Robbery suspect caught by Coralville police

An Iowa City man was charged with first-degree robbery after holding up Concord Cleaners in the Coralville Lantern Park Shopping Center at gunpoint and fleeing on foot Monday afternoon.

Antonio Valentino Jones, 25, 2843 Lakeside, was apprehended by Coralville police after the incident was reported at 12:50 p.m. when an officer in the vicinity noted that he fitted the witnesses' description.

Witnesses said Jones entered the store, showed the weapon and ordered customers to get down on the floor, then demanded an undetermined amount of money from an employee. After receiving the money, Jones fled and was then apprehended by the Coralville police officer.

The Johnson County Sheriff's Department and the Coralville Fire Department assisted.

NBC News president to speak at UI banquet

Michael Gartner, president of NBC News and former editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, will be the main speaker at the annual Fourth Estate Awards Banquet of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication on Friday, March 5.

The banquet will be held at the Union with a social hour beginning at 6 p.m. followed by dinner and the program at 7 p.m. More than $60,000 in scholarships and prizes will be awarded to students.

Gartner, who is an attorney as well as a journalist, is widely known for his outspoken defense of the First Amendment.

President promises to revive economy

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—President Clinton, in his first prime-time address from the Oval Office, summoned Americans to "a call to arms" Monday, promising a plan to revive the economy through a painful package of tax increases and spending cuts.

"We have to face the fact that, to make the changes our country needs, more Americans must contribute today so that all Americans can do better tomorrow," the president said.

"But I can assure you of this: You're not going alone, you're not going first, and you're no longer going to pay more and get less," he said.

The speech previewed one he'll make to Congress Wednesday outlining details of his program to revitalize the economy and create jobs. It also spurred an intense public relations blitz to overcome resistance in Congress and among the public to $500 billion in tax increases and spending reductions in popular programs over four years.

Clinton's speech amounted to a lecture on the nation's economic problems and the solutions he proposes to fix them. Using charts and graphs, he blamed the woes on the policies of Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

Over the past 12 years, he said, "the federal deficit roared out of control."

REPORT RELEASED

Enrollment down from spring '92

Susan Kreimer
The Daily Iowan

Enrollment for spring semester at the UI is down 381 from the 26,105 total in spring of 1992 due in part to smaller high-school senior classes, according to a report released last week by the UI Office of the Registrar.

Enrollment last fall also declined by 418. In the fall of 1992, 27,463 students were registered compared with 27,881 in the fall of 1991.

"We expected that decrease," said UI Registrar Jerald Dallam. "It's not a substantial decrease."

Dallam attributed the decline in the fall to the large graduating class last May — 3,493 seniors. Last December 1,577 students graduated from the UI.

"We've had large classes for a number of years and a lot of people are finishing their degrees," Dallam said.

But Dallam said the UI's drop in enrollment for the past few years is also reflecting the "diminishing" number of high-school seniors, especially in Iowa and Illinois, where the UI draws the majority of its students.

In 1989, there were 38,727 seniors in Iowa high schools, compared with 36,104 in 1990. That number dipped to 33,089 in 1991, and increased slightly to 33,837 in 1992, said Dallam, citing figures from the Iowa Department of Education.

In Illinois, the estimated number of high-school seniors was 133,952 in 1989, 124,290 in 1990, 116,539 in 1991 and 114,923 in 1992, according to the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education, a national research organization in Boulder, Colo.

"In that four-year period, the number of high-school seniors decreased significantly," Dallam said. "Consequently the numbers we have been getting have decreased in proportion to that."

DEBATE CONTINUES

Budgeting for schools gridlocked

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES—Republicans and Democrats on Monday agreed to push for a quick end to their gridlock over school finances, but found their differences widening as they sought compromise.

Republican Gov. Terry Branstad signaled his willingness to accept "some adjustments" in his proposal if that would end the dispute. There was no sign of movement in the Legislature, beyond agreement that action is needed.

"It's time for all of us to get with it," said Senate President Leonard Boswell, D-Davis City. "Now is the opportunity to act. In essence, we're holding Iowa schools as a hostage."

The governor said the dispute needs to be quickly resolved, and the amount of money separating the various factions in the Legislature "isn't enough to amount to anything."

"It just needs to be resolved without further delay," Branstad said. "I want to see it done this week. I'd like to see it done as soon as possible."

At his regular meeting with reporters, the governor declined to criticize conservatives in the Legislature who have moved to slice his spending plan. That effort has deadlocked the Legislature, which last week missed a self-imposed deadline for agreeing on a school finance package.

The school finance fight is an early test of strength in the Legislature, where conservatives strengthened their hand in the November election.

"We did miss out on our first deadline; we should be embarrassed about that," conceded House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs.

State spending on elementary and secondary schools accounts for more than a third of state spending.

Branstad proposed that local school budgets be allowed to grow by 2.3 percent, but lawmakers are fighting over a reduced figure.

UISA voting turnout small but steady

Officials attribute extremely low turnout to apathy caused by a history of student government scandals.

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

There were no long lines nor a lack of ballots, but students manning the polls Monday afternoon reported a steady turnout of voters in the UI Student Association general election.

In the election, which concludes when the polls close at 8 tonight, UI students will be voting for one of four candidates for UISA president and choosing five candidates from a list of six possible Undergraduate Student Assembly senate seats.

"I was optimistic when I asked the Student Elections Board for 5,000 ballots," Stephen Gray, a program coordinator in the Office of Campus Programs, said. "I hope we use them all, but I don't think it will happen based on what I've seen in past years."

Last year, there were 1,762 votes cast in the presidential election, representing about 6 percent of the UI student population.

The number represents the nadir of a four-year trend in which UI students have been going to the polls in smaller and smaller numbers.

Officials attribute part of the reason for the decreased voter turnout in recent years to a lack of trust in the UISA following a wave of scandals in which student government participants have scammed the UI for money.

In 1990, then-UI Student Senate President Juan José "Pepe" Rojas-Cardona was investigated for misallocating student funds after he used the money to rent a Cadillac for a trip to Chicago and used other extravagant spending practices.

In 1991, Kevin Taylor, who served as director of the Office of Campus Programs, went on trial for misappropriating over $58,000 from the OCP, most of which was taken from the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment.

The scandals led to a restructuring of student government in 1990 in an attempt to avoid future scandals.

The new system, still in use today, set up three branches of student government: the executive, judicial and legislative.

The UI Student Association, which includes all UI students, was established.

The executive branch, which includes the UISA president and vice president as well as three executive directors, works closely with the legislative branch to oversee student-group funding and student concerns.

The legislative branch, or the UI Student Assembly, consists of the Graduate and Professional Student Senate, the Undergraduate Activities Senate and the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate. It administers funding, oversees student groups, and passes legislation promoting student interests.

The judicial branch, which consists of the Judicial Court, the Student Elections Board and the Student Activities Board, investigates complaints concerning student government as well as cases outside the student assembly.

BIRTH CONTROL MADE AVAILABLE

Depo-Provera to become more accessible in IC

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

A new form of birth control is now on the market for American women, though availability is limited in Iowa City.

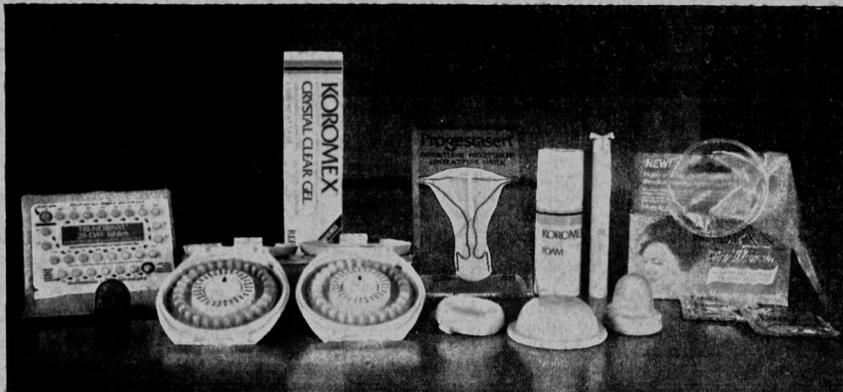

While the UI Hospitals and Clinics currently prescribe Depo-Provera, which consists of a shot of progesterone that is effective for three months, neither the Emma Goldman Clinic, 227 N. Dubuque St., nor the Iowa City Planned Parenthood, 2 S. Linn St., have made the method available.

"Though we don't have it currently available, we will shortly," Mary Manix, center manager for the Iowa City Planned Parenthood said. "Staff training has to occur in order to get the method on site, but we hope to get it within the next six months or so."

Depo-Provera affects fertility in several ways, Charles deProse, UI associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology explained.

"First, it changes the lining of the uterus, making it nonreceptive to fertile ovum, and it causes thickening in the mucus of the cervix which makes it impermeable to sperm," he said. "It also has an effect on the motility of sperm in the Fallopian tubes."

Though the drug was introduced nearly 20 years ago, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration didn't approve Depo-Provera as a legitimate form of birth control until last October. According to deProse, the delay simply had to do with politics.

"Initial studies by the Upjohn Company showed that in beagle bitches the drug caused benign tumors in the breast," said deProse, who added that Depo-Provera has been used worldwide as a method of birth control for years.

"I think it's a very good method of birth control. It's especially beneficial to people who have trouble remembering to take pills every day or for those who don't always have other methods available," he said. According to the World Health Organization, the estimated failure rate of Depo-Provera is 0.4 pregnancies per 100 women.

"It's as effective, if not more, than pills or an intra-uterine device," deProse said.

However, he added that there are possible side effects that have some women concerned, including weight gain, irregular bleeding and an increase in pimples and oily skin. Also, Depo-Provera does not provide protection against sexually transmitted diseases.

Francine Thompson, health services director at the Emma Goldman Clinic, said although the clinic does not yet provide Depo-Provera, she is glad to see another alternative in birth control.

"Anytime there's a new method, I think it's a good thing. We like to be able to offer women as many alternatives as possible," Thompson said, adding that the clinic hasn't decided on whether it will provide Depo-Provera. "We'll continue to monitor the medical reservations and studies."

The cost of the injection at UIHC, not including the cost of the clinic visit, is $49.50.

Experts dismiss myths about morning-after treatments

Victoria Forlini
The Daily Iowan

The stress of thinking about an unplanned pregnancy because of unprotected sex can be alleviated by one of the most reliable and least-known forms of birth control.

Morning-after treatments are 98.5 percent effective at stopping a pregnancy if taken within 12 hours of unprotected sex, said Charles deProse, a UI associate professor in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

When a woman goes to a clinic to get the treatment, two pills of a high dosage birth-control pill, usually Ovral, are taken. Twelve hours later the woman takes a second set of pills.

The pills disrupt the woman's reproductive system by giving a short burst of the hormones estrogen and progesterone.

"The drug makes the build-up of hormones quicker than usual and that buildup disrupts the lining of the uterus, preventing implantation of a fertilized egg, said Mary Manix, manager of Iowa City's Planned Parenthood.

Planned Parenthood has been offering the treatment, which costs $13, for about five years but Manix said not many women know about the treatment and the clinic is reluctant to administer the pills to the same female within a short time span.

"We only give it once a year to a woman because it's just as easy to go on the pill," she said.

The UIHC also offers the treatment to women who have been raped.

"If a woman is concerned about a deProse added, to be 85 percent effective in preventing a pregnancy whereas RU-486 can be used to abort a pregnancy within the first 12 weeks.

He also said that if the morning-after pills were taken and a woman was already pregnant, there would be no effect on the pregnancy because the implantation had that.

Within 13 to 21 days after taking the morning-after pills, a woman will begin to bleed. However, deProse said, it is not possible to determine if implantation has been prevented or if the bleeding is just a normal part of completing the cycle.

Manix warned against women taking an extra dose of their own birth-control pills at home to try and head off a pregnancy.

"We don't know how well it works or how it hurts a woman," she said.

Ovral has never been officially approved by the Food and Drug Administration for use as a morning-after pill, but deProse said since it has been approved as a birth-control pill doctors may also prescribe it for other uses as they see fit.

But without FDA approval, clinics receiving federal funding, such as the Iowa City Family Planning Clinic in the UI Westlawn building, may not offer Ovral in a morning-after capacity.

Doctors have been prescribing the morning-after pill since birth-control pills were made legal 30 years ago, deProse said.

The Emma Goldman Clinic also offers morning-after treatments at a cost of $30.

"We only give it once a year to a woman because it's just as easy to go on the pill."

Mary Manix, manager

pregnancy we offer it to her, but we don't push it," said deProse.

One of the reasons women may not know about this form of birth control is because they confuse it with RU-486, commonly known as the French abortion pill. RU-486 is currently illegal in the United States.

"RU-486 is an antagonist of progesterone, which helps to maintain the stability of the lining of the uterus in early pregnancy," said deProse. "Ovral causes sluffing of the lining of the uterus and prevents implantation."

Morning-after pills should be used within 72 hours of unprotected sex, already occurred.

This treatment is not without controversy. Opponents of abortion rights have protested morning-after pills as an abortifacient.

"Many right-to-life groups distinguish between contraception, which prevents conception, and abortifacients which stop a fertilized egg from implanting in the uterus," said Teresa Regan-Wagner of Johnson County Right to Life.

She added that the distinction can be in an individual's "terms of psychology." The difference is when a person believes life begins at conception or at some point after

LARGE EMPLOYER TURNOUT

Summer Jobs Fair highlights student job possibilities

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Students in need of summer employment may find it at the fifth annual Summer Jobs Fair, which will be held in the Union today.

Jane Schildroth, center associate at the UI's Center for Career Development and Cooperative Education, said employers from Alaska, Minnesota, Wyoming, Massachusetts and other states will be at the fair. Representatives from the Iowa City area will also be present.

"Summer jobs give students the opportunity to gain skills which will help them in the full-time job search," she said. "This fair helps employers fill their summer employment needs and it helps students test possible career areas."

Schildroth said there is a 50-50 split between summer camp jobs and noncamp jobs, with job opportunities ranging from resorts to business settings.

Over 4,000 positions are available through the 69 employees currently registered for the fair. Schildroth said some of the employees travel to a variety of campuses, while others concentrate their efforts only at the UI. She said chances for finding a job through the fair are good.

"It depends on whether or not students follow through," she said. "It's pretty hard to know how many students get hired as a result of the fair."

When students talk to potential employers at the fair, Schildroth said they may receive only an application or an interview may be set up on the spot.

In the past, she said about 1,000 students have turned out for each fair.

A directory of opportunity listings for students may be picked up at the fair and other job possibilities are on file in Calvin Hall.

The fair will be held in the Main Lounge of the Union from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Other UI organizations sponsoring the fair include the Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office, the Department of Leisure Studies, the Educational Placement Office, Engineering Career Services, the Office of Student Financial Aid and the Student Recreation Society.

DESIGN CONTEST HELD

Gum, toothpicks problematic for UI engineers

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

Engineering students discovered the building material of the future Monday at the annual Theta Tau Engineering Design Contest: bubble gum and toothpicks.

Well, they're still working out a few bugs but they certainly had fun trying.

The assignment was to construct an arch similar in shape to the St. Louis Arch using only bubble gum and toothpicks in an hour or less, and 13 future engineers found it was much easier said than done.

With half an hour left, UI senior Margo Melendez was not optimistic.

"We probably won't get it built all the way across," she said. "We're not really using engineering principles. Obviously I haven't learned anything in my four years here."

UI sophomore Jeff Sum, one of the contest organizers, said triangular- and square-shaped arches seemed to be working best.

Sum and the other organizers originally planned to use straws instead of toothpicks, but when they tested the materials, the straws bent under the weight of the gum so they switched to something a little stronger.

let go, but the fall was a slow process.

"It held for about a minute, so we're pleased," Smith said.

The second-place winners, UI freshmen Noel Culbertson and Trent Riggs, tried a different approach by chewing up the gum remained hopeful for the future.

"We'll get 'em next year," Riggs said.

Insufficient preparation time was the main problem for UI sophomore Brian Sander, who said he was "kind of" using engineering principles.

He said the prize money lured him into the contest. First place carried a $25 prize and second place $10.

Melendez and her partner John Cummings did manage to get their arch to span the distance between two desks and won third prize — all the unused bubble gum — for their effort.

According to freshman Carrie Hemingson, another of the contest organizers, about 1,200 pieces of bubble gum and 3,200 toothpicks were used in all.

The contest, which was sponsored by the pledge class of the UI chapter of Theta Tau, a national professional engineering fraternity, was part of the celebration of National Engineers' Week.

"We're not really using engineering principles. Obviously I haven't learned anything in my four years here."

Margo Melendez, UI student

Experience proved to be the key to winning as Don Lapp and Jeff Smith, both December graduates, found out. Although they had to hold up their arch until the judges began measuring, it was the tallest, coming in at seven inches. It began collapsing as soon as they before using it for their base.

"It's a little too slobbery, but it's a nice firm base," Culbertson said.

Riggs and Culbertson said they felt slightly disadvantaged because they lacked the experience of some of the other contestants, but

PRECIPITATION LEVELS ABOVE NORMAL

Wettest winter since 1932 might mean drier March

Steven P. Rosenfeld
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The past three months have been the wettest November-to-January in Iowa in 61 years, the state climatologist reports.

If anything, past experience indicates a chance for a slightly drier than normal March and April after a wet winter, climatologist Harry Hillaker said.

"Most farmers would rather see it a little on the dry side because the soil will be saturated when we thaw out this spring," he said.

But Hillaker added that the above-normal precipitation in the late fall and early winter provides no strong signal of what's ahead at spring planting.

"More important will be what happens the rest of this month and in March," he said.

Hillaker reported an average 7.47 inches of precipitation statewide from November through January, the third-highest total ever recorded in Iowa.

The only higher totals for the period were the 10.07 inches from November 1931 to January 1932 and the 9.12 inches of the same period in 1909-10, he said.

"More important will be what happens the rest of this month and in March."

Harry Hillaker, climatologist

January weather was both wetter and warmer than usual, he said.

It also was gloomier, with the sun shining an average of just 43 percent of the daylight hours. A normal January in Iowa averages sunshine for 52 percent of the daylight hours.

January precipitation averaged 1.17 inches, or 0.25 inch above normal. It was the wettest January since 1982.

Precipitation ranged from 0.62 inch at Sibley in the northwest to 2.25 inches at Bloomfield in the southeast.

An ice storm on Jan. 12 struck the Snowfall ranged from 1.5 inches at Clio in south central Iowa to 15.6 inches at Swea City in north central Iowa.

Temperatures averaged 19 degrees for the month or 1.7 degrees above normal.

The lowest reading in January was minus-21 at the northeast Iowa community of Cresco on Jan. 18. It was the lowest temperature recorded anywhere in Iowa since Jan. 30, 1991.

The state's hot spot was the southeast Iowa community of Fort Madison, where the temperature rose to 56 on Jan. 31. That was the highest temperature anywhere in Iowa since Nov. 20, 1992.

Home-heating requirements, as estimated by heating-degree-day totals, averaged 4 percent below normal in January, but were 22 percent greater than a year earlier — when Iowa recorded its 10th warmest January on record.

VIDEO CONCERNS REGENTS

UI asked for report on teaching policies

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

In response to concerns voiced about a film shown recently in a UI art class, the Iowa state Board of Regents has requested that the UI administration report on teaching policies at their Wednesday meeting in Iowa City.

Regents Deputy Executive Director Robert Barak said Monday that individual board members, as well as the regents' office in Des Moines, have received calls and letters from concerned parents and students.

"They were not happy," Barak said. "Happy people don't write."

The questionable videotape was shown approximately two weeks ago in Teaching Assistant Megan O'Connell's Colloquium class in the UI School of Art and Art History. Local artist Frank Evans, a guest speaker, showed a film which included scenes of a homosexual act between two men. O'Connell has since stated that in the future she will warn students of sensitive material. The class also held a discussion session in which almost 150 students had the opportunity to voice their opinions on the film.

Barak said the board members aren't looking for anything in particular, but that they just want to hear the UI's report and then go from there.

The UI was informed of the request Thursday night, UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said. UI President Hunter Rawlings will address the situation before the regents, telling them what happened and what the response has been, she added.

The report was being prepared Monday afternoon, though Rawlings said it was too early to comment on exactly what the UI presentation will be. However, there will be a full report on the issue, he added.

The regents are simply looking for more facts concerning the incident, Rhodes said.

"At this point it's my sense that the regents are interested in getting more information," Rhodes said. "I see it as them taking their governance responsibility very seriously."

GOVERNOR CRITIQUES PACKAGE

Branstad says Clinton's programs likely to burden rural middle class

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Higher energy taxes likely to be featured in President Clinton's economic package would hammer rural states like Iowa, Gov. Terry Branstad warned Monday.

"It particularly hurts rural states, where we have to travel substantial distances," said Branstad. "It's basically a transfer of money from the rural states that have to pay the energy tax to the more metropolitan areas. "It looks like that's going to be one of the things that hit us," said Branstad.

Clinton this week is proposing spending cuts and tax increases designed to spur the economy, but Branstad said the energy-tax proposal would have just the opposite impact in rural states.

Republican Branstad's argument is likely to be repeated throughout the Midwest as Clinton's program is debated.

UNEMPLOYMENT REPORT RELEASED

Jobless increase typical for January, say officials

Jude Sunderbruch
Business Editor

Although more jobless benefits were paid out in January to unemployed Iowans during the first month of 1993 than last December, government officials said the change was typical for this time of year and not necessarily indicative of a worsening of Iowa's economy.

A total of $28.4 million in benefits were paid out in January to the jobless in Iowa, $3.8 million more than the $24.6 million paid in December 1992, according to statistics released from the Iowa Department of Employment Services.

Paulette Day, a labor market research economist with the DES, said January benefits are typically high for a variety of reasons.

Day said part of the increase is due to some unemployed workers in Iowa becoming eligible to apply for benefits again at the start of a new year.

"Because of the new-benefits year a lot of people can reapply," she said.

The increased compensation is also due to layoffs that usually occur at the end of the holiday season, according to Day.

"Between Christmas and New Year's a lot of companies just shut down and if employees don't get vacation time they can claim unemployment benefits," she said.

Another factor that causes January's figures to be higher than other months' is that seasonal employment, such as construction, often suffers a downturn during the winter.

Iowa bill to fight underage drinking sent to House by unanimous vote

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Youngsters who alter their driver's licenses to appear old enough to purchase alcohol could lose their driving privileges for up to six months, under legislation approved Monday by a House committee.

Backers said the bill is aimed at combating underage drinking. Teachers have been among the advocates for such action.

"If they are out all night at beer parties, it's hard to get their attention in the morning," said Rep. Deo Koenigs, D-McIntire, one of the Although outside construction usually begins again in earnest early in the spring, this year could find more construction workers unemployed longer, according to Larry Lee of Lee Brothers Construction in North Liberty.

"It usually starts about April, but lumber costs have gone up so that could delay the start this year," he said.

Despite the short-term increase in unemployment compensation, last month's benefit payout was $7.9 million less than the January 1992 total of $36.3 million.

In Johnson County, the total number of recipients receiving jobless benefits went down from 837 unemployed workers in January 1992 to 749 last month.

These figures surprised Tom Bullington, manager of the local Job Service office. He said he thought the continuing extension of benefits for some workers might have led more to claims.

"I would have thought there would be more," he said.

Bullington said the federally funded extension, originally approved in November 1991 and subsequently extended to June 1993, can greatly extend the compensation period for some workers.

"Ordinarily it's 26 weeks, but you can get an additional 20 weeks with extended unemployment compensation," he said.

According to Day, it seems likely the benefits extension will be reappraised this summer.

"It's not official yet, but we're getting word that that's going to get extended," she said.

sponsors of the measure.

The House Transportation Committee approved the bill on a 16-0 vote, sending it to the full House for debate and likely easy approval.

Currently, using an altered license in an effort to purchase alcohol can lead to a 30-day license suspension.

The issue of altered licenses recently received increased attention because of an incident involving Gov. Terry Branstad's eldest son.

Eric Branstad last month pleaded guilty after police said he used an altered license in an attempt to buy beer at a Des Moines convenience store.

Crews begin monitoring Lone Tree aquifer

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

As the first two-inch-wide monitoring well reached 190 feet down into the Buried River Channel Aquifer last week, the Lone Tree City Council passed a resolution condemning testing the aquifer between Iowa City and Lone Tree.

The monitoring well is part of the Iowa City Water Plant's ongoing Comprehensive Water Plan Study. The current water plant primarily uses water from the Iowa River. Rising water standards and future estimates of increased water demand have prompted city officials to investigate several new water sources including the Buried River Channel Aquifer.

Last week's resolution expressed Lone Tree's concern about its water supply should Iowa City decide to tap into the aquifer for its own needs. Lone Tree's water is supplied by two Buried River Channel Aquifer wells.

According to the resolution, "The City of Lone Tree feels that if Iowa City pursues their intentions of using the Buried River Channel Aquifer to supply their city with water, the water in Lone Tree wells could be jeopardized."

Iowa City Acting Water Superintendent Ed Moreno stressed that the aquifer is merely one of the possibilities under consideration. "What we're looking at is an investigation," Moreno said. "We will continue to look at that possibility."

Moreno said water plant officials have discussed plans to investigate the aquifer with the Lone Tree council twice and that he sees the resolution as a message expressing concerns. Moreno said he gets the message.

"We're clear that they're concerned," he said. "We're all concerned about what should be done."

Moreno said the investigation of the Buried River Channel Aquifer is still in the preliminary stages and he is not sure how many more monitoring wells will be needed.

Due to legal problems, only one of two scheduled monitoring wells was drilled last week. The city is in the process of acquiring three more sites for potential monitoring wells.

Moreno said whether or not Iowa City intends to pursue use of the aquifer will depend on findings on the abundance and quality of the water supply.

If the possibility of conflict between Iowa City and Lone Tree water needs exists in using the aquifer, Moreno said the aquifer will not meet Iowa City demands and will fall out of consideration.

Should Iowa City decide to use the aquifer in the future, it would apply for a Department of Natural Resources permit to pump a certain amount of water from the source.

BYRON KENT WIKSTROM

Columnist bumped to Tuesday AGAIN!

Boy was I wrong. Generally I don't respond to Letters to the Editor directed at my columns. In most cases, the letters are pretty difficult to decipher, and even when they make sense, by the time I've seen them and I've had another opportunity to write, the issues are no longer topical.

But with the UISA elections still at hand, I knew I had the chance to rectify my error and I knew that in this case it was important that I did so. Why? Three weeks ago, I wrote a column about the infamous fund-raising letter sent out by Michael B. Clark. Clark was attempting to solicit money for his UISA presidential campaign. Apart from the fact that sending fund-raising letters before the deadline broke UI election laws — something I don't think Clark should be held accountable for; after all, I'm sure if he knew what the rule was, he would have been more discreet about who he sent it to — I thought the content of the letter clearly made Clark's candidacy antithetical to the essence of our democratic institutions. And, therefore, that Clark was unfit for office.

Specifically what concerned me was Clark's pronouncement "That ... it is essential that the University of Iowa have [No sic; you're right Mr. McNeish, 'have' is grammatically acceptable] a Student Body President who is a Christian and a conservative." At first I thought Clark had gone too far when he said it was essential that the UISA president be a Christian. To me that seemed to exclude far too many people: for example people who practiced other religions, such as Jews or Hindus or atheists.

Fortunately a number of readers took offense to what I wrote and responded.

Jason R. Craddock: "Byron Kent Wikstrom's (column) concerning Michael B. Clark's candidacy for UISA president betrays his lack of understanding of what it means to do something in God's name. ... Acting in God's name does not mean doing what you want and conveniently using the name of God as a banner to cover your wanton behavior from question. It means to seek the Lord's wisdom — which He gives liberally to all who ask — through prayerfully reading His inspired Word, namely the Bible."

He's right; I didn't understand, but seeing his letter and letters from others, I began to rethink my position.

From Clark, himself, a letter was delivered which helped clear up some confusion I had about my own column: "I do not have sufficient time, column space, or patience to refute all of the ridiculous claims from Byron Kent Wikstrom's preposterous editorial which effectively stated that if someone is proud of their Christianity and dares speak about it in public, he should be ineligible for public office."

If I had never read Clark's letter, I would have continued to think that he just wanted to exclude nonChristians from office. But that's not it. Making Christianity a prerequisite for the UISA presidency isn't exclusionary. It's just a way to promote one religion. Clark's not against other religions. He's just pro-Christian.

After all, in this world of special interest groups and favors for minorities, Christians don't stand a chance of getting their message across unless they control the government. And that control must extend throughout our political establishment. From the very top, to the very bottom: a position that Clark is willing to accept.

Finally from Steve Vanden Berg: "I support any candidate who openly professes his Christianity and attempts to represent those views. While realizing that being a Christian does not mean you are a leader, I have read Mr. Clark's clear and insightful letters. His rationale makes his opponents — writers including Mr. Wikstrom — pale in comparison."

"I have never been involved in a Christian jihad, but I will be first in line to vote for Mr. Clark."

Sorry Steve, but by now it should be clear, unless you're there at 9 a.m. sharp, I'm going to beat you to it.

As I said, usually I don't respond to Letters to the Editor, but in this particular case, somehow I knew that I must. And I'm lucky that I did; if I'd opted to write another frivolous column supporting something like gays in the military, I'd never have realized my mistake and seen the light. Obviously that mistake was not understanding Clark's position on religion and democracy.

But now I understand. Clark is trying to instill good wholesome values into an otherwise depraved university. Consider the recent "art" film shown in a university class. As Clark pointed out himself, "... the liberal establishment ... is poisoning the minds of university students on a daily basis." However with the help of God, Clark will ensure that this slide is halted and that our UISA will return to a more righteous path.

(I also wanted to thank Clark for pointing out in his Letter to the Editor that my column was run a day early in order to coincide with the article about [his fundraising] letter. ... Down at the DI we felt a bit chagrined when we realized that the column ran early. In fact, we've been making the same mistake since August — running the column on Tuesday rather than Wednesday — but now that Clark has pointed out this error, I'm sure we'll try to do something about it.)

I'm sorry to all those people who told me they agreed with what I originally wrote. Clearly you made the same mistake that I made. I hope you take a few moments to reconsider your reaction to his letter. And I hope that you go out and vote for Michael B. Clark. We need a strong leader like Clark — someone who understands the importance of morality.

Oh, if you've already voted, don't let that hamper you from voting again. Even if voting twice is against election rules, I don't think that should stop you — considering the importance of this issue. And I'm almost certain that Michael B. Clark will somehow find it in his heart to forgive you.

Byron Kent Wikstrom's column appears Tuesday on the Viewpoints Page.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Getting what they paid for

In a battle akin to David vs. Goliath, some young folks have begun to take to the TV screen to complain about the current setup of Social Security. Their arguments center around the fact that Social Security in its present form allows senior citizens a much bigger piece of the budget pie than any other age group.

Social Security is a program with good intentions, but there are problems with it, problems that are going to get worse as time goes on. Seniors today can receive as much as four times the amount of money they put in during their working life. It's a system where even the seniors who make large amounts of money through their private pension plans, investments, etc. are allowed to collect as much as the less affluent seniors. After interest on the debt and national defense, the largest amount of the budget goes to Social Security.

When the system was set up, people were not living as long as they are today, and the population was much smaller. While adjustments were made about 10 years ago to deal with an older and larger population, it is still iffy at best as to whether Social Security in its current form will be able to accommodate the baby boomers when they reach retirement age in 15 to 20 years. That doesn't even begin to account for the current generation of young people, who will have to pay for the baby boomers and face the very real possibility of having no Social Security.

The system is allowed to function in this unfair fashion due to the actions of the mother of all interest groups: the American Association of Retired Persons. The AARP boasts 34 million members in their organization, and they are not afraid to remind Congress of that. Like any interest group, they are single-minded in terms of their wants, and to hell with everybody else. Moreover, they can back up their power with votes — lots of them. The elderly go to the polls more than any other age group. That's why politicians are afraid to stand up to the AARP.

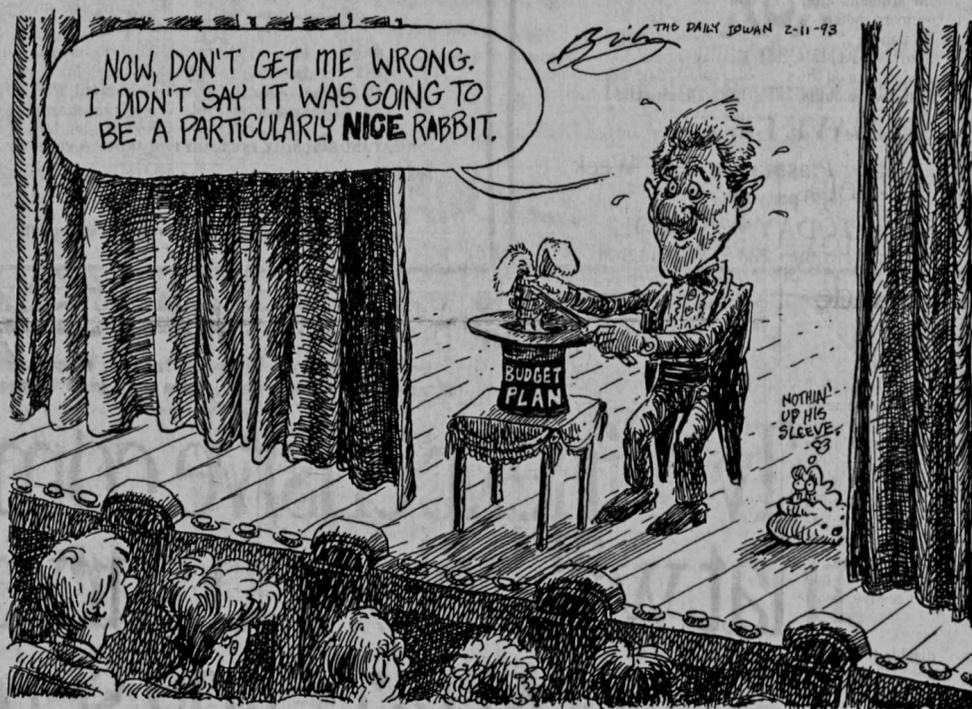

But now a group called Lead or Leave is trying to do something about it. Even though they have merely a fraction of the AARP's money and organization, Lead or Leave is trying to educate young people about the inequities of the current system. They are trying to send the correct message that if the system stays as it is, the young generation of today will not only be handed a bill for the deficit, but also for the Social Security of the seniors of today and the baby boomers.

However, if Lead or Leave is to have any success they must get young people to the voting booths. With all the hue and cry over such things as the MTV "Rock the Vote" campaign and other initiatives, the voting percentage for young people was only marginally better than the usual anemic turnout. Until that changes, young people are not going to have much influence in Washington.

Senior citizens deserve what they put into Social Security in dollars that are adjusted for inflation. That's only fair. The elderly poor (as well as the disabled of any age) are also entitled to a sustainable income. That's the right thing to do. But the time has come for the elderly who can afford it to start paying their fair share. On Wednesday night, President Clinton is going to announce that everybody's taxes are going up. That was inevitable, due to the almost $300 billion deficit. It has to be a fair plan, though — one that is implemented in a progressive, proportional way. The only way that this is going to happen is if Clinton is willing to take on the AARP and get the wealthy seniors to chip in. Otherwise, the grandchildren of today's elderly are going to be screwed yet again.

Open letter from UISA presidential candidate

Dear UI Community:

I thought it was about time to tell you about myself, what Sandi and I are working to accomplish in the next year, and why we are the team you should help to elect President and Vice President of the UISA.

In the past four years, I have worked very hard to better the conditions for students, from talking to friends one on one to organizing programs for my entire Hall. The culmination of my work was realized when I was selected for the National Residence Hall Honoratory, recognizing outstanding service and leadership in the Halls.

During my second year I also became a member of Circle K International. I was elected treasurer for one year for this social-service organization. It was during this time too that my initial interest in UISA began, when I was elected to the Undergraduate Activities Senate. Initially, I was selected for the State Relations and Student Services Committees. During the first few months I became acquainted with Student Government and spent most of my time asking questions. Two of the big projects I was to devote time to later were the Student Awakening Day and 24-Hour Vigil and Herd Books. Totalling the two accounted for over 40 hours. At this time, I was also learning what it meant to lobby, to speak on behalf of the students here at Iowa.

This is when I joined USI which works with the UISA State Relations Committee. Thanks to this group, I have been able to go to Des Moines and Washington D.C. a couple of times to lobby for higher education.

During my first year on senate I also joined the Nominations Committee which serves to select the student members for all University Committees and Commissions. It was also about then that I began working with the Budgeting and Auditing Committee, which as many of you know, is the body responsible for allocating a good portion of Mandatory Student Fees.

At the end of my third year here, I was selected to serve on both the Lecture Committee and the Student Broadcast Commission. The first is responsible for bringing topical and interesting people to campus and the second oversees the activities of both KRUI Radio and Student Video Productions. It was at this time that I became the Chairman for the Budgeting and Auditing Committee.

As you can see, I have been working very hard in this past semester, but these weren't my only concerns. I also had 15 credit hours and was working at three different jobs: Pizza Hut, Burge Hall and the Iowa Advanced Technology Labs (the Laser Building). Now I figure it's time to look at the issues Sandi and I want to address in the upcoming year.

First on our minds is getting more of you, the students, involved in the process, for numbers are the key to the success of any organization. We want to hear your voice, your concerns are our concerns and we are willing to go out and listen, to put an ear to the millions of ideas floating across the tables and drinks at our university.

The next big headache to address is the complicated budgeting process. Having been on the inside of the process, I have figured out the parts that need to be reconstructed and I have also come up with plans to make it run immeasurably smoother and more efficiently. This will enable groups to concentrate on the actual production of their programs rather than struggling along the funding maze.

Third, there is a short-term solution to the Cambus debate, if the right people are willing to take a risk and the people in office are willing to work on the long-term problem of funding, contracts and paperwork. We are the people to make the reality.

We are also working on the vitalization of Ending Men's Violence, a group dedicated to the education of men on campus. We see this as a key in addressing the issue of safety at the UI. This along with our pledge to expand and Sandi's promise to volunteer for the Hillcrest Safewalk program across the entire university.

There is a large population of families attending or related to the UI who have significant special needs that have to be addressed. These include expansion and improvement of the UI Day-care Systems, health insurance benefits for families, the installation of sidewalks on Hawkeye Court and Hawkeye Drive which is being worked on by the Campus Care Committee, and a Center for the Family Housing Units. Such a center would include meeting areas, day care and an ITC.

The majority of everyone's goals when they come to college is to get a job. Sandi is working towards an expansion of Job Placement Services, to include a wider range of fields at the Job Fairs. She feels very strongly that many majors are left unrepresented and deserve as much effort on their behalf as the Business School puts forth.

The issue I would like to close with is this apathy monster which seems to be rearing its head all over. Sandi and I promise that during the next year people will no longer ask what is the UISA. We promise to show you how you are affected by the UISA and how you can affect it and the university.

Sandi and I combine great dedication with drive and knowledge of what needs to be done and how to do it. We will not let you down in this next year and we will not rest until all of our promises are kept.

Elegy for Michael B. Clark

To the Editor:
This elegy is written in response to a four-page newspaper campaign advertisement published by Michael B. Clark which was placed in the mailboxes of the residence halls.

Is there no balm in Gilead ... to heal a sin sick soul? Is there no physician there? Michael B. Clark claims that there is a balm in our Gilead, the UI, and he is the physician to administer it as Student Body President. To do this he intends to turn the Student Senate from one that is a democracy into one that is a theocracy. And through his and his Vice President's, Danielle Bechtold's, theosophy, they are proposing to turn Eastern Iowa into Eastern Europe in a campaign of ethnic cleansing.

Clark himself is proposing ethnic cleansing through doing away with "cultural diversity" in any form which does not conform to his theocratic notion of unity. His final "divine" solution is to stop "unfair financing" of groups who represent fringe elements of university society such as Action for Abortion Rights,

The Gay People's Union, and even The Daily Iowan.

Mr. Clark, or Prophet Clark, in his role as Haman, from the Biblical Book of Esther, is plotting to destroy all nonaligned groups in his attempt to "protect the rights" of White Protestant males, and to defeat political correctness in the classroom. But like the Biblical Haman, who plotted against Mordecai, I hope Mr. Clark finds himself politically hung when the votes are counted. He, as the self-appointed spokesman for God and White Protestant males, waves the red flag for White solidarity under the banner of Western culture and American tradition.

Western culture is fine. I like art and literature just as much as the next person, but his praise of American tradition leaves me, the descendant of slaves, very nervous. In truth, the American tradition under the Constitution rings a very clear message. The original document only concerns itself with Rich White Men and their Slaves, not political want-to-bees, buzzing at the mouth over what they have not reasoned over or thought out carefully. Further, a premise of the Constitution is the separation of Church and State. This fundamentally means not only freedom of religion, but also freedom from religion and religious rule. This is the cornerstone of keeping America a strong and viable pluralistic society, which is composed of diverse groups of peoples, not only White Protestant males.

I love men, White, Black, Yellow, Brown and Red. I love the way they walk, and the jive they talk, so this is not a put down of men, but any man must earn respect, not by oppression, but by merit. Merit cannot be attributed to skin color or religion. A man must be judged by the content of his character, not by the color of his skin.

It is Mr. Clark's character and knowledge we must examine before we cast our votes. Before you and I cast our votes, we must take a five-minute course in world economics. According to Mr. Clark's newspaper, which most of the residents of Courier disposed of in the "circular file," all noncapitalistic countries pay their workers $5 per week. Now, if we are to be "real" or accurate, these $5 countries, in most cases, fall under the rubric of capitalism. This $5 a week windfall in so-called underdeveloped capitalist countries is what has made great imperialist empires, like America, as rich as they are today, so don't knock it!

The offices of President and Vice President are powerful posts in the UISA. These officers are the only members of the Student Senate who have the ear of President Hunter Rawlings and the Board of Regents. All appointments with the administration concerning student requests to be put on the agenda to speak before the Board of Regents must be done through the UISA President.

Therefore, lift up your drooping hands and strengthen your weak knees, and make straight paths for your feet, so that what is lame may not be put out of joint but rather be healed; strive for peace with all men ... even White Protestant Males ... and vote on Feb. 16 as though your life and lifestyle here at the UI depend on it, because they do! Be Vigilant!

Slovakian independence hard on gypsies

James Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of three articles focusing on the gypsies of Slovakia by DI reporter James Anderson, who is spending this semester in eastern Europe.

BRATISLAVA, SLOVAKIA—Facing unemployment, broken political promises and residency restrictions in the new Czech Republic, daily life for gypsy minorities has become a challenge as a result of Slovakian independence.

"It would be better for us if there was still a Czecho Slovak Federal Republic," said Gabor Frantisek, 57, who lost his job on the railways in 1990. "All gypsies from Slovakia would like to go back to Bohemia because it is a better life and many of us have family there."

According to Anna Koptova, director of the Gypsy Theater in Kosice, the residency decree issued by the Czech Parliament makes gypsies "unofficial" residents of Bohemia, and forces them to leave their work in the economically stronger Czech Republic. The Czech government's actions place gypsies in a difficult position, because many are illiterate and unable to communicate with bureaucratic offices or fill out the necessary paperwork to stay in Bohemia. She deems the situation "very bad" for the gypsies.

"The Czech government sends people with no homes back to Slovakia," Koptova said. "It seems like the old age during socialism when the government wanted to command and control the gypsies. It is the same now because the parliament wants to control gypsies."

Following the Velvet Revolution of November 1989, Koptova said that politicians were willing to listen to the gypsies' problems, but failed to act on promises or deliver financial assistance to the villages.

"Havel was showed the gypsies' villages in Slovakia during his presidency and he promised to help," Koptova said. "He said he would ask for credit from other countries, but when he was asked about specifics on how he would help, he apologized very diplomatically."

Approximately 450,000 gypsies live in Slovakia and 450,000 live in the Czech Republic, according to village mayor Gabor Milan. He said that if they were "united" it would be possible for them to wield some political influence.

Following the revolution, gypsies — or "roms," as they've called themselves since the collapse of socialism — formed a political movement known as R.O.I., or the Roms Initiative. But although political promises of new roads and shops in Backovic were given, village residents are still traveling on the same snaky, crater-laden dirt road, and the lone construction project, consisting of three walls, had to be stopped because there was no more money.

"R.O.I. was coming to each village to get votes and they were happy when they were elected," Milan said. "But now they don't care so much about the gypsies. It is like the same with the blacks in the United States."

A former R.O.I. regional chairman, Milan said that after the 1990 elections, leading members of the R.O.I. movement took money allocated by President Havel for the gypsies and divided it among the party leadership, with many purchasing automobiles.

"Politicians can come here and say what they want, but we do not trust them," Milan said. "All we have is an illusion that someone will support us."

RAPE CASE REVISITED

Tyson's lawyer criticizes judge, requests new trial

Thomas P. Wyman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — A judge who kept key witnesses from testifying and blocked the introduction of important evidence allowed Mike Tyson to be wrongly convicted of rape, Tyson's lawyer argued Monday in appealing for a new trial.

"We want a new trial in which all the evidence can be presented to a jury," attorney Alan Dershowitz told a group of law students after two hours of argument before a three-judge appeals panel.

The Indiana Court of Appeals panel is not expected to rule on the request for at least two months, court officials said.

Inside the state Supreme Court chamber, where the hearing was moved to accommodate scores of reporters and spectators, Dershowitz headed a defense team that attacked Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford's handling of the case.

Gifford denied a jury the necessary tools of evidence by blocking testimony from three defense witnesses and refusing jurors a chance to consider whether his accuser had consented to sex, the former heavyweight boxing champion's lawyers said.

"It is obvious if they had these tools, they would have acquitted Mike Tyson," said Alan's brother Nathan Dershowitz, himself a defense attorney.

But prosecutor Lawrence Reuben said there wasn't a legal basis for an appeal.

"This appeal is not about reweighing evidence, as the defense would have you do," he said.

Neither Tyson, who is serving a six-year prison term, nor his accuser, Desiree Washington, attended the hearing.

Tyson, 26, was convicted last year of raping Washington in his Indianapolis hotel room in July 1991. She was a contestant in the Miss Black America beauty pageant and Tyson was in town to promote the event.

Among those at Monday's hearing were boxing promoter Don King and Camille Ewald, the elderly woman Tyson called "Mom" after his own mother died.

Ewald left court without commenting, but King said he planned to visit Tyson with news of the hearing.

Nathan Dershowitz argued that Gifford should have permitted testimony from witnesses who said they saw Tyson and a woman embracing in his limousine outside his hotel. One witness saw Tyson and the woman walk arm-in-arm into the hotel, he said.

Gifford said the witnesses came forward during the middle of the trial, too late to be heard.

But Alan Dershowitz said the defense couldn't bring the witnesses forward until they had been interviewed to make sure they were telling the truth.

Youth hoops clinic March 27

Some of the nation's most successful collegiate basketball coaches and student-athletes, including Iowa women's coach C. Vivian Stringer, will be on hand when the NCAA conducts a youth clinic Saturday, March 27 at West High School. The clinic is being offered to boys and girls aged 10-18 at no cost.

The clinic is part of the NCAA Youth Education through Sports (YES) program and is in conjunction with the Women's Midwest Regional at Carver-Hawkeye Arena March 25 and 27. Topics include academics, goal-setting and the development of mental skills.

Each participant will receive a complimentary T-shirt and one general admission ticket to the Midwest Regional.

'Grandma Ma' top player

NEW YORK (AP) — Charlotte's Larry Johnson won NBA Player of the Week honors on Monday after averaging 25.3 points, 11.5 rebounds and 4.5 assists per game in three straight victories by the Hornets.

Johnson shot .544 on 43-of-79 shooting from the field as Charlotte moved five games over .500 for the first time in franchise history. He will start for the Eastern Conference in the All-Star game on Sunday.

Tisdale to jam off the court

NEW YORK (AP) — Wayman Tisdale will play in Salt Lake City during the NBA All-Star weekend, even though the Sacramento Kings forward was not selected for the game.

Tisdale, a bass player, and his band, "Fifth Quarter," will entertain at the NBA welcoming reception at the Salt Palace on Friday night, one of the events of the All-Star weekend.

The band is scheduled to get a shot at national television during the TNT one-hour telecast of the activities.

Wings' Yzerman honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Center Steve Yzerman of the Detroit Red Wings scored 15 points in four games last week, earning him the NHL Player of the Week Award on Monday.

Yzerman had six goals and nine assists and moved into fourth place in the NHL scoring race with 91 points on 44 goals and 47 assists in 59 games. He is six points short of 1,000 for his 10-season NHL career.

Also nominated for the award were Doug Gilmour of Toronto, who had 12 points in four games and Pat LaFontaine of Buffalo, who had 11 points in four games.

Braman blasts mayor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The owner of the Philadelphia Eagles wants the city's mayor to mind his own business.

The outburst by Norman Braman, printed in the Monday editions of The Philadelphia Inquirer, came one week after Mayor Ed Rendell publicized his entreaty to Reggie White to re-sign with the Eagles.

"I know Ed Rendell is a big Eagles fan and I appreciate his interest," Braman said. "But I would like to challenge him to produce five years of the kind of quality of life in Philadelphia as we have done for the quality of football in Philadelphia."

"Let Ed Rendell match my record. Let's get business back in Philadelphia and get a tax base. I read where rapes are up. I read how dangerous the streets are. I know that Veterans Stadium is safer on the day of an Eagles game than most of Philadelphia. I remember when Philadelphia was a great city."

Davis defends 3-point defense

John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

Tom Davis has a message for Iowa basketball fans, disgruntled or otherwise: Most games aren't won or lost behind the 3-point line.

When the Hawkeyes host Ohio State tonight at 6:30 p.m., they may be facing the one team that did beat them from behind the 3-point arc. In Columbus on Jan. 9, the Buckeyes made nine first-half 3-pointers on the way to a 48-27 halftime lead from which Iowa never recovered.

But Davis said there is more than meets the average fan's, or reporter's, eye when it comes to 3-point accuracy. As an example, he cited No. 1 Indiana's win over No. 5 Michigan Sunday.

"How did Indiana do defending Michigan's 3-point shot? Who knows this stat?" Davis asked reporters at Monday's weekly press conference.

One reporter answered correctly: Michigan made 12 of its 22 3-point attempts in the 93-92 loss at Bloomington.

"That's right, 12 of 22. And Indiana's one of the finer defensive ballclubs you have going," Davis said. "And I think that's exactly the point — that you can get them off and if you make a high percentage you may get yourself a win. If you don't, you can get outrebounded, which Michigan did. And you probably don't go to the free throw line as many times."

"You can get the opponent away from his strengths. So there's a lot more strategy involved."

Iowa (14-6, 3-5) dropped from 13th to No. 20 in the Associated Press poll late Sunday after losing three straight. Much of the blame for those losses has been placed on the Hawkeyes' inability to stop the 3-point attempt.

Minnesota's Voshon Lenard went 5 of 7 from 3-point range on the way to a career-high 32 points in Iowa's 91-85 loss in Minneapolis last Saturday. Indiana made six 3-pointers in a win Feb. 6 at

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes will look to rekindle that winning feeling tonight against Ohio State at Carver-Hawkeye Arena at 6:30. The game will be Carver-Hawkeye Arena and Illinois made 11 in its upset win Feb. 4 in Champaign.

"If you lose everybody thinks, 'Oh, that's the reason they lost,'" Davis said. "A lot of times that's not the case."

Davis said there's been an over-reaction all over the country to the 3-point and predicted the 3-point shot will diminish in importance over the next few years.

"Indiana's winning the Big Ten, and yet there's a team that struggles defending the 3-point shot, as we've seen," Davis said. "They've struggled all the way to the No. 1 position in the country, I guess. There is a message in there."

Still, improving their perimeter defense is a priority for the Hawkeyes as they prepare for Ohio State (11-9, 4-7), which hit 11 of 24 3-point attempts in the last meeting. Tonight's game will be televised on ESPN.

"We've got to come out and pick them up from everywhere. They were hitting bank shots for 3-pointers," said Val Barnes, who scored 27 points against the Buckeyes in Columbus. "They were really hot at home, so we're going to have to come out and be really aggressive."

But it's not just 3-point shooting that is hurting the Hawkeyes. Minnesota hit 59 percent of its shots from the field Saturday.

"We've got to stop somebody defensively. We really can't guard anybody really, can't come down and get a stop like we used to," center Acie Earl said. "I think a lot of people are realizing our weakness for perimeter defense." Since beating Iowa, the Buckeyes have lost seven of nine games, most recently at Michigan State, 81-66, last Saturday.

"They've been real sharp since at times. But we've gotten into the (Big Ten) and sometimes it's hard to be real sharp because your opponent is playing real well," Davis said of the Buckeyes. "It's the same thing we're going through. I'm sure they're better than they were the last time we See HAWKEYES, Page 2B

Top three spots still unchanged

The first seven teams in Monday's Associated Press women's basketball poll were the same as a week ago, led by Tennessee and Vanderbilt.

That formation, however, won't last long, because No. 2 Vanderbilt plays at No. 5 Penn State Tuesday night, then visits No. 6 Auburn Sunday.

Meanwhile, No. 4 Colorado entertains No. 22 Nebraska Sunday. The Cornhuskers are the only team to beat Colorado this season.

In the voting, Tennessee (22-1) was only a point short of perfect with 69 of 70 first-place votes and 1,749 points from a nationwide panel of women's coaches. Vanderbilt (21-1) collected 1,649 points, while Iowa (19-1) got the remaining first-place vote for the second straight week and received 1,614 points.

Stanford (17-5), the preseason No. 1 team which lost at then-No. 25 California Friday, fell to 10th from eighth.

Maryland (17-5), upset by unranked North Carolina State, dropped from ninth to 12th behind Virginia, which jumped three spots to 11th.

A year ago, Maryland was first and Virginia second. Unbeaten Vermont (20-0), the only Division I men's or women's team with a perfect record, rose two places from 17th to 15th, an all-time high for the Catamounts.

Texas was 13th, followed by North Carolina, Vermont, Stephen F. Austin, UNLV, Southern California, Western Kentucky, Clemson, Northern Illinois, Nebraska, California, Oklahoma State and Hawaii.

The Hawkeyes defeated Big Ten foes Northwestern (68-62) last Friday and Illinois (77-58) on Sunday to raise their conference mark to a perfect 11-0.

Colorado (21-1) was fourth, followed by Penn State (17-2), Auburn (21-1) and Ohio State (16-3).

Louisiana Tech (18-3) continued its recent surge, moving up two spots to eighth, while Texas Tech (18-3) jumped two places to ninth.

Redmen in; Iowa falls to No. 20

Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

When the Big East coaches got together this preseason to make their predictions, they tabbed St. John's ninth of 10 teams.

The Redmen have spent the last few weeks atop the conference standings and now are among the Top 25 for the first time this season.

While St. John's (14-6) came in at No. 25 Sunday, Indiana remained No. 1, getting all but two of the first-place votes from the nationwide panel of writers and broadcasters.

The Hawkeyes plummeted seven spots to No. 20 after a 91-85 loss at Minnesota Saturday. Iowa hosts Ohio State tonight at 6:30 in a game that will be televised by ESPN.

The Hoosiers (22-2), who were No. 1 on 59 ballots, solidified the top spot with a victory over Michigan on Sunday. That win followed one at Penn State during the week, when Indiana prevailed in double overtime with the help of an admitted blown call by an official.

Kentucky (18-2) held second despite losing at Arkansas before rebounding with a victory at Notre Dame. North Carolina (20-3), which had one first-place vote, moved from sixth to third with victories over Maryland and Georgia Tech.

Arizona (17-2), which has a 15-game winning streak, moved up one spot to fourth and was the other team to receive a No. 1 vote.

Michigan (19-4) dropped one spot to fifth after the loss to Indiana, and Kansas moved up one to sixth after beating Oklahoma State and Missouri. Duke (19-4), which lost at home to Wake Forest, fell from third to seventh and was followed by Cincinnati, Florida State and Wake Forest.

Vanderbilt led the Second Ten and was followed by Utah, Arkansas, Purdue, UNLV, Seton Hall, Pittsburgh, Tulane, Massachusetts and Iowa.

New Orleans was up to 21st from 25th, and was followed by Louisville, the other new member this week; Virginia, Marquette and St. John's.

Marquette, which lost to Cincinnati and Alabama-Birmingham last week, had the week's biggest drop — falling from 15th to 24th.

Louisville (14-6), which lost at Tulane but rebounded by ending UNLV's 59-game home winning streak on Sunday, jumped in at No. 22. The Cardinals were ranked early in the season, but dropped out after a 2-4 start.

St. John's beat Providence and Boston College last week and is 9-3 in the conference.

Boston College (13-7) dropped from the rankings after losing road games to Miami and St. John's. The Eagles, who were 21st, have to play at Pittsburgh on Tuesday.

Kansas State (15-5) was in at No. 23 for just one week. The Wildcats did beat Iowa State last week, but they lost to Missouri and Nebraska.

Arena football founder bringing it back home

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The founder of the Arena Football League is bringing his creation to his home state.

Iowa City native Jim Foster and a group of local investors announced Monday they'll stage an exhibition game in Des Moines to see if the city could support an Arena Football franchise.

The Arizona Rattlers will play the Cleveland Thunderbolts on April 29 at Veterans Auditorium. If the game is well received, Foster said he'd look seriously at putting a team in Des Moines.

"Des Moines has grown a lot," Foster said. "Not only has it grown in terms of size, it's also a city that's grown a lot in spirit, in intensity and in pride. I'd like to think it can be the core, the anchor of a real professional sports enterprise." Arena Football is played indoors on a narrow, 50-yard field with eight-man teams. Most teams pass about 75 percent of the time, resulting in wide-open, high-scoring games. The league, which will enter its seventh season this spring, said it averaged 12,300 fans per game last year.

Foster owns the rights to an expansion team and said he could decide by midsummer whether to put it in Des Moines. The team would start play in 1995.

A University of Iowa graduate, Foster said he thinks Des Moines could support a team because there are only six home games and tickets are moderately priced compared with other professional sports. Tickets for the exhibition game will cost $10 and $15.

ARENA FOOTBALL: Coming to Iowa?

summer months that would segue into the college sports season," Foster said.

Veterans Auditorium will be set up to hold 7,000 to 8,000 fans for the exhibition game. If a team is located in the city, Foster said the auditorium would need 11,000 seats, with that number eventually being expanded to 14,000 or 15,000.

Foster said Phoenix and Cleveland both will hold a minicamp in late March for local players to try out.

Each has agreed to sign at least one Iowa player and keep him for the exhibition game, he said.

Other cities have expressed interest in Foster's franchise, including Memphis and Indianapolis, he said. But he said Des Moines would be his first choice.

"I'd like to come home," Foster said. "I love this state. You're great people. You've got a lot of good things going here in Iowa, and I think it's time to put a professional sports franchise here and I hope that this is the right one."

HAWKEYES: Barnes looks to break slump played them."

Iowa shut down leading scorer Lawrence Funderburke (17.4 ppg) in Columbus, but guards Greg Simpson and Jamie Skelton combined for nine 3-pointers and 44 points in the 92-81 Buckeye win.

Iowa's scorers are struggling. Barnes, who was leading the team in scoring two weeks ago, scored only seven points at Minnesota. Since a loss at Duke Jan. 6, where Barnes scored a season-low six points, Iowa is 0-4 when the senior scores 10 points or less.

Barnes and Earl, the team's leading scorer at just over 16 points a game, combined to shoot 5 for 24 from the field against the Gophers.

"Everybody's going to have bad games, and that's what's happening to me," Barnes said.

But Barnes thinks there are other reasons, including bad ball movement by the Hawkeyes and opponents putting emphasis on defending Barnes, who scored 27 and 29 in Iowa's last two wins. "He's an excellent shooter. He's just got to be patient and let his shots come to him," Davis said. "Some nights they'll be more plentiful than others and he can contribute on defense and rebounds."

Senior forward Wade Lookingbill was Iowa's leading scorer at Minnesota, with a career-high 18 points.

4-1 loss

Associated Press
NEW YORK — The Rangers used two breakaways to help them break out of a 1-2 hole. Ed Olczyk and Alexander Ovechkin scored on solo dashes in the second period to help the Rangers victory against the St. Louis Blues on Monday.
John Vanbiesbrouck scored two goals for the Rangers, 1-5-2 in their previous eight games. Sergei Zubov and Tomáš Šalata scored in the first period. Rangers, who moved ahead of New Jersey in the Patrick Division standings, broke through the Blues' defense. "The two breakaways break their back," said captain Mark Messier, two assists. "We opened and it only takes a play to deflate an opponent."
The Rangers played a first period in which they led 2-0. They also out lead 7-6, recording their first 11 shots before the six minutes old.
But the Blues were a rebound in the second period, in an outshot New York 17-10. First, Messier sprung a lead pass at center ice, feigning one shot and backhanding over goaltender.

NHL St. Louis sings the Blues in 4-1 loss

Associated Press
NEW YORK — The New York Rangers used two breakaways to help them break out of a slump. Ed Olczyk and Alexei Kovalev scored on solo dashes in the second period to help the Rangers to a 4-1 victory against the St. Louis Blues on Monday.

John Vanbiesbrouck stopped 34 shots for the Rangers, who were 1-5-2 in their previous eight games. Sergei Zubov and Tony Amonte scored in the first period for the Rangers, who moved one point ahead of New Jersey into third place in the Patrick Division.

"The two breakaways seemed to break their back," said Rangers captain Mark Messier, who had two assists. "We opened things up and it only takes a play or two to deflate an opponent."

"The Rangers played a dominant first period in which they took a 2-0 lead. They also outshot the Blues 17-6, recording the game's first 11 shots before the game was six minutes old.

But the Blues were a revived team in the second period, in which they outshot New York 17-10.

First, Messier sprung Olczyk with a lead pass at center ice. Olczyk feigned one shot and flipped a backhander over goaltender Curtis

The Blues' Dave Lowry, left, gets tangled up by the Rangers' Doug Weight and goalie John Vanbiesbrouck at Madison Square Garden Monday. New York picked up a 4-1 victory.

"It's one of those set plays we've been working on since I arrived," said Olczyk, who had just two goals in 19 games since being acquired from Winnipeg in December. "We look for it when their defense is pinching. This is the first one that's really worked."

Vanbiesbrouck made sure to preserve the advantage. He turned back Craig Janney with a sprawling right arm save in the second period and denied Hull three times when the Blues had a two-man advantage in the third period.

"It's a confidence boost when a team rewards a goaltender by scoring at the other end," Vanbiesbrouck said. "There's a lot of risk involved in making a lot of break-out passes. But those are the kinds of chances we need to take more often."

Accordion thunder, crawfish at Carrier gig

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

I think the fact that I grew up in the Midwest partly explains my lifelong, horrific fear of the accordion. Call me ignorant, call me a hick, call me a redneck "some-bitch," but whenever I hear an accordion mashing away on an album or on TV, I think there's got to be some poor guy somewhere strapped to a chair with blinding lights shining in his eyes and three black-clad thugs asking "Is it safe?" When he refuses to answer, they crank up some "Polka's Greatest Hits," put in their earplugs, and let that dude scream until his brains run out of his nostrils.

You see, I've always associated the accordion with really bad taste — things like polyester, sauerkraut and thick-rimmed eyeglasses. I never once believed a person could actually play one without bursting into helpless laughter (like people my age do now whenever they see an episode of "The Lawrence Welk Show.") And I never, ever thought it would be possible to integrate an accordion into an upbeat, dare I say "modern," rhythm and blues band.

Gee, I guess I am ignorant. I guess I've never heard any zydeco music. Gimme a break, I'm an Iowan.

So here's the deal — I've been enlightened to the new boundaries of the accordion by Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band, who will be playing tonight at the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St. The bar, in order to make their underground dwelling more "southern" and swampy-like, will be serving jambalaya, crawfish and hurricanes.

Chubby Carrier follows in the grand, down-home tradition of other local zydeco favorites Terrance Simien and Buckwheat Zydeco. A native of Lafayette, La., Carrier was in fact a member of Simien's band until 1989, when he split off to form his own band. And what a band it is.

1991 saw the release of Chubby Carrier's most recent album, Boogie Woogie Zydeco, which demonstrated in its 15 songs an explosive fusion of blues, funk and zydeco, which, for the record, is the Creole dance music indigenous to south-eastern Louisiana and eastern Texas.

Carrier's accordion skills (chuckle, chuckle — I'm sorry) are superb and masterful, making the listener wonder if he's really playing a huge squeezebox-thing, and not a guitar or keyboard with altered sounds. His voice howls and catcalls and groans intermittently, then breaks into a pleasant, soulful baritone reminiscent of blues legend Buddy Guy's vocals.

The Bayou Swamp Band, Carrier's back-up instrumentalists, carry their leader's talents further along with their delicious blend of blues melodies, scorching-fast rhythm and percussion and unmanageable energy. Live, the collective efforts of this band should be unstoppable — and extremely danceable.

One of the greatest delights of the back-up band on Boogie Woogie Zydeco is its washboard player, Kevin Carrier (Chubby's cousin). Kevin takes his polyrhythmic scratching to a percussive climax on the album, speeding along with the backbeat of drummer Troy Carrier's (Chubby's brother) fills. Guitarist David LeJune and bass

Piedmont Talent

Chubby Carrier (pictured here with his accordion) and The Bayou Swamp Band will bring their fusion of zydeco and blues to the Iowa City Yacht Club tonight.

sist Greg Chambers also fill in the holes during the band's speedy grooves, adding the distinctive blues edge to the music. LeJune is a versatile and unpredictable guitarist who can move from a slow, droning blues wail to a chugging electric-acoustic strum without warning or damage to a song's continuity. Don't let my bias towards the accordion fool you — I'm trying to overcome it even now (I'm in therapy). Get your butt down to the Yacht Club tonight, slurf down some beer and jambalaya and crawfish (if they're still alive and wiggin' just smash 'em with your beer glass) and once Chubby and the boys start jamming their zydeco bliss, you won't care what the accordion reminds you of.

Glenn Halvorsen

Guillermo Gomez-Pena (left) and Coco Fusco will re-examine the "discovery" of America in their performance collaboration "New World Border," which opens tonight in the Loft of Hancher Auditorium.

Bold 'New World Border' explores U.S. melting pot

Michelle-Therese Forcier
The Daily Iowan

Meet Aztec High-Tech, a salesman and secret activist for Gringo-stroika, a movement to tear the Tortilla Curtain, and Miss Discovery '92, "a beauty pageant queen and an undercover pop semiotician."

Guillermo Gomez-Pena and Coco Fusco will present these and other characters in their collaborative effort, "New World Border," in the Loft of Hancher Auditorium tonight.

In the emergent global economy, it is difficult and just plain stubborn for the United States to insist it has clearly defined borders, with Americans sandwiched between Mexicans and Canadians.

In the 21st century, Gomez-Pena believes, borders will become gossamer threads blowing in the wind, as multiculturalism is more widely accepted.

"Artists must lead the way to the 21st century," Gomez-Pena has said.

"One is not born into a continental citizenship," Gomez-Pena said in a Los Angeles Times interview. "One must recapture it by coming to terms with history," through mourning, restitution or forgiveness.

"The question is even more sensitive for European Americans. They are realizing they have to accept partial responsibility for 500 years of oppression and genocide."

It is through humor that Gomez-Pena forces us to recognize the reality of our great American melting pot. It never included Asians, Africans or Latinos.

According to Winston Barclay of UI Arts Center Relations, the audience will be segregated by the language they speak. All Spanish-speaking members will be seated in one section, all others in another. What happens after that is a mystery.

Gomez-Pena, an editor, radio performer, performance artist, essayist and poet, and Fusco, recognized as a media artist, lecturer, curator and writer, began their collaboration in 1989.

The pair are best known for "The Year of the White Bear," also known as "The Cage Project," in which they dressed as natives and created a cultural norm for themselves. They were then locked in a gold cage and put on display. They were fed by their keepers and taken to the bathroom on leashes until their release by local authorities.

Gomez-Pena has been credited for encompassing the philosophy of anti-Columbus feeling through his work. He has also been awarded the MacArthur Foundation "genius grant."

"New World Border" will be performed at 8 p.m. on Wednesday in the Loft of Hancher Auditorium. Tickets are available through the box office.

Kravitz happy with Bahamas, prefers music to 'great' sex

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Singer-songwriter Lenny Kravitz, ex-husband of former "Cosby" kid Lisa Bonet, is enjoying bachelor life on an island in the Bahamas, where he is building a home and recording studio.

The dreadlocked guitar player says he prefers music to sex.

"Maybe I just don't care that much about sex," Kravitz says in the March issue of Details magazine. "It's great, but I believe music's better."

Kravitz, whose biggest hit was "It Ain't Over 'Til It's Over," has just finished his third album.

Kravitz, son of actress Roxie Roker, who played Helen Willis on "The Jeffersons," and TV executive Sy Kravitz, grew up in New York City. He and Bonet split up in 1991. They have one child, Zoe, born in 1989.

Kravitz says he has fallen in love with the Bahamian island of Eleuthera.

"It's safe here," he says. "It's a very easy place to live. It doesn't matter what color you are or what you do, whether you've got money or you don't. You're basically judged here by whether you're cool or not."

ANTIQUITY & MODERNITY

Poet's political ambiguity likened to octopus

"Maintain the profile of a slick octopus, which gives the appearance of looking just like the rock it's clinging to: now go for one look, now change your coloration to another. I tell you, sagacity proves better than inflexibility."

Theognis, "Elegies" 215-218.

Odysseus is the first character in Western literature likened to an octopus, at "Odyssey" 5.432-435, where it is the adhesive aspect of octopusness that Homer captures; Theognis, like many a poet before and after, modifies a Homeric model and captures the creature's chameleonesque capacity for opportunistic adaptation to alterations in the environment.

For Theognis that environment was pre-eminently the highly unstable ecology of late sixth century B.C. politics in the Greek city-state, an age in which the great "democratic" movements were beginning to come into their own in many parts of ancient Greece and challenge the entrenched aristocracies. In this vibrant period societies were undergoing fundamental change in the organization and administration of their polities, and at all such junctures in human history — as we ourselves know from our own confusing age — there are the losers (those politically least inelastic) and there are the winners (those pragmatically more tensile.)

In the sixth century B.C. Theognis of Megara was one of the former. Whether we take him to have been a real person or a composite of once hot political in-groups now shivering out in the cold on the outside, and Megara as just Megara or an emblem of Greek city-states caught up in shattering change, his long elegaic poem gives us a fascinating picture of what it feels like for a self-anointed group cleaving intractably and bitterly to a superannated political system to be bypassed by current events. From the point of view of Theognis and his friends this picture was anything but pretty.

Theognis, imposing on Megarian politics a moral grid constructed with a mesh of his own devising, hurls surly reproaches of betrayal — motivated, one soon comes to sense, largely by simple human envy — at the new elements who have come into power. He is inventive at bending a descriptive ethical vocabulary to political ends, a feat of lexical legerdemain not unfamiliar from later Greek, or Roman, politics, nor, for that matter, from our own recent and happily nonviolent experience of a changing of the guard. These newcomers are κακοί ("morally) bad" and they have replaced the εὐθλοί ("politically) noble" and ἀγαθοί ("morally) good." Indeed, there is more than a suggestion that some of the old rats have simply made themselves over into the new political correctness, and it has become difficult to tell the genuinely good (like Theognis et al.) from the genuinely fraudulent (117-118). But, most heinous of all, they are πλούσιοι ("rich" and they have χρήματα "money and property."

It is this pecuniary vulgarity, one feels, that seems most to trigger and sustain Theognis' unending indignation. What has happened in the course of the seventh and sixth centuries in the Mediterranean world is that commercialism has boomed and new and vast fortunes have been made in shipping and trade, not by the staid aristocrats but by people with no claim to impressive genealogies. Theognis was not the only unhappy conservative to deplore this unwelcome development, for the great poet Pindar a generation or two after Theognis was to note ruefully that χρήματα χρήματ' ἀνὴρ χρήματ' ἀνὴρ "Money is the man" of the poet (and exiled politician) Alceus (169W.3) from about a generation or two before Theognis. It's all so very old and all so very new and all so hearteningly familiar, right? The nouveaux riches have finally taken over, and the world is about to end — at least the one I know, and what other world is worth living in?

(Isthmia 2.11) "Money, money is the man," herein echoing the horrific

How to deal then, Theognis wonders, with a universe where language deceives and noble genes count for nothing and eternal verities of social hierarchy are fluid at best, at worst chaotic? Become like the pliant octopus: sense imminent shifts in the environment and effortlessly don the exact coloration of the ambient movement.

It was surely in part this kind of amoral and pragmatic centerlessness (with its horrific real-world consequences as exemplified in the radical Athenian democracy of the late fifth century B.C.) that pushed Plato into an ontological idealism of immutable and eternal forms of being. And of course this response itself to social chaos, albeit in the collapsing sector of democratic rather than aristocratic institutions on the political circle, likewise had, like a brilliant moon, its own tenebrous aspect.

'Fan magazine' targets Shannen 'Brenda' Doherty

Associated Press

NEW YORK — "Beverly Hills, 90210" star Shannen Doherty has her own newsletter, but she's probably not happy about it.

The "I Hate Brenda" newsletter is named after Doherty's "90210" character Brenda Walsh.

The first issue, which has sold about 7,000 copies, is devoted to the 21-year-old Doherty's "seemingly endless runs of hissy fits," according to this week's People.

It began as a joke last fall when Darby Romeo and Kerin Morataya faxed some negative press clippings about Doherty to friends. They realized they'd hit upon something big when people called with their own stories about the temperamental actress.

At times, Romeo says, they feel a pang of guilt.

Grammys miscategorize, overlook grunge

Kira L. Billik
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — It was everywhere this year: all over the charts, all over Music Television, all over the radio.

It was a phenomenon the music media labeled "grunge," a style spearheaded by a few scruffy, punk-influenced bands from Seattle who cut their teeth on everyone from Black Sabbath to the Sex Pistols.

Grunge was distinguished by its sheer noise value — thrashing guitars, singers who roared angst-ridden lyrics about politics, drug addiction and apathy and a pummeling beat to which you could slam dance.

It also had its own dress code — ratty flannel shirts paired with knee-length shorts, high-top sneakers or Doc Martens, long, scraggly hair and knit ski caps. Fashion designers picked up on the grunge look: Marc Jacobs of Perry Ellis has been selling silk flannel shirts for about $300 a pop to grunge wanna-bes.

But the National Association of Recording Arts & Sciences, NARAS, barely noticed the grunge glut in naming its nominees for the 35th Annual Grammy Awards, and seemed to have trouble figuring out what category in which to put it.

Nirvana garnered two nominations for "Smells Like Teen Spirit," as did Pearl Jam for their single, "Jeremy." Both songs were nominated for best hard rock performance and best rock song. Alice in Chains also got a best hard rock performance nod for Dirt, which reached No. 6 on Billboard's album chart.

Soundgarden, arguably one of grunge's founding fathers, earned a nomination for best metal performance for "Into the Void," a track from their album, Badmotorfinger.

Notably absent from the Grammy nominees were two successful albums: Temple of the Dog, a collaboration between members of Pearl Jam and Soundgarden to mourn the death of Mother Love Bone singer and fellow Seattleite Andrew Wood; and the soundtrack from the Cameron Crowe movie "Singles," which featured contributions from Pearl Jam, Soundgarden and Alice in Chains, as well as Mudhoney, Screaming Trees and Smashing Pumpkins.

The "Singles" soundtrack reached No. 6 on the charts; the Temple of the Dog album went to No. 5.

"Sometimes it takes awhile for the overall membership of NARAS to catch on to something," said Jeff Mayfield, associate director of retail research at Billboard magazine. "I'm actually rather pleased to see that they did give the nominations (to grunge) that they did."

Many observers say the Grammys try harder and harder each year to get hip, and Mayfield called the grunge nominations a sign of "improved hipness" by NARAS.

Led by the instrument-smashing threesome Nirvana, grunge topped the charts. Their second album, Nevermind, hit No. 1 on the Billboard album chart and went quadruple platinum, and the smash anthem, "Smells Like Teen Spirit," hit No. 6 on the Hot 100.
