City offices alter services for the day

City offices at the Civic Center will be closed today in observance of Martin Luther King, Jr. Day. A schedule of city services is as follows:

Iowa City transit buses will be operating on a regular schedule. Parking meters will be enforced and charges will be made for parking in ramps.

The offices at the Iowa City Public Library will be closed, but the library will be open regular hours.

The Senior Center will be open holiday hours (10:30 p.m. to 3 p.m.). Congregate Meals will be served.

The Iowa City Recreation Center offices will be closed, but the remainder of the Center will be open on a regular schedule.

The Iowa City Landfill will be closed.

Refuse crews will not be making collections on Monday. Monday's route will be covered on Tuesday along with all of the regular Tuesday routes. The crews should be back on schedule by Wednesday.

IOTECH's lease approved by Board of Regents

The Iowa state Board of Regents has approved the lease of a new tenant company for the UI Technology Innovation Center effective this past Jan. 1 through Dec. 31, 1993.

The new tenant, IOTECH, Inc., sells kits containing unique reagents required to isolate RNA from whole blood. The kits will help in the detection of viruses, such as HIV, and the identification of genes expressed in certain diseases, including some types of leukemia.

IOTECH is a UI "spin-off company," which is commercializing this new technology developed through research at the UI.

NASA prepares for space station assembly

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two spacewalking astronauts clambered about Endeavour's open payload bay Sunday and took turns carrying one another to help NASA prepare for space station assembly in a few years.

The spacewalk, which lasted slightly more than four hours, was the first by Americans in nearly a year.

"I can tell you, this is pretty awesome from here," Mario Runco Jr. said as Gregory Harbaugh carried him along the edge of the bay. "People are right about that feeling you get when you look below your feet and nothing's there."

The shuttle mission is scheduled to end with a landing at Kennedy Space Center in Florida on Tuesday.

UAE paid nearly $10 billion in gulf war costs

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The United Arab Emirates contributed nearly $10 billion to cover the cost of the Persian Gulf War, according to a central bank report released Sunday.

It was the first official account of the federation's expenditure on the crisis following Iraq's Aug. 2, 1990, invasion of Kuwait.

The bank said the country spent $3.9 billion in 1990 and $5.7 billion in 1991. The 1991 contribution was one-third of total general spending for the year, the report said.

The money was used to compensate Arab and other countries for economic losses caused by the crisis, as well as for military and humanitarian assistance.

When Kenton Moss completed his residency program in family practice at St. Luke's Hospital in Davenport 11 years ago, there were hundreds of job opportunities for him to choose from.

While many of his colleagues chose to practice in more lucrative clinics in larger cities and out of state, Moss took a job at the Kossuth County Health Center in Algona, Iowa, population 6,000.

He chose to stay in Iowa because he liked the honesty of the people and thought it would be a good place to raise his kids.

If a recent study by the UI Office of Community-Based Programs is any indication, many new family practice residency program graduates are beginning to think the same way.

According to the study, which will be presented to the Iowa state Board of Regents Wednesday, nearly 70 percent of the June 1992 graduates of the UI family practice training program have chosen to begin their professional medical careers in the state of Iowa. For a state that is accustomed to seeing its college graduates leave the state for more lucrative opportunities elsewhere, the numbers are very encouraging.

But the numbers are more than encouraging; they are also representative of an 18-year program set up to keep family practice physicians in the state of Iowa.

GULF WAR ESCALATES

U.S. missiles destroy Iraqi military complex

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States on Sunday unleashed a punishing shower of Tomahawk missiles against an Iraqi military complex just eight miles from downtown Baghdad, forcefully delivering "the political and diplomatic point" that Iraq must comply with United Nations resolutions.

In a dramatic crescendo for President Bush's final weekend in office, U.S. forces shot down a MiG-23 warplane and struck an Iraqi air defense installation. Hours later, U.S. warships launched more than 30 Tomahawks into the night skies near Iraq's capital.

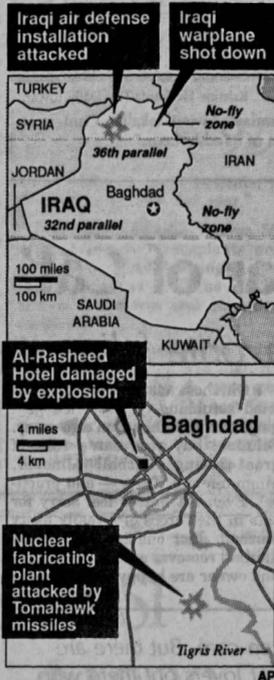

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States had targeted the nonnuclear cruise missiles at a nuclear fabrications plant in response to a series of weekend military provocations by Iraq.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein "is determined to create a confrontation in the closing days of the Bush administration," and emphasized that Bush would not flinch.

In New York, the United Nations rejected Iraq's latest conditions for weapons inspection, raising the possibility of further U.S.-led raids. U.N. officials want Iraq to allow unconditional travel into Iraq by U.N. weapons inspectors and guarantee their safety.

Bush was at Camp David, Md., for the weekend and made no statement.

Cheney referred to Saddam as a "pathetic figure" for testing the U.S. presidential transition and the resolve of the United Nations coalition that defeated Iraq in the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

The attack put Saddam on notice that the United States was willing to hit him close to home. Like last Wednesday's hostilities, it was a See IRAQ, Page 11A tonight, featuring an address by UI President Hunter Rawlings. There will also be a lecture Thursday evening by King's daughter, Yolanda King, titled "The Dream is Still a Dream: The Dream Deferred." Both will be in the Union's Main Lounge.

According to David Grady, director of the Office of Campus Programs and Student Activities, activities beginning Tuesday will follow this year's theme, "The State of the Dream."

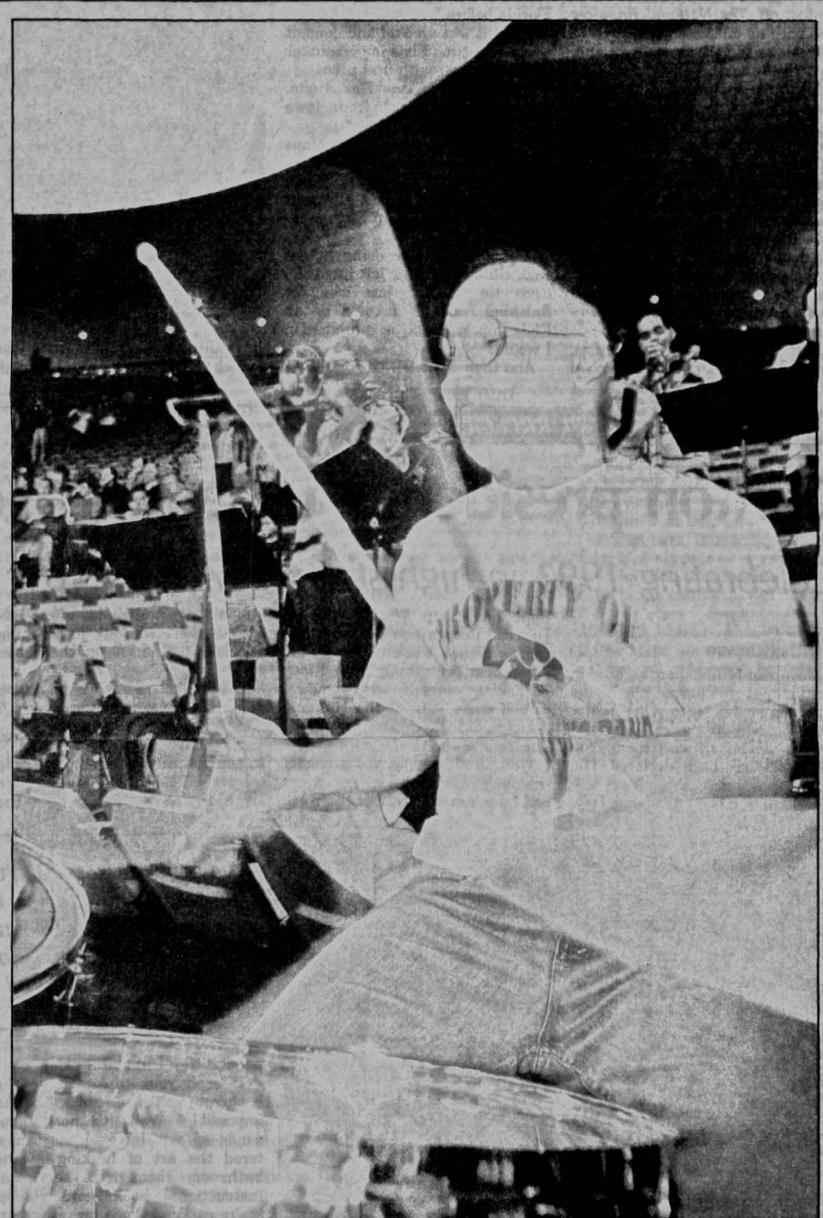

"They will be exploring different human rights issues which will relate back to Martin Luther King's dream and where we've come since then," Grady said. "Hopefully there will be continuity between all events during the week."

PRESIDENT-ELECT REACHES CAPITAL

Clinton delivers message of unity

John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Proclaiming a message of national unity, Bill Clinton and Al Gore rolled triumphantly into the nation's capital Sunday, kicking off five days of inaugural pageantry. "We must go forward together or not at all," Clinton declared.

Hundreds of thousands of well-wishers filled the Mall, stretching from the Capitol to the Lincoln Monument, where Clinton spoke after a trademark bus trip to his new home. "Let us build an American home for the 21st century where everyone has a place at the table and not a single child is left behind."

The scene was dramatically illuminated by tiny flashlights held by many members of the huge audience. Vice President-elect Gore said, "This is a time for healing and unity before we lay our hands on the hard work to be done."

The mood of celebration and anticipation was tempered by another military showdown with Iraq. Clinton said he was in frequent contact with the White House, and was briefed by his deputy national

In his public remarks, Clinton alluded to the crisis with Iraq only in passing.

THE KING IS CROWNED

Elvises attract many to area business fair

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

There were enough rhinestones, leather and goopy hair stuff in Hancher Auditorium Sunday afternoon to make even the most hardcore makeup artist a little queasy. You see, Elvis was in the building.

Well, maybe not the Elvis, but it was pretty close, anyway. As part of the second annual Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce business fair, seven Elvis impersonators sang, gyrated, and (in the fine Milli-Vanilli tradition of lip-synching) mouthed the words to popular Elvis tunes.

There was Delvis, the Elvis Clown, father and son Elvises, and even a female Elvis to kick the whole contest off. The National Enquirer had nothing on these guys.

"Elvis is big, Elvis is huge and, hey, Elvis may be alive," said Ken Duncan, co-chairman of the business fair, as he explained why promoters of the fair had chosen to hold an Elvis look-alike contest.

"The theme of the fair is 'The Walk of the Stars,' so it was easy to pick Elvis," he said. "But the businesses are the main stars."

In its second year, the business fair has grown from 50 businesses participating to over 60 this year. Last year's attendance of 3,800 will easily be surpassed this year, Duncan said.

And as fans lined the stairs, jammed the doors and watched from the second level, it almost seemed as if all of those attending the three-day fair were on hand for the Elvis contest Sunday.

Not that they weren't justified, of course. He is, after all, "The King." "I think it's neat," said Carilyn Wieland of Oxford as she watched the first Elvis strut on the makeshift stage. "I've always liked him."

And so have the contestants. Take young Aron Mentz, a 13-year-old Elvis impersonator from Dubuque. He's been dressing up like Elvis since he was little more than one year old.

"We make our trip to Memphis every year," his dad Artie, another Elvis look-alike, explained. "We've done this in Vegas, Memphis, and Florida before."

When it was all said and done, it was a first-time Elvis impersonator who walked off with first prize.

"It feels terrific," said Dave Henn, a 44-year-old dentist from Iowa City. "I feel like The King."

As he was mobbed by adoring fans seeking his autograph (well, there were three, anyway) Henn summed up what it was all about for the entire group of Elvis wannabes.

"I just really love doing it," he said, clutching in his left hand the Elvis tie he had just won for finishing first. "If I could be an Elvis impersonator as a profession I would."

And then Elvis left the building.

Clinton presidency ushers in 'Year of Cat'

Celebrating 1993 in high style: advice for your favorite feline

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

Move over Millie, there's a kinder, gentler pet in town. When the Clintons move into the White House this week, Socks The Cat will be moving in with them. You see, 1993 has been declared The Year of the Cat.

Now, there's been Sandwich Day,

Split Pea Soup Week, Venereal Disease Recognition Month; hell, there's a day, week or month for damn near everything. So you may be asking yourself, why should I care if some yutz at the Humane Society decides this year will be The Year of the Cat?

Well, in all reality, you probably shouldn't. I mean, I've got a cat and I don't even care. But there are undoubtedly multitudes of cat lovers out there who are just itching to celebrate The Year of the Cat in style.

The problem is, how? What do you do for the cat who has everything? Never worry, we at the Daily Iowan have compiled a list of things you can do at home to help celebrate The Year of the Cat. So sit back, relax, and ponder the

Oh, those nasty hairballs. You've tried scrubbing, you've tried gagging, but still they won't go away. Solution: buy your cat a tube of great-tasting hairball remover. Mmmm-mmm. Tasty — and practical. Even cat haters feel sorry for cats in the throes of a really nasty hairball. Just one inch of creamy hairball remover and, swoosh! Cat and owner are happy. Removal of a possibilities. Bill and Socks are.

Teach your cat to go to the bathroom on the toilet. Sound impossible? Well, it's not. Thousands of cats have already mastered the art of lunking in the bathroom through a series of instructional books and videos. We're serious. Come on, ask yourself, does your cat really enjoy the degrading and disgusting process of defecating in a litter box? Hell no. Get into the '90s. Your cat will love you for it.

Give your poor, defenseless little creature a hefty dose of catnip, and then watch him go nuts. I highly recommend Four Paws brand Super Catnip, which, according to the package "is grown in the Black Valley where the soil is of high acid." Groovy. Hey, and while you're slipping him something he doesn't have any control over, why not just slip a tab of LSD into his Tender Vittles? What fun! Eight-foot mice, one-legged bulldogs. The possibilities are endless.

In celebration of your cat's creative tendencies, and in an attempt to control the Cheesy Game Show Host population, have Bob Barker (spayed or neutered). It will make you feel better. Really.

Cat toys. No explanation needed.

hairball is always a special moment between a cat and its owner.

Replace the picture of Millie on your mantle with an 8-by-10 glossy of Socks. What better way to honor the nation's First Cat?

Cat juggle. A sport popularized in the late '70s by Steve Martin, cat juggling used to be viewed as cruelty to animals. Not so today. You can never give your cat enough physical contact. Studies show cats who are juggled regularly are happier and live longer lives. Cat juggling allows you to provide much-needed physical contact (albeit intermittently) to three or four cats at once. Basically a timesaver for the multi-cat owner.

Of course, you may not have the time or money to do all of the above right away, but remember, you've got a whole year to celebrate The Year of the Cat, so you really have no excuse for not completing the aforementioned list. A good rule of thumb in planning your celebration of The Year of the Cat is to remember those immortal words of President-Elect Clinton: "Ask not what your cat can do for you, but what you can do for your cat." Or something like that.

OVER THE BREAK

Rojas-Cardona given 5-year prison sentence

Rojas-Cardona was also ordered to pay $673.34 in restitution after defrauding employees of $23,000.

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

Former UI Student Senate President Juan Jose "Pepe" Rojas-Cardona was sentenced Friday to up to five years in prison and to pay $674.34 in restitution by Judge Kristin Hibbs at the Johnson County Courthouse.

Johnson County Assistant District Attorney Kelly Raines guessed Rojas-Cardona would actually spend "maybe a year" in prison, although she admitted to not being very familiar with the parole system.

Rojas-Cardona was convicted of six felony counts of forgery and one count of third-degree theft in November. The crimes stem from wrongdoings with APAC-ROMEX, a failed Iowa City Spanish-speaking telemarketing company he co-owned with UI Professor Enrique Fernandez-Barros and Chicago businessman Ted Schwartz. In late 1990, Rojas-Cardona forged six APAC-ROMEX employee signatures on paychecks, endorsing them to himself and cashing them.

At the sentencing hearing Friday, Johnson County Assistant District Attorney Kelly Raines asked Hibbs for six concurrent sentences of up to five years in prison for the forgery convictions along with a concurring two-year sentence for the theft conviction.

In her argument, Raines estimated that 29 APAC-ROMEX employees lost $23,000 due to Rojas-Cardona's financial problems. She also cited a psychiatric evaluation of Rojas-Cardona following his second-degree theft conviction in February 1992, which concluded that he had a personality disorder — including an "exaggerated sense of self-worth" — but that it should not interfere with his sentencing because of his lack of remorse.

Raymond Rosenberg, Rojas-Cardona's attorney, asked Hibbs to give him a suspended sentence with parole. He argued that the psychiatric evaluation called for close supervision of Rojas-Cardona and that Rojas-Cardona's family should provide that supervision.

Rojas-Cardona declined the chance to speak in his own defense. Hibbs decided in favor of the state. "It is my belief that this will provide you with a maximum availability to rehabilitation," she told Rojas-Cardona.

Pepe Rojas-Cardona

Raines said she was pleased with the sentence.

"I didn't think we'd get prison time with the February conviction on appeal," she said.

Rosenberg had no comment on the sentence except to say that he planned to appeal it.

Rojas-Cardona failed to post the needed $32,000 bond at the Johnson County Courthouse and was escorted by a Johnson County Sheriff's deputy to the Johnson County Jail Friday afternoon, where the bond was posted and Rojas-Cardona was released.

Rojas-Cardona served as president of the UI Student Senate during the 1989-90 academic year, before the student government was restructured.

Investigators hope students' return may lead to clues in baby's death

Police officers have narrowed their search and will be speaking directly to citizens in several communities.

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

The return of students to the Iowa City area has local investigators hopeful they will uncover new evidence surrounding the death of a newborn baby, found in the Iowa City Landfill on Dec. 21, that will lead to the baby's mother.

The baby, a 9-pound, 3-ounce Caucasian male with brown hair and blue eyes, was found by a landfill worker dumping on the site.

Although an autopsy of the baby was unable to determine the cause of death, it was determined that the baby was born in a live, unattended birth and lived up to 24 hours before dying. Laboratory results also showed afterbirth and the umbilical cord of the baby were still attached.

Iowa City Chief of Police R.J. Winkelhake said his office has followed up on about 20 different leads, some of which have led investigators out of the state, but none have led to the baby's mother. Currently, his office is working on three separate leads, he said.

"Someone, somewhere knows what happened," Winkelhake said. "We don't at this point. We can't rule out the possibility that it may have been a student or someone directly related to the university."

With that in mind, coupled with the fact that about 15,000 people leave Iowa City during Christmas break, most of whom will return this week, Winkelhake said his department will canvass areas where they believe the baby came from, knocking on doors and asking citizens if they have any information about the baby's death.

Investigators have narrowed the area from which the baby was originally left to four routes, including locations in Iowa City, Coralville, Hills and Lone Tree.

Officials continue to investigate the death of a baby found in a landfill.

Complicating matters for investigators is the fact that the baby may have been left in a dumpster up to seven days before it was found in the landfill, and the fact that it may have been left by somebody passing through town who does not actually live in the area.

"What we're looking for is that one key piece of information that will unlock the secret and allow us to solve this case."

R.J. Winkelhake,
Iowa City police chief

"We're working on the premise that the child came from this general area," Winkelhake said. "Hopefully, we will be able to pinpoint where the baby was picked up. But that doesn't necessarily get us any closer to the mother. Anyone could have left it."

A third factor complicating the investigation is the fact that since the baby was a newborn delivered outside a hospital, there are no fingerprints or records for police to refer to.

Iowa City police closed down the landfill on Dec. 21 and proceeded to search through about 15 tons of garbage for clues.

"We want to make sure all the possibilities are looked at," Winkelhake said. "What we're looking for is that one key piece of information that will unlock the secret and allow us to solve this case."

Winkelhake said several persons have called his office to donate money and facilities for a funeral for the infant, and said that a funeral will be held, but no date or place has yet been set.

The body of the baby is currently undergoing further testing to confirm findings from the autopsy performed on Dec. 22.

Police are encouraging any returning student — or anyone else — who has information on the baby or his mother to call the Iowa City Police Department at 356-5275. Persons wishing to leave information anonymously may do so, and all leads will be followed up, Winkelhake said.

UIHC sees increase of patients in '91-'92

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

Nearly half a million people were served by UI Hospitals and Clinics during the last fiscal year, including residents of every county in Iowa.

According to figures released by UIHC, 465,610 patients visited UIHC's 213 specialty clinics between July 1, 1991 and June 30, 1992. An additional 32,399 patients were admitted to the hospital's 54 nursing units.

A total of 450,541 Iowans came to UIHC from all 99 Iowa counties. Johnson County had the most people attending UIHC, with 130,277 patients. Linn County was second with 31,213 patients.

In addition, over 40,000 patients came from Illinois, nearly 8,000 came from other states, and 102 patients came from foreign nations.

Dean Borg, UIHC director of information, said attendance to the hospitals and clinics is increasing.

"In the 1990-91 fiscal year we had a total of 495,601 patients, and in the 1991-92 fiscal year we had 498,009 patients," he said. "That's an increase of 2,408 patients, so the total is up from last year."

According to hospital figures, 568 organ and tissue transplants were completed at UIHC during the last fiscal year, as well as 70,297 special procedures and outpatient surgeries.

An additional 446 in vitro fertilization procedures and 373 high-risk obstetrics procedures were performed by UIHC in the last fiscal year. More than 23,982 people also received services in the Emergency Treatment Center.

CHANGES IN ATTITUDE STRESSED

Statewide advocates of civil rights see subtler forms of racism today

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

On what would be Martin Luther King's 64th birthday, racism in Iowa is far from being extinguished, according to Iowa civil rights experts.

McKenzie Wilson, the president of the Cedar Rapids branch of the National Association of Colored People which handles complaints of racism from across the state, said he finds racism today to be more subtle than it was when King was alive.

"During King, they would shoot you and everything else," he said, adding that today racism is more "something that's planned to subvert laws on the books."

He explained that when times are tough, racial tensions increase.

"The biggest problem which causes racism of the present time is the economical situation," Wilson said. "The most effective way to fight racism is through education."

People need to be taught when they are young at home, school, and church, Wilson said, before they become "set in their ways."

Diane Hightower, the faculty adviser to the UI Black Student Union, said there are "more incidences of blatant racism in Iowa because there is such a low number of people of color."

Hightower agreed that the situation has changed since the days of King.

"Racism is understood by a wider variety of African-Americans," she said. "They are finding that there is more than one way to confront racism."

During the time of King, Hightower said, there were fewer African-American leaders to choose from. Today, she said, there are more diverse feelings and philosophies concerning racism.

"We need to concentrate more on changing behaviors than on changing attitudes," she believes. "We need to hold the oppressor more responsible than the oppressed."

If we continue to be politically and socially integrated, Hightower said, "our country, black and white, doesn't have a chance."

Don Grove, the acting executive director of the Iowa Civil Rights Committee, said his committee received more than 250 complaints of racism in Iowa from July 1, 1991 to June 30, 1992.

The fact that Iowa has such a small percentage of people of color contributes to racist attitudes of many Iowans, he said.

"We're not as diverse as we could be or should be," Grove said. "A lot of sensitivity comes from integration."

Iowa needs better diversity in integration in schools and at the workplace, Grove believes. Although many people do not realize it, everybody has racist attitudes, he added, and after 14 years with the Iowa Civil Rights Committee, Grove admitted that even he has a few prejudices.

The best way for people to overcome their own biases, according to Grove, is to "take an inventory and try to fight them."

Poll says 73% of Iowans approve of Clinton's preparations so far

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowans remain gloomy about the economy but they're lining up behind President-elect Bill Clinton, according to the Iowa Poll.

The copyright Des Moines Register poll shows that nearly three out of four Iowans, 73 percent, say they approve of the way Clinton has handled preparations for taking office. Clinton takes the oath of office on Wednesday, becoming the country's 42nd president.

Only 14 percent say they disapprove and 13 percent are not sure.

Iowans also give Clinton passing marks for his Cabinet choices. Only 4 percent rate them as excellent, but 44 percent say his picks are "very good." Another 33 percent say the choices are just fair, while 5 percent say they're poor and 14 percent don't know.

S. Vietnamese officer honored

Associated Press

DAVENPORT — An act of valor performed 20 years ago on a distant battlefield has finally been recognized.

Chi Van Nguyen received the Army Commendation Medal during a brief ceremony at the Rock Island Arsenal last week.

After years of persecution, the former lieutenant colonel in the South Vietnamese army and his family left their homeland in November and settled in Davenport.

"It is wonderful to be in America," he said through an interpreter. "During all of those years that I was in the prison camps, I dreamed of coming to the United States."

Nguyen, 58, was a career military officer who developed strategies for South Vietnamese and American forces during the Vietnam War.

In June 1972, several American and South Vietnamese army units were pinned by an enemy attack.

Nguyen left his desk job and was flown to the battle site. He used a radio to give the locations of enemy positions to circling bombers and naval gunnery units.

The U.S. Army cited his actions for saving many American and South Vietnamese lives, but the communists took control of South Vietnam before he could be presented with the medal.

"In 1975, I was put in a prison camp," he said. "They said I had committed crimes against the state because I had fought communism. It was horrible. I was forced to work in rice paddies and repair roads. They would not feed me. I became very weak."

While imprisoned, the food he received was what his family brought him or what he gathered for himself while harvesting rice.

Gov.'s son arrested with fake ID

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Eric Branstad, 17, the eldest son of Gov. Terry Branstad, used an altered driver's license in a failed attempt to buy two 12-packs of beer, according to police.

No charges were filed but police confiscated the license and said their investigation was continuing.

The governor's spokesman, Dick Vohs, said Saturday night that the boy had admitted the incident to his father. "The governor thinks it's very serious, and he'll have to meet the consequences just like anybody else," Vohs said.

Police were called Friday night by Tina Cronk, a clerk at a 7-Eleven store on Des Moines' west side. She said a youth showed her the license when he tried to buy beer, but "he just wasn't 21, so I snatched the license right away."

Cronk said the boy fled the store after she called police. Using the picture on the license, Cronk identified him as the governor's son.

Police said Branstad's original license was covered with a removable lamination that contained false information. The license was confiscated and he was taken to the police station.

It was young Branstad's third brush with the law. In September, West Des Moines police arrested him on an intoxication charge. In 1991, he was convicted of unsafe passing and fined $15 as the result of an accident near Granger in which a Des Moines couple died.

1992 fire-related deaths reach 2-year high

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The use of residential smoke detectors and stricter fire codes has meant fewer fire deaths in Iowa, the state fire marshal said.

But despite the trend toward fewer fire deaths, more people died in fires in 1992 than in each of the previous two years, State Fire Marshal Roy Marshall said.

There were 44 fire deaths in 1992, three more than in 1991.

The century-low came in 1990 when 36 fire deaths were reported. The all-time high occurred in 1950 when 158 people died.

Marshall said he hoped death tolls would continue to decline as the design of smoke detectors improved and people became accustomed to keeping fresh batteries in their detectors.

State law now requires that new homes be built with detectors that do not need batteries. Marshall said that should help substantially.

In both 1987 and 1988, Iowa fires claimed 54 lives.

Report says Iowa's S & Ls showing signs of recovery

Associated Press

DES MOINES — After more than a decade of turmoil, Iowa's 33 savings and loans, with one notable exception, appear largely healed.

In the nine months that ended Sept. 30, 1992, the thrifts earned $22.3 million, nearly double their earnings of $11.7 million for all of 1991.

Before 1991, the state's S & Ls had lost money for five straight years, piling up $294 million in combined losses.

Individual earnings reports for the state's thrifts, which were released recently by the U.S. Office of Thrift Supervision, provide further evidence that nearly all of Iowa's S & Ls are doing much better.

The one exception is government-controlled United Federal Savings of Des Moines.

United Federal, which was taken over by government regulators nearly two years ago, has run up a deficit of $53.5 million. The U.S. Resolution Trust Corp. has said it cannot dispose of the S & L because the agency ran out of money last year and Congress didn't appropriate any more.

Including United Federal's losses, Iowa savings and loans were earning an annual average of about 60 cents for every $1,000 assets they held.

Low interest rates, which generated a slew of home mortgage refinancings last year, and the fees that go with them helped S & Ls during 1992.

IC business fair draws 60 local enterprises

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Sixty Johnson County businesses showcased their latest products and services Saturday and Sunday at the second Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce business fair.

Businesses used their exhibits, which filled two levels of Hancher Auditorium, to display their services to the 4,000 people in attendance.

"We really encourage interactive exhibits," co-chairwoman Kathryn Kurth said. "It's an opportunity for the people to see what businesses have to offer."

Kurth, associate director of the UI Small Business Development Center, said some of the most popular exhibits included high-school students demonstrating science experiments for the Iowa City Area Science Center as well as caricature drawings done by the UI Community Credit Union.

"We have different types of entertainment going on every hour on the hour," Kurth said. "We're her children, said that free giveaways and numerous door prizes added fun to the event.

"My kids had more posters, pencils and other little things than they could even carry," she said. "It was Elvis. In fact, part of Sunday's entertainment included an Elvis look-alike contest.

"We've had an overwhelming response," Kurth said. "People in the Iowa City business community are very pleased with how the economy is going here."

Last year's fair drew a crowd of 3,800 and included 54 booths. Kurth said the Chamber of Commerce didn't need to advertise for this year's event because businesses saw direct benefits.

"We invited everyone who had participated last year," Kurth added that all the spots filled up right away. "People were calling me the day after last year's fair was over."

"It's a great way for businesses to attract people to their products and services and to show off their talents," she said.

"It was nice because there was something for everyone, no matter how young or old you were."

NEW LEGISLATURE IN SESSION

Education appropriations under fire at Statehouse

The proposed budget increase was less than Gov. Branstad and the state teachers union had requested.

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES—The early days of Iowa legislative sessions are normally slow times, with lawmakers settling into committee work and putting off the tough decisions until the hectic closing days of the session in early spring.

That's not the case this year, due to last year's overhaul of the state budget process and the Republican Party's capture of the House of Representatives. One of the major battles of this year's session is already under way and should heat up this week.

The House Republican majority agreed last week to grant public schools a $49.5 million budget increase next year. That is $11.5 million less than recommended by Republican Gov. Terry Branstad. The Iowa State Education Association, which represents public school teachers, had sought a $116 million increase.

House Republicans steered their funding plan through the Education Committee last week, and it is scheduled for a vote by the full House late this week. A public hearing will be held Tuesday night and is expected to draw dozens of angry teachers, administrators and parents.

State aid to public schools totals more than $1 billion a year and makes up nearly one-third of the state budget. Until last year the school funding was controlled by a formula and stayed relatively separate from legislative politics. But as part of a bipartisan budget reform coupled with last year's sales tax hike, the Legislature must now set school funding without the formula. Furthermore, the funding level must be set within 30 days of the governor's state budget presentation.

Branstad submitted his budget last Tuesday, starting the countdown. Senate Democrats say they'll resist the House plan and want to set school spending slightly above the governor's level.

"Education is a top priority," said Senate Majority Leader Wally Horn, D-Cedar Rapids. "We need to take care of education."

That is expected to be the message at Tuesday's public hearing, but House Republican leaders say they will prevail.

"We're going to take a responsible approach to this budgeting process, and this is a first step," said House Appropriations Chairman Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids.

Horn said the House plan would force 111 school districts to get by with no additional state funding to keep up with inflation and increasing demands on schools.

"They're not being responsible to the school systems out there," he said. "They don't understand the problems, apparently, and if they do, they don't care."

In other legislative activity this week, the House and Senate ethics committees plan joint meetings to work on changes in the wide-ranging 1992 law governing activities of public officials and lobbyists. There have been complaints that the law went too far in restricting public access to state and local officials. Of particular concern are provisions requiring people to file registration papers before lobbying a public official.

"We've got too much reporting going on," said Muscatine Republican Richard Drake, a member of the Senate Ethics Committee.

"I want to come out of here with a clear, concise bill that everybody can understand," said Senate Ethics Chairman Don Gettings, D-Ottumwa.

The week gets a delayed start. The House and Senate are taking Monday off in observance of Martin Luther King Day.

Ethics law keeps lawmakers under wraps

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES—Sheldon Rittmer sighed as he eyed a line at the Statehouse cafeteria that snaked down a hallway and around the corner.

"It looks like people have gotten in the habit of eating this year," said Rittmer, a senator from DeWitt.

To be precise, they have gotten in the habit of eating at the Statehouse cafeteria, far from the toniest restaurant in the city.

For legislators opening a new session, it has one big advantage: the chili goes for $1.37 a bowl, including tax.

"We've been busy," manager Barb Ochanpaugh said.

Prime rib has given way to tacos, and fine wines replaced by sodas and beer as lawmakers, lobbyists and politicians adjust to an unfamiliar life without perks that has reshaped the annual social whirl.

"People are still going out, but they're going out for cheeseburgers and fries and sodas," said House Democratic Leader Bob Arnold of Davenport. "The 40-cent taco night last week was a big hit. We ate them out of tacos."

After a running financial scandal last year, the Legislature adopted a new ethics law. Among other things, it prohibits legislators from taking any gifts at all, except food and drink that's worth less than $3.

As this year's session opened last week, they began living with their handiwork.

Mostly gone are the lavish receptions, catered dinners and freebies that legislators get from those who

"I am not going to eat my flower."

Dorothy Carpenter, Ethics Committee chairwoman

curry favor. Nervous lobbyists and legislators — terrified about being in the next news story about ethics — are making caution their watchword.

On the session's opening day, the biggest state worker union sent a single carnation to each legislator, valued at $1.75. The flower, that is.

House Ethics Committee chairwoman Dorothy Carpenter smelled a rat, and the flowers were not distributed in the House. The flowers sat for days in boxes in the rear of the chamber before they were carted off.

Food and drink is all that's allowed, she said.

"I guess it would be all right if we ate them," Carpenter said. "I am not going to eat my flower."

There were other brushes. The Christian Science Monitor offers a free subscription to any lawmaker, and many newspapers in the state send stacks of complimentary copies for lawmakers to read. Both issues landed before the Ethics Committee, where Carpenter said that was OK.

"Being a well-informed person is very important to being a decent legislator," said Carpenter, a West Des Moines Republican who complains that her time is completely occupied deciding which trinkets lawmakers can take.

But it's in the social whirl where the difference is most pronounced.

Legislative staffers who keep tabs on social functions report cancellations flowing in. Some groups decided to go ahead, but legislators discovered to their shock that the rule is "separate checks, please."

Confirmation expected despite flap over Baird

Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden met Zoe Baird two weeks ago, he anticipated it would take "about 20 minutes" to confirm her as the nation's first female attorney general.

Baird still is widely expected to get the committee's approval, particularly since she has the support of Biden and ranking Republican Orrin Hatch of Utah.

But the Senate hearings no longer may be pro forma because Baird has become the center of the flap because of her hiring of illegal aliens and failure to pay their Social Security taxes and because of her positions on such issues as civil-justice reform.

On Sunday, Ralph Nader and eight other consumer activists asked for at least a one-week postponement of Baird's confirmation hearing.

"This illegal conduct may be probative of other instances of bad judgment that need exploration," they said in a letter to Biden.

Baird has declined comment on any of the controversies.

From the start, the 40-year-old, $500,000-a-year counsel for Aetna Life & Casualty has been the darling not of liberal Democrats but conservative Republicans. Chief among those who have supported her throughout is Hatch, a leading conservative.

Baird, after all, has praised Vice President Quayle for raising the issue of changing the legal system to limit claims against companies and their insurers.

During the campaign, President-elect Clinton opposed Quayle's position and said the proposed reforms "tilted toward big polluters, manufacturers and insurance companies and against consumers and victims."

For this and other stands taken while representing Aetna and General Electric from 1986 to 1990 — including an attempt to gut the federal whistle-blower law for companies participating in a program to disclose fraud voluntarily to the government — Baird earned the enmity of consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

"She opposed the 1986 False Claims Act when she was at GE, and she'll have to be enforcing those whistle-blower rights as attorney general," Nader said in an interview.

She also lacks prosecutorial experience. Her brief time at the Justice Department, 1979-80, was spent as attorney-advisor in the office of legal counsel, where she defied the Carter White House's plan to use 1980 Census jobs for political patronage.

Her vow to remove herself from matters with a "direct and predictable" effect on Aetna and General Electric, while considered legally appropriate, could pose problems as well. Depending on government ethics attorneys' interpretations, the promise could keep her out of policy-making and specific cases on an array of subjects, from health care to nuclear power plants, Pentagon fraud to broadcasting.

But what garnered big headlines was the 1990 hiring of an illegal alien couple from Peru to care for her young son, Julian, and do driving chores. That was compounded, critics say, by the failure to pay required taxes for the couple, who last year stopped working for Baird.

If confirmed, Baird would oversee the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Bush vows to battle Saddam until final hour

Christopher Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As time runs out on his presidency, George Bush is struggling to finish the task he began exactly two years ago: bring his greatest adversary, Saddam Hussein, to heel.

If Saddam can survive until high noon Wednesday, he will have outlasted Bush in power. But until that hour, Bush signaled he will try to force his old enemy into obeying United Nations cease-fire rules.

Saddam clearly viewed this American interregnum as a chance to show the world that he was still in power, unrepentant and unwilling to live by the hard terms imposed on Iraq two years ago as a price for peace.

But equally determined was Bush to show that "I'm president until the 20th" as he said after unleashing a brief bombing raid on Iraqi missiles in the southern no-fly zone Wednesday.

A dozen years ago, another one-term president, Jimmy Carter, pulled every stop of diplomacy in his waning hours to win release of the U.S. hostages in Tehran.

Carter spent his last night on a couch in the Oval Office and went bleary-eyed to the Capitol to watch Ronald Reagan take the oath of office. Cruelly, Iran waited until Carter was no longer president before setting the Americans free.

Bush, like Carter, is determined not to lay down the power and the burden of his office until the Constitution says he must.

His successor, President-elect Clinton, created a stir last week with an interview in which he said he was not "obsessed" with Saddam and would judge the erratic Iraqi leader by his behavior.

But Sunday, Clinton took pains to signal unwavering support for Bush's measured actions. And his staff said the incoming administration was as determined as the outgoing to "continue taking appropriate action until Iraq complies."

As Clinton and his entourage rolled into town for three days of pageantry and celebration, the television pictures gave way to the surreal but eerily familiar green, nighttime shots of anti-aircraft fire bursting over Baghdad.

Even after Sunday's attack, the White House left open the possibility of further strikes if Baghdad does not yield to the U.S. and U.N. demands. "We don't have (compliance) yet," said spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

And the Democrats are under no illusion that Saddam will be any easier for them to live with.

"We'll have a problem with him starting next Thursday just as the Republicans have," Warren Christopher, soon to be secretary of state, said on ABC. "I don't expect any change in his behavior."

So Bush counts down the hours of his presidency, giving the latest Iraq crisis his best shot.

Yugoslavia admits to intervention in Bosnian civil war

Tony Smith
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Yugoslav and Bosnian government forces duelled with artillery Sunday in a sharp escalation of Bosnia's civil war, while Bosnian troops fought to cut off rebel Serbs from their Yugoslav allies.

The cross-border shelling marked the first time Yugoslavia has acknowledged intervening in the war since withdrawing its troops seven months ago from this former Yugoslav republic.

A U.N. convoy, meanwhile, reportedly reached a Muslim-held town in eastern Bosnia that had been cut off by Serb militants for months. The convoy was carrying tons of relief supplies to Zepa, where scores of people have reportedly died of cold, starvation and disease in recent weeks.

The convoy was to spend the night in Zepa before returning Sunday to Sarajevo, 40 miles to the west, said Alekna Lisinski, spokeswoman for U.N. refugee operations in Zagreb, Croatia.

There was no immediate word of what the relief workers found in the town. Serb commanders controlling surrounding territory turned back reporters accompanying the convoy.

Serb rebels said the offensive by Bosnia's Muslim-led government near the Yugoslav border was the biggest in the region since the war began. The casualty toll was unknown, but it was clearly a bloody battle.

At least 46 Serb fighters and civilians were killed around the village of Skelani in southeastern Bosnia, the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported.

At a cemetery in Bratunac, a town two miles from the front, the cries of Serb women mourning their dead were drowned out by explosions from the fighting, said Associated Press reporter Dusan Stojanovic, who visited the area Saturday.

"Damn this war," Darinka Petrovic cried out as she knelt before a cross bearing the name of her son Dragan, 25.

The Serb, whose body has not been recovered, was killed in the Bosnian offensive, which is apparently aimed at cutting a corridor linking Serb-held areas with Serbia, the dominant state in what is left of Yugoslavia.

The cemetery was dotted with at least 100 fresh graves. Some of the victims were as young as 12.

In line with the Orthodox Christian Serbs' belief that there is life after death, many grave crosses were covered with shirts to keep the dead warm. Food, drinks and lighted cigarettes were also put on the graves.

Bosnian Serb villages near Bratunac, which lies along the Drina River border between Bosnia and Serbia, were gutted and ghostly, Stojanovic reported. Bare beams were all that remained of roofs, and walls were punctured from bullets and cannon blasts. Pigs searched for food.

A source at Yugoslav army headquarters in Belgrade, capital of Yugoslavia and Serbia, said Yugoslav artillery fired into Bosnia a day after Muslim forces fired into Yugoslavia.

Bosnian Serb and Yugoslav officials said that the cross-border shelling by Bosnian forces continued Sunday and that villages and a power plant in Perucac, about 25 miles southwest of Bratunac, were hit.

One person was killed Sunday by Bosnian fire into Serbia, Belgrade radio said. No casualties were reported in Saturday's shelling.

The Yugoslav military "responded fiercely" to the attacks, the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported, without giving details.

The source at Yugoslav army headquarters said that the response was limited to the artillery barrage and that no Yugoslav ground attack had been launched.

There were unverified charges from Serbs that Muslim fighters had committed atrocities in their offensive. All sides have been accused of atrocities, but most accusations have been made against Serb fighters.

Serbs told Stojanovic that Muslims had "butchered" hundreds of Serb villagers in the offensive.

"I'm a professional warrior, but I have never seen anything like that," said Col. Miladin Prstojevic, commander of Serbs in Bratunac. "I had to hide from my soldiers when I felt sick seeing the mutilated bodies."

Prstojevic said he saw bodies of Serbs cut with knives and fed to pigs and female corpses with breasts cut off. Serbian TV showed mutilated bodies lying in the snow with their eyes gouged out.

Stojanovic found no evidence of atrocities.

U.N. WILL TAKE CONTROL

U.S. troops plan to leave Somalia

George Esper
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — The U.S. Marines will send their first combat troops home Tuesday as the United States moves toward transferring military control of Somalia to a U.N. command, perhaps within two weeks, a spokesman said Sunday.

But the spokesman, Marine Col. Fred Peck, stressed that the Security Council had not yet adopted resolutions necessary for the transfer or decided on a command structure and the rules of engagement.

The announcement of the departure of a battalion of 850 Marines came on one of the quietest days in Somalia since U.S. troops landed Dec. 9 to restore order in a nation that has lost 350,000 people to famine, fighting and disease in the last year. An additional 2 million people are considered at risk.

For the first time, Peck told the daily briefing: "I don't have anything to announce today (on fighting). It was a very quiet day."

In still another indication of improving security, a convoy of 25 trucks carrying nearly 400 tons of food set out for the first time over 400 treacherous miles to western Somalia. French troops accompanied the convoy.

"The roads have not been used," said Brenda Barton, spokeswoman for the World Food Program. "It's much cheaper if we can manage to move food by road on a regular basis. That means we're going to be able to gradually wind down the airlift operation."

Mohamed Farah Aidid, one of Somalia's most powerful warlords, predicted a 3-day-old cease-fire among the country's warring factions would hold.

"I believe it will be implemented correctly," he told reporters when he returned from Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, where the agreement was signed by 14 factions Friday.

Asked if he would hand over his heavy weapons to U.N. forces as required by the cease-fire agreement, he said: "We have already confined these weapons to camps. We will keep them in these camps. We will discuss this. We have decided this should be done gradually."

Aidid's strongest rival, Ali Mahdi

Mohamed, said previously that his militiamen had taken their weapons to an assembly point and were gathered in camps under provisions of the cease-fire and disarmament agreement.

Peck said the change in the American presidency with the inauguration of Bill Clinton on Wednesday could be contributing to some of the delay in setting up a U.N. military command.

He said the U.S. forces would not make the transfer until the U.N. command was set up so there would be no gap. "And things seem to be going well," he said. "The U.N. is discussing it."

Peck quoted Defense Secretary Dick Cheney as saying at the start of the operation that he envisioned some sort of U.S. military force staying off Somalia's coast for some time.

Peck said the 3rd Battalion, 9th Marine Regiment, which arrived in Somalia on Christmas Eve, would return to its base at Camp Pendleton, Calif., over a three-day period beginning Tuesday. The Marines have already begun loading their equipment aboard ships for transfer home.

Palestinians protest exile orders

Mohammed Salem
Associated Press

MARJ AL-ZOHOUR, Lebanon — Palestinians deported by Israel marked one month of exile in a southern no man's land by marching toward Israeli army lines and staging a protest sit-in Sunday.

No sign of a breakthrough was evident in the impasse between Lebanon and Israel over the 411 men, who were expelled by Israel on Dec. 17 in retaliation for the slayings of six Israeli troopers by suspected Muslim fundamentalists.

Abdul-Aziz Rantisi, a Gaza Strip physician who is spokesman for the deportees, said after the men returned to their tent camp: "The march... symbolizes our rejection of the deportation orders and our determination to return home."

Israeli troops did not fire on the deportees from their self-designated "security zone" inside southern Lebanon as the Israelis did during a similar march last month. Four Palestinians were wounded in the earlier incident.

Israel accuses the men, all from the occupied West Bank and Gaza, of being supporters of the radical fundamentalist Hamas and Islamic Jihad movements.

Lebanon has refused to accept the deportees, saying it will not become a "dumping ground" for Palestinians expelled by Israel.

Israel refuses to take them back, even though the mass expulsion has brought widespread international criticism and jeopardized the U.S.-sponsored Arab-Israeli peace talks.

In Jerusalem, Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa proposed compromises Sunday to defuse the crisis, but his meetings with Israeli

Associated Press

Palestinian deportees, brandishing banners condemning their expulsion by Israel, marched Sunday toward the Israeli crossing through which they were expelled a month ago.

leaders apparently ended inconclusively. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin implied there was no breakthrough.

The expelled men are encamped between Lebanese army lines and the Israeli security zone.

The deportees began their march after temporarily folding up the 63 green tents that serve as their makeshift homes, leaving intact only the one that houses their clinic.

During the 1,000-yard protest march to the edge of the Israeli buffer zone at the Zommaraya crossing point, the deportees waved Palestinian flags and the Koran, Islam's holy book. They carried banners proclaiming "We do not want any home but ours" and "Allahu Akbar," or God is great. Israel's Lebanese militia ally, the mainly Christian South Lebanon Army, moved tanks and armored personnel carriers to Zommaraya to block any attempt to cross into the security zone as two Israeli jet fighters flew overhead.

The Lebanese militia has about 2,500 men in the security zone Israel established in 1985 to shield its northern settlements from guerrilla attacks. Israel has about 1,200 soldiers in the zone.

During the deportees' two-hour sit-in on a rocky slope, they formed the word "home" in English and "799" with their bodies.

The number refers to U.N. Security Council Resolution 799 that calls on Israel to take the deportees back.

Police look for clues to kidnapping

Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

BAY SHORE, N.Y. — A jackhammer and power saws screamed into the chilly air Sunday as police began dismantling a carport above the subterranean concrete bunker where 10-year-old Katie Beers was held captive.

Shortly after sunrise, workers started tearing away the roof and wooden walls of the carport, chipping up the concrete carport floor and digging up dirt surrounding it, creating a 6-foot-tall mound.

"We're just cutting and sawing," said a police sergeant who asked not to be identified. He said he expected the work to be finished by Friday.

The demolition focuses on the area around the carport, which was attached to the converted garage where Beers family acquaintance John Esposito lived.

Police planned to tear apart some of Esposito's home, but the sergeant said it would be left standing. They want to leave no clue unearched in the bizarre case that ballooned from a missing persons report to a sordid tale of child abduction and captivity.

Suffolk County Police Detective Lt. Dominick Varrone said authorities hope to remove intact as much of the bunker where Katie was kept as they can.

She was rescued Wednesday from the bunker beneath the converted garage. Police said she was imprisoned there for 16 days.

Authorities say Esposito forced Katie into a coffin-sized box in the bunker after she resisted his sexual advances. She survived on bologna sandwiches, sodas and junk food as she watched a television placed in the box with her.

At times, she was chained around the neck, police said.

Esposito remained jailed Sunday on a second-degree kidnapping charge, with bail set at $500,000.

His lawyer, Andrew Siben, said he met with Esposito for two hours Sunday before coming out to watch the excavation.

"He's under a great deal of stress," he said. "He is under constant watch by the Sheriff's Department. He's very distraught. He looks very tired."

Siben said Esposito is spending 23 hours a day in his cell.

"I told him Katie is doing well. He was certainly happy to hear that," he said.

Katie was found after Esposito, who reported her missing, admitted he knew where she was.

Now in the custody of county child-welfare officials, she awaits the outcome of family court proceedings to determine if she can be returned to her mother.

On Saturday, Marilyn Beers blasted critics who said she was an unfit mother who spent little time with Katie.

She said the child "took a flying leap" into her arms when they were reunited for a half-hour Friday night and said she couldn't wait to return home. A custody hearing was scheduled for Thursday.

People from around the country have offered to adopt Katie, as well as offered presents, money and parties for her since her ordeal became public.

Suffolk County child-welfare officials have promised to deliver presents and money.

LEGACY

Annus Horribilis Times 12

Where does one start in contemplating the legacy of twelve years of Republican Party rule? The nation's new tolerance with intolerance? The devastation of the cities, the social fabric, the economy? The scandals, resignations, convictions, and investigations that would have brought down administrations in any other democracy? The utter corruption of the Justice Department under Meese, Thornburgh, and Barr, whom William Safire has called the "Cover-Up General"? The greatest bank robbery in the history of civilization? The terrifying rise of the religious totalitarians? James Watt, Antonin Scalia, Oliver North, Frederick Malek, Clarence Thomas? The nearly $9,000 per second spent on the military? The blame assigned to the poor, the sick, the non-white, the female? The massive upwards redistribution of wealth (today, the 9 percent who make more than $250,000/year own almost half of the net wealth of the nation; this means that our 91 percent has to make do with the other half?)

The nearly $9,000 per second spent on the military? The blame assigned to the poor, the sick, the non-white, the female?

Well, only time will tell. True, Reagan did make some Americans feel good about themselves, and Bush did kick ass in the desert, but no therapy ever had a higher cost, and the cover-up by the Frankensteins who created the monster of Saddam Hussein is only now beginning to unravel in Washington and London.

Mostly, I think historians will note the legacy of fear and bitterness and cynicism, the strangulation of possibilities and imagination and compassion, that has so undermined our national community and democracy in the last long, long decade.

A parable for our times: David Stockman, who, as Reagan's O.M.B. head, did so much to trash the economy — later admitting he knew that "supply side" was a big con — now makes his living with the Blackstone Group, which sells discounted debt from failed S & Ls, S & Ls that were looted because of the deregulation he helped shape. Another scavenger with Blackstone is Roger Altman, the new number two at the Treasury Department under business-(a.k.a. thieving)-as-usual Lloyd Bentsen. As George Will, whose rise to punditocracy was lubricated by his intellectual pimping for Reagan, might say, plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose.

LETTERS

There's always someone

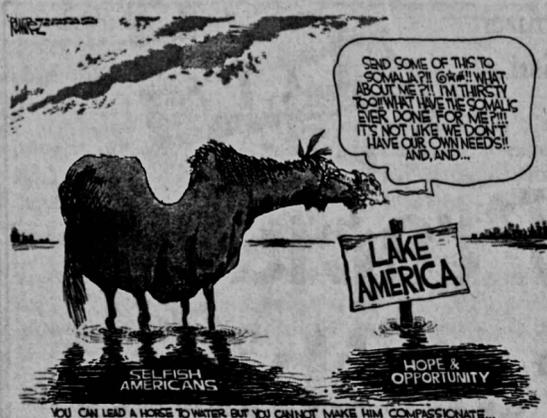

To the Editor:

As an 82-year-old grandmother and a UI graduate (I did not major in typing), I must comment on the wonderful article by Tim Connors in your Dec. 4 Daily Iowan. I am still laughing even though it was not written to be funny. The same thing was going on 65 years ago and is still going on in the Senior Center. There is always someone who feels that he (or she) has the authority to force his ideas on others. As an example I will note — we have a small table with four chairs around it — there are generally cookies, rolls or some edibles, with two coffee makers at the side with paper cups available with a sign stating that coffee is 10 cents a cup, also 10 cents for each refill. Well, in order that we may find a parking space in the very few spaces for which privilege we have already paid $10 and received a sticker, we must be at the Center at least by 10:15. Thus we thought the "Powers that Be" were allowing us to sit there for a few minutes and enjoy the coffee that we did not have time for before we came early to get parked.

WRONG. We have been told that that table is not for our use. We are to carry our coffee (wait 'til you are 82 and have shaky hands and try to carry your coffee clear to the lounge). Then try to sit down on those very low davenports with said coffee in your shaky hand. Then wait — try to get out of those davenports, where you are practically sitting on the floor. I am wondering, after 65 years are the professors still threatening that if anyone goes to sleep they will walk out of the room and not come back. I'm sure they are. Why not break your candy bar or sandwich in small pieces and have it in your book bag where you can easily slip a bite in your mouth — maybe even slip a bite to your neighbor. That worked 65 years ago and I'm sure it will today. As for smoking — that's a NO-NO and I agree should not be allowed in any UI building. We do not have that ruling in the Senior Center and the main ones that need to go outdoors to smoke are some of the younger employees. People will be people — so let's just enjoy each other and try not to be dictators. This is a free country — enjoy it.

Prejudice harbored by safety of sameness

One of the best periodicals around, and one many of us have too little time to absorb in a decent fashion, is the Chronicle of Higher Education. During a few quiet moments before the holiday, I came across a story in its pages that bears retelling.

It concerns Converse College, a private women's school in Spartansburg, S.C. Alumnae of the school, characterized in the article as "older," are airing rather bitter complaints. What is happening in the halls of their alma mater to rile them so? Sexism? The promotion of values that belittle the education of women? No. The fact is, some graduates of the fine old school are upset by its new president.

They don't like the way she wears her hair, if you must know. And although it pains decent folk to discuss such things, her marriage is... well, not right (her husband lives 45 miles away, where he teaches).

The leader of the school's insurgent pack of little foxes, 1943 alumna Peggy Hite Self, goes so far as to accuse infernal president Ellen Wood Hall of wearing "godawful clothes." My, my, my. Ain't that whistlin' Dixie?

There are other issues burning down the barn at Converse as well. Moral ones. You see, President Hall has taken to making hiring decisions that are... well, "unnecessary." Cynthia B. Greer was recently hired as dean of students. She was "selected by a search committee made up of students, professors, and administrators." She was also reported to be a unanimous choice. Exactly what "moral issues" the Self faction felt might surround such a decision was not clear. The fact that Ms. Greer is African-American, however, looms in silent condemnation of Hall's detractors.

Somewhat more starkly outlined on the moral landscape was a hint of tolerance towards... well, lesbians. Lord a'mighty, Emma Belle, mix me another julep, dear! Apparently some Converse students requested and were granted an informal discussion with a college counselor on the topic that dares not speak its name. To Ms. Self and other fine, God-fearing, hetero alumnae of Converse, this was a shame —

In private places and private lives, people are capable of the meanest of acts and will commit them without hesitation to assure themselves of the safety of sameness in their surroundings. The ethos of narrow-mindedness often rules in private settings precisely because of the protection from scrutiny privacy affords.

possibly a damned shame, though they would die before uttering the words. Mark me, now, it wasn't explicitly stated in the article that there are any lesbians at Converse, and you and I know there certainly are not. Still, tolerance for what Ms. Self so rightly and courageously terms an "abomination" is bad form in and of itself, and nothing to encourage in our young women.

Ms. Self has given the sum of $100 per annum to her school for years now. In light of the sorry decline this frump of a president has brought on, Self has bottled her beneficence for the time being. In her own words, she characterizes the trouble with the new president thus: Ms. Hall is "short, with short gray hair that is not in the least bit attractive, and wears godawful clothes." That the same could be said of Robert E. Lee, Jefferson Davis and Stephen Douglas is apparently lost on Ms. Self.

She readily extolls the virtues of private Converse presidents, none of whom were ace en. She considers them to have been "dignified, wonderful men," with "high morals and wonderful backgrounds." But answer me this, Peggy — could they cook?

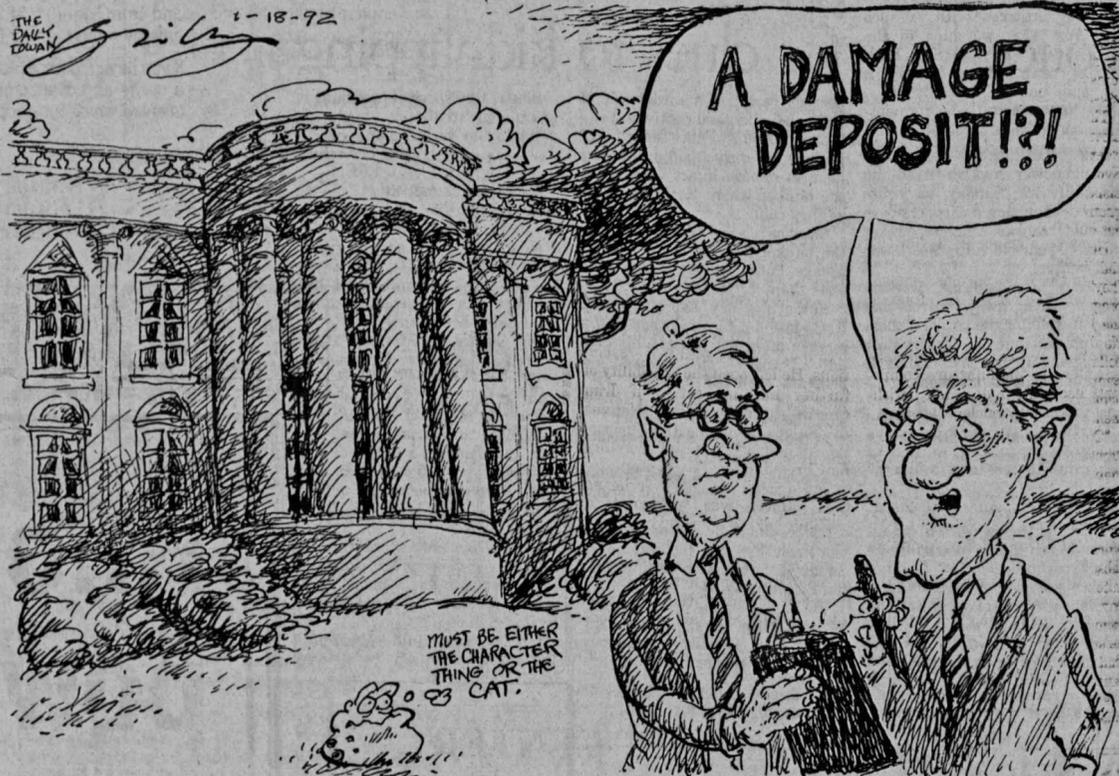

It is not sporting to pick on a private school this way. Private schools have a right to be private. But we must remember that privacy is tricky. It is a right that harbors a particular threat, for we frequently find something ugly behind all those lovely, festooned traditions. That something is often prejudice.

Privacy does much to foster prejudice. In private places and private lives, people are capable of the meanest of acts and will commit them without hesitation to assure themselves of the safety of sameness in their surroundings. The ethos of narrow-mindedness often rules in private settings precisely because of the protection from scrutiny privacy affords.

The narrow mind is beneath us when it is allowed to reign in the privacy of country clubs and civic groups. In institutions of higher learning, it is simply inexcusable. Here's to President Ellen Wood Hall. To a casual observer, she seems to possess graciousness, tenacity, decency, and tolerance. If even a small portion of these traits is absorbed by the women of Converse, she will have made a magnificent contribution to the school's legacy.

TV sleaze encroaches upon a real life

Although I watch few TV sitcoms, I've looked in on one because the main female character reminds me of an old friend. Maybe you've seen the show. It's called "Hearts Afire," and is on CBS on Monday nights.

The female star is called Georgie Anne Lahti. She is blond, wears bangs, and is a real-life newspaper journalist.

It happens that my old friend is named Georgie Anne Geyer, who is blond, used to wear bangs, and is a real-life newspaper journalist.

Ms. Geyer and I were both hired as young reporters by The Chicago Daily News in 1959. We've been pals since.

In real-life, Georgie Anne Geyer is originally from Chicago.

In the TV show, Georgie Anne Lahti moved from Chicago to become a foreign correspondent and ended up in Washington.

In real-life, Georgie Anne Geyer moved from Chicago to become a foreign correspondent and ended up in Washington.

In the TV show, Georgie Anne Lahti is a globe-hopping correspondent and has interviewed and knows many world leaders.

In real-life, Georgie Anne Geyer, as a globe-hopping foreign correspondent and columnist, has interviewed and knows many world leaders.

wrote a widely acclaimed biography of Fidel Castro.

In real-life, Georgie Anne Geyer wrote a widely acclaimed biography of Fidel Castro.

There are other similarities, but you get the idea: The fictional TV Georgie Anne has to be based on the real-life Georgie Anne.

And that wouldn't be difficult for the script writers. They wouldn't even have to talk to the real Georgie Anne to get details of her life. All they'd have to do is read her fine autobiography, "Buying the Night Flight."

So why am I telling you all this? Mainly so you will know — if you hadn't already guessed — that some really crummy, unscrupulous people work in the TV industry.

See, the real Georgie Anne is not happy with the TV sitcom Georgie Anne.

For one thing, the TV Georgie Anne — while a talented journalist — is a bit of a floozy. While researching her book on Fidel Castro, she apparently spent considerable time in bed with him.

The real-life Georgie Anne doesn't gather her facts that way.

And in most of the show's segments, the TV Georgie Anne seems to be romping in bed at every opportunity. Or if she isn't romping, she's talking about past romps.

This troubles the real-life Georgie Anne. While not a prude, she has spent about 30 years building a reputation as one of the top foreign correspondents in the world. And she didn't do it by being a journalistic version of Madonna.

The real-life Georgie Anne is a brilliant, respected expert in foreign affairs, who writes a column that appears in 120 newspapers and has written important books and magazine articles. Along the way, she's put her life on the line more than once.

She has reason to be proud of her accomplishments. It wasn't easy. She broke into journalism when the few women on newspapers covered cooking, fashion or society.

So along come these TV people who need an outline for a TV character. First they take the name — Georgie Anne — which most people agree is not a common handle. How many Georgie Annes do you know?

They take the blond-bangs look, some personal background and many professional accomplishments. But since show biz is show biz, they turn her into a bimbo.

It isn't inconceivable that readers, editors and government officials might see the TV show and ask: "Hey, that's our Georgie Anne Geyer. Is she really a floozy?"

Did the TV producers ask if they could use the real Georgie Anne that way? Not only did they not ask, they loftily deny that their TV Georgie Anne is in any way based on the real-life Georgie Anne. A mere coincidence, yuck, yuck.

Not to butter you up, but most of my readers are logical. So let me pose this question: If you were a Chicago-born blond named Georgie Anne, had built an international reputation as a foreign correspondent and columnist, and had written an important book about Fidel Castro, wouldn't you say something like: "Hey, what the hell's going on?"

I'll tell you who those sleazy TV producers are, since you'll probably become familiar with the term during the next four years.

They're a Hollywood couple named Harry Thomason and Linda Bloodworth-Thomason. Very rich and successful. Beyond that, they have enormous political clout.

They are part of Bill Clinton's innermost circle. They helped shape his and Hillary's public images and created the highly effective "Man from Hope" propaganda film shown at the Democratic Convention.

They're close chums and you'll hear more about them because they are the Clintons' show biz operation. In Washington, they are ready big names, the kind of insiders and powers who are fawned over at awkward at during the inauguration blitz.

What informal roles will they play during the Clinton administration?

As we know, it can become necessary for presidents to tell lies. Sometimes for alleged national security purposes, but more often to protect their hides.

So if Clinton feels the need to tell a lie, but isn't quite sure how to do it, he can consult the Thomasons.

They've already established their credentials.

 said this year's percentage of graduates staying in the state is the highest in the program's history. "It's very gratifying because it's a voluntary system," Seeborn said. "They are not required to stay. They have gone to these communities and decided to stay because the opportunities are available."
 The opportunities are not what is new. Rural Iowa has always had a need for physicians. What is new is that work in a rural environment is starting to look more attractive to graduates of residency programs in Iowa.
 "It proves the old sociological point that if you take your residency in the state of Iowa, you're more likely to stay here," Seeborn said. "It's a bigger factor in deciding where a family practitioner will work than where they were born or where they went to med school."
 County hospitals which serve rural areas generally hire family practice physicians because their diverse training allows them to serve a greater number of patients. Over the past 10 years, the number of patient visits handled by the family practice residents has risen by 28 percent, from about 156,000 to 194,000.

 More than half of the graduates of the residency programs since 1978 have chosen to practice in a community with a population of under 10,000.
 Family practice doctors may complete their residency in one of seven Iowa cities such as Des Moines in Davenport. Another option members of the program have is to take their residency at Mercy Hospital in Iowa City.
 Edie Weaver, director of community relations at Mercy Hospital, said Mercy has worked hard to encourage its residents to stay in the state upon completion of their program. Statistics such as those released in the OCBP report show those efforts are paying off, she said.
 "Iowa has a great rural population where people are in need of doctors," Weaver said. "In those areas, I think it's a great match for someone just completing their residency. I think there's a lot of opportunities here for a family practice physician."

 Moss agreed. Although he thinks the increasing number of family practice physicians staying in Iowa is encouraging, there is still a desperate need for doctors in rural areas, he said.
 Approximately 50 family physicians graduate from the statewide program annually, the OCBP report shows. The report also shows that current enrollment in the program is 145 — its lowest since the late '70s.

 According to Moss, there are approximately 172 Iowa communities currently looking for over 200 physicians. By the year 2000, the number of physicians needed in rural Iowa hospitals and clinics could reach 320, he said.
 "The numbers are great but we have a long way to go," Moss said.

 "We're hoping everyone will wear them in tribute to him," Grady said.
 In addition to this week's activities, the UI Black Student Union will collect sweaters and coats in the Union for the needy and will accept donations to pay for a needy family's electric bill.
 From the "We Have a Dream Too" program in area schools, artwork by elementary students will be on display in the Union, according to Grady.
 "We hope people take the chance to come down and see what kind of dreams our future leaders and citizens have," he said.
 Art objects from Africa may be seen in the Iowa City Public Library's Children's Room and book displays will also be set up in the library and in the University Book Store.

 Ending the week, there will be a half-time observance during the Iowa-Indiana women's basketball game, beginning at 7:30 p.m. on Friday. Although all other activities during the week are free of charge, regular admission will be charged for the game.
 Grady said he is expecting a good turnout for the week's events.
 "This has been an important part of the UI community over the past 25 years," he said, "and we've gotten a good response in the past. I think we'll have a lot of participation. People are excited about the information which has gone out."

 limited action unlikely to expose U.S. forces to much risk.
 Baghdad was lit by bright blasts of anti-aircraft fire from Iraqi gunners. It was not immediately known whether the attack was successful. "We don't have a damage assessment at this point," said Fitzwater.
 The operation did not involve any allied warplanes, and lasted about two hours.
 The nuclear-weapons site in the suburb of Zafraniyah, a scant eight miles from downtown Baghdad, was attacked with missiles fired from U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf and Red Sea. Each missile was armed with a 984-pound nonnuclear warhead.
 The plant has been dormant, according to International Atomic Energy Agency spokesman David Kyd, who said it was visited by inspectors in June 1991 and subsequently. He said it was "absolutely out of action."
 However, a senior Pentagon official insisted that the site was "key" to the Iraqi nuclear weapons program. Not all the buildings at the site were targeted, he added. He described it as a "multi-billion dollar facility," that used high-tech computers to manufacture components used in the uranium enrichment process for nuclear weapons.
 "Our intent here was to do serious damage to the facility. . . . It is of high value to the Iraqi military," he said.
 Queried about damage to the Al Rasheed hotel in Baghdad, the official said U.S. military planners "absolutely" had not targeted the hotel. Although the official said the damage appeared to have come from missiles in the Iraqi arsenal, he said he could not totally rule out that some damage may have been caused by U.S. weaponry.
 An Iraqi army photographer outside the hotel showed reporters a piece of metal he said he found at the site. The fragment bore the markings of the U.S. company that makes the turbo-fan engine for the Tomahawk cruise missile.

 Fitzwater said the U.S. attacks were intended to deliver "the political and diplomatic point" that Iraq must comply with U.N. resolutions. He left open the possibility of further military action if Iraq chooses to defy United Nations resolutions, including U.N. inspection missions. The press secretary for President-elect Clinton re-enforced the message, declaring that Clinton was "prepared to continue taking appropriate action until Iraq complies."
 In Baghdad, Saddam told his people that "the aggressors will fail in their evil purposes." His nationally televised address marked the second anniversary of the Jan. 17, 1991, start of the Persian Gulf War, in which U.S.-led multinational forces ended Iraq's seven-month occupation of Kuwait.

 sady it is a lesson that we — the world's oldest and greatest democracy — have yet to perfect amidst our own differences and the challenges of this time."
 Clinton said, "In this world and the world of tomorrow, we must go forward together or not at all. My fellow Americans, I ask you tonight to reach out beyond the forces that divide us."
 Clinton and Gore led a procession of thousands across the Memorial Bridge — built to symbolize the reunion of North and South after the Civil War — to a windup ceremony in suburban Virginia.
 At the stroke of 6 p.m., Clinton and Gore grasped a red rope attached to a replica of the Liberty Bell and led the nation in a bell-ringing ceremony. Clinton's daughter, Chelsea, kept up the ringing long after her father let go of the rope.
 Across the country, and aboard the space shuttle Endeavour, bells rang out simultaneously.
 "The evening ended with a brilliant fireworks display.
 The bridge-crossing and bell-ringing were part of Clinton's message of national reconciliation.
 "We come here today to reclaim our country for the American people, to celebrate not a victory of party or persons but the common ground we call America," Clinton said.
 Clinton began the day in central Virginia touring Monticello, the historic home of Thomas Jefferson, father of the Democratic Party and author of the Declaration of Independence.
 "I want to be faithful to Jefferson's idea that about once in a generation you have to shake things up and face your problems," he said. "We owe it to Thomas Jefferson and George Washington and all our forebears to face the difficult, difficult problems of our time and to try to solve them."

 Then in a symbol-rich journey, he and Gore — and a 15-bus caravan carrying their wives, staff, families and friends — made the 121-mile journey to the nation's capital. Thousands of well-wishers stood along the roadway, waving flags and cheering the incoming administration.
 "We know that you put us into the White House and we will never forget you," Clinton told an impromptu rally in Gainesville, Va., speaking not only to the hundreds there but the millions who lined the streets and highways during the Democratic ticket's eight campaign bus trips. "On this wonderful day, we ask you to pray for us, pull for us."
 Outgoing Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Iraq was only "one of a long list of problems" facing Clinton and that the new president will be hampered by his slow pace of appointments, particularly at the Pentagon.
 "It's very important to try to have some continuity," Cheney said on ABC. Clinton later echoed that sentiment, saying "the current administration and the next administration are in complete agreement on Iraq policy."
 The Lincoln Memorial concert went on as scheduled, despite the latest hostilities in Iraq.
 "There's a lot of people who have worked together for a long time to get a Democrat in the White House and we need to have this celebration," said Barbara McKenna-Brand, who came from Yarmouth, Maine, for the inauguration.
 Keith Grierson of Dunkirk, Md., agreed. "This celebration's for the American people," he said. "If the bombing does any good I guess it's just something we have to do."

SAN FRANCISCO — The Dallas Cowboys capped their rise from the NFL's depths at the same spot their downfall began.

The Cowboys, the league's youngest team, qualified for their first Super Bowl in 14 years Sunday with a 30-20 victory over San Francisco, the team that dominated the '80s.

"Fantastic! Fantastic! Fantastic!" Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson told his players from a podium in the locker room.

Running back Emmitt Smith eyes 49er territory in Dallas' 30-20 win at Candlestick Park in the NFC Championship Sunday, giving the Cowboys their first Super Bowl berth since 1978. After finishing 1-15 three years ago, Dallas won the conference with a mark of 15-3.

"Everybody did one hell of a job. The only thing I have to say is, 'How 'bout them Cowboys.'" Dallas, 1-15 just three years ago and now 15-3, will play Buffalo for the NFL championship Jan. 31 at the Rose Bowl.

The Cowboys are early 7-point favorites to give the NFC its ninth straight league championship against a team that has lost the last two Super Bowls.

Candlestick was the perfect place for the Cowboys' championship comeback.

Dallas' slide from top to bottom began 11 years ago in San Francisco, when Dwight Clark made "The Catch" that put the 49ers in the first of the four Super Bowls they won that decade. Now, they could be sending the 49ers on their own slide.

It will be a record sixth Super Bowl appearance for Dallas, but its first since 1978, when it lost 35-31 to Pittsburgh, the third of the Steelers' four Super Bowl wins. It was that record four Super Bowl victories that the Niners had hoped to break in Pasadena this year.

But they won't get there, thanks in large part to Troy Aikman, Emmitt Smith and two perfect second-half drives with a San Francisco field goal sandwiched in between.

Those long drives broke open a game that was tied at 10 at halftime and was played with few mishaps, despite intermittent rain and a field soaked by two weeks of downpours.

"It's great to win the NFC title here on their field, in San Francisco," Dallas owner Jerry Jones said. "But we'd like to have our own success."

They did this Sunday.

"The big thing for us today is we were able to convert on third down," said Aikman, who was 24 of 34 for 322 yards and two touchdowns. "When we got the opportunity, we were able to convert it."

For the 49ers, whose 14-2 regular-season record was the NFL's best, it was simply a case of not being able to stop the Dallas offense and not converting their own third downs.

"They showed extreme confidence on their first drive of the second half," said San Francisco quarterback Steve Young. "And then we gave the ball right back to them. The biggest plays of the game were our inability to convert inside their MIAMI — Through injuries and wild cards, through historic comebacks and hostile road games, the Buffalo Bills never flinched. They persevered, and now they're in their third straight Super Bowl.

Maybe this time, with a suddenly dominant defense, they'll get it right and win the big one.

The Bills won the right to try for their first NFL title with a convincing 29-10 victory over the Miami Dolphins in Sunday's AFC championship game.

Goldman's content is Gable's disbelief

Jay Nanda
 The Daily Iowan

Duane Goldman knows what it takes to win in wrestling.

For four years as a Hawkeye under Coach Dan Gable, the four-time all-American amassed a 132-10 record, four Big Ten titles, and appearances in the NCAA finals each year, taking home the crowning jewel in 1986.

Saturday night, Goldman returned to the site of his championship with the shoe on the other foot, as a first-year coach with Indiana. And although Goldman's Hoosiers couldn't pull off the unthinkable, as the top-ranked Hawkeyes prevailed 34-7, the evening was not without its rewards for the former Iowa standout.

"It was nice of Coach Gable to give us the opportunity to come here and even though the score was lopsided, I think we performed well," said Goldman, who was assisted by 1991 Hawkeye NCAA finalist Tom Ryan. "It means a lot to come back. The fans were always really good to me and they were good to me today."

What was Goldman's slight content, however, was Gable's displeasure, as No. 9-ranked 167-pound senior Keith Trammell was upset 7-5 by sophomore Mark Bruner, who entered the bout with a 7-7 record. Bruner notched five of his points in the final period.

"I'd probably have to say that was as bad a match as I've ever seen," Gable said of Trammell. "There were three or four times where he basically fell over out there. I can't even give the other guy credit."

Two other Hawkeyes, No. 8 158-pounder Rich Catalano and 177-pounder Matt Nerem, barely escaped with two-point decisions.

Iowa's last six points came via a Hoosier forfeit at heavyweight. Take those points and pins by 126-pounder Kent Streicher and 190-pounder Joel Sharratt off the scoreboard and the nation's No. 1 team (4-0-1) defeats a 3-5 club by just a 14-7 count.

"It looked to me like Trammell, Catalano and Nerem got tired," Gable said. "I have to give credit to their team just from the standpoint that they could break the momentum. I guess I forgot they finished last in the Big Ten last year."

A Gable-coached team feeling fatigued?

Certainly, that may be difficult for Hawkeye followers to fathom. But just think how Gable feels.

The No. 7 Iowa women's basketball team took no chances in allowing Northwestern to send Sunday's game into overtime. Senior guard Laurie Aaron stole the basketball on an inbound play and senior forward Toni Foster sank a lay-up to give the Hawkeyes a 60-55 win at Welsh-Ryan Arena.

Aaron ranks third in steals in the nation and leads the Big Ten, averaging 4.6 per game.

The Hawkeyes improved to 4-0 in the conference and 11-1 overall. The Wildcats dropped to 0-3 and 6-6.

Foster paced the Hawkeyes with 18 points and seven rebounds. Junior forward Nicole Tunisi recorded a double-double with 14 points and 13 rebounds.

"We showed we can play under pressure and keep our heads in the game when it's close," Foster said. "That was a good feeling."

Despite the winning score, Coach C. Vivian Stringer said that making the transition is something Iowa needs to work on.

"We had three or four steals that would have given us go-ahead baskets, the kind that would break their backs, but for some reason, we tried to get up the floor too fast and used poor judgement in those situations," Stringer said. "That's something we'll look to work on this week."

Iowa kicked off the weekend by beating Illinois 65-57 in Campaign. Although the Hawkeyes had a 17-point lead in the first half and led by six at halftime, the Illini opened the second half with an 11-4 run to claim a 40-37 lead. However, a pair of baskets by Arnela Yarbrough and Foster gave the Hawkeyes a lead that they would never give up.

"We pride ourselves on defense, and tonight we were ho-hum on our approach to defense," Stringer said after the win. "It didn't surprise me that Illinois played as well as they did. We hesitated a little this evening. That's to their credit."

To open Big Ten play, the Hawkeyes defeated Wisconsin 65-39 at home Jan. 8 and Minnesota 75-47

Hawks Duke it out, fall short versus Devils

DURHAM, N.C. — They're called the Duke Crazies, and for good reason.

They're the Duke students who surround the court at Cameron Indoor Stadium. They wear goofy hats, paint their bodies, scream insults and generally try to make life miserable for opposing basketball teams.

And Iowa's Chris Street loved them.

"The crowd was just awesome," Street said. "It's a real fun place to play, even with all the boos and bad things said about you. I like this atmosphere."

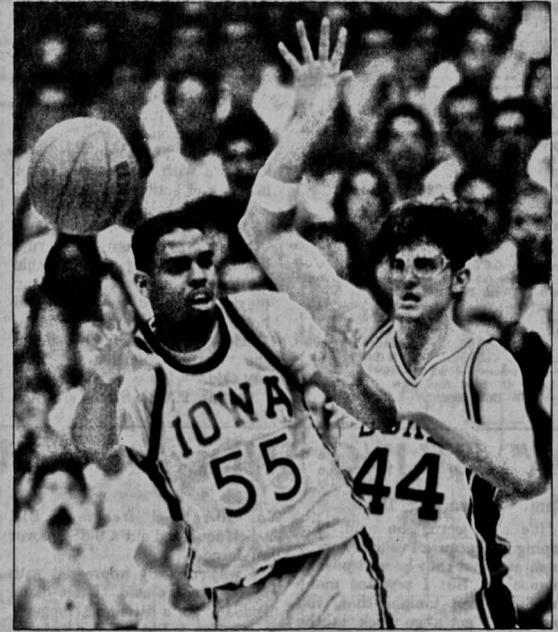

Street responded to the jeering with a solid game, scoring 14 points and grabbing 8 rebounds. But it wasn't enough to keep the third-ranked Blue Devils from making No. 13 Iowa their 78th straight non-conference victim at home.

Duke's 36-game home winning streak was ended Sunday by No. 14 Virginia 77-69, a day after the Blue Devils defeated the Hawkeyes 65-56, handing Iowa (12-3) its third loss in the last four games. However, the Hawkeyes were encouraged that they stayed with the Blue Devils until the end.

"We gave it a good effort," Street said. "They were just better."

One reason was that Duke denied the Hawkeyes a key part of their game — shooting free throws. Duke was called for only seven fouls and Iowa shot just five free throws, making all five. Street set a school record when he made his 34th straight from the line.

Iowa drew 20 fouls and Duke was 15-for-25 at the line. Going into the game, the Hawkeyes had shot three times as many free throws as their opponents and they had made 39 of 46 in a home victory over Minnesota three nights earlier.

Coach Tom Davis, however, chose not to dwell on the free throw discrepancy.

"We've got to try to focus on what we've got to do to improve," Davis said. "I'm gong to try to stay away from it and try to get the players not to worry about it. We've got 15 games to go, and that's what we've got to be thinking about."

Duke's Bobby Hurley wasn't nearly as diplomatic about the work of the three Big Ten Conference officials.

"The refs didn't control the game," Hurley said. "There were so many physical plays and so many non-calls. They weren't calling it either way. It was frustrating for both teams."

"There were almost some fights starting. At the end, I was scared to drive the lane."

Hurley jawed with Iowa players several times during the game. It finally got to be too much for Iowa's Kevin Smith, who shoved Hurley in the second half and drew an intentional foul.

"It was a tremendous game — a

Continued from Page 1B at Williams Arena Jan. 10. Iowa claimed 61 rebounds against Wisconsin, just missing the single-game record of 62 rebounds set against Iowa Wesleyan in 1977. The Hawkeyes lead the conference in rebounding margin claiming, 11.4 more rebounds than their opponents. Foster led the Hawkeyes with 28 points and 19 rebounds against the Badgers and 22 points and nine rebounds against the Golden Gophers. She was a perfect 7-for-7 from the field and 8-for-10 from the free throw line in 24 minutes of play at Minnesota.

At the Florida International Sun and Fun Tournament Jan. 2-4 at Miami, the Hawkeyes finished third after defeating Eastern Kentucky 67-63. The tournament marked the return of Stringer, who had not yet coached the Hawkeyes in the regular season. Stringer's husband, William D. Stringer, died of a heart attack Nov. 26. Assistant coach Marianna Freeman acted as

Iowa, then ranked No. 4, lost to then-No. 10 Colorado for its first loss of the season. Aaron led the Hawkeyes in scoring with 22 points and junior forward Tia Jackson earned the second double-double of her career with 16 points and 11 rebounds. The Lady Buffs went on to win the championship. Iowa opened the tournament with a 97-39 win over Bucknell. "This was a great team effort,"

Stringer said after the win. "It spoke to the quality and depth of the squad. No one let us down."

Iowa cut Drake's advantage in the all-time series to 18-7 with a 90-44 pasting over the Bulldogs Dec. 20. Jackson led the Hawkeyes with 18 points and junior center Andrea Harmon added 8 rebounds. Freshman Jenny Noll, a 6-foot-4 freshman from Muscatine, will redshirt this season. She suffered a stress fracture to her right femur in the early part of December.

AFC: Bills headed for 3rd straight

Continued from Page 1B road," Bills coach Marv Levy said. "I've never been prouder in all the years I've coached than to be associated with the men on this team."

Thurman Thomas, the NFL's total offense leader the last four seasons, showed why with 96 yards rushing and 70 more on five receptions.

Quarterback Jim Kelly, back after missing 2½ games with a knee injury, had a 17-yard TD pass to Thomas. He wasn't real sharp, but his performance blunted any criticism of coach Marv Levy for starting him over Frank Reich, who led the Bills to their first two postseason victories.

"I want to thank my teammates for hanging in there with me all week," Kelly said.

Ken Davis had a 2-yard TD run and Steve Christie tied a postseason-record with five field goals, from distances of 21, 33, 21, 31 and 38 yards.

Buffalo's defense — virtually impenetrable since the third quarter of the first playoff game — flustered Dan Marino all day. The Bills, who have allowed just 16 points since falling behind 35-3 in their playoff opener against Houston, had four sacks as defensive stars Bruce Smith, Darryl Talley and Cornelius Bennett were dominant.

The Dolphins, winners of the AFC East on the final day of the season as Buffalo lost, hurt themselves with five turnovers. Seeking their first AFC title since 1984, the Dolphins could not come close to stopping their archrivals from equalling their feat of three successive Super Bowl appearances (1971-73).

Buffalo, now 6-1 at Joe Robbie Stadium, became the fourth wild-card team to make the long trip to the big game. Only the 1980 Oakland Raiders won the NFL championship as a wild card.

Levy stretched his hex over Don Shula. The Dolphins coach is the second winningest in NFL history, but he is 4-12 against Levy.

Buffalo's dominance Sunday was built around the powerful surges of Smith. All-Pro tackle Richmond Webb simply couldn't handle the star defensive end, even though Smith has been hampered by a fractured rib.

Smith had seven tackles, 1½ sacks, forced a fumble on a sack and batted down a pass. So did the Bills' other end, Phil Hansen, who caught the ball, setting up a field goal.

The Bills were helped by Miami's offensive ineptitude. Marino was 22 for 45 for 268 yards, with eight drops by Dolphins receivers. The only Miami touchdown was a 15-yard pass to Mark Duper with 7½ minutes remaining.

Miami's defense, coming off a 31-0 victory over San Diego that seemed to stamp it as a major force, was run over by the Bills. Buffalo had the ball for 36:19 and 73 plays in securing a third straight postseason victory for the first time.

Christie's five field goals tied a playoff record set by Chuck Nelson for Minnesota in 1987 and tied by Matt Bahr of the New York Giants in 1990.

Miami tied it at 3-3 on Pete Stoyanovich's 51-yard field goal after Mark Clayton dropped a pass near the Bills' end zone and Marino was sacked.

But the Bills, aided by more Miami mistakes, grabbed a 13-3 edge three minutes into the second quarter.

Bryan Cox's roughing-the-passer penalty helped in Buffalo's 64-yard drive that culminated in Thomas' 17-yard score on a screen pass behind blocks by Will Wolford and Jim Ritcher. Marino was intercepted by Hansen on the next play as Hansen tipped the ball into the air and caught it at the Dolphins' 17. That led to Christie's 33-yard field goal.

When Mike Williams fumbled the second-half kickoff and the Bills marched in for Davis' touchdown, Buffalo fans could make cross-country travel plans. Their team was headed back to the Super Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., hoping to end the AFC's eight-game losing streak in the game.

MEN: Host Northwestern Wednesday

Continued from Page 1B very physical game," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "I'm not sure you can play harder. It was unbelievable. Iowa's kids play so hard."

Thomas Hill led Duke with 20 points, Hurley scored 14 and Grant Hill 12. Acie Earl was Iowa's only other player in double figures, getting 10 points.

Iowa led by as many as seven points in the first half, which ended 28-all. The Hawkeyes stayed close in the second half and trailed 49-47 with 6:13 left after Earl's basket.

Cherokee Parks then scored on a turnaround shot to start a 10-2 run that gave Duke control of the game.

"They just make the big baskets, the big stops, those plays that champions make," Davis said. "There was no singling anyone out. They do it as a team and they execute under pressure."

It's all Big Ten games for Iowa from here on out. The Hawkeyes entertain Northwestern Wednesday night at 7 p.m. and play at Penn State next Saturday. "There were a lot of positive things in this game," Davis said. "Hopefully, we learned from it and we'll get tougher because of it."

The Hawkeyes used a Carver-Hawkeye Arena record 39 free throws and a 40-20 edge on the boards to hold off No. 19 Minnesota 84-77 last Wednesday, breaking into the Big Ten win column at 1-2. Earl led the way with 19 points and 13 rebounds, Barnes tossed in 16 points and Street added 14 and 11 rebounds. A 10-0 run over 4:05 gave Iowa a 50-41 cushion from which it never looked back.

Freshman guard Mon'ter Glasper led Iowa with four assists in 14 minutes of action, while forward Kenyon Murray scored 10 of his 12 points in the second half. "I'm getting a chance to learn a lot and I'm getting some valuable minutes," Glasper said. "I'll keep playing as hard as I can and hopefully I can help the team."

"Hopefully, this will be a step in the right direction for us," Murray said.

On Jan. 9, Ohio State used nine first half 3-pointers to jump out to a 27-point lead en route to a 92-81 win over Iowa. Barnes scored 24 of his team-high 27 in the final stanza and the Hawkeyes cut the deficit to six with 1:24 to play, but could draw no closer.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — After blowing past more non-conference opponents (Texas Southern 91-70, Central Connecticut State 104-58 and Drake 80-65), the Big Ten season finally arrived with a honey of a game at Assembly Hall.

Coach Bob Knight racked up his 600th career coaching victory as Indiana defeated the Hawkeyes 75-67 on Jan. 6. The Hoosier skipper then skipped the post-game press conference, telling Indiana sports information representatives that he had to prepare for a hunting trip the following day.

Barnes pumped in 18 points and Winters had "his best game as a Hawkeye," according to Davis, with 16 points and eight rebounds.

"All I did was play as hard as I could," Winters said.

Guard Damon Bailey was a thorn in Iowa's side, connecting on five of seven from downtown and finishing with a game-high 21 points. Not even Iowa's ability to hold Calbert Cheaney 8.5 points under his 22.5 per game average could dent Indiana's 23-game home winning streak in the Big Ten, which dates back to Iowa's 80-79 overtime win two seasons ago.

"In the minutes I play, I just try to gain confidence," Cheaney said. "It's a Big Ten game and the whole team played scrappy and gained confidence, so this game was a big lift."

The Hawkeyes had entered the Big Ten opener leading the nation in field goal percentage defense (35.8 percent), rebounding margin (19.6) and scoring margin (31.1).

But the then-No. 5 Hoosiers brought Iowa down to Earth with a smothering defense that held Earl to a pair of free throws and 0-for-7 shooting from the floor in the second half. Indiana also sent Street to the bench with his fifth foul with 7:37 remaining. Street finished with six points and seven rebounds.

"I missed some shots I shouldn't have missed," Earl said. "I kind of forced it. I probably should have looked for some people that were probably having a good game."

Just prior to Christmas, the Hawkeyes became the first No. 1 seed to win the sixth annual San Juan Shootout, disposing of Southern Illinois 90-70 in the title game. Street was named the tournament's MVP with 20 points and 10 rebounds against the Salukis, and Earl was honored as the Best Defensive Player.

WRESTLING: Steiners, Zaputil All-Stars

Continued from Page 1B "It's a concern," he said. "I'm hoping it's because I've overworked them, not that they haven't pushed themselves. But I saw too many things happen tonight that, you know, you gotta go back to the drawing board."

Still, some aren't convinced the Hawkeyes are about to fall on their faces. "On paper, man for man, they appear to be a little short," Goldman said. "But having been here, I know they're going to be ready come Nationals. They're always the team to beat. They do it the way it's supposed to be done."

With the National Dual Championships approaching this weekend at Nebraska, Gable opted to rest top-ranked twins Troy and Terry Steiner Saturday.

In Troy's place at 142, senior Jim McLaughlin gave Gable "my biggest victory of the night," 11-6 over Andy Trevino, while Iowa did not fare as well at 150, where sophomore Aaron Aure fell 11-3. At 134,

No. 10-ranked freshman Bill Zadick squeezed out a 9-5 win over Jeff Jorge.

"I wasn't really impressed with myself," Zadick said. "I felt like I needed to get a little bit stronger."

On Jan. 2, Iowa opened its home season and the 10th anniversary of Carver-Hawkeye Arena with a 45-6 pounding of No. 20 North Carolina. In January of 1983, the Hawkeyes defeated Oklahoma 35-7 in the first athletic event to be held in the arena.

EVANSTON, Ill. — On Dec. 30, the Hawkeyes claimed their eighth Midlands Tournament championship at Northwestern's Welsh-Ryan Arena, scoring 106.75 points despite top-ranked 118-pounder Chad Zaputil and No. 2 heavy-weight John Oostendorp sitting out the meet. The Sunkist Kids Wrestling Club took second with 92 points.

Terry Steiner was the lone Iowa individual champion, garnering an escape in the third period for a 1-0 verdict over Iowa State nemesis Torrae Jackson. Steiner (14-0) went on to earn Big Ten Wrestler of the Month honors.

Troy Steiner was not so fortunate, as his 54-match winning streak came to an end in the finals versus non-collegian John Fisher of the Foxcatcher Wrestling Club, 10-6. The 13-1 Steiner defeated Fisher 5-4 for the 1991 Midlands title en route to a 42-0 campaign and a national crown.

Meanwhile, Gable was one of 20 inductees inaugurated into the Midlands Hall of Fame, in conjunction with the tournament's 30th anniversary. Gable was the only inductee to be honored as both a coach and a wrestler.

"I think the thing that makes the difference is that every year, I'm able to make some accomplishments in the sport," Gable said. "Your name fades after a while. The thing is, I've been able to stay in the sport and continue to have championship teams and championship athletes. I think that's real crucial to the honors that I have received and I have to give a lot of people credit for that."

Former Hawkeye national champions Terry Brands, Tom Brands and Royce Alger will be among the nation's top freestyle wrestlers touring the former Soviet Union Jan. 19-27. The tour is scheduled to include dual meets against top Russian squads and competition at the Krasnoyarsk International Tournament.

Troy and Terry Steiner, along with Zaputil, have been chosen to represent the Hawkeyes at this year's National Wrestling Coaches Association All-Star Classic at Lehigh in Bethlehem, Pa., Feb. 1. The annual meet pits the nation's top two grapplers head-to-head in each weight class.

This year's wrestling luncheon will be held Feb. 12 at the Westfield Inn of Iowa City at noon. Tickets cost $7 and can be purchased at the wrestling office in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Hawkeyes split with Redbirds, Buckeyes

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team returned to dual meet action Friday with an overpowering 166.5-129.5 victory over Illinois State before losing a close battle to Big Ten rival Ohio State Saturday, 152-146.

Iowa's overall record moved to 4-4 while their Big Ten mark dropped to 2-4.

Four double winners led the Hawkeyes over Illinois State. Senior Chrissy Eck took first place in the 200-yard freestyle (1 minute, 55.88 seconds) and in the 500 freestyle (5:05.97). Also taking first place honors were junior Liane Burton in the 100 backstroke (58.22) and 100 freestyle (53.47), junior Melissa Eberhart in the 200 medley relay (1:48.56) and 100 breaststroke (1:06.93). Senior Tracy Golden took the 200 medley relay and won the 50 freestyle with a time of 24.46.

"We switched some people against Illinois State and gave them a chance to swim different events," Iowa coach Pete Kennedy said. "We basically swam really well."

Other Hawkeyes in the win column were sophomore J.J. DeAth and junior Nicole Widmyer in the 200 medley relay, senior Shelley Miyamoto in the 1000 freestyle (10:26.53), freshman Rachel Baysier in the 200 backstroke (2:11.12), and freshman Jennifer Knapp in the 200 breaststroke (2:29.89).

Ohio State took the early lead on Saturday with 1-2 finishes in one-meter and three-meter diving. Iowa's Jill Oboivoktz and Jenni Harkness placed third and fourth, respectively.

"They probably have the best diving team in the NCAA," Hawkeye diving coach Bob Rydzek said of the Buckeyes. "Jill and Jenni improved about 40 points from Christmas break. I'm really happy with their effort and we're just trying to get better."

Iowa came back with top finishes in the 400 medley relay and 400 freestyle relay. The team of DeAth, Eberhart, Widmyer and Golden took first in the medley with a time of 3:56.48. Widmyer, DeAth, Burton and Golden combined to place first in the freestyle in 3:32.44.

Also finishing first in individual events against the Buckeyes were Burton (100 backstroke; 58.64), Golden (50 freestyle; 24.42), and Widmyer (100 butterfly; 57.73).

"We put everything into it," Eck said. "It would have been nice to beat them, but you can't be disappointed in doing your best."

Burton agreed. "Everyone swam their hardest and we had good times," the junior from West Chester, Pa., said. "I think for most people, this weekend has been a confidence booster. For others, they have to hang in and stay tough."

Iowa is coming off a winter break training trip in Hawaii. The Hawkeyes ended with 46 points in the Rainbow Invitational in Honolulu Jan. 2-3, good for fifth place.

"Everyone had a great training trip," Eck said. "The hard work really paid off and will continue to."

"It's hard to come off Hawaii like we did," Kennedy said. "We're still a little tired from it, but that's really no excuse. Right now we're pleased with most of our times and we're looking forward to the rest of the season."

Dvorak's charge ends in semifinals

DI Sports Services

Although everyone advanced at least one round, members of the Iowa women's tennis team lost their matches last week in the 18th Milwaukee Classic.

No. 11-seeded sophomore Laura Dvorak made it to the semifinals before bowing to No. 2 seed and Iowa City native Kim Shasby of Stanford 6-4, 6-2.

In third round doubles action, Dvorak and senior Andrea Calvert fell to Mikko Hems and Allison Grace of Arizona by a count of 6-3, 6-1. The tandem had defeated a duo from DePaul 6-1, 6-1 after receiving a first round bye to force the matchup with the Wildcats. In the singles consolation bracket, Calvert won two matches before losing in the quarterfinals to Sarah Maynard of California 6-2, 6-1.

Sasha Boros and Kim Isaak, playing together for the first time, got to the third round before losing to No. 3-seeded Shasby and Amy Chiminello 6-1, 6-2. Sophomores Amy Jahn and Cara Cashon advanced to the third round before being ousted by California's No. 2-seeded Lisa Parks and Valerie Poulous 6-4, 6-2.

The Hawkeyes next see action at the Arizona State Triangular in Tempe Jan. 29-31.

NBA

64-point outburst puts Jordan in no-win situation

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Being such a potent scorer, Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls is trapped in a Catch-22 situation.

At times, he's questioned if he shoots without looking to pass to a teammate. And at times, he's blamed for passing up shots while on a scoring binge and, instead, trying to find the open man.

It's not an enviable situation, but it's one Jordan, the six-time NBA scoring champion, has grown accustomed to.

The 33-year-old Jordan, who is averaging an NBA season-high 33.5 points Saturday night in a 128-112 overtime loss to the Orlando Magic, Jordan tried to put things in perspective.

"I'd give up all of them (points) for a win," he said. "It's a wasted effort. ... I'm disappointed, angered but not to the point where you start pointing fingers. If anybody should have folded down the stretch, it should have been them (the Magic)."

Coach Phil Jackson said that when Jordan is hot, "we stand around and watch him. We become tentative and don't assert ourselves. The attention is away from their shots and it seems to affect the whole team."

At halftime, when the Bulls trailed 58-52 and Jordan had 31 points, Jackson pointed out the situation.

According to Jordan, Jackson warned the team that it couldn't expect Jordan to continue his scoring spree in the second half. "We have to get everybody involved. ... Step up and take your shots," Jackson said.

But when it was over, Jordan had taken a career-high 49 shots and converted 27, including 1 for 5 from 3-point range. He hit his first five shots in the game.

The Bulls' eight other players combined for 58 field goal attempts.

"When he was hot, I told him to go with the flow," Jackson said. "If it's not working, look for others. ... I don't know who to blame. I think we ran out of gas."

"I think we showed a lack of confidence in the end."

Nick Anderson's 3-point field goal with 1.4 seconds left in regulation tied the score at 112.

Orlando's Anthony Bowie shows one of the few moments a Magic player could get a hand on Michael Jordan Saturday night in Chicago.

121-118.

"We gave the game away," Jordan said. "I thought we had control of the game. We made some dumb plays down the stretch."

With 44 seconds left in regulation, Chicago led 111-105. "There is something wrong with that (blowing a six-point lead)," Jordan said. "It's embarrassing. ... You just can't write it off and forget about it."

It was the fifth time Jordan scored at least 60 or more points. In those games, the Bulls are 2-3. "Sixty-four points doesn't mean a thing when you lose," Jordan said. Jordan's career-high is 69 points, against Cleveland in 1990.

HAWAIIAN HUGHES — Iowa wide receiver Danan Hughes scampers past an unidentified Stanford player during Saturday's Hula Bowl in Honolulu. The 26-yard catch was the only one for Hughes on the day, while tight end Alan Cross caught one pass for five yards. Center Mike Devlin also took part in the All-Star game for the East, which fell short 13-10.

OSU, Gophers edge Iowa

Victory over defending NCAA champion Stanford highlights Christmas break.

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's gymnastics team opened its season in top form, claiming third place in the Windy City Invitational Saturday in Chicago and first place honors at the Spartan Invitational in San Jose Jan. 10.

Ohio State won the 12-team weekend tournament with a score of 272.250, edging out Minnesota's 271.650. The Hawkeyes finished with a score of 266.550. Michigan, Michigan State, Illinois, Kent State and Iowa State also competed.

"We had a lot of misses, especially on high bar," freshman Jay Thornton said Sunday. "But overall, I was pretty satisfied with the team score, especially this early in the season."

Garry Denk, a junior from Northbrook, Ill., took first place on still rings with a 9.75. Denk also finished second in the all-around with a score of 104.65 and fifth on the horizontal bar.

"Garry (Denk) had improved his routines over what he did in San Jose, especially on floor exercise and still rings," Coach Tom Dunn said.

Senior Don Brown was also one of five Iowa finalists, taking eighth place in the all-around with a 99.10, while a 9.35 put him in fourth place on floor exercise.

Senior Chris Kabat, out of Green Bay, Wis., was Iowa's top finisher on parallel bars with a 9.15, good enough for fifth place.

According to Dunn, the freshman class didn't perform as well as they did in California.

"They helped us here and there, but they just didn't do the great job they did at San Jose," Dunn said. "We tried some new stuff that maybe we should have held back. I'm not particularly concerned about it. It's just so early in the season and it's hard to be 100 percent consistent.

"There was a little more pressure at this meet and we never really had a chance to recover from San Jose," the Iowa coach added.

The Hawkeyes scored a 270.35 to put them in first place in San Jose, beating out a field which included defending NCAA champion Stanford. Other teams taking part included California, New Mexico, San Jose State, and California-

Garry Denk
Poly.

Thornton, out of Augusta, Ga., claimed the all-around title with a score of 102.10. Second place went to Brown with a 100.75 and Denk finished a close third, with a 100.70. Denk also placed third in the still rings, behind senior Adrian Besancon.

Freshman Aaron Cotter, from Lincoln, Neb., won first place on high bar with a 9.40.

"The freshmen did a real good job," Dunn said. "They were all in the finals in one or more events."

Iowa's next meet will be its home-opener Jan. 29 versus Iowa State and Oshkosh at 7 p.m.

Frosh Baker ties Hawk record on balance beam

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

Freshman gymnast Kim Baker had a strong performance for Iowa in the Shakespeare Invitational Sunday, tying the all-time school record on the balance beam with a 9.75 and placing her in a tie for first place with Missouri's Chrissy Harkey.

Baker was Iowa's top finisher in the all-around for the second meet in a row. A 37.65 gave the San Antonio native a third place finish.

The host Tigers won the Invitational for the third straight year with a score of 189.70. Iowa State came in second and Iowa placed third with a team total of 187.45 in the four-team tournament.

"It was an outstanding team effort," Coach Diane DeMarco said. "Our stamina is improving and we did a great job today."

A 9.75 on the uneven bars put junior Meredith Chang in a tie for first place with Pam Johnson of Towson State.

Freshman Shelly Burns placed third on bars and junior Barry Stengel placed third on vault, both with a 9.65.

The Hawkeyes opened their season with a fourth-place finish at the Ball State Cardinal Invitational Jan. 9.

Baker claimed the all-around title with a 36.80. Freshman Amy Bolton out of Schuylkill, Pa., placed fourth in the all-around.

"It was really great to see our all-arounders finish first and fourth," DeMarco said.

A 9.55 on vault put Baker in third place, while junior Jennifer Miernyk came in fourth with a 9.50.

Burns, out of Pasadena, Texas, captured third place on the vault.

"The team worked really well together, although we didn't finish as high as we should have," DeMarco said.

PRAIRIE LIGHTS

Silko to read from 'Almanac of the Dead'

Leslie Marmon Silko will read tonight at 8 at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

Jerry Roue
The Daily Iowan

Last year Leslie Marmon Silko published her latest book in hardcover, "Almanac of the Dead," and in December Penguin Books released it in trade paperback. The novel is an epic of revisionist America, a story of incredible scope about worlds and peoples around us, American Indians, whom we repeatedly fail to notice. Each character, each set of characters, is in desperate need of something; tangible or intangible, the sense has been taken from them, and they feel the need to tell their stories.

Silko, a recipient of a five-year MacArthur Fellowship grant, will read from "Dead" tonight at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., at 8.

Each story in "Dead," told in a careful weave of fragments and narratives, adds to the larger narrative of the novel. The story is filled with the pain and anger of an entire race, the American Indians, held hostage within their own lands, robbed of their history, their icons, their lands and their rights.

The different stories contained in the larger context of the novel are woven in the careful, elegant pace of storytelling only the finest masters of the novel can create and maintain. The different strands carefully tie together in the end, measured to perfection to complete an intricate pattern.

A rather large and violent debate seems to have risen about the meaning of the novel among critics. Without question, there is a great deal of anger toward whites — or more specifically, from one of Silko's characters, those of us with no history in this land. The argument can be made that the book and its sentiments are anti-white.

However, the counter-argument that the politics of the novel are not some crude form of counter-racism seems more valid. The enemies in the novel aren't just whites, but any destroyers who are excited by others' pain. The confusion derives from nearly all of these destroyers being white.

However you interpret the stories, don't discount the vision Silko offers us of time and place, which is essential to understanding American Indian culture, and the growing influence it has on culture in the Americas today. As my favorite character of the novel, Sterling, discovers, when you begin to live in the here and now and begin to pay attention to the world and its workings around you, you begin to see pieces of the past and more fully understand that the past is a living, active part of now. So, too, is the future. Tragedy, pain and destruction come from forgetting this.

"Almanac of the Dead" is Leslie Marmon Silko's first book in nearly a decade. It is full of violence, brutality and insanity, but also contains incredible vision, and the undeniable assertion that, either in violence or through peaceful motion, things in the Americas are about to change.

Pacino rules in 'Scent of a Woman'

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Can the cinematic world really take yet another film about an angry handicapped person coming to terms with a disability while teaching a too-complacent non-handicapped person What Life Is Really All About?

Apparently, so long as it avoids the most obvious traps. "Scent of a Woman," the new Al Pacino star-vehicle, is cast in a familiar mold, but for the most part veers clear of the schmaltziness and pomposity that often characterize the genre.

Pacino plays Frank Slade, an aging, cranky ex-Lt. Colonel who lost his Army career when he lost his sight. Chris O'Donnell plays Charlie Simms, a mealy-mouthed kid from Oregon attending a posh New Hampshire prep school on a scholarship. Simms, hoping to scrape together enough money to go home for Christmas, signs up to take care of Slade for a weekend, while the Colonel's niece and her family get away on vacation.

"Down deep, the man is a lump of sugar," the niece claims. If this is true, Slade shows no sign of it. On the surface, at least, he's an arrogant, rude, manipulative, cold-hearted sonuvabitch. It's obvious early on that Slade is angry and hurting due to his disability and its accompanying helplessness. He has been a brusque, take-charge type all his life, and now resents having to lean on anyone else. Thus he attempts to cover his own emotions by being as rude and cruel as possible.

With his family away, however, Slade has a perfect chance to execute a long-planned whirlwind sampling of pleasures in New York City, and he can't deny an occasional need for a guide. The easily-manipulated and intimidated Simms makes a perfect patsy.

The bulk of the film is caught up in the pas de deux between Simms and his "charge." Neither seems to like the other much, and both are caught up in their own problems; Simms is in trouble at school for a prank he witnessed, while Slade has an underlying motive for the New York City trip. Slade is abusive, Simms wary. The character dynamics are the central focus, but they're well-planned. Neither character is a hero; both are human. And both are played by good actors, making the slow unfolding of the story believable and interesting to watch.

"Scent" is at times a painful movie. Bitterness and black humor are the order of the day; self-hatred and uncertainty are equally prominent. This is not a feel-good film about triumphantly embracing physical limitations; it's about living with and around pain. The tension level is high from the moment Pacino appears onscreen.

Uncomfortable truths are not avoided in the characterizations — Slade is vicious, not petulant, while Simms is weak rather than altruistic. Writer Bo Goldman hasn't pulled his punches, and as a result, the film comes across as honest and cruel rather than manipulative, grim rather than cute. (The acting quality helps considerably.) Granted, the wrap-up is a little too perfect (and perhaps too protracted) but what comes before makes it worthwhile.

Taking an overused genre and bringing something interesting out of it is difficult, especially in an industry that has a habit of milking any successful concept for all it's worth. "Scent" manages. Which is in itself a triumphant overcoming of a handicap.

'93 films offer stars, low budgets

John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The first of 1993's movies — a collection of predictable sequels, costly star vehicles and low-budget offerings — arrived with a most unusual pairing: the Walt Disney Co. and cannibalism.

Disney on Friday released "Alive," an account of airplane-crash survivors who must either feed on dead passengers or perish in the Andes Mountains. In a rare though not unprecedented move, Disney and Paramount Pictures, normally bitter rivals, co-produced the film. Both studios held competing rights to the story, but the strange union was also motivated by concerns over production costs and its commercially risky theme.

Beyond "Alive," the upcoming film year will feature calculated fare from the likes of Tom Cruise, Eddie Murphy, Harrison Ford and Sylvester Stallone, and "Wayne's World" and "Hot Shots!" sequels.

And penny-pinching will be evident throughout, as "Alive" proves.

The domestic rights to the movie were awarded to Disney in a coin toss; Paramount will claim the international market.

Disney is trying to sell "Alive" as a heroic saga. Cannibalism, said Disney executive Dick Cook, "is not really what it's about. The feeling of the movie is much more spiritual than that."

Whatever the interpretation,

"Alive" as a business proposition reveals much about the entertainment industry, where revenues are slumping and international markets no longer are growing.

Like many other movies to be released this year, the modestly budgeted "Alive" (made for about $25 million) represents an alternative to soaring production and marketing costs of about $40 million a movie.

Universal Pictures, for example, says its 1993 releases will be on average 25 percent cheaper than its 1992 films, although its lineup includes Steven Spielberg's $60 million dinosaur story "Jurassic Park" (June 11).

"Obviously, if we're making 'Jurassic,' you spend," said Tom Pollock, chairman of the MCA Motion Picture Group, Universal's parent.

The studio's most profitable films last year, Pollock said, were not the extravagant "Far and Away" or Robert Redford in "Sneakers." Rather, they were "Fried Green Tomatoes," bought for about $4 million, and "Beethoven," produced for less than $20 million.

The challenge is to save money and not skimp on quality, he said.

"The audience will only go to see good films, period," Pollock said. "The audience doesn't care what the cost of the movie is. What the audience cares about is, 'Is it good?'"

Among Universal's budget offerings are John Goodman in "Matinee" (Jan. 29) and the horror film "Army of Darkness" (Feb. 12).

Of all the studios, Sony Pictures probably will release the most titles. Counting the company's TriStar and Columbia Pictures and the art divisions Sony Classics and Triumph Releasing, Sony will unveil about 40 films.

One of the highlights will be Anthony Hopkins and Emma Thompson in "The Remains of the Day" (Nov. 5), from Merchant Ivory Productions, makers of "Howards End" and "A Room With a View." The film probably will cost about $12 million and be a favorite for awards.

Without question, the year's cheapest release is Columbia's "El Miriachi" (Feb. 26). The border-town drama was made by writer-director Richard Rodriguez for an astonishing $7,000.

"You're trying to see people be sensible and prudent about their business," Jonathan Dolgen, president of Sony's Motion Picture Group, said in describing Sony's mix of 30 major releases and a dozen or so lower-priced features.

Among pricey works, the studio is banking on "The Last Action Hero" with Arnold Schwarzenegger (June 18), Martin Scorsese's "The Age of Innocence" (fall) and Sylvester Stallone's $75 million drama "Cliffhanger" (May 28).

Even though former television programmer Brandon Tartikoff has left Paramount, the studio's slate has his boob-tube hand prints all over it.

Chaos dominates 'Noises Off'

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Whoever said that hell was the impossibility of reason should take a look at the film adaptation of "Noises Off," now available on video cassette. There's a lot of things that you can screw up when attempting the impossible, but director Peter Bogdanovich and the all-star cast of this version of the Broadway farce by Michael Frayn don't miss a turn — except that, in the end, they're doing what can't be done.

"Noises Off" is a play that's almost impossible to do on stage, let alone on film (chalk one up for screenwriter Marty Kaplan, who sticks fairly close to the original script, avoiding even more confusion.) It's a play within a play, about actors within actors within very compromising positions, and the ruthless ways that they relate to each other.

It's surprising to find Peter Bogdanovich in the director's chair of such a broad comedy. Coming from the subtler waters of "Paper Moon" and "The Last Picture Show," he has a wonderful sense of control, and it's easy to see that on this one he has his hands full with all of the difficulties inherent in the most complex three-act farce since Watergate.

It's also obvious that Bogdanovich got smart to this early on, because as the film progresses, he relinquishes more control to his fine ensemble cast, and the true colors of the play begin to shine through.

Michael Caine is ascerbic as the play's neurotic director, presenting a twisted cross between Elia Kazan and Woody Allen. His hands are full dealing with his leading lady, played by Carol Burnett, who is surprisingly sedate until the last third of the film, when the story permits her to play her part with more viciousness, which is what she does best.

Best supporting nods go to Julie Hagerty as the tried and true stage manager and Christopher Reeve as, well, a handsome, winsome guy.

It's easy to like these characters, ruthless buffoons that they are, and once you become involved with their failed attempts to bring the play to life, the format and odd timing of the film take a back seat. You can begin to enjoy the machine-gun dialogue and appreciate the time that went into staging this son-of-a-bitch.

What it boils down to is simple: this is a story about the theater, and there are a lot of in-jokes that don't do well on the screen. The broadness of the humor nears slapstick, which works most of the time, but it can get tiring. And, in changing the ambiguity of the ending, Kaplan and Bogdanovich have taken away a little of the bitterness that made the play so fun.

"Noises Off" is highly recommended, if you haven't seen the play, and if you enjoy a good, fast-paced farce.
