Case of flu remaining a real in 1993

For a third year in a row, the cold and flu season has rocketed to unprecedented levels, and the White House, under pressure from the Democratic National Committee to promote its health care proposal, announced plans to begin a nationwide flu vaccine campaign.

WASHINGTON - Democratic officials promised Monday to move quickly to fulfill their campaign pledge to bolster a stronger federal program of childhood immunizations, as administrative officials said President Clinton was considering aggressive steps to ensure that children are vaccinated.

This announcement came a day after the administration said it would fund an additional $20 million to improve the current program of childhood immunizations.

The announcement came as the nation was reeling from the spread of a deadly virus that has claimed the lives of hundreds of people in the past year.

Officials of the administration said they were preparing to implement the plan in time for the next flu season, which is expected to begin in October.

“While the virus is still with us, we are ready to respond quickly,” said Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

The administration said it would also consider using the army corps of public health professionals to help with the campaign.

Clinton's music preference boosts appeal

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton's selection of one of his favorite bands to perform at a fundraising concert in New York City has helped to boost the appeal of his music, according to one of the performers.

Lucas Bates, a 27-year-old singer-songwriter, said that the concert is "a wonderful way to get a great band together to support the candidate who we believe in.

After a week of nationwide debates on how to handle homosexuals in the military, the band has grown its fan base by 15 percent.

"It's very helpful to have a band come together to support a candidate," Lucas said.

Although Clinton's selection of the band is controversial, it has not stopped the group from performing.

"We're very grateful to have Clinton choose us," Lucas said.

Moscow fans bemoan food, sleeplessness, for Superbowl

MOSCOW, Feb. 2 - The Superbowl will be held in February in Miami, Fla., but the Russian capital has been chosen as the venue for the game.

The event is the first time a Superbowl has been held in Russia, and the city is no stranger to hosting large sporting events.

"We're very excited to host the Superbowl," said Yuri, a 35-year-old Russian fan.

But not everyone in Moscow is thrilled about the prospect of watching a Superbowl out of their own country.

"I'd really prefer to watch the game in Miami," said Natalia, 22, a 27-year-old student.

"It's a difficult situation to watch a Superbowl abroad, especially when you're not used to it," she said.

For the American expatriates, the food and sleep are not what they expect.

"It may have been different back then, but now it's like a regular Superbowl," said Yuri, who has been in Moscow for 10 years.

"I hope the food and sleep will be better this year," said Natalia.

"But the atmosphere and the excitement are what make it special."
Barbershops provide old-fashioned service

Black haircuts, printed slips, old-timey barbers. Though these services seem surprisingly unfamiliar, they are still present at the barbershop, possibly at the oldest profession of all.

"That hasn't changed much out here," said UI business student Dave Strahan. "It's still the same. They're not going to change it. They will continue to do the same thing as long as they can."

Citizens, council debate street widening

Mary Geraghty

The Daily Iowan

Nearby 50 people concerned about the proposed widening of Melrose Avenue attended the Iowa City Council work session Monday night, at which the proposal was discussed in detail.

Iowa City planning and zoning director Jack O’Brien pointed to the existing problem of traffic flow, growth in six Iowa City and development in the immediate area around Melrose Avenue as reasons for the expansion to four lanes.

The current capacity of the street is 6,000 cars per day, a figure which is expected to be 10,000 per day by the turn of the century. Mr. O’Brien said.

He added that expanding to four lanes would nearly triple the street’s capacity.

Council members as well as residents of the area expressed concerns for the safety of pedestrians using that stretch of the road.

“It would be very difficult to get across, and there is so much foot traffic,” Melrose Circle resident Barbara Andrews said.

She raised the issue of the required improvement in safety to pedestrians crossing the street.

Councilman Dan Damron, explaining that an increase in safety could be achieved by making it easier for the pedestrian to be visible by drivers.

Mayor Thomas, another Melrose Circle resident, questioned the reasoning behind the proposed expansion.

The Super Bowl link to battering of women debated

Linda Daylor
Associated Press

Once the weekend, along with making football predictions and checking up on your team's prospects, was nothing but a fleeting memory. But for many women,电池 was still a quiet reminder of a number of things.

A spot check of lawsuits, police reports and local shelters shows that most had answered no more than a few calls. As one local official put it, "It's quiet in here."

There was no activity in the first two hours, he said. The shelter was quiet, with no reports of domestic violence.

"It's like the two TVs click, it's over," he said.

But when that number of women started to arrive, the shelter was overwhelmed. "It's just too much," he said.

With the Super Bowl gone, the shelter is once again quiet. But the women's rights activists said that there has been a significant increase in domestic violence.

"It's an ongoing problem," said one activist. "It's not just a one-time event."

The women's rights activists cited a number of factors that contributed to the increase in domestic violence following the Super Bowl.

"They say it's the Super Bowl, but it's really a lot of things," said another activist. "It's the cold, it's the holidays, it's the sports.

"We've seen an increase in domestic violence every year since the Super Bowl," said another activist. "It's not just a one-time event."

Cambodian offensive violates peace accord

CAMBODIAN FORCES attacked a Thai military camp near a Thai-Cambodian border today, said a representative of the Thai Royal Armed Forces.

A Thai military spokesperson said that Cambodian soldiers were confirmed to have launched the attack on the Thai camp.

The attack was described as a response to the continued buildup of Cambodian forces along the Thai-Cambodian border.

The Thai military spokesperson further stated that the attack was carried out by a large number of heavily armed soldiers.

The attack resulted in heavy losses to the Thai military, with several soldiers reported killed and wounded.

The Thai military spokesperson added that they have increased security measures along the border to prevent further attacks.

Cambodia's offensive on Monday comes amid ongoing tensions between the two countries over territorial disputes.

Thai military officials have accused Cambodian forces of repeatedly violating the peace accord, while Cambodian authorities denied the allegations.

The Thai military spokesperson said that they will take all necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of their citizens and military personnel.

They also vowed to respond firmly to any future attacks, emphasizing that peace and stability are vital for the region.

The ongoing conflict highlights the complex geopolitical dynamics in Southeast Asia, with various parties vying for influence and control in the region.

The Thai government has expressed concerns about the situation, calling for dialogue and peaceful resolution to avoid escalation.

The Cambodian government has also condemned the attacks, emphasizing that they are against the spirit of the peace accord.

The United Nations and other international bodies have urged all parties to refrain from violence and engage in constructive dialogue to resolve the disputes.

The ongoing tensions underscore the challenges in maintaining peace and stability in the region, with various factors contributing to the escalating tensions.

The Thai military spokesperson concluded by reaffirming their commitment to protect the security and sovereignty of the nation, while urging all parties to work together towards a peaceful and prosperous future.
Moving back toward the center

If the old adage is true about American politics being between the proverbial 20-yard lines, the Republican party in recent years has moved toward its own end, essentially running the ball, by stretching this metaphor far enough further, that the two teams of the GOP might be putting itself in a position to move back towards midfield.

The current last chance of the White House for many reasons, the means one a busy bussyness. However, it's also the probable last chance of the Bush administration in the White House, and now the field is more level, better suited for both teams to be competitive.

Because history has shown that in the past, when candidates were focused on a particular issue, it was often their last chance for victory. So the current last chance of the GOP has now become the chance to show the nation that they can be competitive on the national stage.

It is in this context that the 1995 State of the Union address by the President is crucial. It is the first time that the President has addressed the nation since the majority of the GOP in Congress have been replaced by Republicans. It is the first time that the President has had to face a Democratic majority in Congress.

The President has a chance to show the nation that they can be competitive on the national stage. It is a chance to set the agenda, to show the country that they can lead. It is a chance to set the tone, to show the country that they can be the leaders of the country.

Foreigners flee Zaire after armies clash in capital

The capitals - President Mobutu issued a last-minute warning Monday to loyal army troops to stay on the side of his government or face death.

A military source said 1 ,000 troops had been sent to Kinshasa overnight Sunday to reinforce the capital's defense.

The violence has spiraled into a full-blown civil war in Zaire, less than one year since Mobutu ended a 10-month civil war that claimed at least 1,000 lives and that displaced hundreds of thousands of people.

A U.S. military source said Monday that U.S. troops in Somalia had been warned to be prepared for danger because of reports from the United Nations.

There was no way to verify the reports Monday.

Belgian Foreign Minister Willy Claes said at least 300 soldiers were killed and 1 ,000 people were believed killed in a rebel mutiny by army troops. Claes said the toll could be as high as 1,000.

"There was no way to verify the reports Monday. The Belgian troops have been warned to be prepared for danger because of reports from the United Nations. There was no way to verify the reports," Claes said.

Reports Monday said the trouble spread to the capital, Kinshasa, as the army, led by the major general who had revolted last month, began to take over the capital's radio and TV stations.

Belgian paratroopers began landing at Kinshasa's airport Monday to prevent further violence.

"We're doing some good. I think we've had significant impact. We've pushed a bulldozer down the road and made the way for the people to go. We're doing some good. I think we've had significant impact. We've improved," Lt. Col. Gary Holmquist, Bemidji, Minn., commander of the 1st Marine Division, said his troops had cleared hundreds of mines and built roads during its weeks in Somalia.

"I've had great experience. It's a tough environment. I've had great opportunity. But just how much good had his forces done to the country, the way the people were being helped by the wildlife. It's just been great. It's been great. It's been great.

John F. Borko, Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Normally a coach speaking following a game, Marv Levy was even more exasperated with the Bills' loss to the Dallas Cowboys than usual.

"What are you going to say?" Levy said. "I'm just disheartened. We just aren't a good football team. We just aren't a good football team."

Levy insisted he was fine on Monday night, as Bills fan Fran Harrington put it: "Marv, you're not fine."

"I know," Levy said with a wry smile. "You're right."

Cleveland quartet honors Brahms at Hancher

William Pullik
The Daily Iowan
The Cleveland quartet's Brandt concert tonight is a recognition of its 100th year in concert work, and it will be the last appearance of the group for the season in the station at 7 p.m. The concert will feature the music of Brahms and will conclude with the world premiere of the composer's final quartet.

The quartet was founded in 1883 by the brothers Ferdinand and Alexander Dvořák, and it is the oldest string quartet in the United States. Over the years, the group has performed in many of the world's great musical venues and has recorded extensively, including a complete set of the string quartets of Beethoven.

The concert will include the first movement of Brahms' String Quartet in A Minor, Op. 110, and the final movement of Brahms' String Quartet in E Minor, Op. 51, No. 2. These works are among the composer's most beloved and best-known compositions.

The Cleveland quartet's performance is sure to be a highlight of the season, and it is a great opportunity for music lovers to hear this incredible ensemble in concert. Don't miss this chance to experience the artistry and beauty of the Cleveland quartet's music.
