UI follows suit with stadium smoking ban

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

Tuesday's unanimous decision by the UI Board in Control of Athletics to ban smoking in Kinnick Stadium next fall brings the UI in line with policies at Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

The ban will not allow for any specially designated areas in Kinnick for smokers to congregate and light up, according to Larry Bruner, UI associate athletic director of men's sports.

"The policy is to ban all smoking within the confines of Kinnick Stadium," he said. Bruner said he doubted if the policy would be applied to other outdoor athletic activities at the UI such as field hockey or baseball games.

"I really don't foresee that happening because there isn't any reserve seating at the smaller outdoor events," he said.

However, UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said discussion of such a ban could come up soon.

"We'll probably bring it up at the next meeting," she said. Complaints from nonsmoking spectators were a major factor in establishing the new policy, she added.

"For about the past year and a half we've been getting letters from people complaining about being exposed to smoke," she said. "It seemed like there was quite a bit of interest and support for the change."

She added that she was also aware that many people oppose the new ban.

The decision to ban smoking in Kinnick will be similar to an existing policy at UNI's UNI-Dome that has been in effect since last fall.

Jim Egli, assistant athletic director for facilities at UNI, said that since the UNI-Dome became tobacco-free last fall, he's heard few complaints.

"It's been working out well," he said. "We've been having a lot of favorable comments."

To enforce the ban, UNI hired students to police spectators and inform them of the new policy, Egli said.

Violators were asked to extinguish their cigarettes or cigars in buckets of sand the students carried and were then offered free gum or candy, a policy Egli said was effective and kept people on good terms.

Bruner said the UI has not yet decided how the policy will be enforced, but added that spectators will continue to be allowed to leave the stadium and return later in the game if they want.

Smoking is already banned in most UI buildings and at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, where those wishing to light up must step outside and then return through the same door.

Across the state at ISU, a similar policy will soon take effect at university-sponsored events in Hilton Coliseum, according to Diana Pounds, ISU's news service director.

She said the ban at Hilton is part of a sweeping new smoking policy at ISU that will take effect July 1.

"Smoking will be banned in nearly all Iowa State buildings," she said.

ISU's new policy on smoking at football games is slightly more lenient than the UI's. Instead of having to leave Cyclone Stadium / Jack Trice Field during a game, smokers will be able to head for one of several designated areas within the stadium, according to Pounds.

"They won't be smoking in the seating areas or assembly areas," she said.

Gunman kills 3 in Florida cafeteria

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A man wearing a business suit shot at his former bosses in an office building cafeteria during lunchtime Wednesday, killing three and wounding two, police said. "This is what you all get for firing me!" he reportedly shouted.

The gunman, Paul Calden, 33, was found dead about two hours later on a Frisbee golf course in a Clearwater park 15 miles away. Police said he shot himself.

Calden had been let go eight months ago from Fireman's Fund Insurance Co.'s local office, said Tampa police spokesman Steve Cole.

Cole said all of the people shot were managers, supervisors or executives of the Fireman's Fund office. A spokesman for the company wouldn't immediately confirm that.

Ethics panel set to investigate Packwood case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders have filled all six seats on the Select Committee on Ethics, clearing the way for consideration of sexual harassment allegations against Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore.

Sen. Richard H. Bryan, D-Nev., will be chairman. Other Democrats, chosen by Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine were Barbara Mikulski of Maryland and Thomas Daschle of South Dakota. The three Republicans are Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, Ted Stevens of Alaska and Robert Smith of New Hampshire.

The committee staff is conducting a preliminary inquiry on Packwood, who has publicly admitted sexually harassing some women who have worked for him, but declined to discuss specific cases.

Clinton continues attorney general search

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton continued his search for an attorney general Wednesday, although one senior official said the process was moving slowly.

Clinton wants to fill the position soon to put Zoe Baird's embarrassing withdrawal behind the young administration. Also, the new attorney general must deal with FBI Director William Sessions, who is challenging a Justice Department finding of improprieties on his part.

But the president has warned aides to take their time and do the job right. Clinton has taken the blame for rushing the choice of Baird to meet his self-imposed deadline.

Allies press U.N. to take over in Somalia

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. special envoy Robert Oakley accused the United Nations on Wednesday of "dragging its feet" on taking over military command in Somalia from the United States.

He said the United States and other nations were pressing U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali to name a respected independent mediator to help Somalia's warring factions on the road to peace.

UI OFFICIALS DEFEND PROCEDURE

Bomb scare handling concerns community

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Although some members of the UI community have expressed concern about the university's handling of Tuesday's bomb threat, UI officials said Wednesday that the situation was handled correctly.

According to the UI Department of Public Safety Chief Mitchell Jones, someone called the Iowa City Police Department on a routine business line and said a bomb would go off in Van Allen Hall at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday.

After consulting with the UI administration and department heads in the building, the Department of Public Safety decided not to evacuate the building, Jones said, although some classes were let out early.

Firefighters and others stood by while the building was searched. Emergency personnel left after the 11:30 deadline passed and the search was completed.

Jones said the Department of Public Safety was following correct procedures in investigating the threat.

"How the situation is handled depends upon what is said — how the threat is worded, what time it was made, and other factors. We contact the department heads and the administration and make a decision about what to do," he said.

"We take them all very seriously," UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said. "It seems pretty rare, and I can't recall any situation where it has turned out to be true, but we do take them seriously."

Although Jones said they determined that the threat was not serious enough to warrant evacuating the building, he could not give out any more specific details about how such a decision was made.

But John Kapler, whose wife works in Van Allen Hall, said she found out about the threat while listening to the radio.

"I was outraged at the fact that she wasn't even informed (by the university)," he said. "If they don't have a policy, they should sure as hell get one. Very simply, they should get the word out."

Jones said evacuating a building every time a bomb threat is made is not the answer.

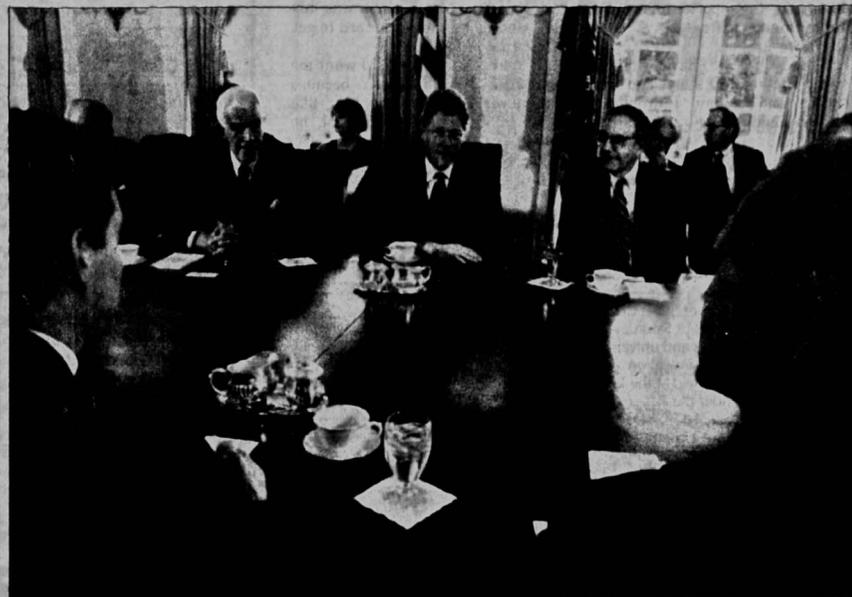

"If we start to give in to every prank we get like this, what we're going to end up doing is having classes cancelled every day," he said.

If buildings were evacuated for every bomb threat, some students would use this to their advantage when trying to avoid a big test, Jones said.

"Then wham, bam — they're calling in a bomb threat and we're evacuating the building," he said.

WHAT IS EDUCATION WORTH?

Study fixes value of diploma

Tom Bovee
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — That college diploma hanging on the wall is worth $1,039 a month in extra pay.

At that rate, it takes the typical four-year graduate just a little under two years to make up the cost — not counting the pay and experience he would have earned working rather than studying.

On average, people with bachelor's degrees earn $2,116 a month, a Census Bureau study said Wednesday. High-school graduates earn $1,077 a month.

Tuition, books, room and board for four years at a public university averaged $19,880 in 1990, a survey by the College Board found. The cost of education has since risen to more than $23,000 for the four years.

Prestigious private universities cost far more.

Is it worth it?

"As my job search threatens — I've gotten four rejections already — it's kind of depressing, especially considering how much education costs today," said Don Modica, 21, a senior who pays more than

Strict code of conduct to follow lifting of ban

Donna Cassata
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton tried to defuse opposition to lifting the ban on homosexuals in the military Wednesday, pledging on the eve of his proposal that a strict code governing sexual conduct would accompany any policy change. Republicans readied for a fight just the same.

Clinton focused on fellow Democrats, telephoning Sen. Sam Nunn and inviting Nunn and other Armed Services Committee Democrats to an evening meeting at the White House.

Nunn, probably the most influential senator on military matters, recited a litany of reasons for keeping the ban in a Senate floor speech. However, in a switch of tone from earlier criticism of Clinton's handling of the issue, he also said, "It's in everyone's interest to see if we can resolve this issue through consensus rather than confrontation."

Clinton had intended to release his policy Wednesday, but delayed it one day to give himself and Defense Secretary Les Aspin a chance to speak further to Nunn and other senators.

A testy Clinton refused to answer reporters' questions on the issue at a picture-taking session. Asked if the controversy was distracting him from the economy, Clinton snapped: "No, it's distracting you. It's not distracting me."

Opposition continued among lawmakers and in thousands of telephone calls that tied up Capitol telephones most of the day.

Nunn said in his speech that any policy change must be the shared responsibility of the executive branch and Congress. The Georgia Democrat asked a series of provocative questions that he said the administration had failed to answer. See MILITARY, Page 8A

IT'S OK TO DRINK IT

Water nitrate content seems to be stabilizing

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

Both nitrates and pesticides have contributed to ground water contamination in the state and have adversely affected Iowa City water in the past, according to Lynette Seigley of the Iowa Department of Natural Resources Geological Survey Bureau.

High nitrate concentrations are known to cause blue baby syndrome . . .

Seigley, a guest of the UI Environmental Coalition, spoke to 25 Iowa City community members Wednesday night on ground water contamination and related health concerns when it is used as drinking water.

Citing recent studies by the Geological Survey Bureau, Seigley said ground water samples indicate that the worst nitrate and pesticide problems occur in the southern and western parts of the state.

However, Seigley pointed out that in 1990, following a two-year drought, the nitrate content in Iowa City drinking water rose above acceptable levels.

Because of insufficient rains, a lot of nitrates, which come primarily from the use of fertilizers and are easily water soluble, were not drained from the fields.

When more substantial rains came in 1990, the excess nitrates were carried to ground water and the Iowa River in large concentrations, Seigley said. Iowa City drinking water comes primarily from the Iowa River, and also from the Jordan and Silurian aquifers underneath the city.

According to Ed Moreno, the manager of the Iowa City Water Plant, the amount of low-nitrate concentration aquifer water used for the drinking water supply is usually increased to keep nitrate levels within acceptable limits. But because the concentrations in the river water were so high, the plant was forced to release water with nitrate levels slightly above the accepted limit.

High nitrate concentrations are known to cause blue baby syndrome, a disease which prevents infants under six months from getting enough oxygen.

"Evidence is inconclusive as to whether high nitrates cause problems in adults," Seigley said.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Sampling the wonderful-tasting water of Iowa City.

Moreno pointed out that vegetables like broccoli and asparagus have high nitrate concentrations. He added that nitrate levels in the Iowa River currently seem to be stabilizing at safe levels.

While fertilizer use by farmers in Illinois is increasing, Seigley said Iowa farmers are using less.

"A number of educational programs have tried to encourage farmers to manage how much they put into their fields," she said.

Although people tend to think of fertilizers primarily as a rural water contamination problem, a substantial amount of nitrate contamination comes from lawn-care products, Seigley said.

Seigley estimated that there could be close to 100,000 abandoned wells in Iowa. Wells that either have leaky encasements or don't reach above ground level are especially detrimental to ground water, she added.

Leaky underground storage tanks and agricultural drainage systems can also lead to contamination of underground water, she said. Many such underground tanks have been excavated and studies are being done to learn how to divert the drainage systems to surface water ditches.

Getting to class more fun as students walk 'n' rock

Many students find Walkmans a necessary companion.

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

What's small enough to fit in your coat pocket or bookbag, uses a couple batteries and can make a typical bus ride or walk to class more exciting?

That's right. Personal cassette players — commonly referred to as the Sony brand name, "Walkman."

Whether top-of-the-line "super" models or simple cassette players, Walkmans are part of many a student's everyday baggage.

"A Walkman makes a mundane walk more acceptable," said UI junior Sean Campbell, who was spotted wearing one on a Cambus.

Campbell, who said he was listening to the SugarCube's first album, began using his Walkman regularly during a long trip over winter break and "never gave it up."

Many students never leave home without them.

"It gives me energy when I'm walking to class," said UI freshman Liz Kimberlin, who was jamming to a tape she mixed herself.

"It's an expensive habit, though," Kimberlin added, referring to all the money she spends on batteries.

UI sophomore Jenni Baysinger, who was stopped while listening to the Grease soundtrack, agreed.

"I even asked for batteries for Christmas," she said.

UI junior Todd Shale said his Walkman is a cure for boredom.

"If I have a long walk to class early in the morning and there's not many people around, it's something to pass the time," he said, adding that he was listening to KRUI.

Most Walkman wearers said the music they listen to changes daily.

"It depends on my mood," said UI sophomore Lisa Wells, relaxing on a Cambus to Pink Floyd's The Delicate Sound of Thunder.

"It needs to be something upbeat, uptempo," Campbell said.

In addition to the cost of batteries, which are usually $2-3 for a 4-pack, there is a wide range of prices for Walkmans. Depending on style and brand, costs run from $30 for a basic cassette player to almost $200 for suped-up sets with special protective cases, bass functions and other extras.

Despite the cost, Walkmans remain part of the student wardrobe for many reasons, some less defined than others.

"I really don't know why I carry it," UI senior Lisa Van Steenwyk admitted. "I guess I just like to listen to music."

David Gutenfelder/The Daily Iowan

Wearing portable radios, many UI students combat the boredom of their daily studies by taking their favorite musicians with them.

CRASH VICTIM TALKS TO PRESS

Chris Street's girlfriend speaks out on his character

Associated Press

IOWA CITY — A week after the automobile accident that killed her boyfriend, Chris Street, Kim Vinton has resumed college life and spoken publicly about the former Iowa basketball player.

Vinton was in the car Street drove the night of Jan. 19 when he pulled into the path of an oncoming snowplow on Highway 1 in Iowa City. She suffered a punctured lung and broken rib. She was in a wheelchair at Street's funeral in Indianola last Friday, but is now walking.

In an interview with the Cedar Rapids Gazette, Vinton didn't dwell on details of the accident, which happened after she and Street left a team meal at the Highlander Inn.

"There's some flashbacks every once in a while," she said Tuesday. "We were running late. We had to hurry because he had to get to class by seven . . ."

"I haven't really had time to think about it. I haven't been left alone since the accident. My roommate has been sleeping in the same room with me and going everywhere with me."

Referring to Street in the present tense, she explained, "I haven't been in a situation (since the accident) where I'm with Chris and no one else. I usually eat dinner with him every night. But my mom has been staying with me, fixing me dinner. Once she leaves, then it's really going to hit me that he's not there."

Vinton has resumed her part-time duties in the sports information department office at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"I'm really tired. I have bruises all over," she said. "I started to go to classes on Monday. I dropped a few, so I only have 12 hours now, enough to still be considered a full-time student. But I'm tired. When one o'clock hits, I'm ready to go to bed for the day."

Vinton met Street in their sophomore year at Indianola High School. Street's family moved to Indianola from Humeston before that school year began.

"We've been dating for five years," Vinton said. "He was my best friend. He made me feel important all the time. Basketball was his life, and he had to work hard to get where he is today."

"I realize that he would want me to be a strong person because whenever I hurt or anything like that in sports in high school, he would just call me a wimp. It was like, 'Toughen it up, toughen it up.' That's what I'm going to do because I know that's what Chris would want me to do," Vinton said.

WOULD-BE LAWYERS CHANGE PLANS

Overcrowded law field deters some students

Potential law students are put off by competition.

Susan Kreimer
The Daily Iowan

Editor's note: This is the second of two installments.

Plans to enter an already-saturated work force, worsened by the recession, have changed for some would-be lawyers. Some undergraduates are reconsidering their career choice, while others wait before embarking on a three-year path laden with law books and multithousand-dollar loans.

Still, another group of undergraduates remains steadfast in their quest for a law degree, hoping to someday channel their legal skills into promising alternatives.

"The juris doctorate is a very flexible degree. It's extremely valuable..."

Paula Patton, executive director

In its year-end data report released in August 1992, Law School Admission Services in Newtown, Pa. indicated that in 1991-92, 92,500 applicants sought admission to 176 American Bar Association-accredited law schools in the United States, a 1.6 percent drop from 94,000 in 1990-91.

Jana Cardoza, LSAS' coordinator for public affairs, suspects the recession-shrunk job market may have dissuaded some undergraduates from pursuing law degrees.

However, one source of consolation for prospective law school candidates in a dismal legal economy is that law graduates can "parlay" the skills learned in law school into nonlegal work, according to Paula Patton, executive director of the National Association for Law Placement in Washington, D.C.

Past graduates entering the academic sector have worked as teachers, counselors and librarians from elementary through college levels, Patton said.

Of those law graduates opting for the business sector, Patton claimed that some have become bartenders, dentists, journalists, bankers, computer software developers and ministers.

"The juris doctorate is a very flexible degree," Patton said. "It's extremely valuable and viable in many career fields, so students are realizing that they do have options."

Dean of the UI College of Law N. William Hines agreed with the outlook that a legal education broadens a student's knowledge by developing general writing skills for a "full range of job opportunities."

More career possibilities are available to graduates than just general law, said Debbie Zippe, a UI graduating senior in English and president of the UI Pre-Law Society — an informational group consisting of 60 undergraduates planning to attend law school. The group draws UI law students and professors as well as local attorneys for informational sessions.

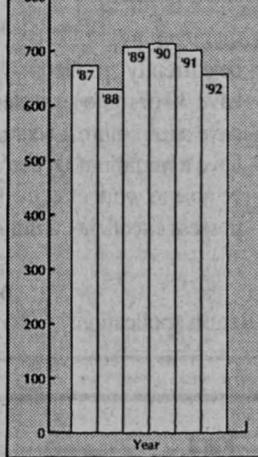

"A lot of students currently in law school have painted a gloomy picture of job prospects... they've made us aware of the intense competition in law school, and especially the scrambling for jobs upon graduation," said Zippe, who is not dismayed from pursuing a law degree despite negative feedback from her brother, an attorney.

Zippe, like other undergraduates who want practical experience to improve their chances of being accepted to law school, plans to work for a few years before beginning her legal education.

"A lot of undergraduates are taking a break to polish themselves and make themselves better candidates through work experience," she said.

Other students who have considered careers in law will use that break from school to evaluate their options.

Enrollment in Juris Doctorate Program 1987-1992

Since late sophomore year, Kristin Berg, a UI senior in English and journalism, intended on working as a prosecutor and eventually a judge, but this past summer she changed her mind.

"When you're about to be a senior, you start thinking about your life and career in conjunction with who you are as a person. I didn't want to work 80 hours a week," Berg said.

Berg's top priority is to work as a political reporter for a newspaper or magazine. But she has not ruled out law school for the future.

"Law school is something you can go back to a few years down the road," Berg said. "I'd just like to try other things right now."

Once in law school, students have been known to revamp their careers, according to NALP's Patton.

Patton said that although most students begin law school with the dream of becoming a lawyer, some "change plans as they mature and go through the curriculum."

Determined in his goals to enter law school, UI senior and history major Steve Smith said, "I figure that if I'm any good, I'll eventually work my way up."

STUDENTS SEEK INVESTIGATION

2 complaints filed against Clark

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

At least two complaints have been filed against UI Student Association Sen. Michael B. Clark for possible violations of Election Codes, UI Coordinator for Students Programs Stephen Gray said Wednesday.

Both complaints ask the Student Elections Board to investigate alleged campaigning performed by Clark prior to the Feb. 1 date set up by UISA Election Codes.

In addition, The Daily Iowan has received a third complaint which is intended to be filed with the SEB.

All three complaints cite a letter sent by Clark on Dec. 28 to potential campaign contributors stating he has decided to run for UISA president and is asking for monetary contributions to his campaign.

One of the complaints, filed by John Bagby, a UISA senator, cites Section 17 of the UISA Election Codes, which defines campaigning as including the distribution of written materials.

"After a review of Mr. Clark's campaign fund-raising propaganda," Bagby writes, "I believe his blurring of ethics rules and his blatant disrespect for UISA Code demand impeachment proceedings, as well as disqualification from the campaign..."

In a phone interview, Bagby said his filing for impeachment is contingent on the findings of the SEB as to whether Clark violated UISA Codes.

Another complaint, filed by Jon Fogarty, a UI freshman, says that Clark's personal and political views on certain issues should not be considered in the review process, but rather at the ballot box.

What should be reviewed, Fogarty writes, is whether Clark violated UISA Election Codes.

"If Clark is allowed to enter the elections under this cloud without some investigation, it would be a negative statement of UISA ethics and morals..." he writes. "If you should find no wrongdoing, then allow Clark to enter the election and let the student body judge his views."

The third complaint, which was delivered to the SEB Wednesday afternoon, was filed by UI senior John Resch.

In his complaint, Resch anticipates that Clark may defend his actions by stating that since he did not send letters to individuals who are able to vote in the election, he has broken no rules.

In response to that argument, Resch writes "regardless of who these letters were sent to, they constitute campaign material and were sent in an effort to further Mr. Clark's campaign."

According to Gray, a letter will be sent to Clark by the SEB today concerning at least one of the complaints.

An SEB meeting will be held tonight at 8 p.m. to deal with issues surrounding the upcoming campaign, but it is unclear whether the complaints will be discussed at that meeting.

Wednesday also marked the final day to file an application to run for the position of UISA president. Gray said that he expects there to be three or four candidates in the running.

Iraq, Somalia, Bosnia: Shaping the New World Order

Instead of the peace and stability the end of the Cold War was supposed to bring, we find war, famine, and economic chaos around the world. What kind of world order does the US government want? What is the role of the United Nations? Is there an alternative to endless military actions and wars to impose the will of our rulers on the rest of the world? UI professor of Social Work, Paul Adams, will address these questions and offer the socialist solution to a world of war and famine.

PROMOTING HER BOOK

Steinem brings self-esteem to IC

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Gloria Steinem, co-founder of Ms. magazine and renowned feminist and activist, will visit the UI campus tonight to promote her latest book, "Revolution from Within: A Book of Self-Esteem," which was recently published in paperback.

Steinem will read from the book at 8 p.m. in MacBride Auditorium, answer questions from the audience and then sign copies of the book. As part of "Live from Prairie Lights" the reading will be broadcast live on WSUL.

Steinem, who has written two other books, is stopping in Iowa City as part of her busy publicity tour for the book's paperback publication, according to Jim Harris, owner of Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

"We just asked for her and we got her," said Harris. He said Steinem had gone to larger towns last year to publicize the hardback publication but this time she wanted to go to smaller, college towns.

Harris said the reading will follow the general format of Prairie Lights' live readings, adding that he is expecting a full house.

"The auditorium seats 810," he said, "but I'm not going to turn anyone away."

Though self-help books are a popular market these days, Harris said Steinem's book on self-esteem is unique and has sold well.

"I found it very interesting. You can understand it — it's not very complex," he said. Although Steinem is a famous person who has been idolized, said Harris, part of her appeal is that she comes across as "basically a regular person."

Steinem has dedicated her latest book to "everyone — women, men, children and even nations — whose power has been limited by a lack of self-esteem." She also wrote that the book was "inspired by women, whose self-esteem is making the deepest revolution."

Steinem has been a writer and activist for nearly 30 years and has written two previous books, "Outrageous Acts and Everyday Rebellions" and "Marilyn: Norma Jeane." She currently is the consulting editor of Ms. magazine, which she co-founded in 1972.

UNDERSTANDING THE LEGAL SYSTEM

People's Law School hopes to clarify common issues

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Local judges, lawyers and UI law professors will offer free information to the public on common legal issues during a series of classes making up the first People's Law School.

The six different classes, to be held at the Iowa City Public Library during February and March, are co-sponsored by the Johnson County Bar Association and the library.

"We want to help make people a little more conversant in the law," committee member and ICPL Coordinator of Information Services Maeve Clark said.

The library is providing a room for the classes, which will be videotaped for live broadcast on the library channel. They will later be placed in the library archives where they can be checked out by the public, committee chairperson and local attorney Susan Frye said.

Frye said the idea for the People's Law School began in the winter of 1991 when a local attorney attended a similar school in Florida.

"The idea is to provide free information on common, everyday legal issues," she said. "We hope that it will become an annual event and that people will take advantage of it." Clark said the classes will cover buying and selling a home; children and the law; wills, trusts and estate planning; employment law and discrimination issues; and new criminal legislation and related constitutional issues. An additional class is titled advance directives, living wills, powers of attorney for health-care decisions and powers of attorney for financial decision-making.

Generally, three speakers will divide the time, with each addressing a different issue, Frye said. A question-and-answer period will follow the discussion.

"We really don't know who or how many people will attend," she said. "I think the subject will dictate the audience."

Frye said she has already had several telephone calls from many elderly people about the wills, trusts and estate planning class.

"It seems to be an area of interest for all age groups," she said. "Many younger people are executing living wills."

The People's Law School is supported in part by a $10,000 endowment gift to the ICPL from the Bar Association, Clark said. This fund also supports the purchase of current law-related library materials which are available at the library and will be on display.

purposes.

To put it simply, the fiber-optics system is a two-way voice, video and data communication process where streams of light carry information inside hair-thin strands of glass. Bolden's two classrooms were connected by such strands so that each room could hear and see what was going on in the other.

Though it may seem radically new, the UI has transmitted televised courses and programs via satellite for years. However, UI Assistant Director of Continuing Education Wayne Prophet said that satellite technology will soon be far surpassed by the fiber-optics network.

For starters, fiber-optics have better audio and visual signals than satellites. Also, fiber-optics allow certain communications that satellite technology cannot, such as the presentation of films and videos to different places simultaneously.

Since the video signal of a satellite can be broadcast only one way, from source to receiver, instructors using this kind of technology can only hear the students who are elsewhere. But a fiber-optics system is completely two-way, and allows everyone to see and hear everyone else.

Bolden thinks that the added visual communication will make the interactive teaching process less awkward.

"I think students will feel more comfortable if they can see and hear us and we can hear and see them," she said.

SUSPECT ARRESTED

Clinton officer killed during car chase

Associated Press

CLINTON — A Clinton police officer died early Wednesday when the squad car he was driving crashed during a high speed chase. Todd Stone, 29, and several other officers were chasing a car that was traveling at speeds of up to 80 mph when Stone lost control of the car he was driving.

The car struck a utility pole along a Clinton city street at 1:10 a.m., killing him instantly.

Four hours later, officers in Illinois arrested the driver of the car that was being pursued. Todd J. Picha, 21, of Erie, Ill., was charged with obstruction of justice. He was arrested in Albany, Ill., which is just across the Mississippi River from Clinton.

Later Wednesday, Clinton County Attorney Larry Schultz filed one count of vehicular homicide, a class D felony, and one count of eluding officers, a serious misdemeanor, against Picha.

"Losing a fellow officer is the worst nightmare an officer has," said Clinton Police Chief Gene Beinke.

A kinder, gentler U.S. military? Autom

GAYS IN THE MILITARY

Leadership requires swift action

One of President Clinton's weaknesses is that he takes consensus-building to an extreme and tries to make everyone happy. On some issues, like abortion, that's impossible. His swift action last week to lift the gag rule contrasts with the caution he's exhibiting on another controversial issue: the ban on gays in the military.

We've heard the same tired concerns from senior officers. Battlefield AIDS? No one is tested for HIV more thoroughly than military personnel. Sexual harassment? Minor revisions in the present military code, to base charges on behavior rather than preference, would be the only changes needed. These claims are so easily refuted that they can't possibly be the real issues.

The military attitude toward gays seems best summed up for me in the film "An Officer And A Gentleman." Louis Gossett Jr., playing a drill sergeant, shouts at a raw recruit: "The only things from Oklahoma are steers and queers! And I don't see any horns on you, boy!" The ultimate insult to male pride in our society: homophobia as control mechanism.

That's why the military's attitude is so hypocritical. We aren't going to conduct internal search and destroy missions for gays, they say. Just leave the status quo. We don't mind having "them" here, but it could cause — er — problems if people knew about it.

We've heard the same tired concerns from senior officers. Battlefield AIDS? Sexual harassment? These claims are so easily refuted that they can't possibly be the real issues.

Morale. Over and over we hear about troop morale. Senior officers predict dire consequences if the ban is lifted, saying people will quit the military over the issue. It's time to ask: So what?

That's right, so what? Our armed forces are still at Cold War strength anyway. Cuts are inevitable, given the size of the deficit and the changes in the world. Our military and our nation would be better off if a few people who can't adapt just quit. We have accommodated bigotry too often in the past.

Everyone in the armed forces has sworn to uphold the Constitution. That means following the orders of the commander in chief. The troops can take their orders or get out. Our system clearly sets up civilian authority over the military. Harry Truman affirmed that principle during the Korean War, when he fired General MacArthur for insubordination.

It was also Truman who ended racial segregation in the armed forces. That was one of the first racial barriers in our society to be removed, and it wasn't a popular move. Truman sent a clear message: American citizens are equal before the law, and should have an equal opportunity to serve. That's what this issue is all about. That's why this issue is so important. By lifting the ban, President Clinton will clearly say that gay, lesbian and bisexual Americans are full-fledged citizens.

It's time for Clinton to take a stand, while his administration is new and his leadership is strongest. Homophobia is the last type of bigotry that's still socially acceptable. Sometimes leadership means being ahead of public opinion.

The military will never be happy with the presence of openly gay soldiers in the ranks. But they've had months to prepare for the inevitable. The longer President Clinton waits, the more the military will resist change. He should act decisively and act now.

LETTERS

Clark responds to coverage

To the Editor:
Anyone reading this letter has presumably been subjected to the numerous character assaults that this "newspaper" has published. The number of column inches devoted to sabotaging my potential candidacy for the Student Body President is appalling. I am not even officially a candidate yet, but there have been four separate articles / editorials (who can tell the difference any more) attacking everything from my religion to my political affiliation to my personal correspondence. Perhaps the editors of the DI are unaware of the fact that they are no longer simply reporting the news, but making it.

The Daily Iowan reporter who created this entire fiasco defends it as "investigative journalism". He claims that anything dealing with student elections should be reported. What he failed to mention, however is that: 1) There was no complaint filed before he wrote the article which begged for someone to file one. 2) When he began this story, he was unaware of UIASA election rules and simply saw the fact that I am a Christian and a conservative as a way to create controversy. 3) The letter which was published on the front page was personal correspondence (read — FREE SPEECH) from myself to a personal friend and former employer which was illegally intercepted by his administrative assistant and faxed to The Daily Iowan, and 4) The letter went only to personal friends, family and business associates — none of which are students and thus are not eligible to vote in this election.

I do not have sufficient time, column space, or patience to refute all of the ridiculous claims from Byron Kent Wikstrom's preposterous editorial which effectively stated that if someone is proud of their Christianity and dares speak about it in public, he should be ineligible for public office. Mr. Wikstrom and I probably differ on nearly every subject, but he is entitled to his opinion. It is the fact that Wikstrom's column was run a day early in order to coincide with the article about my personal letter that is distressing.

This entire series of events leads us to the question, "Should a candidate for Student Body President have to run against their own student newspaper?" In the event that I decide to run and The Daily Iowan continues with this current line of personal attack, I would proudly run against The Daily Iowan. There is no other organization that receives so much in student funding while failing so miserably to represent the student body. If this election comes down to a referendum on The Daily Iowan, its opponent will surely prevail.

"What can the United States military do? It can kill people and destroy property in the name of the American people." Those words came from the redoubtable Harry Summers during an interview on PBS' "Frontline." Summers, a retired U.S. Army colonel and syndicated columnist, described a meeting where Reagan State department wonks kept asking him what the military could do to "stabilize" Central America. Frustrated by Summers' insistence that it could not affect social and political reforms there, the wonks finally asked, "What can the military do?" Summers' reply was short on tact, long on honesty.

Such brutal honesty is necessary right now. During the winter of 1989-90, George Bush inaugurated his "New World Order." With the demise of the Eastern Bloc, we were expected to believe that the world was entering a period of peace and stability. The next three years saw Yugoslavia splinter into hostile fragments, fighting break out in former Soviet republics and the bloody excesses of Desert Storm. In fact, the world is an unstable, dangerous place. It is only made more so by the U.S. government and its military.

Global crises have caused many people to support a more aggressive use of U.S. military power. Somalia is an example of the "humanitarian" use of force. However, one Marine officer, like Summers, was blunt in assessing the military's role: "You bring an M-1 tank, blow a Somali armored truck to pieces and say 'Any questions?'" The mess in that country is the result of intervention by the industrialized powers. During the Cold War, Somalia was caught between the United States and the Soviet Union. In the late 19th century, it was carved up between Britain, Italy and France. Today, the presence of Italian troops as U.N. "peacekeepers" is particularly offensive to Somalis who remember Italy's occupation before World War II.

While Somalia recedes from view, Bosnia looms. Without U.S. forces, the United Nations is powerless, as demonstrated by the U.N. presence in the Balkans. If U.S. leaders such as Colin Powell have been reluctant to send troops there, they will be pressured to intervene by members of the European Community. The Balkans could see a replay of Desert Storm: U.S. forces, while entering under the authority of U.N. mandates, would conduct operations under U.S. command in pursuit of U.S. objectives and interests.

The Persian Gulf also tempts proponents of U.S. intervention. Operating behind the cover of U.N. resolutions, the United States continues its air occupation of Iraq. However, the United States will not intervene to support Iraqi Shiites in the southern zone (that might embolden Islamic fundamentalists who threaten U.S. interests in the region) or Kurds in the north (which would offend U.S. ally Turkey, which has dealt brutally with its resident Kurds). Desert Storm was not about "democracy."

Nor was it about preventing Iraq from obtaining nuclear weapons. That pretext fails on two counts. Israel, South Africa, India and Pakistan are other nations which either have or are trying to get their own nukes. The United States said nothing about Iraq's nuclear program when it supported Iraq during its 1980-88 war with Iran. Second, under the guise of allowing U.N. inspection teams into the country, the United States can demonstrate its control over Iraqi airspace. Although it is the United Nations which demands access to Iraqi facilities, it is U.S. military muscle which enforces those demands.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said the U.N. strategy will be "painting countries blue." Covered by U.N. resolutions, the United States and its allies will use their military to enforce "order" throughout the world. Because it is the dominant military power, the United States will take a leading role in this policing, but only when its interests are at stake. The United Nations will provide a legalistic cover under international "law" for U.S. intervention. Further, because of its declining economic strength, the United States will be pressed to assert itself in the one field where it holds uncontested global supremacy: the use of armed force.

The U.S. military has impressive capabilities. It can move large numbers of people and huge amounts of supplies. It has an advanced communications network. It trains thousands of people every year in a wide range of technical specialties. But the U.S. military does all of those things in order to fight. It fights to protect the U.S. state and the interests it serves. While the military teaches some recruits useful skills and requires a high level of discipline and teamwork, it uses those virtues to crush anyone who gets in the way of the United States. Just ask Harry Summers.

Once upon a time, oh, a 15 years ago, I remember a foreign car was a thing of an oddity.

Either you owned a car like a Mercedes or a Jaguar was beyond the reach of mortals or you owned some odd-looking import from Japan with a name like "Datsun." Because of, like, Datsun.

Of course, times have changed. Today you'd be hard pressed to find a parking lot anywhere in the United States that doesn't have at least a few imported cars (maybe at a Ford plant).

What happened? Well, it may tell us a sad tale of foreign conglomerates selling below cost while moaning about unfair trading practices. The truth: consumers buying more imported cars than they liked them.

Some of the imports found in American garages beat the quality that U.S. cars had then: things like engines, exotic suspensions advanced features. And most of them had two other qualities that most American cars of the time lacked: they didn't break down very often, and they generally had doors and other parts that at least looked like they were designed to fit together. So, year after year, the Big Three automakers scoffed at reviews that lauded the imports while lambasting the hulks of steel they were turning out. While American automotive executives sat in leather-backed chairs in Detroit and arrogantly predicted that the American consumer would never buy such tiny imports, Hondas and Toyotas cruised by on the streets in front of their offices in increasing numbers. With each passing model year in the early '80s, several things happened, none of which looked too promising for the long-term future of the American auto industry. The first was that young consumers who had grown up listening to Mom and Dad brag to the neighbors about the new white-walled Chevy wagon in the driveway began to give up on American cars. After struggling with poorly built Pintos and Chevettes as first cars, they loudly proclaimed "Never again!" and went out to buy new imports as their first family cars. Unfortunately, the office walls in Detroit must have been pretty thick, because the message really didn't seem to be hitting home with the U.S. automakers yet. While they introduced new models, some of which were actually pretty good cars, they failed to hear the simple plea of the American consumer: build me a car that's fuel efficient and works well. In the meantime, Congress had been persuaded to raise import quotas on foreign automobiles. While this did buy the automakers some time, at first things didn't seem to change very much. But then, in 1986, the first sign that U.S. automakers were finally making a comeback appeared. Ford introduced the Taurus, a model with aerodynamic looks years ahead of the competition, dramatically improved quality, and reliable, well-built systems. In the past seven years, Ford has refined the Taurus and the other models in its line to the point where five of the 10 best selling vehicles in the United States are made by Ford. General Motors took a different approach to beating the increased competition from abroad. After it invested billions of dollars in state-of-the-art robotics in the early '80s only to prove that robots could build lemons just as well as humans, the company decided it needed a fresh start. GM launched the Saturn division with a handful of creative managers and engineers and a large pile of cash left over from the '70s. Chrysler, which narrowly escaped death in the early '80s with the help of a government bailout only to fall behind again despite its hugely successful minivans, has reemerged once again as the comeback kid. With some of the lowest product development times in the industry, a widely acclaimed new series of upscale family sedans and a slew of products in the pipeline, things finally seem to be turning around for Chrysler, whose buyout of AMC also brought the successful Jeep family into its fold. On top of finally producing a variety of high quality, innovative and well-designed models, Detroit's offerings are now priced about $1,500 less than most comparable foreign models due to currency fluctuations, lower costs in some areas, and the benefits of the still-standing quotas. So does this mean the American auto industry is headed for an industrial renaissance? Probably not. While the Big Three made dramatic improvements in everything from fuel efficiency to looks, the imports weren't exactly resting on their laurels. Who'll win the latest round of the car wars? A lot of that depends on the American consumer. If Americans go out and test drive cars without any preconceived ideas about quality or performance, they'll probably be able to find an American car that's as well-built as any import with better performance for less money. Fifteen years ago Americans started taking chances on foreign cars that looked like good deals, but didn't have proven track records. Today, they face the same situation with American cars. The only difference is that this time, the future of a whole sector of the economy is coming along for the test drive, hoping that patriotism and common sense can be on the same side for the first time in a decade. AVOIDING A BUDGET FEUD

Pomerantz, teacher union to seek 'common ground'

DES MOINES — The head of the Board of Regents on Wednesday said he'll meet with leaders of the state's teacher union to seek "common ground" and head off a budget feud. "We will take the initiative and do the inviting," Board of Regents President Marvin Pomerantz said. Pomerantz conceded that "in some areas we are competitive" with other segments of the education establishment but said "we must work together." Pomerantz said other school interest groups would be involved in the talks. His comments came before a legislative budget committee that oversees the $520 million spent each year on Iowa's three public universities and were aimed at cooling a public split. Leaders of the Iowa State Education Association, which represents 30,000 public school teachers, asked the Legislature for a $116 million increase in funding next year, and suggested legislators could find some of that money in the higher education budget. That was a rare public split in the education establishment, a rift Pomerantz said he was eager to seal. "I would welcome the opportunity to sit down" with leaders of the union, Pomerantz said. When prodded by legislators, Pomerantz said he would initiate the meetings. Those meetings could allow both sides "to see where our common ground lies," he said. "It is absolutely imperative that we work together," Pomerantz said. The budget fight is serious in this year's Legislature. The $116 million sought by the teachers is more than lawmakers have to spend. Legislators were told Wednesday that proposed university funding also is inadequate. Iowa State University President Martin Jischke said he's gotten a clear message that federal research projects will be lost because the state isn't spending enough to match that funding. "The messages we are receiving is that it's not enough," Jischke told a legislative budget committee. "The state must bear a greater share." The issue is particularly crucial as the Clinton administration takes over. Money that has been going to defense spending is likely to be shifted to other research. "I believe this is the beginning of the change of the national research agenda," Jischke said. His warning reinforces a lecture U.S. Rep. Neal Smith has given lawmakers that they are playing a high-risk budget game that could cost the state in the long run.

BAN NONEXISTENT FOR MOST ALLIES

NATO countries deal with gays in military

Jessica Baldwin
Associated Press

LONDON — Gays have been openly accepted in the armed forces of many major U.S. allies without the controversy that now faces President Clinton. But many homosexuals in uniform still find it prudent to stay in the closet.

In the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, only the United States, Greece, Turkey and Britain still ban homosexuals in the military. Russia, Japan, and major Latin American nations also forbid gays in uniform.

In NATO nations France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Denmark, gays are allowed to serve, but are disciplined if their homosexuality enters the barracks. The same holds true in Finland and Israel.

Foreign experience with allowing gays in the military could influence eventual U.S. policy. Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Wednesday that the United States should give special consideration to how the issue has been handled by its NATO allies.

Australia ended its ban on gays in the military in November, and controversy over the move died down a month later.

To some Europeans, the uproar over Clinton's determination to end formal discrimination against homosexuals is baffling.

"Homosexuality doesn't create problems at all. We don't have the square view on the matter as the Americans have," said Capt. Michael Laustsen, a military spokesman in Denmark, where gays are allowed to marry.

But openly homosexual behavior still works against the gay soldier's acceptance, even in the most liberal countries.

"The Swedish system is built on the fact that the individual keeps it to himself," said Swedish military press spokesman Bertil Ternert.

In Australia, no uniformed gays have declared themselves despite their new legal status.

"I'm not surprised," said Brig. Adrian D'Hage, spokesman for the Australian Defense Force. "A lot of them are decent people who keep their private lives private and who want to get on with their job."

D'Hage added: "What people do off the base, off duty and out of uniform is their own business."

In Finland and Italy, gay draftees can seek exemption from one-year mandatory military service, but few do.

As long as the soldier doesn't disturb the atmosphere in the barracks or create a "problem" for colleagues, he can make the military a career, said an Italian Defense Ministry spokesman.

Homosexuals usually do not reveal their orientation and get by without problems, said Erkki Paukkunen, Finland's military press chief.

The Netherlands' military has an education program to foster tolerance and understanding that earned Defense Minister Ruuska a medal from the nation's leading gay advocacy group.

Yet Alex Sheerazi, spokesman for the union of conscripted soldiers in the Netherlands, said some gays may not want to come out of the closet because of the "fairly macho culture" of the army.

In Germany, gays are banned from holding leadership positions, and each year there are a handful of disciplinary actions against homosexual officers. One company sergeant was recently demoted when he was caught having sex with a corporal on base.

Israeli army spokesman Lt. Col. Moshe Fogel said no sex, either homosexual or heterosexual, is permitted on Israeli military bases.

"The Israeli army is a reflection of the Israeli society, and it is rare that an 18-year-old would declare himself to be gay. At a later age, when the men do reserve duty, this is not so rare anymore," Fogel said.

He said gays are usually given psychological evaluations. But he said there is no discrimination, and noted that an openly gay colonel in the medical corps was twice promoted.

In Britain, there is growing opposition to the ban. In June the government dropped criminal penalties for homosexuality in the military.

"It takes place anyway, and in general it goes unpunished, so why not allow it openly?" former defense secretary Denis Healey told the Daily Mail this week.

But in Mexico, Argentina and Brazil, prospects for lifting bans remain dim.

Brazilian army spokesman Gilberto Serra said discussion on allowing gays in the service would take "another hundred years."

Eliminating the Venezuelan military's ban on "persons who suffer from this kind of deviation" would offend the historic courage of Venezuelan soldiers, said Gen. Pedro Remigio Rangel Rojas, the army commander.

Despite the cost, Americans increasingly prize a college degree.

In 1990, one American in four had a bachelor's degree or higher, the Census Bureau said. That's up from one in five in 1984.

But a diploma doesn't always open the doors to high pay and security.

"It isn't like it used to be," said Susan Miller, president of the Annandale, Va., job-placement

People with degrees in engineering, computer science and other technical fields can get well-paying jobs when they graduate, Miller said. Everyone else is "out there in the job market competing with the high-school grads."

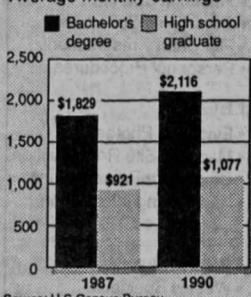

"If someone comes through college and they have no work experience, they're clueless," Miller said. "We see college grads starting as receptionists."

The universities say the payoff comes several years later, as college graduates are promoted past their less-educated colleagues.

Whatever the field of study, colleges and universities try to teach their graduates to work smarter, said Pat Riordan, dean of admissions at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va. "We are teaching them a way to synthesize and communicate at a much higher level than a student that just graduates from high school."

"How is your money better spent?" Riordan asked. "I could have spent the money buying a fancy car and some more vacations ... but I think in the long run spending the money on education is investing in me."

The best-paying bachelor's degree is engineering, worth $2,953 a month, according to the Census figures. Social sciences graduates trail at $1,841 a month, and a liberal arts or humanities degree is worth $1,592 a month in earnings.

But the biggest money goes to people with professional degrees, such as law or medicine. On average, those people earn $4,961 a month extra.

building," he said.

"It's a judgment call," Jones added. "Some might say we should evacuate a building or cancel classes every time a threat is made, but the flip side is that people will take advantage of that."

Although bomb threats on the UI campus are rare, Jones said Tuesday's was the second one in about 10 days.

He said someone recently called the Iowa House in the Union, threatening that a bomb was going to go off on the Pentacrest in the next 24 hours. That threat also turned out to be false.

answer, including whether separate living quarters or changes in the law on sodomy would be necessary.

"It's not simply the right of homosexuals at stake. It's also the right of all those men and women who serve in the military," Nunn said.

His committee plans hearings on the issue in March, and in the meantime, he said in an interview after the speech, "I'd like to have no final decisive action by the president and no final decisive action by the Congress."

At the White House, spokesman George Stephanopoulos said the president would release his policy on Thursday and couple it with a strict conduct code governing sexual behavior and harassment that covered both homosexuals and heterosexuals.

"I think it is important to draw a line between status and conduct," Stephanopoulos said.

The Uniformed Military Code of Justice currently states that sodomy is a crime.

Republicans, meanwhile, promised an immediate challenge to any policy changes.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said if Clinton acts, the Republicans, in a symbolic move, would introduce a free-standing bill codifying the ban this week.

He conceded that the GOP would be unable to get Democratic consent to vote on such a measure.

Then, the Republicans would try to attach an amendment including the ban to the family and medical leave bill next week.

"We'd just as soon wait for family leave ... and take care of two things at once," Dole said at a Capitol Hill news conference.

Nearly a dozen Republican senators met with some two dozen veterans groups on the issue.

"These are all men who have been in the armed services, many who risked their lives ... men who had the experience unlike the experience President Clinton did not have in the military," Dole said.

The public was being heard as well. The main telephone numbers for the House and Senate were jammed most of Wednesday.

Opponents of lifting the ban said most of the hundreds of callers felt the same way.

Football, basketball teams may face cuts

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — An NCAA committee looking into athletic department costs has proposed cuts in recruiting expenses and the size of teams.

One proposal would limit Division I football teams to 105 players, about a 10 percent reduction. Another recommendation would cut preseason practice time in football from 29 days to 22.

The recommendations were sent to all NCAA schools on Wednesday. Some of the proposals could be considered during next year's NCAA convention.

To cut recruiting costs, the committee wants to reduce campus visits by recruits from 70 to 56 in football and from 15 to 12 in basketball. The committee also recommended reducing the number of assistant coaches involved in recruiting to seven in Division I-A and six in Division I-AA.

Another recommendation calls for elimination of one full-time assistant coach in football or a reduction in administrative personnel responsible for recruiting.

Barkley runaway leader in West

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Mullin of the Golden State Warriors regained a slim lead over Karl Malone of Utah for the second forward spot on the Western Conference team in results announced Wednesday for the NBA All-Star game.

With voting ending on Thursday, Mullin led Malone 274,448-268,709. The leading vote-getter at forward, or for any Western Conference position for that matter, was Charles Barkley of Phoenix with 443,336 votes.

For complete Western Conference voting numbers, see Pg. 2B.

Bol upset with rough stuff

NEW YORK (AP) — Manute Bol of the Philadelphia 76ers was fined $3,500 by the NBA on Wednesday for throwing a punch at Anthony Mason of the New York Knicks.

Bol was ejected following the foul, which came with 28 seconds remaining in the first quarter of Tuesday's game, a 98-90 victory for the Knicks. The ejection also calls for a $250 fine.

"Mason shoved me," Bol said after the game. "This stuff has got to stop."

"I have to defend myself if they're not going to stop it. I have to do something," Bol said before Wednesday's game against Indiana. "I don't care about the fine. I have to let them know I'm not going to take that."

Jordan consoles Mavs fans

DALLAS (AP) — Michael Jordan had some advice for fans of the Dallas Mavericks, winners of only three games this season.

"Everybody goes through tough times. Some go through tougher times," Jordan said before the Chicago Bulls left following Tuesday night's victory.

"My advice to them is enjoy the game as much as they can."

Jordan also said the Mavs owe a debt of gratitude to the Dallas Cowboys for taking the pressure off by getting to the Super Bowl.

"I think that's going to help them get through this," said Jordan.

Brooks, DiPino crowned

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Outfielder Hubie Brooks and left-handed reliever Frank DiPino agreed Wednesday to minor league contracts with the Kansas City Royals, and were invited to spring training.

Brooks played 82 games for the Angels last season and hit .216 with eight homers and 36 RBIs. He was limited to 82 games because of a neck injury. Brooks is a career .269 hitter.

DiPino, a 10-year veteran, has missed most of the last two seasons after undergoing elbow injury. DiPino is 34-37 in his career with a 3.76 ERA.

Home court not much of an edge

Jay Nanda

The Daily Iowan

There are four Big Ten teams ranked in the Top 25, but the Michigan State Spartans are not one of them.

A huge reason may be two home losses to conference foes many expected the Spartans to beat — Illinois and Wisconsin.

So is tonight's 6:30 p.m. encounter on ESPN as good a time as any for the No. 11-ranked Hawkeyes to come away from East Lansing with a victory?

"I don't know about that. You can throw some of that out this year," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "I think we're all gonna lose more home games this year than we would like. If Indiana can stand up to that or if Michigan can, that's your Big Ten champion, whoever can defend their home court. But it's early."

The No. 28-ranked Spartans (10-4, 2-3) have not found the Jack Breslin Student Events Center to be where the heart is thus far. They were held to nearly half their 74.4 points per game average in a 52-39 loss to Illinois and last Saturday, a 3-point shot with three seconds remaining for Wisconsin spelled defeat again, 67-66.

But Davis knows that the talent possessed by Spartan coach Jud

Heathcote is capable of turning things around.

"The thing that impresses me is that they have seven guys ... that's their basis," Davis said. "I think that's why they're an NCAA tournament team. I think they're a Top 25 team. Whether they happen to be in the ratings or not, they belong there."

Sophomore guard Shawn Respert leads Michigan State with 19.9 points per game while in the middle, 6-foot-11 senior Mike Peplowski averages 15.4 points and 10.1 rebounds. Peplowski needs just six points tonight to reach the 1,000 plateau for his career.

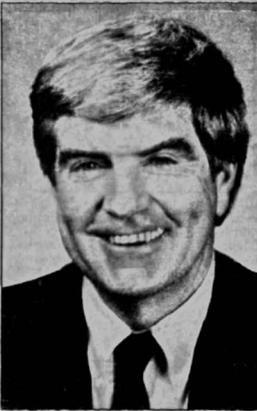

"If you look at this last week's Big Ten stats, the leading 3-point field goal percentage is Respert," Davis said. "He leads the league in free throw percentage. Peplowski leads it in field goal percentage and Peplowski leads in rebounds."

"So what else? There aren't many other categories."

The 12-3, 1-2 Hawkeyes counter with center Acie Earl (15.9 ppg, 8.5 rebounds) and guard Val Barnes with 15.4 points.

But all eyes will be on the response of the Iowa players, as they take the court for the first time since the death of forward Chris Street. Iowa's last game was

Hawks may be losing respect

Not too long ago, you could ask nearly any wrestling coach preparing to face Iowa about the Hawkeyes' chances of losing and the answers would be remarkably similar.

First, there was Arthur "Bucky" Maughan, in his 30th year at North Dakota State.

"When you talk wrestling, you talk Iowa," he said.

Then there was first-year Indiana coach Duane Goldman, a former Hawkeye national champion under Iowa's Dan Gable.

"I know they're going to be ready for Nationals. They're always the team to beat," Goldman said. "They do it the way it's supposed to be done."

What a difference a loss makes.

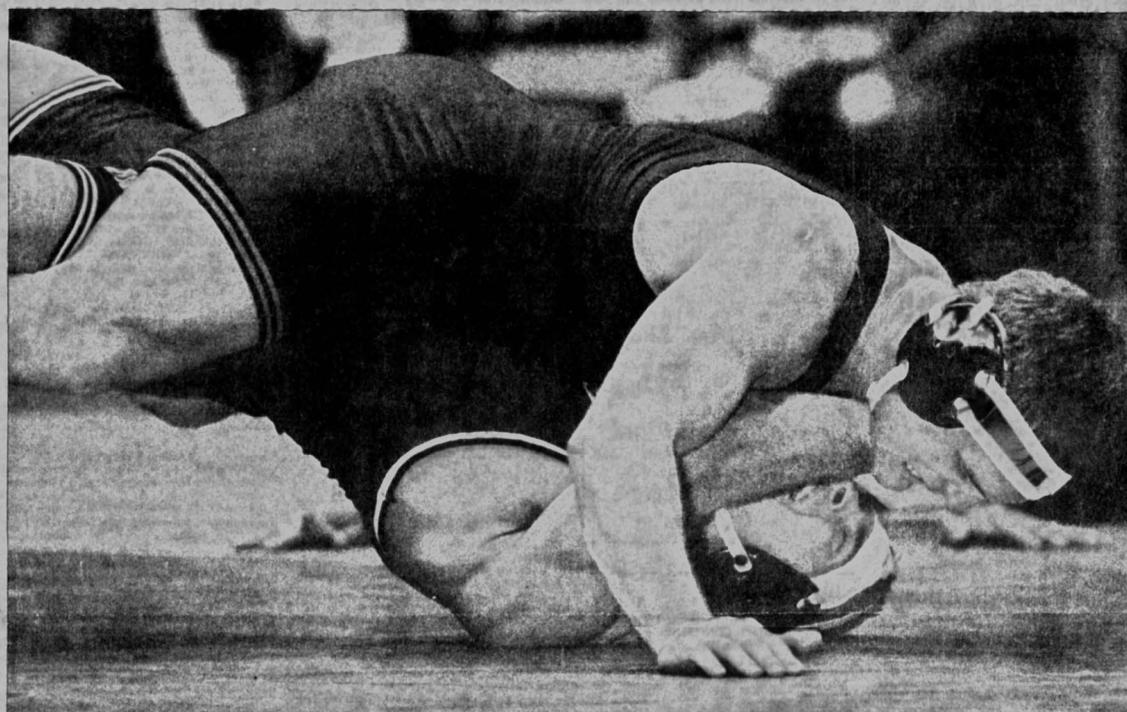

Two days after top-ranked Iowa's surprising 24-20 setback at No. 5 Nebraska in the National Team Championship last weekend, Wisconsin coach Andy Rein set a new standard regarding the Hawkeyes' outlook for the season.

"They're vulnerable when you talk nationally," Rein said. "There's always surprises. There's always a chance you can get knocked off."

The 8-1-1 Hawkeyes take on Rein's 8-3 Badgers tonight in Madison at 7:30 p.m. The match can be heard on KXIC-AM 800.

Two bouts in particular should be hotly-contested, as No. 1-ranked Hawkeye Chad Zaputit squares off against No. 5 Matt Hanutke at 118 pounds, while No. 3 Hawkeye Joel Sharratt will be out to avenge an earlier loss to fifth-ranked Badger Keith Davison at 190.

Zaputit (9-0) defeated Hanutke in all three of their meetings a year ago, including a 5-3 overtime win for the Big Ten title in Madison. In that match, Zaputit overcame a 3-0

Iowa 190-pound sophomore Joel Sharratt flattens his opponent from Indiana University in the Hawkeyes' last home meet Jan. 16. The going

Wisconsin Lineup

The probable Wisconsin Badgers starting lineup that will face the Iowa Hawkeyes tonight in Madison, with weight class, wrestler, national ranking, year and record. The meet will begin at 7:30 p.m. and can be heard on KXIC-AM 800.

- 118 — Matt Hanutke (Soph., 0-0)
- 126 — Rocco Marchionda (Fr., 12-11)
- 134 — David Gause (Soph., 1-4)
- 142 — Ryan Lord (No. 11, soph., 18-4)
- 150 — Dan Spilde (Sr., 18-9)
- 158 — Steve Best (Fr., 9-12)
- 167 — Chris Walter (No. 11, soph., 20-8)
- 177 — Tom Sweeney (Jr., 13-5) or Mike Griswold (Sr., 9-7)
- 190 — Keith Davison (No. 5, Jr., 18-3)
- HWT — Cully Wahtola (Sr., 6-5)

deficit.

Earlier this week, Rein was still feeling the effects of Hanutke's loss.

"Looking back at the Big Ten finals, that was a questionable call after I saw it on the film," said Rein, who was named the conference's Coach of the Year after guiding the Badgers to a runner-up finish behind Iowa.

"It will be an interesting, competitive match."

Hanutke, who became Wisconsin's first freshman all-American since 1981, has missed the entire season up to this point because "he was short two credits," according to Rein.

As for the 17-3 Sharratt, the sophomore from Bloomington, Minn., was pinned by Davison at the Northern Open in Madison on Nov. 28. But Rein cautions against predicting a similar result tonight.

"That was early in the season," Rein said. "They met once before and Davison just caught him in a move. It will be a big match."

Meanwhile, Sharratt says he won't concentrate on avenging a loss so much as just coming away with a win.

"When I think 'revenge,' it hurts me," Sharratt said. "I just try to keep the same frame of mind. I've been thinking about this match ever since (the loss) happened. I've had two months to think about it."

Sharratt also said that the Hawkeyes' loss to Nebraska will only help the team for the rest of the season.

"The loss was real good for us," he decision for Troy over Arizona State's Steve St. John and a 4-3 margin for Terry over No. 5 Rick Monge of Ohio State, with the winning point coming by way of riding time.

"You mean to tell me the Steiners ride people," Rein joked when informed of the narrow wins. "You can be beat if you're not focused."

The Steiners, known for manhandling their opponents by wearing them down, may be lacking in confidence according to Gable.

"I think Terry Steiner was a little bit scared going into the Ohio State match," Gable said. "It doesn't surprise me. You gotta be confident before you step on the mat and I don't think he was as confident as he should've been."

Still, Rein doesn't think his team will be able to capitalize on Iowa's apparent shortcomings — at least, not tonight.

"I don't think we can beat them," he said. "It seems like where they're weak, we might be a little weaker. Where we're strong, they might be a little stronger."

NFL

Young league's best player

Hal Bock

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Steve Young, who needed no more contract ammunition after his big season, got some anyway Wednesday when he won the NFL player of the year award.

Young, the first quarterback in league history to post 100-plus point ratings in consecutive seasons, led the league in passing in the final year of his contract with the San Francisco 49ers.

He took the 49ers to the NFC Western Division championship with a 14-2 record, passing for 3,465 yards and 25 touchdowns. Young is likely to be designated the club's "franchise player" to keep him from free agency under the new collective bargaining agreement.

The quarterback, who already had won the NFL's MVP award earlier this month, beat Dallas' Emmitt Smith, Pittsburgh's Barry Foster, Green Bay's Sterling Sharpe, San Diego's Junior Seau and Seattle's Cortez Kennedy in player of the year balloting by a media panel.

The award was the second piece of good news for Young this week. Earlier, he learned that offensive coordinator Mike Shanahan had turned down the Denver coaching job to remain in San Francisco.

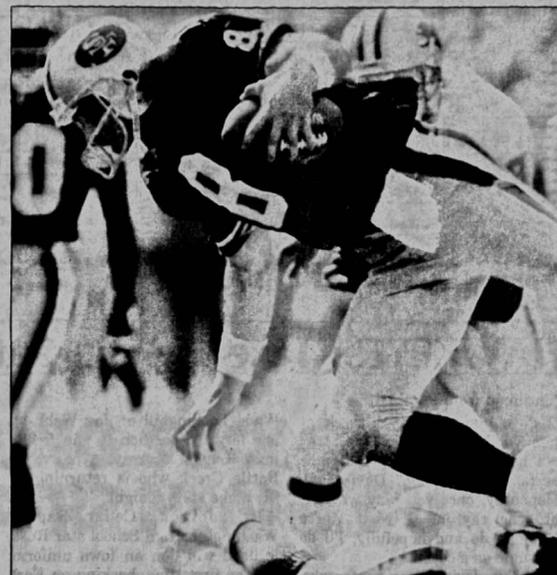

"He told me all along it might not happen and I'm glad it didn't," Young said. "He did a great job. He has a Ph.D in footballology. I learned more this year than any year I've played. I'm excited that he's staying."

Young said he viewed Wednesday's award as small consolation for not playing this week. The 49ers were beaten in the NFC championship game by Dallas.

As for the Super Bowl, he said, "My head says Dallas but my heart says Buffalo. It would be hard for the Bills to walk away from here a three-time loser."

The player of the year award includes a $25,000 contribution to the winner's favorite charity. Young designated the Mayor's Youth Fund of San Francisco and the YMCA of Santa Clara to share the award.

Contributions of $5,000 each also went to the favorite charities of the five other finalists, and $70,000 was donated in the name of each of the 28 NFL teams. Recipients included the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation of Escambia County, Fla., for Smith; United Negro College Fund, for Foster; Wilson Chapel & Missionary Baptist Church, for Kennedy, and the Junior Seau Foundation. Sharpe hasn't yet designated his charity.

HAWKEYES: Take the court at MSU

12 days ago, a 65-56 setback at then-No. 3 Duke.
"I'm hopeful that once the game starts, we just play," Davis said. "Hopefully, once you play, you get into the rhythm of what you're trying to do and hopefully, I'll do the same as a coach."
At Tuesday's press conference, Davis said he will go with either

Wade Lookingbill or Jay Webb at one forward position to join freshman Kenyon Murray, a native of Battle Creek who is returning to his home state tonight.
In addition, Cedar Rapids Washington High School star Russ Millard will don an Iowa uniform for the first time, backing up Earl at the center position. Millard redshirted his freshman season and has missed the first 15 games of this year trying to get his grades in order.

No matter the result against the Spartans, the same questions will be facing the Hawkeyes on Sunday in their first home game since the passing of Street, as Iowa goes up against No. 5-ranked and defending NCAA runner-up Michigan in another nationally-televvised tilt.

Wolverine coach Steve Fisher said that one time will tell just how the Hawkeyes will react.
"You don't know how you're going to respond until you're thrust into that situation," Fisher said. "I'm sure it will be an extra-emotional game for Iowa basketball."

Girls consented to sex

Police say no charges should be filed against Trail Blazer players.

Mike Carter
Associated Press
SALT LAKE CITY — Salt Lake City police said today they will recommend that no criminal charges be filed against members of the Portland Trail Blazers named in allegations of sexual misconduct with two 16-year-old girls.

"Our investigation indicates that the females involved in this incident informed the ball players that they were 18 years of age and they did in fact consent to sexual contact," the police department said in a news release.

"It's a real important factor," said police Lt. Marty Vuyk. "These players had reason to believe the girls were old enough, that they were 18."

He said subsequent interviews with the two 16-year-olds indicated they consented to the alleged sex acts.

The news release said the police department had completed its investigation and its results would be presented to the Salt Lake County attorney's office "for their review as per department procedure."

However, the department was recommending no criminal charges be filed.

The announcement came three days after police began an investigation of the incident in a downtown hotel involving three teen-age girls arrested for shoplifting Sunday.

The girls said they partied the night before with some members of the NBA team and that two of the girls had sex with several players.

"It's been clearly established they did in fact consent," said Vuyk. He said alcohol was present in the hotel rooms but the girls did not drink.

Police had been investigating whether there was any coercion and whether the minors had been given alcohol.

Vuyk said it was not the department's place to comment on the propriety of what occurred Saturday night. "I'm not the morality police. It would not be proper to draw any conclusions," he said.

Players said Tuesday night that their names were being smeared, while the mother of one of the girls said the club should have more control over the players.

One of the girls told investigators she had sex with "four or five players," and the other 16-year-old said she had sex with three. The third girl, age 15, said she did not have sex, was "very frightened" and witnessed some of the alleged incident.

Police said the girls' parents and guardians reported they ran away from their suburban Murray homes and spent Saturday night in the players' hotel rooms after meeting them at a downtown shopping mall earlier in the day — the same mall where they were arrested Sunday.

One of the 16-year-olds initially told police she had "sort of" consented to sexual intercourse after initially fending off advances. "She said she was too afraid and didn't know what to do," according to a police report unsealed Tuesday.

She said one player "had hurt her and she was very uncomfortable. She felt that the whole episode had been her fault," officer Kevin Clark wrote.

Police sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a hospital examination of one of the girls showed she has suffered "some trauma" to her genitals.

The age of consent is 16 in Utah. Sexual intercourse with a girl that age is simple fornication, a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

One of the girls told police that initially there were a number of other juveniles invited to the party in five different hotel rooms. She said that after the other juveniles left, the players "started talking about sex" and her attempts to get her companions to leave were unsuccessful.

The police report mentions the first names of seven men, six of which correspond to the first names of Portland players.

Geoff Petrie, the Blazers' senior vice president for operations, said the police statement "confirms our belief all along that no criminal conduct occurred."

He also said, "It was unfortunate that Salt Lake City police had released the names of six players accused by the girls."

"Hopefully, today's developments will help exonerate those that were unfairly accused."

The Associated Press did not use the names.

Prior to the release of the report, the Trail Blazers held a team meeting to discuss the allegations. No players came forward to say they knew anything about them, said Geoff Petrie, the team's senior vice president for operations.

Four of the players whose first names were listed in the police report told The Associated Press they knew nothing about the allegations.

Another player admitted meeting the girls, but said there was no party. He said he had hired an attorney in Salt Lake City. The sixth declined to comment.

NCAA HOOPS

March Madness coming into focus

Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

Six weeks after the Super Bowl, the sniping and shooting from the lip will be about which schools made the NCAA tournament and which didn't.

There are still lots of games to play and it's not too early or late for a team to play its way in or out of the field of 64. But what would sports be without looking ahead?

Here's a look at who should get invited to March Madness and get a chance to reach the Final Four in New Orleans on April 3.

First, we have to dispense with the one-horse leagues. This season it looks like 19 of the 30 conferences whose champions receive automatic bids will have only one entrant in the grid. There could be surprises but recent history says it's unlikely.

Two conferences don't receive an automatic bid: one — the Trans America — fits into the above group so will most probably be shut out — the other — the Great Midwest — certainly will get two berths with an outside shot of matching last year's three.

Now with no scientific backing and using little more than a keen eye for obvious talent, here's how the multi-bid conferences should shake out on March 14, as the night office pools around the country begin to take shape barring any low-seed uprisings in conference tournaments:

Two-timers: the Metro should get Tulane and Louisville; the Southwest has Houston as a virtual lock with a second team coming from the Baylor-Rice-Southern Methodist group since Texas is having a rough year; the Western Athletic Conference will get two out of the group of Brigham Young, Utah and New Mexico.

Trios: the Big West always gets UNLV when it's eligible and this year should add New Mexico State and giant-killer Long Beach State; the Pac-10 has taken more hits than a sparring partner so far this season and there could be some hurt feelings when Arizona leads a small group that will also include Southern Cal, California or UCLA with Arizona State as a long longshot.

Four-baggers: the Atlantic 10 has been a rising conference for a few years and it should hit its height this season when the bids just keep coming. Massachusetts weathered an injury to its top player, Harper Williams, and the Minutemen should be the top of the group that also includes Rhode Island, West Virginia, St. Joseph's or Temple, another team fighting off injuries and academic problems; the Southeastern Conference has three favorites in Kentucky, Vanderbilt and Arkansas while either Florida or Louisiana State could be the fourth.

Five-O: the Big East lost a bid before the season started when Syracuse became the first conference member to go on probation. Still, Seton Hall, Georgetown, Connecticut and Pittsburgh will be there with St. John's and Boston College fighting for the fifth berth.

Six pack: the Atlantic Coast Conference has the usuals that are always in — two-time defending champion Duke, North Carolina and Georgia Tech. Add to that Wake Forest, Florida State and Virginia and two-thirds of the league is in.

Lucky seven: the Big Ten is considered the strongest of the leagues and it should match its own record for bids. Indiana, Michigan, Purdue and Iowa are no-brainers. Michigan State, Minnesota and one of Ohio State, Illinois and Wisconsin, with two a possibility, should fill the conference coffers nicely.

The next six weeks will determine who's in and who's not, but the bulk of the foundation has already been set.

Biographer Nigel Hamilton surprised by reaction of Kennedy family to his 'JFK: Reckless Youth'

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — John F. Kennedy biographer Nigel Hamilton says he's surprised that Kennedy's siblings have criticized his book, "J.F.K.: Reckless Youth," themselves. "I expected this to be done by people on behalf of the Kennedys," he said in an interview published Wednesday in The New York Times. "I never expected it to be done by the Kennedys themselves."

The book, published late last year by Random House, paints a portrait of a dysfunctional family, with unflattering views of presidential parents Rose and Joseph P. Kennedy Sr.

The British author and the Kennedy siblings have been publicly feuding since the book's release, most notably in opinion pieces in the Times.

"Our parents gave us love, support and encouragement throughout their lives," wrote Sen. Edward Kennedy and his sisters, Jean Smith, Eunice Shriver and Patricia Lawford.

Hamilton accused the siblings of renegeing on an offer to help with the book.

"Teddy introduced me to Eunice, and she promised to talk to me, to give me her collection of J.F.K. letters," he told the Times. "Nothing of what they offered came through. It's a bit late for them to complain now."

Melody Miller, a spokeswoman for the senator, told the Times that the family "clearly made their feelings known with regard to the book, and they're going to stand on that."

POETRY READING

UI alumnus Mark Strand to give poetry reading

Mark Strand Lilo Raymond

Peter Richards
Special to The Daily Iowan

Former poet laureate of the United States and one-time student of the UI Writers' Workshop Mark Strand will read from his work today at 4 p.m. in room 101 of the Communications Studies Building.

As well as receiving many fellowships and awards, Strand's work has been widely translated. His nine books of poetry include "Sleeping With One Eye Open" (1964), "Reasons for Moving" (1968), "Darker" (1970), "Sargentville Notebook" (1973), "The Late Hour" (1978), "Selected Poems" (1980), "The Continuous Life" (1990) and "Dark Harbor," just published this year.

But Strand is just as prolific in his service to poetry as he is in writing his own. Besides serving as poet laureate, he has edited numerous anthologies and translated four books of poetry. In the last decade, three books of his art criticism have appeared. Yesterday Strand presented a lecture at the UI Museum of Art titled "Private Geometry: The Paintings of Edward Hopper."

"The disappearance of the self" is what many critics describe as Strand's primary concern. Consistent with this campaign is a relentless effacement of the outside world. In "Keeping Things Whole," the reward behind his dismantling gaze is revealed: "In a field / I am the absence / of field. / This is / always the case. / Wherever I am / I am what is missing. / When I walk / I part the air / and always / the air moves in / to fill the spaces / where my body's been. / We all have reasons / for moving. / I move / to keep things whole." That individual lines often make sense all by themselves ("We all have reasons") is consistent with Strand's ability to see the "whole" of the world reflected on the surfaces of its fragments.

"The disappearance of the self" is what many critics describe as Strand's primary concern.

This strategy is particularly provocative when the poet as third person is seen groping in the mist of the world's elemental and preceding order. In "From the Long Sad Party," Strand invites the reader to just such a place. The effect is both somber and arresting, like a once-eavesdropping ghost now mourning for the things it had heard:

"Someone was saying / something about shadows covering the field, about / how things pass, how one sleeps towards morning / and the morning goes. / Someone was saying / how the wind dies down but comes back, / how shells are the coffins of wind / but the weather continues."

In "Elegy for My Father," Strand demonstrates how his own sense of loss corresponds with the receding details of the physical world: "You have your shadow. / The places where you were have given it back." Later on in the same poem, varying modes of celestial activity are in congress with the poet's lament: "You do not see the sun dragging the moon like an echo. / You do not see the bruised heart go up in flames. / The skulls of the innocent turn into smoke. / You do not see the scars of plenty, the eyes without light. / It is over. It is winter and the new year. / The meek are hauling their skins into heaven."

Still, there are other poems where Strand describes the stark facts of domestic life. The dry precision he brings to this subject allows readers to feel at home with their own bleak moments — as in "Poor North", where Strand offers a glimpse of his childhood on Prince Edward Island: "The room of the house has gone to work, / selling chairs and sofas in a failing store. / His wife stays home and stares from the window into the trees, / trying to recall the life she lost, though it wasn't much. / White flowers of frost build up on the glass."

It's to be expected that an accomplished poet such as Strand might somewhere in his work offer the beginning poet some advice. But with Strand the expected rarely occurs. In "The New Poetry Handbook" his piece of advice becomes the pieced-together implications of a poet's own mortality: "18 If a man lets his poems go naked, / he shall fear death. / 19 If a man fears death, / he shall be saved by his poems. / 20 If a man does not fear death, / he may or may not be saved by his poems. / 21 If a man finishes a poem, / he shall bathe in the blank wake of his passion / and be kissed by white paper."

'Glengarry Glen Ross' likely Oscar nominee

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

It's not often that a movie can boast that all of its actors have starred in anywhere from one film to a few dozen.

It's not often that a script can demand that kind of star power, let alone interest that many stars.

But "Glengarry Glen Ross," playing at the Bijou tonight through Saturday, is an exception to a lot of rules. Despite a limited release, "Glengarry" is a favorite among 1992 Oscar speculators, and was picked as one of the top 10 films of the year by the Washington Post, Chicago Tribune, and Rolling Stone magazine. And with good reason.

The film is a cinematic education in and of itself. Tight, controlled, skillful writing, directing and acting make it one of the best films of 1992, well-deserving of the acclaim it's received in the cities it's actually played.

The film's ensemble cast includes Jack Lemmon, Alan Arkin and Ed Harris as a motley trio of real estate salesmen, earning their livings with fast talk and heavy schmoozing aimed at people who often have no money and no interest, but have the bad luck to be on the office's call list. Al Pacino rounds out the company's staff as the office's golden boy, the only one of the four still selling and closing deals.

In a closed circle of self-fulfilling prophecy, office manager Kevin Spacey offers the best leads — all-important cards bearing the names and phone numbers of people who have expressed interest in investments — to the best closer, on the assumption that good leads shouldn't be wasted on bad salesmen. On the other hand, the salesman with the good leads is all but assured of continued sales, while those with the weak leads drift continually downhill.

To this slough of despondency add Alec Baldwin as a vicious, callous company rep who shows up to announce the stakes in the monthly sales competition have been upped: first prize is a Cadillac El Dorado, second prize is a set of steak knives. "Third (and presumably fourth) prize is, you're fired."

Pacino, Harris and Lemmon leap into the fray — born salesmen, they fight with their mouths and their wits. Arkin is a different breed, painfully, inappropriately inarticulate, much like Pacino's latest victim, Jonathan Pryce. The five of them, plus Spacey, continually circle each other, some looking for openings to attack, others looking for openings to escape. The result is a taut, claustrophobic story marked by surging highs, plunging lows, quite a few wordy monologues and some incredible acting.

Like "Hoffa," "Glengarry" was written by David Mamet and features a great deal of swearing, smoking, hefting of machismo and jostling for power. But "Glengarry" has none of "Hoffa's" shortcomings — director James Foley ("After Dark, My Sweet," "At Close Range") stays off-camera, sticks to the basics and doesn't interfere by trying to add needless flash or noise to the pared-down story. And Mamet's writing is better here by far — the unlikeable, gruff, angry characters are similar to those in "Hoffa," but there is never any doubt about their motivations and feelings, nor does the plot head off in confusing, pointless tangents. Everyone in this film, Foley and Mamet included, is tightly, grimly focused.

It shows in the writing, it shows in the directing, but most of all, it shows in the acting. Every actor with more than five minutes of screen time is a seasoned veteran with at least one starring role under his belt, and Lemmon, Pacino and Arkin can each boast far more. The team works together spectacularly, never missing a beat. It's like watching a fine machine at work.

With luck, the Academy will recognize "Glengarry Glen Ross" this year, and at that point it'll have a better chance for a broader release. Given past Oscar winners, however, "Hoffa" has a better chance, being bigger, louder and more expensive. So grab the opportunity to see "Glengarry" while you can.

Debussy opera revolves around darkly mysterious plot, characters

Mike Silverman
Associated Press

Debussy, "Pelleas et Melisande," opera in five acts. (Deutsche Grammophon, a two-CD set, 435 344-2) — with soprano Maria Ewing, tenor Francois le Roux, baritone Jose van Dam and mezzo Christa Ludwig; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Claudio Abbado.

Early in "Pelleas et Melisande," the heroine carelessly lets her wedding ring drop to the bottom of a deep well. She peers down into the darkness but sees only "a big circle in the water." The ring is irretrievably lost.

Debussy's opera — filled with ambiguous symbols like the ring — makes audiences feel they too are looking down into a well, searching for a meaning, an answer that seems always just out of reach.

In choosing Maurice Maeterlinck's impressionistic play by the same name for his subject, Debussy clearly was drawn to the mysteries of the characters and plot.

Golaud, son of the king of Allemonde, finds Melisande lost in a forest and takes her home to marry her. She's attracted to his younger brother, Pelleas, and Golaud, driven by jealousy, finally kills his brother. The grieving Melisande dies in childbirth, but it's never certain whether the title characters have been lovers or merely flirted innocently.
