UI flag flies at half-staff

The Old Capitol flag will fly at half-staff today in memory of Leslie Moeller, longtime director and faculty member of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication. Moeller died from Parkinson's disease Friday evening at the Iowa City Oaknoll Retirement Residence at the age of 89.

UI senior honored as one of nation's best

UI senior Njeri Fuller has been named to the 1993 All-USA Academic team by USA Today. The honor, announced Feb. 5, designates her as one of the nation's best college students.

The annual honor is bestowed upon only 60 college and university students nationwide.

In addition to being featured in USA Today, Fuller was awarded $2,500 in cash in Washington, D.C., Monday.

Fuller, an outspoken advocate for multicultural education, is a journalism major from Conyers, Ga. She has been a leader in increasing minority participation in secondary journalism and co-developed "Breakthrough: A Multicultural Guide for High School Journalism." She was also named 1992 Homecoming queen at the UI.

UI professor convicted of cocaine possession

A UI professor was convicted Friday of possession of cocaine and the sedative diazepam and was ordered to pay $700 in fines.

Leslie Barrickman, an assistant professor of psychiatry, was originally charged with four counts of drug possession. In a plea agreement with the state, he pleaded guilty to possession of the scheduled II, cocaine and scheduled IV, diazepam, controlled substances and charges of possession of marijuana and acetaminophen with codeine, scheduled I and III controlled substances, respectively, were dismissed.

Barrickman was taken into police custody Aug. 30, 1992, after involvement in a fight, according to police documents. While he was sitting in the back seat of a police car, officers saw him trying to remove several items from his pockets.

He was fined $500 for possession of cocaine and $200 for possession of diazepam.

General Motors sues NBC

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. sued NBC on Monday, alleging that the "Dateline NBC" program rigged two car-truck crashes to show that 1973-87 GM pickups were prone to fires in side-impact crashes.

"The 11 million households that viewed the program were never told that NBC used incendiary devices to try and ensure that a fire would erupt, seemingly due to the collision," GM Executive Vice President Harry Pearce said.

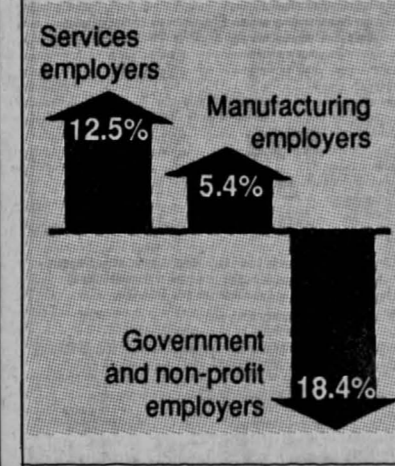

NBC acknowledged on its "Nightly News" program Monday that it used the incendiary devices in the test crash. The network didn't disclose that fact when it aired the show Nov. 17 because another factor — a spark from a broken headlight — caused the fire, NBC News President Michael Gartner said.

The lawsuit was filed in an Indiana state court. GM asked for a jury trial.

Job market looks better for '93 college graduates

Patricia Lamiell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In this year's recruiting season for college graduates, nurses are hot but aerospace engineers are not.

Companies hope to hire more college graduates this year than in 1992, but only a few fields are expected to benefit, college-placement officers say. With many companies restructuring and eliminating jobs, there are fewer openings for job-seekers straight out of school.

Health care is one industry that is hiring, said Dawn Oberman, a statistical services specialist at College Placement Council Inc. in Bethlehem, Pa. Jobs also are available in management information systems, for people who teach others how to use computers.

A focus on the environment has created openings for engineers, geologists, biologists and chemists. And with the attention that President Clinton has promised to pay to rebuilding the nation's infrastructure, times should be good for civil engineers, Oberman added.

But other industries are cutting jobs just as aggressively. Military cutbacks and hardships in the commercial airline industry have virtually shut down the market for new aerospace engineers. Would-be nuclear engineers may need to find another specialty. Jobs in finance and banking, except for technical and back-office jobs, are still hard to come by.

"There's a fundamental shift and most of it has come from a decrease (in campus recruiting) among the Fortune 500 companies," said Richard Stewart, director of placement at Purdue University. "You can look at your list of companies having problems, and that's the

MATERIAL CALLED VITAL TO WORK

Art student defends gay video

Yokota Masuo

How open and explicit the UI is allowed to be in a class was the question raised by the presentation of a series of artworks, including a videotape of a homosexual act, at the UI School of Art and Art History last Friday.

Frank Evans, a UI graduate student majoring in art, displayed his artwork in Colloquium, a class in the department. He was asked by UI Teaching Assistant Megan O'Connell to be a guest speaker in her class last week.

In the two-hour lecture titled "Hybridization and Collaboration," Evans exhibited his art collaboration with Chicago artist Craig Bernardi, which contained drawings, photographs and a videotape. The videotape lasted five minutes, and included a total of about 15 seconds of "artistically transformed images of homosexual acts," he said.

However, not everyone saw the video in the same way.

"I watched the film of two men having oral sex," said Melissa Chase, a UI freshman who made a complaint phone call to the UI administration last Friday. "I thought it was offensive whether or not it was a man or woman."

Chase said she draws a line between art and pornography, depending on how explicit materials are.

A portrait of a human body could be considered art, she said, but a sexual act on videotape should not fall into a category of art in a university class.

"To me, it wasn't art at all because this guy was trying to push his way of life on other people," Chase said. "I don't think that's right, showing a sexual act in class and condoning it."

But O'Connell responded by saying that the more sensitive subjects are, the stronger reasons they have to be addressed in college.

"It seems to be one of the primary functions of the university, to engage students in this type of debate and discussion," she said.

Evans explained the intent of his art display in a written statement: "Although many people find explicit material, regardless of its context, unacceptable, I feel that in my case, explicit material is vital to all of my work, including this one video, that I have created in my tenure here as a University of Iowa Arts Fellow. What I mean by that is, contrary to popular belief, both love and sex are integral to gay life and gay art."

In an interview, he said, "The artworks deal with two bodies of artwork coming separately and how they merge together and work collaboratively."

UI Main Library relieved to find tape wasn't part of its collection

Yokota Masuo
The Daily Iowan

The librarians in Media Services at the UI Main Library were relieved to find out that a videotape, displayed in the School of Art and Art History last Friday, didn't belong to its collection, according to Pam Kacena, a library assistant.

More than a year ago when the film "Taxi Zum Klo" was shown in the German department, controversy over its content swept out all over Iowa. At first, the UI didn't criticize the screening of the German film, but UI President Hunter Rawlings later issued an apology after a statewide firestorm of objection.

Since then the library has not permitted any student or faculty member to check out "Taxi Zum Klo," though it is still permissible to watch the film in the library.

When Kacena watched a Sunday evening news program about the videotape that was shown in the UI School of Art and Art History, she said to herself, "Oh, no. This probably starts everything up again, because of the new controversy."

Last fall when the German department controversy was continually in the news, a lot of students and teachers rushed to see the videotape, and media services received inquiries about it almost every day.

"When you glorify something, that makes people want to come in and see what people are so uptight about," Kacena said.

But after a while, people seemed to lose interest in the film and stopped coming to Media Services for the videotape, she said.

"I think it died down and no one cared about it any more, which is good for us," Kacena said, "because we were busy with people who asked for the video every day when the controversy was going on."

Tipton man identified as victim in drowning

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

The man who drowned in Lake Macbride over the weekend while aiding another fisherman who had fallen through the ice was identified Monday, according to the Johnson County Sheriff's Department.

Kent Parks, 29, of Tipton, was found by Calvin Colony, a local diver, and several others at 5:34 p.m. in about 25 feet of water, the department said.

Park's brother-in-law, David

Stock, was also assisting in the rescue of the fallen man when Parks drowned.

Richard Buchmayer of Solon, and Richard Royce of Ely, Iowa, also fell through the ice. Both men, however, escaped unharmed.

The Sheriff's Department received a call at 3:07 p.m. that the four men had fallen through the ice along the north shore of the lake.

When rescuers arrived at the accident, three men had already been pulled out of the freezing water by those who were at the scene. Parks

HOSTAGES RELEASED

A Los Angeles, Calif., police officer escorts an unidentified employee from the Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center Monday after a gunman shot three doctors in the emergency room.

3 doctors wounded in L.A. hospital as disgruntled gunman opens fire

Michael White
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A gunman yelling for pain medicine shot and critically wounded three doctors in a hospital emergency room Monday, then took at least two hostages and holed up in the building, authorities said.

The gunman entered the emergency room of Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center at 12:40 p.m. and opened fire on a group of doctors sitting at a desk near the door, hospital spokesman Harvey Kern said.

Patient Hope Flynn said she heard a man demanding pain medication seconds before the shots rang out.

"Bang, bang, bang, bang," she said. "He was yelling, 'I want something for pain, can't you understand me? Can't you see I need help?'"

"Everybody scrambled around. All of us started running like crazy," said Dr. Gail Anderson, director of emergency medicine. "The patients were panicking as well as the staff."

The attacker then took at least two hostages and was barricaded in an isolated section of the emergency room, on the hospital's first floor, police Lt. John Dunkin said. The area was cordoned off and SWAT members were called in, he said.

Negotiators were in contact with the gunman about two hours after the shooting, but there was no immediate word on any demands, exactly how many hostages were involved or their conditions.

The man identified himself to negotiators as 45 years old and "as a disgruntled former patient. It apparently has to do with what he perceives to be poor medical treatment," Dunkin said. He was unsure if the man was unhappy about treatment received at County-USC or at another hospital.

One of the doctors was rushed into surgery and was in critical condition with gunshot wounds to the chest and abdomen, Anderson said. The others were less seriously injured and were in critical but stable condition, he said.

City Council awaits airport relocation options

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

The true test of the Iowa City Airport Relocation Plan begins tonight, when consultants from the Kansas City-based Kauffman and Associates firm will present the six-option plan to a joint meeting of the Iowa City City Council and Iowa City Airport Commission at 7 p.m.

The Airport Commission will hold a Feb. 16 public hearing on the matter at the Iowa City Public Library and pass on its recommendations to the City Council.

The Feb. 16 meeting will be the first chance for the general public to ask questions and comment on the feasibility study. Only members of the City Council and the Airport Commission will be able to comment and ask questions tonight at the Council Chambers.

Three options of the plan call for a relocation of the municipal facility. The other three call for the expanding or remodeling of the airport. Federal Aviation Association grants could pick up nearly 90 percent of the tab on the projects.

Before the actual presentation begins, the plan already faces some stiff opposition from both the Johnson County Board of Supervisors and the Iowa City Environmental Advocates.

The Board of Supervisors passed a Nov. 24 resolution opposing any relocation of the current facility from its 1801 S. Riverside Drive address.

The resolution cited a survey of local aircraft owners and major employers in the feasibility study. Of the 181 respondents, 94.5 percent indicated that the present runway lengths do not restrict their use.

Airport hazard zoning ordinances will make it difficult for the city to relocate the facility without the cooperation of the board.

Environmental Advocates moved unanimously to oppose the plan's proposals to either expand or relocate the airport.

"Building a new airport or making expansions would inevitably damage the environment," Rusty Martin, a member of the group's airport study committee said.

According to Martin, possible environmental damages include "the loss of hundreds of acres of the world's most fertile land, the possible destruction of precious wetlands, additional urban sprawl and a threat to Ryerson's Woods."

Dan Lechay, a fellow member of the EA airport study group, called the feasibility study "inadequate and deeply flawed."

"I'm worried decision-makers and citizens interested in the debate could be misinformed," he said.

Martin added, "I'm worried that the visions of millions in 'free' federal dollars will lead us to do something that is not necessary and that is destructive to our community and environment."

Gerald Campion, who lives on Rural Route 4, just outside of Iowa City, said he is concerned because one of the possible relocation sites is across the street from him and another is in the wetlands behind his back yard.

Campion expressed concern that eight of his neighbors could lose their homes and a few could be put out of farming if the airport is relocated there.

Iowa City Mayor Darrel Courtney said he believes conclusions drawn by local institutions are inappropriate.

"It's not right to make conclusions before all the facts are in," Courtney said.

Richard Blum, the Airport Commission chairman, said the commission should decide on Feb. 16 whether it wants to use a site which would conflict with a previously settled placement of a Menard's lumber store. The City Council is scheduled to deal with the Menard's issue on Feb. 23.

Blum said he hopes the commission can "evaluate what we do or do not want in a general sense without arriving at any specific conclusions" at its Feb. 16 meeting.

City Council should make a final decision on the airport issue by late March or early April.

Committee trying to reduce amount of classroom litter

Classroom awareness week aims to make UI students aware of litter.

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

Most of the day's classes were over when two members from the Campus Care Awareness Committee toured the English-Philosophy Building and Chemistry-Botany Building classrooms Monday evening, but ample evidence of students remained in the form of newspapers, pop spills, cans and bottles.

UI Business Manager for Student

Services Belinda Marner and Larry Wilson of UI Planning and Administrative Services surveyed several rooms in the buildings.

The committee is attempting to focus on the classroom problem while making preparations for its second project next week, Classroom Care Awareness Week.

Campus Care Awareness Day, the committee's first project, encouraged students to pick up the trash outside last October.

UI General Manager of Custodial Services Dave Jackson toured the rooms with Marner and Wilson.

Counting 95 beverage containers beneath the seats of a Chem-Bot lecture room, he noted that it was like a movie theater.

"All we don't have is the popcorn all over the floors," he added.

Custodians are forced to spend too much time picking up visible trash when they should be sweeping floors and performing other cleaning duties, Jackson said.

Pointing to a pop can on an instructor's desk at the front of the lecture room, Custodian Supervisor Deb Martin said teachers are also a part of the problem.

In order to decrease the amount of debris students leave behind, Wilson said, "it would be somewhat helpful to ask in classes, 'Why do you bring things?'"

Marner agreed that student input is vital.

"We really do want feedback from students," she said.

The committee plans to concentrate next week's activities on the Chemistry-Botany and English-Philosophy buildings. The activities include the distribution of flyers, teacher announcements and hanging signs in classrooms.

"This didn't start in overnight and it's not going to stop overnight," Marner said. "But we've got to start somewhere."

Former UI surgeon put on probation for alcohol abuse

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

Robert Corry, former chief of the Department of Surgery at the UI College of Medicine, has been placed on probation for five years by the Iowa Board of Medical Examiners for excessive use of alcohol.

Under the sentence, Corry must refrain from alcohol, submit to periodic drug testing and undergo counseling, according to Medical Board Secretary Marlene Brown.

Corry served as chief of the department from 1982-1992, and was director of transplantation at the UI Hospitals and Clinics from 1973-1992. He resigned the positions on July 1, 1992, but remained a UI clinical faculty member. He resigned from the clinical faculty on Jan. 22, 1993. At that time, UIHC Spokesman Dean Borg said his ties with the UI were severed.

Corry resigned, Borg said, on his own will.

Brown said the charges were due to several occasions of excessive alcohol use between the period of February 1992 to September 1992. She said the use affected his "ability to practice medicine safely and skillfully."

Although she would not comment on this case in particular, Brown said charges such as these are usually raised either because complaints come in from colleagues and/or patients or because of a report from police about a public-intoxication or operating-while-intoxicated charge.

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said Corry has since left the state.

A New Jersey State Board of Medical Examiners employee said Monday that Corry currently has an application for a license pending in that state.

Under the terms of the probation, if and when Corry returns to Iowa, he will still be on probation.

"If he should leave Iowa for ten years, when he returns the probation will still be in effect," Brown said. "The purpose is for maintenance of him. We cannot take urine tests and keep an eye on what he's doing if he's not here."

New Iowa bill would allow children to testify via closed-circuit television

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Youngsters could testify from outside the courtroom using closed-circuit television under a bill given overwhelming approval Monday in the Iowa House.

The bill was in response to shifting court opinions on the right to confront an accuser.

The House approved 90-3, sending it to the Senate for likely approval. Gov. Terry Branstad has approved a similar bill in past years.

The bill would give local judges the option of letting a youngster testify using closed-circuit television. It is designed to let young abuse victims avoid the trauma of confronting their abusers in public.

The state several years ago enacted a law allowing such testimony, but it was stricken by the U.S. Supreme Court.

DIVISION BRINGS SADNESS, CELEBRATION

Czechs have mixed reactions over split

On New Year's Eve the former Czechoslovakia yielded two new countries.

James Anderson
The Daily Iowan
Editor's note: This is the first in a series of four articles this week on life in the Czech Republic and Slovakia and part of a semester-long series by reporter James Anderson, who is spending this semester in eastern Europe.

KOSICE, SLOVAKIA — When the bells chimed at midnight on New Year's Eve, Czechoslovakia, at age 74, was officially pronounced dead. As a result, the Czech Republic and Slovakia, the world's two newest countries, were born.

But while Slovaks in Bratislava partied in the streets to celebrate the birth of their new nation, many Slovaks mourned in Kosice, a town of 250,000 located at the opposite end of the country near the Ukrainian border.

"New Year's Eve was the second saddest day of life, I just turned off the television," Marta Hrabovska, an organizer of local charities in Kosice, said. The saddest day in her life was when communists kicked her family out of their home because her father was a capitalist, she said.

"We are not ready for a democratic system like this one because people don't understand democratic life," Hrabovska said. "We are meeting in a sad situation, but if I did not have any hope I would not stay."

As an independent video producer, Marcel Dekanovsky and his production crew were in Kosice and other towns in Eastern Slovakia on New Year's Eve filming people's reactions to the split of the country for a documentary titled "The Night of the Break of the Country."

"In Bratislava, they celebrated, fired rockets, drank in the streets and gave speeches," Dekanovsky said. "There was none of that here in Kosice or Eastern Slovakia. I saw candles in many windows, which is a sign of sadness."

Like spouses with different opinions on how the affairs of the home should be managed, the political divorce of Czechs and Slovaks ended a period marked by internal bickering and parliamentary stalemate following the fall of the communist regime in November 1989.

"It was very sad on New Year's Eve," said Jana Orlearnikova, a 24-year-old medical student from Kosice, who drank champagne with friends on New Year's Eve until 11:55 and then went to bed.

Orlearnikova said the political agendas of Slovaks, who comprised the Movement for a Democratic Slovakia, known as HZDS, and the Czechs, who made up the Civic Democratic Party, or ODS, "were so different." HZDS favored more political power for Slovakia while ODS wanted to rapidly implement a program of economic reforms designed to integrate Czechoslovakia into the market-based economy of Western Europe, she said.

"I don't blame Havel for the breakup of the country," Orlearnikova said. "ODS tried to block everything HZDS did and HZDS tried to block everything ODS did."

Following the Czechoslovakian elections in June 1992, the Slovaks of HZDS blocked the reelection of Havel as president and passed a decree of Slovak independence in accordance with the laws of the Czech and Slovak Republic. Within minutes after Slovakia declared its independence, President Havel offered his resignation to the doomed Czechoslovak state.

"The politicians said that the elections were a referendum and that a vote for HZDS was a vote for separation," Eva Dekanovska, a public relations officer at a Kosice bank said. "It was tragic that there was not a national referendum offered so that Slovaks could vote whether or not they wanted to form an independent state."

Dekanovska said she was sad all year and "even more sad" on New Year's Day when she heard that Czechoslovakia was "dead."

Kosice Mayor Rudolf Bauer said he was "very disappointed" about the split because it happened so fast.

"People are not ready for such quick change," Bauer said. "One must realize the consequences of these steps concerning borders, currency and relationships," he said, adding that his mother is Czech and his father is Slovak.

Disappointed about the split of Czechoslovakia but "pragmatic" about the future of a free Slovakia, Dr. Robert Roland of Kosice said that "maybe" Slovaks need to discover their own identity so they can make a contribution to Europe and the world.

"Every nation probably has some period necessary for it to develop and it is probably necessary for Slovakia," Roland said. "We need a period of feeling we are something special."

Airplane crash leaves 132 dead

Neil MacFarquhar
Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran — An Iranian airliner with 132 people on board collided with an air force jet after takeoff Monday from Tehran's main airport and exploded in a fireball as it plummeted into a military compound. There were no survivors.

The leased, Russian-piloted Tupolev airliner was bound for the northeastern Shiite Muslim holy city of Mashhad, and most of its 119 Iranian passengers were pilgrims. The crew of 13 included a Russian pilot and four other Russians. No other foreigners were on board, aviation authorities said.

The Russian-designed Sukhoi fighter was taking part in an exercise to mark Air Force Day, when 14 years ago its command pledged allegiance to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic Revolution — the first armed force to do so.

Authorities gave no information about the crew of the fighter, but Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported the pilot and co-pilot also were believed killed. IRNA reporter Sattar Oudi, who saw the accident as he drove to work at Mehrabad Airport, said the jetliner was about 1,300 feet high when the collision occurred at 10:15 a.m.

"The airplane was just taking off and the fighter came from the opposite side and the two collided," he told The Associated Press.

"The airplane fell out of the sky. It hit the earth and exploded. There was a very, very terrible noise, fire and smoke," he said.

The plane fell in an empty lot inside a compound of Iran's Revolutionary Guards Corps, 25 miles from the center of the capital.

There were no casualties on the ground, sentries at the base said.

The guards refused to allow non-military personnel into the fenced compound, turning back even forensic experts. The guards said the wreckage of Flight 962 and the bodies were strewn over a 600-square-yard open area inside their compound.

A group of anxious relatives gathered at the airport, most of them weeping into their hands.

A man in civilian clothes stood on the roof of a military car to read the list of victims. As he read each name, cries and screams erupted from the crowd. Some people collapsed.

"My sister, my sister, what a disaster! What misery!" wailed one woman as she banged her head against the bars of a metal gate.

Another man wept and hit his head against a parked car. He screamed that he has lost a 20-year-old daughter who was married only three weeks ago.

In Moscow, a Russian Air Transport Ministry spokesman said that the passenger plane was a Tu-154 medium-range jetliner, while the military jet was a Su-24 fighter-bomber.

Mehrabad airport serves passenger and military aircraft. Its parallel runways can endanger civilian flights when warplanes are on maneuvers.

Pilots have complained frequently of near-collisions, especially during Iran's 1980-88 war with Iraq when military flights were numerous.

Mashhad, a city of 500,000, lies near Turkmenistan and Afghanistan. The tomb there of a founding imam of Shiite Islam is one of Iran's most important religious shrines. Mashhad is also the base of 10 Russian airliners under lease to Iran Air Tour, a subsidiary of the national carrier, Iran Air. The leased planes are manned by Russian pilots.

Washington has banned the sale of U.S. technology to Iran, including aircraft, since relations were severed in 1980 following the takeover in late 1979 of the U.S. Embassy in Iran by militants who held U.S. hostages for 444 days.

Iran Air's aging Boeing and Airbus fleet is unable to keep up with the demand for flights, although last year Washington allowed the sale of two Airbuses containing American components to Iran Air.

Clinton seeks new way to cut deficit after dropping Social Security freeze

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House abandoned consideration of a one-year freeze on Social Security benefits Monday after an outcry from senior citizens and congressional Democrats. A more likely move to cut the deficit now seems higher taxes on Social Security benefits to the well-off.

But as Clinton continued to struggle with elements of his deficit-reduction package, he declared a short-term stimulus package nearly complete. He also moved to extend a related program that provides extra benefits for unemployed workers.

Saying hard times remain despite improved economic statistics, Clinton announced he will send Congress legislation to prolong a program allowing the jobless to draw up to 26 weeks of unemployment benefits beyond the 26 weeks in the basic law.

ZOE BAIRD CASE NOT UNUSUAL

IRS says few people pay taxes for domestic help

Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press

If you ever hired a baby sitter, paid a teen-ager to mow the lawn or had a housekeeper clean your home, there's a good chance you violated the law that Commerce Secretary Ron Brown admits to breaking.

The violation hasn't cost Brown his job, and it isn't likely to have dire implications for many of the other millions of Americans who participate in what amounts to an enormous underground cash economy.

It has, however, forced people to pay attention to one of the most frequently violated laws in the country — the one that requires employers to pay Social Security taxes for any domestic employee who earns more than $50 in any one quarter of the year.

"The problem's been out there for years in terms of nonpayment and everybody knows it," said Evelyn Morton, a lobbyist for the American Association of Retired People.

"And if they didn't before, they probably do now."

The issue first came up recently when Zoe Baird, President Clinton's first choice for attorney general, admitted to hiring two undocumented workers and failing to pay their Social Security taxes. Then another candidate for attorney general, Charles Ruff, was removed from consideration after conceding that he, too, had failed to pay social security taxes for a domestic worker.

On Sunday, Brown acknowledged that he had failed to pay Social Security taxes for a housekeeper who worked for him about three hours a week. Because she worked only a few hours, he said, he didn't think he needed to bother filing taxes.

Many Americans probably think the same thing. The Internal Revenue Service concedes that far more people probably break the law than obey it.

In testimony before Congress in 1991, then-IRS Commissioner Fred Goldberg estimated that 500,000 people file Social Security taxes for domestic workers. He estimated that 2 million people ought to be doing so.

That figure may be low. Part of the problem is how easily the $50 threshold is exceeded. When the law was passed, in 1950, $50 bought a lot of baby-sitting or housecleaning or lawn mowing. The amount was never raised, but inflation has made $50 in 1950 dollars equivalent to about $285 in today's money.

The law was revamped in a bill that passed Congress last year, but the amount wasn't raised significantly. Rather, Congress tried to reduce the amount of paperwork by changing the $50 quarterly threshold to a $300 annual one.

The bill, which was vetoed by President Bush for reasons that had nothing to do with the tax threshold, also would have allowed employers to have their domestic workers' taxes withheld from their own incomes.

The measure is being resurrected this year.

It is important to groups like the American Association of Retired People because people who work off the books can come in for a rude shock when they reach retirement age and find they don't qualify for Social Security.

"The problem comes down to wanting the money when you're young and needing the benefit when you're older," Morton said. "And when you need the benefit, it's not there."

 company that's not coming to campus now."
 A survey of 316 companies last fall by the College Placement Council found 54 percent of employers planned to hire more graduates in 1993 than last year.
 Respondents predicted they would hire 7.7 percent more graduates in the 1992-1993 school year than a year earlier. Actual hires were projected to rise to 70 per company from 65.
 "However, talking to placement officers this past January and December, we haven't seen that yet," Oberman said.

 Not only do many recruiters have fewer jobs to offer, they are cutting back on recruiting costs. "Back in the heyday of the 1980s, companies would send 30 or 40 recruiters to campus," said Vicki Lynn, director of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute's Career Development Center. "Half of the people would be standing around with nothing to do." Now, companies either don't come at all, or send just a few recruiters.
 And companies surveyed by College Placement said they plan to visit 11.3 percent fewer campuses.

Foster Big Ten player of the week

Toni Foster, who led Iowa victories over two Top Ten teams during the weekend, has been named the women's basketball player of the week in the Big Ten.
 Foster scored 45 points and grabbed 18 rebounds in victory over Ohio State and Penn State. She also had four blocks, three steals and three assists as the third-ranked Hawkeyes remained unbeaten in the Big Ten.
 At the time of the games, Penn State was ranked fourth and Ohio State sixth. Penn State slipped fifth Monday's Associated Press poll and Ohio State dropped seventh.

BASEBALL

Cubs sign Worthington

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs signed third baseman Craig Worthington to a minor league contract on Monday.
 Worthington, 28, will be assigned to Iowa of the American Association, the team said.
 Worthington spent the 1992 season with the Cleveland Indians organization. He appeared in 10 games for the Indians, batting .167.
 Worthington played for the more Orioles from 1988 to 1991. In 344 major league games, he batted .231 with 29 homers and 132 RBIs.

Astros sign nucleus

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros spent $32.3 million on Monday, agreeing to three-year contracts with third baseman Caminiti, second baseman Crisp and center fielder Steve Finley.
 Biggio, who converted from catcher to second base last season, will earn $11 million during contract. Caminiti will get $11 million and Finley will get $11 million.
 Houston didn't announce signings because new owner Tom McLane wants to present news conference when they are formally confirmed. However, player and management lawyers informed teams and agents of agreements.
 All three players, who form nucleus of the Astros roster, received $600,000 signing bonuses. Biggio, 27, will get $2 million this season, $3.15 million in 1994 and $4.4 million in 1995. Caminiti, 29, will earn yearly salaries of $2.95 million, $3 million and $4.35 million.

Dodgers avoid arbitration with Martinez

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Right hander Ramon Martinez signed one-year contract worth $1,775,000 on Monday, thus avoiding an arbitration hearing with the Los Angeles Dodgers.
 Martinez, 24, was 8-11 with 4.00 earned run average and 14 strikeouts last season — a major disappointment considering 20-6 with a 2.92 ERA and 23 strikeouts in 1990 and 17-13 with a 3.27 ERA and 150 strikeouts in 1991.
 Martinez, who earned $725,000 last season, had asked for $2 million and the Dodgers offered $1.4 million in arbitration.

NBA

Magic's Anderson NBA player of the week

NEW YORK (AP) — Nick Anderson of Orlando, who averaged 26.8 points per game as the Magic won 3-1 last week, was chosen NBA player of the week on Monday.
 Anderson had 9.3 rebounds, 3.1 assists and shot .606 from the field, connecting on 40 of 66 shots. He also was 7 for 20 on 3-point shots.
 Other candidates for player of the week were Michael Jordan of Chicago, Reggie Miller of Cleveland, Reggie Miller of Denver, Hakeem Olajuwon of Houston, Doug Moe of Minnesota, Derrick Coleman of New Jersey, Anthony Mason of New York and Sean Elliott of San Antonio.

Tasha Robinson The Daily Iowan If you ever want to hear an aged film lover wax poetic about filmgoing in the 1960s, look no further than the 1960s. Film critic/Screenwriter Harlan Ellison has some fascinating essays on the subject, on the magic of theatrical production screens that were, back then, a postage stamp movie used to be.

'Loaded Weapon' scores $9 million over weekend

Associated Press LOS ANGELES — "National Lampoon's Loaded Weapon 1," a parody of buddy-cop movies, led box-office sales in its first weekend of release, according to industry estimates. The film, starring Emilio Estevez and Samuel L. Jackson, made $9 million in ticket sales, according to preliminary estimates compiled Sunday by industry sources. Official weekend tallies were to be released Monday.

"Loaded Weapon" was one of three movies that debuted in the top five. "Somersby," starring Jodie Foster and Richard Gere, opened in second place with an estimated $8.4 million in sales. "The Vanishing," starring Jeff Bridges and Kiefer Sutherland, debuted in fourth place with an estimated $5.2 million. Third place went to "Aladdin," with $7.7 million. Rounding out the top 10 were "A Few Good Men" and "Scent of a Woman."

Soul Asylum to play Union

The band Soul Asylum transform the Union into "Dancers Union" Sunday, as they headline a jam production in the Main Lo which will also feature the Goo Dolls and another band announced.

Grave Dancers Union is Asylum's debut album for Columbia Records, which includes single "Somebody to Shove."

Musician magazine describes Soul Asylum's music as "ragged-at-the-edges rock." The Village Voice once called Minneapolis product the best band in America.

Tickets, which are priced to go on sale at the Union Office and Ticketmaster on Feb. 10 a.m. Feb. 12.

Patient's widow files against UIHC

The wife of a Cedar Rapids man who died due to complications from Hepatitis C has filed a lawsuit against the UIHC and Clinics.

Three months after John Girsch underwent a kidney and liver transplant in December 1991, he developed symptoms of Hepatitis C. The suit claims he was infected with the disease by way of a transfusion administered during transplant surgery.

Court documents indicate Girsch's family had requested he be given a direct design transfusion but UIHC treatment and administrative health personnel denied them that request.

Girsch's wife Susan is seeking compensation for her late husband's lost wages and the anguish caused by his untimely death.

Weapon in CIA show identified; suspect s

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — FBI issued an arrest warrant Tuesday charging a 28-year-old man with Jan. 25 fatal shootings outside headquarters and said an international search for him was under way.

The man was identified by police as Mir Aimal Kansi, a Pakistani national with legal residency status in the United States. His last known address was in Reston, Va., a suburb of Washington. His current whereabouts not known, police said.

Police got their break on the basis of a missing persons report filed by Kansi's roommate on Feb. 28. Officers got permission to search the roommate's apartment on Monday night and found an AK-47 assault rifle that tests indicated was used in the attack.

Clinton to lift ban on foreigners with AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will lift immigration restrictions on foreigners with the AIDS virus, but the date is uncertain, White House officials said Tuesday.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton promised during the campaign to "lift the ban on travel and immigration for people with HIV." He will do that. There's no timetable at this point.

Clinton shares the view of medical experts "that it's not a threat," she said.

The Department of Health and Human Services, for the first time in the past two years, has promised removing AIDS from the list of contagious diseases that require entry to this country.
