often quote from two passages in the Old Testament book of Leviticus in order to show that Christianity has a taboo against homosexual acts. Homosexual activists respond by pointing out that Leviticus is full of other taboos — those concerning diet, ritual uncleanness and the such — that Christians do not keep. Because Christians do not keep some Levitical taboos, the argument then goes, Christian morality does not obligate us to keep any Levitical taboo. Note the blunt edge of the argument — it obliges us to throw out all of Leviticus.

What the activists making this argument neglect, however, is that sandwiched in between the taboo against homosexual acts are taboos against robbery, oppressing the poor and hate. All these taboos radiate from the central stricture, "you shall love your neighbor as yourself" (Leviticus 19:18). This is, of course, the law that Jesus quoted, along with a law from Deuteronomy, as being one of the two greatest commands, and the very summation of the Old Testament law: To love God above all things, and to love your neighbor as yourself.

Destroy the taboo against homosexual acts and you also destroy the heart of what liberals most approve of in Christianity: the command to love our neighbor. It is Rorty's problem all over again: No "silly" taboo against homosexual sodomy also means no "good" taboo against cruelty.

Christians claim to have a principled method of distinguishing between ceremonial taboos (the dietary laws and the such) and moral taboos. But the blunt rhetorical instrument wielded by homosexual activists not only wipes out strictures against homosexual acts, but also destroys what is universally understood (Nietzsche excepted) as the best part of Christianity.

The modern urge to rationalize community in accord with the goal of absolute personal autonomy or liberation, does nothing in the long run but destroy both community and the possibility of authentic individuality. In our rush to break "restrictive" taboos, our society has become a modern-day Erysichthon as we turn on the body social and feed on a rapidly shrinking body. Once we have sucked out communal instincts dry, the lack of an answer to the question, "Why not be cruel," will, alas, no longer be simply of theoretical interest.

Rioting

The religious sparked by the destruction of Sunday, has many districts zones.

Arthur Max

NEW DELHI, India, where rioting and destruction of religious sites has become a daily occurrence, has become a hotbed of religious violence. On Wednesday, rioting broke out in the city, with nearly 700 people killed and many injured. Muslim fighting, Wednesday alone, resulted in the death of 100 people. Zealots, acting in the name of religion, left a trail of destruction as they demolished the mosque by Hindu Sunday.

Since then, Bhubaneswar district, Odisha, work of Hindu zealots, has become a hotbed of religious violence. Nightly raiding of neighboring color houses, Molotov light bulbs filled with petrol, and the work of Hindu zealots, were seen in enforcing a curfew on a city of 12 million. India's hardest hit by the violence.

Rioting in India leaves 700 dead

The religious violence, sparked by the destruction of a mosque Sunday, has turned many districts into war zones.

Arthur Max
Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — Rioters wielding hatchets and homemade bombs rampaged throughout India on Wednesday in a third day of religious violence. Reports said nearly 700 people died in Hindu-Muslim fighting, including 200 on Wednesday alone.

Zealots, acting in the name of religion, left a trail of brutality and desecration as they battled over the demolition of an ancient mosque by Hindu extremists on Sunday.

Since then, Bombay's massive slum district, Dharabi, a patchwork of Hindu and Muslim colonies, has become a war zone. Nightly raiding parties attack neighboring colonies with knives, hatchets, Molotov cocktails and light bulbs filled with acid.

Army units, with shoot-on-sight authority, were sent to assist police in enforcing a curfew in the city of 12 million, India's largest and the hardest hit by the religious violence.

The Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party called a general strike to protest the arrest of its leaders, who are charged with instigating the demolition of the mosque in the northern holy town of Ayodhya.

Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao met leaders of the National Front, a leftist opposition coalition, to appeal for an alliance against the Hindu nationalist party in an attempt to quell the violence. He accused the Bharatiya Janata of "extreme perfidy" by encouraging the zealots who tore apart the mosque.

Rao's Congress Party falls short of a majority in Parliament, and he appeared to be suggesting a broadened coalition to isolate the Bharatiya Janata.

The National Front previously had blamed Rao for letting hundreds of thousands of Hindu fanatics into Ayodhya and demanded that he quit.

Associated Press

Muslim fundamentalists burn the effigy of Indian Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao near the Indian Embassy in Karachi, Pakistan, Wednesday.

Devout Hindus believe the 430-year-old mosque stood on the ruins of a prehistoric Hindu shrine marking the birthplace of Rama, an important god in Hindu mythology.

The mosque's destruction prompted widespread savagery and destruction in India and in neighboring Pakistan and Bangladesh.

The town of Nuh, 50 miles north of New Delhi, was one of the first to feel Muslim wrath. On Monday, 2,000 Muslims stormed into the town in trucks, armed with daggers and iron bars. They ransacked 10 Hindu temples and several businesses, shouting "kill the Hindu dog!" a 78-year-old priest, Rameshwar Nand, said Wednesday.

"I must have died several deaths in the half hour the bastards were in the temple," the priest said.

"We will die if need be. But I promise those people who defiled our temples will not escape alive," said shopkeeper Narendra Kumar, 28.

Officials said 136 people were killed in three days of rioting in Bombay, and the state government of Maharashtra announced a relief package for riot-ravaged areas, including the free distribution of food and clothing and $1,000 to bereaved families.

The state government in Bombay also ordered all liquor stores closed for a week.

The government put the official toll throughout India at 560 dead and 2,475 wounded. News agencies — which compiled their tolls from local police stations and put the number of dead at nearly 700 — were considered to be more accurate.

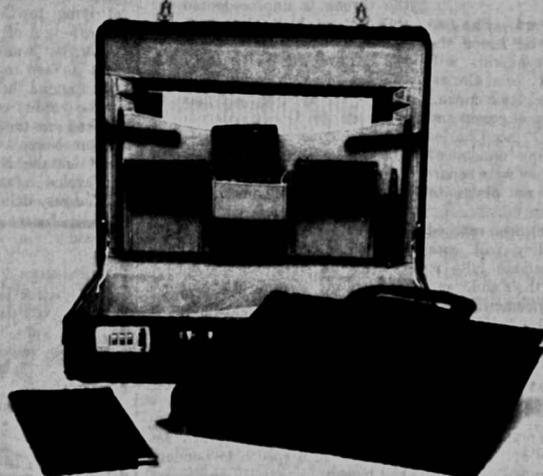

Muslim religious bodies appealed for calm, asking their people not to attack Hindus and refrain from violence. The Dalai Lama, the exiled Tibetan leader, also called for tolerance and mutual respect.

The stock market in Bombay, the nation's largest, was closed for the fourth day. Economists and businessmen were concerned that the unrelenting violence would cast doubts on Rao's drive to encourage foreign investment.

Bharatiya Janata leaders L.K. Advani, Murli Manohar Joshi and several other nationalist leaders were to appear in court on Thursday in Faizabad, Ayodhya's twin city, to face criminal charges.

They were indicted on three counts of inciting religious enmity and violence through speeches allegedly encouraging Hindu zealots to destroy the mosque.

Charles & Diana to separate, confirms Buckingham Palace

Associated Press

LONDON, England — She gets the town house, he keeps the country house, the kids will shuttle between homes at Christmas. And each one gets a crown.

Confirming years of gossip and tabloid headlines, Prince Charles and Princess Diana announced Wednesday that they were separating, but had no plans to divorce.

"This decision has been reached amicably, and they will both continue to participate fully in the upbringing of their children," said the announcement from Buckingham Palace.

A palace spokesman said Diana will keep the couple's apartment at Kensington Palace in London. Charles will retain the Highgrove estate in Gloucestershire, and stay with his grandmother, the Queen Mother, at Clarence House when in London.

Prince William, 10, and Prince Henry, 8, will divide their Christmas holidays between their parents, the palace indicated.

Such a separation for the heir to the throne is unprecedented in this century. In the last century, Queen Victoria's son and successor Edward VII had a series of extramarital relationships despite an apparently congenial marriage to Queen Alexandra, but the couple remained together until his death in 1910.

Prime Minister John Major told the House of Commons there was no reason why Diana could not be crowned queen — assuming that the couple stayed married and Charles, 44, lives long enough to succeed his 66-year-old mother, Queen Elizabeth II.

A divorce would not prevent Charles from taking the throne, but if Diana were no longer his wife, she could not be crowned queen.

The announcement caps a year described by a weary queen as "horrible" in a speech in London last month.

Since last Christmas, her daughter Anne has divorced and her son Andrew separated from his wife.

Ex-CIA spy chief convicted of lying to Congress

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former CIA spy chief, Claire George was convicted by a federal jury Wednesday of lying to Congress about his knowledge of the Iran-Contra affair, but was cleared of charges that he lied to a grand jury that investigated the scandal.

The verdict came in a trial that peeked into the CIA's operations as Oliver North's secret arms program for the Nicaraguan Contras unraveled in late 1986.

The jury deliberated for 11 days before finding George guilty of two counts of lying to congressional committees that investigated the Iran-Contra affair in 1986. But it acquitted him of three charges that he lied to congressional committees that year, as well as two counts that he lied to a grand jury that questioned him in 1991.

It was the second trial on George's role in the Iran-Contra affair; the first ended in a mistrial.

George was found guilty of lying to the House Intelligence Committee about his knowledge of the secret network to resupply the Nicaraguan Contras at a time Congress had outlawed direct military aid to the rebels.

He was also convicted of perjury for lying under oath to the Senate Intelligence Committee by saying he had no information about the role of Retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord in the sale of U.S. arms to Iran.

In a statement, independent counsel Lawrence Walsh called the conviction "a significant victory" for the prosecution. "It will be an important deterrent to protect the Congress and the public from coverups by high-level national security officials," he said.

Craig Gillen, who tried the case for Walsh's office, said, "The word has gone out to senior officials in the intelligence agencies that they can't use the secrets of our nation to hide if they commit crimes."

Defense attorney Richard Hibel said the conviction didn't lessen George's stature as "a genuine patriot" who deserved a presidential pardon because he had performed dangerous missions for the CIA.

DORM BURGLARIES

degree burglary at the Department of Public Safety, 131 S. Capitol St., in connection with a Wednesday morning Currier Hall burglary.

Gordon said Public Safety is still looking into Harris' possible involvement in earlier burglaries of the same nature. Harris fits previous descriptions "to a tee," he said.

"It's too early to tell if any of the other wallets will be recovered," Gordon said. Harris has made no statements so far.

"We caught him due to the alertness of the students and staff," Gordon said. "It really makes our job a lot easier."

UI Director of Residence Services George Droll advised students to still be sure to keep their doors locked for their safety and that of their belongings.

"The message should still remain the same: You should keep your student room door locked," he said. "That's the best advice as far as personal safety."

DIVERSITY

and promotions. The plan also called for all searches for new faculty members to hold the enrichment of diversity as a main criterion.

According to UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes, increasing diversity has been a goal for a number of years, but the UI currently has no plans such as those drawn up at ISU to make faculty members' commitment to diversity a consideration in decisions about salary increases and promotions.

"We have been trying to promote diversity in the faculty and the student body through recruitment and retention," she said. "It has been a priority here for several years and it will continue to be."

Susan Mask, director of the UI Affirmative Action Office, said that although there are no formal guidelines such as the ones proposed at ISU concerning faculty members' commitment to diversity and considerations about advancement, diversity may be a component of decisions on promotions at the UI.

Recently, a former UI visiting lecturer in the School of Art and Art History filed suit against the UI claiming he was passed up for a tenure-track artist and teaching position because of his gender.

The suit brings up questions as to whether the UI has gone too far in trying to promote diversity in its promotion decisions. Although Rawlings said he is not familiar enough with the case to comment on it, he did say that he does not believe the UI has gone too far in its efforts to increase diversity on the UI campus.

"I think we need to go farther," he said. "There are still some departments which need to make considerable progress. That includes gender diversity and ethnic diversity."

According to the UI Office of Academic Affairs, of the 1,729 total tenured and tenure-track faculty at the UI, 346 — or 20 percent — are women, and 191 — or roughly 11 percent — are minorities.

Of the UI's 1,674 nontenure-track faculty, 795 — or 47 percent — are women, and 128 — or about 8 percent — are minorities.

Rawlings said diversity initiatives are important at the UI because there are so few minorities in the state of Iowa.

"It is especially incumbent upon us to do this in this part of the country," he said. "We are, after all, in a state that's about 96 percent white. We still have a ways to go."

diately. For the first time in weeks, a World Food Program-chartered plane flew in 17 tons of a powdery mixture of sugar, beans, flour and vitamins to be given to babies and malnourished people. It was quickly unloaded and taken to warehouses.

Before the Marines' arrival, such food convoys were guarded by militiamen. Often there were clashes with other clans, or the food was stolen — up to half of the 200,000 metric tons sent to Somalia.

"I've been waiting for this day for so long," said Victor Tanner, a UNICEF worker. "This airport usually is a pretty nasty place, but the town today is like after a Sunday football game."

About 300,000 Somalis have died of starvation, disease and warfare in the past year.

Marines fired some warning shots, detained several Somalis and seized a few machine guns or rifles, but American officials had no reports of troops firing at anyone or being fired upon.

UNI playoff game to be televised live

CEDAR FALLS (AP) — The NCAA 1-AA semifinal playoff football game between Northern Iowa and Youngstown State will be aired live on Iowa Public Television Saturday.

Thom Cornelis of KWQC-TV in Davenport will do play-by-play and Gary Barta, assistant athletic director for development at UNI, will provide commentary.

The two began working as a team for the UNI-Idaho game earlier this year.

In Iowa City the game will be shown on KIIN Channel.

BOXING

Holyfield confirms retirement

ATLANTA (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield says he has fought his last fight.

But he still contends he should have been awarded the 12-round decision in which he lost his heavyweight title to Riddick Bowe three weeks ago.

In a telephone interview from Los Angeles, Holyfield told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution that he is quitting boxing. He had said the same thing immediately after the Bowe fight, but two weeks ago changed his mind and said he was seeking a rematch with Bowe for a minimum purse of $15 million.

"If I came back, I wouldn't be doing it for myself. I can't get up for a fight if I need the people to pump me up," Holyfield said.

Holyfield said he has watched tapes of the fight more than a dozen times and believes he won.

BASEBALL

'League of Their Own' inspiration dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Helen Candaele St. Aubin, a star player in the women's 1940s baseball league whose son's documentary inspired the film "A League of Their Own," has died. She was 63.

St. Aubin died Tuesday night at Cottage Hospital in Santa Barbara after a long battle with breast cancer, her son, Kelly Candaele, said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Called the "Ted Williams of women's baseball," St. Aubin passed her talents on the diamond to another of her five sons, Casey Candaele, a utility player for the Houston Astros.

COLLEGE

Clemson hoops get two years probation

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The NCAA put Clemson's men's basketball program on two years' probation for major rule violations Wednesday but stopped short of banning the Tigers from postseason play and television appearances.

In its long-awaited report, the NCAA Committee on Infractions also prohibited any expense-paid on-campus visits by basketball recruits next year and only two such visits in 1994.

The committee also accepted the school's self-imposed sanctions, which include no off-campus recruiting until Aug. 6, and one less scholarship each of the next two years.

It is the fourth time in 16 years a program at the Atlantic Coast Conference school has been placed on probation.

NFL

Bears lose, charities win

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Jim Harbaugh said Wednesday he would give his paycheck to charity until the Chicago Bears break their losing streak.

The Bears (4-9) have lost six games in a row. Harbaugh is scheduled to start on Sunday against the Pittsburgh Steelers after sitting out the last two games.

"Till we win again, my check is going to charity," Harbaugh said.

If the Bears lose, Harbaugh said he would donate his check — more than $70,000 a week — to several different charities.

Freeman favors coaching by committee

Roxanna Pellin
 The Daily Iowan

Sure, the Japanese have been known to influence America's style in cars, televisions and cameras, but our methods of coaching basketball, too?

Marianna Freeman has been acting as the Iowa women's head basketball coach for a week now. But she depends upon the input of fellow coaches Angie Lee and Linda Myers.

"Let's just say it's a Japanese management style," said Freeman, who has been subbing for C. Vivian Stringer since Stringer's husband, William, passed away Nov. 26.

"As you know, I've been here for 10 years, so I am the senior citizen of this staff," Freeman said. "But Angie's and Linda's input have been vital to our success. I think what's been the key for holding things together — to come out with two victories — has been the fact that Coach Lee, Coach Myers and I work very, very well together."

With Freeman in charge, the Hawkeyes beat Pittsburgh and then-No. 4 Maryland on the road last weekend, moving from seventh to No. 5 in the Associated Press poll.

Freeman said that the players had the opportunity to speak with Stringer after the Hawkeyes beat the Terrapins, 53-50, Sunday.

"Immediately after the game on Sunday we had our cellular phone with us and when we got into the locker room, we gave her a call and everyone told her we won," Freeman said. "Each young lady had the opportunity to talk to her for a few minutes."

"At that point in time when we called, she said that she was feeling very down. So we surprised her with the call and it lifted her up and hearing her voice also lifted the girls up."

Although she remains in close contact with Stringer, Freeman said that she does not expect her to return when Iowa hosts the Amana-Hawkeye Classic this weekend. She added that she does not have any idea when the nine-year Iowa coach will return.

"We really haven't talked in detail about it," Freeman said. "I do know that each and every day she is gaining more and more control of her life and I hope to have her back with us as soon as she feels that she's capable of returning."

During Stringer's absence, Freeman said that she depends on input from Lee and Myers to help her make coaching decisions.

"I rely on them with the adjustments, with the substitutions," Freeman said. "There are key See FREEMAN, Page 2B

MAJOR LEAGUES

Maddux headlines signing flurry

Ronald Blum
 Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A day after spending a single-day record of $125 million on 16 players, major league teams gave $72.75 million to seven free agents, with Greg Maddux getting Wednesday's big deal: a $28 million, five-year contract from the Atlanta Braves.

Maddux, the top pitcher available this offseason, turned down an offer from the New York Yankees worth $34 million, and New York even said it was prepared to go to $39 million.

Maddux joined David Cone, Doug Drabek and Jose Guzman on the list of pitchers who spurned the Yankees' big bucks in recent weeks.

"It's a big city. It's intimidating," said Maddux's agent, Scott Boras. "And players generally come from rural areas."

On a day that would have seemed busy had it not come after Tuesday's record spending spree, outfielder Andre Dawson, rejected by the Chicago Cubs, agreed to a $9.3 million, two-year deal with the Boston Red Sox.

Pitcher Mike Moore, offered only a two-year deal from the Oakland Athletics, agreed with the Detroit Tigers on a three-year contract worth $10 million.

Reliever Randy Myers, a free agent after just one season in San Diego, agreed to an $11 million, three-year contract with the Chicago Cubs. And Todd Worrell, a reliever for the St. Louis Cardinals since 1985, went to the Los Angeles Dodgers for $9.5 million over three years.

In two smaller signings, the Philadelphia Phillies and outfielder Milt Thompson agreed to a $2.75 million, two-year contract, and the San Francisco Giants agreed to a $2.2 million, two-year deal with outfielder Dave Martinez.

There were just two trades involving major leaguers. Atlanta sent pitchers Charlie Leibrandt and Pat See SIGNINGS, Page 2B

Cavs no match for Bulls

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan had 28 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists Wednesday night to pace the Chicago Bulls to an easy 108-91 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The triple-double was the 24th of Jordan's career, but his first this season. B.J. Armstrong added a season-high 20 points for Chicago, which had dropped three of five games coming in.

The Bulls put the game away in the third quarter, expanding a 54-44 lead to 80-58 by the end of the period.

Both coaches emptied their benches in the final quarter.

Cleveland, mired in sixth place in the Central Division, lost its third straight game.

Scottie Pippen added 17 points for the Bulls and Trent Tucker had 13.

Cleveland was led by Danny Ferry's 16 points. John Battle had 15 and Brad Daugherty and Terrell Brandon each had 14.

The Bulls got their biggest lead of the first half, 39-19, when Jordan scored on a layup at 6:47 of the second quarter.

Cleveland managed to trim the lead to 46-35 by intermission. The Cavaliers shot only 36 percent in the half and had nine turnovers which led to 18 Bulls points.

Pistons 108, Magic 103

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars scored 13 of his season-high 39 points in the final 3:27 to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 108-103 victory over the Orlando Magic on Wednesday night.

The win was Detroit's fourth straight and gave them an overall 12-0 record against the Magic. Orlando, which started the year 8-3, has lost five in a row.

The Pistons were able to overcome an awesome 3-point shooting exhibition by the Magic, which made a team-record 14 — two shy of the NBA record.

Dennis Rodman pulled down 22 rebounds, giving him at least 20 in each of the six games since he returned from a suspension.

Dumars, averaging 27 points in his last five games, hit a 3-pointer and two jumpers to put Detroit ahead 98-93 with 2:09 left.

Scott, who led the Magic with 38 points, had eight 3-pointers, breaking his own team record of six.

Isiah Thomas added 16 for Detroit while O'Neal had 17 points and 11 rebounds for Orlando.

Celtics 129, Nuggets 119

BOSTON — Reggie Lewis scored 36 points and the Celtics shot 61 percent from the field as Boston took a huge lead and then held off the scrappy Denver Nuggets for a 129-119 victory Wednesday night.

Xavier McDaniel added 24 points for the Celtics, who led by 27 points in the third quarter but had the lead chopped to three with 3½ minutes left in the game. Boston outscored Denver 14-7 the rest of the way.

The Celtics have won seven of their last nine games after getting off to their worst start since 1978. Denver has lost seven of its eight road games.

Chris Jackson had 26 points for the Nuggets, including 15 in the second half. Reggie Williams added 23 and Dikembe Mutombo had 19 points and 11 rebounds for Denver.

Suns 110, Hornets 101

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charles Barkley had 23 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists for his first triple-double as a member of the Suns as Phoenix won its fifth straight, 110-101 over the Charlotte Hornets on Wednesday night.

Phoenix is 3-0 on its five-game East Coast road trip and has won seven of its last eight games.

Phoenix opened up a 94-86 lead on a layup by reserve Frank Johnson, but the Hornets kept within 102-99 with 2:32 to play on Dell Curry's two long-range jumpers.

The Hornets had a chance to tie, but Kendall Gill's 3-pointer was off the mark. Tom Chambers hit a 3-point with 1:16 left to make it 104-99 and two free throws from Danny Ainge made it 106-99 and sealed the victory with 30 seconds to play.

Dan Majerle had 21 points for the Suns and Chambers had 15. Larry Johnson paced Charlotte with 29 points and 12 rebounds. Curry added 22 points.

76ers 115, Sonics 104

PHILADELPHIA — Hersey Hawkins scored 25 points and Jeff Hornacek added 20 as the Philadelphia 76ers ended a seven-game losing streak by defeating the Seattle SuperSonics 115-104 Wednesday night.

Johnny Dawkins added 19 points for Philadelphia, which also snapped its five-game home losing streak. The 76ers are now 2-7 at the Spectrum.

Shawn Kemp tallied a season-high 31 for Seattle, which lost its second game in two nights to start a four-game road trip in the East.

Webber rallies Wolverines

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Chris Webber scored 16 of his 21 points in the second half to lift struggling Michigan to a 79-68 victory over Bowling Green on Wednesday night.

Ray Lynch had 20 points for Bowling Green (1-1), including four 3-pointers.

It was the third game in five nights for the sixth-ranked Wolverines (4-1), who have struggled in each of them. After a 79-68 loss at Duke on Saturday night, Michigan trailed Detroit Mercy by 10 points midway through the first half Monday night, a game the Wolverines eventually won 92-77.

Michigan got off to an early 10-2 lead against Bowling Green. But the Falcons, getting six points from Shane Kline-Ruminski, went on a 19-11 run to tie it at 21 on a jumper by George Finney with 7:18 left in the half.

A 3-pointer by Lynch gave Bowling Green its first lead, 28-27, with 4:15 left in the half. The Falcons stretched it to 32-29 before Michigan, holding Bowling Green to one basket over the final 2:46, rallied for a 36-34 halftime lead.

The struggle continued briefly into the second half before Webber took charge.

Lynch's third 3-pointer gave the Falcons their last lead, 39-38, with 17:44 left in the game.

Then Webber hit a 3-pointer and a driving layup, Jimmy King made a 3-pointer, and the Wolverines appeared to be on their way.

Vanderbilt 90, Louisville 88

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Chris Lawson's follow shot with one second left lifted Vanderbilt to a 90-88 upset of No. 9 Louisville on Wednesday night.

Bruce Elder's career-high 28 points helped the Commodores (5-1) stay ahead for most of the game before James Brewer's third straight 3-pointer tied the game at 88-88 with 1:50 left.

Brewer missed a 3-pointer from the top of the key with 31 seconds left that would have given Louisville (1-1) the lead. Vanderbilt rebounded and held the ball for a final shot. Lawson rebounded Billy McCaffrey's miss and scored.

Louisville turned the ball over 14 times to five for Vanderbilt, which outscored the Cardinals 20-6 on second-chance points.

No. 15 Syracuse 87, Tennessee 81

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Lawrence Moten led a balanced attack with 21 points as 15th-ranked Syracuse held off Tennessee 87-81 on Wednesday night.

Syracuse, led by Moten, Conrad McRae and John Wallace, used its inside strength during a 22-8 run early in the second half that overcame Tennessee's 46-43 lead. McRae finished with 17 points and 9 rebounds, while Wallace, a freshman, added 10 points and 14 rebounds.

The Orangemen (4-0) also got 15 points from Adrian Autry and 16 from Mike Hopkins.

Allan Houston scored 27 points for Tennessee (3-2). A 3-pointer early in the second half gave him 2,252 points to become Tennessee's all-time leading scorer, surpassing Ernie Grunfeld.

Eric Micoud added 14 and Duane Spencer had 13 to pace the Hoyas (4-0).
Pitt, which trailed 37-27 at half-time, closed the gap to 43-39 on Antoine Jones' layup with 16:20 left to play. After a Georgetown timeout, the Hoyas put together a 9-3 run — getting five points from Lonnie Harrell and four from Harrington — to get the lead back to 10 points with 13:52 left.
Georgetown had a chance to put the game away when, with 9:14 remaining, Pitt coach Paul Evans received a pair of technical fouls. But the Hoyas missed three of the four free throws, then missed a jump shot after getting possession, and what could have been a 16-point margin was only 61-51.

The Panthers closed to 61-56 with 8:02 to go, but their horrid free throw shooting kept them from getting any closer. Pitt (2-1) was just 13-for-31 from the foul line. Georgetown eventually stretched the lead to 75-64 on Brown's 3-point play with 1:58 remaining.

Eric Montross, who led North Carolina with 19 points and 10 rebounds, scored first on a tip-in, then stole the ball and fed to Lynch, who hit a jumper 40 seconds into the game.

SIGNINGS: Maddux, Dawson sign

Gomez to the Texas Rangers for third base prospect Jose Oliva. And the Montreal Expos sent pitcher Mark Gardner along with pitcher Doug Piatt to Kansas City for catcher Tim Spehr and pitcher Jeff Shaw.
Maddux, 26, joins a staff that already includes Tom Glavine, Steve Avery, John Smoltz, and Pete Smith. The Braves went 98-64 while coming within a game of a World Series title for the second straight year, and had a team ERA of 3.14. Braves general manager John Schuerholz said the signing "provides the Atlanta Braves with the most formidable starting rotation in all of baseball."

Maddux gets a $2.5 million signing bonus, $5 million in 1993, $3.5 million in 1994, $5 million in 1995 and $6 million each in 1996 and 1997. He was 20-11 for the Chicago

Cubs in 1992 and won the National League Cy Young Award.
"The organization has continually demonstrated its commitment to winning," Schuerholz said.
The Yankees told Maddux on Tuesday they would go to $37 million if he would immediately accept, Boras said. Maddux said he would take such an offer and New York general manager Gene Michael said he would make it, but the Braves intervened with their offer just before Michael could get approval for the proposal from the Yankees' partnership.
"We thought he was going to be a Yankee — no doubt," Boras said.
Schuerholz said he needed to first be able to get rid of a high-salaried veteran. He got the feeling he could Tuesday when the Leibrandt deal began to take shape.
Dawson, a popular 38-year-old outfielder for the Cubs since 1987, wanted to stay at Wrigley Field but wanted more than a one-year deal, all the Cubs were willing to offer. Boston got him for a $350,000 signing bonus, $4.7 million in 1993 and $4.25 million in 1994.
"Being realistic, I know the move to the American League will be advantageous for me," said Dawson, a .282 career hitter with 399 homers and 1,425 RBIs. "There

Marlins president Barger dead at 62

Joe Kay
Associated Press
LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Baseball owners had no inkling that something was wrong with Florida Marlins president Carl Barger when he excused himself Wednesday to use the restroom.
Moments later, he was unconscious on the floor without a pulse.
Barger, 62, was pronounced dead from a ruptured aneurysm in his abdomen about three hours after he collapsed during the owners' closing session. Owners and American League president Dr. Bobby Brown gave him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until paramedics arrived at the hotel, re-started his heart and sped him to a hospital.
It was useless, according to Dr. Robert Fulton, who was operating when Barger's heart stopped for the last time at 2:34 p.m. EST.
"It was probably too late by the time he left the Galt House," said Fulton, a professor of thoracic surgery at Humana Hospital-University of Louisville. "The aorta ruptured freely, which means he bled to death."
The owners were working through a full agenda during their final meeting Wednesday morning when Barger headed for the restroom shortly before 11 a.m.

"There was no indication anything was wrong," deputy commissioner Steve Greenberg said. "He got up to go out. I guess he wasn't feeling well. He collapsed and the door flew open and he fell into the hallway."
Brown, a cardiologist, started cardiopulmonary resuscitation with the help of two other owners.
"We were in the process of having the meeting and he apparently went out of the room to go to the restroom and collapsed just outside the door," Brown said. "Within the few seconds — 15 to 20 — for us to get to him, he was unconscious."
"He was able to breathe a little on his own the whole time that we gave him CPR. At no time were we able to detect a pulse in his wrist and we were unable to get a blood pressure."
Paramedics gave Barger a breathing tube and used the defibrillator to restore the heart beat, Brown said. Barger was carried on a stretcher past dozens of reporters and photographers who were outside the meeting room, waiting for baseball news.
The stunned owners canceled the rest of the meeting.
"We said a prayer for Carl at the end of the meeting," said Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig.

Blockbuster coaches match wits

Steven Wine
Associated Press
FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Penn State coach Joe Paterno and Stanford coach Bill Walsh, who will match wits in the Blockbuster Bowl on Jan. 1, did the same at a news conference Wednesday.

Each coach heaped praise on his counterpart. The result was a tie. "A few days before the game, I try to find something to dislike about the other coach," Walsh said. "In some cases in the NFL, it wasn't difficult at all. In Chicago I had all kinds of ideas. But in Joe's case, it's going to be awful tough."

Blockbuster officials have billed the matchup as "the Legend vs. the Genius." Stanford (9-3) is ranked 13th; Penn State (7-4) is 21st.

"If it comes down to Walsh and Paterno, I'm not going to show up," Paterno said. "I'm not sure I can spell genius. I'm over the hill, and if you want to call me a legend, that's fine."

Paterno, 65, is the winningest active coach in Division I-A with 247 victories. Next month's game will be his 23rd bowl, second only to the late Bear Bryant.

Walsh, 61, is in the first year of his second stint at Stanford. His time there has been sandwiched around 10 seasons with the San Francisco 49ers, who won three NFL titles under his direction.

Both coaches pride themselves on

"I hope after the fanfare about Paterno and Walsh wears off," Paterno told reporters, "you'll start to zero in on two outstanding teams that play the game with a lot of enthusiasm and with an attitude that they represent good institutions and have to have some responsibilities, and that they play

Walsh said his return to Stanford has been "a marvelous experience. The athletes respond to the coach, but they also respond to whatever he can deliver to them relating to their future. When you come back on campus, you become an educator."

As for the coaching matchup, Paterno expects to benefit from it.

Schott supporter resigns on her own

Former President of National Council of Negro Women Inc., claims she had her resignation planned since September.

Sonja Barisic
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — The former leader of a black group said Wednesday she was not forced to resign because she said Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott should be forgiven for making racial slurs.

"I resigned on my own," Mamie Dunston Hall, former president of the Cincinnati chapter of the National Council of Negro Women Inc., said at a news conference.

She said she had been planning her resignation since September because she had accomplished her goals, including increasing membership and making the group financially strong.

Dunston-Hall has been one of the few blacks to publicly support Schott. She released a statement Dec. 2 that said, "It's time to forgive her and move on." She also invited Schott to attend the group's banquet last Sunday.

On Monday, the NCNW's national president asked Mrs. Dunston-Hall

"The main thing we are concerned about is that Mrs. Hall relinquish the office so that it will be very clear that what she has done does not represent the views of the organization."

But she said that while other black leaders have called for Schott's ouster from baseball, she forgave the club owner because love heals better than hate.

"Cincinnati, we need to stop fighting among ourselves," she said. "I challenge our black churches, our black leaders, to come together and re-examine our principles, to stop the confusion and work to support each other."

Schott has admitted using offensive words when referring to blacks, Jews and other minority groups. In Louisville, Ky., for baseball's winter meetings, she apologized Wednesday for her comments.

Dunston-Hall declined to comment on Schott's apology, saying she hadn't heard Schott's statement.

Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins, here displaying his talents during the 1990 Slam Dunk Championship, set a league mark with 23 free throws in a game against the Bulls Tuesday night.

Bulls cry foul in Dominique's record-setting performance

Associated Press

ATLANTA — There's a feeling among the Chicago Bulls that Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins may have had a little help from three guys in striped shirts en route to his NBA-record 23 consecutive free throws.

Wilkins converted every attempt in his 42-point performance that gave the Atlanta Hawks a 123-114 victory over the defending NBA champions Tuesday night. It was the 48th 40-plus game of Wilkins' career and the Hawks' second win this season over the Bulls, who suffered only their fifth loss.

The Hawks converted 39 of 40 free throw attempts overall, with the only miss by rookie Adam Keefe. The Bulls went to the line only 19 times, making 12.

"It was too lopsided in terms of the free-throw situation," said Chicago's Michael Jordan, who scored 18 of his 32 points in the final period but wound up with five personal fouls.

"I felt a lot of those calls were questionable," said Jordan. "We had three terrible referees, and you really couldn't determine who was the lead official. They all stunk. I'll probably get fined for that. But wait until they look at the film. If they don't say they stunk then I'll say it."

The officials were Danny Crawford, Jimmy Clark and Jim Capers.

NBA officials in New York did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment Wednesday.

"It was five against eight out there," said Bulls forward Horace Grant. "I can take a fine because it was terrible out there."

"We weren't getting any fouls," said Chicago's Scottie Pippen. "Whenever the whistle blew, you can believe it was our foul. We didn't get any calls. You can't let a guy go to the line 23 times. I think the officiating really stunk."

Wilkins' free-throw record broke the previous mark of 19 without a miss, shared by Bob Pettit, Bill Cartwright and Adrian Dantley.

Later Tuesday night in Oakland, Detlef Schrempf of Indiana made 22 of 23 free throws in a 125-115 victory over the Golden State Warriors.

Wilkins made 10 free throws in the final 1:49 of the fourth period to hold off a rally by the Bulls, who cut Atlanta's lead to 101-98 with 5:08 to play.

"It surprised me that Dominique's 23 consecutive free throws is an NBA record," said Atlanta coach Bob Weiss. "It also surprised me that a team that's struggling from the free throw line does it."

The Hawks entered the game making 73 percent at the line in 16 games.

"Until I came into the locker room, I didn't really know that I shot that many free throws, but I'll take it," Wilkins said.

Reid joins Robinson's neighborhood

Former Tar Heel expected to beef up depleted Spurs lineup that's missing Terry Cummings and Antoine Carr.

Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs, depleted by injuries, acquired power forward J.R. Reid from the Charlotte Hornets on Wednesday in exchange for reserve forward Sidney Green and two high draft picks.

Reid became expendable when the Hornets signed their top draft pick, Alonzo Mourning, last month.

On Sept. 21, Reid signed a multi-year contract extension with Charlotte in a deal that included deferrals and helped the Hornets afford Mourning's six-year contract, a deal worth more than $26 million.

Reid, 24, is in his fourth NBA season. He was the fifth overall choice in the 1989 draft. The former North Carolina star is coming off an injury-plagued season in which he was sidelined because of a stress fracture in his lower back. Despite the injury, Reid averaged 11 points and 6.2 rebounds in 51 games.

This season, he is averaging 7.5 points and 4.1 rebounds in 17 games.

Reid said he enjoyed playing for the Hornets but was eager to get more playing time in San Antonio. The Hornets also have Larry Johnson, last year's No. 1 overall pick, in addition to Mourning, this year's second overall pick.

"We had a backlog of big men," Reid said in a conference call. "There just wasn't enough quality minutes there for all of us."

Reid said the Spurs "need a power forward, a banger inside. So, hopefully, I can come in and fill the bill."

"We had a backlog of big men. There just wasn't enough quality minutes there for all of us. So, hopefully, I can come in and fill the bill."

J.R. Reid Newest San Antonio Spur

He'll get that chance right away. The Spurs are without the services of Terry Cummings, who could miss the entire season after surgery to repair a torn knee ligament.

On Tuesday, forward Antoine Carr dislocated his right shoulder during a game with the Utah Jazz. Carr is averaging 15.8 points and 6.6 rebounds in 14 games this season.

Bob Bass, the Spurs' vice president for basketball operations, said the trade came at an ideal time for his club because of the injuries to Cummings and Carr.

"It's great timing for us," he said. "Very seldom do you get a chance to get a young, big player. We're lucky to get this done right now."

The Hornets will receive the Spurs' top pick next year unless San Antonio is among the top eight picks in the lottery. In that case, Charlotte would receive the Spurs' second-round pick next year.

The top pick would then move to 1994, with the stipulation that it not be among the top six in the lottery. If that happens, the Hornets will receive an unconditional first-round pick in 1995.

If the Hornets receive the top pick in either 1993 or 1994, then the Spurs also will send a second-round pick to Charlotte in 1996.

Reid, 6-9 and 260 pounds, played center for the Hornets before moving to power forward, his natural position, midway through 1990-91.

As a rookie, he played more minutes than any other rookie except David Robinson, with whom he played on the 1988 U.S.

Kentucky students promise to return Duke memorabilia

Fraternity responsible for stealing Blue Devils' retired jerseys.

Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — A trip to see a part of Duke basketball history landed some Kentucky students in hot water.

Authorities say a group of students from the University of Kentucky apparently sneaked into Cameron Indoor Stadium and took the retired jerseys of Christian Laettner, Danny Ferry and Johnny Dawkins. Duke officials were awaiting a delivery from the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity house at Kentucky.

"The jerseys weren't bolted down," Duke sports information director Mike Cragg said. "I guess that's what we need to do — bolt them down."

Officials at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill say that same bunch apparently took a helmet lamp and some pictures from the fieldhouse at Kenan Stadium.

Cragg said Wednesday that an anonymous tip from a resident adviser at Kentucky led the school to the source of the Duke thefts.

The students have promised to pay for the damage to the frames that held the jerseys, and have also promised to return the memorabilia to UNC, according to administrators there.

Supporting actors steal show in Sinise's 'Of Mice and Men'

Kevin Ruby
The Daily Iowan

"Of Mice and Men" is yet another ode to the American road movie, a tradition started with the original film version back in Hollywood's Golden Era, and carried on in later films as varied as "Drugstore Cowboy" and "Rain Man." Steinbeck wrote with elaborate, tedious detail, so it is always interesting and reassuring to see how easily his sluggish works translate to screen (I'm lightening up a little on my "anti-book-to-film" stance, I guess). And director Gary Sinise, with co-star John Malkovich (both of whom created a stage version in Chicago under the renown Steppenwolf Company), does not fail the audience expectations, nor betray the original story.

George (Gary Sinise) and Lenny (John Malkovich) open the story on the run from their last place of work, hiding out in some woods. Apparently, Lenny, bonafide oaf that he unfortunately is, scared the hell out of a woman in "nearby Weed," prompting the local townies to go on a lynch frenzy. After hopping a bus to another part of the country, George finds himself and Lenny work at a safely isolated farm in another back shed of Northern California.

There is a simple hierarchy at the new farm. There is the owner, who basically doesn't give a damn about anything else except getting the crop tended on time. He remains largely non-existent on the ranch, except to cast a dull shadow on the oppressed, migrant workers like George and Lenny. His son Curley (Casey Siezmasko), is a local tough with something to prove, keeping a too-intense watch on anyone who even looks at his wife (Sherilyn Fenn). The wife, needless to say, is frequently bored and lonely, and is prone to wander into trouble. Trouble like Lenny.

Fans of Steinbeck will not be disappointed with this adaptation. All of the great dialogues are still intact, such as the "tell me 'bout them rabbits" conversation between George and Lenny, as is the late-night interchange between Crook (Joe Morton) and Lenny. My favorite is the heart-breaking confrontation involving Candy (Ray Walston) and his aging dog, and the other younger boarders who can't stand the sight of the mangy animal. Few writers have ever written about ageism so bluntly, and Sinise punctuates the moment with the appropriate, distant gunshot.

"Of Mice and Men" is script takes great care in the portrayal of the nameless wife, not abandoning her to the realm of passivity. George tells Lenny to stay away from her, the lone female on the entire ranch, because she is "looking for trouble." It is slowly made clear to viewers that she is only looking for company, and finds comfort in Lenny's apparent harmlessness (this story takes place, after all, during the early 20th century, when women were expected to stay at home, so to give the wife a '90s aggressive vent would have totally destroyed this subtext). This leads to an inevitable rendezvous in the barn.

A major complaint with this film is, ironically enough, John Malkovich and Gary Sinise, the actors. The characterization seems almost too rehearsed, and Malkovich's nagging falsetto just about drove me crazy. Sinise is a hard sell as George also, since he spends a lot of time acting like Super Male Hero, standing in the perfectly lighted barn, where the sweat beads down the side of his face, or the perfectly camera-sculpted field, where the sweat beads down his brow, or the perfectly lighted...

So it should come as no surprise that the central two characters are frequently upstaged by the supporting characters. Ray Walston is especially good as the old man Candy, and he pulls the rug, in scene after scene, right out from under Malkovich and Sinise. Joe Morton (probably best remembered as the overly burdened computer expert in last summer's "Terminator 2") is also solid in his one major scene with Malkovich. Fenn and Siezmasko make the most of their roles, which are essentially thankless parts, their fates structured around the central protagonists.

Kristine Heykants/The Daily Iowan

"Big Heads," an oil on canvas by Eliko Shimosato-Evans, is part of the Arts Center's "Members' Holiday Show and Sale."

Arts Council members get to play show & sell

Tim Rissman
The Daily Iowan

Just in time for the holiday season comes an exhibit at the Arts Center titled, "Member's Holiday Show and Sale," with more art pieces for sale than Renoir had brushes. But get there early, while the diversity and selection is greater. By Dec. 23 when the show ends, the walls just might be bare. Might be...

Located in the Middle and Nina Liu (large) gallery, the show is a nonjuried exhibition that reflects the diversity of the member-artists' talents. It is hung "salon style" and contains cards, paintings, sculpture, pottery, prints, photographs, jewelry, Christmas ornaments, dolls and much more. So much, in fact, that one wonders if these artists aren't actually busy little elves, scurrying around all year painting and shaping just in time for the holiday season.

Elves or not, the show is unique in a number of ways. The public can buy "the art off the wall" and take it home with them immediately. Anyone who is a member of the Iowa City/Johnson County Arts Council may display in the show. And with this diversity in artists comes a diversity in the art. It's fun to look at even if you are not there to buy.

How does one get to be a member of the Arts Council in the first place, you ask? Simple. You choose which category you belong in (student, individual, family, etc.) and contribute a tax-deductible amount specified for that category. And judging by the prices on some of the items, you'll more than make up this amount.

Certain works have been donated by the artists to the center to raise funds for the council's operations. These works will be designated by a special sticker to the left of the title label. The center also gets a portion of the money spent on all other pieces.

As mentioned, the better objects might be gone if you put off going until a few days before the show's end. So whether you're there to look or buy, don't put it off. Some of these you'll really want to see.

"Maize n' Mallows", a poster and monologue by Jarryd Lowder, explores issues of stereotype and prejudice through the eyes of advertisers, successful in that the viewer goes through different emotional responses as he or she reads.

Successful too was Donita Emmert's "Studies of Nicole No. 1 and No. 2," life paintings with dominant color patterns and minimal, but effective, line usage. At $300 each, the set may be out of reach for the average consumer. But hey! you can always look, right? With prices that range from $1 to $1,000, you might just find a nice bargain anyway, as the quality of the objects is certainly not determined by price.

The Arts Center galleries, 129 E. Washington St., are open Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Sunday 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Check it out. It's for a good cause.

UI celebrates 14 years of Elizabethan dinners

A number of events and an abundance of food come together for this feasty occasion.

Michelle-Therese Forcier
The Daily Iowan

The Union will be transformed into a court Thursday through Sunday, and a scuffle involving a jester, a beggar and a cabbage will be resolved. It will also be your chance to demand your share of wassail.

This, along with other surprises and treats, will mark the 14th annual Elizabethan Madrigal Dinners at the UI, according to Rachael Lindhart, stage director of the event.

Guests of the king and queen of the Union will be transported from the Union to the great hall of an Elizabethan court. The honored guests will be served a dinner of wassail, salad of winter greens dressed with pear vinaigrette, roasted prime rib of beef with Madeira and wild mushrooms, haricots verts, tomatoes farcies, glazed carrots and onions, Hampton Court rice, winter fruit tart with cream anglais and country bread with herb butter.

The candle-lit feast prepared "to the queen's taste" will be accompanied by Christmas carols by English composers. Fourteen madrigal singers and four quartets will perform songs selected for this year's banquet.

Before the guests begin the feast, they will be entertained in the streets of the kingdom by beggars, a street peddler and a conjurer. Inside the great hall, guests will be amazed at the magic performed by Tom Bliese, now in his 13th year as court magician, a jester, jugglers, acrobats, strolling minstrels and a fortune teller, played by Lindhart.

Lindhart has performed at the dinners for four years. This is her first year as stage director. "This year we've added Irish wolfhounds and although they don't perform, they add to the opening procession of the king and queen," she said.

The royal couple will be played by Gerald Roe and Marilyn Wirtz. Roe has played the king for eight years. He said he keeps coming back because "it's fun to do. I enjoy the music each year and the audience." He explained that many people he has spoken to after the dinner tell him they also return each year because they enjoy it so much. Roe said it usually marks the beginning of their Christmas season. "It's a nice thing to do in December whether you're a part of it or in the audience," he said. The performance is enhanced each year because many people have played their characters for many years, said Roe.

According to Roe, the proceeds are donated to the scholarship fund for students of the arts.

Victor Mashburn will play Lord Chamberlain, the master of ceremonies for the evening. He described his character as, "a rather pompous person who has the unpleasant task of dealing with the rabble." Although he is no amateur in the acting field, he is a plebe in his part as Lord Chamberlain. "People should come because they will have a wonderful time. It's a beautiful show," he said.

Another feature of the night will be the Renaissance dances performed to the accompaniment of an instrumental ensemble. The nobility will, of course, perform these dances with the proper restraint. However, the servants will abandon what little manners they have and dance with greater zest.

Madrigal dinners at the UI began in 1979. Madrigal singing began in Renaissance Italy and spread through Europe, eventually reaching Elizabethan England. Madrigal singing and dancing became a part of refined social life and eventually reached private homes, as games of challenge and as elaborate performances for the queen.

The dinners will take place at 6:30 p.m. today and Friday and 1 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday in the Main Lounge of the Union. Tickets for the 14th annual Elizabethan Madrigal Dinners are $25 and are available at the University Box Office.

'Tis Better to Give than Receive(r)

DENON DRA-345

You know those receivers you see advertised in the Sunday supplements? 160 watts (total power!), built-in EQs, and flashing lights? Well, this isn't one of 'em! This is a thinking person's receiver (read high quality inside/minimal features outside) with 45 watts of high-current power and one feature not found in any other receiver... Denon design integrity.

$329
SONY STRD-790

* Dolby Pro-Logic circuitry * 80 watts front/20 watts center/20 watts rear * 6 soundfield effects settings * 6 audio & 2 video inputs * 30 AM/FM presets * System-wide remote

$499
DENON AVR-610

This is one unusual Dolby Pro-Logic surround receiver. To begin with, it's easy to use. Even the remote is uncomplicated and well thought-out. Another thing—this receiver sounds great! No circuit shortcuts, no cheap Dolby processing chips. Like all Denon components, the emphasis is on the inside of the component, not on ridiculous features that never get used.

Sony TS, EXR, XBR, and XBR-2 sets. Audio Odyssey has them all. Delivery and set up are free, and prices start at just $269. Best of all, "Miracle on 34th Street" looks great on all of them!

To all our friends and valued customers, our best wishes for a happy and safe holiday season.
