Clinton taking aim at military ban on gays

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will move quickly to revoke the ban on homosexuals in the military, despite persistent grumbling from the Pentagon, officials said Thursday.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., said that Clinton will soon direct Defense Secretary Les Aspin to draw up an executive order formally lifting the ban.

In the interim, the president will order the military to stop asking recruits about their sexual orientation or discharging members of the armed services found to be gay, said Frank.

Tailhook victim files lawsuit

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The first woman to go public with the Tailhook scandal filed a lawsuit Thursday charging promoters and hosts knew previous gatherings of the Naval aviators had been drunken melees that degraded women.

At least 26 women say they were groped, fondled and sexually accosted during the San Diego-based Tailhook Association's September 1991 convention. Some say they were forced down a gauntlet of men lining a third floor hallway at the Las Vegas Hilton.

The lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court by Navy Lt. Paula Coughlin was the fifth to result from the scandal. Four women who were at the 1990 convention filed similar lawsuits last September.

Concealed handgun kills high-school student

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A powerful handgun taken to school by a teen-ager who feared gangs fired accidentally in a class Thursday, killing one student and wounding a second, police said.

The .357-caliber Magnum fired when a 15-year-old reached into his book bag, said police Detective Dennis Coyne. The bullet passed through one student's chest and struck and killed a 16-year-old boy at Fairfax High School.

The armed youth apologized to about 30 classmates and waited for police, teacher Charles Schwartz said. "I am sorry. I didn't mean to do it," students quoted the 15-year-old as saying.

Equality struggle remains an ideal, according to King

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Despite the passage of nearly 30 years since her famous father's "I Have a Dream" speech, his dream of equality for all humanity remains an ideal which people must actively pursue if it is to become reality, Yolanda King said Thursday night.

Speaking to a diverse audience in the packed Main Lounge of the Union, performing artist and activist King, daughter of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. and Coretta Scott King, reflected on "The Dream Is Still a Dream... The Dream Deferred."

"What happens to a dream deferred?" she asked. "Does it dry up like a raisin in the sun, or fester like a sore and then run? Does it stink like rotten meat? ... Maybe it just sags, ... or maybe, it explodes," she said, reciting the poetry of Langston Hughes.

Although the United States has made tremendous scientific advances, it is morally and spiritually on the verge of bankruptcy, King said.

"Though we have learned to fly in the air like birds, swim the seas like fish, we have not learned the simple art of living together as brothers and sisters," she said, using the words her father spoke in 1964.

Under the leadership of Martin Luther King Jr., the civil rights movement of the 1960s accomplished much and made it seem for

ABORTION BATTLE CONTINUES

Anniversary of Roe vs. Wade brings no answers

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Twenty years ago today the Supreme Court handed down the monumental Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion. While the anniversary of the landmark case may imply a celebration for abortion rights advocates, supporters on either side of the issue are not claiming victory.

Tom Cannon, president of the anti-abortion group Defenders for Life, said the anniversary will be a time to reflect and regroup.

"For us, this is a time to remember the preborn children that were killed because of abortion," he said. "It's a time to think back on the deaths and what we could have done and what we should have done, and it's a time to reflect on the unfortunate idea of abortion to begin with."

The group plans to hold a candlelight vigil in front of the Iowa City Planned Parenthood, 2 S. Linn St., Friday evening.

Meanwhile, local abortion rights advocates will mark the anniversary with a rally on the Pentacrest and an evening speakers' forum. The Emma Goldman Clinic, 227 N. Dubuque St., the first outpatient abortion clinic in the Midwest, will celebrate an additional milestone of 20 years of service.

Although she is encouraged by the Clinton administration's promise to repeal the "gag" rule on abortion counseling at federally-funded clinics and the proposed legislation of the Freedom of Choice Act, Sunita Mehta, community program assistant for the clinic, said she is concerned that access to abortion is dwindling.

"A law isn't a law until you have access," Mehta said, adding that the number of physicians performing or willing to perform abortions has gone down.

The abortion rights movement suffered another blow Jan. 13 when the Supreme Court ruled that a federal civil rights law — known as the Ku Klux Klan Act — cannot be enforced against protestors blocking entrances to abortion clinics.

Though he sees the recent Supreme Court ruling as a step in the right direction, Cannon said Clinton's election has put a damper on the anti-abortion advocates' movement. But he said he will never give up.

"For me it's simple: abortion is murder. But nothing's going to change until America starts thinking of unborn children as being as important as a one-year-old," he said. "It's going to be a constant battle — the pendulum might swing in our direction, but it will swing back in the other direction until this attitude is changed."

Jenny Wiers, also a member of Defenders for Life, agreed.

"There is a sense of the need to regroup. We lost a pro-life president and we're doing some self-evaluating," she said. "We're very aware of what we lost on Nov. 3. Now we don't have leadership in the White House that will represent us, but we do need to remember."

CEASE-FIRE BROKEN

Allied planes bomb Iraqi radar site

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton warned Iraq on Thursday he will brook no threats to allied aircraft patrolling the no-fly zones. He spoke after two U.S. warplanes fired at an Iraqi radar that had targeted them.

"We're going to stay with our policy," Clinton told reporters as he met with his senior staff on his first full day in office. "It is the American policy and that's what we're going to stay with."

The clash ended a brief respite in hostilities between Washington and Baghdad that began Tuesday when Saddam Hussein ordered a "cease-fire" in honor of Clinton's inauguration.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi News Agency quoted an unidentified official as denying that a radar had been turned on and claimed the U.S. planes' attack set a fertilizer storage area on fire and damaged crops. It also said Iraq is sticking to its cease-fire "despite the behavior of the U.S. plane, which was aggressive and provocative."

At the Pentagon, spokesman Lt.

Cmdr. Joseph Gradisher dismissed the Iraqi claim that no radar had been turned on.

"We stand by our report," Gradisher said.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, in remarks at the State Department, echoed Clinton's resolve.

"The United States intends to protect our pilots in the no-fly zone," Christopher said. "When their radar illuminates our pilots we are going to protect our pilots."

The new secretary said the Iraqis See IRAQ, Page 10A

PRESIDENT STARTS TERM

Clinton has busy 1st day in office

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On his first day in the Oval Office, President Clinton said Thursday, his administration would not flinch from military showdowns with Iraq following a fresh challenge. The Senate rushed approval of more of his Cabinet but hundreds of senior positions remained vacant.

After partying into the early hours after his inauguration, Clinton spent all morning greeting thousands of visitors to a White House open house. Well-wishers waited outdoors for hours on a cold winter day for a quick handshake and greeting from Clinton.

It was almost 1 p.m. before he paid his first visit to the Oval Office — just a quick look around before moving on to the Roosevelt Room for a meeting with senior aides.

Clinton told them, "We just have to be dominated by high standards and clear vision and we ought to have a good time doing it."

Meanwhile, his wife, Hillary, was checking out the Oval Office. In a break with tradition, she will have an office in the West Wing, the first time a first lady has had space there. A spokesman said she would be closely involved in developing Clinton's health-care program.

Day One brought the first break in the military cease-fire extended by Saddam Hussein as a goodwill gesture to the new president.

Pentagon officials said two U.S. warplanes fired on an Iraqi air defense site after it turned its radar on them — a precursor to possible firing. It was not clear whether it was an isolated incident or a calculated test of Clinton.

The new president said he was sticking with the Bush administration's policy, which called for instant strikes against belligerent forces and measured responses to violations of "no-fly" zones imposed in Iraq by gulf war allies.

"We're going to adhere to our policy," Clinton told reporters during a picture-taking ceremony with his staff. "We're going to stay with our policy. It is the American policy and that's what we're going to stay with."

Later, White House communications chief George Stephanopoulos said, "Everything right now is consistent with the previous practice, and President Clinton supports it."

On Capitol Hill, the Senate confirmed nine of Clinton's Cabinet members and five other top officers. Nevertheless, hundreds of senior positions remained open, some of them filled still by holdovers from the Bush administration.

Zoe Baird, Clinton's nominee for attorney general, faced growing public and congressional opposition over her hiring of illegal aliens for housework. Stephanopoulos said Clinton still believed she would be a good attorney general. He said he wasn't sure if she had discussed her situation with Clinton before he announced her selection, although she had disclosed it to transition officials.

There was an air of confusion as Clinton's new team — inexperienced in the ways of the White House — searched for telephone numbers, directions and a general plan of operation. Reporters were angry about restrictions on access to press offices that were always open in previous administrations.

Eager to begin putting his policies into effect, Clinton will move quickly to revoke the ban on homosexuals in the military, despite grumbling from the Pentagon, officials said. An executive order is expected within a week.

Clinton also plans to act today — the 20th anniversary of the Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion — on executive orders expanding abortion rights.

Other orders drafted for his signature would end restrictions on U.S.

POSSIBLE THREAT TO EPILEPTICS

Nintendo, Sega warn of seizure hazard

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

Video games just may be the latest product on store shelves to start coming with a warning label. Both the Nintendo and Sega have started including notices with their game cartridges warning epileptics that the games may trigger a seizure. Carol Levenson, in charge of public relations for Nintendo, was unavailable for comment Thursday, but company spokesman Takashi Kawaguchi issued a statement last week that said lawyers were working with Nintendo to phrase a warning that "won't cause misunderstanding, prejudice and fear."

At least one lawsuit has been filed against Nintendo in which a Michigan family is demanding $2.61 million in compensation for a seizure that was allegedly caused by a game.

"Certain patterns on the screens may affect people with epilepsy," said Phillip Reed, consumer service representative with Sega. He explained that Sega started including the notices on all games starting with the introduction of Sonic The Hedgehog 2.

"If it's proven, then I definitely approve of the warnings," said Chris Cartano, a UI senior studying theater.

"It's kind of the same as a pack of cigarettes then," Cartano said. "You read the warning and play at your own risk."

Cartano said he hadn't seen any of the notices yet.

Dr. Richard Fincham, a UI professor of neurology, explained that seizures caused by patterns in video games would be categorized as reflex epilepsy.

"They can be triggered by external stimuli such as flicker," said

Fincham. He added that seizures "are ordinarily just unfortunate interferences in people's daily lives."

Fincham said that this type of seizure wasn't very common and that he had never seen any cases triggered by video games.

EXCELLENCE IS APPARENT

Rawlings acknowledges vigor, diversity of UI

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Impressed with a "spirit of cohesiveness" at the UI, President Hunter Rawlings spoke at the Joint Service Club Luncheon Thursday at the Highlander Inn in his "State of the University Address."

Rawlings said that it is difficult to truly measure what goes on in a classroom.

"The public often does not see the hidden uncountable efforts put forth by the faculty, such as preparing classes, advising students and going over papers," he said.

Rawlings said he receives letters from parents all the time telling him how much it means to them to send their children to the UI.

"The parents really recognize the excellence when they hear it from their kids," he said.

Aside from academics, Rawlings said he was also impressed with UI arts events.

"How can you place a price tag on being in Iowa City when you have something like the world premiere of the Joffrey Ballet's 'Billboards'?"

"The public often does not see the hidden uncountable efforts put forth by the faculty..."

at Hancher with music by Prince?" he asked. "Arts writers from all over the world will be in Iowa City because it's coming here first."

Rawlings said arts events at the UI also have a great impact because they help create interaction with the community.

"We are all involved with each other because we're so close," he said.

He cited the effort to control a possible meningitis outbreak as an example of working together to accomplish a great feat.

"In a matter of days our whole campus was able to mobilize itself," he said. "Not only did our own staff nurses help out, but nursing students and volunteers from the community were there.

Many simply showed up and said, 'I have a couple of hours free; what can I do to help?'"

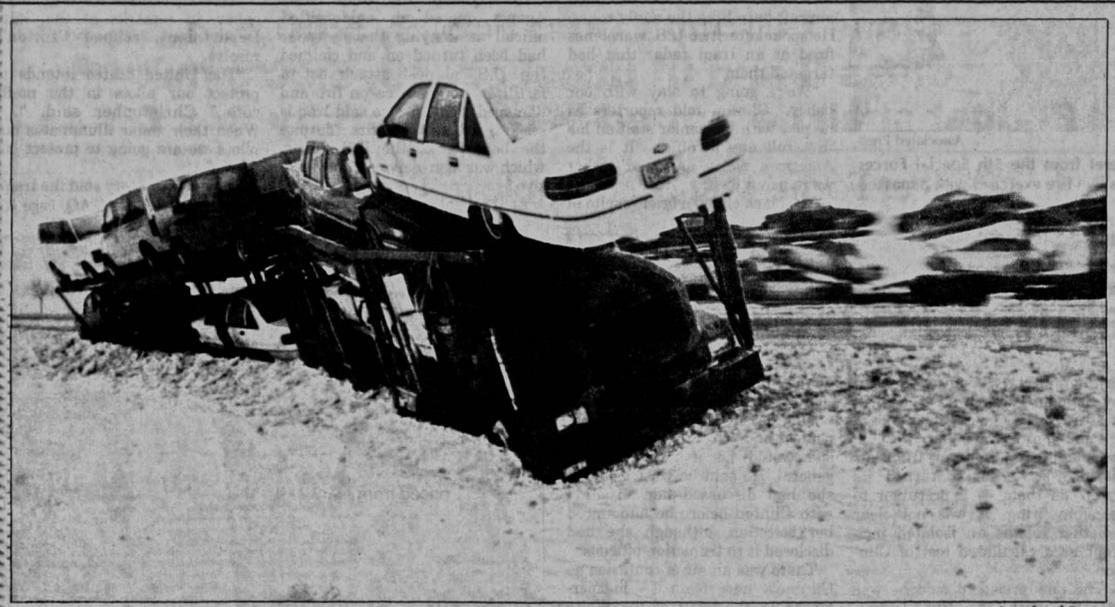

He said there were no complaints about the service or about waiting in line. "Of course it helps when it's free," he added.

In light of the recent death of UI basketball star Chris Street, Rawlings said that attending funerals is a sad part of his job.

"But each time I attend one I have been enormously uplifted," he said. "When I see so many familiar faces I feel strength."

Rawlings said he does not attend funerals "out of duty or because of accomplishments of the deceased, but to mourn them as people — people whose lives have been woven into ours."

He added, "I want to thank all of you for contributing to the spirit here and the organization that is the University of Iowa."

PROFESSOR HONORED

Jean Jew award lauds women's rights battle

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

A new annual award which will honor outstanding effort and achievement in improving the status of women on campus was recently created by the UI Council on the Status of Women in honor of the accomplishments of UI anatomy Professor Jean Jew.

The council is currently accepting nominations for the Jean Y. Jew Women's Rights Award, which will be awarded later this spring, to be given in cooperation with the Women's Resource and Action Center.

Jew won a lawsuit against the UI two years ago in which she contended that she experienced sexual discrimination within her department and that the UI retaliated against her for pursuing the claims.

"Naming the award after Jean Jew is significant. We feel very strongly about her struggle in dealing with the harassment she had to endure," said Dee Casteel, the award's selection committee chairwoman. "She is a great symbol of hope. The fact that she won shows you can make a difference." Casteel said the award will go to a UI student, faculty or staff member who has worked hard supporting women's issues.

"It's an attempt on our part to acknowledge the hard work people have done. Through this awareness we hope to keep women's issues alive and to make progress," she said.

Jew said she is very pleased to have the award named after her, but added she won't have any input in the selection of the award recipient.

"My wish for the award is that it will encourage members of the UI community to speak out and to act on behalf of women's rights," she said. "The timing was opportune in that it started in the year of the woman. But it's not restricted to women. I hope it's the beginning of a long period when people care about the rights of others."

Nominees should have a strong record of support for women's rights and a commitment to women's rights at the UI, Casteel said.

INVESTIGATION CONTINUES

Cause of accident in Street case unclear

Investigators will not release details about the accident until they know more.

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

She was in the wrong place at the wrong time.

As the driver of a car involved in Tuesday night's accident that took the life of UI basketball star Chris Street, that is about all 59-year-old Thelma Fraunholtz is sure of.

In fact, that's about all many Johnson County officials are sure of after spending much of Thursday investigating the events that led up to the accident which has left much of the state of Iowa in mourning.

Although investigators said they will remain tight-lipped about the accident until all the details are in, some things are now clear. According to Bob Saunders, an Iowa City insurance agent who was one of the first to arrive at the scene of the accident, Street's car was apparently struck broadside by a Johnson County snowplow. The car then flipped onto its roof, slid across the highway and hit Fraunholtz's car.

"It was hard to be there that night," he said. "You don't like to see this happen to anybody."

Saunders, who was traveling north on Highway 1 when the accident occurred, said he arrived at the scene of the accident seconds after it happened.

"There were no rescue or emergency people there when I got there," Saunders said. "It appeared that he had died instantly."

"At that point, nobody knew it was Chris Street," he said. "It was only some time later that there was a positive identification made."

Saunders, who has since learned more about the accident because he is an employee of First Insurance Center Ltd. — which provides insurance for Johnson County snowplows — said skid marks left by the snowplow show there was very little time for Street to react before impact.

"The snowplow was almost on top of Street's car when he pulled out," Saunders said. "There appears to have been little, if any, time for Street to react. There was not even time for a horn to sound."

Investigators have not yet determined if Street saw the plow and misjudged the distance between it and his car, or whether he simply did not see the plow at all.

Saunders, who approached the scene of the accident from the south, from the same direction Street would have been looking, said that although it was dark out, visibility was clear for between one-quarter and one-half mile up Highway 1.

"There was plenty of sight distance from the point of the accident," Saunders said. "There was no fog or smog."

Reports from the accident also indicate that all three vehicles had their lights on.

Investigators will continue to examine the scene and interview those involved in the accident in the days to come. The driver of the snowplow, Charles Pence, 28, of Iowa City, has been advised by his insurance company not to talk to reporters.

According to Saunders, in a preliminary interview Kimberly Sue Vinton, Street's girlfriend who was a passenger in the car, said she did not see anything prior to the crash.

Fraunholtz said she remembers little before Street's car hit hers. "I feel very sorry for everyone involved; for the living and for the Chris Street family," she said.

New committee will advocate campus diversity

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings announced this week plans to form a Strategic Planning Committee on Diversity. The committee will be charged with making specific plans to implement the UI's diversity goals as reported in its Strategic Planning Report.

The new committee is part of an ongoing effort at the UI to examine conditions on campus for women and minorities, UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said.

"One of the things the committee will do is talk about the climate at the university, and whether women and minorities can feel comfortable about opportunities for advancement," Rhodes said.

Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs Greg Williams said the committee will look at the diversity goals as outlined in the strategic planning report and offer their opinions.

"The diversity committee will take a look and see if the goals are workable and feasible," Williams said. "They'll see what we can do and what we can't."

The group will be formed of senior administrators, faculty, staff and the student body, and should be named and working in the next couple of weeks.

The committee will also be ready to hear a variety of viewpoints, Williams said.

"Constituencies with direct concerns will have the opportunity to meet with the committee and talk about diversity," Williams said.

At their December meeting, some members of the Iowa state Board of Regents blasted the UI for having a lack of women and minority tenured or tenure-track faculty members.

Rhodes said, however, that this committee has been in the planning stages for some time.

"We've been talking for several months about what we ought to be doing," she said.

The duties of the committee on diversity will include advising the university administration, individual departments and programs as to their procedures regarding diversity. They will also serve as a consultant body for a number of university offices and conduct seminars and forums on diversity issues.

There is not a specific time frame for the committee, Rhodes said.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

Members seek way to replace money

They discussed future financial problems.

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School Board met in an informal work session Thursday night to discuss short- and long-range school finance questions that the board will need to address in the future.

Most of the evening's discussion centered on ways to replace state-advanced funding dollars lost when the state eliminated them last year.

Advanced funding refers to an amount of tax dollars school districts received from the state based on the number of students budgeted in the district for the next year.

The loss of the state funds resulted in an unexpected loss of $983,000 for this year's budget.

Under a proposal by Superintendent Barb Grohe, that money would be used in this fiscal year to cover such items as $442,000 to add fax machines, computers and other technology in each of the schools and $193,000 for individual schools "to address needs as they're identified by them."

Grohe added that the proposal would not allow for innovation.

"We're not yet at the point where we're doing anything creative or exciting," she said.

The state will allow the district to levy additional property taxes for one year to replace the amount of state funding lost. Three scenarios were proposed by Director of Administrative Services Jerry Palmer.

The first scenario would have the district levying $500,000 in property taxes, about 25 cents per $1,000 of valuation as it has done for the past 14 years, as well as an additional one-time levy of $983,000 representing another 51 cents per $1,000 of valuation.

The second plan would have the district levy the current $500,000 plus an additional $420,000. The other $63,000 would come out of existing cash reserves.

The third plan has the district levying only the regular $500,000 and taking $483,000 out of existing cash reserves.

Board members were unable to reach a consensus on the preferred plan. No official action on any of the plans could be taken at the work session, but is on the schedule for the regular Jan. 26 board meeting. The proposal must be approved before the district submits its budget to the state on March 15.

OTHER TOWNS' COSTS INCREASE

Survey says IC gas prices low for Iowa

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

Returning UI students have been able to enjoy lower prices at the gasoline pumps, while gas prices in other major Iowa towns are going up or remaining constant, according to an Iowa Department of Natural Resources survey.

"Gas prices jump around too much," said Brian Roth, a UI senior accounting major who was taking advantage of the low prices Thursday at an Iowa City service station. He added, "I like it down where it's at."

"They've gone down quite a bit," noted Corydon Coppola, a UI sophomore business major who was also capitalizing on reduced gasoline costs at a local station.

The monthly statewide self-serve unleaded gasoline price survey of 60 service stations by the Iowa DNR compared prices from Dec. 15 to Jan. 15.

The survey indicated while average gas prices increased 10 cents in Sioux City — $96 per gallon to $1.06 — and remained at $97 in Des Moines, Iowa City was the only large Iowa town to show a decrease, dropping five cents — $1.08 to $1.03.

DNR Energy Data Analyst Susan White said several factors could account for the non-uniform drop in Iowa City prices.

White explained that prices offered to retailers by oil refiners constantly vary due to fluctuations in world crude oil prices.

"It could be that in Iowa City a lot of stations happened to have purchased fuel when prices were low," White said.

Often, she said, service stations will sell gasoline at a price where they will break even or lose money in hope of generating profits through other areas such as selling food or simply to keep their customer base.

David Folk, a spokesman for Amoco Oil Company in Oakbrook, Ill., said price competition between stations could also account for the drop.

"The street price that's being put out there by competitors is usually the biggest factor," Folk said.

According to Folk, owners of Amoco stations set their own prices to compete in their market while receiving some "general types of business consulting."

Ed Kistenmacher, the managing director of the Iowa Trade Association of Petroleum Marketers in Des Moines, said, "Every town has its own competitive quirks. So the markets react differently."

One factor, Kistenmacher explained, is the volume of gasoline different service stations sell. He said stations in larger markets such as Des Moines might sell as much in a month as stations in smaller markets sell in a year.

Another factor Kistenmacher mentioned is competition with other states. He said Council Bluffs is often affected by the Nebraska market, where gas taxes are higher than Iowa taxes, while towns in southern Iowa may be affected by Missouri taxes which are lower.

Stacy Crouch, a UI third-year law student, commented, "I think prices are a little bit lower than when I left for break."

PRICE CUTS RETURN

Ongoing fare wars threaten airline industry

Jude Sunderbruch
Business Editor

The bloodletting of the U.S. airline industry continued this week as America West initiated yet another round of fare reductions — a cut being matched by competitors with little choice but to lower their prices or watch their market shares slowly evaporate.

Wednesday's cuts, with fares up to 33 percent lower than regular prices, are being criticized by many in the industry as a repetition of last summer's fare wars.

Barbara Beyer, president of Arlington, Va.-based aviation consulting firm AVMARK, Inc., said another price war is the last thing the already devastated industry needs.

"It's just disastrous. All this activity is being led by the carriers who are hungriest in terms of cash flow," she said.

America West, one of several major carriers operating under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, was unrepentant about the price cut, saying it was a good move for consumers and would raise the airline's revenue by increasing the volume of traffic it carries.

"The fare savings that were announced yesterday were a continuation of the earlier fare promotions," said Mike Mitchell, a spokesman for America West.

He said the extension was made because the previous sale announced earlier in the month had gone well.

"It's stimulated travel during a soft trading period," said Mitchell.

Bobby Harper, a spokesman for Delta Airlines, said his airline had no choice but to match the lower fares.

"We're responding in the markets in which we compete with them," he said.

Delta, United and American Airlines are widely regarded as the carriers most likely to survive the current shake-out intact. But even the "big three" have had to face hard times recently.

In the past month almost all of the nation's major carriers announced that 1992 was one of the worst years on record, and there isn't much to look forward to this year.

The airlines' troubles started during the Persian Gulf War when high fuel rates and the recession drove many carriers into bankruptcy. Operating under Chapter 11 protection, the bankrupt carriers undercut larger carriers to maintain the cash flow they needed to survive.

According to Beyer, this drags the whole industry to fare levels lower than costs, and the "vicious cycle" continues again and again, with even the most powerful airlines struggling.

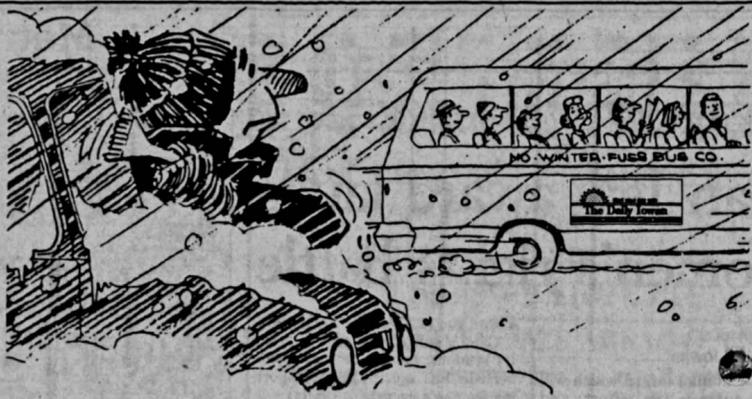

"We're going to record another dismal, dismal year," Harper said.

Beyer said the industry has no choice but to start raising fares. She said most consumers are willing to pay higher fares anyway, noting that two-thirds of the passengers who took advantage of the fare wars last summer had already purchased tickets and were just cashing them in to receive the lower prices.

"As somebody said, there's too many seats chasing too many fannies. There's just too much capacity out there," Harper said.

Northwest Airlines will also respond to the price cuts, according to Doug Miller, a spokesman for the Minneapolis-based carrier, which just began a partnership with KLM Royal Dutch Airlines. He said that while Northwest understood the need to stimulate travel during the slow winter months, there is a fine line between stimulation and altering the laws of supply and demand.

"If it's too deep, if it's below where an airline can make a profit, then it's damaging to everyone in the industry," he said.

Bureau offers car-repair tips to consumers

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

Cringing as you pull to a stop on the icy street, you decide it's time to quit trying to ignore that grinding noise in your car's brakes. To avoid getting charged for unnecessary repairs, take some time to learn the basics of automobile repair.

Joyce Holthouser, operations coordinator of the Better Business Bureau of the Quad Cities, said people should shop around to find the best estimate for necessary repairs.

"If you're not educated in auto mechanics, keep it to yourself," Holthouser said, explaining that some mechanics will insist on unnecessary repairs if they suspect the consumer won't know the difference.

Consumers should stay near the car while the mechanic is working on it, to make sure only authorized repairs are being made. If the car is still drivable, Holthouser recommends getting a second opinion before authorizing any repairs.

Kristine Heykants/The Daily Iowan

Keeping up with scheduled maintenance checks may minimize costly repairs down the road.

Ask for a written estimate of the parts and labor cost, Holthouser warned, and look for mechanics who have voluntarily certified themselves with The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence.

She added the mechanic should seek permission before making any repairs included on the estimate and be willing to explain all of the work done.

"Never hesitate to ask questions," she said.

Holthouser said it is most important for consumers to take the time to find a good mechanic and follow the maintenance schedules in their car manuals.

If dissatisfied with repairs, consumers should first try to work out the problem with the mechanic. If they are unable to reach an agreement, the consumers then can file a complaint with the Better Business Bureau, which attempts to mediate. They can also file suit in small claims court or the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's office.

Fraud discovered in collection of benefits

Jude Sunderbruch
Business Editor

Cheating the government out of unemployment benefits can be a fast track to fines, probation and even jail time, according to officials at the Iowa Department of Employment Services.

The department recently released the names of 14 individuals from Iowa and Wisconsin who were found guilty in separate cases of illegally collecting job insurance benefits. The fraud incidents were discovered through the efforts of the DES fraud unit and involved improperly collected benefits ranging from $516 to $4,092.

There were 5,300 cases of fraud overpayment in Iowa in the year ending Sept. 30, 1992, according to Gary Douglas, a spokesman for DES.

Douglas said almost all of the cases involve individuals who continued to receive benefits after they found substantial employment.

"People are receiving money they shouldn't be," he said.

According to DES rules, after a person starts to make more than a quarter of the amount of their weekly benefit checks, the government will start reducing the size of the benefits paid.

If an individual gains employment that pays them the same amount as their benefits plus at least $15 more, the benefits will be cut off altogether, Douglas said.

Although there are a variety of exceptions and special rules, newly unemployed workers are generally eligible for 26 weeks of unemployment benefits. The size depends on previous wages and number of dependents. Most weekly checks are about $200.

During the recession the federal government extended benefits for another 13 weeks for some workers.

According to Tom Bullington, manager of the local Job Service branch, his office has little to do with tracking down those who are out to defraud the government.

"We wouldn't have anything to do with the fraud cases unless someone calls us with a suspicion and then we pass that on for investigation," he said.

According to Douglas, most fraud is discovered through computer checks of benefit and employment records.

"We do a computer cross-match between the weeks of unemployment claims and the wages that employers report to the Department of Employment Services," he said.

Although the majority of frauds are initially discovered through the computer checks, occasionally a tip that someone is cheating the government will come in, said DES investigator Neil Anderson.

"We do get a lot of anonymous tips from ex-friends and lovers and so on," he said.

After a computer picks up a possible discrepancy or a tip is offered, one of 10 state investigators, like Anderson, is assigned to the case. After taking the individual's statement and examining other relevant facts in the case, the investigator will issue a legal decision.

If it's determined that no fraud was intended, the benefits recipient has only to repay the excess funds. If, on the other hand, the investigator believes fraud has occurred, the DES can pursue the case.

RESTRICTIONS DECREASE

Clinton to overturn 'gag rule'

Clinton plans to end restrictions on abortion counseling in federally funded clinics.

Christo...er Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Abortion foes will assemble near the White House today for their annual march on the Supreme Court. But for the first time in 12 years, rather than being emboldened by a president's words, they will be set back by his deeds.

President Clinton will mark today, the 20th anniversary of legal abortion in America, by revoking his predecessors' restrictions on abortion counseling at federally supported clinics.

In contrast, both Presidents Reagan and Bush annually delivered, by telephone hookup, messages of support for the anti-abortion marchers.

Clinton's scheduled action today, striking down what he and other critics have called the "gag rule," was celebrated in advance Thursday by congressional leaders and the pro-choice movement.

But "it's a real insult, a real slap in the face of Americans who hold pro-life views," said Nancy Myers, communications director of the National Right to Life Committee. "He's going to be signing a death warrant for unborn children."

"Hopefully the country in the next four years won't go down so far that we can't pull it back up," added Bob Jewitt, a spokesman for Operation Rescue, which stages blockades at abortion clinics nationwide.

Pro-choice advocates, however, couldn't be happier.

"This year we've turned the corner," declared Kate Michelman, president of the National Abortion Rights Action League. "Last year, we were battle-fatigued. We were losing ground steadily day in and day out."

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said "The most important victory in the last 20 years (since the court's Roe vs. Wade decision) is the election of Bill Clinton."

Clinton's nominee to run the Department of Health and Social Services, Donna Shalala, attended NARAL's champagne brunch Thursday just hours before she was confirmed by the Senate.

"I'm here because I'm a friend," she explained.

Reagan and Bush repeatedly vetoed legislation aimed at easing restrictions on federal funding for abortions and used executive orders as blocks to fetal tissue research, abortions in military hospitals and funding for overseas population control programs.

Clinton is expected to sweep away most of the restrictions he can with executive orders, and leaders of the anti-abortion movement are resigned to losing those battles. Aside from striking down the rule against abortion counseling today, his future orders are likely to include approval of the morning-after abortion pill from France, RU-486, administration officials have said.

"Our cause is going to be in the basement immediately," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., a longtime advocate of federal restrictions on abortion. "I am depressed at the fact that abortion will become like a visit to the dentist or a vaccination."

Abortion foes instead will concentrate instead on stopping Congress from passing the Freedom of Choice Act, which would sharply curtail the ability of states to impose abortion restrictions of their own.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, promised Thursday to reintroduce the legislation shortly.

"We are not going to be intimidated, and we will go right to the gates of the White House to continue to fight for children's lives," said the Rev. Patrick Mahoney, director of the Christian Defense Coalition.

Abortion protesters were already out in force Thursday. Nine were arrested in Washington D.C. as protesters staged a blockade at one clinic and held a prayer vigil outside the Planned Parenthood headquarters.

And police projected at least 50,000 would participate in today's annual anti-abortion march from the White House to the Supreme Court commemorating the anniversary of the Roe vs. Wade decision.

Anti-abortion leaders say they hope their new opposition in the White House will only energize their cause.

"Most Americans are still very uncomfortable with abortion on demand," said Gary Bauer, president of the Family Research Council and a former Reagan White House official.

"As the new administration tries to get the government back in the business of subsidizing abortions... they're going to find themselves with significant political problems," he predicted.

HOMECOMING POSTPONED

U.S. troops delayed in Somalia

George Esper
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Some American troops the United States had hoped to pull out of Somalia before or soon after President Clinton's inauguration could remain until as late as March, a U.S. military spokesman said Thursday.

Marine Col. Fred Peck said no timetable could be set until the U.N. Security Council adopts a resolution necessary to transfer control of the U.S.-led relief operation to a U.N. peacekeeping force.

The United Nations also must name a commander and determine the rules of engagement, including under what conditions U.N. peacekeepers can open fire.

The lawlessness of this nation was demonstrated once again Thursday when a Chinese reporter was seriously wounded and his Somali driver killed by roving gunmen. American troops have fired freely to protect themselves, but U.N. troops usually face restrictions.

In New York, the U.S. Mission to the United Nations urged the Security Council to begin the preparations for a transfer of power.

The European Parliament, meeting in Strasbourg, France, called on the world body to draw up a "Marshall Plan for Somalia" to rebuild the country.

More than 1,100 Marines returned home to Camp Pendleton, Calif., earlier this week, most of them from the 3rd Battalion, 9th Marine Regiment, in the first withdrawal of U.S. forces since they landed last on Dec. 9.

Peck said he did not foresee another withdrawal at this time.

He said that by the end of January the conditions would be acceptable to the U.S. military to turn over the security of some humanitarian relief work. But U.N. officials have indicated this could not be accomplished by then. So far, draft texts for a U.N. resolution are not even being circulated.

Other U.S. sources said U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali apparently wanted to deal with the new administration of Clinton and get his feeling on things. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

A U.S.-led coalition of 20 nations has been trying to secure and rebuild Somalia from a famine and civil war that claimed 350,000 lives last year. Another 2 million are considered at risk.

Peck said that once a U.N. resolution is adopted and the rules of engagement set, it would take U.S. forces two weeks to complete the transfer of military control. Then would come redeployment or, in layman's terms, sending the troops home.

"We've got a redeployment plan but we need about five days to start it," said Peck. "And that redeployment plan takes six to eight weeks, maybe longer, depending upon a lot of conditions over which we don't have control, like weather and aircraft availability and ships getting in here."

"Since we haven't gotten a resolution from the U.N. yet, I can't put an end date on it. ... It's physically impossible to quickly withdraw."

Peck said not all American troops would be leaving.

"We've already said we'll be here with some presence," he said. The United States is expected to provide logistics and headquarters support to the U.N. peacekeeping force.

The withdrawal of the Marines trimmed their strength in Somalia to 8,731 and cut the number of American forces to 23,533. There are another 12,098 troops from 20 other nations.

Up to 20,000 U.N. peacekeepers are eventually expected to take over.

Peck said the primary remaining threat in Somalia is banditry, "the isolated incidents of individuals beyond anyone's formal control."

He spoke after a Chinese reporter was seriously wounded and his Somali driver killed when four gunmen armed with AK-47 rifles hijacked their car Wednesday night within 400 yards of U.S. Marine positions.

Liu Jiang, a correspondent for the Xinhua News Agency, was taken to a Swedish field hospital where surgeons were able to save his left knee, which was shattered by a bullet.

Liu, his driver and a bodyguard were returning from the daily U.S. military briefing to Liu's hotel when a car speeding from the opposite direction blocked their path.

As Liu's driver tried to pass the gunmen, four of them got out and shot him five times in the back. Liu, who was sitting in the front passenger seat, was hit in both legs. He and his bodyguard rolled out of the car.

PRESIDENTIAL PARDON

Memo to: G. Bush
fr: T. Hudson
re: Thanks

On behalf of what has been dubbed the "13th Generation," I would like to thank you for nothing; thank you for a future so drab that we will probably be stuck wearing earth tones until well into the millennium; thank you for squandering any faint notion of faith in our government's knowing right from wrong; thank you for whittling away the economy; and especially thank you for legitimizing racism, sexism, homophobia, xenophobia, broccoli-phobia and recreational showering with a canine.

Now George, this isn't meant to ignore any of your successes during your tenure in the Oval Office. Without you and your strong-arm military thickheadedness we would have never been able to spend millions upon millions of taxpayers' dollars securing that friend / foe Manuel Noriega back in the winter of '89. Do you remember Christmas that year, George? You were riding high

Maybe we were just too young for your wisdom and reasoning, or it could have been that you were just a liar and had an over-inflated sense of manliness.

realizing that at the drop of your hat you could get highly-trained, war-ready Marines to march into a small Third World country and play some good old American rock 'n' roll at ear-deafening volume to procure some tortilla flour. Those were the days, huh?

After that first fix of military might, you were hooked. First it was that Iraq / Kuwait thing, then Somalia, cleverly under the guise of the U.N., and just like a junkie cut off from a dealer, you had to get one more self-satisfying dose of power before the fairy tale was finally over.

I think the problem was that we never really understood you, George. Maybe we were just too young for your wisdom and reasoning, or it could have been that you were just a liar and had an over-inflated sense of manliness. We trusted you back in '88. We figured that after hiding Reagan's memory, you couldn't be that bad. But then the halcyon began to take hold, synapses misfired and the constituency was an afterthought. You reneged on taxes, apologized and blamed it on the Democrats. You reneged on education, apologized and blamed it on the Democrats. You reneged on the environment, apologized and blamed it on the Democrats. You reneged on the national debt, apologized and blamed it on — who else — the Democrats. It wasn't that they didn't deserve some of the responsibility of those failed policies, but you were the president, not some sniffing brat whining about not getting his way.

Coming of age in the hedonistic '80s didn't help your image with us, I suppose. We weren't ready for the future you had planned for us, but we'll survive. That's the one thing you have taught us; survival of the fittest, play hardball all the time and never look back.

Before you hand the keys over to Bill and Hillary, tell them to keep a keen look out over their shoulders. And give Millie a scrub behind the ears for me.

Inauguration removes 'elect' from title

Please allow me to preface this article by stating that while I voted Democrat in November, I am certainly not one of them. I consider myself to be an independent who holds predominantly liberal views. That being said...

President Clinton. Those words will take some getting used to; for my entire voting life, those among us with moderate to liberal political philosophies have had to contend with the looming sense that the man in the White House was The Enemy.

We're used to education presidencies which — far from aiding the cause of education — refused to even stop slashing federal education expenditures. We're used to an "environmental" presidency which has worked ceaselessly to render initiatives designed to protect the environment — initiatives such as those pursued at last year's Earth Summit — functionally impotent. We're used to a president (and a grown man, for that matter) who, as his campaign lagged in the polls, took to the practice of calling Senator Al Gore, Jr. "Ozone Man" for his (Gore's) environmental concerns. We're used to a lovable old muppet of a president — I speak of George's predecessor — who escaped Iran-Contra charges by more or less pleading senility (and we're used to rantings from the right about what a hero that happy-go-lucky goofball was).

But these level-headed cheerleaders for conservative thought number among those whose collective knee jerks so violently (and predictably) as to call daily via Rush Limbaugh's syndicated radio show for the leveling of charges of treason against President Clinton.

Many of us who are twentysomethings and thirtysomethings watched the inauguration day's events (as encapsulated by CNN) and much of inauguration evening's activities to our amusement. There was the President of the United States of America, jamming out a sax solo (admittedly, not the most polished sax solo ever broadcast), on stage with Benny King. And despite the fact that an appearance of the president playing a sax was a widely predicted inaugural likelihood, it was satisfying just knowing that somewhere out there the stiff and the staunch were fuming over the looseness and informality of it all.

And while we watched the festivities surrounding the inauguration of our generations' first hint of representation in the White House in over a decade, we were treated to appearances by the First and Second Couples on MTV. While enthusiasm over such an occurrence may seem a bit fannish, just try to envison a voluntary presidential appearance on MTV at any time during the past 12 years. Ronald Reagan with — what? — bongos, perhaps (surely nothing difficult to remember how to play)? George Bush reliving his inaugural guitar jam on MTV? The idea is in itself laughable, because it could not have happened. The sheer informality of it all would send true conservatives into a frenzy on grounds of immorality.

The right, feeling perhaps a bit stung by all this at-ease nonpomp and circumstance, are probably just that much less relaxed now that Bill Clinton has actually taken office. People like Congressman Bob Dornan (who to this day insists that our new president undertook a clandestine rendezvous with the KGB while on a trip through Europe during college a few decades back, despite having publicly admitted that he — Dornan — had absolutely no evidence for making that charge in the first place) have spent the past few months attacking the Clinton administration before that administration was even named! To some, this new president will never be given the chance to prove himself. The highly religious grandparents of one friend of mine have informed her of their personal belief that Clinton is the Antichrist. Seriously.

Can't trust them damn commies!

In the worst-case scenario for Clinton supporters, the president would merely prove his detractors right about his party's initiatives. To these people and others who for whatever reason do not support President Clinton, the best we can do is ask that they at least give the man a chance, and remember the effectiveness of the Reagan and Bush "trickle down" theory and what it has helped to do to America's economy with the words used by one columnist during the election: "We've been trickled on long enough."

Some options would allow United States to send Serbs a message

The most telling fact about the disintegration of Yugoslavia has been the utter predictability of each stage of the butchery.

Indeed, the war has evolved in an almost mechanical fashion. The Yugoslav economy collapsed piecemeal throughout the 1980s, with the level of ethnic hate rising exponentially as the economic nationalisms of the republics gave way to the blood-and-soil kind. By 1988 Belgrade-based diplomats and journalists were filing reports — that went largely unread — about Slobodan Milosevic's potential for great violence. In 1989 the Yugoslav Communist Party began fracturing along ethnic lines. The moment that process was completed, as if on cue, civil conflict resumed after a 45-year hiatus caused by the historical interruption of communism.

The fighting has followed an unrelenting north-to-south course. Milosevic's Serbs attacked Slovenia first, hoping to frighten the Croats into submission without the need for a Serb-Croat war. When that failed, the Serbian army moved south to bludgeon Croatia. But nobody in the region had any doubt who was to be next on Milosevic's menu.

In fact, as soon as the Serbs had eaten their territorial fill of Croatia, they used the United Nations to arrange a cease-fire. This enabled them to redeploy in Bosnia and perpetuate the worst atrocities Europe has seen since the Nazi Holocaust. At some point this winter, perhaps after Sarajevo has fallen and the Serbs have conquered and "cleansed" all the territory in Bosnia they require, the Serbs will again adhere to U.N. cease-fire demands. Then watch out.

It is the Albanian populated region of south Serbia, Kosovo, and the adjacent transnational region of Macedonia that are the true ancient homelands of the Serbs, where the medieval Serbian kingdom was born and grew to greatness: Prishtina and Skopje were capitals of the Nemanjic dynasty in the 14th century, 200 years before Muslims even existed in Bosnia. Although Milosevic may have many enemies in Belgrade on account of his policy in Bosnia, there has always been more unanimity among Serbs when it comes to fighting Albanians and Slavic Macedonians, whose Orthodox Christian patriarchate is not even recognized by the Serbian clergy.

Since 1981 Albanian militants have been battling Serbian troops in the streets of Kosovo. Recent visitors to the region report that tension is so high that the smallest incident could ignite a full-scale Albanian uprising that would allow the Serbs to begin their ethnic cleansing of Kosovo: a much easier task to accomplish than in Bosnia, since the international border with Albania, over which these ethnic Albanians could be driven, is only a few miles away. Turkey, whose government is under strong popular pressure to intervene to help fellow Muslims in former Yugoslavia, has intimated that a Serb advance into Kosovo would be a casus belli. This, of course, would play into the hands of Milosevic, an expert at whipping up popular frenzy against the ghosts of Serbia's past, principal of which is the tyranny of the Ottoman Turkish sultans. A Serbian-Albanian-Turkish war would risk involving Greece and Bulgaria, nations with strong historical sentiments concerning Macedonia.

In other words, the next southerly movement of the Yugoslav civil war could spark a military chain reaction throughout the region. The two Balkan wars of 1912 and 1913, involving no fewer than four nations, were both fought over Macedonia: the first to liberate Macedonia from the Turks, the second to liberate it from the Serbs. Unfortunately, the actions of the Bush administration, the Clinton people, and Lee Hamilton's House subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East have so far encouraged the expansion of the Yugoslav war into the century's third Balkan war. They have done this by accepting the advice of the Greek lobby not to recognize, nor even to provide economic aid to Macedonia, thereby indicating to Milosevic that the place he may invade next is one that the United States has no interest in defending.

The Greek population may be the most disoriented in the Balkans. The end of the Cold War, the rise of pan-Turkism in Central Asia, and the regional breakup of Iraq have all worked to increase dramatically the importance of Greece's archrival, Turkey. Meanwhile, with the collapse of the Warsaw Pact on Greece's northern border, Greece's own strategic position has diminished. Besides, the vulnerability Greeks feel regarding Turkey and the excesses of the Papandreu era have poisoned Greek politics and saddled the nation with a debt comparable to those of former Communist nations in Eastern Europe. While people such as the Bulgarians are embracing capitalism and the West as though they were a new religion, Greeks — who never experienced Communist rule, but did experience heavy-handed American tutelage and a right-wing military dictatorship — are less comfortable with the outcome of the Cold War. These insecurities have helped to incite the Greeks about Macedonia, a name that Greeks believe they own the patent on. Though it appears that Greek Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis would like to reach some sort of a compromise on this issue, his one-seat majority in Parliament allows him no leeway. The Greeks do not want to invade Macedonia, but they would silently nod in approval if the Serbs did (the present border is not what they object to, provided the territory of it were called Serbia, and not Macedonia). And if the Serbs invaded, it goes without saying that large-scale atrocities would follow. However, there are ways in which Washington can send a strong signal to the Serbs against invading Kosovo and Macedonia, while reassuring our Greek allies that the use of the term Macedonia by the Serbs does not mean a claim on Greek territory.

The issue is not so much recognition as military and economic protection. Thus, in addition to arming the Bosnian Muslims, the international community could station U.N. troops in Prishtina and/or Skopje, thus establishing a trip wire against Serbian expansionism. Aid could also be pumped into Kosovo and Macedonia, whose destitution has only weakened them against a Serbian onslaught. All this could be done without leaving the issue of de jure recognition of Macedonia — which the Greeks oppose — to a later date, when there is a government in Athens with more parliamentary maneuverability.

The Bush administration has at least served notice that a Serbian move into Kosovo could lead to U.S. intervention. President Bill Clinton, however, has pulled a "Clinton" by speaking out in favor of opposing the Serbs in Bosnia on the one hand, and on the other hand refusing to deal with the Macedonians so as not to antagonize the Greek lobby. Clinton could come out in favor of aid and international troops for Macedonia without recognizing it, but so far he hasn't.

The wicked irony of all this is that Russia, a historic and religious ally of both Greece and Serbia, fully recognized Macedonia last August. So did Bulgaria, which throughout much of history claimed Macedonia as "Western Bulgaria." The National Geographic Society, in a new map, names "Macedonia" as 1 of 12 countries in Europe. The U.S. government must act quickly. Until now, the public signals it has been sending Milosevic have been like the signals it sent Saddam Hussein in July 1990 regarding Kuwait. Robert D. Kaplan is the author of the forthcoming "Balkan Ghosts: A Journey Through History," on St. Martin's Press.

Druglord Pablo Escobar says he will restart war with private army

1 BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Fugitive druglord Pablo Escobar says he is renewing war on the government with a private army he will lead himself.

He wrote the attorney general complaining of human rights abuses of his colleagues and kin by police and warning, "There's no alternative but to give up the judicial struggle and assume an armed fight."

A copy of his handwritten letter to Attorney General Gustavo de Greiff, which bore Escobar's fingerprint, was received by The Associated Press this week.

Escobar is chief of the Medellín cartel, which killed more than 600 people in a 12-month drug war that ended in 1990.

Escobar, one of the world's wealthiest men, and nine of his lieutenants escaped from their luxurious prison near Medellín. Since the jailbreak, Escobar has said he would turn himself in if the government guaranteed him certain conditions, such as imprisonment with fellow cartel members in a police training school in a Medellín suburb.

Thousands pay homage to Louis XVI on execution bicentennial

2 PARIS, France (AP) — With flowers, tears and a few flashes of anger, thousands of French paid homage Thursday to King Louis XVI, beheaded by revolutionaries 200 years ago and now, to many, a rehabilitated hero.

Some young royalists set fire to a mock guillotine. Several dozen others were taken into custody after occupying the Pantheon, a Paris landmark, and unfurling a banner that read, "Long live the king. Down with the republic."

But the main bicentennial ceremony was solemn and peaceful. An estimated 5,000 people gathered to pray and lay wreaths in a corner of the sprawling Place de la Concorde.

The half-hour ceremony was shunned by the Socialist government. But U.S. Ambassador Walter Curley, honoring Louis' support for the American Revolution, was among hundreds who laid flowers on a plot of grass at the site where the king was beheaded at 10:22 a.m. on Jan. 21, 1793.

"I was there today because Louis XVI was very, very instrumental in our independence," Curley said later.

Polls indicate a sizable majority of French people are proud of their revolution and support the government-by-the-people ideology that emerged. A Paris Match magazine poll indicated that 42 percent of the public opposed Louis' execution, while 34 percent approved. Thirteen percent said the monarchy should be restored.

What's in a name? Marie Marie Marie is OK

3 LA ROCHELLE, France (AP) — The high court in this Atlantic coastal town has allowed parents to name a child in triplicate, clearing the way for a girl to keep her name: Marie Marie Marie.

The court reversed a lower court ruling that disallowed Marie Marie Marie's name in civil records. The reason given was that a name in triplicate does not enrich the French heritage.

France once went to great efforts to control the names of its citizens. The practice has declined, but officials still try to guard against zany names.

In a recent interview with a local newspaper, Marie Marie Marie's father explained why he chose the name for his daughter: She weighed 3.33 kilos when born in August, her head and chest measured 33 centimeters and she was 51 centimeters long, a multiple of three.

He said the baby's mother was 33 years old, and that when Marie Marie Marie was born she was really 'gironde' — plump. The connection? The license plate prefix for France's Gironde region is 33.

Czech, Slovakian republics are newest U.N. members

4 UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Czech Republic and Slovakia became the newest U.N. members today, 19 days after Czechoslovakia peacefully divided into two nations.

"On this solemn day we have entered a new stage in the history of Slovakia," Milan Knazko, the Slovak foreign minister, told the General Assembly after it inducted the two new nations as members by acclamation.

"The Czech Republic as a new member state of the United Nations . . . will try to contribute its modest share to the principles of human rights and freedoms which form the backbone of its domestic and foreign policy," said Czech Foreign Minister Josef Zieleniec.

Can't talk to God? Simple, send a fax

5 JERUSALEM, Israel (AP) — People who want to plant notes to God in the Wailing Wall can now do it by fax, the national phone company said Wednesday.

Every day hundreds of notes seeking divine intervention are stuffed into cracks in Jerusalem's Wailing Wall, Judaism's holiest shrine.

Faxes sent to a number the phone company has set up will be brought to the wall by an employee, said company spokesman Zecharia Mizrotzky.

The fax number is 972-2-612222. It is not toll-free.

Big shopping day: 9,000 dozen eggs, 4 jet engines

6 ABOARD THE USS KITTY HAWK (AP) — With its enormous cupboards close to bare, the Kitty Hawk went shopping Thursday.

Its supermarket was the Sacramento, a combat support ship that delivered wares to the carrier by ship-to-ship hosepipe, helicopter and hoist while the two ships sped through the Persian Gulf at 18 mph.

In all, 500,000 pounds of food, equipment and spare parts were transferred, including a world of groceries: watermelons and bananas from the Philippines; dessert topping from Defiance, Ohio; brownie mix from Des Plaines, Ill.; Australian lettuce and peppers; apples from Normandy, France; processed cheese from Hennedorf, Austria; 9,000 dozen eggs from Seattle; sliced white bread from Dubai; 59,000 cans of soft drinks. And much more.

The supply operation provided about 10 days worth of stuff for the 5,000 or more people aboard ship, said Lt. Bruno Antoine, a supply officer from New Roads, La.

For the hardware department, Thursday's operation procured four jet engines, a few hundred thousand gallons of aviation and diesel fuel, and spare parts for 75 aircraft.

Cmdr. Wil Gorie, 46, of San Diego, head of Kitty Hawk's supply department, said the carrier's inventory totals around $256 million.

Salvage tugs seek burning supertanker spilling oil

7 SINGAPORE (AP) — A supertanker carrying 78 million gallons of crude was ablaze and leaking oil after slamming into another ship off the northern tip of Indonesia on Thursday.

It was not immediately clear why the vessels collided or how much oil was disgorged into the sea. One expert said the spill could have been prevented and demonstrated the need for tighter tanker regulations.

A major spill would threaten the coasts of Indonesia, Thailand and Malaysia with environmental disaster, Malaysia's minister of science, technology and environment, Law Hieng Ding, said in Kuala Lumpur, the Malaysian capital.

The tanker was the fourth major tanker accident since Dec. 2, and the third in less than three weeks. In two of the accidents, ships leaked more than twice the 11 million gallons of oil spewed by the Exxon Valdez in March 1989 in Alaska.

The tanker laden with oil, the Maersk Navigator, was registered in Singapore and owned by the A.P. Moller shipping group of Copenhagen, Denmark. The vessel collided early Thursday with the Singapore-registered tanker Sanko Honour, which was empty.

Singapore, Japan plan "virtual reality" theme parks

8 SINGAPORE (AP) — Disneyland in miniature? Not quite, but the thrills of roller coasters and other rides at vast theme parks are promised by a new generation of much smaller playgrounds.

Using "virtual reality," the high-tech equipment that began with programs to train jet pilots, theme parks one-tenth the size of Disneyland will be able to offer the same variety of thrills.

The interactive technology developed in the United States uses computer-generated images and sound to create an illusion of reality while the user is adventuring in another world.

Visitors to the still unnamed park will be made to feel they are soaring in space, stepping back in time or engaging in combat — all while watching a big curved screen or wearing special headsets and electronically wired gloves.

The computer software games can be changed easily and cheaply, unlike the ferris wheels, roller coasters, merry-go-rounds and dive bombers of traditional parks.

The first virtual reality park is scheduled to open in Osaka, Japan, early next year. A Singapore company plans to open a second later in 1994.

SPEECH

 a time that "a society in which we could live together was a tangible possibility," said King, who was only a little girl when her father made his famed "I Have a Dream" speech.

But in spite of the many achievements made towards equality, King said, it has been a constant struggle to hold on to the gains of the past and produce more advances.

"I am pleased to say that in 1993 Jim Crow is dead," she said, referring to past segregation laws. "But his slightly more sophisticated first-born son, J. Crow Esquire, is alive and kicking."

"We as people of color, we as women, we as humanity have not reached the promised land. We're still wandering around, bumping into each other in the wilderness," she said.

King called on all members of society to recommit to her father's unfulfilled dream.

"You must grab hold of the dream. You must shape it until it fills your very being. We can move this country forward again," she said.

People must work with civil rights groups and politicians in the struggle for equality, King said, rather than sit back and complain if they do not seem to be effective.

"Get in there and make them work!" she commanded.

King especially urged that colleges and universities have a group of students designated to keep abreast of government legislation and policies. These students would get word out to the student body whenever a piece of legislation comes to a vote.

"It's going to take that kind of organized response to make sure that President Clinton, or any of our elected officials, stays on track," she said. "We must get up off our apathy!"

King also praised the UT's plans to add a required multiculturalism class, saying there is a need to "understand and appreciate the diversity of the American patchwork quilt" and re-examine the "sacred cows" of our history and culture.

"This nation will never cure racism until it faces the most painful errors in its history," she said.

Although the process of working toward equality for all may be a painful and risky one, King said she is hopeful there will be growth.

"Perhaps it does seem like a rather beautiful, but unattainable dream. But I choose to dream and act on my dreams," she said. "To live without this dream would be a nightmare."

 "know perfectly well what it takes to comply with the U.N. resolutions and the establishment of the no-fly zones. I think what happened today is a reflection of the determination that the Clinton administration will have in that area."

Clinton's spokesman, George Stephanopoulos, said the new president was following established policy, allowing U.S. pilots to defend themselves when threatened.

"Right now everything we're doing is consistent with past practice. There is no change at this time," he said.

The incident occurred at 5:09 a.m., the military said in a statement.

A U.S. Air Force F-4G "Wild Weasel" and an F-16 "Fighting Falcon" were escorting a French Mirage plane conducting photo reconnaissance in the northern no-fly zone, the statement said.

The two U.S. jets noticed flashes of anti-artillery fire in their direction, but did not respond to the provocation "because the aircraft were out of range of the fire," the statement said.

However, after the radar "locked on" the aircraft — a potentially hostile action — the F-4G fired an anti-radar HARM missile at the radar and the F-16 dropped two cluster bombs on the site.

The incident occurred about 10 miles south of the town of Mosul. There was no immediate report whether any damage had been done to the missile site, the statement said.

The F-4G and F-16 completed their mission "without further incident," the statement said.

A senior Pentagon official, commenting on condition of anonymity, said "We're back in the cat-and-mouse business again," with Iraq. But he said the Pentagon isn't sure whether the incident was the result of directions from Baghdad. "Either someone didn't get the word, orders weren't obeyed, or all bets are off," the official said.

Allied patrols of the northern and southern no-fly zones will continue.

Cannon said his organization will continue to focus its attention on pressuring abortion clinics and their employees, as well as providing counseling for women considering having an abortion.

"The most important thing we need is a stronger resolve to persevere in the future and to never give up," he said.

Abortion rights advocates will also continue in the battle.

Mary Mannix, the Iowa City center manager at Planned Parenthood, emphasized the need to focus on the state level.

"The most hazard is at the state level. We need to keep anything off the Iowa books that would discriminate against women seeking abortions," she said. "I encourage everybody to be active if they want this right to continue."

Mehta added that she can only hope the Clinton administration will live up to its promises and hopes there will be more encouragement within the medical field to perform abortions.

Bullets decide to cut King

LANDOVER, Md. — Washington Bullets coach Jim Larranaga said 36-year-old Bernard King is not on his plan to rebuild the team.

King has been undergoing arthroscopic surgery in September and is expected to return to the 6-foot-7 forward role on New Year's week. The week demanded that King either immediately cut him.

King, who insists on excellent condition, negotiate with the Bullets and is also guaranteed that the Bullets promised him.

Women gymnasts speak out for D.A.R.E.

The Iowa women gymnasts celebrate D.A.R.E. Day (drug abuse resistance education) for the fourth straight year following the team's meet on Sunday. The Hawkeyes, along with members of the Johnson County Sheriff's Department, will speak to students from Iowa City and surrounding towns about the pressures and consequences of drug and alcohol use.

"We are thrilled to be having D.A.R.E. Day IV," Coach Diane DeMarco said. "I think this makes it an extra special event for us." Iowa gymnasts visited area schools during the week of Jan. 11-15 to share their experiences from their involvement in the D.A.R.E. program.

NBA

Bullets decide to release King

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Washington Bullets released 36-year-old Bernard King on Thursday, saying he did not fit in with their plan to rebuild with youth.

King has been inactive since undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery in September 1991. The 6-foot-7 forward rejoined the Bullets on New Year's Day and last week demanded that the team either immediately re-activate or cut him.

King, who insists his knee is in excellent condition, is now free to negotiate with any NBA club. He is also guaranteed the $2.5 million the Bullets promised him this season.

HORSE RACING

Rose says he's betting again

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose says he is betting again, less than four years after admitting he could not control the gambling problem that got him banned from baseball.

Rose said, however, that he is not betting with illegal bookies and not on baseball. And he said his gambling is under control.

"I don't do illegal gambling anymore. But I'm not going to sit here and tell you I don't gamble anymore, because I'd be lying," Rose, 51, was quoted Thursday by The Cincinnati Post.

"I went to the Kentucky Derby last year, and if people think I'm going to the Kentucky Derby to watch the horses — I can go to the farm to watch the horses."

FOOTBALL

Byrd takes first unsupported steps

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Jets defensive end Dennis Byrd, who broke his neck in a collision with a teammate Nov. 29, is making "excellent progress" and has taken his first steps in his rehabilitation program, his doctor said Thursday.

"He has continued to gain muscle strength in both of his arms and legs," said Dr. Kristjan Ragnarsson, chairman of rehabilitation medicine at Mount Sinai Medical Center.

"He has been working out regularly in the therapeutic pool with his therapist and was able to stand unsupported and take a few steps. As his strength and balance have increased, his chances to learn to walk again have improved."

Stanford reports Walsh violat

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Stanford has reported an NCAA rules violation committed by football coach Bill Walsh while on a recruiting visit in Connecticut.

Following a visit to the home of 245-pound linebacker Adam Salina, comments made by Walsh about the player appeared in the New Britain (Conn.) Herald.

According to NCAA rules, athletics department staff members may not evaluate or rate a prospect for scouting services or the media before the player signs a letter of intent.

Salina has verbally committed to Stanford but can't officially sign until Feb. 3.

Will real Hawkeye wrestlers please stand up?

Jay Nanda

The Daily Iowan

Iowa wrestling fans who feel they're seeing a change in their top-ranked team aren't the only ones wondering which direction the Hawkeyes are headed.

Coach Dan Gable and third-year assistant Jim Zalesky are curious as to which Hawkeye team will show up at this weekend's prestigious National Dual Championships in Lincoln, Neb.

Will it be the Hawkeye team that defeated roughly 50 other universities and non-collegiate wrestling clubs from around the nation at the Midlands Tournament last month?

Or will it be the Iowa squad that looked all but sluggish in a 34-7 win over lowly Indiana last Saturday?

Whatever the answer, now is the time to put up or shut up, as the 16-team Duals include the top eight clubs in the nation. A mini-NCAA meet, if you will.

"I think it's gonna really see where we're at," Zalesky said. "Right now we're kind of guessing where we're at and we really don't know yet because we have really tough competition."

Iowa takes on Central Oklahoma Saturday at 9 a.m. and will meet the winner of North Carolina State versus No. 8 Michigan in the second round.

Should the Hawkeyes advance to the title round, they could have a rematch with No. 2 Penn State, which fought the Hawkeyes to an 18-18 deadlock Dec. 4.

But Gable's not convinced his team may get that chance.

"If (the Indiana match) is any indication of what's going to take place, we won't even be staying in the championship round," he said. "But I think we'll come back a little bit."

Each of the 10 weight classes should be heavily-contested in Lincoln, but perhaps none more so than 158 pounds.

Seven of the top eight grapplers will go toe-to-toe throughout the meet, featuring No. 1 Cornhusker Matt Lindland, No. 2 Sean Bormet of Michigan, No. 4 UNI Panther Jamie Byrne, No. 5 Nittany Lion Josh Robbins, Arizona State's Marcus Mollica, Oregon State's Dan Alar and No. 8 Hawkeye Rich Catalano.

The 11-5 Catalano held off two takedowns in the final 24 seconds against Hoosier Scott Petcher to record a less-than-stellar 8-6 win a week ago at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Gable said that may have been partially due to his decision to rest No. 1 142-pounder Troy Steiner and his brother, top-rated 150-pounder Terry.

"I even told Catalano that I'm probably not going to wrestle the Steiners unless I have to," Gable said. "And I said, 'You might be used to going into matches with a lot of momentum but you might not tonight.'" And he didn't.

The Steiners will join top-ranked 118-pounder Chad Zaputit as Hawkeye representatives in the All-Star Classic at Lehigh Feb. 1. Although the Classic generally features the top two wrestlers at each weight, No. 4 Rulon Gardner of Nebraska was chosen at heavy-weight over No. 2 Hawkeye John Oostendorp.

"A lot of it's politics and plus, the selection committee," Zalesky said. "They probably don't want a lot of Iowa guys out there."

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Hawks look to remain perfect

Roxanna Pellin

The Daily Iowan

She may not be the tallest player in the Big Ten, but Shirley Bryant plays like it.

Indiana's 5-foot-10 sophomore forward enters tonight's 7:30 p.m. matchup with No. 6 Iowa as the second leading rebounder in the conference, averaging 9.9 boards per game. She is also the conference leader in field goal percentage, shooting 64 percent.

However, the question remains: How will Bryant match up with Iowa's Toni Foster?

Foster leads the Hawkeyes in scoring (15.1) and rebounding (9.3). Foster is a two-time All-Big Ten pick and ranks third in the conference in rebounding.

"I know it's hard for the men right now, but with us being able to play, the men's team can see that they can get through this."

Center Cathy Marx shows support for her teammates in last month's Amana-Hawkeye Classic despite an injured ankle. Marx will be at full strength tonight when No. 6 Iowa hosts Indiana.

The Hawkeyes (11-1, 4-0) will try to remain undefeated in the Big Ten. The Hoosiers, who are making their first-ever appearance in the Top 25, will try to improve on their 11-1, 2-1 record. Indiana's conference loss came to No. 8 Ohio State 81-67 Jan. 17.

The Hoosiers have only three players over six feet including junior center Kim Hooper and senior forward Jenny Davis at a team-high 6-1.

In contrast, seven Hawkeyes are 6-feet or taller. Junior center Cathy Marx, who leads the way at 6-5, said the difference in height will force the Hawkeyes to play a different style of defense.

"Indiana is a lot smaller and they don't have any true inside players," she said. "On the rebound, they can get us at our knees. They have a different style that we have to be able to adapt to."

Junior center Andrea Harmon agreed that tough defense is the key to the game.

"Defense wins the game," Harmon said. "They're small and quick and they use a lot of screens."

Both Marx and Harmon said the Hawkeyes will be mentally ready despite the death of Iowa men's basketball player Chris Street on Tuesday.

"It won't be hard because we've faced hard times before," Harmon said. "Everyone feels really badly, but we know we have to go on."

Said Marx: "I know it's hard for the men right now, but with us being able to play, the men's team can see that they can get through this."

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Baker leads Hawks into home opener

Karen L. Karaidos

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's gymnastics team goes up against Minnesota on Sunday in their home opener, which Coach Diane DeMarco describes as a great Big Ten gymnastics match-up.

The dual meet starts at 1 p.m. and is the only one of the season to be held in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Gophers, who came in seventh at the 1992 Big Ten Championships, three places behind the Hawkeyes, are 0-1 after losing their home opener to Kentucky last weekend.

Freshman Kim Baker, who tied the Iowa all-time record on balance beam at the Shakespeare Invitational Jan. 17, and captured the all-around title in her first collegiate tournament, said that she is excited about her first home meet as a Hawkeye.

"This is my first year here and I'm really looking forward to it because from what my teammates have said, home meets are a lot of fun, having the crowd behind you to help the team along," Baker said.

DeMarco said that the Hawkeyes have been improving since the start of the season.

"The team is looking good, we're developing well and getting stronger with every meet," DeMarco said.

"In a short time, I anticipate that starting positions will come down to who holds up best under pressure," she added.

Baker said consistency is the key to improving Iowa's team score.

"We need to all hit our routines and just support each other through the whole meet," Baker said.

While DeMarco is impressed with the team on bars, beam and vault, floor exercise has given her some concern.

Freshman Kim Baker

"I feel we have a ways to go on this event before we are up to where we will be satisfied," DeMarco said. "We're lacking a bit in depth on this event, but we should be able to get the job done with the squad we have if we keep pushing."

Shelly Burns, Meredith Chang, Amy Bolton, Cathy Terrell and Misti Blackledge round out the bar squad for Iowa.

"This is by far the best bar squad we've ever fielded," DeMarco said. "Our recruits have really added a lot to our strength, in this event in particular."

DeMarco also believes the Iowa vault and beam squads are coming on strong.

"Our vaulting is really starting to jell and I anticipate that we are going to be quite a force in a very short amount of time," DeMarco said, "and we again have a very strong beam squad this year. This is the event in which we have the greatest depth on our team."

'Huskers, Purdue take to the pool vs. Iowa

Curtis Riggs

The Daily Iowan

Coach Glenn Patton sees this weekend's slate of meets for his 11th-rated men's swimming and diving team as excellent preparation for the Big Ten Championships.

The Hawkeyes (3-0) will host the reigning Big Eight champion Nebraska Cornhuskers at 7 p.m. tonight before taking on the Purdue Boilermakers at 1 p.m. Saturday. Both meets will be held at the Field House pool.

"It will be good for us to have two tough meets," said Patton, who referred to this competition as the biggest home weekend of the year.

"Although, we need to learn how to swim three-day meets," he added, referring to the conference meet March 4-6 at Indianapolis.

Iowa has won two straight over Nebraska. The Cornhuskers have all-Americans Jan Karlsson, Jonathon Kerr and Kevin McMahon returning this season.

"We'll need to swim our best to beat Nebraska," said Patton who guided his club to a 133-93 win in Lincoln last year. "They've virtually had a lock on the Big Eight championship over the last 10 years."

MEN'S TRACK

Wheeler takes strong team to Wisconsin

Doug Cappel
The Daily Iowan

With what many are saying could be his strongest team in recent memory, Coach Ted Wheeler and the Iowa men's track squad open the 1993 indoor season Saturday at the Badger Classic in Madison, Wisc.

"The Badger Classic will give us some indication on how far our training has taken us and how far we still have to go to get ready for the rest of the season," said Wheeler, in his 15th year at the helm of the Hawkeyes with a 187-173-3 record.

"I'm confident we will have a pretty good team if we are able to compete at full strength."

One of this year's team goals is to finish in the upper half of the Big Ten, something that hasn't happened since 1967. But for that to occur, Wheeler will need his veterans to step up and take charge.

The leading returnee on this year's squad is two-time all-American Anthon Maybank, a junior from Georgetown, S.C. Maybank finished third in the long jump at last year's NCAA Indoor Championships and eighth in the 400 meters outdoors. Maybank also had the second longest leap of any collegian a year ago, setting a new school record.

The Hawkeyes are also counting on a number of sprinters, hurdlers, and middle distance runners to help carry the team.

Maybank, Baylor Goode, Jerry Fisher and Brian Thomas lead Wheeler's sprinting corps. Goode, Fisher and Thomas were all on the sprint medley team that won at last year's Drake Relays.

In the hurdling department, Rajeev Balkrishnan is expected to lead a young group of talented athletes, which include Winston Rose and Joe Estes.

Kevin Herd, Audwin Patterson, Andrew Rosette and Thomas will handle the middle distance chores.

Coach Ted Wheeler

Herd, an all-American in cross country, will run distances varying from 800 to 3,000 meters.

Along with Maybank in the long jump, Iowa will be led in field events by Darren Smith in the long and triple jumps, Mike Seymour in the triple jump, and Chad Ohly and Scott Hudek in the pole vault and high jump. Jason Joens will return for his senior season in the shot put.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Hawkeyes to face Illinois, Illinois St.

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

The 4-4, 2-4 Hawkeye women's swimming team will face Big Ten rival Illinois and non-conference opponent Illinois State at the Illinois Invitational today and Saturday in Champaign.

The Fighting Illini, who enter the meet at 0-3 in the Big Ten and 0-6 in dual meets, are led by senior captain Lisa Stimpfel, a four-time school record-holder.

Last weekend, the Hawkeyes pounded Illinois State 166.5-129.5 before dropping a tight meet to Ohio State, 152-146.

This weekend's competition will include all the events scheduled at the conference championships, which will be held Feb. 16-20 at Michigan.

"This is kind of a meet to get us ready for the Big Ten," junior Nicole Widmyer said. "It's tough because it's two days in a row."

We're just going to try to keep it together because it's a long meet."

Widmyer, out of East Dubuque, Ill., is coming off a successful showing against Ohio State. Along with a win in the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 57.73 seconds, she combined with Tracy Golden, J.J. DeAth, and Melissa Eberhart to record a season-best time in the 400 medley relay (3:56.48).

"In the past, I haven't swam well at this meet," Widmyer said. "I'd just like to continue doing what I've done this season and keep it together."

Iowa coach Pete Kennedy said the meet will be a little unusual due to the absence of the Hawkeye diving corps.

"It's going to be a funny meet because we'll swim all the Big Ten events in two days and we won't be taking our divers," he said. "We're going to use it as a dry run to get ready for the Big Ten meet."

Iowa took the championship at

"In the past, I haven't swam well at this meet. I'd just like to continue doing what I've done this season and keep it together."

Nicole Widmyer Iowa swimmer

last year's Invitational with 269 points. Illinois finished second (226) followed by the Redbirds with 116. Senior Shelley Miyamoto led the Hawkeyes with titles in the 100, 200, and 500 freestyle events. Senior Chrissy Eck placed first in two events while setting a new pool record in the 200 breaststroke.

BOSTON—The word "championship" flowed repeatedly from Bill Parcells' lips as he returned to coaching Thursday, even if he must rebuild a New England Patriots team that couldn't be further from it.

Parcells, winner of two Super Bowls in his last five years as head coach of the New York Giants, takes charge of a team that tied for the NFL's worst record and has won just four playoff games in its 33-year history.

"History," he declared, "means nothing in football."

With Massachusetts Gov. William Weld looking on, Parcells was introduced in a chandeliered conference room of a fancy downtown hotel. Past Patriot coaches were named in the less gaudy surroundings of club offices in suburban Foxboro.

Patriots owner Jim Orthwein called the signing of Parcells "the beginning of a new and exciting chapter in the history of the New England Patriots."

Parcells had accepted, then rejected the Tampa Bay coaching position after the 1991 season but had few doubts about New England.

At a meeting late last week, he said, Orthwein asked him what it would take to make the Patriots competitive.

"I told him I wasn't interested in a competitive team, but rather if he was interested in bringing a championship team to New England, then I was his man," Parcells said at a news conference. "That's the only goal a guy like me

Bill Parcells doesn't mind talking about wanting to take a Super Bowl ride again, even if it's with the New England Patriots, a team that finished 2-14 this season.

can have. "I emphasize the word championship because that's what I'm trying to do," he added. "When (Orthwein) said, 'That's what I want to do, too,' I got real interested."

New England was 2-14 in 1992, its second season under coach Dick MacPherson, and 9-39 the past three years. MacPherson was fired Jan. 8, and chief executive officer Sam Jankovich resigned the next day. Parcells is the Patriots' fourth coach in five years.

He resigned as Giants coach four months after winning the 1991 Super Bowl and spent the past two seasons as an NBC football announcer. He said Thursday he missed coaching.

"It's like going to the schoolyard when you're a kid," he said. "You have to grow up some time, but fortunately I haven't had to."

"Everyone at NBC Sports has mixed emotions about Bill's decision," NBC executive producer Terry O'Neil said. "We were extremely pleased with his development as a football analyst and are confident that he could have been one of the best in the business."

Details of Parcells' multi-year contract were not released but he said, "this is my last coaching job, without question."

Patriots officials also interviewed former coaches Buddy Ryan of Philadelphia and Mike Ditka of Chicago, and Green Bay defensive coordinator Ray Rhodes.

But Orthwein turned to Parcells, 51, the Patriots linebacker coach in 1980 before spending the next two years as the Giants defensive coordinator. He became New York's head coach in 1983.

Starting in December 1991, he had three procedures to remove coronary artery blockages. He underwent coronary bypass surgery last June 3.

"I certainly considered my state of health but I started feeling good last July," he said. "It's not an easy job the way I intend to do it."

He brushed aside questions of how much control he has of the football operation.

"This is not about control. This is a team," Parcells said. "We're going to be a team from top to bottom. . . . Anyone that has their own agenda . . . won't be around too long."

Parcells said he was flattered about New York fans' support for him to get the vacant Giants job.

"Time goes on, and it's a different time," he said. "It's a different place. I'm a New England Patriot. It's where I started my professional coaching career, and it's where I'm going to end it."

Jackson shows off hip, vows to open with Sox

Joe Mooshil
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Is Bionic Bo ready to go?

He's got an artificial hip, and he's preparing for one final comeback with the Chicago White Sox.

Bo Jackson was impressive Thursday, fielding grounders and taking swings in a batting cage. He topped that by running four, 120-yard sprints to the controlled time of 20 seconds a sprint.

"There's no limp, no pain, the difference from last year is night and day," said Jackson, who did not play an inning last season after having his hip replaced last April.

The Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn, a professional superstar at football and baseball, injured his left hip in a 1991 NFL playoff game for the Los Angeles Raiders.

"Actually it feels like I've never had any problems in the past," Jackson said. "There is no fear factor. That was over after surgery. (Trainer) Herm (Schneider) keeps telling me to slow down."

Schneider, who has kept the time of the sprints down intentionally, said he expects to let Bo go full speed sometime in February.

"We are in uncharted waters," Schneider said. "If something happens, I don't have the answers. We are trying to prevent soreness. He has paid a dear price."

Jackson's routine includes light workouts in the morning, then hitting and fielding sessions at a gymnasium followed by the heavy work with weights every afternoon.

Why the effort when it all could end with one slight breakdown?

"When my mother passed away last year I promised her I would play baseball again and I would get my degree," Jackson said. "I have one more class left."

When he made his decision to return, Jackson was warned of what could go wrong.

"I told them it was my hip, my decision," Jackson said. "And if it doesn't work out? I won't sit around and mope."

UI Museum of Art offers lecture, reception for Willers photo exhibit

The Daily Iowan

The UI Museum of Art will hold a reception Saturday night in conjunction with the debut of a photography exhibition called "Photographs from the collection of Carlton Willers."

The museum, located on North Riverside Drive in Iowa City, will hold the reception from 8-10 p.m. The event is open to the public, and no lectures will be given.

The exhibition comprises 72 photos by 22 20th century photographers, including works by Eugene Atget, Alfred Steiglitz, Edward Steichen and George Platt Lynes. Genres will range from surrealist photographs to landscapes to nude studies.

The show was organized by JoAnn Conklin, the museum's curator of graphic arts. Conklin will present a gallery talk and tour of the exhibition on Wednesday, Jan. 27 at 12:30 p.m. as part of the museum's weekly free lecture series, "Perspective."

The UI Museum of Art will be open today and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

'Body of Evidence' surprisingly suspenseful

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Another day, another look at Madonna's breasts.

After the media hubbub over "Sex," the pop idol's book of nude photos and S & M fantasies, eventually died down, the generally-asked question was "Well, what's she going to do to top this one?"

The answer is "Body of Evidence," an "erotic thriller" starring Madonna as Rebecca Carlson, a young woman accused of killing older lover Andrew Marsh by deliberately overexerting his bad heart with an overdose of bondage, dominance and wild sex.

"It's not a crime to be a great lay," argues lawyer Frank Delaney (Willem Dafoe, in a far cry from his starring role as Jesus in "The Last Temptation of Christ.") But Marsh's secretary, JoAnn Braslow (Anne Archer) insists that Carlson deliberately murdered Marsh, and the district attorney (Joe Mantegna) agrees, claiming Carlson is the equivalent of a gun or a knife. The fact that Marsh left her his entire $8 million fortune establishes enough motive to bring the case to court.

And so the audience is flung headlong into a story that is half courtroom drama and half bedroom (well, to be more accurate, stairway, garage and elevator) melodrama, dripping with sexual and mental dominance games.

On the sexual scene, Delaney gets in over his head (those complaining about the recent proliferation of films glorifying sexual relationships between psychiatrists and patients might also look into the number of films that glorify a lawyer's sexual relationship with his client); similarly, the court case rapidly becomes highly complicated, as each side digs deeper into Carlson's checkered past to establish her character — either as a dewy, innocent girl with a harmless fetish, or as a perverted, money-grubbing sexpot.

The result of all this is, surprisingly, a suspenseful and dramatic film that will keep people guessing up to the end. The mystery aspect of the film isn't lacking, nor is the acting (Madonna's actually on her way to burying her string of bad film roles). It's the interpersonal relationships that are a problem.

By failing to show any difference between consensual violence in bed and the brutality of one person hitting another in anger — or, in a scene straight out of "9 1/2 Weeks," raping a lover to prove dominance — the filmmakers present a confusing morality. Is consensual violence supposed to be two major difficulties of a mystery film by keeping the audience in suspense despite the fact that all the necessary pieces are in place, and by placing all those pieces without telegraphing the resolution. It's too bad the movie's likely to be underrated as a "Basic Instinct" ripoff and a cheap appeal to prurient interest.

And, of course, the inevitable question: "So, what's she going to do to follow this one up?"

Madonna

wrong? Or is rape okay, as long as the victim has been aggressive in the past and thus "wants it"? Is Carlson evil for enjoying making love to handcuffed men, or is society judging her based on outdated standards? The questions are raised by the court case against Carlson, but no actual answers are implied — the purpose being to take advantage of risqué topics that will draw audiences, not to actually take responsibility for what the film says about those topics.

The erotic content of "Body of Evidence" — which is most of the basis for the film's publicity — is, as a result, muddled. What audience members get out of it will no doubt hinge on individuals' feelings towards Madonna, pain and realism in sex scenes.

But the actual plot content is more solid. "Body" pulls off the

Dangtrippers to release new CD

Tim Rissman
The Daily Iowan

There is an old saying, "No sense makes sense," which very accurately sums up a listen to the Dangtrippers' new album, Transparent Blue Illusion (Zero Hour)—and, for that matter, one of their live shows. They have that simple, and complex, knack of making great music out of some of the more diverse subject matters you'll find in music.

The Dangtrippers will be displaying that knack Saturday, Jan. 23 at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. The event is a celebration of the release of their new CD, the first follow-up to 1989's days between stations (Dog Gone). Opening the show for the 'Trippers will be the Boorays and former Iowa, now Minneapolis-based Rex Daisy.

The Dangtrippers' press package calls the music an "audio rollercoaster." Nothing could be closer to the truth.

These guys have put together a strong selection of songs ranging in subject matter from Western movies and femme fatales to psychedelic trips to the dentist and parties for famous decapitated people.

Despite the musical influences that can be traced back to the '60s, this stuff is anything but "I Want to Hold Your Hand." Rather, it combines a sort of "60s imagery" with the power and style of today's music.

Some of that power was gained with the acquisition of English-born guitarist Patrick White, who replaced guitarist/singer/songwriter Devin Hill after his Minneapolis migration. White's grungy scales can best be heard on tracks like "Headhunter."

While the music as a whole has a stronger feel it also has the ability to take its listeners on an emotional journey. From the bombast guitar fury of "Headhunter" to the chiming ring of "Antigone," the Dangtrippers manage to soar in spite of the different moods they present.

"Listening to an album should be an experience," according to singer/songwriter Doug Roberson. "If you think about your favorite records, each one has a number of stylistic differences. It's relative to the range of emotions any person feels. You have the sad, the happy, the angry, even the whimsical."

For those who brave the weather Saturday, there should be plenty of "happy" to go around. There will be door prizes and CD giveaways, as well as a diverse offering of music by the various bands present. And all of this for $3.

The doors open at 9 p.m., with those 19 and up admitted.

Melodians dig into the roots of reggae soul

David Dishneau

Swing and Dine (Heat) — The Melodians

Reggae didn't begin with Bob Marley, a fact that's sweetly and abundantly clear on this greatest-hits collection by the Melodians, a Jamaican group that flourished from the mid-1960s to the mid-'70s.

The 16 cuts on Swing and Dine reveal the other side of a musical dialogue between American rhythm-and-blues artists and Jamaican reggae groups that was apparent in island-flavored U.S. hits such as "Another Saturday Night" and "Under the Boardwalk."

Back in Jamaica, the sounds of Sam Cooke, the Drifters and other U.S. stars were reflected in the Melodians' harmonies and soulful style. An early hit, "You Don't Need Me," contains echoes of "Silhouettes"; "Lonely Days," an otherwise up-tempo dance number, quotes verbatim a phrase from the Everly Brothers' "Dream"; and the melody of the standout cut "Love is a Doggone Good Thing" incorporates strains of "Just One Look."

But this is reggae above all, and vital reggae at that. Except for a little distortion on the first track, the sound quality is excellent.
