Law enforcement during concert called a success

Law enforcement officials are calling joint-effort patrols during last Thursday's Metallica concert at Carver-Hawkeye Arena a success.

According to the Johnson County Sheriff's office, a total of 18 people were jailed for incidents related to the concert.

Narcotics officers at the scene called the crowd "subdued," and attributed the crowd's generally good behavior to cold weather and media coverage of the crackdown on drug and alcohol abuse at the concert.

Concert-related arrests ranged from numerous counts of underage drinking, possession of controlled substances, disorderly conduct, open container, driving under suspension and operating while intoxicated.

Iowa State Patrol officers reported one incident of a driver going at 105 miles per hour because he was late for the concert.

Law enforcement officials said they are planning a similar crackdown for the March 20 Guns 'N' Roses concert at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

UI medical researchers awarded grants

Researchers in the UI College of Medicine have been awarded three grants totalling more than $670,000 for studies of fetal heart rate, muscle contractions and brain damage.

Dr. Jeffrey Segar, fellow associate in pediatrics received a five-year grant of $428,000 from the National Institute of Health to study the regulation of heart rate during fetal development.

Dr. Charles Swenson, professor of biochemistry, will study how muscle contraction is regulated at the molecular level in normal muscle tissue with a three-year grant of $119,500 from the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation.

Dr. Antoine Bechara, postdoctoral fellow in neurology, will receive funds for his study of patients who have trouble distinguishing advantageous situations from disadvantageous ones in their daily lives following damage to the frontal lobes of the brain from the James S. McDonnell Foundation. The foundation awarded $126,000 for the three-year project.

Explosion evacuates North Dakota town

GWINNER, N.D. (AP) — Five large propane tanks at a manufacturing plant burned Sunday after one exploded and triggered a blaze that injured one man and forced evacuation of the town of 600 residents.

The explosion shattered windows and started small fires on the roofs of nearby homes. Officials did not know what caused the explosion.

The smaller fires were doused, but the propane tank fires were left to burn themselves out. Those fires were out by late Sunday afternoon. The tanks were several hundred feet from the Melroe Co. plant, where farm implements are made. The plant did not catch fire.

Investigators may have located dumpster

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

Over a month after the discovery of a dead baby in the Iowa City Landfill, investigators believe they have found the dumpster the baby was originally left in.

Investigative Sgt. Richard Wyss said Sunday that he believes the baby was left in a dumpster near a Coralville apartment complex. Wyss declined to say specifically where the dumpster is located.

Wyss said investigators still have not located the baby's mother, but the discovery of the dumpster has brought a renewed optimism that she will eventually be found.

"We did canvassing of the neighborhood and went door to door asking for information, but it has produced no new leads," Wyss said. "We're still pretty optimistic. We will persist with this investigation."

The baby, a 9-pound, 3-ounce white male with brown hair and blue eyes, was found dead at the landfill on Dec. 21 by a worker dumping trash on the site.

An autopsy performed on the baby failed to determine the cause of death, but did show that the baby was born in a live, unattended birth and lived up to 24 hours before dying.

Soon after the baby's discovery, authorities were able to specify four possible areas from which the baby had originally been left. The areas included parts of Coralville, Iowa City, Hills, and the entire town of Lone Tree.

Since that time, authorities have sifted through the physical evidence found at the landfill, from which they were able to determine the exact dumpster the baby was originally left in.

"Quite frankly, other than eliminating the other areas, it really doesn't get us any closer to the mother," Wyss said. "We're still investigating other areas and other leads."

Part of the problem with finding the mother, Wyss said, stems from the fact that the baby could have been left by someone passing through town or otherwise not living near the dumpster.

"We're working on the premise that the child came from this general area," Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake said earlier this month. "But that doesn't necessarily get us any closer to the mother. Anyone could have left it."

Authorities had hoped that returning students would be able to provide new clues that may lead to the mother, Wyss said, but that See BABY, Page 10A

LIFTING BAN ON GAYS

Privacy, conduct issues reviewed

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Les Aspin must answer some of the most complex issues involving privacy and the sexual conduct of troops before President Clinton can issue an executive order allowing homosexuals in the military, officials say.

The questions he is studying include the possible segregation of homosexuals from heterosexuals, whether in military units or in living quarters, as is now the situation for female troops in many cases.

However, the problem is heightened by the fact that both proponents and opponents of changing the ban agree that homosexuals are now serving in the military and have not been separated for special treatment — except for being kicked out.

Studying such questions doesn't necessarily mean they might be implemented but they present a plethora of problems that Aspin, military leaders and Congress must wrestle with in the coming months.

"We will not rule anything in particular in or out this early during the review process," Aspin spokesman Vernon Guidry said Sunday.

One senior military officer with ties to the Joint Chiefs of Staff said that their chairman, Gen. Colin Powell, has formulated his objections to lifting the ban on the issue of privacy. "That has been an

PEACEKEEPERS ABANDON OBJECTIVE

Repair crews threatened in Sarajevo

Maud S. Beelman
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — U.N. peacekeepers gave up trying to restore power in Sarajevo after repair crews were shot at in fighting that escalated after the collapse of peace talks, U.N. officials said Sunday.

Heavy fighting also was reported in other parts of the former Yugoslav republic.

In neighboring Croatia, that republic's president threatened to expand a 10-day-old offensive against Serbs in southern Croatia. Meanwhile, a gaping hole that developed in a bombed dam in Croatia was repaired, but the structure still posed a danger of flooding for 20,000 people living downstream.

U.N. officers said three teams of engineers and military observers would not try to fix a main electrical transmission line in Sarajevo after coming under heavy fire Saturday despite written guarantees of a cease-fire by the city's Muslim-led defenders and Serb forces besieging the city.

With temperatures below freezing, only about a fifth of Sarajevo gets any electricity, and most of it is reserved for vital institutions such as hospitals, bakeries and the presidency.

None of the approximately 40 U.N. team members were hurt. Bosnian government forces fired directly on two U.N. crews but it was unknown who shot at the other team, said a U.N. spokesman, Cmdr. Barry Frewer.

President Alija Izetbegovic, a Muslim, urged the international community to get tough with rebel Serbs in his republic but said he had relatively little hope of getting help. He spoke in Zagreb, Croatia's capital, on the way home from the collapsed peace talks.

The mediators at the Geneva talks, Cyrus Vance for the United Nations and Lord Owen of the European Community, said they would report to the U.N. Security Council this week. Owen said it could use "political, economic or military means" to force a settlement of the 10-month-old Bosnian war.

But the international community has been unable to agree on enforcing a no-fly zone over Bosnia, trade sanctions against Serbia-dominated Yugoslavia are being violated and there are sharp divisions among Security Council members about how to proceed.

"At this point, we don't see how the war can end," Izetbegovic told reporters.

Owen said Sunday that the United States and European Community members should not take further action while hope remained for a negotiated settlement.

The Clinton administration says it is reviewing U.S. policy on Bosnia, but Izetbegovic said his government was not counting on direct U.S. intervention.

"To be honest, we only believe in ourselves," he said. "Why should American men come to Bosnia to fight for freedom when our men are ready to fight? But we need arms."

Clinton trying to get back on track

Nancy Benac
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration, burdened with the highest disapproval ratings of any new president in decades, is struggling to regain control of its message after an unexpected honeymoon detour.

President Clinton spent most of last week distracted from his economic agenda — the centerpiece of his campaign — by unrelated issues such as homosexuals in the military and finding a new attorney general.

Clinton must set his own agenda, or find his new presidency buffeted week after week by the concerns of others.

"I think Clinton has hit the ground stumbling," said Ben Wattenberg, a senior fellow at the American Enterprise Institute. "The great whirlwind of activity that was supposed to happen has not occurred."

"The economy is what he was elected on and that's what people are waiting for," said Jeff Faux, director of the Economic Policy Institute, a labor union-based think tank.

CREATIVE CURES

Students seek out hangover remedy

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

Like the common cold, there is no cure for the common hangover. But for many UI students, the lack of a cure is not for a lack of trying.

With potential cures ranging from three-cheese omelets to baby formula, UI students campuswide have searched and struggled for the perfect remedy.

Some use the conventional approach: a whole lot of water and a handful of aspirin.

Others use, well, somewhat less conventional approaches.

"I used to fill a ziplock full of hot water and put it on my forehead before I went to sleep," UI junior Aaron Ford said. "I don't do it anymore because I'm too lazy."

Then there's Adam Klaver, another UI junior. Klaver said he uses a product called Pedialyte, a product for small children used to "restore fluids and minerals lost in diarrhea and vomiting," according to the label.

"I swear by it," he said. "Three swallows and a half an hour later, you're fine. It tastes kind of sick, but it really works."

Hmmm.

Of course, there are products made for adults who lose fluids and minerals due to diarrhea and vomiting. One such chalky-green liquid, manufactured by Barnett Labs Ltd. in New Orleans, claims to provide "fast and complete relief from hangover symptoms," and

Nor are omelets, but in the world of home hangover remedies, does it really matter?

"I usually eat Village Inn omelets — either Three Cheese or the Denver — before I go to sleep after drinking," UI junior Jana Wonderlin said. "They're usually the key."

Of course, there is one sure-fire way to cure a hangover, Erwin said: drink responsibly.

"We're not saying don't drink, just drink in a responsible way," he said.

Does it work?

"I tried not drinking once," UI sophomore L.A. Austensen said. "And yes, it actually worked."

If that doesn't work, try the goat liver.

"Basically, there isn't a cure for hangovers except time."

Wes Erwin, graduate assistant

"They have done a lot of studies into curing a hangover," Erwin said. "Basically, there isn't a cure

"Drinking to cure a hangover will stop the body from its withdrawal, but it will occur again anyway when you stop drinking," he said. "This is not recommended as a Peanut butter and mustard. Bacon and ice cream. Gloria Steinem and Metallica.

While nobody will admit to enjoying pork fat and Rocky Road, in a culturally diverse college town, heavy-metal feminists are pretty much par for the course.

Last Thursday night the head-banging literates of Iowa City had some tough choices.

Start with a renowned feminist activist, add a little heavy-metal grunge and, yes, even a rock ballet. "Hey, is this a great town or what?" asked UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes. The dilemma was enough to boggle even the most dedicated heavy-

For UI junior Dustin Gean, Thursday's lineup created a tough, but uncommon, decision. Metallica, Steinem, Steinem, Metallica. The dilemma was enough to boggle even the most dedicated heavy-

To cap things off, Ingram is currently enrolled in a women's studies class and is a fan of Steinem.

She opted for "Billboards," but not without some reservations.

"I was bummed I couldn't go to the other two," she said. "We even talked at intermission about it."

There are even rumors that Steinem and roadies for Metallica ran into each other at the Holiday Inn on Thursday night, a rumor that hotel general manager Gardner Johnson would neither confirm nor deny.

Other reports had Steinem and the groupies sitting down for a Grey Poupon and Skippy Super Chunk sandwich.

LOCALS CELEBRATE OMATSURI

Education, fun focus of Japanese festival

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

Traditional Japanese food, dances and games brought people together at the Union Saturday night for the fourth annual Omatsuri, a Japanese festival coordinated by the UI Foreign Language House.

Calligraphy and origami tables, the Fisherman Dance, skits, music, kingyo sukui (goldfish scoop) and other traditional games were among the activities offered at the festival.

Brian Wakeham, UI senior and Japanese House programmer, said the focus of the festival was to educate people as well as entertain them.

"The purpose is to get both the student community and the public together to learn about the Japanese culture — and to enjoy it," he said.

Wakeham estimated that over 200 people attended the festival this year, surpassing last year's turnout.

Sumeet Beri, a UI graduate student, said he came to the festival to experience a new culture.

"I came to broaden my horizons," Beri said. "I go to a lot of cultural events and I try to see what's going on in the world — we need stuff like this in Iowa," he said.

ACADEMIC COMMUNITY ADDRESSED

Increase of cooperation called for by Rawlings

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

Lauding the Iowa City area and the UI for their close ties, UI President Hunter Rawlings sounded the call for even more cooperation between "academics" and the local community in his keynote address at the annual banquet of the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce Friday evening.

Rawlings began his comments to approximately 450 chamber members gathered in the Main Lounge of the Union by displaying a copy of the front page of Friday's Living Arts section of The New York Times.

Praising the community as a place where people work hard together, the UI president said local residents are willing to make a commitment to the future of the area.

"What I love about this community is that it's quality first, and then reap the benefits," he said.

Reviewing the areas in which the UI is a leader in research and education, Rawlings said continued community support and "synergy" will be vital for future success at the UI and in the area as a whole.

"To reach these levels of quality we need you in the private sector," he said. "We are looking for ways to build each other's momentum."

As another example of the close ties between campus and community, Rawlings reminded the audience that ACT was born in the UI College of Education.

Using a multimedia computer that projected onto a wall-sized screen, Rawlings next led the audience through a look at what he said are three main goals of the UI.

The first topic was undergraduate education, a focus some have criticized national universities for sacrificing on the research altar. Rawlings said this was an area the UI wanted to move ahead in rapidly.

Two UI students appeared on the screen, the first praising the UI as a dynamic place that has prepared him well for life, the second critical of how the UI handles undergraduate studies.

"Those were unrehearsed comments," Rawlings quipped, after the second student's comments.

The second area was technology transfer, a field in which the UI is an emerging leader, Rawlings said.

Wrapping up his remarks to the receptive audience, Rawlings noted the UI receives only a small portion of its budget from tax revenues.

"Only 22 percent of our budget now comes from Iowa taxpayers," he said, adding that the UI is very efficient with these funds.

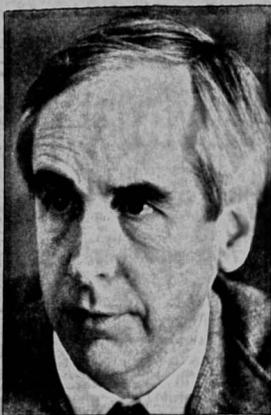

"For every tax dollar we receive we generate three new ones," he said. "Not bad for a bunch of academics."

Noting that, for a change, "New York had to come here to see a new art form," Rawlings thanked the chamber members for their support of the performance.

"We could not have done this without you," he said.

In addition to being a positive cultural resource for the community, Rawlings said performances such as the Jeffrey production make a strong contribution to the

Hunter Rawlings

He pointed to the national driving simulator and growing efforts in the field of biocatalysis as examples.

When the screen flipped to a shot of the UI pharmacy building, Rawlings described how crowded it was and said the UI is working to establish funding for a new one.

"This is a building which has outlived its potential," he said.

The final focus of the multimedia presentation was titled "Information," and centered on the UI library system. Rawlings said efforts are being made to ensure that the libraries have sufficient funds to procure new volumes.

Wrapping up his remarks to the receptive audience, Rawlings noted the UI receives only a small portion of its budget from tax revenues.

January and February are usually strep throat season but Koontz said there has not yet been an outbreak of the illness at the UI.

"When you're treated for strep throat you have to remember that we're preventing complications down the line, we're not stopping the strep," he said.

test a specimen with the quicker test," he said.

In addition to the base costs of the tests, lab fees and other expenses are added, raising the price for the patient.

Affi said student health will do the five-minute test for a UI student at a cost of $12 but the 24-hour test will be done free of charge.

Koontz said strep throat symptoms can vary but the throat will always be red, and white patches will develop in the back of the throat.

Besides the false negative problems, Koontz said the five-minute test is also more expensive.

"It costs less than 50 cents for a specimen for the 24-hour test compared with three to four dollars to

WATCHDOG GROUP FORMED

Local Perot volunteers sought

Group members will be kept up to date on Congressional issues and vote in electronic meetings.

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

Although their choice wasn't the pick of America, local supporters of former independent presidential candidate Ross Perot say they aren't ready to give up their fight just yet.

Since his November defeat, Perot has organized a nonpartisan political watchdog group called United We Stand America. Perot is heading the new group and interested citizens are being asked to join.

For a $15 membership fee, individuals who join will be kept up to date on the details of major issues before Congress, and receive a vote in an electronic town meeting. Perhaps most importantly, Iowa City Perot volunteer Carol Hauenstein said, people will get a chance to be heard.

"I'd like to have a big enough organization so that people will pay attention to us," Hauenstein said. "And I'd like to see us work together so that we know there are people out there who think the way we do."

Specifically, Hauenstein named campaign finance reform, unemployment, job creation and reducing the national deficit as issues UWSA will focus on.

Even if someone can't afford the fee, they're still encouraged to take part in the group, she said. They will not, however, be allowed to vote in the electronic town meeting.

Despite his leadership, the group is not just for Perot-backers, Hauenstein said, and is not an attempt to get Perot to run again.

"This is not Ross Perot — he wants to stay out and just do his part by creating jobs," Hauenstein said. "You don't have to be a Perot-backer. The biggest problem I think we need to work on is campaign finance reform. I would think a lot of people would want to work on that, whether they voted for Perot, Bush or Clinton."

However, Hauenstein said more people are necessary to keep the movement alive.

"I'm going to give it my last shot,"

Hauenstein said. "If no one else is interested then I'll go volunteer at a hospital."

Mark Mitchell, Perot's District Campaign Director, said that while he hasn't received any official Johnson County membership numbers from Perot headquarters in Dallas, he was optimistic about local membership in UWSA.

"We should be able to get at least the over 8,500 Johnson County residents who voted for him," Mitchell said. "A lot of people are calling and saying 'I'm fed up, you let me know what you want me to do.'"

Hauenstein said she would like to start a UWSA student group, if there's enough interest.

Mitchell agreed, saying that students have the most at stake.

"When people of high school and college age get the whole situation of the deficit and entitlements explained, they get angry — because they're getting screwed," Mitchell said, adding that Perot is sensitive to issues concerning the college-age group. "I think Perot will be willing to spend a great deal of time on that age because they are the ones that are really being affected."

"What I love about this community is that it's quality first. . ."

Noting that, for a change, "New York had to come here to see a new art form," Rawlings thanked the chamber members for their support of the performance.

"We could not have done this without you," he said.

In addition to being a positive cultural resource for the community, Rawlings said performances such as the Jeffrey production make a strong contribution to the

5-minute strep test found less accurate

Victoria Forlini
The Daily Iowan

The convenience of getting the results of a five-minute strep throat test may be negated by the potential inaccuracies in the results.

According to Frank Koontz, a professor of pathology at the UI College of Medicine, "Fifteen to 20 percent of the positives get past this test" as compared with the more accurate standard strep test that incubates overnight.

Strep throat is a bacterial infection that, if left untreated, can lead to possible complications later in life such as rheumatic fever and kidney problems.

"We only have to treat Group A strep with antibiotics," Koontz said, "the other groups won't hurt you." He added that a significant portion of strep throat is Group A.

UI Student Health Nursing Supervisor Larry Afifi said her clinic uses both the five-minute and the 24-hour strep tests to detect the illness.

"The only time we use the five-minute test alone is when a student is going out of town and needs to know the results immediately," she said.

Affi said the five-minute test is less accurate because of the short length of time it takes to get the results.

She said the only time the five-minute test should be consistently used to detect strep is in inner city clinics where patients come and may never be seen again.

Besides the false negative problems, Koontz said the five-minute test is also more expensive.

"It costs less than 50 cents for a specimen for the 24-hour test compared with three to four dollars to test a specimen with the quicker test," he said.

In addition to the base costs of the tests, lab fees and other expenses are added, raising the price for the patient.

Affi said student health will do the five-minute test for a UI student at a cost of $12 but the 24-hour test will be done free of charge.

Koontz said strep throat symptoms can vary but the throat will always be red, and white patches will develop in the back of the throat.

January and February are usually strep throat season but Koontz said there has not yet been an outbreak of the illness at the UI.

"When you're treated for strep throat you have to remember that we're preventing complications down the line, we're not stopping the strep," he said.

Iowans favor return of death penalty

A poll shows that Iowans prefer returning to the death penalty, but rank this as a low-priority issue.

DES MOINES — Iowans favor a return of the death penalty, although their support wavers when given the option of imposing a life sentence without parole, according to the Iowa Poll.

The poll also found that Iowans rank the death penalty issue among the lowest of all legislative priorities.

The copyright Des Moines Register poll says 81 percent of Iowa adults favor reinstatement of the death penalty. Fifteen percent disagree and 4 percent were unsure.

Iowa ended capital punishment shortly after the hanging of Victor Harry Feguer on March 15, 1963. Feguer was found guilty of kidnapping and murdering a Dubuque doctor. Feguer was the 41st person to be executed in Iowa's history. All were men, all were by hanging and nearly all at the State Penitentiary in Fort Madison.

The issue has been brought to the front burner again by Gov. Terry Branstad, who wants capital punishment for those who commit a major crime to hide evidence of another — for example, murdering the rape victim.

The issue has been brought to the front burner again by Gov. Terry Branstad.

In 1965, on the eve of the Legislature's decision to abolish it, 57 percent of Iowans supported abolition of the death penalty. Since that time, sentiment has reversed. But efforts to reimpose the death penalty have been sidetracked by those who argue that Iowa's life sentence without parole is a good alternative.

Prisoners sentenced to life in prison in Iowa will never gain their freedom unless a governor commutes the sentence to a term of years and unless the parole board then frees them. In the 12 years he has been in office, Branstad has commuted two sentences.

Now, according to the poll, a majority of Iowans say the death penalty is preferable to life in prison without parole. Fifty-eight percent would choose the death penalty, 31 percent life without parole and 11 percent are not sure.

Of 10 legislative issues, Iowans rank the death penalty issue as No. 9, placing above only the debate on funding for colleges and universities.

The results are based on telephone interviews Jan. 5-11 with 811 Iowans over age 17. The margin of error is plus or minus 3.4 percentage points.

Pope heads into African conflict

Daniel J. Wakin
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — When Pope John Paul II leaves for Africa on Wednesday, he will journey into the heart of a Muslim-Christian conflict on a continent that is one of the world's last major battlegrounds for converts.

The Muslim fundamentalist government of Sudan has been widely accused of oppressing its Christian minority as it grinds out a 10-year war with rebels in the south, where most of the Christians live.

The Sudanese Bishops Conference says Christians have been tortured. Missionaries have been forced to leave. Priests have been arrested and parishes closed. Christians say they are closely watched and sometimes rounded up.

The plight of his brethren helped prompt the leader of the world's Roman Catholics to tack Sudan on to the end of his eight-day African pilgrimage, which will first take him to Benin and Uganda.

The military government in Khartoum, seeking to boost its international image, agreed to the visit, even though the Holy See has lodged a protest against its alleged human rights abuses.

In advance of the visit, Sudan has eased travel restrictions, agreed to televise the pope's scheduled open-air Mass and released two jailed priests. But it is uncertain whether those improvements will last.

"It is a question in everyone's mind. What is going to happen when everybody forgets about Sudan when the pope goes home?" said the Rev. Joseph Bragotti, a veteran missionary in Africa.

He said one official told a fellow member of his order, the Khartoum-founded Comboni Missions, that Christians would pay for the pope's visit after he leaves.

The archbishop of Khartoum, Gabriel Zoubir Wako, told the Italian weekly magazine Famiglia Cristiana that he fears the improvements would stop once the pope leaves and international attention goes with him.

GAY BASHING

Mom tells of son slain in service

Sharon C. Egan

CHICAGO — When Dorothy Hajdys last talked with her 22-year-old sailor son, he promised he would be home soon. The next time she saw him, he was in a coffin — beaten to death.

Seaman Allen Schindler was killed in Japan, a month after he told the Navy he was gay. His mother grieves, but hopes President Clinton's plan to lift the military ban on homosexuals will shield others from tragedy.

"It's too late for Allen," said Hajdys. "But maybe this will save someone else's life."

"I think the ban should be lifted," she added. "But it's not going to do anything unless the military is educated. . . . There are crazy people out there. They think gays are going to harm them."

Schindler's death last October has become a rallying point for homosexual activists, who contend it was a classic case of gay bashing. They've held a memorial service in San Diego, where the seaman lived before his ship traveled to Japan, and a candlelight vigil in Washington.

Hajdys, a 46-year-old bookkeeper, attended both events. But she's not convinced her son was gay, though he told her he was in 1991.

"I never really believed him," she said, remembering how in fourth grade she was called to school because her son was kissing the little girls and was called "the Kissing Bandit."

"I knew he was confused," she said. "It doesn't matter if he was or wasn't. No one had a right to kill him."

In Japan, the Navy recently held the military equivalent of a grand jury hearing to determine whether Airman Apprentice Terry M. Helvey, 21, of Westland, Mich., will stand trial for murder.

Another seaman, Airman Apprentice Charles A. Vins, 20, pleaded guilty at a November court-martial to lesser charges of concealing a crime and resisting arrest. He agreed to testify against Helvey under a pretrial agreement.

Vins, of Sturgis, Mich., was sentenced to one year in custody and given a bad conduct discharge, according to Navy officials.

"What would you think if your son were killed by his own?" Hajdys asked. "If we were at war, these would have been the people who were supposed to protect him."

Hajdys, who divorced Schindler's father when the boy was 4, later remarried and is now widowed, said she's disappointed in the Navy. She learned many details of her son's death from the military newspaper Stars and Stripes.

"I keep asking the Navy for the motive," she said. "They keep telling me they don't know yet."

Schindler's body was found Oct. 27 in a public restroom in Sasebo, Japan, the home base of his ship, USS Belleau Wood.

When Hajdys saw her mutilated son in the funeral home, she didn't recognize him.

"You couldn't even identify my son," she said. "His nose was even with his lips. His head was caved in. His eyes were back by his ears. All but two of his ribs were broken. . . . There were two lacerations on his penis."

Her daughter asked the funeral home to undo his sleeves and he was identified by two tattoos — a tiger and an emblem of the USS Midway, the ship he served on and loved before transferring to the Belleau Wood in 1991.

Schindler was miserable on the amphibious assault ship.

"He told me he didn't have to worry about dying and going to hell, he was already there," his mother said. "The ship was like hell."

He even had the stitching on a hat changed to read "Helleau Wood."

Friends, his mother said, reported her son was harassed, punched and called a fag. Others told her another gay man on the ship was assaulted.

Navy officials say they have no record of Schindler complaining about harassment.

Two weeks before he died, he consulted a military attorney, seeking a discharge.

Twelve hours before he died, he phoned his mother at her home in south suburban Chicago Heights. "He said he was getting out of the Navy. He would be home before Christmas for good. He was going to go to college."

The next day she received word. Her son was dead.

Bigots; they say the darndest things!

In the past week, several things became clearer in the intensified debate over allowing gays and lesbians to serve openly in the military. One, objectors increasingly sought private meetings with President Clinton to air their concerns. They are not willing to publicly cling to prejudice, but happily adopt a make-my-day posture privately with the president. Two, the courts, despite years of packing at the hands of Republican administrations, are going to take care of this in short order if politicians are too faint of heart to do it. Three, and most important, is that this issue has made it more apparent than ever that being out as lesbian or gay is the key to obliterating the knee-jerk, inherited prejudices against us.

Polls from organizations as diverse as the Los Angeles Times, Gallup, and Time/CNN cited slim margins of disapproval over approval for lifting the ban. Where the huge margin occurred was in a New York Times/CBS News Poll conducted Jan. 12-14. They were asked, "Do you favor or oppose permitting homosexuals to serve in the military?" Among those who had a relative or close friend who is gay, 69 percent favored allowing gays to serve; 26 percent opposed the move.

Veterans opposed it 61 percent to 28 percent without this close connection, and all adults were 48 percent against, 42 percent for. Clearly, what we see here are the inroads made when hypocrisy is rejected and people deal honestly with one another.

Bill and Hillary Clinton have known for close to 20 years that several of their friends are gay. Imagine that — especially if you are in your 40s or older and fond of dismissing these concerns by saying, "Well, I don't know any." Long before gay rights became a "hot" issue, individuals felt compelled to open up to their friends and colleagues. Those people almost unanimously and immediately dropped any preconceptions, prejudices and judgments they may have been trained to harbor.

Fear of goblins disappears when you realize that there is a reality behind the false front of your fears, and that reality is decent, human, familiar and trusted. Thus, Clinton's feeling that lifting the ban is something that must happen should not strike anyone as aberrant. It simply comes from the fact that he has a fuller frame of reference than a slim majority of Americans, who may well have gay and lesbian friends, but who simply don't know them as such. A well-respected politician on the other side of the fence, Sen. Robert Dole, confessed on television last week, "I just don't quite get this homosexual thing yet." Dollars to donuts says the man hasn't yet had a single soul sit him down to hear the fateful words, "Bob, this may be hard for you to hear, but you're my friend. You need to know it and I need to tell you: I'm gay." Hang in there, senator — this homosexual thing will eventually get you, even if you don't get it.

Dole is not the only American to commit some memorable words on the subject to posterity since the flap started. Reading these words as a lesbian has made me laugh out loud on more than one occasion. It has also left me tearing at my hair. Take these snippets, culled from New York Times articles.

"In combat arms, you've got people living in extremely close quarters. You've got community showers. How would you feel about being in a shower with a homosexual?" Typically, Staff Sgt. Richard Bennett, I feel pretty chipper when I find myself in a shower with a homo. Soap on a rope is never as much fun as when you have someone to share it with.

Pvt. Keith McLaren says, "I don't like them, I don't like the way they do things, and if they do come in, they're going to get a lot of abuse." Girl, you will change your tune when you see what the right pillow shams and dust ruffles do for your barracks. (And honey, those quarters will still bounce!)

Also expressed is the feeling that the ban, while not really keeping gays out of the military, serves to inhibit their pass-making tendencies. If the ban was lifted, "I couldn't sleep at night. I'd be worried that some homosexual is going to sneak over and make a pass at me." That from airman Martin Jones. His remarks touch on an issue that is infuriating many American women: The morale of our fighting men has become the primary focus of this debate. On the other hand, sexual harassment against women in the military — by heterosexual men — has almost been forgiven as a symbol of the "cohesiveness" that is so glorified there. This sickening dichotomy of concern reveals the sexism of armed services brass, and the outdated model of masculinity that they are allowed to pretend is so integral to creating and maintaining a frosty army.

What becomes clear, when the moral wheat is separated from the rhetorical chaff of the military, is that the military needs to be taken in hand. Clinton should do it, because Sam Nunn is too vested in letting the military run free. And Congress, being Congress, will witter like a patch of tulips when the radical right wing starts up with anti-homo propaganda at Nunn's cherished upcoming hearings.

Arguments against gays in the military are bogus. They center on mystic terminology like "cohesion," "morale and discipline," and "the special mix that makes a great fighting force." In other words, you don't know what you're doing and you'll be sorry if you tamper with what exists.

Those arguments are smoke. What it really boils down to is this self-damning quote. Dave Marpus is a 23-year-old airman from Fremont, Ohio. Told that the anti-gay sentiment in the military is on a par with discrimination against blacks and women, he bridled. "That was racism against the blacks, just prejudiced thinking. We're not that way at all. We just don't like homosexuals." Right, big guy. Shut up and fall in.

JUSTICE

Zoe Baird and America

Our national attention span is so brief we hardly have time to consider the full ramifications of events. The issues raised in the case of Zoe Baird, for instance, are terribly instructive of the injustices and inequalities which characterize our nation today. They should not be ignored or forgotten so quickly, for in Baird, we have an intelligent, ambitious person who has, by all the standard definitions, made a success of her life. She has done this in the corporate world, because, frankly, we provide no other way to make it to the very top. But what is her work, exactly? For starters, it's the opposite of everything that the "populist" Bill Clinton supposedly stands for (but everything that the DLC-Clinton represents): Lawyer Baird made the big time by engaging in kinder and gentler class war against workers and consumers — against, in short, all the rest of us. "Class war," of course, is a phrase we are ideologically trained to disregard, so perhaps "class skirmish" would be more appropriate to Baird's work with notoriously anti-labor GE, where she lobbied against a whistleblower protection law and helped set up an internal system that was supposed to allow the corruption-ripe company to police itself (puh-leeze!) rather than submit to public scrutiny. For the insurance giant Aetna, she came up with an initiative to keep government from controlling health-care reform, since our good health would hobble Aetna's power and profits. She's also publicly opposed the Superfund, and supported Dan Quayle's anti-consumer attack on corporate liability. These are just some of her handsomely rewarded positions. Little wonder that our foremost champion of consumer democracy, Ralph Nader, was utterly appalled by her.

The inchoate class resentments that surfaced during Nannygate centered around the fact that Baird and her husband Paul Gewirtz violated the law by illegally hiring a Peruvian couple to care for their child and car. Baird reportedly makes $50,000 a month; people who make much less per year have to struggle endlessly for legal child care, largely because corporate America denies us a national child-care system. Baird claimed, in a particularly egregious example of the "mommy defense," that she was only acting like a mother and not thinking about the law. Actually, she wasn't thinking about the law because she could afford to ignore it; her case is really no different from the many others who have the most vulnerable domestic labor available clean up the mess, do the garden work, and baby-sit the kids. This dirty secret of the rich suggests a larger scandal, the national disgrace of the abuse of illegal immigrants by agribusiness. The factory food put on most of our tables is harvested in hypocrisy; We eat the toil and tears of the nation's servant class.

And here's more food for thought: If Paul Gewirtz had been nominated instead of his wife, would the response to the illegal hiring have been as visceral, considering who is usually assigned responsibility for child care? And would the anti-Baird tide have been as strong in the Senate if Baird hadn't earned the enmity of the merchants-of-death lobbyists from the NRA for supporting a ban on semi-automatic weapons?

Meanwhile, as Justice waits, like Godot, Baird and Gerwitz return to their home in the most exclusive part of New Haven (a neighborhood predicated on illegal labor, union busting, and corporate domination of democracy), a neighborhood so exclusive and pale that it had a massive connoption fit when Marjorie Eichler, a woman with ten adopted kids, all with disabilities and all nonwhite, decided last year to move into a nearby house long used as a dormitory. The Feb. 1 issue of The Nation reports that Baird is a working member of the Ronan-Edgehill Neighborhood Association, which filed a zoning lawsuit to keep Eichler and her kids out, claiming the foster family was really setting up a "group home." Unsurprisingly, Eichler thought her family was being discriminated against, so she went to the Department of Justice. Baird nearly headed the very department that has a suit pending against her neighborhood association for violations of the Fair Housing Act.

In a way that is a tragedy for us all, Baird's life is a practical definition of the adage, "the personal is political."

Candidacy not officially announced

To the Editor:

I find it astounding that Jon Yates and The Daily Iowan find the fact that Michael (B.) Clark wrote a personal letter real news. I too wrote a personal letter announcing that I was running for vice president with Michael Clark. This letter went to my grandparents. Under the DI's interpretation of the USA campaign rules, I am surprised that they did not run a story on that letter as well because there is no difference in these two situations.

Did the DI run this story simply because they have a personal or political vendetta against Mr. Clark? Or are they simply attempting to create a scandal within student government? Why would any "news" organization make someone's personal letter their top story? Whatever their intention, this is not the issue. Apparently, the fact that Mr. Clark is a Christian and a conservative is.

Wikstrom's headline read, "Need the USA President be a Christian?" The answer is obviously NO. Need the president be a non-Christian? That answer is also NO. Religion or political beliefs have no bearing on whether someone makes a good candidate. Wikstrom goes on to say that Mr. Clark may find that persons of other religious persuasions are somehow unqualified for the position. I can assure you that nothing could be further from the truth. Why else would he have chosen me as his potential running mate — second in command. Someone who is nearly opposite him in religious belief and far more to the left politically.

I encourage the DI to wait until after the field of candidates is announced, when Clark and I (if we are candidates) can discuss our agenda, to make their judgements of us. Clark and I disagree on many things, but we do agree on many others. The primary of which is that the students at the University of Iowa need a voice in student government. If and when we are announced as candidates for the positions of President and Vice President, we will freely answer any and all questions put to us about our ideas. Until then, we are not officially candidates for any position and are not allowed to comment on the election. Some restraint from the DI would be greatly appreciated.

An open letter to the USA Student Elections Board

Dear Board Members:

As a voting member of the University's student body I would like to file a formal complaint against USA Senator Michael B. Clark for violating the USA's campaign rules.

The first statement of the USA's Election Board Campaign Rules states:

"No campaigning or displaying of campaign material will be allowed until adjournment of the mandatory candidate's meeting, Feb. 1, 1993."

Campaigning is defined in Section 17, article 3 of the Election's Code as including the "Distribution of written information."

I have enclosed a copy of a letter dated Dec. 28, 1992 which Clark has circulated to potential supporters in an effort to:

- 1) Inform them of his candidacy for the office of President of the USA.
- 2) Solicit campaign funds for the said office.

I believe it is quite obvious given these facts that Mr. Clark is in clear violation of the Campaign Rules set forth by the UI Student Association.

However, I am aware that Mr. Clark intends to defend his action by claiming that because these letters were not mailed to individuals who are eligible to vote in the upcoming election, he has broken no rules.

I would counter this claim by saying that regardless of who these letters were sent to they constitute campaign material and were sent in an effort to further Mr. Clark's campaign.

Restricting the distribution of campaign material until after Feb. 1, 1993 is meant to give each candidate the same amount of time to run forth by the body which governs it.

In this race, however, Michael B. Clark has taken off sprinting down the track before the starter has fired his gun.

Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter.

John Resch
Iowa City

the campus may be right. I have found that the general student is not half as liberal as The Daily Iowan makes it sound. I certainly have found no one like Mr. Wikstrom.

Mr. Wikstrom insinuates that Mr. Clark's goals are unacceptable. For Mr. Wikstrom students have the freedom to do anything they want, but promote moralism and Christianity. Mr. Wikstrom has become the narrow-minded reactionary he throws temper tantrums about.

I support any candidate who openly professes his Christianity and attempts to represent those views. While realizing that being a Christian does not mean you are a leader, I have read Mr. Clark's clear and insightful letters. His rationale makes his opponents — writers including Mr. Wikstrom — pale in comparison.

I have never been involved in a Christian jihad, but I will be first in line to vote for Mr. Clark.

Japanese suicide, layoff rates increase

Blaine Kucbach

TOKYO — When business got so bad that he couldn't make payments on his loans, a tire-shop owner and his wife went out early one morning and lay down in front of a commuter train.

Companies are slashing overtime, laying off part-time workers and reducing investment because of the recession, and the growing number of suicides due to financial problems add to the human cost.

Even some large companies renowned for promising lifetime security have started laying people off.

"The wonderfully kind, thoughtful Japanese company that employs for life is a total myth," said Paul Summerville, an economist at Jardine Fleming Securities.

The conservative government, proud author of the transformation to an economic superpower, is taking the heat for what some economists call Japan's worst recession since the oil shock of the 1970s.

Business leaders and many politicians accuse Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa of doing nothing while the economy gets worse. They want him to cut taxes and to rush out a supplementary budget aimed at stimulating demand.

Miyazawa also faces pressure from the Clinton administration to increase domestic demand as a means of helping reduce a trade surplus that surged to a record $207 billion in 1992.

While the export surplus grew, so did business failures at home. They reached a six-year high in 1992 of 1,167, up from 10,723 in the previous year.

Hundreds of companies have quietly laid off the workers they regularly hired on a seasonal or temporary basis when times were good. Others are urging permanent employees to take early retirement.

As larger manufacturers cut orders or switch suppliers, times are hardest for employees and owners of the small shops and factories that are the economy's backbone.

Last summer's plunge in the stock market did not send financiers jumping from windows in Kabutocho, the financial district, but police reported 1,800 suicides due to debts or business problems during the year ended in November.

The unemployment rate of just over 2 percent seems low compared to double-digit joblessness in Britain and some parts of the United States. But Japan's count of those with jobs includes members of the armed forces and anyone who worked more than one hour in the previous week.

Summerville, the economist, expects the official unemployment rate to double in 1993 as companies slim down for tougher times.

After a week spent fending off criticism, Miyazawa admitted on Friday that his government had failed to recognize the gravity of the crisis as late as a year ago, when it was predicting a strong recovery in 1993.

"We cannot help saying that we failed to look ahead adequately," he told the parliament.

Yasushi Mieno, governor of the Bank of Japan, is under fire for the central bank's apparent reluctance to cut interest rates to stimulate the economy.

It is widely expected to cut the discount rate, the charge for loans to banks, by mid-February from the current 3.25 percent to either 2.75 or even 2.5.

Mieno said Friday that moving too quickly to stimulate the economy could revive the runaway land and stock inflation of that period.

CONGRESS PROVIDES BAILOUT

Yankees' owner gets $58 million

Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Baseball team owner George Steinbrenner failed in the first round of a contract dispute with the government. But his second try was a sweet success — a $58 million bailout for his family shipbuilding business provided quietly by Congress.

Having already made $16,500 in political contributions to key congressmen since 1987, Steinbrenner enlisted two lobbyists with connections to the Appropriations subcommittees that control Pentagon spending.

The imposing owner of professional baseball's New York Yankees even made a few personal calls on Congress along the way.

Last October, without a single public hearing and without even consulting the government officials who steadfastly refused to pay the claims, Congress quietly added the money to the Defense Department's 1993 budget.

The final amount ordered paid to Steinbrenner's Tampa, Fla., shipyard was even more than he originally sought in negotiations and a lawsuit he filed against the Navy and U.S. Maritime administration.

"It's bad public policy," said Patrick Morris, deputy administrator of the Maritime administration. Congress, he said, was meddling in an area where it had no proper role.

Steinbrenner accused federal officials of trying to shut his struggling American Ship Building Co. out of an exclusive club of favored contractors, and said Congress was his only recourse.

"Every single major shipyard in this country has had problems with the Navy on their contracts," he said, calling his donations to congressional figures during the period a matter of "friendship."

The Navy, afraid of angering its congressional patrons, would not discuss the case.

The Steinbrenner case distills several key issues that will test a reform-minded Congress this year:

George Steinbrenner

the role of special-interest donations, the "revolving door" through which officials pass between government and lobbying, and the survival of defense contractors with a slimmed-down Pentagon.

Proposed Social Security freeze strikes nerve among lawmakers

H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A proposal being considered by the Clinton administration to curb Social Security benefits is already finding strong opposition in Congress. One key lawmaker on Sunday called it "a death wish" to be forgotten.

President Clinton reportedly is considering proposing a temporary freeze on the yearly cost-of-living increase on Social Security benefits, or imposing new taxes on the benefits as a way to cut the deficit.

Either idea, if pursued, is likely to cause an uproar among the 41 million recipients of Social Security checks. Already the political fallout is reaching Capitol Hill.

"That's a death wish and let's get it out of the way and forget it right now," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, when asked about the cost-of-living freeze.

But Moynihan, on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," left open the possibility that several other politically touchy tax issues — including higher taxes on Social Security benefits and tinkering with home mortgage deductions — may be at least open for discussion.

"You can talk about that," Moynihan replied when asked about proposals to increase Social Security taxes and again when asked about the interest deduction for home mortgages. Both issues have strong constituencies and any changes are likely to prompt vocal opposition.

Nevertheless, Moynihan, whose committee deals with tax issues, said he adamantly opposes a freeze even for one year of Social Security cost-of-living benefits, saying it would lead to "many more millions" of people being pushed into poverty.

Last week, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, also came out strongly against any interruption in Social Security cost-of-living increases.

The average Social Security recipient receives $653 a month, with a 3.2 percent cost-of-living increase expected this year because of 1992 inflation.

The government estimates that about $10 billion would be saved if the next cost-of-living hike were eliminated.

Under current law, retired couples earning $32,000 a year in income and individual retirees earning $25,000 must pay income tax on half their Social Security benefits.

But retirees, who boast one of Washington's strongest lobbying groups, are strongly opposed to either limiting Social Security benefits or taxing them at a higher level.

Horace Deets, executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons, noted that Social Security has a substantial reserve needed to pay benefits for current and future retirees and that the program is not contributing to the deficit.

Retirees long have argued that Social Security is not a government "entitlement" but more like an insurance fund into which wage earners make payments in anticipation of benefits after retirement.

economic focus hasn't been diverted by the controversy over whether to allow homosexuals in the military or other side issues.

"It's distracting you. It's not distracting me," he snapped at reporters last week amid negotiations over lifting the gay ban.

But Democrats and Republicans alike say the opening days of Clinton's administration have lacked the same discipline and focus as his well-oiled "Putting People First" presidential campaign.

Democratic consultant Ann Lewis said some confusion is inevitable in the early days of a new administration.

"The same week you're changing all the phones at the White House, it's tough to stay on top of a multimedia presentation of message," she said. "I would guess Clinton's long-term commitment to issues of economic change will enable him to weather and outlast this storm."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole,

R-Kan., said while Clinton's hit some bumps in the road, "no real damage" has been done yet.

Already distancing himself from campaign promises for a middle-class tax cut and halving the deficit in four years, Clinton has promised to outline his economic plan in a Feb. 17 speech to Congress.

"Everyone looks forward to moving ahead on the things he thinks are important," said Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers. "I think people want a debate about how to get the economy moving again."

overwhelming issue for him," said the officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

One of the four-star chiefs has sent a message to his senior commanders noting that the president's latest statement didn't answer many questions for the troops in the fields, according to an aide.

"The rules (about privacy and conduct) must be very specific," the aide said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "If the policy is to be changed, there must be equality across the board so soldiers — heterosexual and homosexual — are treated with the proper dignity they deserve."

Clinton's decision has created widespread uncertainty among troops in the field, the aide said.

"So I'm told to live with Homosexual Joe. Do I have any rights now?" the aide asked rhetorically. "These are the questions the 23- and 24-year-old commanders in the field have to grapple with now. But what if a homosexual says he's threatened in his unit? New standards must be drawn up so commanders know how to react."

Winkelhake said authorities will investigate all leads reported to the police department.

Police are encouraging anyone who has information about the baby or his mother to call the Iowa City Police Department at 356-5275. Persons wishing to leave information anonymously may do so, Winkelhake said.

This one wasn't about scoring more points than the other team. It wasn't about piling up individual accolades or pointing fingers when the going got rough.

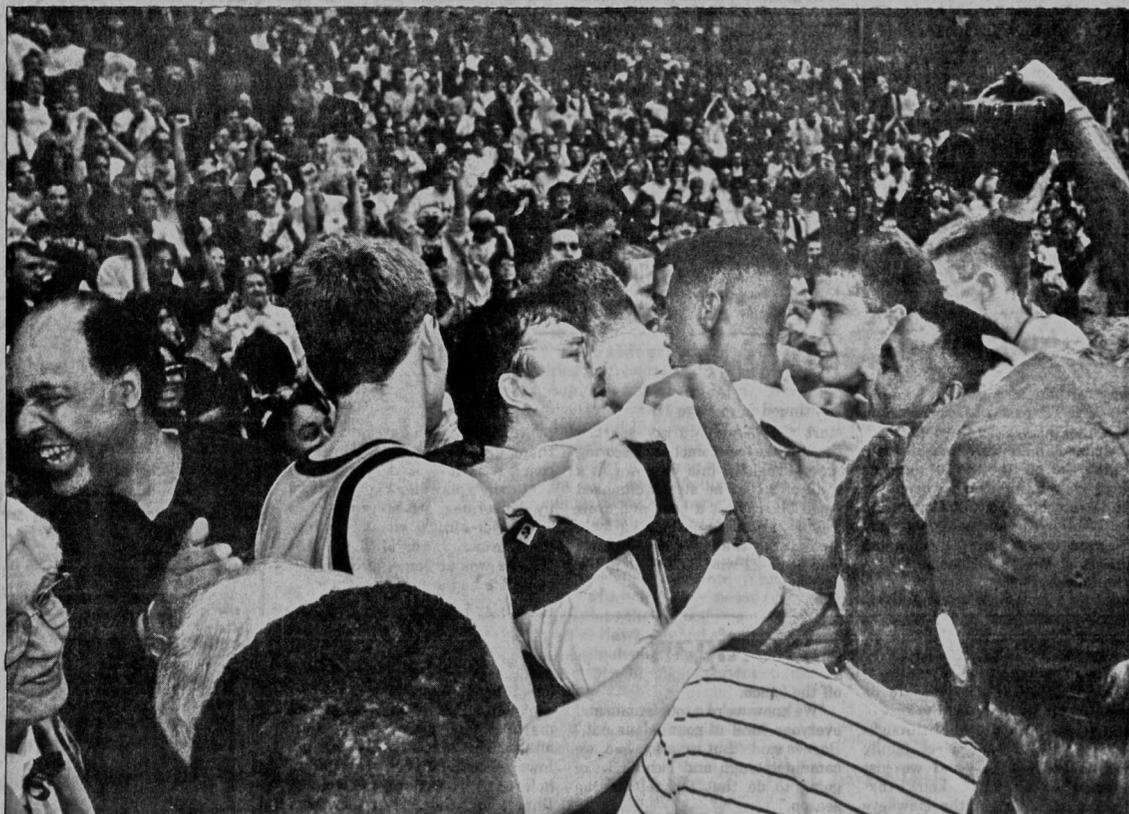

It was about a basketball club determined to put forth its best effort in front of 15,500 close friends for a family who had lost one of its own. That it came at the expense of the defending national runners-up and the No. 5 team in the nation made it all the more sweet.

Playing in their first home game since the death of junior forward Chris Street, the 11th-ranked Hawkeyes pulled together for an intensely exciting and emotional 88-80 victory over the Michigan Wolverines Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Street, who was killed in a car accident Jan. 19, was remembered in a moment of silence prior to the tip-off of the nationally televised encounter. His father Michael and mother Patty watched the game from court level and were besieged by the Hawkeyes when the final horn sounded, as students rushed the floor after what may have been one of the biggest wins in Iowa basketball history.

Shortly afterwards, Michael Street addressed the media, holding tightly to the game ball which was presented to him by the Iowa players.

"Christopher might have given some inspiration to these players but I'll tell you what, it's the players out there that did it," said Mr. Street, his left arm draped around Coach Tom Davis. "They deserve all the credit. We've all got to remember these guys are 18 to 21-year-old kids and we're all too hard on them sometimes. Whatever they do from here on out, I know they're trying hard and that's fine with me."

A strong effort was needed against the Wolverines (16-3, 5-2), especially when Michigan reeled off the first nine points of the game, apparently primed to blow the Hawkeyes off their own court. But the Hawkeyes (14-3, 3-2) clawed their way back, taking their first lead at 23-22 on a 3-point play by Michigan native Kenyon Murray with 8:02 remaining in the first half.

"We didn't panic obviously," Davis said. "Michigan's gonna do that to you, whether it's at home or on the road. They're gonna put some runs on you big time."

"I don't know if you can even see it, but a young guy will make a mistake and (the veterans) are there complimenting them, patting them on the back and helping each other out," Davis added. "That's invaluable when you're trying to get a team to develop some cohesion."

The teams headed to the locker room knotted at 44-44 before the Hawkeyes scored nine of the first 12 points of the second half to creep ahead 53-47. But as Iowa opened things up slowly but surely, the Wolverines went on an 11-2 run after an injury to forward James Voskuil to tie it again at 67-67.

Voskuil, who was elbowed in the face by Iowa's Russ Millard, may have had his nose broken according to Michigan coach Steve Fisher. See HAWKEYES, Page 2B

Murray proves his point

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Coming out of Battle Creek, Mich., as the state's Mr. Basketball, Kenyon Murray didn't have much to prove to the Michigan Wolverines as far as sheer ability was concerned.

But on Sunday, Murray was on a mission as far as showing the Wolverines something else — that he made the right choice in attending Iowa.

"I kind of wanted to prove a little something on the court because it came down to Michigan and Iowa," Murray said. "I wanted to let them know that I didn't make a mistake by coming here. A lot of players on their team didn't think I made the right choice because we played in high school against each other."

Mission accomplished. Murray was instrumental in the 11th-ranked Hawkeyes' 88-80 victory versus No. 5 Michigan Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, scoring 13 points and grabbing seven rebounds in 21 minutes off the bench as Iowa improved to 14-3 overall, 3-2 in the Big Ten.

The 6-foot-5 freshman forward also collected three steals and a pair of blocks, including a snuff of a 3-point attempt by 6-9 sophomore sensation Chris Webber.

"I think we're on an all-time high," Murray said. "The coaches tell us that we have the talent to win the Big Ten. We just have to want it really bad. Right now, we feel we can beat anybody, especially here at home. You're not going to see a game where this team is not going to play hard."

Cowboys wallop Bills, 52-17, as NFC continues dominance

Dave Goldberg

PASADENA, Calif. — It was quicker than anyone could imagine.

Three seasons ago, the Dallas Cowboys were the worst team in NFL history. Now they're Super Bowl champions and they did it with four of the quickest touchdowns ever.

That left the Buffalo Bills as the first team to lose three straight Super Bowls and the NFC's supremacy intact — nine straight NFL titles, seven in overwhelming fashion, this time 52-17.

With MVP Troy Aikman throwing for four touchdowns and Charles Haley and Ken Norton leading a defense that forced a record nine turnovers, the Cowboys scored two touchdowns 15 seconds apart in the first period of Sunday's Super Bowl and two more 18 seconds apart in the second.

"Our defense is somebody now," Norton said of a unit that had no Pro Bowlers to six for Dallas' offense. "Everybody knows who we are."

Along with Aikman, the defense was the factor that made Buffalo the first team to lose three straight Super Bowls after becoming just the second team to make it three straight times.

"You always wonder why, why us?" said Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly, who was knocked out of the game with 6:52 in the first half when he re sprained his right knee. "We turned the ball over nine times and you can't beat a college team doing that."

Two of Aikman's TD passes went to Michael Irvin and one each to Jay Novacek and Alvin Harper as the NFC East won the Super Bowl for the third straight year, a record. The three winners were different — Dallas, Washington and the New York Giants — but the victim each time was the Bills.

"Early on, the whole team was a little uptight," said Aikman, who was 22 of 30 for 273 yards. "I really had to talk myself into staying relaxed out there. This is the greatest feeling that I've ever had in my life and I wish every player could feel it."

There was another first — Jimmy Johnson became the first coach ever to win both a national college title and a Super Bowl. The NFL title came just three years after he led his pro coaching career with a 1-15 record.

It was the Cowboys' third Super Bowl victory.

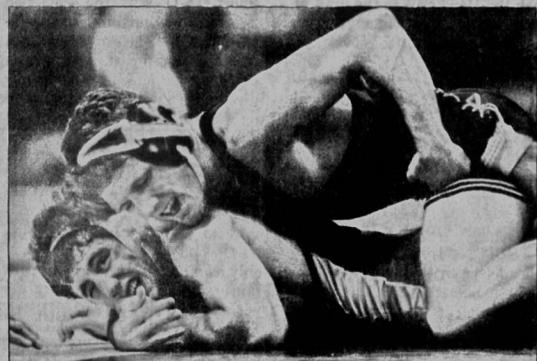

"Nine turnovers in the game and they converted five into TD scores," said Buffalo coach Marv Levy. "We picked the wrong day to play poorly."

The Cowboys won on both sides of the ball. Emmitt Smith, the NFL's leading rusher, ran for 108 yards on 22 carries and became the first rushing leader to win a Super Bowl. He was the first to ever play in it.

After spotting the Bills an early 7-0 lead on a TD set up by a blocked punt, the Cowboys turned on the defense, getting five of the turnovers in the first half. See SUPER BOWL, Page 2B

Dan Gable may be considering changing his title from Iowa wrestling coach to preacher.

It's not by choice. But with the way his Hawkeyes wrestled Saturday night versus No. 6 Minnesota, there may be no alternative.

"I've gotta preach and work," Gable said. "Gotta back some of them in the corner and see if they want to stay in the corner and get clawed, or if they want to come flying out of that corner."

Against the 12-1-1 Golden Gophers, it was a 60-40 split in favor of Hawkeyes coming out of the corner — but they weren't exactly flying. Iowa (10-1-1) squeaked out a 21-13 victory, winning six of the 10 matches, in its closest dual meet at Carver-Hawkeye Arena since a 22-17 victory over Iowa State in 1989.

It was probably the last dual the Hawkeyes will have wrestled as the nation's top-ranked team, at least for two more weeks, as the newest national rankings are scheduled to come out this week. Because Gable has rarely been

HAWKEYES: Emotional win vs. Michigan

Iowa's ability to get the Wolverines into foul trouble proved to be the difference down the stretch, as the Hawkeyes held a 42-12 advantage in free throws attempted. Heralded sophomores Chris Webber and Juwan Howard would both foul out in the final minute, and as chants of "overrated" were directed towards the Wolverines, hysteria took to the court — for Iowa basketball and for a lost teammate who would have turned 21 Tuesday.
"In the locker room, there was a lot of emotion since it was our first home game since we lost Chris," Murray said. "We just told (the Streets) that we went out and we did it for Chris."

"We know Chris is going to be with us emotionally for the rest of the season and probably throughout our lives. The Street family means a lot to us and we just wanted to let them know that they're still part of the Hawkeye family."
Guard Val Barnes, who scored a season-high 29 points Thursday night in a 96-90 overtime win at Michigan State, led the Hawkeyes again with 27 on 10-of-20 shooting from the floor and three steals. Center Acie Earl added 19 points and five blocks while Murray had 13 points, three steals and a pair of blocks. Center/forward Russ Millard had nine points and five rebounds in 19 minutes of action off the bench.

"We know we're a tough team and everyone kind of counted us out," Barnes said. "But we refocused, we came out tough and I think we're going to do that the rest of the season."
Jalen Rose paced the Wolverines with 19 points, Webber had 17 and 11 rebounds and Howard registered a game-high 12 boards.
"They would not allow Michigan to win," Fisher said of the Hawkeyes. "There's a lot of things we didn't do but Iowa was directly responsible for most of them. I say congratulations and there has to be great pride for everybody associated with this program."
For Davis, only time will tell how long Iowa's emotional run can continue. But after seeing the mayhem take place on the court afterwards, it was okay for the Iowa coach to put that thought on hold until Thursday's matchup at Illinois and Saturday's showdown with Indiana, a team that could be entering Carver as the nation's new No. 1.

"It was probably the greatest crowd support I've seen in my seven years here, maybe in the history of Carver-Hawkeye Arena," he said. "The crowd really got behind this ballclub. You can't measure how much that means. I think the crowd, it was their way of letting (the players) know they were right there with them."

WRESTLING: Squeak by Gophers

fans that brought cowbells and made their fair share of noise, took the Hawkeyes to the limit at 150 pounds and heavyweight before Iowa prevailed in overtime each time.
The 150-pound bout was everything it was expected to be, and more, when top-ranked Terry Steiner (20-0) met No. 3 Willy Short (14-1). With the score tied 2-2 and 0:49 remaining in regulation, referee Keith Poolman called Short for stalling, giving Steiner a 3-2 edge — much to the disbelief of Minnesota coach J

Robinson, a former assistant under Gable.
"He took it away from the kid," Robinson said of Poolman. "He didn't score on him. The whole night, he wouldn't call Iowa for stalling. I think he was letting the crowd dictate it. I don't care what you do, just call it the same for everybody."
Despite the momentary edge, Gable was not feeling at ease with Steiner.
"I knew as soon as he went ahead on the stalling call, he was in trouble because he started changing his tactics," Gable said. "That's why he's not the national champ right now. If he doesn't get over that, he's gonna have a tough time winning the big ones. You cannot clam up."
Sure enough, Short scored a two-point takedown with 0:16 left before Steiner escaped 10 ticks later. After a scoreless overtime, Steiner won the ensuing flip to determine the down position and scored the winning escape in five seconds for a 5-4 victory.
The Hawkeyes led 18-13 going into the final bout, as 8-1 senior John Oostendorp hooked up with 30-1 freshman Billy Pierce. Forty seconds into the two-minute overtime, Oostendorp shot in for a single-leg takedown and the 3-1 victory.
"If it's going to go into overtime, Oostendorp's going to win most of them," Gable said.

Another key bout occurred at 134, where virtually unknown senior Kenny Johnson got the starting nod over No. 10-ranked freshman Bill Zadick. Johnson, a transfer from Cornell College, brought the 4,020 in attendance to their feet with a takedown and near fall in the final minute against Chris Berglin for an 8-4 win.
For the 17-5 Johnson, the bout was one he would not soon forget.
"It was my first match in Carver-Hawkeye Arena and I wanted to overcome the crowd noise and just wrestle my match," Johnson said. "I was nervous."
But despite the confidence-enhancing win, Johnson refused to acknowledge that he's found a permanent spot in the starting lineup.
"You have to earn your reputation around here," he said. "I think it'd be kind of hard after one match to say 'I'm on solid ground.'"
"Zadick's got the edge, there's no doubt," Gable said. "It's based on performance but neither of those guys has been real disciplined as far as showing they really want to wrestle from keeping their weight under control, from academic eligibility, being at practice on time. You've gotta pay the price."

A letter from the Streets:

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a letter written by the family of Chris Street. Donations to the Chris Street Memorial Fund can be sent to "Christopher Street Memorial Foundation," Warren County Brenton Bank & Trust; 509 N. Jefferson; Indianola, Iowa; 50125.
TO THE PUBLIC:
FROM MIKE, PATTY, SARAH AND BETSY STREET
Words cannot express our appreciation for the support the public has shown our family since Christopher's sudden death. We have had countless moving letters and cards; relating how Christopher was not only our son, but a son shared by many people. Everyone knew him and appreciated him as a player and as a person.

Luckily, we recently told him how proud he had made us; not only as a player, but more importantly as a person. Obviously we wish we had said more.
We believe that God had a plan for Christopher. Whether we like it or not. We are at peace that Christopher is in heaven. We now lean on God and Christopher's memory for comfort and support to help us get through this period. And to help us become better players in the game of life.
Again, thanks for your overwhelming support and faith. A special thanks for those who have given to the Christopher Street Memorial Foundation; through these donations we believe that we'll see a recreational facility built in Christopher's name. It is our hope that this facility will make a difference in many young people's lives.

Third-ranked women roll on Michigan trip

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan
For the first time this season, the No. 3 Iowa women's basketball team entered the locker room trailing at the half. But Michigan State was unable to hold on to a 28-26 lead and the Hawkeyes remained perfect in the Big Ten with a 75-55 win Sunday at East Lansing.
The Hawkeyes moved to 7-0 in the conference and 15-1 overall while the Spartans fell to 2-4 and 6-9.
Iowa Coach C. Vivian Stringer said that a lack of focus may have been the reason for the close first half.
"Our team fell into a mental rut," Stringer said. "We didn't address this team as we should have. We seemed to not have a game plan. We did, but it just didn't seem like it."
The Hawkeyes opened the second half with a five-point run to go ahead 37-32 on a short jumper by junior center Cathy Marx. The Spartans responded with eight unanswered points to regain the lead at 38-37. That would be the last Spartan lead, as Iowa followed with a 19-2 run to take an 18-point lead.

Senior guard Laurie Aaron and junior forward Nicole Tunsil paced the Hawkeyes with 13 points each. Junior forward Tia Jackson scored 12 and senior forward Toni Foster added 11.
Sophomore forward Kisha Kelley led the Spartans with 20 points.
Aaron, a native of Detroit, paced the Hawkeyes with 18 points, seven assists and six steals in a 84-54 win at Michigan Friday night.
Michigan, in last place of the conference, fell to 1-15 and 0-7 with the loss.
Tunsil was Iowa's leading scorer with 19 points and Jackson had 13. All-Big Ten center Trish Andrew, who leads the conference in rebounds (12.4) and blocked shots (3.1), led the Wolverines with 22 points.

Foster, whose play was affected by an upper respiratory infection, was held to four points and four rebounds in 16 minutes of play Friday.
"I look back at this game now and think maybe we should not have played her," Stringer said. "But she is a senior. It's her last trip here."
Despite the lopsided score, Stringer said that she was not completely satisfied with her team's play.
"We didn't play to our expectations. But when you play at this level, it's even difficult to consistently perform to that level of expectation," she said. "That's something we need to work on. We also started getting sloppy, weren't as intense as we should be and I thought we were lax defensively."
"I fear games like this because it's easy to get upset for those very reasons."

Hassard had high praise for both Morris and Poole, both of whom were voted co-MVP's of the meet. Poole drew coach Hassard's vote.

"I voted for Marlene Poole, but I think it was very close between her and Tracy," said Hassard. "But Marlene looks particularly sharp in the 200, the 400 and her relay event, and I think she's really ready to have an outstanding year."

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Iowa splits at ASU triangular

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team split its dual meets at the Arizona State Triangular in Tempe, Ariz., over the weekend, beating Grand Canyon University 7-2 on Friday and losing to the host Sun Devils 7-2 on Saturday.

Despite the score, coach Micki Schillig was very pleased with the tenacious effort her team put forth against Arizona State.

"We played very well against ASU. I was really happy with how everyone played," Schillig said. "ASU is a top-ranked team and we played with them all the way down the line."

"When (the Sun Devils) saw Iowa on the schedule, they probably thought, 'Oh, an easy meet.' But we really made them work. You could tell their coach was really impressed with our effort."

Iowa's two points came from victories by freshman Sasha Boros and sophomore Amy Jahn. Boros defeated Sun Devil Page Bartlett 6-4, 6-4, while Jahn defeated ASU's Meredith Geiger 6-3, 6-2.

"Amy's match was a really big win for her," said Schillig. "Geiger is an excellent, experienced player who usually plays at No. 3 singles. Amy stayed with it; when you get up on a good player, it's easy to get overconfident and lose your concentration, but Amy never let her back into the match."

The Hawkeyes had a tough go of it in their doubles matches, dropping all three to the experienced Sun Devils.

"Doubles still need some work," said Schillig. "The girls were a tad bit tentative today, knowing we had to have all three matches (to win the dual meet)."

The Hawkeyes fared much better in Friday's dual meet with the Lady Lopes of Grand Canyon. In singles, senior Andrea Calvert, junior Rhonda Fox, freshman Nikki Willette, Boros and Jahn all posted victories for Iowa. The doubles teams of Fox and Willette and Jahn and Boros were also successful, achieving straight-set wins.

"Andrea and Sasha played well — they never let their opponents get into the match," said Schillig of her No. 2 and No. 3 singles players. "Rhonda was hitting everything well; she dominated her match. Amy and Nikki played a couple of good matches for us."

"Doubles went better (on Friday), we picked up a couple of wins. The No. 1 doubles match (Hawkeyes Laura Dvorak and Calvert fell to Grand Canyon's Lucie Ludvigova and Nathalie Bachich 4-6, 6-2, 6-7) was an exciting match; they (Dvorak and Calvert) let up a bit in the second set, but then it was a dogfight until the end."

Iowa Laura Dvorak had a tough weekend, losing singles matches to Grand Canyon's Ludvigova and ASU's Kori Davidson to drop her No. 1 singles record to 5-4 for the year. She and partner Calvert also lost at No. 1 doubles, 4-6, 6-2, 6-7 to Grand Canyon's Lucie Ludvigova and Nathalie Bachich. But Schillig feels the Iowa sophomore gained some valuable experience in Tempe.

"When you play No. 1 singles, each match you play is going to be tough," said Schillig. "Tough matches are only going to make Laura better. One day, she's going to be a top-ranked player herself, but you have to play the best to get there."

Men start season with success

Doug Cappel
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track team opened the home part of its indoor season Saturday with considerable success at its own Iowa Invitational at the Recreation Building.

Though no team scores were kept, Iowa clearly dominated the competition, which included squads from Augustana College, Drake, Northern Iowa and Northeast Missouri State.

Junior all-American Anthon Maybank led the Hawkeyes with wins in the long jump and in the 200-meter dash, and was named the meet's co-MVP along with Augustana's Sandu Rebencuc. Sophomore Chad Ohly won the pole-vault, clearing 15 feet.

"It was a good start," said Coach Ted Wheeler, "but we've still got a lot of work to do."

Rod Jerko turned in a third-place finish in the mile run, and Audwin Patterson finished second in the 400-meters. Baylor Goode was third in the 55-meters, Jerry Fisher finished fourth in the 55-meters and Garry Roseman took fourth in the 800-meters.

Darren Smith finished second behind teammate Maybank in the long jump, while Rajeev Balkrishnan finished third and Joe Estes finished fifth in the 55-meter hurdles. Balkrishnan also took third place in the 600-meters.

Jerry Fisher had a strong finish in the 200-meters, and the 400-meter relay team of Patterson, Goode, Balkrishnan and Fisher lost a close race against a tough UNI relay team finished second to UNI with a time of 3:20.2.

"Our 400 team was a good team that could have won and should have won," Wheeler said.

After sitting out the first meet last weekend with a minor shin injury, Maybank was in action for the Hawkeyes. But Iowa is still without the services of Kevin Herd.

"We're hurting in the distances, but when Kevin comes back that should cure it," said Wheeler, who could speculate as to when Herd would be back in action.

The men have next weekend off but will return to action Feb. 13 at the Iowa State Invitational in Ames.

BIG TEN ROUNDUP

Indiana on its way to No. 1

No. 2 Hoosiers down Northwestern; Michigan State wins at No. 14 Purdue.

Associated Press

Indiana coach Bobby Knight figures his No. 2 Hoosiers will be No. 1 this week, so the would-be giant killers will be lining up to take their best shots.

Northwestern's best shot wasn't good enough Saturday night, and the Hoosiers remained undefeated in the Big Ten with a 93-71 victory. Calbert Cheaney scored 22 points for Indiana, while Greg Graham added 21.

The advantage in the Big Ten was definitely with the visiting teams Saturday. In addition to Indiana's win at Evanston, invading Illinois downed State 86-76, Wisconsin had a 75-76 victory at Penn State and visiting Michigan State knocked off Purdue 72-64.

Graham scored 13 of his points as the Hoosiers (19-2, 8-0) were moving to a 41-29 halftime lead. Cheaney took over in the final 20 minutes, getting 19 of his points.

Indiana moved into line for the top spot in the poll with No. 1 Kansas losing to Long Beach State last week and No. 3 North Carolina being routed by Wake Forest earlier Saturday.

Northwestern (5-10, 0-6) held several early leads, but a 13-0 run over a six-minute span gave Indiana a 37-27 advantage.

Cedric Neloms led Northwestern with 20 points, and Pat Baldwin had 19. At Columbus, Andy Kaufmann came off the bench to score 22 points and five teammates also hit double figures as Illinois handed the Buckeyes their fifth loss in a row.

Rennie Clemons and Deon Thomas each added 14 points, Richard Keene 13, T.J. Wheeler 11 and Robert Bennett 10 for the Illini (12-6 overall and 5-2 in the Big Ten Conference).

Lawrence Funderburke had 25 points and 10 rebounds for Ohio State (9-7, 2-5), which has not won since rising to No. 21 in the national rankings with a 2-0 start in the conference. The losing skid is Ohio State's longest since dropping eight in a row in 1989.

So far this season, there's been no place like Penn State's home for Big Ten basketball schools.

Wisconsin became the third Big Ten team to win at Recreation Hall, triumphing behind Michael Finley's 27 points and a pressure defense that generated 18 turnovers.

The Badgers (11-5, 4-3 Big Ten) forced eight turnovers in the first nine minutes of the second half and turned a 36-32 deficit into a 51-40 lead. Penn State cut the lead to four late in the game, but the Badgers hit 13 of 14 free throws in the final 5:46.

Penn State (6-9, 1-5) missed the front end of three one-and-one opportunities at the end of the Wisconsin run and, overall, made less than 44 percent of its shots for the 10th straight game.

Coach Gene Keady has been say-

Iowa men rally, top Penn St.

Curtis Riggs
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swim team surprised everyone but themselves by fighting back from a 44-11 deficit after three events and pulling out a victory at Penn State Saturday, 122-119.

"This is a real important win for us," Coach Glenn Patton said. "We had our backs to the wall."

Patton credited team co-captain Matt Smith for inspiration and motivation.

"Matt was going around getting the guys fired-up. He was saying that this meet was like the Iowa basketball team against Michigan State (96-90 overtime win Thursday)," Patton said. "When it comes from a team member it is much more effective than when it comes from a coach."

Smith said he learned a lot about team unity from Iowa's close loss to Nebraska last week.

"I saw from Nebraska what team unity is all about," Smith said. "For a team to win it has to have team unity."

Krzysztof Cwalina and Vico Hidalgo were double winners for the Hawkeyes. Cwalina took top honors in the 50-yard freestyle by going 20.99 and won the 100 freestyle in 46.19. Hidalgo won the one-meter diving competition with a 383.50 score and placed first on the three-meter board by garnering a 330.75.

Cwalina said the 100 freestyle was the tougher race for him Saturday. "I had to work very hard on winning this race, I won it in the last few yards," he said.

Hidalgo's performance was no surprise to diving coach Bob Rydze.

"Vico is a lot older and stronger," Rydze said of the sophomore who went to the NCAA Championships on both the one- and three-meter boards as a freshman.

Mike Johnson won the 200 butterfly in 1:58.27, and Smith was first in the 200 backstroke with a 1:48.90, a new Penn State pool record.

Rafal Szukala was first in the 500 freestyle with a 4:36.87, and Erik Marchitell won the 200 individual medley in 1:58.29.

Assistant coach Rich Draper said Szukala's performances in the 500 as well as the 200 butterfly (third place) were meet highlights.

"We told Rafal that we needed him to get at least a third in the fly," Draper said of the race that was held 10 minutes before the freestyle event.

Patton said that most Big Ten coaches were not expecting Iowa to beat a shaved Penn State team on the road.

Minnesota too much for women

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Season-best times for the Iowa women's swimming and diving team highlighted a 189-111 loss Saturday at Big Ten rival Minnesota.

"I don't like the final score, but there's not much we can do about it," Iowa coach Pete Kennedy said. "At this point in time we did what we had to do. There's not much more you can ask for."

J.J. DeAth led the Hawkeye attack with her fastest-ever unshaved time of 58.94 seconds in the 100 backstroke. DeAth then joined teammates Nicole Widmyer, Tracy Golden and Liane Burton in the 400 free relay to swim a season-best 3:31.5, which took second to the Golden Gophers (3:31.2).

Junior Alison Pennington won the 200 breaststroke in 2:21.42 and the Hawkeyes swept the 100 butterfly with Widmyer taking first (58.16), followed by Burton (58.49) and Jennine Cota (59.63).

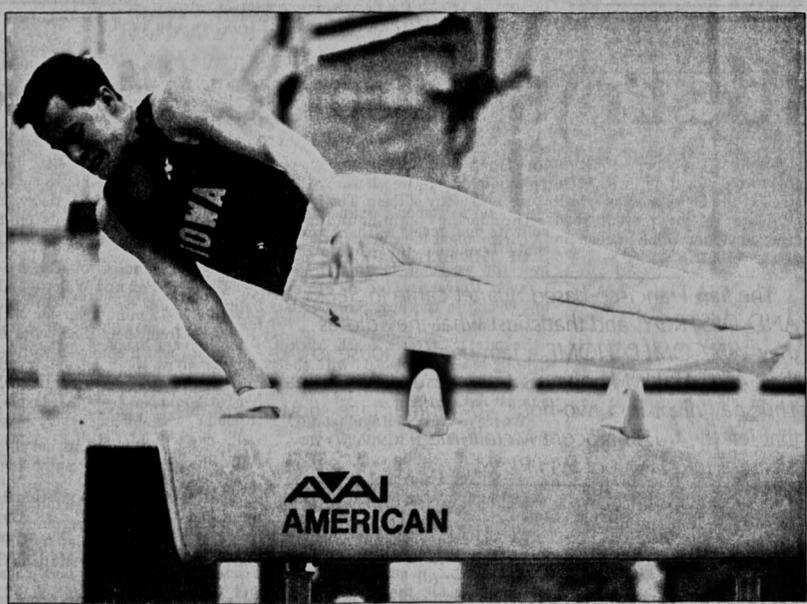

Both teams have started tapering in preparation for the Feb. 16-20 Big Ten meet at Michigan.

Laura Borgelt swam season-best times in the 100 freestyle and 100 and 200 backstrokes.

"The team swam well compared to last weekend," said DeAth, a sophomore out of Fairfield, Iowa. "It was a great finish. We're ready for the Big Ten meet."

Iowa finished the regular season with a 3-5 Big Ten record and a 6-5 overall mark. The Hawkeyes now have two weeks off to get ready for the conference meet.

"I'm enthusiastic about the Big Tens," Kennedy said. "Based on what I saw this weekend, we'll do really well there."

Iowa men score season high

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

The sixth-ranked Iowa men's gymnastics team had an easy win Friday, tallying its highest team score of the season versus 28th-ranked Iowa State, Wisconsin-Oshkosh and Washington.

Iowa scored a 273.40, while Wisconsin-Oshkosh took second place with a 226.65. A score of 219.65 put Iowa State in third and Washington brought up the rear with a 179.50.

Senior Chris Kabat, competing in the all-around for the first time this season, captured first place honors with a 53.85. Senior Adrian Besancon took a close second with a score of 53.80 and Iowa State's T.J. Malone took third with a 53.30.

"That was one of the highlights to see Chris Kabat back on six events," Coach Tom Dunn said. "He's still far from where he will be a month from now and that's going to make a big difference in our team score."

While Kabat was satisfied with the team score for this meet, he feels improvement is still needed.

"We've got a lot of work to do even though we scored our highest team score yet," said Kabat, who is ranked 11th nationally on the parallel bars. "The pommel horse score is still way too low, parallel bars is getting there and floor is really low."

Senior Don Brown agrees that the team is still striving to improve its scores.

"It's early in the season so we're doing a lot of new skills, Brown said. "We're starting to refine our routines now as we get into the season and clean up little things, so hopefully we'll be doing a lot better. I think once we start hitting our routines, our scores are going to improve a lot."

Iowa took the top two places individually on every event.

Brown, ranked fourth nationally on the floor exercise, captured first place honors on that event with a 9.45. Freshman Rick Uptegraff's 9.40 tied him for second place with Malone.

"Floor exercise was kind of disappointing," Dunn said. "We had a lot of misses there and I'm not sure why. We probably just haven't trained it enough."

Pommel horse was a strong event for the Hawkeyes, who took the top six places. Freshman Hugh Lau captured first with a 9.20. Second place went to freshman Aaron Cotter and Kabat came in third.

"Aaron Cotter's pommel horse was probably his best of the year and Jay Thornton's was much improved," Dunn said.

Senior Adrian Besancon took first on still rings with a 9.60, while Garry Denk came in second with a 9.55.

"Adrian Besancon tried a new routine on rings and did real well," Dunn said.

Brown's 9.35 gave him first place on vault and Kabat tied for second with Malone.

"Chris Kabat's vault was his best of the year, maybe the best in the past couple of years. It was really nice," Dunn said.

Besancon and Cotter tied for first on high bar with a 9.4. Thornton's 9.35 put him in third place.

"It's great to see everybody doing releases on high bar and the new stuff that people did they hit," Kabat said. "All we can do now is go up."

Denk captured first place on parallel bars with a 9.45. Uptegraff tied for second with Kabat, after scoring a 9.30.

"Garry Denk made some good improvements on parallel bar and a real big improvement on high bar," Dunn said. "That was probably the best routine he's done in his career at Iowa."

Janzen's 68 wins at blustery Phoenix Open

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Lee Janzen, thriving in blustery weather which troubled others, birdied the last two holes Sunday to pull away for a two-stroke victory in the Phoenix Open. His 3-under-par 68 finale was enough for the $180,000 first prize, considering how others fared in conditions reminiscent of a British Open — wind gusts to 28 mph. Robert Wrenn, the leader at 11-under after 54 holes, shot a 74 and finished in a four-way tie for third.

Metallica seeks and destroys at Carver-Hawkeye show

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

For all of the "Down with heavy metal" readers of the world, I have sad BUT TRUE news for you.

THE FOUR HORSEMEN of metal, Metallica, proved that they are not only back with a vengeance, but that their first-ever visit to Iowa City was definitely worth THE WAIT.

The San Francisco-based quartet came to SEEK AND DESTROY, and that's just what they did as they WELCOMED HOME a jam-packed house to the SANITARIUM known as Carver-Hawkeye Arena Thursday night in a two-hour, 40-minute stage show that left the true, hardcore Metall-maniacs with a pleasant infestation of WHIPLASH.

While many fans of Metallica, or just plain metal poseurs, may have felt the band's latest album meant the group (Dare I say this?) sold out, nothing could have been further from the truth. That was especially the case after witnessing the in-your-face spectacle which featured a brilliant blend of old and new material spanning the band's 12-year history.

Defying to bring a traditional opening act because "Alice In Chains was the only band we really wanted to bring with us and they're over in Europe right now," drummer extraordinaire Lars Ulrich explained to the audience from the Carver-Hawkeye locker room that a 20-minute documentary would be the opening act.

As the crowd watched on one of many big-screen television sets above the runway stage and the adrenalin started to flow, scenes of Iowa City such as the Pentacrest, Union's and The Sports Column were mixed together with live footage of the band, most of which took place on the present road journey that, incredibly, began in October of 1991.

The San Francisco-based quartet came to SEEK AND DESTROY, and that's just what they did as they WELCOMED HOME a jam-packed house to the SANITARIUM known as Carver-Hawkeye Arena Thursday night in a two-hour, 40-minute stage show that left the true, hardcore Metall-maniacs with a pleasant infestation of WHIPLASH.

But true to lyrics such as "We'll never stop, we'll never quit, 'cause we're Metallica," the band ultimately hit the stage to the tune of "Enter Sandman," which was followed by a blood-pumping version of "Creeping Death."

It was difficult to pick out the highlights of the show, as there were so many of them. The intense, thundering skin-pounding of Ulrich might have been in the EYE OF THE BEHOLDER, but to this Metallica-fan, it was unequalled by any other drummer I've seen in concert before — even better than Ulrich's performance on the "And Justice For All" Tour.

Sporting a cool new haircut that gave me visions of Pantera vocalist

Phillip Anselmo, bassist Jason Newsted rocked the house not only with his four-string artistry, but his bellowing lead vocals on the aforementioned "Seek And Destroy," which was a highlight in itself.

Metallica brought the house down with a 10-12 minute version of this anthem from their 1983 debut Kill 'Em All, which climaxed with lead vocalist/rhythm guitarist James Hetfield walking along those in the front row and having them scream the song's title.

By this time, the band had played over two hours and many in the crowd seemed to have spent all of their energy. But to Metallica, the banging was just beginning, as they ended their regular set with a no-holds barred rendition of "Whiplash."

As if that wasn't enough for those too weak to take the punishment, the band began their always-satisfying encore set with "Nothing Else Matters" and "Wherever I May Roam," before giving the true fans an appetite-filling version of Diamond Head's "Am I Evil" and the Misfits' "Last Caress." ONE encore later, many fans felt it was time to call it a night.

But again, as Hetfield said, "We just have to do one more if that's OK with you." Saving the best for last, the mosh pits on the floor of the arena were sent into overdrive with the Metallica thrash song, "Battery."

Overall, Carver-Hawkeye Arena will never be the same, as Metallica showed that at least for ONE night, there would truly be JUSTICE FOR ALL.

Jay Nanda, when not polishing his wrist spikes or banging his head on the computers, is Sports Editor for The Daily Iowan.

Danzig's dark blues-metal challenges Christian symbols

Kira L. Billik
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Glenn Danzig isn't quite "Godless," as he bellows in one of the songs from his band's new album, but he's sharply critical of what he sees as Christianity's sometimes violent symbols.

"Think of it as a little kid seeing this image (of the Crucifixion) — there's blood all over, a crown of thorns on this person's head... spear marks in the side... It looks like a horror movie to me," said the singer-songwriter of the metal band Danzig.

Danzig's writing is influenced by 19th-century American writer Edgar Allan Poe and French poet Charles Baudelaire.

"I was very intrigued with Baudelaire's vision of Satan as more of a rebel than this totally evil, dark guy, which may or may not be the case," he said.

One of the downright creepiest songs on the record is "Sistinas," apparently based on poems in Baudelaire's collection, "Les Fleurs du mal" ("Flowers of Evil").

It takes guitarist John Christ's tick-tock guitar picking and undercuts it with the ominousness of Eerie Von's deep-throated bass chords. Its scattered little minor-key dropoffs give it an edge that sends chills up the spine.

"It (the song) was totally about isolation, depression, love," he said. "I wanted it to be creepy — it had to be, because it's about a very creepy subject."

He's explored similar themes throughout Danzig's two previous albums, their self-titled 1988 debut and its follow-up, 1990's Danzig II: Lucifuge.

The band toys with anti-religious imagery, like upside-down crosses, but the material on Danzig III: How the Gods Kill is based more on the blues than heavy metal's often cartoonish way of describing evil.

Danzig, who's in his early 30s, loves blues singers like Howlin' Wolf, and his songs reflect that.

When he sings, "I can make a man fall to his death" and "I can make a young girl lay down for me because I'm evil" in "Heart of the Devil," he's only fitting the "bad to the bone" braggadocio of the blues into a metal context.

He talked about the new record in a recent backstage interview before the first of his band's two shows at Philadelphia's Theater of the Living Arts.

The singer, clad all in black, sports a shock of shoulder-length, glossy dark hair and bushy Elvis-like muttonchops. His eyes are dark and penetrating, and he holds your gaze almost to the point of discomfort after answering a question.

Onstage, he makes up for his rather small stature with a weightlifter's physique and an animalistic, sexually charged performance. He stalks the stage, flexing his muscles and thrusting his hips.

And there's that voice — he's been compared to Elvis, Jim Morrison and Roy Orbison, but he really sounds like The Cult's Ian Astbury minus the histrionics.

Danzig started out as the frontman for the influential punk band The Misfits. When that group dissolved, he, Christ, and Von formed Samhain, which was more of a pure thrash band than Danzig. Drummer Chuck Biscuits rounds out the band.

Even though Danzig (the band) loves to perform, its members all are getting the urge to put touring behind them, but still keep making records.

"I like relaxing at home, and there's lots of stuff I want to do besides this," Danzig said. "I don't want to see us becoming a band like Metallica that stays out on the road for a year or two years... I don't want it to become a grind."

"Chuck is an artist — that's something he's been exploring. Eerie (has) been experimenting with writing songs — he hasn't told me yet. I saw one of his songs laying around the other night on the bus... And John is very into classical music — he's classically trained on guitar, and I know he wants to experiment."

'Used People' 's sum falls short of its multiple, depressing parts

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

What would you say to someone who attempted to pick you up at your husband's wake? As odd a question as it is, it's at the center of the best of the half-dozen plot lines in "Used People," the latest weepy "chick flick" in the tradition of "Steel Magnolias."

The film, the American debut of British director Bebban Kidron ("Antonia and Jane") stars Shirley MacLaine ("Postcards from the Edge") as Pearl Berman, a Jewish matriarch living in Queens and trying to deal with an aging mother, two grown, divorced, miserable daughters and the death of her husband. Into the middle of the wake waltzes quirky widower Joe Meledandri ("La Dolce Vita")'s Marcello Mastroianni, who offers his utmost sympathy — and asks Pearl out.

It turns out that he knew her husband, and has his reasons for his timing — but Pearl, whose entire life has been caught up in an emotionless, self-denying state in which she hurt everyone around her, herself included, has no idea how to deal with his attentions. Like everyone else in this story, she has been badly used by life.

Hence the title of the film. Each of the characters in "Used People" has been through something inordinately painful, and most of them have wrapped themselves tightly around that pain and are holding onto it with all their might. Pearl's mother Freida (Jessica Tandy) is trying to deal with old age as her best friend Becky (Sylvia Sidney) moves into a nursing home. Her daughter Bibby (Kathy Bates) is working off not only a bad marriage, but a lifetime of being fat and in the shadow of her pretty sister Norma ("Miller's Crossing")'s Marcia Gay Harden; Norma herself lost a child to crib death, was abandoned by her husband shortly thereafter, and has since dealt with life by dressing up as movie characters, leaving her remaining son Swee'Pea (Matthew Branton) so ignored that he begins engaging in deliberately dangerous actions, convinced that his dead grandfather is protecting him from harm.

Any two or three of these plot lines alone would have been sufficient for a rich, full and interesting movie, but taken all together, they reach a level of angst and weltschmerz fit to drown even the most ardent soap opera fan. And the more strung-out and pained the characters get, the more unlikely and tacked-on the inevitable happy wrap-up seems.

As if this wasn't enough pain, everyone in Pearl's entire extended family — every Jewish person in the film — is a nag, a leech, a twit, or all of the above, leading to one of the most ugly collections of racial stereotypes since "Black Rain" — which expressed how all Japanese people are even stupider and more ineffective than a standard sleazy Michael Douglas character.

At the wake, members of the clan stuff themselves on the free food, engage in vicious gossip about the widow and her daughters, sneak around grabbing the dead man's possessions ("He had some handkerchiefs that I admired"), and discuss Pearl as though she were a child, sorting through what she should want and should do next while ignoring her presence in the room. None of them has any courtesy, kindness or tact — it takes an outsider, an Italian who is instantly despised by the entire assembly, to offer words of support and sympathy that actually ring true. This much selfishness, bitterness, thickheadedness and bile, combined with the number of life crises that occur in an average day, would drive people even more practical and down-to-earth than Pearl to attempt suicide hourly.

Her slow self-discovery and her

Stars Marcello Mastroianni (right) and Shirley MacLaine relieve the dreariness of "Used People," an overdone, weepy drama about angst in an extended Jewish family.

clumsy romance with Joe, however, are honestly and sweetly portrayed, easily the high point of the film. Bates and Tandy put in fine performances in their respective by-now-familiar typecast roles — Tandy as the spunky, mouthy old woman who remains unsubdued by life (as in "Fried Green Tomatoes," "Driving Miss Daisy") and Bates as the awkward fat woman with an axe to grind ("Fried Green Tomatoes," "Prelude to a Kiss" and "Misery"). The only performance that doesn't ring true is Branton's crazy-kid role, though the real blame goes to screenwriter Todd Graff, who doesn't seem to have any idea how a young boy actually talks.

The biggest problem with "Used People" is not its grimness, nor even its diffusion among too many plot threads. It's the cop-out of the resolution. "People"'s characters are at least believable; their pain rings true. But the happy endings don't. The TV-movie wrap-up is far too pat, far too cheery to synch with the authenticity of these characters and their problems; as a result, the end sum's not even remotely credible.

And as a result, the lessons of "Used People" are compromised, even nonsensical. What would you say to someone who attempted to pick you up at your husband's wake? You could say anything you liked; everyone would be perfectly happy in the end.

Eccentric acting, failed seriousness make sci-fi 'classics' comedic fun

Ian Corwin
and Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

Today's column is a retrospective of sorts for its two authors, who over the course of several years have seen literally hundreds of movies together — some repeatedly, like today's honorees. Some we liked, many we hated, most we can remember to some degree or another, if only so we can fling out obscure dialogue quotes and stump each other.

But the three films we look back on today, all of which have long been available on video, are different from the rest. They are entirely unique in the genre of science fiction/fantasy, in that they failed hilariously to be taken seriously and stand instead as wonderful monuments to all that is campy and eccentric (and, were it not for these films, Patrick "Jean-Luc Picard" Stewart never would have worked a day in his life!).

These three masterpieces are John Boorman's "Excalibur," David Lynch's "Dune" and Mike Hodges' "Flash Gordon."

"Excalibur" (1981), is perhaps the most lavish and complete screen version of the King Arthur legend, boasting one of the most brilliant and eccentric performances of our time with Nicol Williamson's portrayal of the wise but clumsy sorcerer Merlin. Director John Boorman brought classical music back into style with his blazing coordination of savagely bloody battle scenes and the sounds of Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana" and excerpts from Wagner's "Siegfried's Funeral March." The sets and costumes are also astonishing, with most of the male characters clad in 200-pound armor.

"Excalibur" is a wonderful movie, despite its two-hour 20-minute length. Nigel Terry brings little to his performance as King Arthur except a silly Irish accent and a lot of overwrought facial expressions, but his exchanges with Merlin, as the sorcerer instructs the young king, are priceless ("Do nothing, rest in the arms of the dragon ... dreeeeeeaamm").

Viewers should also look for performances by Patrick Stewart as Guinevere's father and Liam Neeson as Gawain, as well as Boorman's son Charley as a young and decidedly inbred-looking Mordred.

"Dune" (1984), is David Lynch's attempt to adapt the first book of Frank Herbert's symbol-packed science fiction series of the same name. Critics attacked Lynch's film because of the book's complexity, which seemed to them almost impossible to translate into a coherent story line without losing most of the audience.

What narrow vision. "Dune" is by no means a great accomplishment, but as a twisted experiment in sci-fi filmmaking, it is immensely entertaining. Lynch has managed to draw the most bizarre, often brutal performances out of his cast members, including Jose Ferrer, Sting, Patrick Stewart (a constant thread, yes?) and Max Von Sydow.

Lynch cast newcomer Kyle MacLachlan (who would go on to lead roles in Lynch's "Twin Peaks" and "Blue Velvet") as Paul Atreides, the warrior-messiah who is prophetically destined to lead the blue-eyed Fremmen nomads to spiritual and physical victory over the evil Family Harkonnen.

But it is to the Harkonnens that the movie actually belongs. The late Kenneth McMillan takes on 200 pounds and a garden of facial boils as the evil (and howlingly eccentric) Baron, and Brad Douirif delivers his finest effort since "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in his bizarre (and far too short lived) role as Piter, the architect of the Baron's nefarious plans. And then, of course, there's Sting (A smile, a swagger, and a bad haircut).

Lynch's sense of drama is blown far askew in this movie, but that gives "Dune" the sense of humor that it so badly needs to stay afloat — in all fairness, any director who expects an actor like Freddie Jones to be taken seriously is destined to fail.

"Flash Gordon" (1980), is probably the most widely seen of all three of today's selections — and with good reason. "Excalibur" is set to the dark refrains of Wagner, and "Dune" to the mindless dronings of Toto. "Flash," on the other hand, is set to the memorable music of Queen (Flash ... Ah-ahhhh — remember that one?). Need we say more?

This may sound odd, but out of all three films, "Flash" ends up being the one with a total vision. It is a psychedelic, glam-rock movie of epic (albeit comic-book) proportions, and that's just taking into account the score and the production design. If we keep with the thread of bad acting, that opens up a whole different can of worms (no, not "bore-worms").

Of primary interest is Max Von Sydow, who, as Ming the Merciless, has come quite a long way since his days with Ingmar Bergman. As to whether his talents were better spent in Sweden or on the Planet Mongo ... well, you be the judge. Brian Blessed brings a rolling bass voice and odd Shakespearean bent to the leader of the "Hawk Men," and Topol is tepid as Dr. Hans Zarkoff.

Of all three of these unnecessarily obscure excursions into fantasy, "Flash" seems to leave the most indelible impression on people (even more so if there are any organic hallucinogens to be had). Rent these titles, and you'll never laugh harder.
