Road widening project draws controversy

An Iowa City Council plan to widen Melrose Avenue from two to four lanes has drawn resistance from some area residents. Residence halls offer convenient living

According to UI statistics, more than 75 percent of undergraduate students remain in the residence halls after their junior year.

Eggers has been a computer science major since Fall 1991. Like some rap artists, he is offended by “nigger” even though his African heritage from the West Indies makes it difficult for him to use the term.

The idea of living in the residence hall setting has evolved over time. In the past, students lived in dormitories all four years, few U1 students continue to reside in the residence halls after their junior or senior year, according to statistics from UI

The figures reveal that 67 percent of the students living in residence halls are freshmen, 21 percent are sophomores, 15 percent are juniors, and only 4 percent are seniors.

Some students continue to reside in the residence halls after their sophomore year, according to Mary Carstens, assistant to the Housing Director for Student Life.

The figures reveal that 65 percent of the students living in residence halls are freshmen, 21 percent are sophomores, 15 percent are juniors, and only 4 percent are seniors.

However, some people decide to move into off-campus housing after living in the residence halls for one or two years, according to Carstens.

Mary Carstens, assistant to the Housing Director for Student Life, said that the UI would be happy if students moved into residence halls as long as they like, as long as they are willing to deal with the common issues associated with residence halls.

“I think probably in this common area of residence halls, we will have more students of African descent, I think that’s almost like a given,” said Carstens, referring to the fact that residence halls provide a more common environment for students of African descent.

“I think the residence halls are more common for students of African descent, I think that’s almost like a given,” said Carstens, referring to the fact that residence halls provide a more common environment for students of African descent.

“But along with these progressions and changes, there are some people who continue to reside in the residence halls for three or four years. According to Carstens, there are some reasons why students may want to stay in the residence halls even after their junior year.

“Students may want to stay in the residence halls for three or four years because they are comfortable with the environment and the facilities,” said Carstens.

President Clinton has been assigned herculean tasks and Americans are already impatient with his progress. Faced with a seemingly endless number of responsibilities, Clinton must also face a myriad of other problems. Clinton has been besieged with additional frustrations from those who may or may not believe in his basic campaign plan. He called into question the entitlement programs, restructuring of tax code, and even his plan to implement a national health care plan.

It seems that everyone is agog that Clinton actually meant what he said in his campaign rhetoric. He has shocked Democrats and Republicans, as well as those Perot-types who banded about marital bliss for a time. EXALTATIONS FOR CLARK

To the Editor:

Robert Weilbarger's column concerning Michael B. Clark's candidacy for UI president betrays his lack of understanding of what is meant in saying that Clark is a "socialist." It is absolutely absurd to believe that a leader would precipitate such a revolution if he were a socialist. Actually, it's the other way around - he would be forced to resign his position if he didn't do something to bring the University closer to socialist principles. The inclusion of my definition of socialism in his column does not, however, prove his socialism. The real question is whether or not a leader would precipitate revolution if he were a socialist. The answer is no. The revolutionaries of the world will not get the University into socialism because it is a socialistic institution. Clark's second claim for socialism is his support for civil rights. After all, there is no real difference between the two, except that socialism is better for the welfare of mankind. Civil rights are a means to an end. Clark might as well have said, "I support civil rights for the welfare of mankind." He might as well have said, "I support socialism for the welfare of mankind." The truth is, Clark is a socialist in name only. He does not believe in giving the people what they want, and he does not believe in the principle of the public good. He is a socialist because he believes in the public good, not because he believes in the welfare of mankind. He is a socialist because he believes in the public good, not because he believes in the welfare of mankind. He is a socialist because he believes in the public good, not because he believes in the welfare of mankind. He is a socialist because he believes in the public good, not because he believes in the welfare of mankind.

To the Editor:

I am pleased to see Jeff Lofgren comparing those opposing civil rights for gays with Nancy, Des. 2, 1993. Kihlman's points are valid, and it is important to have a clear understanding of the issues involved in civil rights for gays. However, we must remember that civil rights are not a matter of preference. The Constitution guarantees all citizens equal protection under the law, and it is the duty of government to ensure that this right is upheld. It is not enough to say that civil rights are not a matter of preference. We must also be willing to take action to ensure that this right is upheld. The Constitution guarantees all citizens equal protection under the law, and it is the duty of government to ensure that this right is upheld.

A growing number of Iowa farmers are turning to ground water, said to be superior to surface water, as their main source of irrigation water. The Iowa State University of Science and Technology has been studying the effects of irrigation on ground water levels and soil moisture.

"We've found that, in general, irrigation does not appreciably affect ground water levels," said Dr. Albert J. Schier, an assistant professor of soil science. "However, under certain conditions, such as high irrigation rates or long periods of irrigation, ground water levels may be lowered."}

Iowa farmers are increasingly relying on ground water for irrigation, according to Schier.

"The advantages of ground water include a more uniform water supply, less variability in water quality, and less wear on equipment," Schier said. "However, farmers must be careful to avoid overpumping, which can lead to concentration of dissolved solids and other contaminants in the water supply."}

"We're just starting to look at some more potential water sources," said Schier. "This is an area that needs more research."}

"...people are demanding higher quality water." Ed Moreno, manager

According to Iowa law, cities can draw water from surface sources outside of their own limits with permission from the state Department of Natural Resources. This was the case when Iowa City began its ground water well program in 1972. The study is continuing to determine the effects of ground water use on the quality of water in the Coralville reservoir, forcing the city to shut down the use of three different sources.

"...and is now being considered by the city council," Moreno said. "We're trying to figure out how to make this work for us."}

"Two years without Iowa River water has not had a major impact on the city," Moreno said. "We hope to avoid floods this spring. With the current water levels in the Coralville reservoir, we can do so."}

Knight up to 'bogus' tricks?

HIBBING Times - Bob Knight's 'bogus' comment about Iowa's playing a schedule of an already-adjusted freshman class is a 'trick by an already-tricked freshman class,' according to a source familiar with Nebraska's apparent offer to Iowa to use in a recruiting ad.

The source, who wished to be identified, said Knight brought up the situation in July when he spoke as a member of the jury in a civil suit in Kansas City involving NCAA rules and the situation in Nebraska's handling of providing further comment.

The source said Knight did not return a telephone call from Knight's office or play basketball.

Changes underway for league champs

Associated Press

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. - The Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys began making changes after their Super Bowl assignment Tuesday.

Jerry Jones said in a statement Tuesday morning that he was naming defensive coordinator Tony Simmons as his interim head coach for the rest of the season.

"It is with regret that I must announce that we were unable to come to an agreement on the coaching contract," Jones said in a statement Tuesday morning. "This is a difficult decision to make, but I feel it is in the best interests of the Dallas Cowboys."

Knight's action, Jones said, comes as a result of the Dallas Cowboys' first-round exit from the playoffs last week.

Jones said Simmons will remain the Cowboys' defensive coordinator for the rest of the season.

"The process of hiring a new head coach will begin immediately," Jones said. "This is a difficult decision to make, but I feel it is in the best interests of the Dallas Cowboys."

Jones said he will announce the status of the coaching search later in the week.

The Cowboys' 37-10 loss to the Buffalo Bills in the first round of the playoffs last week was the third consecutive loss for the Cowboys, who finished the season 9-7.

Jones said Simmons' contract runs through the end of the year, but he will not be considered for the head coaching job.

The Cowboys have been aggressively looking for a new head coach since the loss to the Bills last week.

Simmons was named defensive coordinator by Dallas owner and managing partner Jerry Jones in 2000. The Cowboys won the Super Bowl in 2004 under head coach Bill Parcells.

Parody comics lambast well-known 'heroes'

Tasha Robinson

The Daily Iowan

Long before I was on the fence about glorifying super-heroes in my columns, I was on the fence about parodies. As a political journalist, I try to be objective, and it seemed to me that parodies were a bit too subjective. But then I read a comic book that changed my mind.

The Parody Book

This book is the best thing to happen to the comic book world since the invention of the internet. It is a collection of parodies of some of the most popular superheroes in the world, and it is hilarious.

Of the many comics in this book, my favorite is the parody of Superman. It is a story about a man who is赋予 god-like abilities, but is unable to control them. He is placed in a small town where he is loved by all, but is also feared by some. The humor in this story is derived from the contrast between Superman's god-like abilities and his inability to control them.

Another great parody in this book is the one about Spider-Man. This story is about a man who is赋予 spider-like abilities, but is also赋予 human-like weaknesses. He is a hero to his friends, but is a liability to his family. The humor in this story is derived from the contrast between Spider-Man's superhuman abilities and his human-like weaknesses.

Overall, I highly recommend this book to anyone who is a fan of superheroes, or just enjoys a good laugh. It is a must-read for anyone who loves parodies.

March 7 to benefit the Domestic Violence Intervention Program in Iowa City.

Art auction will benefit DVIP

Michelle-Theresa Forcier

The Daily Iowan

Art auctions are generally used as fund-raisers, either for museums that need money for conservation projects or to bring a special collection into town. However, there are times when auctions benefit people who find themselves in life-threatening situations.

"The Art of a Fork," an auction to benefit the Domestic Violence Intervention Program in Iowa City, will be held March 7 at 1 p.m. in the second floor ballroom of the Union. According to Pat Weir, a DVIP board member, the auction is in the works for over a year and has never been more evident than this year. "They said the shelter is overcrowded, and in a domestic violence situation where so many can be turned away, the consequences are uncalculable," Weir said.

Artist Colleen Ernst has donated a mixed-media piece titled "Gimme Shelter," a mixed-media piece by Colleen Ernst, is one of many artworks to be auctioned off March 7 to benefit the Domestic Violence Intervention Program in Iowa City.
