LOCAL

Saturday and Evening registration begins today

Registration for UI Saturday and Evening Classes for the 1993 spring semester begins today. Part-time students have priority in registering through the end of December, and may register either by telephone or in person.

Registration will be open to all students beginning Jan. 4. Students may register via ISIS, in person, or by telephone.

For more information, call Saturday and Evening Classes at 353-2575.

Jim Zabel arrested for OWI

Jim Zabel, the longtime "Voice of the Hawkeyes" in UI football and basketball for Iowa radio stations, was arrested early Saturday morning in Coralville for operating while intoxicated.

According to court documents, Zabel was stopped by Coralville police officers for traveling 42 miles per hour in a 25 mph zone. When Zabel got out of his car to speak with the officers, they noted an odor of alcohol on his breath and his slurred speech and proceeded to arrest him.

Zabel, who lives in Des Moines, commented for a radio broadcast of the Iowa-Iowa State basketball game Saturday afternoon.

IC police investigate videotore robbery

Iowa City Police are investigating a robbery of over $10,000 worth of merchandise from That's Renterainment, 363 N. First Avenue.

Police records show that arriving employees reported the theft at 9:48 a.m. Thursday. Police said the robbery occurred while the store was closed between 11 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday morning.

Police are still trying to determine why the burglary was not detected by the store's alarm and say they have not ruled out the possibility that an employee was involved.

Missing items from the theft include VCRs, Nintendo and Sega Genesis entertainment systems, and many of their respective games.

7 men charged in Coralville robbery

A pizza delivery man was attacked and robbed Saturday night by a group of seven males, one of whom had a knife, as he was attempting to make a delivery at 935 Boston Way in Coralville.

Coralville police located the males, who were between the ages of 14 and 18, after witnesses provided them with a vehicle description and a license number.

Tran Linh Trong, 18, of 2201 Ninth St., was charged with aiding and abetting a robbery in the first degree and is being held in the Johnson County Jail. Each of the six juveniles was charged with one count of robbery in the first degree and one count of burglary in the third degree, and was released to the custody of their parents.

Coralville police were able to recover the undisclosed amount of stolen money.

AT & T files lawsuit against Ace Pizza

The attorney for AT & T Information Systems filed a lawsuit against Ace Pizza, 940 Gilbert Court, Friday at the Johnson County Courthouse.

In the suit, AT & T has requested the court award $3,449.79 for unpaid installment prices and interest as well as for prices of telephone equipment installed at the pizza business by AT & T in June 1991.

Regents to hear plan-implementation details

Brad Hahn

The Daily Iowan

The UI will present details for implementation of its "Framework for Selected Instructional Improvement" to the Iowa state Board of Regents when they meet Wednesday in Ames.

The plan, developed by a committee of faculty, deans and central administrators, was designed to increase the involvement of tenured and tenure-track faculty in undergraduate education, increase incentives for excellent teaching and ensure that faculty-development programs fully contribute to the university's academic programs.

After the report was released in July, the 10 UI colleges were asked to design specific implementation plans in order to attain the objectives delineated in the report during the next three years.

These plans, along with several "benchmarks" to measure progress of reaching the goals, will be presented by Vice President of Academic Affairs Peter Nathan.

The benchmarks will check progress by measuring the quality of entering UI students, the quality of the instructional process, and the quality of the graduating UI student. Quality will be measured by comparisons with peers.

The UI will also present the report of the Strategic Planning Steering Group. The report sets forth criteria upon which it will base decisions regarding program enhancements and reductions.

Quality of a program and its centrality to the university are the criteria of highest priority and should represent the first phase of any program evaluation, according to the report. Secondary criteria include student demand, potential for excellence, external impact and cost.

Several annual reports will also be presented to the regents, including final numbers on faculty resignations, affirmative action and contract compliance, and deferred maintenance.

The report on faculty resignations found that 53 faculty members resigned last year, the lowest number at the UI in 10 years.

Findings also showed that more women resigned than men. Of those who left, 3.9 percent were women faculty members and 2.8 percent were men. Of the nine resigning women faculty members who returned their questionnaire, there was greater dissatisfaction than satisfaction in responses regarding, among other things, prospects for promotion, the university's commitment to their department or academic field and services available to support teaching.

But the overall response showed

COUNTRYSIDE STILL LACKS SUPPLIES

Marines start dispensing food around Mogadishu

G.G. LaBelle

Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Under U.S. Marine guard, the first food relief ship in eight weeks docked Sunday at Mogadishu, and American troops extended their reach outside the capital.

It was a busy day for the Marines, but still did not bring them to the areas where hundreds of people are dying of starvation and disease each week. And there were signs of the tough job ahead, including continued violence by clan gunmen.

Cynthia Osterman, a CARE International spokeswoman, estimated that 350,000 people have died in Somalia this year and that 1 million to 2 million are endangered. The last estimate of deaths, more than a month ago, was 300,000.

Osterman said the major problem was moving food into the countryside, where the U.S. forces have yet to deploy in large numbers.

"It's very tough to deliver. The roads are very bad, some mined," she said.

In the capital, Marines escorted food convoys to both sides of the divided city, and relief officials worked to restore water service to Mogadishu for the first time in two years.

The arrival of the first U.S. Army soldiers from the 10th Mountain Division at Fort Drum, N.Y., and Belgian and Italian soldiers brought troop strength to about 4,000.

More than 30,000 troops will eventually participate in the U.S.-led 80 percent of the buildings in Maumere, a town of 40,000, on the eastern part of the island. About 1,120 of the known deaths were in Maumere, the provincial governor's office reported.

Poor communications hampered the gathering of information from remote parts of the island, a poor copra-growing area about 1,000 miles east of Jakarta.

The earthquake measured 6.8 on the Richter scale, according to Indonesian officials.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif., measured it at 7.5.

Gov. Hendrik Fernandez visited Maumere on Sunday and was shocked by the devastation, spokesman J. Gadidjou said.

"All our development efforts for the last 25 years have disappeared in just one day," Gadidjou quoted the governor as saying.

Gadidjou said ships were carrying volunteers, food and medicine from nearby towns to the damaged areas.

Rescue work was hindered by aftershocks that occurred about every five minutes until around midnight Saturday, Nai said.

Interracial relationships succeed despite family pressure

Yokota Masuo
The Daily Iowan

Stasia and Mark Williams met on a blind date on St. Valentine's Day when she was 18 and Mark was 20.

"We were doomed to love," jokes Stasia, a UI graduate student.

However, she kept her relationship a secret from her parents for 5½ years.

Instead of calling them, Stasia wrote to inform her parents of her engagement with Mark in order to ensure the correct wording.

"I'm engaged to this man and I am in love with him, and by the way he happens to be black," she wrote to her white parents.

Her parents, disturbed by the news, refused to attend their daughter's wedding ceremony the following month because they couldn't stand the thought of their daughter getting married to a black man.

Although black-white marriages have more than tripled from 65,000 in 1970 to 211,000 in 1990, they have received the most negative reaction in this country.

According to a survey by Tom Smith, a researcher at the University of Chicago, 66 percent of whites said they would oppose a close relative marrying a black person, while only four percent said they would favor it. Forty-five percent of whites would oppose a close relative's marriage to an Asian or Latino person, and 15 percent to a Jew.

One of the highest hurdles most of these couples have to clear before a marriage is to win acceptance from white parents.

Stasia's parents questioned her marriage to Mark by asking "Are you self-destructive?" and "Why are you choosing a harder way in your life?"

Floyd Akins, an associate director of UI Opportunity at Iowa, has met several white women at the UI who have dated African-American men but gave in to parental pressures.

"Some of them couldn't survive if they were cut off from the family," Akins said. "But some women are See RELATIONSHIPS, Page 9A

Santa tells of adventures in kid-listening

Jon Yates

The Daily Iowan

It's tough being Santa.

The screaming kids, the flashing cameras, the reindeer.

"They're parked up on the roof," he explains as he walks through Sycamore Mall, then stops to wave at passers by.

"Ho, ho, ho," he says, his baritone voice echoing throughout the mall's main corridor. "Merry Christmas."

Four nights a week, six hours a night he is there, listening to the multitudes of requests, telling his little visitors to be nice, not naughty.

"It's often a little bizarre. One child said he wanted weapons. No specification, just weapons."

Santa

It's a message, he says, that most kids understand.

"One of the cutest was a kid who probably had been bad that morning," he says as he sits back on a fold-out chair in a makeshift Santa office nestled among the mall's stores. "She sat on my lap and she was not crying, but she had a very sad voice. She had come to confess to Santa that she was bad and that she was sorry."

Not that she needed to tell him that, of course. Santa knows. And if he doesn't, he's certainly a quick study.

"I had four older girls — about 13 or 14 — that were assaulting me, more or less, last week," he explains. "They were yanking my beard off and lifting my hair, basically being extremely bratty."

Ah, the beard. Pure white acrylic. Scratches, itchy. Scary.

"The kids are often very scared," Santa professes. "Often they talk a pretty big game, saying they want to see Santa, but by the time they get here they don't want anything to do with him."

"It's probably the look," he explains. "The big white beard, the whole colorful attire and the voice, I suppose, sometimes. You know, a good hearty 'Ho, ho, ho. What's your name?' It tends to put them back a bit."

But what about those brave ones, the ones that make it all the way up to sit on Santa's lap? What do they want for Christmas?

"Most of them forget by the time they get to me," Santa says, explaining that very few kids carry a list with them anymore. "They just sit there and say 'uh, uh, I can't remember.'"

For those who do remember, there is only one hard-and-fast rule that Santa says he must always remember: never make any outrageous promises.

"If they ask for a horse, I don't tell them Santa will bring one," he says.

Or a gun.

"It's often a little bizarre," he says. "One child said he wanted weapons. No specification, just weapons."

"Things have been crossing over

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Five-year-old Ewan Hamilton ponders what he wants for Christmas while sitting on Santa's knee at Old Capitol Center.

Keeping up with the never-ending barrage of new toys is a difficult task for most, but for Santa it is nearly impossible.

"I did go out and do some research on the toys," he confesses, his arms falling to the sides of his chubby belly. "It's unbelievable, the variety out there right now."

Like dogs that have puppies, or cats that have kittens, or babies that wet. Whatever the toy, Santa knows.

"Things have been crossing over gender-wise quite a bit," he says. "Boys want Little Mermaids, little girls want guns or trucks or trains, so that's been interesting to see."

Does the hustle and bustle of the Christmas season, of keeping up with the toys, of figuring out who's been naughty and who's been nice ever get Santa down?

"It's a lot of fun," he says. "It's exasperating when there's a lot of children coming through. I just try to give each one a piece of the myth."

Friends fête Sinatra on 77th B-day

Robert Macy
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — A gala 77th birthday party brought a twinkle and a tear to the blue eyes of Frank Sinatra.

Friends and family members were among Sinatra's audience Saturday for a birthday concert that concluded a weeklong engagement at the Desert Inn Hotel and Casino. The resort has special meaning for Sinatra: he made his Las Vegas debut there in 1951.

"Thank you for helping me celebrate a very important birthday, because there aren't many left," Sinatra said, drawing moans from a capacity crowd that gave him half a dozen standing ovations.

Sinatra, born Dec. 12, 1915, appeared fit, trim and in good voice Saturday.

Then Sinatra toasted his audience: "May you live well for 500 years, and may the last voice you hear be mine."

HOLIDAY CONFECTION LEAVES BAD TASTE

Traditional X'mas fruitcake finds few modern-day fans

Jon Yates

The Daily Iowan

There's an old joke that says there are only two fruitcakes in the world and they just keep getting passed around every Christmas.

For many UI students, that's about one too many.

"I hate fruitcake; it looks like a brain," UI senior Eric Berkland said. "Anything that looks that bad has to taste even worse."

Worse than brains? Well, maybe, but that hasn't stopped gift-givers the world over from making the delectable confection a Christmas tradition rivaling eggnog.

Kristine Heykants/The Daily Iowan

Fruitcake is one of the many gastronomic delights of the holiday season.

possible the first fruitcakes ever produced are still in circulation."

Along with many others, UI freshman Tania Bembridge said her mother makes fruitcake every year at about this time and (get this) people actually eat them.

"People always like it, they always want more every year," Bembridge said. "The only way I can eat fruitcake is if I'm rip-roaring drunk. It's disgusting."

Jonker, who makes fruitcakes on request (this year's total number of requests: zero) said she has had some pretty strange inquiries in the past.

"We don't make them all the time because as a rule, people don't really like them," she said.

CHANGE IN LEADERSHIP SOUGHT

Union members at Hormel oust 8 officers

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Minn. — The union at Geo. A. Hormel & Co. has ousted eight of nine top officers who had charted a moderate course after the bitter 1985 meatpackers' strike.

The vote by members of Local 9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers also forces a runoff for the local's presidency. None of the candidates received a majority vote. The runoff between challenger Richard Koski and incumbent John Anker is expected to be held in the next few weeks.

In the two-day election that ended Wednesday, Dale Chidester captured the local's No. 2 post, defeating incumbent John Morrison for secretary-treasurer 663-647.

Chidester transferred to Hormel's Austin plant after the company closed its Ottumwa, Iowa, packinghouse in 1988. He attributed his victory to members' desire for more aggressive leadership.

"I think people were ready for a change," he said. "The conservative leadership didn't seem to be leading them in any direction."

Chidester said the local has negotiated contracts that provided only small raises and have resulted in "backsiding on fringe benefits."

Morrison contended the election was a struggle for power.

"I don't think people vote for the individual candidates, their skills or dedication to their job," Morrison said. "A lot of the vote had to do with retaliation from the strike."

Morrison also attributed his defeat to his opponents' negative campaigning at the Quality Pork Processor, a slaughterhouse connected to the Hormel plant.

"It is difficult for any union leader to meet the needs and expectations of his members in tough economic times," Morrison said. "We work for a very prosperous employer, but that doesn't mean we can ignore what is going on in the industry. The meatpacking industry is very competitive."

Fire damage was confined to the couch and smoke damage was limited to rooms 312A and 312B. Damage was estimated at approximately $3,000.

Cigarette causes fire in Mayflower; damage estimated to be $3,000

The Daily Iowan

Mayflower Residence Hall was evacuated shortly after 8:30 p.m. Friday while firefighters extinguished a burning couch in a third-floor room.

The cause of the fire in room 312A was determined to be a discarded cigarette, according to Capt. Jim Giesking of the Iowa City Fire Department.

Fire damage was confined to the couch and smoke damage was limited to rooms 312A and 312B. Damage was estimated at approximately $3,000.

SOME FIND SEXUALITY CODES OUTDATED*Catholic college women say church too rigid

Victoria Forlini
The Daily Iowan

Many people may tend to view the Roman Catholic Church as a strict organization that sees things as black or white.

For college Catholic women, it can be difficult to follow the teachings of their church concerning sexuality, which they see as a direct reflection of the church's male hierarchy.

"It's understandable the church wants people with good morals, but they can't judge people," said Jane, a UI junior who did not wish to give her last name.

Jane has been involved in a committed relationship with a man for five years. By having a sexual relationship and using artificial contraception, she is going against the teachings of her church, but she does not feel remorse because of it.

According to Rev. John Stecher, a priest at the Newman Catholic Student Center, "The stand of the church comes from 20 centuries of scripture and lived experience."

But even scripture does not persuade some women to believe in all the church's teachings.

"The Bible has some great rules to live by, but some parables are just ridiculous," said UI senior Julie, who also did not wish to give her last name.

Julie had a baby when she was 17 and gave him up for adoption. She is no longer involved with the child's father, whom she considered marrying.

"I love my baby, I'm glad I had him. I'm not a bad person for having a child without being married," she said.

Although Julie goes through the emotional strain of not knowing her son, she said she would have gone through the same amount of said she believes the "no area of gray" stand on sexual issues is another example of a "way for men to have influence over women. They can't see a woman's side to things."

Stecher said that many people strain if she had aborted her baby. Julie planned to abort but changed her mind when her mother strongly opposed the idea. She admitted wanting an abortion was "selfish," but being 17 and pregnant "scared the shit out of you."

The Catholic Church opposes abortion except in extreme cases, such as risk to the mother's life.

Dana, a UI junior studying biology who also did not wish to give her last name, has a tough time believing life begins at conception as the church maintains.

"From a biological point of view, no, life doesn't start until the first heartbeat." But she said she has a hard time deciding nonbiologically when life begins.

"I could never have an abortion. I couldn't emotionally handle it," she said. "But you can't condemn any woman; she has her reasons."

Dana said the position of the church comes from and is oriented to a male-dominated society. She don't realize the forgiveness of the church.

He emphasized that an individual's conscience is the "highest authority. If you know all the facts about an issue and decide to use birth control, for example, the church respects your decision."

The policy of "conscience as your guide" does not mean that the church condones abortion. Yet with support groups like Project Rachel, in which women express their feelings about their abortions, the church is taking steps to show its support for women who have had abortion, Stecher said.

Jane agrees with the church's stand on abortions.

"There is no right time to end a pregnancy," she said, adding that the use of birth control is a must to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies.

Dana agreed with Jane on birth control. "It's the responsible thing to do."

Despite the teachings of the church, a majority of Catholics do use some form of artificial contraception.

The church supports only sexual abstinence during a woman's fertile time as contraception.

"Couples must sacrifice for each other and decide together," Stecher said. "Take responsibility. Stick to your morals and values."

STAVING OFF POUNDS, STRESS

Winter blahs all the more reason to keep up with regular workouts

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Despite the season's freezing temperatures, several UI students said this winter they are not going to let workouts fall by the wayside.

"I feel sluggish in the winter and I need energy," UI sophomore Kris Schneider said. "I feel so much better when I exercise and I don't want to just sit around and veg."

Since the cold weather has set in, Schneider has found other activities to replace the Rollerblading, bike riding and walking she did last fall. She now walks around the indoor track at the UI Field House to keep in shape.

"I want to maintain my weight instead of trying to lose it in the spring," she said.

UI junior Tim Owens said he tried to run three or four miles outside daily when the weather was warm, but now he runs at the Field House.

"It's kind of a pain driving over there," he said, "but it's too cold to run outside now and the sidewalks are way too icy."

Owens said he runs to lower his level of stress and to keep off the extra pounds.

To maintain weight, relieve stress and remain cardiovascularly fit were several of the reasons students said they keep exercising throughout the winter months.

UI junior Cathy Russell said it is more difficult to exercise during the winter season because it is not as convenient.

"I exercise less in the winter because in the summer I either walk everywhere or I go jump on my bike," she said. "It's not as natural in the winter. It's not a part of the daily routine."

Russell said now she exercises three or four times each week.

"I think it helps your whole general well-being," she said. "It's easier to study and it makes you feel better about yourself."

Ericka Roy, a UI junior and aerobics instructor at the Field House, said it is especially difficult before the holidays to get people motivated to attend her classes.

"With tests and all, the first thing people sacrifice is exercise," she said. "After the first of the year, things pick up again because of New Year resolutions and people are thinking ahead towards spring break and summer. They want to lose the extra holiday fat."

"Once you stop exercising it's harder to get back into it," she said.

"I want to maintain my weight instead of trying to lose it in the spring," she said.

HUMAN SERVICES MAKES APPEAL

Bureau hopes to increase fee

A $25 fee may be imposed for obtaining money from a delinquent payer's income-tax refund.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Department of Human Services is asking permission to increase charges it imposes for grabbing income-tax refunds or other services to recover overdue court-ordered child-support payments.

The additional fees would apply only to nonwelfare clients who are seeking help in recovering overdue payments. Of the 130,610 cases handled by the child-support collections bureau, about a third, or 51,130 cases, are custodial parents who do not receive welfare.

Jim Hennessey, director of the collections bureau, said it makes sense to increase fees.

"A number of people we serve are able to afford some or all of the services we provide," he said. "That's the direction things are going. People are looking at how far does government responsibility extend?"

Earlier this year, the Legislature approved the DHS proposal to increase the one-time application fee for nonwelfare parents seeking the state's help in recovering payments. The fee went from $5 to $25.

Now the agency wants to charge fees for obtaining money from a delinquent payer's income-tax refund. There is currently no charge for this service. The agency wants the fee to be $25. Again, the fee would be charged to the custodial parent, not the delinquent one, according to federal regulations.

The bureau also wants to impose a charge for reviewing child support orders.

SELECTIONS TO BE COMPLETE BY DEC. 25

Christopher: Cabinet appointments 'on schedule'

Nancy Benac
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Bill Clinton's transition director said Sunday the president-elect's list of candidates for top appointments includes many Republicans and independents. Warren Christopher said he's bound by no "quotas" based on race, gender or ideology.

Christopher — himself considered a top contender for secretary of state — said Clinton was on target to have his Cabinet roster completed or nearly done by Christmas.

He filled 11 top jobs last week, all of them going to Democrats, four of them women and one a black man.

Christopher, speaking on NBC's "Meet the Press," said "diversity is important, but not for its own sake" as Clinton makes major appointments.

"There are no quotas for any minority or any other group,"

Christopher said.

"Governor Clinton's determination is to try to select the very best people that he can and I guess I would urge you to try to judge the quality of the Cabinet in terms of those diversity matters, at the end of the process, rather than when we're not quite halfway through," said Christopher.

He added that "there have been many Republicans and independents who have been on these lists" of potential Cabinet candidates.

Christopher, who served in the Carter State Department, brushed off "Meet the Press" host Tim Russert's reference to him as "Mr. Secretary" but did not remove himself from Cabinet contention.

"Well, we'll have to see how that works out down the road," he said. "As I say, I've got my hands very full now with trying to provide the research for the selection of the Cabinet and many other transition duties as well."

In addition to secretary of state, other top jobs yet to be filled include defense secretary and attorney general. Wisconsin Rep. Les Aspin, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee is considered a contender for the defense slot, and four women are said to be top candidates for attorney general.

Other Cabinet posts said to be taking shape include former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt to head the Interior Department and outgoing Colorado Sen. Tim Wirth for energy secretary. Mississippi Rep. Mike Espy is publicly lobbying to head the Agriculture Department.

Vice President-elect Al Gore, interviewed on CBS' "Face The Nation," declined to join in the speculation. He did acknowledge Hillary Clinton's role in settling on major appointees.

If people fully appreciated the quality of her advice, they would say, "Boy, we want her even more involved," because she really is a force for good," Gore said.

On other subjects, Gore:

■ Said the incoming administration does not view the U.S. military operation to bring aid to starving Somalis as part of "some general broad-based doctrine" to expand the U.S. role around the world.

■ Reiterated the new administration's contention that "more could be done" to enforce the "no-fly" ruling to curb violence in the former Yugoslavia.

One of Clinton's appointments was longtime friend and Arkansas utility executive Thomas "Mack" McLarty to be White House chief of staff.

Christopher, asked about outsider McLarty's management of such a critical post, he predicted McLarty would serve as an "honest broker" who welcomes all views and channels them to Clinton.

Rep. Aspin top contender for defense secretary

Donna Cassata
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Silence is uncharacteristic for Rep. Les Aspin, whose rare quiet on Somalia and gays in the military is fueling speculation that the House Armed Services chairman could be the next defense secretary.

Initial rumors about Martin Marietta chief executive Norman Augustine, Loral Corp. Chairman Bernard Schwartz, Oklahoma Rep. Dave McCurdy and Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn have given way to the belief that the 54-year-old Aspin is the leading candidate.

President-elect Bill Clinton is expected to make the announcement within the next week or so, said Mark Ginsberg of the transition staff.

The talk has intensified as the Wisconsin Democrat has been unusually mum on Clinton's proposal to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military and the use of American force to aid the starving people of Somalia.

"There already would have been 18 white papers and 62 press releases" from Aspin's office on Somalia. "Not even one," said a congressional aide, whose identity came on condition of anonymity.

Questioned about the 22-year veteran's recent silence, Lynn Reddy, a spokeswoman for the lawmaker, said he was on vacation last week.

A former analyst in the Defense Department, Aspin rose to the chairmanship of the Armed Services Committee seven years ago, building a reputation as a military expert and a masterful handler of the media.

His relationship with the Democratic Caucus in the House has been tenuous at times. In the past, Aspin has voted for aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, supported the MX and Midgetman nuclear missiles and in 1989, backed Republican Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's military budget.

The same year, Aspin angered some liberals when he said the House-passed defense package was a "Michael Dukakis budget." But Aspin's standing got a significant boost with the Persian Gulf War. Shortly before the first air attacks on Iraq, Aspin presented his own military scenario that said a military victory was likely with a low number of U.S. casualties.

Aspin, who backed the use of force, was present.

The Yale and Oxford-educated lawmaker, who shares the same academic lineage as the president-elect, is known to tout out loud as he did earlier this year when he presented four types of military budgets for the post-Cold War era.

Hardly a political neophyte, Aspin saw to it that one of his budget options was approved by the House. Following the rocky experience of 1989, Aspin hired a legislative troubleshooter, Larry Smith, and every year since then, including 1992, the committee budgets have been approved easily.

Aspin knows how to acquire power and how quickly it can slip away. Seven years ago, House liberals helped him secure the committee chairmanship from the elderly Mel Price and several senior members. In 1988, Aspin suffered a no-confidence vote from the Democratic Caucus before regaining his chairmanship two weeks later.

Longtime military observers, congressional aides and industry officials said this week that Aspin's name has emerged from a field that once included Augustine, Schwartz, McCurdy, the chairman of the House Intelligence Committee and Nunn, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services panel.

Augustine's selection as defense secretary seems unlikely in light of Martin Marietta's recent purchase of General Electric Co.'s aerospace business for more than $3 billion.

Martin Marietta's "board never would have gone along with that if they thought he was leaving," and neither would General Electric.

Schwartz and McCurdy are no longer mentioned and Nunn has been outspoken in his misgivings about the lifting of the ban on homosexuals in the military.

Another congressional aide said the staff on Num's panel is preparing for the 103rd Congress with the assumption that the senator will return as committee chairman.

PARKING ALERT

Avoiding one source of holiday stress

Finals week at the UI begs thoughts of interim; most of us can hardly wait for the break! But the light at the end of your finals week tunnel may not be quite the harbinger of peace and freedom from stress you envision. Not if you usually park your car on the street.

The city of Iowa City has a long-standing tradition of waiting for holiday and university breaks, and then massing and releasing its ticket-and-tow force of "Public Service Officers" on an unsuspecting university population. Those who take the safety of parking in front of their apartment complexes for granted beware: That sort of criminal behavior will not stand in this town!

Should those of you who typically park in front of your apartments or houses or whatever attempt to do so over the coming interim, the city will have arranged for another surprise for you before you return. Your automobile will be towed if it remains in the same place for more than about 48 hours. Merry Christmas!

Because of Iowa City's ordinances against "street storage," this swiping of your cars is completely legitimate, 100 percent legal. And this public service is not inexpensive.

It's really a shame that a city whose entire existence is intertwined with the UI goes to such lengths to take advantage of so many of its residents, temporary and otherwise, in this manner. But the good news is this: The fate of a Christmas spent by your auto in the towing yard may be avoided quite easily. Motor-vehicle owners need only move their cars to off-street parking over the Christmas break to avoid the Public Service Officers' friendly help in the relocation of those vehicles.

To the Editor:
In the '60s, the question was: What if we go to war, but nobody comes? Now the question is: What if we have a war and too many people come? Too many cameras. How would we make sure all of the news organizations got decent footage? That the lighting was right? That all the electronic TV equipment was set up correctly, so that video couplers coupled and line-ins lined in?

Well, what we'd do is send all of our news teams a couple of days in advance. Get them on the war scene early.

By the time the U.S. Navy Seals arrived in Mogadishu, Somalia, for their amphibious landing on Tuesday, the news teams and photographers had already secured the beachhead.

Hundreds of photographers from all over the world greeted the Navy Seals as they jumped into the surf. The crack team of soldiers was a little stunned. Not by the attention, but the lights. Watch the footage of the landing and you'll see the flashes popping away. The SEALs with night-vision goggles were temporarily blinded by the lights.

"It was horrible, Ma, I thought, this is it. I thought, I'll never see again. I saw these flashes of light. I jumped into the water and I couldn't see, just lunged toward the shore. Then someone started asking me questions, from nowhere, I couldn't see him. He said, 'What's your name? How does it feel to be in Mogadishu?' He said, 'The starvation, the death; are you ready for it? How does one psychologically prepare for something like this?'

"I had this feeling deep inside my chest that there was going to be a station break, I think — you know, I just had the sense, like when your senses are heightened and you just understand. You just know."

"These camera guys showed us the quickest way off the beach, because we didn't expect this kind of turnout, but we had to agree to do a profile for this NBC affiliate, and answer questions about our attitudes toward starvation and gays in uniform."

A good amphibious landing has its own drama, must unfold in its own way. But there's no reason an amphibious landing can't be better than good.

Think lighting.
Think halogen lights on the far side of the beachhead.

Think light and shadow. The moon overhead.

Yes, this is how good it can be. So they brought lights — their own. Studio lights to capture it all on film, to document the scene just exactly as it happened, with all of the drama. With that on-the-scene quality, as if you, the viewer, were there yourself.

Hell, maybe you were there. Or maybe the next Navy Seal landing you'll get a press pass, set up the equipment, get a chance to feel it, live it, taste the power of feeding the hungry, killing the bad men.

But be prepared.
Think contrast.
Think: a photograph that captures the intensity of being a Navy Seal. The comradeship. The machismo tinged with a quiet vulnerability.

Think halogen.

Heartfelt holiday thanks

To the Editor:

During this holiday season, I wish to express my gratitude to the Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, their parents and leaders for the wonderful assortment of canned goods which they collected for the shelter Saturday, Nov. 21. Larry McConahay and Ed Kownia are to be congratulated for once again organizing and sponsoring this great event! The National Guard under the direction of Maj. Schmid is also a large part of the endeavor by providing transportation of the assorted canned goods to the shelter's storage area and helping to stock the shelves. Not the least to be remembered are all the many people who took the time and effort to fill the bags left on their doors. This has been a wonderful financial boost to EHP, which is struggling on a small budget to care for all the many people seeking services of food and shelter.

Hundreds of photographers from all over the world greeted the Navy Seals as they jumped into the surf. The crack team of soldiers was a little stunned. Not by the attention, but the lights. Watch the footage of the landing and you'll see the flashes popping away. The SEALs with night-vision goggles were temporarily blinded by the lights.

At a party Saturday night, I was asked about the recent appearance on this campus of one Loretta Neet. More specifically, I was asked why I had not written about Mrs. Neet the Monday after her Friday evening remarks. My response was thin. I said I didn't want to be writing homo columns all the time. But Mrs. Neet has been an ongoing presence in my thoughts since her appearance. So much for my good intentions.

Loretta Neet is an organizer for Oregon's notorious Measure 9. The anti-gay proposition was soundly defeated in November. This has left Mrs. Neet free to travel the country on a mission she strongly asserts is not from God. I tend to take her word on that: God would not approve of her mission. This budding media darling is on a crusade against the "homosexual agenda." She's not just any anti-homo crusader, though. She's really stupid, a fact she makes known without hesitation.

You see, the homosexual agenda Mrs. Neet is fighting against and features in her presentations dates from 1972. She admits this right up front, which is why I give her credit for shameless stupidity. We could argue all day about whether people deserve more credit for being shamelessly stupid, or just plain stupid and too dumb to figure it out. Like a criminal who shows no remorse, we abhor her words and actions, but are oddly fascinated as well.

Such is the ignorance of Mrs. Neet. I paraphrase former DI columnist and good friend Mike Lankford: Mrs. Neet, your ignorance is like a blanket that covers the earth.

I don't know how much of 1972 you would want to be tied to for life. I seem to remember the Brady Bunch, a president with the middle name of Milhouse, and trousers that flared into bells at the bottom. I sported a pair of these at the time. They were denim and had little leather strings laced through eyelets on the thighs. I would forfeit my life before ever climbing into anything like them again. But some things never change, and Mrs. Neet counts homos among them.

The brain of Loretta Neet is like a time machine. We are rolled back to the days when nobody cared about sexual safety, because no one had the sobering concept of sexual peril to measure it against. A time when straights and gays were sleeping with too many people, including each other. Free love is item No. 1 on Mrs. Neet's distorted homosexual agenda. Free to "love" anyone or anything, as she made painfully clear. Among the potential bedmates of homos she counts the following: consenting adults, coerced children, even canines and corpses.

I have a question for Mrs. Neet. In addition to the remarkable panoply of degraded sexual activity she reels off, she repeatedly asserts that gays make an enormous amount of money compared to the normal, God-fearing population of the world. So just answer this, Loretta: If gay men are so busy penetrating everything with rectum, when do they go to work? How do they earn all this money? If money is a reward for work well done, then these guys must be amazingly endowed with stamina. Let's listen in on what a phone conversation between two average queer guys would sound like in the strange world of Mrs. Neet:

David: Hey, Michael. How's it going?

Michael: Fine, David. I'm having a great day. I sold four houses, pocketed my $37,000 commission, fondled two preteens, and whipped Rick's butt at racquetball — then took him home to bed and just plain whipped his butt. All before lunch!"

David: AAAAABULOUS! You are such a scamp!

One of the hosts from the Alliance for the Advancement of Heterosexuality, who brought this astonishing woman to campus, mentioned the importance of "intellectual debate." I have news for these delusional freedom fighters and defenders of the faith. The rights of American citizens are not a matter for debate, intellectual or otherwise. Those rights do include having sexual relationships with any other consenting adult we deem suitable. Further, nowhere is it written that we have to be quiet about it.

Our right of free speech is precious. Lives have been given to maintain that right. I think such sacrifice merits a profound sense of obligation on our part as we exercise this freedom. It seems reasonable that we try to be mindful of a certain level of integrity in our public discourse.

People like Loretta Neet are without this sense of integrity. Public speaking is a game to them. The more they shock and incite people, the more often they are asked to speak. Gays have to live with the consequences of their distortions. The chief consequence is fear, and it is well-founded. Gays and lesbians have much to fear because the lies told about them are so often, and so inexplicably, believed.

The rhetoric of Loretta Neet is vile. Every time she speaks of "ingestion of fecal matter," you can feel people cringe. Every time she speaks of "having to" hire gays and lesbians, there are one or two people who wonder. And every time she talks about the obscure fringe group NAMBLA (the North American Man / Boy Love Association), there are people, including queers who've never heard of it before, who gasp.

But this is not 1972, dammit. It's 1992. The largest-circulation gay magazine, The Advocate, stopped accepting NAMBLA advertising years ago. Gay men are no more inclined to have sex with male children than heterosexual men are inclined to have sex with little girls. As in the heterosexual community, gays and lesbians are appalled by the very idea. I could go off on a tirade here, but I'm sick of it. I'm sick of the whole thing.

I'm sick of hearing about child molestation, sexual perversion and filth as if they were hallmarks of gay life. I'm sick of hearing about how privileged queers are when there are judges who refuse to sentence gay bashers because violence against gays is "understandable." I'm sick of hearing how "intolerant" gays are towards people like Loretta Neet. Loretta Neet is scum. She knows better, and still she says the things she does. In a country where economic hardship has many people on edge, inciting people to loathe people in groups or classes is playing with a terrible fire. That is not exercising free speech. That is simply beneath contempt.

NEW DELHI sealed the official Muslim national and arrested more than 100 in a nationwide extremist clampdown.

The government casualty toll of 4,600 wounded erupted after Friday down a 16th-century Ayodhya on Dec. 6. 100 were still being treated.

The arrests were Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao's effort to assert his authority and control.

Indian police arrest Muslim, Hindu extremists

Arthur Max
Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — Police sealed the offices of Hindu and Muslim nationalist groups Sunday and arrested more than 700 people in a nationwide crackdown on extremists blamed for a week of communal rioting.

The government announced a casualty toll of 1,210 dead and 4,600 wounded in the mayhem that erupted after Hindu zealots tore down a 16th-century mosque in Ayodhya on Dec. 6. More victims were still being discovered.

The arrests were part of Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao's effort to assert the government's authority and counter critics who called him weak and indecisive when he failed to prevent the mosque's destruction.

Quiet returned to most areas after a week of the worst Hindu-Muslim clashes since independence in 1947.

The only major incident reported Sunday was in Mysore, a city in the southern state of Karnataka. Officials said 15 people were stabbed in a melee, and police opened fire to disperse the rioters.

Curfews were lifted during daylight hours in most of the 135 cities where people had been confined to their houses for days, including India's two largest cities, Calcutta and Bombay.

More than 20,000 people who fled from their homes in Calcutta because of fighting returned, but 10,000 others remained in refugee camps, city officials said.

Police in three states rounded up activists of Hindu and Muslim fundamentalist organizations that last week were banned for two years for allegedly encouraging communal hatred and violence.

A leader of the Bharatiya Janata party and a member of Parliament who represented the party were among the Hindus detained. The Bharatiya Janata, the largest opposition party, championed the idea of building a Hindu temple on the site where the Muslim house of worship had stood.

Officials said the groups' bank accounts were frozen and their offices searched for material that might connect them with inciting the disturbances.

Among the activists arrested were at least 22 Muslims belonging to two Islamic fundamentalist groups that were banned. The rest belonged to the World Hindu Council, which organized the campaign to demolish the mosque in Ayodhya, and the more militant Hindu groups Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh and Bajrang Dal.

Many Hindus believe the mosque was built on the ruins of a prehistoric temple erected on the birthplace of the god Rama.

RELATIONSHIPS

strong enough to be able to stand that type of pressure."

UI undergraduate Ellen, who is white, is going through similar hardships with her parents because last semester she started dating a black man, Bob, also a UI undergraduate. Ellen and Bob (not their real names) agreed to be interviewed on condition of anonymity.

Ellen said her parents have disowned her and "patched it up" a few times this semester. The situation between her and her parents remains uncertain.

"My parents have been taught it is wrong to date outside the race," Ellen said. "They still think it's wrong for me to date him."

"My parents have been taught it is wrong to date outside the race. They still think it's wrong for me to date him."

Ellen, UI student

Experts at the UI agree that a relationship between a black male and a white female tends to receive harsher responses than a relationship between a black female and a white male.

Adrien Wing, a professor at the UI College of Law, said that this country has a long history of lynching innumerable black men, and that lynching was often spurred when black men looked at white women.

The presence of black males and white females together reminds some people today of the taboo, said Professor Fredrick Woodard of the UI African-American World Studies Program.

"There's a similar thought about a black woman with a white man," he said. "But it doesn't have the same magnitude as it does toward the black male."

More than six years after their marriage, Stasia and Mark have won acceptance from her parents, but not approval.

"My parents still don't think it was the best choice for me," Stasia said. "But they would never say that to me, because they love me and they don't want to hurt me. They are now supportive of us."

Mark said all the tension with Stasia's parents is "behind us." He admitted that he felt some resentment toward his wife when she kept him a secret from her parents.

"But I don't have the same feelings toward her and her parents any more," he said. "I have spent some good times with her parents."

The difficulty with interracial couples originates largely from the different priorities about how to judge person, Stasia said.

"Some people perceive a race issue as being the first issue in the relationship before they get to the individual," Stasia said. "The way I perceive it is that I happened to fall in love with this individual, who happened to be 6-foot-3-inches, happened to be intelligent and happened to be black."

"His race is a very important part of his identity," she added. "But it's not the primary issue of our relationship."

Ellen said her parents avoid seeing Bob in person because they might like him as an individual.

"My dad said if he actually sees Bob, he would probably like him, because he knows I don't go out with someone unless he is a very good person," Ellen said. "My dad trusts my judgment but he has a hard time changing himself."

general satisfaction with most areas of the UI.

The UI report on affirmative action and contract compliance showed that the majority of UI employees were Caucasian, but the number of minorities increased by 30.

Approximately 61 percent of UI employees are women, and 95 percent are Caucasian. There was an increase of 37 women last year. Of the minorities hired, 9 were African-American, 5 Latino, 15 Asian, and one was an American Indian. Minorities appointed to executive / administrative / managerial positions increased by two.

The annual report on deferred maintenance showed the five regents' institutions reporting deferred maintenance needs totaling approximately $104 million. The UI's total was $53,926,000.

Deferred maintenance refers to facility repairs that should have been undertaken in the past, but have not been. The report states that many years of inadequate funding for normal maintenance and building renewal has resulted in substantial amounts of work at the institutions. As a result, the regents have attempted to catch up with needed repairs that have accumulated over the past two decades.

According to British Broadcasting Corp. radio monitors, Ali Mahdi on Sunday banned the carrying of all weapons in Mogadishu, and ordered his troops to stay in their barracks. The BBC said a pro-Ali Mahdi radio station quoted Ali Mahdi's order as warning, "Anyone not observing this ban will answer to the consequences."

Violence also persisted in the central town of Baidoa, where hundreds of people are dying each week.

Minnesota, Pittsburgh and Dallas each needed a win to clinch their division titles. All three couldn't get the job done.

The playoff picture remained cloudy Sunday in both conferences as several good teams lost and their pursuers kept winning. All six division titles were up for grabs but none were decided Sunday afternoon.

The Steelers, however, wrapped up the AFC Central when Houston lost to Green Bay on Sunday night, 16-14.

Minnesota, which needed either a win or a loss by Green Bay, will have to wait until next week to try again at clinching the NFC Central. They lost to the 49ers 17-10.

Pittsburgh, needing a win or losses by Cleveland and Houston, were also forced to stay up late after they were trounced 30-6 by the Bears.

Dallas, which needed either to beat Washington or have Philadelphia lose to Seattle, will have to wait another week. The Cowboys lost 20-17 and the Eagles edged the Seahawks by the same score in overtime.

The only team that took care of its own business was the 49ers. San Francisco needed to beat Minnesota and have New Orleans lose to the Rams. But because the Saints won 37-14, the NFC West title is

There was a method to the Hawkeyes' madness before Iowa hit the floor Saturday against Iowa State. Sporting gold uniforms for the first time this year proved to be an omen of things to come, as No. 8 Iowa struck it rich in the form of a 78-51 thrashing of the Cyclones at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"It's a secret when we're going to wear them, but it worked out well," center Acie Earl said. "It's good luck for us."

But no luck was necessary for Iowa, as the Hawkeyes utilized a 42-20 edge on the boards to weather the Cyclones in the biggest Hawkeye margin of victory in the series, breaking the previous mark of 85-59 in 1981.

"You have to say that's the best 40 minutes we've played this year because of the caliber of the opposition," Coach Tom Davis said. "You could see the intensity with the in-state rivalry. It was fierce."

After a lethargic 64-44 win over UNI last Tuesday, the 5-0 Hawkeyes were out to prove themselves worthy of their No. 8 status. And with last year's 98-84 thumping at the hands of the Cyclones in Ames still on their minds, the timing, and the opponent, could not have been better.

Not even a trip back in time could produce new-age results for an opponent of top-ranked Iowa.

For the first time since 1974, the Hawkeyes and Panthers did not wrestle in the UNI-Dome but rather, the West Gym.

However, a change in scenery could not rekindle the winning ways for the No. 10 Panthers, as Iowa grabbed its 20th consecutive victory in the series in front of 2,061 fans, 31-9 Friday night in Cedar Falls.

Although the Iowa women's basketball team beat UNC-Charlotte 60-38 for the championship of the eighth annual Amana-Hawkeye Classic, Lady 49ers Coach Ed Baldwin said that his players should be proud of the game they played Saturday night.

"I told my kids to hold their heads up because we played hard," Baldwin said. "We took the No. 5 team in the country and made them go into overdrive. They showed their character and the caliber of basketball team that they are by the way they turned it up when they had to."

Backed by a single-game Classic record crowd of 2,688, the Hawkeyes still trailed by five points five minutes into the game, before mounting some momentum for a 24-16 halftime advantage.

Senior center Molly Tideback led the Hawkeyes with 16 points. Tideback joined senior forward Toni Foster on the all-Tournament team, while senior guard Laurie Aaron took home the tournament's Most Valuable Player award.

Center Mike Devlin, defensive back Carlos James and defensive lineman Mike Wells shared the Roy J. Carver Award Saturday night as the Iowa football team's most valuable player.

Devlin was the Big Ten's offensive lineman of the year, as well as a Kodak all-American and a semifinalist for the Lombardi Award, which goes to college football's top lineman.

James, a first team all-Big Ten selection, had 43 tackles while Wells tied defensive back Doug Buch as Iowa's second-leading tackler with 89. A junior from Arnold, Mo., Wells was another first team all-conference pick.

Wells also led Iowa with 17 tackles for loss.

Senior tight end Matt Whitaker and quarterback Jim Hartlieb shared the Forest Evashevski Scholastic Achievement Award. Both were members of the Big Ten's all-academic team for the third straight year.

The coaches appreciation award went to defensive lineman Maurea Crain, the Hustle award went to Buch on defense and tight end Alan Cross on offense, and the outstanding special team honor was awarded to kicker Todd Romano and fullback Paul Kujawa.

The scout team award for defense went to linebacker Eric Hilgenberg of Prior Lake, Minn., and the offensive honor went to Chicago's Damani Shakoor, a running back.

The Vikings were the only team that could clinch a playoff berth this weekend simply by winning, but they didn't get the job done. Amp Lee, filling in for injured star Ricky Watters, rushed for 134 yards and a touchdown and also caught a scoring pass as the 49ers had to work for the win at the Metrodome.

Bears 30, Steelers 6

Chicago's defense, playing inspired football in Mike Singletary's final home game, forced three turnovers and the offense locked the game up after three quarters. The Bears (5-9) held Barry Foster, who entered the game with 1,444 yards and 10 games of 100 or more yards this season, to 25 yards on 12 carries. Jim Harbaugh, who vowed to donate his weekly check of $70,000 to charity until the Bears won again, completed 11 of 21 passes for 90 yards and a TD. Harbaugh said he will still make a donation.

Packers 16, Oilers 14

Green Bay won its fifth straight game for the first time since 1966 and stayed right in the thick of the playoff race. The Packers (8-6) benefited from four Houston (8-6) turnovers — two fumbles and two interceptions — that they turned into two field goals and a touchdown. The game clincher came on a 6-yard TD pass from Brett Favre to Sterling Sharpe with 3:33 left in the game.

Eagles 20, Seahawks 17, OT

Roger Ruzek kicked a 44-yard field goal as time expired in overtime to keep the Eagles tied with the Redskins for second place in the NFC East. The Eagles (9-5) overcame a club-record 191 penalty yards and 10 sacks of quarterback Randall Cunningham.

The Eagles sent the game into overtime when they drove 93 yards in nine plays for a touchdown with 4:52 left to tie the score at 17.

Saints 37, Rams 14

At Anaheim, New Orleans' defense forced six turnovers, five in the first half, and the Saints came up with their highest scoring game of the year and stayed a game behind San Francisco in the NFC West. New Orleans led 23-0 at halftime and increased that to 37-0 early in the final quarter before the Rams scored twice in the last eight minutes.

Colts 10, Jets 6

Don't count the Colts out yet. At East Rutherford, Jack Trudeau came off the bench late in the fourth quarter and threw the game's only touchdown to keep the Colts' faint playoff hopes alive. The game-winner was a 23-yarder to Charles Arbuckle with 2:29 remaining.

Falcons 35, Buccaneers 7

Wade Wilson threw for 324 yards and five touchdowns, giving Atlanta (6-8) its first victory on the road this season. Michael Haynes scored on receptions of 8 and 60 yards, and Andre Rison, Mike Pritchard and Deion Sanders also caught TD passes. The loss was the ninth in 10 games for Tampa Bay (4-10), which clinched a 10th consecutive season with double-digit losses.

Chiefs 27, Patriots 20

In a cold rain at Kansas City, the ball bounced the Chiefs' way in the fourth quarter of a game that featured 10 fumbles. Tied 13-13 in the fourth quarter, the Chiefs took the lead when Charles Mincy scooped up Jon Vaughn's fumble and returned it 30 yards for a touchdown. Kansas City is two victories away from its first AFC West title in 21 years.

Chargers 27, Bengals 10

At San Diego, the Chargers ensured their first winning season in a non-strike year since 1981 by beating the Bengals (4-10). The Chargers (9-5) scored the final 24 points and got the winning score on Stan Humphries' 1-yard bootleg run.

The Hawkeyes had their backs to the wall early, as the anticipated 118-pound match between top-ranked Hawkeye Chad Zaputil and former Hawkeye backup Brad Bruhl never materialized. Coach Dan Gable sat Zaputil out due to a back injury, giving UNI a 6-0 lead by forfeit.

Hawkeyes make it 14 straight

Curtis Riggs
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swim team did more than defeat Iowa State Saturday. It preserved history in the process.

"Pride comes into play in a meet like this," team co-captain and freestyler Matt Smith said of the Hawkeyes' 136-103 victory over the Cyclones at the Fieldhouse. "It's been 13 years since they have beaten us and we sure as heck didn't want to be the ones to break that tradition."

Coach Glenn Patton had many of his athletes playing new roles in his attempt to garner his 14th straight win over the intrastate rivals.

"Iowa State gave us a chance to juggle our line-up and swim different athletes in different events," Patton said. "I am very pleased with how some of our young swimmers and divers stepped forward with intensity and competitiveness."

Dan Stoppenhagen was the only triple winner on the afternoon. He won the 200-yard freestyle in 1:39.48, the 100 freestyle in 45.68 and swam a leg on the winning 200 freestyle relay team.

Stoppenhagen said he felt like he was the only one in the pool in the 200.

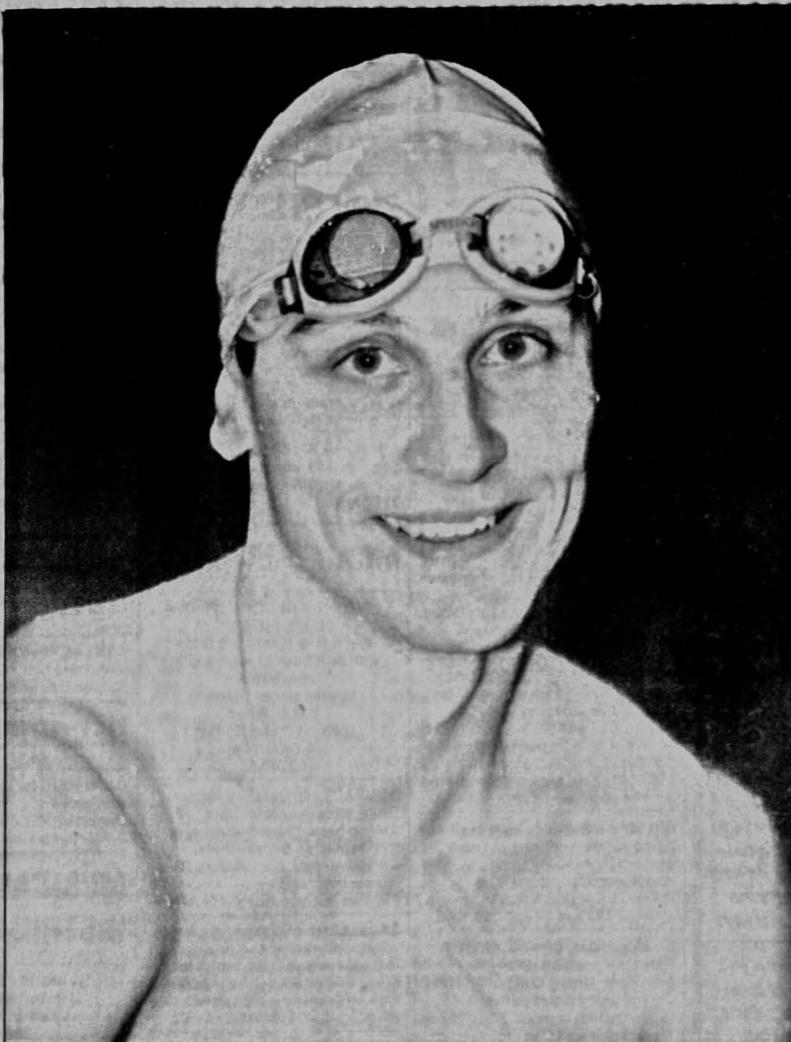

"It was basically me against the clock," Stoppenhagen said. "The reason I was so pumped for that race was that I was so close to 1:40. I had to just block everything out and concentrate on that."

Patton said he was impressed with Stoppenhagen.

The highlight of the meet was Dan hitting lifetime best unshaved times in the 100 and 200 freestyles," Patton said.

In addition, three Hawkeyes were double winners. Vico Hidalgo won the one-meter dive with a 276.30 score and took the three-meter by garnering a 317.625.

Rafal Szukala won the 100 backstroke in 51.74 and was also a part of the winning 200 freestyle relay. The silver medal butterfly said he enjoys it when he can compete in a race other than his specialty.

"I am definitely tired of swimming the fly all the time," said Szukala. "I was impressed about going under 52."

Smith won the 50 freestyle in 21.32 and swam the first leg of the 200 medley relay. Smith, who usually swims the backstroke, was also glad to make a change.

"It helps break the monotony," Smith said. "It is nice to get a break and swim something new."

The winning 200 medley relay team, comprised of Smith, Chris Duffin, Szukala and Eric Kirch, finished in a time of 1:33.51. Szukala, Dan Leibbrand, Stoppenhagen and Kirch made up the 200 freestyle relay squad that won in 1:24.82.

Brad Gaeth won the 200 individual medley in 1:55.59 and Steve Rivers took first in the 500 freestyle in 4:44.57. Patton was especially pleased with those two swimmers.

"The comeback award is split between Gaeth, who had his first good meet of the year, and Rivers, who is back in competition from a broken hand," Patton said.

The Cyclones garnered victories in the 1,000 freestyle, the 100 butterfly and the 100 breaststroke.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Hawkeyes' depth too much for ISU

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team evened its season record at 3-3 with a solid 186-108 victory over intrastate rival Iowa State Saturday at the Beyer Hall Pool in Ames.

"Iowa State was ready, but our depth really paid off for us," Hawkeye coach Pete Kennedy said.

The Hawkeyes started the meet with one-two punch in the 200 medley relay. The team of J.J. DeAth, Melissa Eberhart, Nicole Widmyer and Tracy Golden took the title in a time of 1 minute, 48.68 seconds. Second place went (2:23.42) and 200 individual medley (2:09.95).

Other Hawkeyes picking up first place finishes were junior Liane Burton (100 butterfly; 58.69), freshman Rachel Bayster (200 butterfly; 2:09.03) and the 400 freestyle relay team (Burton, DeAth, Borgelt and Golden (3:22.61)).

Burton is getting very consistent for us," Kennedy said. "Golden and Pennington also swam very well."

As expected, Iowa State posted quality performances in the distance events. The Cyclones' Shelli Olsen captured freestyle wins in the 1,000 (10:28.93), 500 (5:01.39) and 200 (1:54.42).

Nicole Widmyer

the one-meter and three-meter boards for the Cyclones with scores of 262.35 and 298.05, respectively. Iowa's Jenni Harkness placed second in each event (211.35 and 196.72), and the Hawkeyes' Jill Oboikovitz finished third (191.025 and 178.72).

With Saturday's loss, Iowa State's season mark moved to 5-7 overall. The Cyclones are 1-2 in the Big Eight.

"This meet gave us a real good perspective on where we are," Kennedy said. "We swam consistently and this puts us in a good position for exam week and our training trip (in Hawaii) over break."

"We knew they'd be strong in the distance events, but overall they were a little bit better than we thought they'd be."

Nicole Widmyer, Iowa swimmer to the team of Laura Borgelt, Allison Pennington, Liane Burton and Kristin Wallace in 1:50.58.

Leading the Hawkeye charge was quadruple-winner Golden. The senior from Cedarburg, Wis., took first in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 24.39 seconds. She also captured the title in the 100 freestyle (53.22) and anchored two winning relays.

Pennington, a junior, also came through for Iowa, taking individual titles in the 100 breaststroke (1:07.29), 200 breaststroke

"We knew they'd be strong in the distance events, but overall they were a little bit better than we thought they'd be," said Widmyer, a junior from East Dubuque, Ill. "It's always a really exciting meet, so we both get pumped up."

"Our breaststrokes were really good in this meet," Widmyer added. "We also had the first and second places in the first relay. They really got us going."

Big Eight diving champion Katie Grinnell picked up wins on both

MOVIE REVIEW

'Arabian Nights' fairy tale, 'Aladdin,' caters to both children, parents

Kevin Ruby

The Daily Iowan

In the academic conclave known as Iowa City, where academic anxiety reigns, and words such as "fluff" or "fun" either refer to insane hair-mousse cases or mindless cinematic voids, sneaking in from Anaheim to the south side of Corntown is "Aladdin," which is sure to prompt a few laughs from even the grouchiest of cynics (pointing fingers not allowed).

This animated adventure upholds the new trend of Disney's success in family oriented fanfare. Disney effectively buried itself in the '80s with half-baked projects like "The Black Cauldron" (anyone remember that one?), and re-releases of its classics drew less-than-impressive ticket sales, unable to find a market among GoBot-heads. After an impressive revival with 1989's beautiful "The Little Mermaid," followed with last year's Oscar-winning "Beauty and the Beast," the folks at GoofyLand have whipped out this translation of the classic Arabian tale, which has less music and less adventure than the previous two films, but more responsibility and especially more of the absurd.

This is to be expected, however, when a film project brings the likes of zanymeister Robin Williams onto the deck. He provides the voice of the genie, who upstages the forgettable heroes in the tradition of Cruella de Ville and Captain Hook. Williams is renowned for his improvisational schizophrenia, changing into multiple personae at the spin of a nickel. So when his manic delivery is catered to by impressive art direction that can turn the big blue

The Walt Disney Company

A magical matchmaking genie wistfully looks on as his master, Aladdin, takes Princess Jasmine on a romantic carpet ride with his monkey, Abu, buffoon into literally anything in the flick of a frame, the genie becomes a sort of "Can You Top This?" competition between Williams and Disney. Many of the segues provided by the genie (and there are many... Jack Nicholson, Brando, Arsenio Hall, etc.) probably will go right over an average 5-year-old's head, but what the hell. It's about time an animated film catered to the parents as well as the kids that drag them to the film in the first place.

Oh yeah, story summary. Aladdin (voiced by Scott Weinger) is a street rat who hangs out with his sidekick monkey, Abu. He saves the princess Jasmine (Linda Larkin) from certain dismemberment, herself escaping from old patriarchal traditions that require her to marry a prince and stay confined in the far-off picturesque palace.

This meeting is all too convenient for the evil Gafar (John Freeman), who learns that Aladdin is a "diamond in the rough."

Gafar tricks the naive but adventurous lad into traveling deep into a magical cave that protects the lamp, which in turn contains the genie. The plan backfires, and Aladdin finds himself trapped in the underworld with an entity who is part David Copperfield, part David Letterman, and of course, a lot of Robin Williams.

The first 20 minutes are fairly slow, and it isn't until the genie arrives on the scene that the film gets a lot of loud, frequent laughs. Most of the music is forgettable, and lacks the punch that fueled the soundtracks of "The Little Mermaid" and "Beauty and The Beast." Even the supporting Happy Little Animal Characters, a trademark of Disney, are noticeably subdued, as if the script staff were drained by Williams' enthusiasm.

What "Aladdin" does sell effectively is a salient message about gender responsibility. Jasmine is not a completely independent woman, since she still requires a male savior (Disney just can't seem to break itself from the Cinderella stranglehold), but she does argue a good case for women's self-determination. At one point, Jasmine lashes out at her father, the sultan (Douglas Seale) for maintaining such stupid traditions, many of which seem twisted to the overbearing Gafar's liking.

Granted, we're talking Disney here, so the feminist subtext is not as overwhelming as this review might imply. But I'd prefer my younger generation be exposed to a film like "Aladdin," which contains a great climax that owes more to wit than mindless violence or blood while being an entertaining piece of animation. Compare that with the other major family film this Christmas season, "Home Alone 2: Lost In New York," which teaches kids how to drop bricks, paint cans, and everything else manufactured by Black and Decker onto the heads of unsuspecting victims.

"Aladdin" is a film that is half Disney, half Robin Williams. It indulges heavily in the rehearsed paintbrush of the former, and the chaotic lunacy of the latter. Not much else in this latest offering from Disney leaves much of a residue, though it packs quite a big punch.

MOVIE REVIEW

Muppets aren't the same without Jim Henson

Sonja West

The Daily Iowan

When one movie contains elements of two indisputable classics, it's hard for it to go wrong. The synthesis of Charles Dickens' tale of holiday spirit, "The Christmas Carol," and those lovable, furry muppets in "The Muppet Christmas Carol" seemed to have everything going for it from the outset.

Unfortunately their separate charms didn't mix quite as well on screen as it appeared they might in theory.

A sentimental person might want to attribute this lacking to the absence of muppet-creator Jim Henson's magical touch. But giving his son's — director Brian Henson — capabilities all the faith possible, "The Muppet Christmas Carol" still fell short of expectations.

The story is the same as always. The Great Gonzo portrays the narrator in undoubtedly the first blue, furry representation of Charles Dickens to ever grace the screen. He is accompanied by his ravenous sidekick Rizzo the Rat. These two bumble around in goofy ways as the story unfolds, but were rarely funny and usually just annoying. Many long pauses were left in after their lines — obviously to allow for laughter — but were met by a silent audience, kids and all.

Michael Caine ("Hannah and Her Sisters") stars as Ebenezer Scrooge, a scary grump whose bah-humbug Christmas attitude is leading him straight to an eternity of chains and retribution.

Kermit the Frog ("The Muppet Movie") returns (although with a noticeably different voice) as the kindly Bob Cratchit, an employee of Scrooge and father of a terminally ill son, Tiny Tim. Miss Piggy ("The Muppet Movie") plays his wife Emily.

One of the highlights of "The Muppet Christmas Carol" is when Scrooge is haunted by the ghosts of his dead partners — Jacob Marley, played by the two balcony critics from "The Muppet Show." Their song, "We're Marley and Marley" was funny, catchy and kind of spooky.

Scrooge is then visited on Christmas eve by three spirits: the ghosts of Christmas past, present and yet to come. And, of course, through these visions he learns the true meaning of Christmas.

The original score for "The Muppet Christmas Carol" was definitely a downpoint for the film. The songs were all very boring and left your head the second the last note was played. They certainly weren't in the category of such fine Muppet tunes as "The Rainbow Connection" and "Movin' Right Along."

The real star of this film was actually the only main human actor: Michael Caine's performance was so touching it was easy to forget that he was in a film where frogs, bears and pigs walked around and sang. It would be interesting to see Caine recreate the same role in a more serious production of "The Christmas Carol."

Chief accountant Bob Cratchit (Kermit the Frog, center) and his pack of Muppet bookkeepers are underpaid and overworked employees of the odious Mr. Scrooge in "The Muppet Christmas Carol."

being one of those great pieces of children's storytelling which made the Muppets so famous in the first place. It may be sentimental, but perhaps the missing piece is indeed Jim Henson and his Muppet magic.
