Police investigate Ponderosa robbery

Coralville police are still investigating a burglary that left a restaurant worker tied up for over an hour last Friday morning.

Police were called to the Ponderosa Steak House at 516 Second St. in Coralville at 7:43 a.m.

According to police, the employee said after he arrived to work at approximately 6 a.m., he was tied up by a masked gunman who was waiting inside the business.

The employee was not injured and called police after working himself free.

Anyone with more information about the incident is encouraged to call the Coralville Police Department at 354-1100.

Jewelry robber still at large

Iowa City police are still searching for a jewel thief who made off with an undisclosed amount of merchandise from Gordon's Jewelers in Sycamore Mall.

Police were called to the scene at 7:38 p.m. Friday after a man dressed in dark clothing and carrying a gun demanded store merchandise be handed to him over the counter. He then reportedly fled the area on foot out the front doors of Sycamore Mall.

Police are looking for a black male, approximately six feet tall and weighing about 225 pounds. He is described as having a very round face, a slight moustache and short hair.

Anyone with more information is encouraged to call the Iowa City Police Department at 356-5275.

6 found slain in New York apartment

NEW YORK (AP) — The bodies of three adults and three teen-agers — each shot in the head — were found in a crime-ridden section of the city's Bronx borough on Sunday. Police said the slayings may have been drug-related.

The victims were discovered Sunday morning lying face-down in an apartment in the Bronx's Mott Haven section, police said.

Robbery was ruled out as a motive because authorities found $4,400 in the apartment, but a possible link to drugs was being investigated.

Lawmakers plan assault on drunk driving

Many state lawmakers are pondering social arithmetic in the latest round of legislative assaults on an old menace, the drunken driver.

Bills introduced this year in 31 states reflect a push for more deterrents and stricter punishment for intoxicated drivers.

The most common proposal is lowering the intoxication level from 0.10 percent blood-alcohol to 0.08 percent — about a one-drink difference. Another popular cause is tighter penalties on young drunken drivers.

UI to request fewer faculty leaves for '93

The proposal will go to the regents Wednesday.

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

The UI will seek approval from the Iowa state Board of Regents for 108 faculty developmental assignments for the 1993-94 school year at Wednesday's monthly meeting at the Union.

That number is down from the 125 leaves granted last year. The leaves, which provide time for faculty members to work on special projects involving their expertise, will cost an estimated $3.5 million in salaries, benefits and hiring of replacement faculty.

The cost, however, is down almost $1 million from last year.

In order to be granted a leave, according to a report released to the regents Friday, faculty must submit a specific proposal of what they intend to do during their time off. Each leave is judged on the quality of the proposal.

Last year, 95 percent of the applicants received awards.

UI Faculty Council President Edward Lawler said the leaves are essential as they help to bring the latest knowledge and technology to the UI.

"They are a way for faculty to stay on the cutting edge of their fields," Lawler said. "And they bring that knowledge into the classroom."

The semester of leave sometimes results in professors writing textbooks, writing articles which are brought into curriculum, or working on projects which lead to grant proposals, he said.

Given the benefits, the cost isn't all that great, he added.

"It's a pretty modest investment when you think about the contribution these make to the educational program," Lawler said. "They're pretty important in keeping a faculty that's up to date and on the cutting edge."

In other regent business, members of the board will attend a one-hour presentation Wednesday which will focus on three aspects of the UI.

Members of the UI Main Library staff will discuss the new Information Arcade and offer board members a firsthand look at the recently built facility.

There will also be a discussion of teaching facilities, including the Pappajohn Business Administration Building and the building renewal and modernization of classrooms and laboratories.

Finally, Vice President for Research David Skorton and Assistant Vice President for Research Brian Harvey will discuss research enterprise.

The regents have also asked the UI to make a report at the Wednesday meeting regarding its teaching policies and procedures. The board has received several complaints from parents, students and others regarding a sexually explicit film shown in a School of Art and Art History classroom two weeks ago.

Clark loses position on state USI board

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

UI Student Association presidential candidate Michael B. Clark has been removed from his position on the State Board of Directors of United Students of Iowa after being found guilty of both conflict of interest and violating a USI member's human rights.

Ben Stone, director of the nonpartisan student lobbying organization, said Sunday that the board voted 4-0 on Wednesday to remove Clark and bar him from future USI votes.

The ruling stems from an instance in which Clark, while acting as a UISA executive officer, signed a resolution to remove the USI desk from its current location in the UISA office in the Union.

The action, Stone said, created a conflict of interest because Clark was working to the detriment of USI through his dealings in UISA.

USI is an organization which represents students from the three state regent institutions and lobbies for students at the state and local levels. The UI chapter of USI currently shares its office with the UISA.

The finding that he violated human rights revolves around charges brought up by USI Campus Director Rachel Kindred, who claims that Clark repeatedly harassed her because she had originally filed a complaint with the USI board regarding his possible violation of USI rules.

Kindred has also filed a formal complaint against Clark with the UI Office of the Dean of Students for violations of the Code of Student Life. A decision is currently pending regarding that complaint.

In response to the USI ruling, Clark said he believes it was politically motivated and unfounded. He said he was not able to take part in the hearing because it was at the same time as last week's UISA presidential-candidate debate. If USI does not reverse its decision Clark said he will take legal action.

"It's a frivolous, political charge," he said. "Rachel's made no bones about the fact that she's been working on John Gardner's campaign and that she was actively opposing my candidacy.

"She's just trying to continue the smear campaign," he continued. "It's really just garbage and it's politically motivated."

In an interview last week, Kindred said she decided to file charges against Clark because he had continually harassed her at work.

"Mr. Clark has made my job more difficult because he did not think I was qualified," she said. "This has nothing to do with Michael Clark as a person, it has to do with Michael Clark as a member of USI."

Stone said the ruling has nothing to do with Clark's ideology or beliefs, only with his conduct.

"It is possible that Mr. Clark believes because some people find his beliefs controversial that he is therefore immune from being held accountable for his conduct and behavior," he said. "USI simply took the appropriate action based upon evidence of misconduct."

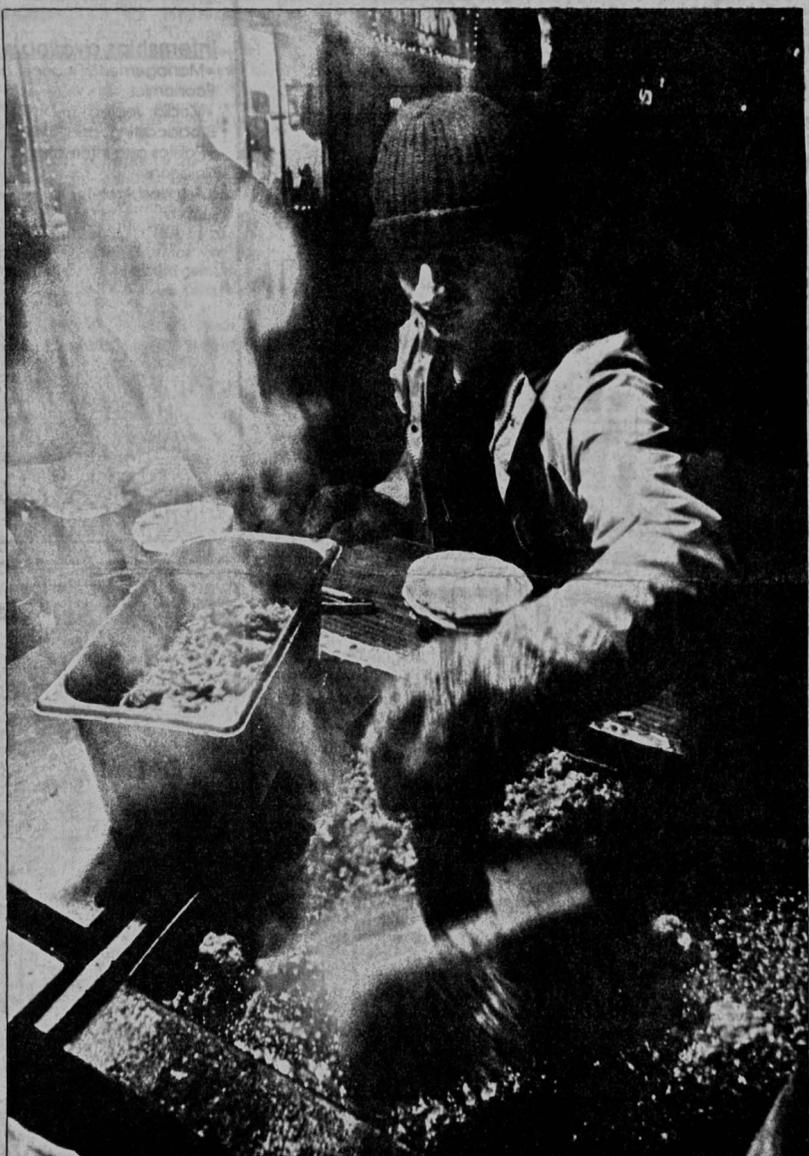

Douglas Anderson, a member of both USI and a senator in UISA, said if the board does not reverse its decision at their next meeting, the UI chapter will drop out of the state organization and start their own independent chapter.

Anderson, who also serves as the campaign manager in Clark's presidential campaign, said the UI chapter has been having problems with the state chapter throughout the year.

"They've been totally unresponsive and they've worked against us every chance they could," he said. "We've done no lobbying. This chapter has been worthless and we're sick of it."

Anderson said conflict of interest charges were also filed against him, but were dropped after he defended himself at Wednesday night's board hearing. Clark said he chose not to defend himself because the charges were "ridiculous."

"I think they've gone way beyond the scope of their powers and it's getting into a political mishmash," he said. "I just want to make it clear that the board will either change their decision at the next meeting or they will be facing a civil complaint and possibly criminal negligence charges."

PRESIDENT TO ADDRESS NATION

Clinton to announce deficit-reduction plan

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton will give his first televised address to the nation Monday night, promoting an economic program that top administration officials said Sunday would ask for sacrifices from all Americans.

The administration said the president's plan would propose close to 150 specific spending cuts to save money, while a top Democrat in Congress said that the middle class would be most affected by a new broad-based tax on energy.

The White House confirmed that in its effort to control the deficit, it was considering limits on the payments received by doctors and hospitals under Medicare, the giant government program that supplies health care for 35 million elderly and disabled Americans.

Officials said that Clinton was still making final decisions on the outlines of the huge package. But based on a variety of comments, the economic plan was shaping up to be the largest deficit-cutting package in history, proposing about $250 billion in spending cuts over five years and what one Republican said would be $250 billion in tax increases over that same time period.

White House officials conceded Sunday that virtually every American would be asked to contribute to the plan, either through benefit cuts or higher taxes.

"I am not going to tell you that this package is going to exclude anybody," White House budget director Leon Panetta said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

As part of a stepped-up sales effort, the administration announced that Clinton would address the nation from the Oval Office at 9 p.m. Monday. Officials said Clinton would speak for only 10 minutes and would not reveal any specifics of the package that he will unveil Wednesday night in a joint address to Congress.

George Stephanopoulos

George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's chief spokesman, said the president would tell the American people, "We're all in this together. Everybody is going to be asked to do their fair share."

Several Republicans said Sunday that they believed the administration was going overboard on tax increases and promised stiff opposition to the program unless more was done to cut spending.

HOSTILITY GROWS

Serbs refuse aid convoy in protest of U.N. inaction

Laurinda Keys
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs turned back a U.N. convoy carrying food and medicine on Sunday to a Muslim town in eastern Bosnia that has been surrounded by Serbs for 10 months.

It was another setback for relief agencies facing mounting hostility from leaders and citizens of Bosnia's Muslim community who say not enough is being done to stop the republic's civil war, or to help 200,000 people trapped in pockets in the east.

Officials in Sarajevo, Bosnia's capital, and Tuzla are blocking further aid to their residents to protest the failure to get supplies to the east. U.N. officials have criticized that move for intensifying public anger aimed at U.N. operations and warned that stored food could spoil.

For the second day, heavy fighting around Sarajevo prevented aid flights from landing at the airport outside the besieged capital.

Fighting also raged in southwestern Croatia, and Serb and Croat leaders in that former Yugoslav republic repeated competing claims to territory as they prepared for talks at the United Nations this week.

The Croatian army began an offensive on Jan. 22 to regain control of at least some of the Serb-held Krajina region in the southwest, one of the areas seized by Serb forces in fighting in 1991 after Croatia seceded from Yugoslavia.

INSTRUCTOR INCORPORATES BOTH

Professor finds yoga, teaching similar

Barbara Welch Breder feels the goal of both yoga and academic life is heightened consciousness.

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

Yoga and teaching have a lot in common for Barbara Welch Breder, a long-term visiting assistant professor in the UI communication studies department and director of the Iowa City Yoga Center.

Welch Breder teaches classes concerning the cultural history of the media. She said that yoga and teaching have similar goals.

"The aim of yoga is to heighten consciousness," she said, "and that's also the aim of academic life."

Welch Breder said she tries to incorporate her study of the human body within her teaching.

"I usually start my classes by arguing that we live in two bodies — we live in an individual physical body but we also live in a larger cultural body," she said. "It's hard for anyone to look around today, when you look to Bosnia and Somalia or the state of this country, and not recognize the troubled state of our larger body."

Welch Breder, who has been teaching at the UI for about four years as a visiting assistant professor, said her position at the UI is unusual. She works part time teaching and advising students and uses the rest of her time to run the Iowa City Yoga Center.

"I actually have the perfect job," she said. "I'm able to do the two halves — my intellectual work and my yoga work."

Cultural history courses are difficult to teach, Welch Breder said, because of stereotypes students often have regarding history.

"I think it's a challenge to stimulate students who often have attitudes that dismiss history," she said. "Students have good reason to hate most history that they are taught in high school, like military history or presidential history."

"Cultural history, on the other hand, is trying to understand the whole soup of meaning that we swim in from which we get our values, our ideals, our world views," she said.

One thing that makes teaching easier is that students in Welch Breder's classes already have a large amount of background experience on the subject, she said.

"I try to have readings that I've enjoyed and that I think they will enjoy in my classes," she said. "The fact is, students in my classes are all experts on what we're talking about — culture. Everybody has an opinion."

Another challenge Welch Breder said she faces in her work is trying to inspire older students who may have had bad experiences in other classes.

"I see mostly juniors and seniors, and by the time they get there they are pretty disillusioned because in so many classes they are one of 500 or 300 students," she said. "So the challenge is to reawaken the joy of reading and thinking and wholehearted intellectual engagement."

At such a large university, students can often feel alienated. Welch Breder said that shouldn't be the case at the UI.

"My experience is that although this is a major research institution, the University of Iowa has a remarkably humane faculty, a faculty that really does care about its students," she said. "I think that students sometimes just assume that the faculty is too busy without ever bothering to come to an office hour."

Students often have misconceptions about the learning process as well, Welch Breder said.

"Students sometimes think that it's a professor's job to produce the knowledge and their job to consume it," she said. "I try to work against that. Studying and learning isn't a process of instant gratification — it's produced through struggle."

Welch Breder said her goal in teaching is not to make students remember details of a course but to inspire them to look at themselves in a new way.

"I think that long after students forget the specifics of the course — the name of the head of CBS or RCA or NBC — that some change of consciousness is evoked, and that's what I'm interested in."

DIRECTOR APPOINTED

Lending support aim of new RVAP head

Christie Munson left the courtroom after seven years in order to take the position of RVAP director.

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Listening to and counseling victims of sexual abuse may be extremely disheartening, but for Christie Munson, the newly appointed director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, it's a fulfilling full-time job.

After having worked in the court system for seven years as the victim-witness coordinator in the Johnson County Attorney's Office, Munson said helping victims during the healing process is a nice change of pace.

"It's hard, emotionally demanding work, but the most important thing is to provide support for each other and for the victim-survivors," said Munson, who manages about 75 RVAP volunteers and staff members. "Listening to and helping these people is undoubtedly the most taxing part, but on the flip side, it's the part you get the most out of."

Munson said she enjoyed working in the County Attorney's Office where she helped crime victims through the court system, making sure their needs were addressed. When the RVAP position opened up in January, Munson saw a great opportunity to start helping victims heal, something she felt she really couldn't do in the courtroom.

"My interest in working with crime victims, sexual abuse victims and survivors stems from my interest in personally finding a peaceful, nonviolent way of living," she said.

Munson said she wanted to help create "a world where equality between men and women and all people is part of the natural way. That's my personal life goal, and working at RVAP is one way I have of achieving that."

Regarding the Equal Rights Amendment which failed to pass last November, Munson has kept herself from getting too discouraged.

"It just goes to show that we do have a lot more work as far as building a society in which men and women are equal. Sexual assault is about power imbalance, so every step we take towards equality helps," she said. "I tend to be optimistic because if we let ourselves get discouraged we lose twice."

After graduating from the UI in 1985 with a bachelor's degree in general studies, Munson started working at the County Attorney's Office.

Though she couldn't identify any real positive trends in sexual-abuse cases, Munson said general awareness has increased, especially following the Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill hearing.

"It was hard to watch what the Senate Judiciary Committee did to Anita Hill, but it got people talking about it," she said. "Talking about something is creating awareness about it."

David Guttenfelder/The Daily Iowan

Christie Munson is the new director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

On an individual level, everyone can work to make a difference, Munson said.

"Each of us can do it personally by examining our ways of thinking, educating ourselves about the issues and confronting our friends when they tell sexist or homophobic jokes," she said. "As a society, we can do it through the combination of direct work and political activism — that's the American way."

Though Munson is originally from Illinois, she has lived in Iowa City for 16 years and has no plans to leave.

"Iowa City is a great place to live," said Munson, whose only complaint is that it doesn't have a good Indian restaurant. "There is a really great team of people providing services — not just RVAP — and that makes me really proud to be working here. I'd like to help bring what we have here to others in the state."

Munson is currently the secretary for the Iowa Organization for Victim Assistance, which works closely with state coalitions against sexual assault and domestic violence.

VOLUNTEERS TO TAKE IN REFUGEES

3 Bosnian families to be relocated in Iowa

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's tradition of resettling refugees from faraway wars continues late this month with the arrival of three Bosnian Muslims and their families.

"We don't know too much about them, but we're very excited to do this," said Mohammed Khan, imam of the Islamic Center in Des Moines.

"We're happy that we can play a part to get people away from all the tyranny and massacres and all of that. Their children and their children's children can have a better life here."

The U.S. government has arranged for 1,000 detainees in Serbian prison camps to be relocated in this country. An initial 38 prisoners have been selected and three have been allocated to the Iowa Bureau of Refugee Services, one of just 13 agencies authorized to directly resettle refugees in the country.

The initial 38 are in Switzerland and were set to come to the United States immediately. They refused to leave without their families, who are still in Bosnia, according to Wayne Johnson, director of the Iowa refugee agency. "I can't say I blame them," he said.

The three men assigned to Iowa have an additional 13 family members. Johnson said almost nothing is known about the refugees except that they include a barber, a lawyer and a factory worker.

Johnson said he hopes the group will arrive late this month or early March.

Iowa has long been a resettling leader, best known for helping refugees from southeast Asia. Heeding a call from former Gov. Robert Ray, who was touched by the plight of Vietnamese fleeing their country in flimsy boats, Iowans resettled thousands of Vietnamese, Cambodians and Laotians.

But Johnson said it began much earlier.

"I make a lot of speeches, and time after time, people with a little bit of an accent come up to me and tell me their story of being resettled here after World War II," he said.

The Bosnian refugees are all Muslims, but Johnson said people of any religion can be sponsors.

"We're not restricting sponsorship to Muslims. It's just that they stepped forward to help. If we get additional families, we'll be looking for more people to help," he said.

Khan said he's proud that Iowa is welcoming the refugees.

There are 70 to 75 families in the Islamic Center, he said. Since little is known about the refugees, no specific arrangements have been made on which families will be responsible for them.

Diversity and multicultural action were the focus of the Student Association debate sponsored by the Student Association last night at the Union.
The debate, attended by from the MSA, the General of Palestinian Students, Abortion Rights, the Independent Association and the Socialist Organization, bringing interaction between dates and cultural groups let people know these groups.
MSA President Mugheeh said.
Presidential candidate M. Clark said when it comes to diversity at the UI, the world is in our fingertips.
"We need to recognize our diversity," he said. "Anyone who is coming together like this is learning. We need to be open to new ideas."
Shannon Brinton, a candidate for president, said it's the UISA's responsibility to diversify all the student groups.
"I think we can learn from diversity each of us have," she said. "We want to actively incorporate everyone's ideas."
Brinton's running mate, president, Reginald Harris, said that a diverse student body is very important.
"Many people see the university as a hostile environment to students," he said. "It's a survival. We need to promote action among the minority and the major population."
Getting dialogue across different groups is important, presidential candidate John Friederich said.
"We don't have a network which we can all get together," he said. "If we could all meet once a month in a meeting sort of setting, I would bring us all a little together."
Presidential candidate Friederich said he hopes to have an understanding between majority and minority groups.
He said international student activities have a lot to do with university through both academic and social functions.
"Through creating open communication we'll have an understanding of each other."

WEEKEND DEBATE HELD

UISA candidates differ over diversity of student groups

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Diversity and multicultural interaction were the focus of a UI Student Association candidate debate sponsored by the Muslim Student Association last Friday night at the Union.

The debate, attended by leaders from the MSA, the General Union of Palestinian Students, Action for Abortion Rights, the Indian Student Association and the Iowa Socialist Organization, intended to bring interaction between candidates and cultural groups, and to let people know these groups exist, MSA President Mughees-Uddin said.

Presidential candidate Michael B. Clark said when it comes to diversity at the UI, the world is at your fingertips.

"We need to recognize commonalities," he said. "Anyone who's coming together like this is here to learn. We need to be open to other ideas."

Shannon Brinton, a candidate running for president, said it should be the UISA's responsibility to organize all the student groups.

"I think we can learn from the diversity each of us have," she said. "We want to actively hear and incorporate everyone's ideas."

Brinton's running mate for vice president, Reginald Harris, said that a diverse student population is very important.

"Many people see the university as a hostile environment to minority students," he said. "It's all about survival. We need to promote interaction among the minority groups and the major population."

Getting dialogue across to the different groups is important for presidential candidate John Gardner.

"We don't have a network through which we can all get together," he said. "If we could all interact, maybe once a month in a town meeting sort of setting, I think it would bring us all a little closer together."

Presidential candidate Stephen Friedrich said he hopes to create an understanding between majority and minority groups.

He said international students and activities have a lot to offer the university through both academics and social functions.

"Through creating open lines of communication we'll have a better understanding of each other and how different groups can use student government as a tool that can be beneficial," he said.

Friedrich's running mate for vice president, Sandi Nelson, said that by combining the efforts of smaller groups, more publicity and recognition will be gained.

"I feel most everyone is excluded from student government in some way," she said. "We need to get to the newspapers and the radios and set up communication for the students so they know what's going on."

A major part of the debate focused on the possibility of reallocating funds for minority groups.

Clark said that while cultural programs offer exposure for the entire student body, he does not feel that student money should go towards political fights.

"I am of a conservative mind," he said. "I don't like spending money unless it's going to bring something in return. Waging a political battle back and forth isn't helping anybody but the two sides."

Gardner said he disagreed with Clark.

"Not having a press conference is censorship — it's suppressing information," he said. "Groups like the ISO are trying to let people know a different point of view. I think if we elect a candidate who wants to cut off a point of view we're going to kill the spirit of the university."

Clark's running mate, vice-presidential candidate Danielle Bechtold, said groups supporting only one side of an issue shouldn't be funded through UISA.

"If groups are working for the same goal, they should join their forces and have one big program," she said.

According to Friedrich, learning what different groups have to offer is important to education.

"Anyone can say they have an open mind, but until everyone has a chance to be educated, different views will continue to be unheard," he said.

Friedrich also stressed that groups which seem to have common interests can be very different.

"It's a matter of learning what these groups stand for that seem to have overlapping boundaries," he said.

Harris said it is important to find strength from within.

"In order to survive and fight the hostility you have to find inner strength," he said.

School budget's deadline not met as House, Senate debate measure

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Partisan tensions are running high as the Legislature returns for its sixth week of work.

Approval of the state school aid budget continues to dominate the agenda. The House and Senate failed to meet Thursday's deadline for the budget and will try again.

The Senate voted 40-9 Thursday night for a 2.1 percent increase in the budget, but House majority Republicans refused to take up the measure. They are pushing a 2.0 percent increase.

The difference is about $1.7 million out of a $1.2 billion school budget, but both sides remained adamant.

The House was expected to debate the school budget Monday.

EXAMINING ACT, SAT

Test scores help colleges predict students' success

Susan Kreimer
The Daily Iowan

With much debate over whether achievement tests accurately measure success in college, both American College Testing and Scholastic Aptitude Test representatives believe colleges should not use test scores as the sole criterion in the admission process.

At the UI, test scores are only one factor examined by the Office of Admissions in sorting through applications.

Associate Director of UI Admissions Emil Rinderspacher said the UI College of Liberal Arts first requires that students have taken four years of English, three years of social studies, three years of mathematics, and at least two years of a single foreign language in high school.

These current 15 high-school unit requirements began with the freshman class in the fall of 1990. Before that, they were "strictly recommended," Rinderspacher said. Students who meet 13 of the unit requirements may still be admitted, but will have to make up the two remaining units through coursework at the UI.

Once a student meets the unit requirements, they can gain automatic admission in one of two ways. They must be in the upper 50 percent of their high-school class if they are an in-state student, or upper 30 percent if they are an out-of-state student.

They can also meet the "admission index requirement," which combines either ACT or SAT scores with high-school percentile rank.

Rinderspacher said the index is useful in predicting freshman grade-point averages. An index of 90, the minimum requirement for in-state students, predicts a grade-point average of about 2.1, he said. For out-of-state students, that figure is 100. Those whose score falls between 90 and 100 are "looked at individually," and students with an index below 90 may request special consideration, Rinderspacher said.

The UI Office of Admissions developed the formula because it believed test scores alone do not reflect motivation and discipline, which play a role in success at college, he said.

"Research shows that class rank is a better predictor than test scores," Rinderspacher said. "Obviously a student's record over four years is going to be a better predictor of how they're going to do in college than a test that they take for two hours."

Although Janice Gams, associate director for public affairs at the College Board in New York, claimed that a student's SAT score should never be used as the sole predictor of success in college, the test results are more accurate indicators than high-school grades and class rank alone.

"Grades vary from teacher to teacher and from school to school. There is no such thing as a standard-grading practice in the United States," she said. "The SAT is a standard. All the students have the same experience with one particular test."

Patricia Farrant, assistant vice president for ACT in Iowa City, said ACT scores are helpful in assessing student performance along with high-school grades, which vary as much as the quality of education in different schools.

"We recommend that a decision not be made on a single piece of information," Farrant said.

However, like Gams, Farrant said a standardized test provides a "yardstick" for looking at students' performance systematically across the country. The ACT was developed in 1959, she said, because U.S. colleges wanted to "eliminate some of the imprecision" of grading and compare students equally. The SAT was first administered in 1926.

Since the 1980s there has been a steady trend among almost all colleges to accept either the ACT or SAT, although some maintain a preference, Farrant said.

"Historically the ACT served the heartland — the part of the country that had the large public institutions," she said.

Dean's letter asks that faculty be sensitive to student values

Yokota Masuo
The Daily Iowan

After a controversial videotape was shown at the UI School of Art and Art History two weeks ago, the UI administration sent letters to faculty members and teaching assistants in the College of Liberal Arts asking them to be more sensitive to the content of class materials.

While some faculty members agreed with the letter, others raised some concerns over future academic freedom at the UI.

The letter issued by Judith Aikin, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, read, "We owe it to our students to be sensitive to their opinions, their feelings, to their values."

The letter defined students in class as "a captive audience," and asked instructors not to "abuse this situation."

It asked that instructors provide sufficient information about the class content and its goals in advance. It also emphasized that students have the right to object to course materials and that they may receive alternative assignments if a small portion of the course involves material to which they object.

However, the letter also clarified that academic freedom is one of the UI's most important principles.

"No freedom is without an accompanying responsibility," the letter stated.

Though the language of the letter seems broad, said Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for University Relations, the letter is intended to apply to "very limited circumstances," including explicit sex and graphic violence in class materials.

"There are not many circumstances which will be an issue," Rhodes said.

"It underscores the importance of academic freedom."

Kenneth Starck,
instructor

Kenneth Starck, director of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication, agreed on the intent of the letter.

"Professors usually wield a great power over the students in class," he said. "In a case where professors think that something in class materials may offend students, it's a nice idea to forewarn students."

A series of film incidents — the showing of "Taxi Zum Klo" in the UI German department last fall as well as the recent screening of the videotape in the UI School of Art and Art History — has made him more sensitive about the topics in class.

"It has sensitized me for providing contexts for class materials," he said.

Although he supported the sensitive-conscious intent of the letter, Wallace Tomasini, director of the UI School of Art and Art History, said the letter could be misinterpreted.

Some faculty in the art school, he said, "might see it as an intrusion of academic freedom." Yet, Tomasini said, "I do not take this as the intent of the university."

Starck said the letter doesn't invade his academic independence in class.

"I don't regard this as an invasion of my academic freedom," he said. "It underscores the importance of academic freedom, because every freedom must carry the responsibility."

Starck compared academic freedom to that of the press. He emphasized the importance of being responsible in both fields, where professionals are required to acknowledge and correct mistakes when they are made.

"Freedom and responsibility go hand-in-glove," he said. "They are that closely related."

Panel, class debate video's merits

Students displayed a variety of opinions over whether a video shown in Colloquium was art or pornography.

Yokota Masuo
The Daily Iowan

Following a formal apology by Wallace Tomasini, director of the UI School of Art and Art History, regarding a procedure failure of an art presentation two weeks ago, about 150 students discussed the disputed video with five panelists in their art class, Colloquium.

"I apologize for the procedure," Tomasini said to the class. He also reminded students that it is "perfectly legitimate" for students to leave the class when they find some class materials to be offensive and objectionable.

The discussion last Friday ranged from a distinction between art and pornography to student/teacher relationships in class and to the role of the mass media in the coverage of the incident.

UI Teaching Assistant Megan O'Connell, regarding the intent of the panel discussion, said, "I feel the open forum functioned to provide a healthy environment for everybody who felt strongly that they had something to say or speak out."

"I also want to stress that this is not a single-issue issue. It's infinitely more complicated than that," she added. "It's not a matter of one side versus another side."

Although O'Connell emphasized the video was not the core of the issue, the class was still divided on whether the videotape was art or pornography.

Germaine Rhomberg, a UI undergraduate who is enrolled in Colloquium, said that though she was highly impressed by other works of artist Frank Evans, she said the videotape was pornographic. She added that she was offended during the video presentation.

"I was shocked at the graphicness of a sex act being presented in the class," she said. "I didn't think anything artistic was happening in the video."

Jack, a UI undergraduate taking the class who asked to remain anonymous, said the videotape was art. But he also found that it's not always easy to draw a definite line between art and pornography.

The panel discussion attempted to provide students with opportunities to express what they thought and wanted to voice.

Rhomberg said that the forum galvanized the class atmosphere.

"Before the whole incident came out, things seemed very stilled in class," she said. "When the video was presented two weeks ago, any objection seemed to be considered politically incorrect, but this time things were a little loosened up."

"When the video was presented two weeks ago, any objection seemed to be considered politically incorrect..."

Germaine Rhomberg,
UI student

Melissa Chase, a UI undergraduate who made a complaint to the UI, kept silent during the open debate.

"I didn't say anything in the class because I thought I had already said what I had to say," she said.

But Chase said the intent of the open forum helped to "get a lot of things off everybody's chest" after students were given chances to verbalize their opinions.

"I myself got a lot of things off my chest just by going there to listen to other people and realized that there were people who felt the same way I did," she said. "I'm not the only one."

As to the selection of the panelists, some students voiced concerns that the panel was not equally divided and that all five panelists stood by the artist, who himself served as one of the panelists.

The four remaining panelists consisted of Kevin Kopelson, a UI English professor; John Herbert, a director of an alternative art center in Cedar Rapids; Ju-Pong Lin, a UI multimedia graduate student and Margaret Rochelle, a UI graduate student.

"Without doubt, the panel was in favor of Mr. Evans," Rhomberg said. "No joke on that."

Jack agreed, saying "I think the panel was not evenly divided at all."

O'Connell, however, said the panel selection was fair.

"The only thing I want to say about the panel is that of the five panelists, a diversity of position was represented."

But Jack said that the panel should have had someone who opposed the artist.

"It seems like they were a little too defensive to the whole thing," he said. "It came down like 'us' versus 'them.' They could have handled it a little better."

Regarding the role of the mass media, O'Connell said that it was unfair and hysterical for the media to use the words "gay," "homosexual" and "sex" in headlines, knowing people would react strongly to them.

"It was erroneous to connect it with 'Taxi Zum Klo,'" she said.

"Just because it was construed as having an explicit gay subject matter, it was scandalized by the media."

Some students agreed, others didn't.

Rhomberg said the media blew up the incident bigger than it actually was.

"The press overreacted slightly," Rhomberg said. "I can see that the story is making news, but I think the press made the news a little big."

But Jack disagreed. "The panel seemed incredibly offended by the fact that the media called it a gay video," he said. "I don't know why they were freaking out about it."

ISU's research grants investigated

Paul Raeburn
Associated Press

BOSTON—The chairman of the House Science Committee has written to 50 universities, including Iowa State University, demanding that they justify research projects funded by last-minute provisions tucked into legislation without congressional debate.

The largest of the grants was $42 million for a climate-change research center at Saginaw Valley State University in Michigan, a small teaching school with 6,500 students and no research program.

The center, which has space on the Saginaw Valley State campus but isn't run by the school, is in the congressional district of former Rep. Robert Traxler, a Democrat who was head of a congressional appropriations subcommittee until he left Congress in January.

Despite its size, the grant was not formally authorized by Congress. There were no hearings to consider its merit.

"It was nursed from its inception by Mr. Traxler," House Science Committee Chairman George Brown, D-Calif., said Saturday. "It comes out of the NASA budget, but nobody at NASA knows about it."

Brown said such university research grants cost the nation $707 million last year.

The $707 million in university grants were awarded in secret, without debate, by legislators currying favor with constituents, congressional sources said.

Last September, the Congressional Research Service reported that such grants have cost taxpayers $2.5 billion since 1980. The practice is growing. Nearly half of the $2.5 billion was distributed in 1991 and 1992, according to the report.

Among the 50 appropriations being investigated by Brown are multimillion-dollar grants to Columbia University, Tufts, the University of Michigan, Hahnemann University in Philadelphia and other leading academic institutions. Iowa State University is among those being investigated.

EDITOR WANTED

Iowa City's morning newspaper is also Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 50 young professionals, an editorial budget of more than $200,000, and circulation of 20,500. The Board of Student Publications Incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 1993, and ending May 31, 1994.

The editor of the DI must have strong journalistic abilities and dedication, as well as skills in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily such factors as scholarship, previous news writing and editing experience (including work at the DI or another daily newspaper), and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff.

Applicants must be currently enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate degree program at the University of Iowa. Deadline for the candidate's submission of completed applications and supporting materials is noon, Friday, Feb. 19, 1993.

GETTING MUNCHIES

Drunk rush boosts fast-food sales

Dave Strahan
The Daily Iowan

Shots of tequila, beer, Long Island iced teas and cheeseburgers. If you think one of the above items is out of place, think again.

For many UI students, an evening out on the town isn't complete without a visit to one of the local fast-food restaurants, such as Hardee's, Burger King or Subway. The student migration from the bars to the restaurants usually begins around 1:30 a.m., when barkeeps yell "last call" and begin clearing out their establishments.

Area restaurants are well-prepared for what they term the "drunk rush."

"Everything that's not tied down we take into the back room and put away," said Carl Fye, shift supervisor at Hardee's, 125 S. Dubuque St. "Sometimes people are pretty nasty and have no respect for things."

Fye said food fights are common with late-night patrons, but some students even go a step further.

"We had a guy walk around the service counter, pick up a cash register drawer and leave," Fye said. "The police brought it back."

Fye also recounted the time a

Dave Guttenfelder/The Daily Iowan

customer got up on the service counter and began singing the "Gilligan's Island" theme song.

To this day, Hardee's employees are still wondering how the men's bathroom urinal was shattered last Homecoming weekend.

Aside from the violent incidents, though, most late-night patrons go to the fast-food restaurants to eat.

"A lot of them just get the drunk munchies," said Hardee's employee Mat Krull, a UI junior majoring in film.

Intoxicated students concurred.

"Hardee's is a great place to come when you're drunk and need food," said Kathy Ford, a UI freshman broadcast journalism major. "I've been out and I'm very hungry right now."

Stacy Smith, a junior UI business major, agreed.

"There's just something about alcohol that makes you hungry," she said.

Hardee's satisfied many customers with its "drunk special": three cheeseburgers for $2.49. The first night Hardee's had this special they sold 350 cheeseburgers.

Fye said that between midnight and 2 a.m., Hardee's sold six times the amount of food sold at regular dinner hours.

Nevertheless, stuffing their faces was not the only reason students came to the fast-food restaurants.

"It's kind of the atmosphere," Ben Hachmann, a UI freshman business major, said. "You can meet new people all night. I usually meet a new person every night that I'm here."

Eva Arnold, a UI junior biology major, agreed that fast-food restaurants are good meeting places.

"It's a place to go after the bars without going home right away," she said. "You have to kind of wind down a little bit."

For other students, fast-food restaurants are simply a way to continue what they were doing before they got booted out of the bars.

"It gives you a half hour to be hanging out at a 'bar' when you can't hang out at a bar," Tricia Reed, a UI senior nursing student, said.

Although late-night customers forget about fast food the minute they leave the restaurants, fast-food employees do not forget so easily.

AWARENESS WEEK CELEBRATED

Success Story award granted to student assisted by financial aid

The award is meant to celebrate the impact financial aid had on the life of recipient Maria Martin.

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

"I hoped one day, maybe, but I knew it would never happen."

Such were the words of UI senior Maria Martin as she described her high-school dreams of attending college.

It did happen, though, thanks to a generous financial aid package from the UI and plenty of support from one special high-school teacher. Martin, an elementary education major with a specialization in teaching English as a second language, has just received the Student Success Story of the Year award from the Iowa Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

"I've been basically supporting myself since I was 15."

Maria Martin, UI student

The award honors a student who best exemplifies the importance of financial aid.

A citizen of Mexico, Martin is the fourth of seven children.

"I've been basically supporting myself since I was 15," she said.

Martin said it was at Bowen High School in Chicago that she met her mentor Bernhard Rosenstein, a teacher and advisor to the school newspaper. He encouraged Martin to write for the paper her sophomore year.

"I was hesitant to do anything, because of work and stuff," Martin remembered. "But I took the job."

Family conflicts forced her to move to Georgia her senior year, and it was difficult to tell Rosenstein that she couldn't accept the editor-in-chief position at the paper, she said. "When I finally told him, I said I was so sorry to disappoint him," she said.

Rosenstein eventually resigned from advising the paper, Martin said, but he never gave up on her.

"He was my inspiration and motivation," she said.

When Martin graduated from high school, she was the first in her family to do so. Although she took many college preparatory classes, she never truly believed she would continue her education.

"I didn't live in a household where you planned to go to college," she said.

After graduation Martin accepted a job as a disc jockey in Georgia. On a brief trip to Chicago she visited Rosenstein, who asked her where she planned to attend college.

Countering her arguments that she couldn't go, Rosenstein investigated programs and financial aid offerings. She said although she didn't want to get her hopes up, Martin said she got excited.

"Inside I started thinking 'Maybe he could make it happen!'" she said.

Of all the universities she and Rosenstein talked to, Martin said the UI was the only one to inquire why she wanted to go to college. "I told them that ever since I was a little girl I wanted to be a teacher."

Weeks later Martin learned that she had been awarded sufficient financial aid to attend the UI.

With Rosenstein as a model, Martin said her ambition was strengthened and she survived bouts of self-doubt.

"I realized languages have always been my thing, and I could make a difference," she said.

Martin said she is extremely grateful for the financial aid that made it possible for her to pursue her dream. "I didn't believe it at first. I thought 'Things like that don't happen to people like me.'"

Carl Bonnett/DI

Martin said the encouragement she has received from the staff of UI Special Support Services, her financial aid adviser, and the linguistics department has been invaluable.

"I have learned who I am, and why language is such an important issue to me," she said.

Martin hopes to teach English as a second language and linguistics in the elementary and secondary education systems.

"I'm always out there to change things," she said.

The Student Success Story of the Year award is part of Financial Aid Awareness Week.

Branstad's enforced diet will aid hungry people

Associated Press

DES MOINES—Gov. Terry Branstad is winning his battle to shed some weight, and the more he loses, the more he will help a Jewish organization that feeds the hungry.

"For every pound that you lose during the next few weeks, I will donate $10 to MAZON, the Jewish communal organization that responds to hunger," wrote Rabbi Steven Fink of Temple B'nai Jeshurun in a letter to Branstad after last month's sledding accident.

Branstad was injured Jan. 17 while sledding with his 8-year-old son, Marcus. A runaway sled hit him in the face, breaking six bones in his upper jaw.

He underwent surgery Jan. 23 and doctors wired his jaw shut. Since then, Branstad hasn't had much choice but to stick with a liquid diet.

Branstad spokesman Richard Vohs said Thursday that the governor has lost 11 pounds so far, bringing the rabbi's pledge to $110 and counting.

In his letter, Fink said he would encourage temple members to follow his example by making contributions in Branstad's honor.

Fink said the hope was to bring something good out of a painful situation.

Vohs said Branstad made a New Year's resolution to lose 20 pounds by spring.

A shocker — or the same old, same old?

Academic ideals and love may seem to have little in common to the casual observer. But look again. Iowans have recently witnessed proof of the close relationship between the two. Amid all the syrupy hoopla over Cupid's Hallmark day, the UI was involved in defending an ideal that has remained central to its mission since its founding in 1847. When all was said and done, it looked a lot like love. Or one hell of a fight.

So just which high-falutin' ideal was under fire, Gridley?

Academic freedom. And what precipitated the lobbing of shells? A 15-minute film shown in an art colloquium. It depicted some sex.

Sex? But don't we see sex depicted all the time?

Don't ask such stupid questions. Of course we see sex depicted all the time — on TV, in books, in photographs and in cinema. But this was ... well, a couple of guys doing the wild thing.

Ah. Well.

What do you mean, "Well?" Do you mean that's different somehow? Seems to me it's just the same old same old.

That may be. But we're talking about kids here. I mean, young persons between 18 and 22 years of age.

That's fine. But they're not enrolled at Irma Belle's Cosmetology College, either. Nor have they struck out from the nest to attend the Bob Jones Bible School and Institute for the Sublimation of the Intellect and Libido. They're at a Big 10 university, to which they have supposedly come to gorge themselves at the great all-you-can-eat buffet of the liberal arts.

Oh, brother. You intellectuals make me sick. Are you telling me these kids come to a Big 10 school to learn about Big 10 sex, Aristippus?

You have no clue who Aristippus is. You just looked through the A's in your dictionary, near Aristotle's neighborhood. But listen. I don't want to fight with you about the relationship between sex and the intellect. Read any decent biography of G.B. Shaw, and call me later in the week for coffee.

Your allusions positively drip snot. Ankeny should not be expected to join in the mirth. How can you be so sure that old mom and dad are too dumb to tell you LASER SCIENTISTS over there in IOWA CITY right from wrong? They pay pretty fair to support your right to academic freedom. Don't they have any rights?

No. Parents do not have any rights in this. The students, however, do. Chief among them is the right to an education.

RIGHT TO AN EDUCATION? I hardly recall seeing blow-job techniques outlined in MY issues of Cliff's Notes!

Whoa. You're getting wild about this. Let's try to relax and have a productive visit. I understand how upset you are ...

You do NOT understand! You are a known, avowed and apparently unashamed homosexual. Regardless of what you may think, you are not perfect in the eyes of God. I don't even know why you bother to claim an affiliation.

An affiliation? With God? I make no such claim, though I have seen Him on the Stairmaster at my workout club. All I ever said was that He made me — as I am. It's not such a horrible claim. Ford made the Edsel, you know. Ron Popeil made the Pocket Fisherman. So maybe these aren't classic examples of their finest work. Perhaps they live on as agonizing testaments to bad days, but HEY! God did OK when He made me!

Lady, what you do in your own home is your own business. But to advocate hiding behind your goddamned academic freedom to allow gays to proselytize in state-supported classrooms ... it's just an OUTRAGE!

Have you talked to your sons about this? Were they damaged for life? Is your first-born hanging out in queer bars instead of the Sports Column? Or was it the sudden appearance of Princess Marcella Borghese's entire range of facial-care products on your Mastercard bill that tipped you off to the fact that we'd ruined him for life? Oh, I know. It was the stash of brochures about interesting surgical opportunities in the land of the midnight sun that got you all riled up. And that off-the-shoulder crinoline dress hanging in his closet. I saw it. It was dishy!

You can joke about this all you want. You can make fun of the morals of an entire state and a great country, too. But your laughter will rot in your own mouth when the money gets shut off.

Oh — here we go with the money! You — swing that big stick, baby. I KNEW it would come to this. I can't have a conversation (ay, anyone from Des Moines without having to hear about the money. "When the money gets shut off ..."

So how am I supposed to respond? That we don't need your money, your abuse, your constant carping and crap? Well, the hell of it is we do. Of course we need your money. And we might even miss your abuse, and your constant carping and crap, as well.

Well, I think you're wrong about this issue. And I think you people need to learn to listen a little better.

I think we have. I think that we will allow our instructors the same breadth of freedom they have always enjoyed. I think students will be encouraged to benefit from that, even when it is difficult. But I think that we will, we must, find ways to accommodate the individual who is distressed over certain material. I don't think we can accept a lot of second-rate indoctrination from that person. But I think that any and all honest attempts to wrestle with the subject matter at hand should be given due consideration by instructors who wish to be sensitive.

What you have just said is nothing. It means nothing. What did you just say to me? Is this a policy statement?

Never mind. Ask your kids about it when they come home for spring break.

ELECTIONS

Church, state and the UISA

Memories of a state religion in England and the grotesque experience of the Puritans in New England inspired the framers of the Constitution to make paramount the prohibition of an official religious establishment. The first clause of the first article of the Bill of Rights reads: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or of prohibiting the free exercise thereof." For 202 years it's been a constant struggle to defend this amendment from assaults by religious groups of various stripes vying for power and from governments at all levels which would decree how people should worship. The foresight of the Constitution's founders is as impressive as ever when we consider the twisted experience of fundamentalist dictatorship in Iran, or the religious strife in the Middle East, Northern Ireland, splintered Yugoslavia, the Sudan and India, among other places, where various combinations of Catholics and Protestants and Hindus and Moslems and Jews slaughter each other.

There's nothing wrong with a believer in office; The problem lies with the believer's attempt to impose her or his beliefs or morality upon the rest of us.

H.L. Mencken's famous definition of Puritanism, "The haunting fear that someone, somewhere, may be happy," gives us a telling image of a sour-faced Colonialist prude, but it also tends to overshadow the reality of what was in fact a theocracy. Ironically, the Puritans came to this land to escape the Church of England; once here, they created another church state and persecuted dissenters, nonconformists, Quakers and women they conveniently labeled "witches." Tragically, we have never outgrown these poisoned roots of Protestant fundamentalism. It's still a constant struggle to keep, for example, Pat Robertson's version of God out of our laws, our schools, our libraries, our work places, our homes and, of course, our beds.

Fundamentalism is dedicated to eradicating the line between public and private; one should be afraid — very afraid — of such religious radicalism. To the orthodoxy signified by the phrase "Christian Nation," tolerance and pluralism are anathema.

A slick new generation has replaced what used to be called, before the GOP opened wide its big circus tent, the "Bible-thumping lunatic fringe." The so-called Christian Coalition is the most recent manifestation of the attempt to rule us all by a profoundly unbending and narrow interpretation of the Bible and God. Its organizers know well that they can not win a national election — since a majority of us have no stomach for religious intolerance — so they have opted for grassroots guerrilla tactics (and lucrative fund raising). The rhetoric of guerrilla warfare comes from the Coalition's director, Ralph Reed, who also instructs the faithful to avoid mentioning the organization's name to other Republicans. Coalition members run for the low-level offices that few voters ever think about, but which are in fact the basis of political citizenship: the party workers, supervisors, commissioners, school boards. Not surprisingly, the extremism is toned down and good government and lower taxes stressed (although, as a tax-exempt organization, the Coalition violates federal election laws by campaigning). The plan is to build up a cadre in every precinct in the nation to prepare the way for the Coalition's founder, witch-hunter Pat Robertson, who yearns to become the American Ayatollah.

Iowa is one of the Coalition's test cases, and they have done very well here indeed. They captured the state GOP apparatus last year, crafting a reprehensible platform; they organized the victory against all Iowans that was the defeat of the ERA; and two of their own are running for president and vice president of student government here at the UI. Exploiting the rhetoric of "sound fiscal policy," media bashing, and the bogeyman of "political correctness," Christian Coalition reps Clark and Bechtold mask their real purpose: The desire to Christianize student politics, a desire revealed in their fund-raising letter (which was a violation of the election code ... but what the hey, democracy is only a means to an end for these smiling insurgents).

Today and tomorrow, in student elections, another part of the long fight for the heart and soul of the meaning of the Constitution's separation of church and state takes place. The fact that the UISA's a small battlefield does not make it any less significant.

Cast a vote for balance in UISA elections

Once again the upcoming UI elections are drawing space in the local print media.

These elections are important and must not be ignored because we have too much to do in our day-to-day waking dream of trying to survive while pursuing an education. We students need to learn to believe in ourselves again and choose to take responsibility for our lives here on campus. Students can make a difference if we only try, and voting in the student elections is one way we can do so. The election of our nation's president proves that students can effect positive change in the leadership of our country, so why not our university? You, the voter, can make a difference and decide, as many millions of young voters did in our national election, that you have the right and also the responsibility to consider each of the student candidates' positions and ethics carefully and then vote accordingly. Choosing not to vote in the student election negates the dignity your vote deserves.

The upcoming election of the president and vice president of the student body deserves careful attention by each and every graduate and undergraduate student enrolled at the UI for many reasons. These two officers are the official student spokespersons who represent the concerns of not only the UISA, but also each one of you to central administration here on campus, the Board of Regents, the governor and the state Legislature. These four powerful entities control every aspect of the tuition and fee structure and often the very types of courses which will be allowed to be taught on this campus. More often than not, these same entities will seek the counsel of the president and vice president of the regent universities' student governance structures before any major decisions are made.

For three years I have been involved in representing the concerns of graduate students to central administration, offices of state government and the Board of Regents. I have learned that by becoming a positive part of the process students can participate in making decisions which affect the university community in a positive and constructive manner. I have worked through the restructuring of student government and seen the graduate and professional students unite with the undergraduates to do what I at one time thought was impossible: form a student government structure which works for all students.

We have a unique opportunity this election year because one set of candidates provides the students with representatives from both the graduate and undergraduate constituencies, a balance not found before. John Gardner, candidate for president, is a post-comp doctoral student in religion here at the UI who has a strong commitment to the support of cultural, personal and political diversity. Gardner is a teaching assistant who has earned the recognition of the university through his receipt of the Arthur Steindler Award for Teaching and Research Excellence. He has consistently participated within the system as a Graduate Student Senator, served on several committees (including the Course Evaluation Committee this year) and has actively supported graduate students and the university central administration in their united three-year quest for higher stipends for teaching assistants to cover the cost of tuition. This past month he testified, as the only graduate student representative, in Des Moines to the State Education Appropriations Committee of the Legislature at the behest of the university regarding the importance of adequate funding for a high-quality graduate student program to the improvement of the undergraduate experience at Iowa. Clearly his experiences here as one of the best TAs and the respect he has earned from the university administration would provide the UISA with strong leadership and positive channels for communication both on campus and in Des Moines. Gardner has a passion for public service, believing — as does our new president — that now is "Our Time," and that we need to reach out and embrace it with hard work and hope for the future.

Micah Hobart, Gardner's running mate for vice president, is an undergraduate majoring in political science. Hobart is a member of the Iowa Honors Program, Campus Republicans, Campus Crusade for Christ and has participated in creating positive floor activities in Burge and Quad residence halls. He has continually strived to participate as a positive part of the process here and also in Des Moines, where he works part time as an intern for Representative Chuck Larson. He has also volunteered for Sen. Charles Grassley's election campaigns.

Hobart believes that graduate and undergraduate students must work together to make student governance effective as well as productive without an ideological manifesto directed by one group or another.

Both of these individuals share a commitment to working for students by striving to preserve present structures and create new ones. These structures will assure that the student voice not only be heard — whatever the ethnicity, physical ability or disability, or religious preference or sexual orientation of the person speaking — but assured that that voice is carefully considered and responded to with respect and dignity. Students need leadership which will unite us in working to make our corner of the world, the UI campus, a better place to be. We need to take responsibility for our lives and say that we choose a more positive path for student governance: one that unites graduates and undergraduates in common cause. The GARDNER-HOBART team clearly presents the best and most balanced choice to provide strong leadership for UISA.

We students need to learn to believe in ourselves again. We each need to believe that participation in student government, if only as a voter, is important to our management of our day-to-day waking dream. GARDNER AND HOBART believe we need to seek balance and tolerance within student government. Through their leadership we can find balance and make a difference, if we only try.

UISA President endorses Gardner / Hobart

To the Editor:

As I am not a candidate, I have done everything I could to remain impartial in this year's UISA election process. However, I can no longer hold my tongue while the accusations fly between candidates for Student Body President and Vice President, and the UISA teeters on the brink of the kind of administration that would make Pepe look like the Pope. I am writing today to give you my opinion (for what it's worth) on who I think are the best candidates for these positions. Without question, they are John Gardner and Micah Hobart.

John Gardner and Micah Hobart understand something that no other candidates seem to have grasped: that student government officials are elected to promote student issues, not personal political agendas. In spite of their differing backgrounds, they have united under the banner of student advocacy. If everyone on the UISA followed their example, student government might be able to regain the confidence and respect of students.

John brings to the UISA the kind of perseverance and integrity that can only foster success. He has the experience necessary to handle the Board of Regents and the open mind needed to listen to new ideas and acknowledge mistakes. John has proven his abilities beyond doubt. He has taken a defunct course evaluation committee and returned it, against all odds, to serving students. Furthermore, his testimony to the State Appropriations Committee has allowed us to pursue some education funding which otherwise would have gone unnoticed.

Micah Hobart makes the team complete. He would bring to student government the objectivity and motivation that is essential to effectively promoting student interests. Micah has a unique ability to perceive all sides of an issue and account for each one. His experience as an intern in the Iowa House of Representatives has given him bipartisan contacts which would undoubtedly prove invaluable when it comes time to fight tuition increases and to lobby in Des Moines.

I have tried to be fair in my dealings with the other candidates, but my ability to do so only goes so far. After all of the problems that Mike Clark has had, he could never be seen as a legitimate representative of student opinion. Furthermore, I have recently learned of at least two students who received his infamous fund-raising letter when he claims none have. Thus, I must question his integrity. Shannon Brinton, on the other hand, has served the students well in her capacity as an RA. However, being Student Body President certainly has not prepared me to be an RA, and being an RA cannot prepare a person to be Student Body President. Her inexperience in the dealings of the UISA would make it impossible for her to accomplish anything. This lack of experience is illustrated by the fact that she is currently advocating the creation of some programs that already exist in the UISA. Stephen Friedrich is both a friend and a colleague who has worked hard for the students of this university, but is just in the wrong place at the wrong time. Consequently, in order for the UISA to progress and improve, I am going to cast my vote for John Gardner and Micah Hobart.

In my opinion, no other ticket has the combination of experience, dedication and overall integrity that is essential to giving the students of this university the kind of representation that they deserve. Hundreds of students have helped to rebuild the UISA since the scandals in 1989; it still needs work, but it has come a long way. Whatever you do, do not let their efforts be for nothing. Do not sit by while "resumé padders" and the "Alliance for the Advancement of Fascism" threaten to take over your student government and its $1.25 million in student funds. We don't need another scandal, we need John Gardner and Micah Hobart for Student Body President and Vice President, but most of all we need you to get out and vote on Feb. 15 and Feb. 16.

Dustin R. Wilcox
UISA President

Editor's Note: At Mr. Wilcox's behest, The Daily Iowan would like to reiterate the fact that opinions expressed on the Viewpoints Page are the personal opinions of the signed author(s), and are not necessarily the opinion(s) of The Daily Iowan, the UI or the UI Student Assembly.

A capable candidate

To the Editor:

This year's race for the presidency of the UISA has boiled down to one issue for many students: Who has the real interests of the student body as their top priority? Of the four candidates, only one has an unbroken track record of altruistic service; a history of both undergraduate and graduate experience in navigating university and state governmental bureaucracy; a history not stained with ethics probes or patterns of deceit, but infused with a sincere commitment and a track record of progress and communication; Someone who has both taken classes and taught them. If I were a student at Iowa (and I am), I'd definitely want this person representing me in meetings with the university administration, state Legislature and Board of Regents.

John Robert Gardner is not preoccupied with typing the words "Student Government President" on his resumé. Gardner is a graduate student in the UI Department of Religion, preferring to delve into philosophical debate over an issue rather than pass judgement and push a hidden agenda. Classified as "post-comp," Gardner isn't dissecting his time to put in the required UISA office hours. As UISA President, he would be in the enviable position of being able to devote himself to getting real things done, instead of consigning his office as a second priority to the full-time obligations of a competitive academic and extra-curricular experience.

Gardner has been a consistent voice for student rights as a Senator in the UI Student Assembly, as well as a leader during the student boycott. He has actually sat down with the administration, discussed issues and been taken seriously. He has never wavered in his motives or his priorities. There would be no conflict of interest. Don't believe it? Well, he is a Democrat with a Republican running mate. Which of the other candidates can say all of these things?

As you go about your daily schedules on Monday or Tuesday, I urge you to recall the things that have bugged you about your student government since you have been here. Think of the times you felt unheard, underrepresented... a faceless number. Used. The time to boot the apathy out of the UISA is now. Change is setting the course to improve all over the country; let's follow current UISA President Dustin Wilcox's example of accomplishment in the face of apathy and selfishness. Let's now show up and vote for John Gardner and Micah Hobart for UISA President and Vice President.

SAFEWALK Committee member: Clark deliberately misled

To the Editor:

As a member of the Hillcrest Association SAFEWALK Committee, I would like to extend my deep-felt thanks to the UISA, UISA President Dusty Wilcox, Associated Residence Halls, The Hillcrest Association, the Department of Public Safety, Dean Phillip Jones, Tom Baker, RVAP, the Department of Residence Services, and the WRAC for their generous support of both finances and time in the instigation of the SAFEWALK program, which will become active on March 1, 1993, for Hillcrest residents. Without their help SAFEWALK would only be another good idea shelved by bureaucracy. The committee expects that with the continued support of all of these organizations, SAFEWALK can and will be extended to all students and faculty of the University of Iowa in the years to come.

I would also like to take this opportunity to express my outrage over Michael B. Clark's claim that he was instrumental in the work of SAFEWALK. SAFEWALK is a program by the students, for the students. The committee is made up of the Hillcrest assistant hall coordinator, two resident assistants, and seven residents, most of whom are freshmen or sophomores. We did the in-house surveys on the desire for the program. We contacted other campuses to study their similar programs. We contacted the university officials listed above and we made the presentations. We wrote the criteria for escorts, we wrote the guidelines, and we will do the training. Mr. Clark's claims angered all of us who have worked so diligently on this project.

The SAFEWALK committee members have never deluded themselves that our sheer will created this service. The approval of the Departments of Residence Services and of Public Safety, as well as the approval of the Office of the Dean were necessities. The legal aid of Tom Baker and the UISA proposal drafted by President Wilcox were invaluable. The committee members also realize that in order for the project to expand as we wish, UISA will likely become the overseer.

We have a vision for SAFEWALK. The vision requires the involvement of a certain type of person — not the type of person who would deliberately mislead to further his political aims. Michael B. Clark is not the type of person SAFEWALK needs. And in the knowledge that, possibly as soon as next year, SAFEWALK may be under the direct care of the UISA, it frightens me to think that he may become the student body president. I am not advocating any one candidate. I am asking that you not vote for Michael Clark and Danielle Bechtold on Monday and Tuesday, but that you do vote for someone else.

SAFEWALK Committee rejects Clark / Bechtold claims of credit

To the Editor:

The Hillcrest Association (HA) SAFEWALK Committee has operated since October of 1992 with the intent of creating a pilot nighttime safety service for Hillcrest residents. The HA SAFEWALK program is sponsored by the UISA, the Hillcrest Association, and Associated Residence Halls. The committee would like to recognize President Dustin Wilcox for his efforts in shaping the financial proposal. The committee would also like to thank the UISA for unanimously passing the proposal. SAFEWALK has been applauded by all eight UISA presidential and vice presidential candidates as a potential campus-wide program, and the HA SAFEWALK Committee is working toward that goal.

The HA SAFEWALK Committee has not and will not affiliate itself or its program with any individual tickets in this year's election. Recently, however, presidential and vice presidential candidates Michael B. Clark and Danielle Bechtold have assumed credit for this program. On Feb. 10, 1993, the HA SAFEWALK Committee members received campaign literature of Mr. Clark and Ms. Bechtold containing the following quotation:

"The third program that Michael, Danielle and other members of the UISA have worked with the Hillcrest Coordinator's office on is a pilot SafeWalk [sic] program."

Mr. Clark also states, "Over the past year, I have overseen the Hawk-eye Express Card. Home for the Holidays, and am currently working on the SafeWalk [sic] program." Ms. Bechtold adds, "I will extend the SafeWalk [sic] to include all of the dorms and even off campus."

The only direct contact about SAFEWALK between committee members and Mr. Clark occurred during the week of Jan. 25, when he simply expressed his support for the program in a passing reference during a short phone conversation. The conversation primarily involved a UISA informational program at Hillcrest and a message for President Dustin Wilcox. Yet Mr. Clark, in a letter to The Daily Iowan printed on Feb. 10, claimed previous involvement with the HA SAFEWALK Committee.

At the presidential / vice presidential debate on Feb. 10, both Mr. Clark and Ms. Bechtold denied implying any direct coordination of the program. Nevertheless, as the above citations testify, Mr. Clark and Ms. Bechtold have explicitly asserted their personal involvement with the program. The HA SAFEWALK Committee rejects any claims of involvement beyond the UISA vote of Feb. 2. Any material stating otherwise is false. The Hillcrest Association SAFEWALK Committee will not align itself with any ticket in the UISA election and, specifically, will not endorse the Clark / Bechtold candidacy.

To the Editor:

It's time to choose the president of Student Government — your Student Government. Student Government is incomplete. Seats in the Student Senate are unfilled because a lot of people just don't care.

What we need now is a true leader. Someone with an open mind toward all issues who can unite the student body under his or her leadership, someone with integrity who won't look to the past when he or she should look to the future, that rare person — an honest politician. Someone whose Student Government career hasn't been rocked by scandals, who will play by the rules instead of breaking them. We need a respectable, honest leader. One of our current Student Senators, John Gardner, is such a leader.

He is an intelligent, honest person who commands respect in his community. He is someone with integrity who could lead this university in bold, new directions and continue cooperative communication instead of causing conflict.

What we need to do now is vote. You can make a difference. Vote for an honest politician. Vote for John Gardner and Micah R. Hobart.

Recycling officer: Bechtold not involved in program

To the Editor:

I read with great interest and slight humor a campaign pamphlet distributed by Michael Clark and Danielle Bechtold, who are running for Student Body President and Vice President, respectively, in the UISA Student Elections this Feb. 15-16.

Although a few of the ideas stated in the articles were brow-raising, they did not compare to the surprise I felt after reading this statement in the article: "Several New Programs Proposed by Clark and Bechtold" — "Danielle has worked with coordinating recycling efforts in Hillcrest and Currier dormitories over the past two years."

I took the responsibility of the recycling program at Hillcrest Residence Hall through the Hillcrest Association for the academic year 1992-93. This responsibility was passed from Wendy Ward, who coordinated recycling at Hillcrest last year, to me in August 1992. Danielle Bechtold's name was not given to me as a reference. She has not worked at coordinating recycling efforts at Hillcrest this past year. I have neither spoken to Danielle Bechtold nor has she contacted me. In fact, the campaign pamphlet is the first time I have even heard of her. If she is interested in improving recycling efforts and coordinating the efforts of environmentally concerned student groups, then she should get in contact with those in charge. I have spoken to three sources, who are regularly involved in environmental issues in a group setting. According to all three sources, she has not made contact with or attended a meeting of the largest environmental group on campus.

How does she expect to accomplish one of her goals — "to coordinate the efforts of environmentally concerned student groups with residence hall associations" — if she has no contact with either group? Danielle Bechtold's claim of past and current involvement in recycling at Hillcrest Residence Hall is false. Ms. Bechtold only jeopardizes her credibility as a candidate by stating falsehoods and empty promises to gain votes.

Iowa But lineup still not solidified

Jay Nanda
 The Daily Iowan

The results stayed the same. The names have changed. For Iowa wrestling coach Gable, determining a permanent starting lineup has been a perennial odyssey which has yielded seemingly every combination possible. And for Gable, if that philosophy isn't broken, there's no need to fix it.

Which explains why Saturday night's 30-11 victory over 4-ranked Arizona State at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, while crucial in gaining momentum for the stretch of the season, still hasn't necessarily solidified a steady line of 10 wrestlers.

"I told the team that who wants to be on this team, they show me," Gable said after No. 3-ranked Hawkeyes improved to 12-1-1 on the year. "We're going to have nothing but change. I want the mentally-tough kids there. I couldn't even tell you my lineup's going to be Friday night."

Iowa hosts No. 5 Ohio State on Saturday night in the final home meet of the season before heading to Ames to take on No. 7 Iowa State the following evening.

On Saturday, pins by No. 118-pounder Chad Zaputilla, 158-pound freshman Daryl W. (17-5), as well as a technical fall by No. 3 heavyweight John O. (10-1), doomed the Devils.

"If this team is going to develop, they're going to have to be stronger individuals and know when to turn the heat up," Gable said.

It was freshman Lincoln McIlravy and Weber who did the most heating up, providing the Hawkeyes with a pair of victories in the 125 and 150-pound weight classes which have not been very stable this season.

At 142, McIlravy picked up his first varsity win after Gable dropped Troy Steiner from the customary weight to 134 two weeks ago. And at 158, Weber spent his Arizona State's Miguel Spencer a time of 2:51.

A freshman out of Gilbert, Iowa, Weber had been the backup to No. 11-ranked junior Rich (17-5) until winning a wrestling match three weeks ago.

"Working for a spot has made me work that much harder," Weber said. "That motivates you. You can't slack off. You can't let them see you're not serious." See WRESTLING, Page 2.

Hawkeye No. 3 Iowa

Roxanna Pellin
 The Daily Iowan

Now that Northwestern's Don Perrelli and Illinois' Kathy Lindsey have been beaten by the Hawkeyes twice this season, they say there's little doubt the Iowa women's basketball team plays up to its No. 3 ranking.

After beating Northwestern on Friday night, the Hawkeyes crushed Illinois, 77-58, in front of a crowd of 6,493 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday.

"I think Iowa can beat anyone in the country," Perrelli said Friday. "I think they play a great defensive game."

"I wish Toni (Foster) and Lindsey (Aaron) a great deal of luck and I'm certainly happy I won't be seeing them again," Perrelli added. "They're the best team the Big Ten has had to offer for the last several years," Lindsey said. "They have such good depth, they have when they need size. I think makes them so tough is that perimeter defense is so tight. I'm just quick. I think it's tough to have (Tia) Jackson (Necole) Tunsil playing the point guard. Of course, you have putting great pressure on the defense. The Hawkeye defense, ranked in the nation, forced the Illinois 29 turnovers, committing

McIlravy steps into varsity role

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Cracking Dan Gable's starting lineup is hard enough for most freshmen. Wrestling in the midst of the season at a weight which has been dominated by a defending national champion is practically unheard of.

Not anymore. As a five-time state champion in South Dakota, Lincoln McIlravy had no trouble making a name for himself. But that was high school.

Saturday night, McIlravy showed he may be on his way to making a name for himself at the collegiate level, picking up his first varsity victory, 9-6 over Arizona State freshman Steve St. John.

But perhaps more crucial than the victory was the manner in which McIlravy won.

With McIlravy clinging to a 7-6 lead and 20 seconds left in regulation, St. John shot in for the go-ahead takedown. But McIlravy fought it off and scored a takedown of his own at the buzzer for the final points, bringing the crowd of 6,020 to its feet.

Although St. John entered the match with a record of 4-5, he had fought veteran Troy Steiner to a 1-0 decision last month.

"It was good for me because I had a good week of practice," McIlravy said. "I need to keep that momentum."

Momentum was a missing ingredient the week before in McIlravy's 14-7 loss to Northwestern's Paul Andreotti — a loss that Coach Dan Gable attributed to "mostly jitters" since it was the youngster's first in front of the hometown crowd.

This time it was nerves, not momentum, which McIlravy lacked.

"I wasn't nervous much at all this week," McIlravy said. "I slept up till about 20 minutes before the meet on purpose. I just wanted to relax and stay away from thinking about it."

Iowa 30, Arizona St. 11

Results of a dual wrestling meet Saturday between No. 3 Iowa and No. 4 Arizona State at Carver-Hawkeye Arena:
118—Chad Zaputill (I) pinned Mickey Nuñez, 4:22.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Minnesota still 'tough at home'

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — If the Minnesota Gophers could finish out their season at home, they'd be shoo-ins for post-season play. Reality, though, isn't so kind.

Inside the comfortable confines of Williams Arena, the Gophers have won five of six Big Ten games, humbling three ranked teams in the process. Their latest victory, Saturday's 91-85 win over No. 13 Iowa, kept alive their hopes for an NCAA bid while stretching the Hawkeyes' losing skid to three games.

"We all knew we needed this win," said Minnesota coach Clem Haskins. "It was crucial."

All the more so because four of the Gophers' next six games will be on the road, where their string of futility has reached five games. It's a sore point with Haskins, who insists his team has played well on the road despite coming up empty-handed.

"Everybody's getting into home and away, you guys can deal with that," he said. "I don't even talk about that. We talk about winning basketball games."

Iowa, meanwhile, is looking for a victory — anywhere. After two straight losses, the Hawkeyes (14-6 overall, 3-5 Big Ten) had hoped seven days off would give them time to regroup after the Jan. 19 death of team leader Chris Street. But three weeks later, the Hawkeyes on Saturday were visibly lacking the defensive intensity he had given the team.

"We need work if we're going to continue playing as well as we played in the early going," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "Our defense is not what it once was, for obvious reasons."

While Voshon Lenard paced the Gophers (13-7, 5-6) with a career-high 32 points on 11-of-15 shooting including five 3-pointers, Haskins praised the play of center Chad Kolander.

After missing nearly two weeks with a strained right knee, Kolander scored just four points Saturday. But he pulled down seven rebounds, held Iowa center Acie Earl to 14 points and broke open the Hawkeyes' full-court press with long inbound passes that led to easy Minnesota lay-ups.

"Chad is so important to this ballclub. He's the glue," Haskins said. "You forget if there's a key guy missing, it just takes everything away from you — your execution on offense, your timing."

The Hawkeyes don't need reminding of that. Pressure's absence has put added pressure on Earl and Val Barnes, Iowa's scoring leader, to pick up the slack. They couldn't do that Saturday, combining for 21 points on 5-of-24 shooting. Barnes, averaging 16 points a game, had seven points after going scoreless in the first half.

"He can't carry us all the time," Davis said of Barnes. "Others have to step in when he's not contributing what he wants. We need to have balance. I think we lean on Acie and Val too much at times."

Hawkeyes rattle Illinois

No. 3 Iowa forces 29 turnovers in 77-58 win

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Now that Northwestern coach Don Perrelli and Illinois coach Kathy Lindsey have been beaten by the Hawkeyes twice this season, they say there's little doubt that the Iowa women's basketball team plays up to its No. 3 ranking.

After beating Northwestern by six points Friday night, the Hawkeyes crushed Illinois, 77-58, in front of a crowd of 6,493 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday.

"I think Iowa can beat anyone in the country," Perrelli said Friday. "I think they play a great defensive game."

"I wish Toni (Foster) and Laurie (Aaron) a great deal of luck and I'm certainly happy I won't be seeing them again," Perrelli added.

"They're the best team the Big Ten has had to offer for the last few years," Lindsey said. "They have such good depth, they have size when they need size. I think what makes them so tough is that their perimeter defense is so tall, not just quick. I think it's tough when you have (Tia) Jackson and (Necole) Tunsil playing the passing lane. Of course, you have Aaron putting great pressure on the ball."

The Hawkeye defense, ranked No. 1 in the nation, forced the Illini to 29 turnovers, committing 17 to Iowa's six in the first half.

"We fought hard," Lindsey said, "but we can't turn the ball over 29 times."

The Hawkeyes remained undefeated in the Big Ten at 11-0 and improved to 19-1 overall. Losing their second game this season to the Hawkeyes, the Illini dropped to 4-7 and 9-11.

Iowa set the pace early against Illinois, never allowing the Illini to lead. A pair of 4-foot jumpshots by junior center Cathy Marx put the Hawkeyes on a 10-point run with seven minutes remaining in the first half. Jackson hit a jumper just inside 3-point range and sank a pair of free throws to give Iowa a 20-point lead. Another 4-foot jumper by Marx increased the lead to 34-12 with 4:39 left in the first half.

A 3-pointer by sophomore forward Kris Dupps silenced the Hawkeye scoring run, but Iowa claimed a 42-21 at intermission.

Foster led the Hawkeyes' scoring effort with 20 points, Jackson added 16 and Tunsil scored 14. Jackson contributed six steals and Tunsil had four.

Although Jackson tied her career best in steals, she said she was just in the right place.

"Laurie forced a lot of those turnovers by putting a hand on the ball," Jackson said. "I just hap-

"It was a story of two halves for our team," Lindsey said. "The first half we just played intimidated. The team talked about it at halftime, but I didn't have to say anything, they knew. In the second half we played more aggressively."

Foster was leading scorer with 17 points and seven rebounds in a 68-62 win over the Wildcats Friday. Jackson added 12 points and Tunsil scored 10.

The Hawkeyes got off to a slow start, trailing for only the second time this season 32-30 at halftime.

Iowa junior Tia Jackson steals the ball from Illinois' Lolita Platt during the third-ranked Hawkeyes' 77-58 win Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Jackson had a game-high six steals for Iowa.

Northwestern shot 43 percent compared to Iowa's 38 percent from the field and sophomore guard Kellie Cook shot 3 for 3 from 3-point range. Junior center Andrea Harmon hit a layup to open the half and to tie the game. Foster sank a pair of baskets to give the Hawkeyes a 4-point lead that they would never give up.

"We did not do what we had to do in a clutch situation," Perrelli said.

St. Louis at New York Rangers (12:00 p.m.).
The Rangers have allowed three goals or less in 11 of 17 games since Ron Smith became coach.
But New York is only 5-7-5 since Smith replaced Roger Neilson.

STATS
Kevin Stevens of Pittsburgh has nine goals in his last 10 games. ... Benoit Houge of the New York Islanders scored his 100th NHL goal Saturday. ... Toronto coach Pat Burns recorded his 200th NHL victory as the Maple Leafs beat Minnesota 6-1 Saturday. ... Montreal has allowed only one goal in its last 125 minutes.

STREAKS
The longest shutout streak in the Pittsburgh Penguins' 26-year history ended at 187 minutes, 30 seconds Saturday when Chicago's Brian Noonan scored on a power play at 6:31 of the third period. The streak broke the Penguins' previous scoreless record of 140 minutes, 24 seconds, in March 1977. ... Calgary is 6-0-1 in its last seven games.

SHOTS ON GOAL
Gary Roberts of Calgary has scored in seven straight games. The goal-scoring streak ties a club record set by Kent Nilsson during the 1983-84 season.

SLAP SHOTS
The Saddledome became a chapel for 15 minutes Saturday night when a Calgary couple got married at center ice before the game.

SWINGS
Pittsburgh beat Chicago 4-1 Saturday at the Civic Center. The Penguins were 0-3-1 in their last four regular-season home games against the Blackhawks and 1-7-1 in their previous nine against the team they swept in the Stanley Cup finals last season.

SLUMPS
The Philadelphia Flyers are 0-9-2 in their last 11 Patrick Division road games and are 2-4-5 on the road in the division over two seasons. ... The New York Rangers are 9-11-3 in their last 14 games at Nassau Coliseum. The Rangers haven't won there since Oct. 28, 1989. ... Wayne Gretzky's goal-less streak has reached 15 games after he was blanked in the Los Angeles Kings' 10-3 loss to Washington Saturday night.

STARS
Doug Gilmour assisted on all six Toronto goals to tie a club record as the Maple Leafs beat Minnesota 6-1. The six assists tied the club's single-game record set by Babe Pratt on Jan. 8, 1984.

REGULATION
Brett Hull scored his 39th goal with 1:12 left in regulation, lifting the St. Louis Blues to a 4-3 victory over the Detroit Red Wings.

SIDELINED
Sylvain Turgeon, Ottawa's leading scorer, missed Saturday's game against Montreal because of a groin injury.

STATUS
Left wing Wendel Clark of Toronto missed his 10th game Saturday since straining a rib muscle Jan. 17 at Chicago.

SCORING
The Washington Capitals tied a club record with a seven-goal second period Saturday night, extending their road winning streak to three games with a 10-3 romp over the Los Angeles Kings.

COMING OFF
A 10-5 victory Thursday at St. Louis, the Capitals needed only 17 shots in the period against rookie goalie David Goyette to equal the club mark set against Toronto March 13, 1987.

SPEAKING
"It doesn't make a bit of difference if we haven't won here in 100 years, we didn't win tonight," — New York Rangers captain Mark Trammell lost only because of a mental aspect," Gable said.

Gable had praise for top-ranked 150-pounder Terry Steiner, who rolled to a shutout victory, but top-ranked Troy Steiner didn't reap such a reward after squeaking by No. 3 Marco Sanchez, 6-3.

"It would be nice if Troy would start getting his offense going a little more so the other people could see what kind of domination you could have," Gable said. "If Troy really wants to dominate somebody, it's not from the feet. It's on top, but you gotta take them down to get on top."

A pair of stalling calls against Mollica and Miller did nothing to Messier, after Saturday night's 5-2 loss to the New York Islanders extended the Rangers' winless streak at the Nassau Coliseum to 14 (0-11-3). The Rangers haven't won at the Coliseum since Oct. 28, 1989.

Iowa overwhelms Ohio St. at home

Five singles wins key victory

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team began the Big Ten season with a bang, defeating the Ohio State Buckeyes 8-1 Sunday in the UI Recreation Building.

Things got off to a good start in singles, where the Hawkeyes clinched the victory with five wins. Senior Andrea Calvert, sophomores Laura Dvorak and Amy Jahn, and freshmen Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette posted victories for Iowa.

"I was happy right down the line with our singles," Iowa coach Micki Schillig said. "We were playing with a lot of intensity. They got excited when they did well and didn't get down when things went wrong."

Boros dominated her match, defeating Buckeye Myerly Kerlis 6-0, 6-0.

"Today I was hitting my topspin backhand better than I have been," Boros said. "Playing against Rhonda (Fox) in practice, I realized that I was staying on the baseline too much. Rhonda's playing really well, so I lost in practice, but it made me realize that I need to come into the net more."

Iowa's success continued in doubles, as the Hawkeyes won all three matches. Dvorak and Calvert beat Abigail Villena and Michelle Busch 6-7, 6-2, 6-1; Willette and Fox defeated OSU's Myerly Kerlis and Linda Magid 6-1, 6-3; and Boros and sophomore Cara Cashion topped Allison Kinsey and Louise Johnson 4-6, 6-1, 7-6.

"I was really happy with our intensity in doubles," Schillig said. "We won it in singles but we came out in doubles and went after it like we needed those, too."

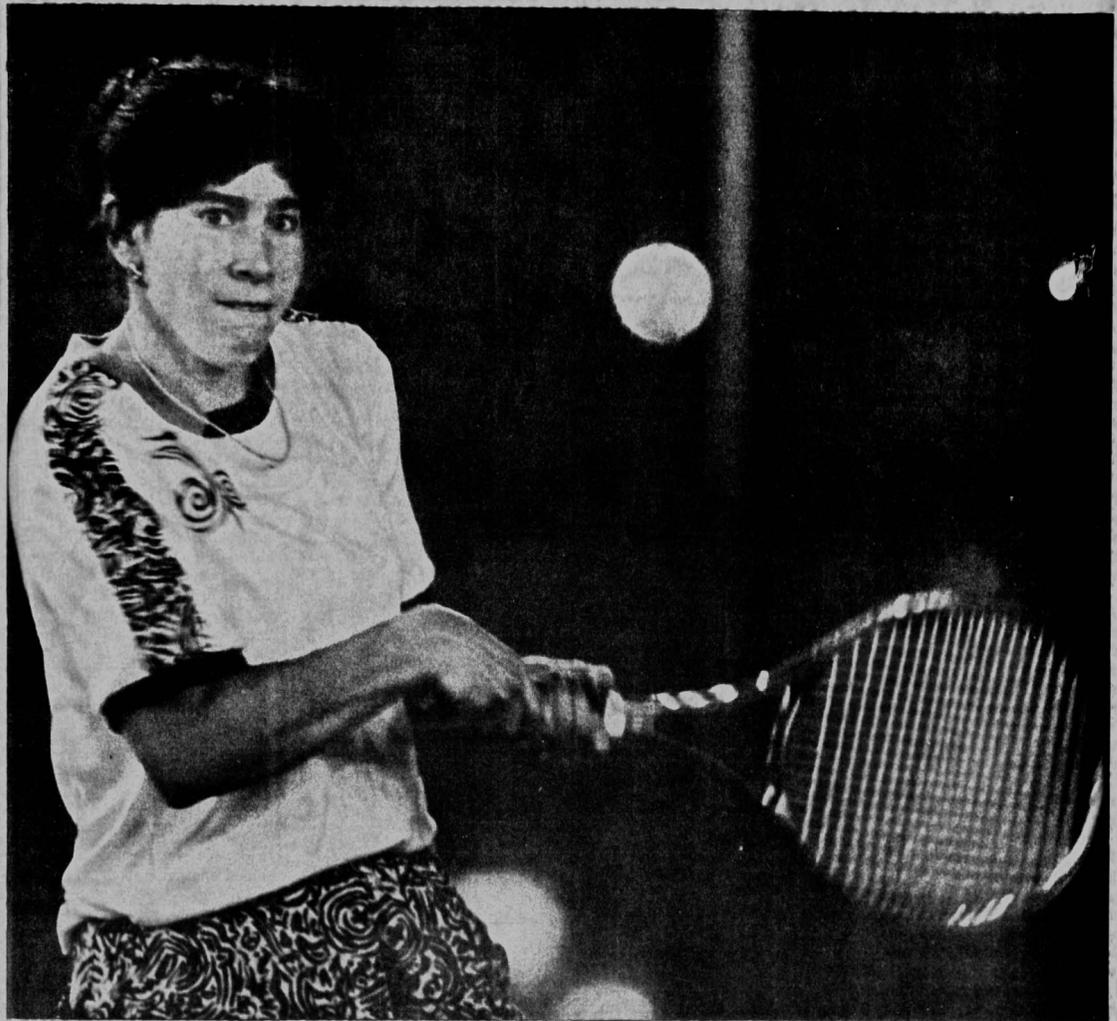

"We started out slowly in doubles, partly because we had won the match in singles, so we relaxed a bit," she added. "I talked about that with the girls, mentioning that we need these (doubles matches) — if we're really close to another team at the end of the Big Ten season, match scores mean a lot."

On Friday, Willette, a native of San Diego, received the Southern California Tennis Association's Evelyn Houseman Sportsmanship Award for 1992. The award is given for virtue, honesty, and integrity displayed while participating in the Southern California Tennis Association's 18 and under programs.

"It's a great honor for Nikki," Schillig said. "She is one of the nicest players I've had the pleasure of working with."

Absence of Bergstrom hurts Houghton's club

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The American Airlines Classic in Chicago wasn't something special for the Iowa men's tennis team. The Hawkeyes dropped their dual meet record to 2-2 after losing 7-0 to Texas on Friday and 6-1 against Kansas on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes were forced to play without their top player, senior Klas Bergstrom, who is out with a hamstring injury. Iowa coach Steve Houghton believes his team could have done much better with a healthy Bergstrom playing.

"What's real clear about this weekend is that not having Klas made a big difference," Houghton said. "Obviously we'll never know for sure, but I really feel that we would have won against Kansas with Klas playing."

Iowa did manage a couple of victories against the Jayhawks, accounting for the lone team point. Freshman Ville Nygard beat Kansas' Manny Ortiz 6-2, 6-3 at No. 2 singles, while juniors Carl Mannheim and Mike Marino defeated Jayhawks J.P. Vissepo and Eric Michaels 8-3 in doubles action.

"Ville just destroyed his guy, it was a real good match for him," Houghton said. "Mannheim and Marino played real well all weekend. Marino doesn't usually play doubles for us, but he stepped in and did a really good job against both teams."

Besides losing the match, Iowa's injury troubles continued against Kansas. Junior Neil Denahan injured his ankle and was forced to default his No. 6 singles match.

"Neil hurt his ankle badly. He couldn't continue," Houghton said. "That's a match he could have won; he was leading 3-1 when he got hurt. If we get that point, and win one more of the doubles matches, we're right with Kansas. Had Klas been there, our singles players would have all been bumped down one spot, so we would have had a good chance of winning."

The 10th-ranked Longhorns shut out the Hawkeyes on Friday, losing only one set in six singles matches. That set was won by Iowa's Bryan Crowley, who lost a close match to 23rd-rated Anders Eriksson 6-3, 6-7, 7-6.

"Texas was just too good. I don't feel we had a shot to beat them the way they were playing," Houghton said. "Crowley played a really good match. He was neck-and-neck with one of the best players in the country."

"Despite the lopsided scores, I still feel real good about our team," the Iowa coach added. "I've got lots of confidence in their ability. We'll play much better once we're back at full strength."

Jarrett takes advantage of Earnhardt's collapse at 500

Steven Wine
Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — The last laps of the Daytona 500 continue to be all uphill for Dale Earnhardt.

With victory near in his sport's biggest race, bad luck again made the man known as "the intimidator" just another Sunday driver.

This time, Earnhardt's car handled poorly at the finish, and Dale Jarrett passed him on the final lap. A five-time champion and the all-time leading money winner on the Winston Cup circuit, Earnhardt now is 0 for 15 in the Daytona 500. The 41-year-old driver acknowledged Sunday's setback through clenched teeth.

"I didn't think I had it won," he said. "And I didn't win again, so that's my 15th year. So what the hell? Big deal."

If the race was the Daytona 497, Earnhardt would have two victories. In 1990, a flat tire one mile from the finish cost him a victory.

In two other races, he led in the final 10 laps. He has eight top-five finishes.

This time, his black Chevrolet looked as dominant as ever through most of the race. Earnhardt led for 107 of the 200 laps, including 29 of the final 32. He even survived a brush 100 miles from the finish with the Chevy driven by Al Unser Jr., who was knocked out of the race by the collision.

Jarrett began to make his move with less than 10 miles to go. He passed rookie Jeff Gordon, then started to slip under Earnhardt on the banked track in Turn 3 on the next-to-last lap. Going into Turn 1 the final time around, Jarrett pulled ahead for good.

At Daytona, when you're loose, you lose. And Jarrett passed the man many drivers supposedly are afraid to pass.

"When you beat Dale Earnhardt at anything, anywhere, any time, you know you've had a good day's work," Jarrett said. "He is without question the best driver that has hit this circuit in a long time."

'Scarlet Letter' a dark, atmospheric adaptation

Michelle-Therese Forcier
The Daily Iowan

Editor's note: Arts & Entertainment Editor Tad Paulson also contributed to this article.

The vibrating beats of the drums and the clacking of the stones against one another, and against the scene, ring that Hester Prynne climbed, reverberated through the audience. When she had reached the top, Hester stood proudly with her head up, her baby, Pearl, held close, and she faced the town and audience.

This was one of the startling and incredibly strong images director Carol MacVey portrayed in her stage adaptation of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter," which she co-wrote with Ellen Melaver. Surely the UI Theatre Department has another award winner on its hands.

From the onset of the drums on Thursday's opening night, and the stoning of Hester, to Pearl — Hester's daughter born in disgrace — as a grown woman with children of her own, the audience was held captive in Puritanical Boston. The only glimpse of true time was the constant backdrop of a woman, clad in a shirt and stretch pants, brushing an enormous letter "A" with blood-red paint.

The painting mirrored Hester's spiritual and emotional pain. When she saw a glimmer of hope and freedom as she planned to leave Boston with Dimmesdale, the father of her child, the painting stopped only to begin again when the manipulative Chillingworth also booked passage on the ship.

The three omnipotent characters in the play, the witch, Mistress Hibbins, played by Jennifer Shepard; the Native, played by Ne'emia Saipela Le'au II; and the Rev. Blackstone, played by Doug Steckel, were excellent, finely detailed performances. Their characters represented the only part of Puritan society allowed to demonstrate the deep-seated passions that come from the suppression of everyday normal emotions. They were allowed to behave this way outside the boundaries of "normal" society because they were viewed as "crazy" or "savage" or "of the devil."

It was through them that Hester occasionally escaped the torture of her scarlet letter and voiced her beliefs, crying out at one point "The God that calls my love a sin is not a God for me." Ironically, while she sewed the clothes of the women in the town, they pretended that to even touch anything that she touched was sinful.

Hester Prynne came to life through the delicate, anguished acting of UI graduate student Anne Fogerty. Adam Whisner, playing the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale, acutely portrayed the guilty suffering and self-torture of the priest unable to decide between his spiritual love of God and his overwhelming love for Hester, making the audience cringe with sympathy for the damned couple.

Luis Sierra, playing Roger Chillingworth, was magnificent and forboding as the twisted, jealous husband of Hester.

The transformation of the chorus of Puritan Goodwives from despising Hester to stoning her to at last seeking her advice was excruciatingly slow, but it demonstrated the gradual realization within the Boston community of its brutal past treatment of Hester, which led to the "heroic" confession of Dimmesdale.

The results of the talents of scenery designer Anita Stewart, costume designer Cynthia Abel, lighting designer David Thayer, and composer James Romig combined to make "The Scarlet Letter" a deeply atmospheric and visually luring expression of the sexual and spiritual repression our society continues to fight against. Bravo to the cast and MacVey for telling the truth.

"The Scarlet Letter" will finish its run at the Mabie Theatre in the UI Theatre Building Feb. 17 through Feb. 20 at 8 p.m., and on Feb. 21 at 3 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at the Hancher Box Office or one hour before curtain at the Theatre Building box office.

Light, sugary 'Meet Me in St. Louis' a success

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

Sometimes it's easy to forget how simple life can be. This weekend three Hancher audiences were given two and a half hours to dwell on such complex problems as who should take people named Esther and Rose to the Christmas dance. They were also allowed to witness an entire town periodically breaking out into big song and dance productions.

The stage version of the 1944 musical movie "Meet Me in St. Louis" was just this simple and sweet, but very entertaining nonetheless.

"Meet Me in St. Louis" follows the Smith family as they get caught up in the excitement of the approaching 1904 World's Fair. The two oldest Smith daughters, Rose and Esther, are looking forward to both graduating from high school and finding husbands. (Yes, it is one of those kind of musicals.)

Esther, the role portrayed by Judy Garland in the film, was played by Jennifer Lee Dickenson, a dead-ringer for a young Garland until she began singing. Esther has her eye on John Truitt (Christopher Sieber), literally "the boy next door," but unfortunately he spends more time thinking about sports than Esther.

Her sister, the matrimony-seeking Rose (Elizabeth Lambert), spends her time pitting her two suitors against each other.

Suddenly Mr. Smith, their father, announces he may be transferred to New York City and the tight-knit, St. Louis-loving family panics. Meanwhile they sing and dance a lot.

"Meet Me in St. Louis" is a slice of Americana brought to the stage. It is silly and shallow and nice. Sometimes that can be refreshing.

The Tony-nominated musical features the film's original score by composers Hugh Martin and Ralph Blane, including the songs "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas," "The Boy Next Door," "The Trolley Song," and, of course, "Meet Me in St. Louis." The song-writing team also collaborated to write several new songs just for the stage production.

The singing was well done, including top-notch performances of "Diamonds in the Starlight" by Kay Ogden as Mother and "Banjos" by Robb McKindles as the brother, Lon. A few of the ensemble performers, however, at times seemed apathetic about what they were doing.

Little Emily Houck played Tootie, the youngest daughter. Although cute, she was often very hard to understand. In the film version Margret O'Brien portrayed Tootie so well she was given a special Oscar for the best child actress of the year.

The set was gorgeous. An elaborate Victorian home shown both inside and out, a moveable trolley and a well-lit World's Fair all added considerably to the illusion.

They really don't make musicals like "Meet Me in St. Louis" anymore. Now if only life were just that simple.

Believable leads keep 'Untamed Heart' afloat

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

"Untamed Heart" presents some curious requirements for the ideal man; he has no family, he has no future, he's sick, he's weak, he's protective, he breaks into houses, he reads lots of books and most importantly — he rarely talks.

Whatever it is about this formula (and possibly because of Christian Slater), "Untamed Heart" kept an audience filled almost completely with teen-age girls giggling, sighing and crying for two hours — but don't let that keep you away.

Marisa Tomei ("My Cousin Vinny" and "Chaplin") stars as Caroline, a coffee-shop waitress with a heart of gold who has several bad habits — including chain-smoking, walking home alone and getting dumped by loser boyfriends.

Her reckless ways catch up with her in one disturbingly real scene when she's almost raped, but is saved by a mysterious bus boy from work. Adam (Slater), it turns out, follows her home every night to watch over and protect her from afar.

This is all Caroline needs to fall head-over-heels for the weird, dirty, practically mute kitchen hand. She even at one point curiously tells him, "I'm going to fall in love with you, but you don't have to love me back." Now there's a girl who could use some self-esteem.

Mixed-up in this unusual love story is Cindy (Rosie Perez of "White Men Can't Jump"), Caroline's fellow waitress and best friend. She's a refreshing third wheel, who's spitfire ways have only her friend's best interest in mind.

"Untamed Heart" has a lot of momentum going as the unique love story slowly unfolds. Unfortunately some magic transformation of Adam's personality takes place as soon as they sleep together. Suddenly the scruffy, long-haired boyfriend gets his hair cut and wears preppy clothing. Before he was afraid of the human touch but now he initiates all sorts of public affection. At first he shied away from crowds and later he goes to large sporting events.

"Untamed Heart" had the potential to tackle a tough challenge — to portray a realistic love story. Instead it brings to the screen more of a fairy-tale love story.

Inquiries about health problems make Richard Pryor walk off stage

Associated Press

MERRILLVILLE, Ind. — Richard Pryor left a sellout crowd puzzled when he walked off the stage after just 35 minutes.

The comedian didn't offer an explanation for his quick exit Saturday, but some in the audience of 3,400 suggested Pryor left because people kept shouting questions about his multiple sclerosis.

He "was saying not to do it and they kept on doing it. It was not cool at all," said Roy Endsley, 27, of Chicago.

Monica Montella, a spokeswoman for Star Plaza Theater, said "We don't know why he walked off."

Cyberpunk 'Hardware' lively, grungy industrial-age parable for sci-fi fans

lan Corwin
The Daily Iowan
"And the good news today is... that there is no fucking good news!"
Well, that's only half true—I have a bit of good news for fans of the unusual. If you can endure the cynicism of cyberpunk philosophy, a movie exists that will blow you away.

"Hardware" (1990) is one you may have missed at the video store, unless you or a friend has a link with the semi-underground science fiction/fantasy genre called cyberpunk. It's a post-apocalyptic, hard-core, hurtling mass of cyber-sex, cyber-drugs, and rock 'n' roll—the people with the machines rule and the rest of us are goin' down, baby! That kind of thing.

Sure, it sounds bleak, and it is. But that's only half its charm.
Writer/director Richard Stanley has fashioned an industrial-age parable of sorts, and worked it into a frighteningly believable science-fiction/thriller plot to boot. The story is simple—boy with robot hand buys junked-out droid, gives droid to artist girlfriend, boy leaves, girl must fight for her life against a machine that can make fondue out of a human being without a second thought.

Stanley's biggest success is that he never complicates his story more than he has to. That leaves him room to work with some really interesting social commentary that might have been lost in a more complex plotline. As it stands, the ideas of cyberpunk fiction eventually become the plotline.

There are also a lot of intriguing and relevant discussions of "population control" (a central theme) and global meltdown on a societal level. Like I said, it gets pretty depressing, but whenever that happens, the plot twists and you're thinking about something else (rather like life, yes?).

Photographer Steven Chivers and designer Joseph Bennett give a very grungy texture to the film, reminiscent of Ridley Scott's "Blade Runner" and George Miller's "Mad Max" movies. Stanley then brings in a little "Robocop" flavor, with short video sound bites advertising "radiation-free reindeer steaks" and "Major Goodvibe Cigarettes" (guess what's legal in the future, kids!).

The most arresting moment in the film is a stroke of genius from Stanley and editor Dereck Trigg—Jill (Stacey Travis) lights up her acetylene torch and puts the killer robot's head onto a piece of sculpture, while Ministry's "Stigmata" pounds on the soundtrack and video images of Armageddon flash across the screen. Pretty twisted.

The only gripe I have about this film is that it lingers back and forth in portraying its hero (who happens to be a woman). She is written at times as a very well-rounded individual, and at others as merely a screaming bimbo. Whether this is covert sexism at work or just faulty writing, I can't say, but it does disrupt the flow of things once or twice.

Overall, "Hardware" screams its message loud and clear. Yes, there is no good news today, and there won't be any in the future if we keep going the way we are now. The film's believability and timeliness are its strongest assets, and you'll go away from watching it with the hope that robots and chemicals will never replace a good long afternoon in the sun.

Dana Carvey no successor for Letterman's 'Late Night'

Associated Press
RADNOR, Pa. — Dana Carvey won't succeed David Letterman when he leaves "Late Night" this summer, an NBC executive says.

Carvey, the "Saturday Night Live" comedian, was mentioned as a possible replacement for the talk show host, who is moving to CBS.
"There will be no Dana Carvey," Don Ohlmeyer, the new head of NBC's West Coast operations, told TV Guide magazine for its Feb. 20 issue.

Letterman has said he thought Dennis Miller would be a good replacement.

Robbery suspect caught by Coralville police

An Iowa City man was held on first-degree robbery charges after he held up a man at the Coralville Lantern Parking Center at gunpoint on Monday afternoon.

Antonio Valentino Jones, 2843 Lakeside, was apprehended by Coralville police after the robbery was reported at 12:30 p.m. when an officer in the vicinity noted that he fitted the victim's description.

Witnesses said Jones entered a store, showed the weapon and ordered customers to get on the floor, then demanded an undetermined amount of money from an employee. After the money, Jones fled and was then apprehended by the police officer.

The Johnson County Sheriff's Department and the Coralville Police Department assisted.

NBC News president speaks at UI banquet

Michael Gartner, president of NBC News and former editor of the Des Moines Register, will be the main speaker at the annual Fourth Estate Banquet of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication on Friday, March 5.

The banquet will be held at the University of Iowa Union with a social hour at 6 p.m. followed by dinner at 7 p.m. More than $60,000 in scholarships will be awarded to students.

Gartner, who is an author as well as a journalist, is well known for his outspoken views on the First Amendment.

NASA releases photos of Challenger crew cabin

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA released photos of the space shuttle Challenger's smashed crew cabin after they were made public by a New York man who obtained them under the federal Freedom of Information Act.

The space agency said it released the 45 photos showing the wrecked crew cabin because of public documents after they were released to New York Times reporter James Sarao on Feb. 3.
