U.S. missiles destroy Iraqi military complex

Myriad activities offered in remembrance of King

WASHINGTON - The United States launched a series of air attacks on Iraq on Friday in what the Pentagon said was a response to a new threat by Saddam Hussein. The attacks were the result of a decision by President Bush to escalate the war against Iraq, saying it was necessary to prevent Saddam from attacking the United States.

President Bush announced the attacks in a televised speech from the White House, where he said they were a "necessary and just" response to Iraq's "continued defiance of United Nations resolutions." Bush also declared a new "war on terrorism" to fight terrorism worldwide.

The attacks are the latest in a series of military actions against Iraq since the U.S.-led coalition invaded the country in March 2003, toppled the regime of Saddam Hussein and ended his rule.

The United States and its allies have been seeking to put pressure on Iraq to disband its military forces and disclose its weapons of mass destruction, as required by international law.

U.S. forces have been launched against Iraq before, most recently in 2003 when the United States led an international coalition to invade and oust Saddam Hussein from power. Those attacks were aimed at toppling the Iraqi regime and eliminating Saddam's rule.

Some analysts say the new attack by the United States is part of a larger strategy to prevent Iraq from rebuilding its military capabilities and to keep it from becoming a threat to the region.

The United States and its allies have been monitoring Iraq's activities closely since the end of the invasion, but the U.S. military has been reluctant to launch a full-scale ground invasion of the country.

The new attack is likely to further escalate tensions between the United States and Iraq, which has already been under intense pressure from the international community to comply with U.N. demands for disarmament.

In a statement, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said the United States was "miserable" for launching the attacks and accused the United States of acting as a "gangster." He also called for a "war of liberation" against the United States to continue the war against Iraq.

The United States has been warning for weeks that it would take military action against Iraq if the country failed to cooperate with international demands for disarmament.

The United States has been pressuring Iraq to allow inspections by international inspectors as a way to prove that it has disarmed and to ensure that it is not developing weapons of mass destruction.

Clinton presidency ushers in ‘Year of Cat’

Celebrating 1993 in style: advice for your favorite feline

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

After Bill and Hilary Clinton were declared the new president and first lady, millions of cat owners and watchers were eagerly awaiting the Year of the Cat. This was the year in which the Clinton administration would introduce many changes to the country, and many cat owners were excited to see how their cats would react.

The Year of the Cat was declared in 1993, and it was a time of great change for the United States. The Clinton administration introduced many new policies and programs, and many cat owners were eager to see how their cats would react.

While the Year of the Cat was a time of great change, it was also a time of great opportunity for cat owners. The Clinton administration introduced many new policies and programs that were designed to improve the lives of all Americans, including cat owners.

IUHC sees increase of patients in '91-'92

Susan Winterbottom

The Daily Iowan

IUHC, the Public Health Service hospital, had an increase of more than 75,000 patients last fiscal year, bringing the total number of patients to 376,010.

According to figures released by IUHC, 376,010 patients visited the hospital in 1991-92, compared to 359,500 in 1990-91, an increase of 7,500 patients in one year. IUHC treated patients from all 98 counties in Iowa, and 45 cents in one state from other states, and 101 counties from other nations.

Dean Borg, IUHC's director of informatics, said the hospital and clinics is increasing, and the hospital's affiliation with the University of Iowa Hospital began in 1991-92 fiscal year, so the number of patients has increased.

An additional 6,100 in vitro fertilization patients and 258 high-risk pregnancy patients were treated at IUHC during the last fiscal year, as well as 11,213 special procedures and outpatient services.

Investigators hope students' return may lead to clues in baby's death.

Police officers have narrowed their search and will be speaking directly to citizens in several communities.

Joie Yates

The Daily Iowan

The return of students to the Iowa City area has local investigators hopeful that they will be able to narrow the evidence surrounding the death of a newborn baby found in the basement of an apartment building near the University of Iowa this week.

Complicating matters for investiga­tors is the fact that the baby may have been left in a dumpster up to seven days before it was found in the basement, and the fact that the baby had been left in a dumpster before.

As police continue to investigate the death of the baby found in a landfill, original tipster to law enforcement individuals believe the baby was found in a dumpster outside a hospital, there are no fingerprints or records for police to refer to.

Iowa City police closed down the landfill on Dec. 22 and proceeded in search through about 1,000 tons of garbage.

"We want to raise all the suspicions we can look at," Winkel­hake said. "We're looking for that one key piece of information that will unlock the secret and allow us to solve this case."

R.J. Wildeboe

Iowa City police chief

"We're working on the premise that the child came from this general area," Wildeboe said. "We are looking at neighborhoods where they believe the baby came from. We have identified a few possible suspects, and the neighbors generally think that the baby got as close to the mother as anyone could have left it."

Statewide advocates of civil rights see subtler forms of racism today

Timothy Connor

The Daily Iowan

On what would be Martin Luther King Jr.'s 81st birthday, racism in Iowa is far from being extinct.

McKenzie Wilson, president of the Cedar Rapids branch of the National Association of Colored People, which handled complaints of racism from across the state, said that racism remains "as prevalent as it was when King was alive."

"During King, they would shout at you and everything else," he said, adding that today racism is more "something that's planned to subvert the law on the books."

"Racism is distinct by people's survival needs," Wilson said. "It's a percentage of the population."

The biggest problem, which causes racism of the present time is the economical situation. The most effective way to fight racism is through education.

S. Vietnamese officer honored

Associated Press

DAVENPORT — An active defeater performed 20 years ago on a federal battlefield has finally been recognized.

Chi Van Nguyen received the Army Commendation Medal during a brief ceremony at the Rock Island Arsenal.

After years of preparation, the Vietnamese, who escaped to the South Vietnamese army and his family left their homeland in November and settled in Davenport.

"It is wonderful to be in this, he said through an interpreter. "During all of these years, I was one of the prisoners of war in the United States."

Nguyen, 56, was a career military officer who developed strategies for the South Vietnamese and American forces during the Vietnam War.

Nguyen left his desk job and was flown to the battle site. He used a radio to get the locations of enemy positions to creating battle areas and naval naval units.

The U.S. Army found the actions of the South Vietnamese and American forces, with the cooperation, could not be prosecuted.

"In 1975, I was put in a prison camp," he said. "They said I had committed crimes against the South Vietnamese."

It was horrible. I was forced to work on the paddy and repair roads. They would not feed me because they were too weak.

While imprisoned, the story was what he received was what he was able to show himself and while harvesting rice...
Gov.'s son arrested with fake ID

DE S M O I N E S — Eric Branstad, 22, the youngest son of Gov. Terry Branstad, used an altered driver's license to try to gain admission to several bars of public, according to police.

Police said Branstad's original license was covered with a custom-made imitation that contained false information. The license was confiscated and he was taken to the police station.

It's very serious, and he'll have to face the consequences with everybody else," Vain said.

Police were called Friday night by Tim Cronk, a dart at 1:30 a.m. on Towncrest Street in Des Moines. The youth showed the license for the bar, but the "picture on the license, Cronk said, had been altered to a picture of a boy. The youth thinks it's the governor's son.

1992 fire-related deaths reach 2-year high

Bush vows to battle Saddam until final hour

Christopher Nolan

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As Iran rose up to challenge the U.S., George Bush signaled that he too was ready to meet the challenge.

"The American people deserve a President who will meet the challenge," Bush said in a speech Wednesday.

Bush said the unity of the United States was "needed as never before." He praised the American people for their support of his policies and said that he would do everything in his power to win that support.

Bush also announced that he would ask Congress for additional funds to continue the war against Iraq.

The speech was delivered at the White House shortly after a pro-Iraq demonstration was held outside the building.

Bush said that he was "fully committed" to the war against Iraq and that he would do "everything in my power" to win that war.

He said that the United States had "a moral responsibility to protect its citizens and the citizens of the world from the dangers of this regime." He added that "we must stop Saddam Hussein from using nuclear weapons against the United States and its allies." He said that "we will stop him at any cost." He then asked for support from around the world in this endeavor.

Bush also said that he would continue to press for inspections of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction and that he would not accept any "false peace deals." He said that "we must be absolutely certain that Saddam Hussein's regime is dismantled and that he is removed from power." He then asked for support from around the world in this endeavor.

Bush ended his speech by saying that "we will not allow Saddam Hussein to threaten the United States or its allies ever again." He then asked for support from around the world in this endeavor.

The speech was transmitted around the world by satellite and was broadcast on radio and television around the world.

TV sleeze encroaches upon a real life

Although I watch few TV sitcoms, I peeked in on a recent show of "M*A*S*H," the main reason being the female character reminded me of an old friend. Maybe you've seen the show. It's called "Hearts Afire," and is on CBS on Monday nights.

The female star is called Margaret Leech, and when we first heard her, we regarded her as a little brassy. But when we started to listen, we realized that she was really quite good, and so were the other members of the cast. I found myself liking her and the show more and more each week.

It happens that my old friend is named Margaret Leech, and I am a little bit afraid to write to her ever again. She and I went to high school together, and I have always thought of her as one of the kindest, nicest girls I have ever known. She was always very thoughtful, and her beautiful voice was always there to comfort me when I was feeling down.

I don't know if Miss Leech is related to the character, but I hope she is. I would like to see her continue to play the role, and I hope that she will be around for many years to come. She is a lovely woman, and she deserves to be on television.

In any case, I hope that you will enjoy the show, and that you will continue to watch it for many years to come.

"We were led into battle," said Coach Marc Keedy, whose Illini on Tuesday night sheared 4 points with 0.2 second remaining in regulation play and 1 point with only 0.6 second left in overtime play.

It was coach Clancy's 27th victory as a Fordham head coach.

"We were led into battle," Keedy said. "The defense did their thing, and the offense executed when we had opportunities."

Hawkeyes split with Redbirds, Buckeyes

By Johnville

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team won with a 199-116 victory over Illinois State Saturday at the Field House Pool.

The Hawkeyes had a strong showing on the blocks before rising to their feet and giving them a chance to win.

The meet was won by the Illini on the blocks of the 100 backstroke and 200 breaststroke, the 4x100 medley relay, and the 200 medley relay, each with a 3:47.03 time.

Hawley Laine Burton swam her way to a winning time of 56.22 seconds in the 100 backstroke, but it wasn't enough to prevent a 1:32-146. Ohio State victory at the Field House Pool.

The Iowa men's gymnastics team opened its season in top form, claiming third place in the Woody City Invitational Saturday in Chicago and then placed runners-up in the Open University Invitational in San Jose Jan. 27.

Iowa won the University weekend tournament with a score of 273.55, edging out Minnesota's 271.65. The Hawkeyes finished with a score of 266.65, Michigan State, Iowa State, and Ohio State also competed. "The team worked very hard on high bar," freshmen Jay There­no said Sunday. "But overall, I was pretty satisfied with the team, especially this early in the season." therapist Jay, a junior from North Liberty, took his first place on the rings with a 9.75. Duk so far matched his all-around score with a 9.75, good enough for fifth place.

"I'm not particularly concerned about it. It's just so early in the season and it's hard to be 100 percent consistent," Tom Dunn, Men's gymnastics coach.

Frosh Baker ties Hawk record on balance beam

Frosh Baker ties Hawk record on balance beam.

Freshman gymnast Frosh Baker has a strong performance in Iowa City Invitational Saturday in Chicago.

On Jan. 18, the Hawkeyes opened their season with a fourth-place finish at the Ball State Central Invitational in Muncie, Ind.

On Jan. 27, Baker claimed the all-around title with a 9.80. Freshman Amy Batt­on out of Fort Smith, Pa., placed fourth in the all-around.

"It was really great to see our kids step up to the plate," DeMarco said.

After Baker's third place, while junior Jennifer Mar­ton came in fourth with a 9.55. Buras, out of Pasadena, Texas, captured third place on the vault. The team worked really well together, although we didn't have a lot of experience on the floor." DeMarco said.

"I'm not particularly concerned about it. It's just so early in the season and it's hard to be 100 percent consistent," Tom Dunn, Men's gymnastics coach.

PACINO RULES IN 'SCENT OF A WOMAN'
John Horn
Assoc. Prog. Editor
LA TIMES - APRIL 5, 1993

The challenges of adapting a stage play to the screen are enormous, even for a director like Brian De Palma, well-versed in the worst-case scenario. The task is made all the more daunting when the stage play is 'Scent of a Woman,' by Patrizia Proano, an Italian woman who has written for stage and television but has never attempted a film script. And when the play stars Al Pacino, who is known for his willingness to take on challenging roles, the potential for disaster is high.

De Palma's approach to 'Scent of a Woman' is a departure from his usual, highly stylized, and sometimes surreal style. He embraces the play's realism and focuses on the characters and their motivations. The film is a study of a man, played by Pacino, who is a wealthy businessman and a successful lawyer. He is also a man who is struggling with his own personal demons, including a deep-seated desire for love and a fear of intimacy.

Pacino's performance is subtle and nuanced, and he brings a depth to his character that is both compelling and moving. He is able to convey the man's vulnerability and his inner conflicts, as well as his strength and resilience.

The film's supporting cast is equally strong, with a talented ensemble that includes Colin Quinn, John Cullum, and Julie Christie. Quinn is particularly excellent as Pacino's loyal and supportive nurse, and Christie brings a sense of poignancy to her role as Pacino's estranged lover.

Directed by Brian De Palma, 'Scent of a Woman' is a poignant and thought-provoking film that offers a new perspective on the challenges of aging and the importance of love and connection. It is a film that is both entertaining and insightful, and it is sure to be remembered for years to come.
Chaos dominates ‘Noises Off’

Lee Carroll
The Daily Iowan

Where dead ends left were the impossibility was reason to take a look at the film adaptation of 'Noises Off,' now available on video.

There's a lot of things that you can check if you want to know more about the producers' director, Peter Bogdanovich and the director of the Broadway film by the same name, Michael Caine.

It's a lot of fun to do, yet they're doing what the staff does, that is, they're doing what can't be done.

"Noises Off" is a play that's almost impossible to get done, let alone on film, it was, for the star of 'Noises Off,' who plays the leading lady, played by Carol Burnett, who is a period piece until the last lines of the film, where she renders her to play her part with stories of workshops, which in what she has been known as the lead and true stage manager and the lead role on stage.

It's easy to see these characters, ruthlessly essential that they are and, even more so that they are essential to each other.

It's easy to take the opening of the play and the opening of the story's first act and every other act in a show that doesn't do well on the screen. The problems of the human race, which works most of the time, but it can get tiried, is, in changing the approach of the ending of that story, a little of the bitterness that made the play a hit.

"Noises Off" is highly recommended, if you haven't seen the play, and if you enjoy a good fast-paced farce.
